Election 2008: On the wings of history

From White House to county courthouse, Democrats win most races

By TODD G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Barack Obama's intense winning campaign emphasizing early voting brought big coattails throughout Doña Ana County, resulting in a Democratic victory in every contested race.

As a result, the usual post-election analysis comparing the results against local campaign issues, strategies and developments is moot.

For example, in his run for county clerk, Republican Sid Goddard would say elections aren't being run as smoothly as was being touted by Bureau of Election Supervisor Lynn Ellins, the Democratic candidate for county clerk.

It wasn't until the last couple of weeks before the election that people began complaining about not getting their absentee ballots. Ellins, who by then was on leave from his Bureau of Elections job because he was running for office, contended that his staff had processed and mailed out all the absentee ballot requests.

Last week, it was discovered that the office was still processing a backlog of absentee ballots. (See related story on Page A9.) The issue was further muddied by an erroneous press release issued from the county on Monday, Nov. 3, saying all but 633 of 7,908 absentee ballots had been processed. By the following morning, the county had to issue a corrected press release saying that the backlog was in excess of 3,800 ballots.

This news could have shaken voter faith that the Bureau of Elections was performing better under Ellins. By then, however, many people had already voted

Coats for Kids short of coats

Less than half of 3,000 coats in hand

By TODD G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

In its 14th winter, the Las Cruces Coats for Kids Program has about 1,400 coats donated so far to distribute to children in need the first week of December.

But that's less than half of the estimated 3,000 coats that will be needed, said Karen Bailey of First Community Bank, the lead sponsor of the program.

With donations being this far behind, Bailey is asking the community to clean out their closets of "gently used" coats for children from infants to the fifth grade up to size 14.

There are a number of locations to donate coats: at any of the three First Community Bank of Las Cruces branches, at the two Alameda Laundry and Cleaners locations, at Albertson's Grocery Stores on El Paseo Road and on Telshor Boulevard, at 101 Gold Radio at 101 Perkins St. and at the Community Action Agency of Southern New Mexico, 320 E. Wyatt Cash donations also can be made at First Community Bank or by mailing a check for Coats for Kids to First Community Bank, 277 E. Amador Ave., Las Cruces, NM 88001.

For more information, call Bailey at First Community Bank at 636-6706.

Over the years, the Coats for Kids program has provided coats for more than 10,000 local children.

College of Health and Human Services dean finalists picked

Decision desired by end of semester

Four finalists have been chosen to possibly lead New Mexico State University's College of Health and Social Services (CHSS). The finalists will be on the NMSU campus to interview for the dean's position between Nov. 4 and 11.

"We are very excited about the pool of candidates we received. The past accomplishments of the finalists are truly impressive," said search committee chair, Greg Fant. "This bodes very well for the future of the college.'

Santos Hernandez, a professor in the School of Social Work at the University of Texas-Arlington, interviewed Tuesday, Nov. 4.

Luis Vazquez, associate dean of the Graduate School at NMSU, was interviewed, Wednesday, Nov. 5.

Tilayhun Adera, senior associate dean for Public Health at Virginia Commonwealth's School of Medicine, interviewed Thursday, Nov. 6.

Cheryl Easley, dean of the College of Health and Social Welfare at the University of Alaska-Anchorage, will interview on Tuesday, Nov. 11.

The schedule for each candidate included a meeting with academic deans and Interim Dean Virginia Higbie, as well as interviewing with the search committee, visiting the benefits office, touring the campus and answering questions in open forums with students, faculty and staff. The visits ended with a reception.

Those who participate in the interview process will have the opportunity to provide comments to the committee via the Internet at www.nmsu.edu/hire. Once all candidates have interviewed, the search committee will compile a report to the provost indicating the strengths of each candidate as well as a summary of the Internet comments. The goal is to give the provost an opportunity to make a final decision before the end of the semester.

NMSU names interim director

Vargas to assist NMSU vice president in lobbying legislators at Roundhouse

Vicente Vargas has recently been named the interim director of government relations at New Mexico State University.

Vargas will travel to Santa Fe with Ricardo Rel, the assistant vice president of government relations, to discuss the university with legislators.

"My job is like a two-way street," Vargas said. "I'll educate the Legislature about NMSU, its priorities and how it serves the state, and I'll educate the university on what the Legislature is looking for. I'm a voice for the university's faculty and administration to the Legislature."

Vargas previously worked in the Office of Governmental Affairs at the New Mexico Department of Agriculture and is a licensed lawyer. He was born and raised in Las Cruces and attended Mayfield High School.

"I'm excited to be back in Las Cruces, where I grew up, Vargas said.

After graduating high school, Vargas went to the University of

New Mexico, where he received both his bachelor's and law degrees.

It's finally over

After two years of campaign rhetoric, voters trust Democrats with our future

By David E. McCollum

McCOLLUM

Election 2008 has finally come to an end. The none-too-surprising result is that Republicans pretty much took it on the chin across the country. The No. 1 issue was the economy. When the economy is bad, voters blame the current leadership, especially the president. With the recent decline in consumer confidence and ensuing stock-market woes, John McCain and many of his fellow Republicans did not have a chance. Additionally, the eloquent, 47-year-old Barack Obama captured the hearts and minds of potential voters early. First, he surprised most political experts by ousting the presumptive Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton in the primaries. Then he moved ahead to his landslide victory on Election Day.

Obama's fundraising was so impressive that he was able to say "no" to $85 million in federal funds. By doing so, he avoided the spending limits tied to the taxpayer money. By Election Day, 3 million people had donated more than $650 million to Obama's campaign. To put this in perspective, the amount is more than double the donations raised by George Bush and Al Gore combined in 2000. This incredible amount of fundraising allowed Obama to invest $200 million in media advertising, outspending McCain by nearly three to one.

Obama will soon become the first incoming president to have to deal with both a recession and an ongoing war effort. The immediate challenge is to improve consumer confidence and to help the U.S. regain worldwide acceptance as a "good-guy" world power. President Obama will receive strong legislative support from the Democrat-controlled House and Senate. His biggest asset, however, is likely to be his persuasive oratorical skills, described by one television pundit as a cross between Ronald Reagan and John Kennedy.

Locally, the Democrats rode on the coattails of the national enthusiasm for Barack Obama and won every contested race on Election Day. Most races were not even close. Again, money appears to have played an important role as the Democrats outspent Republicans by a wide margin.

The tightest race, between Republican incumbent Sen. Lee Rawson and newcomer Steve Fischmann, resulted in a 505-vote margin by the Democrat. Rawson has represented southern New Mexico for 26 years, six as a state representative and 20 as a state senator. He currently is the Minority Whip of the state Senate and actively serves on numerous committees. Rawson is recognized as one of the hardest working members of the Senate and is respected as a fervent supporter of southern New Mexico and the business community. Rawson's apparent loss, pending the counting of about 2,500 provisional ballots, has stunned many of his state peers, both Republican and Democrat. His seniority will be sorely missed by our region. Meanwhile, in the Senate, we will be depending on veteran senators, Cynthia Nava (16 years), Mary K. Papen (eight years) and Mary Jane Garcia (20 years) to support our needs in southern New Mexico.

With new leadership in place, 2009 will be an interesting year. It is almost certain that Gov. Bill Richardson will be joining President Obama in some capacity. However, it is uncertain whether or not Richardson will turn over the reins to Lt. Gov. Diane Denish before or after the 2009 60-day legislative session. We'll just have to wait and see.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks from the general

Thanks Team WSMR - what a wonderful

On behalf of the entire White Sands community and workforce, I want to thank the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, their many volunteers, and all the businesses who gave so liberally of their time, talents and wares. The food was delicious, the weather beautiful and the camaraderie was tremendous. It is clear that a great deal of work went into this wellorganized event.

The Las Cruces community has been so generous in its support of White Sands, particularly in this time when we are experiencing so much change and growth. The soldiers who are new to White Sands and southern New Mexico definitely feel the warmth of your welcome. Thanks for all you do for us each and every day.

BRIG. GEN. DAVID L. MANN,

Flight a great experience

On Oct. 7 and 8, I had the honored privilege of participating in the first Honor Flight of Southern New Mexico. Our visit to the nation's capital and, most importantly, to the World War II Memorial was a time filled with bittersweet memories. The 40 WWII veterans, the Honor Flight volunteers, guardians and family members who attended were transported to 1945 when peace was declared.

Exhausted, jubilant, sad, ecstatic, but, above all, grateful that we're still alive to come home to our families and friends and the country for which we fought with honor and passion. These emotions, many of them hidden for years, came tumbling back and inspired many of us to reflect on memories that formed our personal lives, our nation and our world.

From the moment we were told of this great opportunity, I was filled with anticipation. This was to be my chance to gather with many of my friends and compatriots. A time to share memories – many of them filled with sorrow and fear - but above all, a humble gratitude that we had heard the call to arms, gave of our God-given talents and had been a part of the greatest unified mobilization of faith and courage ever experienced by our country.

Above all, I came away with a renewed sense of inner peace and commitment to share this awesome experience with everyone, especially my fellow WWII veterans. You, too, can be a part of Honor Flight and experience those passionate emotions that have contributed to our being named the greatest generation.

Thank you to all who made this possible. Those that contributed funds, time, energy, support and "The Wing and a Prayer."

I encouraged all WWII veterans of the greatest generation to participate in going on one of the Honor Flights to see the WWII Memorial in Washington, D.C.

Don't blame the post office

I am a mail carrier in the city of Las Cruces. I just want to bring something to the public's attention.

The county got so far behind on getting the absentee ballots out in time that they actually had to have someone walk them into the post office so that they would be delivered in time.

Also, a lot of county mail is still being addressed to 251 W. Amador Ave. instead of 845 N. Motel Blvd., even though the county offices moved to Motel Boulevard almost three years ago.

So for a change, why don't you stop blaming the hardworking men and women of the U.S. Postal Service.

Singing the praise of elders

Reunion of pre-1950 graduates prompts reflection

By Michael Swickard

When I was just a young sprout, I looked up to my old man. Way up, since he was 6 feet 7 inches tall. Even though most of my friends became taller than their fathers, I topped out 6 inches below him. But there was more to looking up than just the physical act. I always looked up to him and others who were the elders of my society.

That is one of the major changes in our world today; the old are not revered as they were when I was growing up. Now, those who are over forty are relegated by the young to "the abyss of ignorance" in this society. The old are the butt of the youngster's jokes. Us oldsters move slowly, groan when we sit down and are covered with old age spots. The young look at our loss of hair and sagging middles. They say confidently to each other, "It is impossible for them to know anything of value."

While this is going on, us oldsters still see the young person we were hidden inside of us. It is waiting to come out with a short sprint up a couple of stairs or that fly ball into the stands that we lunge for and then reach for the aspirin. We know there is a young person inside of us.

I have watched this trend of denigrating old people with increasing alarm, principally because I am getting older, but secondarily because I was brought up to look to my elders for wisdom. They had run the race a few times and were worth tips on how to survive and

My grandfather would dispense nuggets of wisdom, every so often, as did my two uncles. They would give me things that were the "ah ha" moments for what until then had been a mystery. Like how to track animals and know what the animal was doing and how

I was thinking of all of the old timers in my life this last weekend because I went to a college reunion of students who graduated at least 50 years ago. I went with an uncle who graduated in Electrical Engineering in 1952.

The old are not revered as they were when I was growing up.

The breakfast meeting was full of old people, most of whom walked slowly and a bit unsteadily. They were very seasoned citizens and the stories they told last Saturday morning about coming to college were priceless

I was luckily seated near the oldest citizen who had graduated from college in 1936. Because I was not at the breakfast as a reporter, I will omit all details, but the long and short of the conversations I will repeat. He mentioned that in 1936 there was only one coach at the college for all sports. First this man coached football, then basketball, then track and finally baseball. I grinned appreciably when he said that there are now more coaches at the college than there were students when he graduated.

We heard from the first woman editor of the school newspaper. Then one man said, "Well, I sold my horse for $50 and went to college. I thought I was in the line for agriculture but it turned out to be for engineering, so that is what I

Likewise I came to college with one thing on my mind and very shortly went a different direction. Why was I at college? It was my elders who made it impossible to ignore getting a college degree.

All of the elders who have made me who I am are in my memory and I still hear their voices, long after they are physically gone from this earth. I hope the young of today somehow can find it in themselves to listen, even if they do not believe the old know anything worthwhile.

In years to come, those oldsters in their life will become more and more important.

GUEST COLUMN

Urban renewal Renaissance:

This week, two more venerable and historic adobe homes in Las Cruces are poised to fall to the bulldozer and the back hoe, with more likely to follow. Demolition permits have been issued for the "Pink Houses" at the corner of Hagerty Road and University Avenue, and preparations for their destruction are under way. One of these homes represented a significant and excellent example of Arts and Crafts architecture and may have been designed by none other than important Southwestern architect Henry C. Trost. More than a famous architect, Trost was the architect for the New Mexico College of Mechanic Arts (now NMSU). Trost laid out the campus and designed many of its original buildings. Even if a Trost design has not yet been proven, the significance of the "Miller House" is undeniable, as it dated from the early days of the college and was the home to Austin Crile, college president from 1917 to 1920.

It is difficult to reconcile the destruction of such an historic and important building in a community that should have learned its lesson from the disastrous application of discredited urban renewal practices in the 1960s and 1970s. Unfortunately, urban renewal seemingly remains a basic tenant of this city's culture and policies. Demolition is somehow now a foregone conclusion for the Miller House and its neighbor, even with a city council elected on smart-growth platforms, an existing University Avenue Corridor (UAC) Plan that argues for preservation of that specific University Avenue neighborhood and a new NMSU Master Plan that speaks eloquently of historic preservation.

"In this disposable, unstable world, where only now and here is valued, and where performance is judged by return on margins, we need the dimension of time provided by historical buildings. We need the sense of permanence that an old building, an old piece of art, an old book can give. A reassurance that generations struggled before us for the same goals and felt the same pain and joy.' - NMSU Master Plan

While it is true that owners have the right to do whatever they like with their property, municipalities can have a large influence in helping to preserve historic architecture that benefits us all. Other successful communities have been able to nurture growth even as they value and preserve their past and its architecture, why not Las Cruces? Land owners will always want to derive the highest value from their properties. Developers likewise are in business to make the most of opportunities that present themselves. It is the responsibility of city government to determine how growth will happen and what should be saved.

The destruction of these two historic adobe homes illuminates several problems:

City policy favors demolition over historic preservation. In this case, these buildings were condemned by a simple demolition permit, issued administratively without a second thought or any oversight. City policy also apparently calls for "dilapidated structures" to be removed as quickly as possible. Both of these policies are completely indifferent to any notion of architectural or historic importance, allowing condemnation as convenience.

The city could also do much more to work with owners of historically important buildings to maintain them properly. Condemnation through neglect is all too common a practice in Las Cruces.

City staff could have done more to research the importance of these buildings, and may have dismissed them as unimportant simply because they weren't listed on historic registers. Not all important structures are listed on historic registers, and owners may not be sufficiently motivated to pursue recognition and listing for their buildings. A look through a publication entitled "The Las Cruces Historic Buildings Survey" could have informed staff as to the buildings' importance. A conversation with a NMSU historian would have told them of the building's historic ties to NMSU and its past

City officials and the current UAC Committee were too quick to condemn the structures as "eyesores," and "dangerous" buildings that needed to be torn down "as soon as possible." Finding the right owners and uses for historic properties takes time and dedication, not expeditiousness. The focus should have been on finding new uses for the buildings that preserved the historic architecture, rather than destroying it.

The existing UAC Plan has seemingly become obsolete, with its arguments for neighborhood and historic preservation, and a revision process will start this week. It remains to be seen if historic preservation will play any role in the new UAC plan, or if there will be anything left behind to preserve. Anyone interested in seeing Las Cruces' remaining historic buildings preserved should attend and be heard. While there is considerable and justifiable excitement about addressing issues on University Avenue, it is important to remember that the Las Cruces Downtown Mall seemed like a great idea at the time. Let us take what we have learned and use it to make Las Cruces a city of which we can all be justifiably

Signing of covenant between Las Cruces and WSMR also takes place on Saturday

The 2008 Las Cruces Veterans Day Parade will be held Saturday, Nov. 8 beginning at 10 a.m.

Due to major Downtown construction projects, the parade will follow a new route. The parade will begin at the corner of Spruce Avenue and Walnut Street, travel west on Spruce Avenue to Solano Drive and north on Solano Drive to Apodaca Park on Madrid Avenue. The parade-review stand will be located at the corner of Spruce Avenue and Solano Drive.

"The parade takes on added significance this year because it will be held on the same day the Las Cruces community signs a Community Covenant with White Sands Missile Range," said Mayor Pro Tem Dolores Archuleta, member of the Veterans Day Parade and Community Covenant committees. "The covenant is a formal commitment of support for service members and their families at White Sands Missile Range."

The covenant signing will take place during halftime of the NMSU-Hawaii football game that begins at 2 p.m. at Aggie Memorial Stadium.

Participating in the Community Covenant signing are the U.S. Army, the City of Las Cruces, Doña Ana County, New Mexico State University, Las Cruces Public Schools, the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce and the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces.

Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces.

Invited to sign the covenant are: U.S. Sens. Jeff Bingaman and Pete Domenici; U.S Rep. State Land Office restructured

Renewable energy and water resources to be the domain of newly created divisions

New Mexico Commissioner of Public Lands Patrick Lyons issued a press release announcing he is reorganizing two divisions within the State Land Office to include renewable energy and water resources and that he has appointed new management and staff to develop and facilitate respective policies and procedures.

Lyons appointed Land Office Assistant Commissioner Dallas Rippy to lead the new Renewable Energy and Commercial Leasing Division. Brian Bingham will continue managing the renewable energy program and Peggy Walton will oversee commercial leasing, the release stated. Assistant Commissioner Jerry King has been reassigned to manage special projects, including development at Mesa del Sol and Rio Rancho, as well as renewable energy projects.

According to the release, the Land Office has leased – or optioned for lease – 144,000 acres of trust lands for wind-energy development since 2003, when Lyons took office. The release said wind turbines are operational on nearly 6,800 acres of trust lands in Quay, Roosevelt, Chaves and Guadalupe counties and six additional developers have applied to lease another 240,000 acres of trust lands for future wind power plant development.

The potential combined earning power from the operating wind farms and optioned land will surpass $55 million in the course of their anticipated 35-year terms, the release said.

The Land Office also has executed option agreements for the development of utility-scale solar thermal projects on 30,500 acres, the release said, with an additional 115,000 acres in the pipeline for future solar energy development on the trust lands in the southwest quadrant of the state.

"The Land Office is playing a vital role in the development of clean energy supplies to power homes, schools and businesses, and by expanding our efforts within the agency we will further attract utility-scale renewable energy projects to trusts lands, which will result in more money for education," Lyons said.

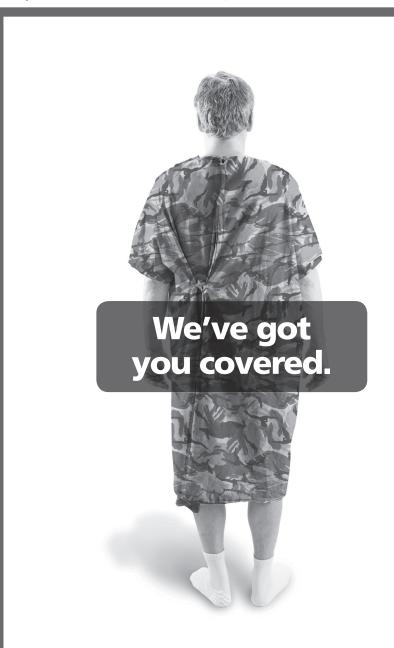

According to the release, Lyons assigned Galen Garcia and Shawna Maloy to staff the renewable energy program.

The Rights-of-Way bureau has been expanded to include the Water Resources unit, which will be managed by Anna Villa and staffed by Michael Quintana, Nick Jaramillo and Patricia Esquibel, the release said.

The mission of the Water Resources unit is to protect the trust's natural resources while creating income for the trust beneficiaries, and staff will manage commercial water wells, water exploration, water monitoring wells and salt water disposal wells.

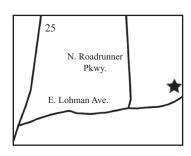

Lyons and the State Land Office manages 9 million acres of surface estate and 13 million mineral acres held in trust, primarily for public education, according to the release and evenues earned from energy development, agricultural leasing, and business and community development support public schools and universities, as well as the New Mexico School for the Blind and Visually Impaired, the New Mexico School for the Deaf, the New Mexico Military Institute, hospitals, correctional facilities, water projects, and public building construction. In fiscal year 2008, the trust beneficiaries earned more than $527 million the release said.

either by absentee ballot or in early voting. Except for an early morning rush of voters, Election Day poll workers reported few long lines and described the pace of voting as manageable throughout the afternoon and early evening.

Also, the Obama campaign pushed to get more new and younger voters to cast their ballot, and many of these voters didn't care as much about the local races as they did about participating in a historic national vote. So, while a total of 66,676 votes were cast in Doña Ana County for the presidential candidates, a total of 63,186 votes were cast for county clerk candidates.

Because many of these new and younger voters were recruited by the Obama campaign and the Democrats, they were inclined to vote Democratic.

For these reasons, last-minute news – like Democrat state Senate President Pro Tempore Tim Jennings coming to the aid of Republican Senate Minority Whip Lee Rawson – apparently had no effect on the outcome. Jennings raised objections to "robocalls" in Rawson's district that he said amounted to "incorrect character assassinations." For his defense of Rawson, Jennings was promptly criticized by state Democratic Party leadership, including Gov. Bill Richardson.

Despite Jennings' critique of the campaign tactics used against Rawson, despite being a conservative who had successfully held for Senate District 37, which includes portions of both Doña Ana and Sierra counties, for four terms, and despite rising to an important leadership role in the Senate, Rawson appears to be losing to his Democratic opponent Steve Fischmann, best known in Las Cruces for his activism in energy and growth issues. As of Wednesday, the Secretary of State's election website had the count at 12,853 votes for Fischmann and 12,348 for Rawson. With a reported 2,500 provisional ballots still to be counted, that could tighten the margin, but it is seen as unlikely to change the final result.

In a press release Wednesday, Nov. 5, Majority Floor Leader Sen. Michael S. Sanchez welcomed the newest members of the New Mexico Senate, which included Fischmann.

If Rawson is defeated, it is expected to shake up the Senate leadership. Much of New Mexico's political landscape is changed by the Democratic tidal wave.

Congressman Tom Udall soundly beat Rep. Steve Pearce in the U.S. Senate race, despite late stumping for Pearce by U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici, who is retiring from the Senate.

Meanwhile, Pearce's Congressional 2nd District that had long been represented by a conservative Republican – thanks in large part to the nature of voters in the "Little Texas" eastern portion of New Mexico – went to a Democrat, Harry Teague of Hobbs, instead of Republican restaurateur-rancher Ed Tinsley. Democrats Martin Heinrich and Ben Lujan won their races for the state's other two congressional districts, making New Mexico represented only by Democrats in both the U.S. House and Senate.

In a telephone interview with the Bulletin, Pearce said he was disappointed and blamed the losses on the Democrats spending hundreds of millions in the state on the campaigns, as well as being overwhelmed by the organizational structure that spending supported.

"The pressure from the political forces was intense," Pearce said. "It didn't matter what we did, there was no effect. No matter what ads we ran – whether they were negative or on issues and values – they were not effective."

In conceding the 2nd Congressional District race, Tinsley's campaign press release stated: "Harry Teague and his liberal allies spent $3.3 million in the race compared to $1.3 million, but Tinsley hammered home consistent messages in televised debates, media interviews and advertising."

Teague and his supporters credit his victory to traveling all over the large district in which voters got to know the oil service business owner as a man from humble beginnings who takes care of his employees and brought jobs to Lea County.

Nationwide, Obama's coattails almost gave what Democrats wanted almost as bad as returning to the White House – a filibuster-proof U.S. Senate. In the Senate, Democrats captured six seats, giving them 55 overall – short of a filibuster-proof total of 60. Democrats added at least 14 seats in the House and may end up with several more once the counting is done, adding to their current 36-seat majority.

At the Doña Ana County Democratic Party campaign headquarters in Downtown Las Cruces, the reopened Main Street was closed off Tuesday night for supporters to watch results come in. It soon began to resemble a street party as word began coming in of Republican defeats – such as Sens. Elizabeth Dole and John Sununu – and Obama's capture of critical states, like Pennsylvania and Ohio.

By around 8 p.m., CNN was calling the election for Obama. An hour later, John McCain was giving his magnanimous concession speech. Another hour later, they were listening in rapt attention to Obama's stirring victory speech as he praised the people for having the faith "to put their hands on the arc of history and bend it once more toward the hope of a better day."

Otero County rejects spaceport tax increase

Construction budget to be trimmed

By Todd G. Dickson

Although Doña Ana and Sierra counties approved a quarter-percent gross receipts tax increase to help build Spaceport America, Otero County residents rejected a chance to contribute an eighth-percent to the project.

With the rejection of the proposed spaceport tax in Otero County, New Mexico Spaceport Authority (NMSA) officials announced they will move forward with Spaceport America, the nation's first purpose-built commercial spaceport.

"This is a disappointment because this tax would have generated tremendous benefits for the people of Otero County," said NMSA Executive Director Steve Landeene in a press release. "However, we will move forward with the project as we have acquired almost 97 percent of the needed funding, and we will look for support from other local governments or New Mexico counties not currently in the district that have expressed interest in joining."

The election, which would have increased local gross receipts tax by one-eighth of 1 percent, drew a large turnout of voters. But 9,479 voted in support of the spaceport, compared to 10,412 votes against.

The spaceport tax district is currently made up of Doña Ana and Sierra counties.

In the press release, Landeene said other counties in the state have expressed interest in joining the spaceport tax district.

Aerospace companies interested in using Spaceport America include Virgin Galactic, Lockheed Martin, Rocket Racing Inc./Armadillo

Aerospace, Aerospace. Microgravity Enterprises and Payload Specialties

Construction of the spaceport is expected to begin early next year, but that is contingent upon the Federal Aviation Administration issuing a spaceport license by the end of this year. That pro-cess is in the final stages of get-ting a record of decision on its Environmental Impact Statement. A draft of the statement called for more formal protection assurances for the Camino Real trail that ran near the spaceport in the desert between Las Cruces and Truth or Consequences.

Should the EIS and FAA approvals be achieved by the end of the year, NMSA anticipates holding vertical launches in the first quarter of 2009. Completion of Virgin Galactic's terminal hanger and run-way for horizontal launches should be completed by late 2010.

Otero County's rejection will result in a loss of less than $7 million of the $198 million budget for the spaceport construction. Landeene said adjustments will be made to the budget unless other funding alternatives can be found.

Voters pass state bond proposals

Almost all constitutional amendments approved

By TODD G. DICKSON The Las Cruces Bulletin

Voters approved all of the state bond issue questions and all of the state constitutional amendments except the one to allow county commissioners to approve raises for themselves that they would enjoy while still in office.

Despite the economic worries, voters approved the bond issues that will result in a slight property-tax increase. The bonds included $14.725 million for a senior citizen facilities, $11.019 million for libraries, $57.925 million for health facilities and $140.133 million for higher education and some school capital improvements.

Constitutional amendments that passed will allow larger school boards, require earlier confirmation of cabinet secretaries, allow school elections to be held with other elections and explain how to appoint a replacement for the lieutenant governor.

Absentee ballot requests overwhelm Doña Ana County election officials

More than 3,800 ballots not processed

By Todd G. Dickson

Requests for absentee ballots so overwhelmed the Doña Ana County Bureau of Elections that workers didn't meet a state-required turn-around time of 24 hours, and in the end, more than 3,800 absentee ballots weren't processed before the final deadline.

According to a county press release on Election Day, Tuesday, Nov. 4, 8,141 absentee ballots were processed of 11,985 absentee ballots requested.

Of those processed, 5,960 were recorded after being received by mail, courier or hand-delivered by the voter. In addition, 1,984 people took advantage of early voting and signed affidavits or received in-lieu-of-absentee ballots at the early-voting locations. Also, 197 federal ballots have been received from military and overseas voters. The number of absentee ballots that remain outstanding stands

Lynn Ellins, Bureau of Elections supervisor who was on a two-week leave because he was running for county clerk, acknowledged that the office was overwhelmed by the number of absentee ballot requests and promises to review the county's procedures for processing the requests.

But upset Republicans say there was no excuse for not following state guidelines that require an absentee ballot to be processed within 24 hours of the request. Even New Mexico's Secretary of State Mary Herrera said she was upset with county officials for not hiring more staff or asking for help from the state.

Ellins contends that no reasonable addition to the Bureau of Elections staff - which currently numbers 18 employees - would have been able to handle the large number of requests.

Mark Van Dyke, county Republican Party chairman, said he agrees with the state's 24-hour turnaround requirement. He said staff allowed the backlog to build up until there was an unmanageable glut at the

"The voters' best interests weren't served," Van Dyke said on election night as the vote counts began

Van Dyke was quick to note that he felt the staff was working hard, but that county officials should have asked for more help to process the requests. "They knew the tidal wave was coming," he said.

Sid Goddard, Republican candidate for county clerk, said this problem hurts voters from both parties who want to vote absentee because they won't be here during the election or have health problems that keep them from going to the polls.

County Commission Chairman Kent Evans, who also was running for state representative, said elec-tions staff felt they only needed to comply with turning over the absentee ballots by the final deadline and weren't aware of the 24-hour requirement until he raised the issue.

No matter what the reasons, Goddard said people were denied their right to vote, which he called unacceptable.

Germaine Densmore, one of the people who didn't get her absentee ballot and had to vote early in person instead, said it made her wonder about how many people didn't vote at all because of they didn't get their

RESERVOIR UPDATE

Rio Grande flow at San Marcial was 413 cubic-feetper-second, 37 percent of average, as the Middle Rio Grande Conservancy District above Elephant Butte Reservoir shut down its irrigation season, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation reported in its river advisory.

Snow storms have slacked off. But the snow pack in the Upper Rio Grande Basin is 23 percent of average compared with 10 percent last year at this time, according to the Natural Resources Conservation Service

The bureau's latest survey of its Rio Grande Project reservoirs operational plan indicates that Elephant Butte Reservoir will end the year with a storage of 669,473 acre-feet, 34 percent of a full reservoir, 260,700 acre-feet more than last year's end-of-year storage.

The Elephant Butte Irrigation District ended its irrigation diversion on Oct. 31.

- The reservoir figures are: Elephant Butte 584,308 acre-feet, 29 percent of a full reservoir, an increase of 3,091 acre-feet, elevation 4,346 feet, 61 feet below the spillway.
- Caballo 17,555 acre-feet, 8 percent of capacity, up 764 acre-feet.

An acre-foot of water covers one acre of land one foot deep and contains 325,900 gallons of water.

Bright lights, big Halloween

Every year since 1994, pecan farmer Gerry Schurtz has put on an eye-catching pumpkin display off North Valley Drive to celebrate Halloween. This year's display had many county residents stopping by to get a closer look at the more than 195 pumpkins, which were carved by students at East Picacho and Doña Ana elementary schools. This year's batch of pumpkins was donated by the Lyles Family Farms. "It's gotten to the point where the schools really look forward to it," Schurtz said. "All of the students have seen their older brothers and sisters do it, and they can't wait.'

Mystery shopper scam hits state

General's Office complaining about their "Mystery Shopper" experiences.

The "Mystery Shoppers" are asked to visit local businesses, make a purchase, report on the customer service and return a percentage of the check the "Mystery Shopper" received as payment. The "Mystery Shopper" is instructed to send the return monies through Western Union. The transferred money is sent to a Canadian address. One consumer alerted the AG's Office that she now owes her financial institution $2,000 because the "Mystery Shopper" paycheck she deposited into her account was bogus.

Legitimate mystery shoppers do exist and are used to help businesses improve customer service. If you receive a "Mystery Shopper" proposal similar to the one we detailed above, you have reason to be suspicious. Do not respond to the offer, forward it to the New Mexico Attorney General's Office at communications@nmag. gov or mail it to New Mexico Attorney General Gary K. King's Office, Communications Division, 111 Lomas Blvd. NW, Suite 300, Albuquerque, NM 87102.

Doña Ana kids get boxing center Point leaders close

Legislators obtain funds for facility

By Todd G. Dickson

Because boxing had always been a positive influence in his life, Larry Clark set up a boxing ring in his backyard in the village of Doña Ana.

What equipment he had was subject to the weather – it was cold in the winter and hot in the summer.

Then a few years ago, Clark's efforts were brought to the attention of state Sen. Mary Jane Garcia, who provided the first funding for the new indoor center of the Doña Ana Village Boxing Club. State Rep. Jeff Steinborn helped get the center's final funding.

Both lawmakers said the boxing center provided a safe place for kids to get involved in a positive activity with mentorship.

There's not much to do in the small village north of Las Cruces, say brothers Joseph Saenz, 16, and Matthew Saenz, 18. The two regularly work out at the club and without it, said Matthew Saenz, young people are too easily inclined to get into trouble.

Going to the club is something that Joseph Saenz said he looks forward to every day. As soon as he's out of school, he can probably be found working out at the club.

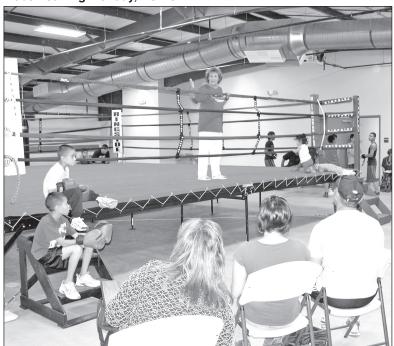

That's what the club is all about, Clark said. Since he started the club, it has grown from a handful of youths to more than 30 kids, including girl boxers.

Having such a nice facility, Clark said, makes a big difference in keeping the young people active and out of trouble. "It's a dream come true," he said.

Coming Up-

POWs, MIAs remembered

New Mexico State University Air Force ROTC and members of the Arnold Air Society, a national honorary professional and service organization, will recognize prisoners of war and military members missing in action (POWs and MIAs) throughout the week.

The groups will host a candlelight vigil to pay tribute to POWs and MIAs. The ceremony will begin at 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 7, on the Horseshoe at the Las Cruces campus. An interactive display will be hosted on the International Mall from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. this week through Friday, Nov. 7.

The groups will pay tribute to more than 100 World War II veterans who are expected to attend the football game at Aggie Memorial Stadium on Saturday, Nov. 8. A combined group of Air Force and Army ROTC cadets will be present on and off the field to honor them. A flyover sponsored by Holloman Air Force Base is scheduled after the national anthem, which includes two F-4s and the new F-22 Raptor, Groll said.

El Caldito requests assistance

El Caldito Soup Kitchen, 999 W. Amador Ave., is asking the public to help in their efforts to offer meals free of charge to hungry and disadvantaged persons in the community, especially during the upcoming holidays. The nonprofit organization is asking for monetary donations, hams and turkeys for the holidays and gas for their van.

For more information, contact Ruth Anderson at 644-7272 or randerson@zianet.com.

MVTC yard sale Saturday

Mesilla Valley Training Center, 400 W. Bell Ave., will hold a yard sale from 8 a.m. to noon Saturday, Nov. 8, at the center in Mesilla Park. MVTC will accept donations for the yard sale from 8:35 a.m. to 4:05 p.m. each weekday through Friday, Nov. 7. Proceeds from the yard sale will benefit the MVTC Activity Fund. For more information, call the school at 527-6059.

Colloquium series concludes

The final in a series of speakers for the fall semester at New Mexico State University's Colloquium in the Humanities, Social Sciences and Fine Arts will be at 4 p.m. Monday, Nov. 10. Margaret Jacobs, an associate professor of history and director of women and gender studies at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, will speak at NMSU's Science Hall 107. In her presentation titled "Cameras and Conquest: The Photographs of G.E. Miller and the Blazer Collection" she will discuss how photographer G.E. Miller captured his family life and the lives of newcomers to the area through photography at the turn of the 20th century when Anglos flocked to the Sacramento Mountains of southeastern New Mexico.

The series is sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences Research Center and the Southwest Border and Cultures Institute. These lectures are free and open to the public and no tickets or reservations are required.

MARVIN TESSNEER Out of the Past

75 years ago 1933 • In another Great Depression indicator, the Federal Emergency Relief Administrator was releasing funds for certified unemployed teachers. They were to teach vocational training in rural schools, general adult education, children of the unemployed and the handicapped in their homes.

- The Fox Rio Grande Theatre reopened and displayed its baroque Spanish redecoration. Tickets were 35 cents for adults.
- About 200 Civilian Conservation Corps young men arrived to be assigned for work on the Jornada Research Range.
- Popular Dry Goods, 139 N. Main St., advertised for its Harvest Sale with women's satin, silk or wool dresses for $6.90, men's suits for $16.95, women's polo and fur coats for $9.90, men's corduroy trousers for $2.49 and men's suede jackets for $4.95.

Construction of the Mesilla Dam on the Rio Grande was well under way when this photo was taken. The dam diverts irrigation water into the east and west laterals.

50 years ago 1958

- Attorney James T. Martin beat Rep. Jack D. Malone by 5,026 to 3,750 votes for state representative and Alfredo Garcia defeated John Herbert by 5,820 to 3,136 votes for sheriff.
- The "freshmen-loaded" Aggies avoided what had been considered a probable blowout by powerful Arizona State by keeping the game to a narrow 23-19 loss.
- White Sands Missile Range fired its 2,000th "hot" test shot.
- Las Cruces High School edged Albuquerque 14-13 to take the West 1AA lead, and Gadsden beat Cathedral-El Paso 13-6.
- The Plaza Cine was featuring Pedro Infante and Evita Muñoz in "Nosotros Los Pobres."
- The temperature dropped to 29 degrees.

25 years ago 1983

- Joe Miller, who had taught auto mechanics for 30 years at Las Cruces High School was named to the National Educators Association Las Cruces Chapter's Hall-of-Fame.
- The New Mexico State University defense forced five turnovers, and Kim Locklin and James Hebert rushed for a total of 264 yards as the Aggies whipped Wichita State 62-28.
- Rose Ann Hartman of Alameda Junior High was named New Mexico Counselor of the Year.
- Albuquerque's Manzano High School knocked Mayfield out of the 3AAAA District playoffs with a 42-30 win, but the Bulldawgs beat Albuquerque's Cibola High 23-17.

10 years ago 1998

- The Department of Education's accrediting team rated Las Cruces as a "model district." But it also advised the public school district that improvements were needed in bilingual and special education.
- Police Sgt. Juan Hernandez drew 14,422 votes to 10,653 votes for Deputy James R. Lee to win the election for sheriff.
- The Parks and Recreation Department started Citydance Theater classes for everything from jazz and ballet to flamenco to Irish clog.

A child's adoption should be celebrated

Keep your teens out of trouble with activities to keep them busy

How would you go about telling a child he or she is adopted, and when should that disclosure occur?

First, begin talking to your toddlers about their adoption before they can understand the meaning of the words. That way there will never be a moment when disclosure is necessary. To learn of adoption from a neighbor or other family member can be an awful shock to an individual. Don't risk the devastation of a later discovery by failing to take the sting out of the issue in babyhood.

Second, celebrate two birthdays with equal gusto each year: the anniversary of her birth, and the anniversary of the day she became your daughter. That is a handy mechanism by which the fact of adoption can be introduced. It also provides a way to equalize the status of siblings. Biological children have a psychological advantage, which they sometimes lord over their adopted brother or sister. That one-upmanship is neutralized somewhat when the adopted child gets a second birthday.

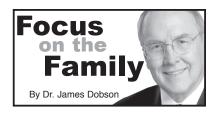

Third, present the adoptive event as a tremendous blessing (as implied above) that brought great excitement to the household. Tell about how badly you and your wife wanted a baby to hold even though it looked like you wouldn't get to raise another boy or girl. Then describe how the news came that "you had arrived," and how the whole family celebrated and cheered. Let your child know your delight when you first saw him lying in a crib, and how cute he looked in his blue blanket, etc. Tell him that his adoption was one of the happiest days of your life, and how you raced to the telephone to call all your friends and family members to share the fantastic news. (Again, I'm assuming that these details are true.)

This is the point: The child's interpretation of the adoptive event is almost totally dependent on the manner in which it is conveyed during the early years. Most certainly, one does not want to approach the subject sadly. admitting reluctantly that a dark and troublesome secret must now be confessed.

Fourth, when the foundation has been laid and the issue is defused, then forget it. Don't constantly remind the child of his uniqueness to the point of foolishness. Mention the matter when it is appropriate, but don't reveal anxiety or tension by constantly throwing adoption in the child's face. Youngsters are amazingly perceptive at "reading" these thinly disguised attitudes

I believe it is possible, by following these common sense suggestions, to raise an adopted child without psychological trauma or personal insult.

My 14-year-old boy is flighty, mischievous, irresponsible and lazy. If I don't watch him very carefully, he'll find ways to get into trouble - not really bad stuff, just stupid kid behavior. But I'm afraid I could lose him right at this time. What can I do to keep him on track?

It is most important to keep your rambunctious youngster moving. If you let him get bored, he'll find destructive ways to use unstructured and unsupervised time. My advice is to get him involved in the very best church youth program you can find. If your local congregation only has four bored kids in its junior high department and seven sleepy high schoolers, I would consider changing churches.

I know doing that could be disruptive to the rest of your family, but it might help save your volatile kid. This can be done not only through church activities but also by involvement with athletics, music, horses or other animals, and part-time jobs. The hope is that one of those options will grab his fancy at some point, and his boundless energy will be channeled into something constructive. Until then, you must keep that energetic kid's scrawny legs churning!

The Good Life

What is the good life? As Wall Street totters and people are afraid to check their 401ks, we are asking, "What is the good life?

God permitted Assyria (Iraq) to overpower Israel to chasten its leaders. Into this context, God spoke through the prophet Micah.

When the rebuke sunk in they asked, "With what shall I come before the Lord...?" The reply came: "He has told you, O man, what is good; and what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God?" Micah 6:6,8 (ESV)

This is the most succinct statement of ethics in the Bible. It conforms to the very character of God, who is balanced in justice and mercy, truth and grace, holiness and compassion. The good life is keeping justice and mercy, truth and grace, holiness and compassion in balance in every interaction and transaction

But how? "Walk humbly with your God." When we see ourselves under God and alongside others, we can balance truth and love. Without humility, the Bible is merely our ethical textbook. With humility and armed with truth and grace, a humble person can walk the razor sharp line between truth and love and blend it into every action. This is the mark of a follower of Jesus Christ.

Local nurses honored for their dedication

New Mexico Nursing Excellence Awards present unique opportunity

By Bethany Conway

Whether it is patients, students or fellow employees, nurses all over the nation spend their days caring for those around them.

While knowing they have made a difference in someone's life is thanks enough for many, the New Mexico Center for Nursing Excellence offers a unique opportunity for nurses statewide to be nominated by their fellow staff members and those they serve for the annual New Mexico Nursing Excel-

Held on Oct. 25, this year's event saw many nurses from southern New Mexico nominated for their dedication and their excellent patient-care standards. Leigh DeRoos, an immunization nurse at the New Mexico State University Student Health Center and president of the New Mexico Nurses Association District 14, was one of those who was not only nominated, but received the Nursing Management Award for her work ethic.

"It's an honor and a humbling experience to know that, of all the people nominated, they chose you to represent nurse managers throughout the state," she said. "I know at the Student Health Center we have a great group of nurses. I am always amazed at the lengths they go to in order to $% \left\{ 1\right\} =\left\{ 1\right\} =\left\{$ facilitate patient care."

Rebecca Kroll, home health nurse at Memorial Medical Center, received the Home Health and Hospice Award for her work not only with her patients, but also their families.

With home health, it's a different setting. You get to know families, and you get to see where they live," she said. "One recurring theme you will hear, regardless of who you are talking to, is it's all about who we are serving – our patients, each other, our community. That's where the greatest reward really is.

For those who were nominated, but did not receive an award, it was still great to know that the people around them see what they do and recognize their dedication.

"We have such a tremendous group of nursing professionals in this part of the state, and to have the opportunity to work with this group of nurses and in turn have that recognized by our colleagues, it's hard to describe," said Ann DeBooy, chief nurse at MMC, who was nominated for the Nurse Administrator Award.

As interim director for the NMSU of Nursing, Jacalyn Ryberg, who was nominated for an award in nursing education, was able to give insight from an educational perspective.

"I feel very humbled and very privileged to be nominated, because when you are working with talented students and talented faculty, folks that have energy and insight and creativity, you feel very blessed," she said.

Along with fellow employees within the School of Nursing, Ryberg helped bring online nursing courses to the state of New Mexico for those who live in rural areas.

We started the first online school nursing course in the state and the country," she said. "It wasn't because of one person, I just was just the one nominated.'

Local nurses Ann Debooy, Leigh DeRoos, T.J. Jasso, Rebecca Kroll, Patricia Frank. Jacalyn Ryberg and Charlotte Reid were all nominated for the 2008 New Mexico Nursing Excellence Awards. All of these medical professionals are proud of the caliber of nurses found in southern New Mexico.

For Patricia Frank, an infectious disease nurse with the New Mexico Department of Health, the best part about the nomination is knowing that she received it for doing what she loves - working in the community.

"I have the best job I have ever had in my life at the New Mexico Department of Health," Frank said. "To be nominated for something is extra special, but I am rewarded by having the best job in the

While the majority of today's nurses are female, Trinidad Jasso, a diabetic educator at MMC who was also nominated for an award, said that he has always been happy with his choice to become a nurse and is glad to be helping those trying to better understand the state of their health

"Diabetes is a chronic illness and every day there are new patients diagnosed with it," he said. "It's about listening to them (patients) and understanding."

Along with Jasso, all of the nurses mentioned that a major part of what makes them successful at what they do is that they are constantly evolving and keeping informed on developments in the medical

"We have to stay abreast of all these changes and research," Jasso said.
"Education is so big, and we are changing all the time," Ryberg added. "What we learn basically just keeps going and

With the state facing a present and future nursing shortage, Ryberg added that the future of nursing is in the hands of educators.

"If we continue to educate the way we are educating today, we will never catch up. So we are really needing to look at what are alternatives to maximize the resources we have," Ryberg said.

As the group of nurses began talking about how they approach their profession while visiting the Bulletin office, it became apparent that they are all interconnected and must work together to reach a common goal.

"At Mesilla Valley Hospice, it's all teamwork," said nurse Charlotte Reid, who was nominated for an award in hospice in-home care. "We all work together for the community."

At some point in their career, all of them had their own mentors who pushed them and encouraged them to achieve, and they are happy to know they are doing the

You try to set an example, and you have high expectations of your staff, and they in turn have high expectations of you," DeRoos said. "We hire nursing students at the Student Health Center during their last two or three semesters, and you really want to set an example for them.

Whether it's practicing in-home care, working at a doctor's office, going out into the public, teaching or working in a hospital, all agreed that nursing presents a wide array of options for the next generation of professionals.

"There is something for every one in nursing," DeRoos said.

November is Diabetes Awareness Month

Make a healthy lifestyle change to celebrate occasion

November is National Diabetes Awareness Month, a time to bring attention to a chronic illness affecting millions of people through-out the world. In fact, one in three children born after the year 2000 is expected to have diabetes in his or her lifetime. Nearly 24 million Americans have diabetes, and by 2050, that number is expected to reach 48 mil-

Diabetes is the condition in which the body does not produce or properly use insulin, the hormone needed to convert sugar and starches into energy. Diabetes is the leading cause of blindness, amputations and kidney failure. It is also the fifth-leading cause of death in the country and it can triple a person's risk for heart attack and stroke.

National diabetes rates are surging, and although there is no cure for type 1 diabetes, which occurs when the immune system mistakenly destroys cells that make insulin, type 2 diabetes can often be prevented. Type 2 diabetes accounts for about 90 percent of cases and is associated with obesity and lack of exercise. This type usually occurs after a condition known as pre-diabetes, which is currently affecting 57 million people in the United States. The good news is that prediabetes and type 2 diabetes can often be prevented by making diet and exercise changes.

Many new products can help consumers eat healthy and make lifestyle changes easily, said Mike Cecil who develops better products for Wells Dairy Inc., the largest family-owned and operated dairy processor in the coun-Cecil spends a lot of time researching healthier ingredients that will make products healthier without sacrificing taste. For those who want to make a lifestyle change for the better, Cecil offers ideas on ways to incorporate treats into their diet:

Dark chocolate

Studies show that eating dark chocolate, above 60-percent cocoa, may contribute to improved cardiovascular health and lower blood sugar. Packed with natural antioxidants, dark chocolate and cocoa sit in the same good-for-you category as green tea and pomegranates. The trick is to shoot for 60-percent cocoa or above. The higher the natural cocoa content, the greater the antioxidant level. Keep in mind that dark chocolate is an indulgent treat and you only need a small portion. Moderation is key when it comes to maintaining a healthy lifestyle.

Ice cream

No longer does reducing calories and fat mean that you have to give up a favorite treat - ice cream. Fro those on the go, get a prepackaged 100-calorie bar or a frozen fruit bar. If buying a family-sized container, go for reduced fat, fat free or no sugar added. For example, buying no-sugar-added, reduced-fat vanilla will allow one to make banana splits and sundaes that have 100 calories less per cup.
Light snacks

Making a few small changes when buying snacks can make a big difference. Go for multigrain crackers instead of cheese ones. Forget regular butter popcorn and grab a light pack or look for new varieties made with herbs and olive oil. When considering sweet snacks, choose light ones. The Blue Bunny Sweet Freedom line, for example, offers treats like the black raspberry bars made with no-sugar-added, reduced-fat ice cream. Choosing a Sweet Freedom dessert or a Sugar Free Bomb Pop will keep calories and carbohydrates low, which is essential to preventing diabetes.

Healthy Drinks

Soda contains no nutrients, yet it is loaded with extra calories and sugar. To get the most out of your diet, forget your daily soda and go for drinks that provide important vitamins. Low-sodium, 100-percent vegetable juice is a great option and so is vitamin or flavor-enriched water. Just make sure that you check drink labels for calories; healthy water drinks should contain zero calories. To get a fizz fix without all the sugar, try bubbly green-tea beverages

I don't want your millions

Letter scams are still going strong

If you have an email address, you've probably received a nice email from a foreign person hoping to share his or her inherited millions with you – if you provide some personal information and pay the expenses to "transfer" the money.

Not to say that you're untrustworthy and these people have no reason NOT to trust you with their millions of pounds or "USD," it's that there really isn't any. On top of a money loss, victims who fall for it and send their personal information are subject to identity theft.

These types of scams, while people have been getting hit more often than ever before, have actually been around for more than 20 years and have been dubbed Nigerian Letter scams or Nigerian 491 – the number of the penal code under which this type of advanced-fee frauds are categorized in Nigeria. After doing a little research, it's said that this type of scam originated by Nigerian students when the economy began to decline. Since then, scammers in other parts of the world, especially Western Europe, have begun to pick up the unfortunate trend.

For most of us who know it's com-

For most of us who know it's common sense to ignore these emails, there are some who still get hooked by the idea of getting millions of dollars. Luckily the FBI has issued some tips to avoid this type of scam:

- If you receive a letter from Nigeria asking you to send personal or banking information, do not reply in any manner. Send the letter to the U.S. Secret Service, your local FBI office, or the U.S. Postal Inspection Service. You can also register a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission's Consumer Sentinel.
- If you know someone who is corresponding in one of these schemes, encourage that person to contact the FBI or the U.S.
- Secret Service as soon as possible.

 Be skeptical of individuals representing themselves as Nigerian or foreign government officials asking for your help in placing large sums of money in overseas bank accounts.
- Do not believe the promise of large sums of money for your cooperation.
- Guard your account information carefully.

While these guidelines seem like common sense, remember there are some who still fall victim to the scams. Be careful out there.

Workforce Center renovated

Facility assists in strengthening economic value

By NATISHA HALES

In the midst of its 35th anniversary, Doña Ana Community College has had a lot to celebrate, including the open house of its Workforce Center, which houses the Small Business Development Center, the Workforce and Continuing Education and the Technical and Industrial divisions.

Funded with $3.65 million from the state and federal governments, 33,000 square feet of the facility was remodeled.

"We're proud to be the workforce-training hub of southern New Mexico," DACC President Margie Huerta said.

A facility with a special purpose in economic development, the Workforce Center prepares all for the workforce – whether they are still attending high school, changing careers or starting up their own business.

Kari Mitchell: Spearheading community initiatives

Las Cruces Machine CEO driven by a passion to help youth

By NATISHA HALES
The Las Cruces Bulletin

In this fast-paced society fueled by information technology, people are struggling to keep up the pace.

Not Kari Mitchell, who serves as CEO of Las Cruces Machine, has contributed to several groundbreaking community initiatives and home-schools her two sons. Despite her full plate, she's always bright-eyed and bushy-tailed, ready to talk about what means most to her.

"Everything is motivated by passion," Mitchell said. "When you're passionate about something, you find the energy to keep going." Mitchell kept going when she and her husband, Rod, moved to Las Cruces from Houston, Texas, after they purchased Las Cruces Machine, a small-component manufacturing company, in 2000. Rod Mitchell had been an engineer for Dow

by passio Chemical, while Kari Mitchell worked in health care administration.

"It was quite a change for me," she said. "I went from a very white-collar job to a blue-collar job, but it was more of a culture leap than a fundamental leap. Processing a patient through the system is very similar to processing a product through the system.

Because of Mitchell's position within the company, Las Cruces Machine is considered to be female-owned, a rare find in her industry. However, she isn't presented with the same set of challenges as she would if she were the single owner of the of an issue, since she said the business is heavily affected by globalization. "We've seen a fairly significant drop in activity,' she said. "Just like 9/11, I think there were 2 million manufacturing jobs lost, and now there are 50 to 60,000 manufacturing jobs already gone. We're as susceptible as any company. These are rocky times, and to be frank, we spend a lot of time in prayer."

While considering the 50 employees of the company, Mitchell also has embarked on an effort to strengthen local economic development activities and has been an integral part in creating partnerships between education and business.

Shortly after the Mitchells purchased the business, Kari Mitchell said she became involved with the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance after voicing some concerns about the community.

This community has phenomenal talent, but it lacked collaboration," she said. "I was perplexed so much by that. The talent and potential was so unharnessed and so segmented."

Serving as chair of MVEDA two years ago, Mitchell assisted in a strategic plan for the economic development organization. Her involvement with MVEDA led to participation in Leadership Las Cruces and Leadership New Mexico, where issues she was interested in were discussed.

"There was a lot of community service, but not an economic development engine, which drives the need for workforce, and workforce drives the need for education.

That led me to MVEDA and founding - with Patsy Duran and others - the Regional Education Initiative and the Doña Ana County Legislative Coalition. All of those things are about collaboration."

The Regional Education Initiative brought educational leaders from the Hatch Valley, Las Cruces and Gadsden school districts together with key business leaders for The Bridge, the nonprofit component that will implement the vision of preparing all students to graduate from high school and compete in the workforce.

"That's the thing that's exciting about it," she said. "Education is truly embracing business, and business is embracing academics.

The Doña Ana County Legislative

Coalition also is a partnership that encompasses school, business and government in order to have one voice speak on behalf of the organizations when it comes to lobbying for funding or other needs.

"We're all in this together," Mitchell said. "We only win if we stay arm and arm. If we become deluded with special interests, we lose really quickly."

She's teaching this philosophy with her two children, Joshua and Jeremiah, as she works to home-school them.

"Other than my life with my husband, home-schooling my children is the most important part of my life," she said. "There are lots of reasons I do it, and there are lots of benefits. I've raised my children alongside my work and my community involvement. They see a lot of life, and they have a sense of why these things matter. I'm teaching them to live for causes greater than them. I want to go through the daily struggles with them." As she continues to home-school her children, Mitchell said she will probably pull back from her community involvement over the next 10 years to focus on her children.

But for now, she maintains her busy schedule, although she admits it has not allowed her to pursue other activities.

'We travel as a family, but we're homeschooling the whole time. We make sacrifices," she said. "There's a life to be lived that we're not living, but we're OK with that. We make it to the next step.

67% of pending home sales below $200,000

Sellers are selling for less than asking price

What a difference a year can make. In March of this year, this column's headline read: "Majority of local home sales below $250,000." The number was based on sales data from Oct. 1, through Dec. 31, 2007, as reported by the Multiple Listing and Information Service (MLIS) arm of the Las Cruces Association of Realtors (LCAR). At that time, approximately 59.1 percent of our local area sales were closed at $200,000 or less.

Today, MLIS reports that 67 percent of all of the pending new- and existing-home, townhome and condominium sales carry asking prices of no more than $200,000. That's a 13-percent increase in the number of homes selling below $200,000 or less since last year. A transaction is pending when the purchase agreement has been signed, but the

Enchanted Artisans showcases local work

Grand opening is Saturday, Nov. 8

By Natisha Hales

Jackye Meinecke, owner of Enchanted Gardens, is expanding her business at 201 Avenida de Mesilla by offering a space for local artisans to showcase their work.

The grand opening for Enchanted Artisans, scheduled from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 8, is a partnership between Meinecke and artists Gabriella Denton, Jo Rango, Genevieve Sanders and Nancy Wyatt.

"Gabriella and I were talking about renting studio space," Meinecke said. "As we talked, she moved forward to the concept of a consignment space for local artisans. She, Genevieve and I discussed and solved the usual artist/gallery concerns. Then the idea took off."

Denton will be displaying folk art prints and Funny Diva earrings, which she described as "playful, lightweight, inexpensive earrings.

"I couldn't find them, so I started making them for myself, and my friends want-ed to buy some," she said.

Whimsical, playful and colorful are recurring themes of the artists' work.

Genevieve Sanders, an employee of Enchanted Gardens, also will take on the title of artisan when she showcases her Happy Pants.

They're wonderful, loose-fitting, casual gardening pants made of various materials – wovens, linens and corduroy," Sanders said. "I got the name from Gabriella Denton, and we just thought it would be

Sanders, who has worked for Meinecke for more than two years, does all the displays at Enchanted Gardens, and although she has never sold her creations, she said she's ready to try.

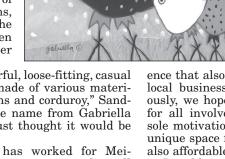

"I respect Jackye immensely," she said. "We thought we all had something to offer with her store. It's a new avenue to show off our talents.

Jo Rango also will show off her talents with Wrist Rocks, and Silver City potter Nancy Wyatt also will offer her works of art.
"I think many shoppers are looking for a unique product and experience that also supports local artisans and local businesses," Meinecke said. "Obviously, we hope to make sales and profits for all involved, though that is not our sole motivation. We also hope to create a unique space for quality artisans that are also affordable.'

In addition to a meet-and-greet with the artisans during the grand opening, Meinecke said the business will be decorated for the holidays, and there will be refreshments available, in addition to

Buy and hold still good advice during downturn

It takes guts to stick to the strategy

The current meltdown has not destroyed the capacity of the U.S. economy.

The rollercoaster ride that has been the stock market over the last three months has been a hair-raising experience. But through it all, many financial market experts have recommended standing pat-They recommend against out-thinking the

The logic behind this advice is the same logic that underlies the recommendation for standard times - which is to buy and hold a diversified portfolio. First, one should diversify to eliminate as much risk as possible. Second, one should buy and hold so as to minimizetransaction fees.

If buy and hold is the advice for normal times, its corollary is to stand pat during the rough times. While the events of the last few months involve complex interactions, at its most basic, the declines in residential real estate values reduced the equity backing of a variety of financial securities. Lenders, seeing the underlying collateral eroded, essentially initiated a gigantic call on the global financial system. Banks and other financial companies struggled to reassure lenders. Some succeeded like Citicorp, which was able to raise funds from several Persian Gulf sovereign funds. Others failed to find new funding, including Bearn Stearns.

The system has frozen up. Businesses, like investment bankers and hedge funds that once used other people's money to buy and sell, can't get funding. They have had to drop out of the market. The result has been a sharp decline in liquidity. The loss in liquidity means those who need to sell may not be able to find a buyer. Stock and bond prices have dropped precipitously as a result.

Here is where the opportunity arises for those following a buy-and-hold strategy. Despite the scorn heaped on John McCain when he said the fundamentals are sound, the fact is, the fundamentals are sound. The current meltdown has not destroyed the capacity of the U.S. economy. The American workforce remains productive. Our factories are still standing. Those willing to hold will likely be rewarded when the financial meltdown resolves itself and liquidity returns to the market.

Well, what about selling now and buying back in when the market turns around? Good strategy, if you know when the market will turn around. The problem is that no one knows. Experience shows that markets, when they turn around, tend to recover quickly. Those on the sidelines are likely to miss out.

What about retirees who need to live on their savings? The average retiree can expect to live another 10 years. They may need to liquidate some savings, but most of their portfolio will need to be held for years to come. A buy-and-hold strategy applies to them also.

Of course, there are some circumstances when liquidating investments is necessary. Students do need to pay tuition. Medical bills do come up unexpectedly. Other expenses may arise. But for most of us, now is not the time to panic, but to ride out the storm. The advice given by financial economists for years - buy and hold a diversified portfolio – still holds, even in these uncertain times.

Producers predicting high-quality pecans

New orchards are increasing local yields

By MARVIN TESSNEER The Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico pecan orchards are in the off-year of the alternate-bearing cycle, but the nut sizes and quality are good and the harvest outlook is promising, Phillip Arnold of San Saba Pecan said.

The USDA is predicting in its early estimation a state pecan harvest of about 46 million pounds of in-shell pecans. The production in 2005 was 80 million pounds, a record.

"We had a lot of younger pecan orchards coming into production, and that increased the yield," Arnold said at the recent Pecan Field Day. "And that could keep increasing the New Mexico pecan production for the next 10 years. If we don't see a decline, in the next 10 years we could see a pecan production approaching 100 millionpounds in New Mexico.'

San Saba brokers and cleans pecans. But Arnold also is associated with the Arnold Brothers Partnership with his brother, Gary, that grows, cleans and custom harvests

The production trend would be vulnerable to prices that are received and production costs. Also, if a farmer has a chance to sell some land at a good price, including a pecan orchard, and commodity prices are bogged down, the farmer may choose to sell.

And production costs keep going up. The last couple of years, the price of fertilizer has increased 300 to 400 in the workforce and have either become unemployed, are underemployed or are searching for additional workforce skills.

The Workforce and Continuing Education Division fulfills all of those needs. Classes are available for building computer and customer service skills. There are scheduled seminar classes, but customized training for employees also is available. The training doesn't have to take place in the Workforce Center – trainers can come to the employer.

The Small Business Development Center also provides training and seminars, but with a different focus – to assist individuals starting their small business and for those who already have one open.

Lt. Gov. Diane Denish, who was on hand to take art in the celebration, said facilities like DACC's Workforce Center are essential to New Mexico's economic success.

"By pulling together, we can build a strong, competitive workforce in New Mexico," Denish said. The key to New Mexico's stability is growth and development."

The concept is part of Denish's theory of an "educonomy."

"We have to make the educational system relevant to young people," she said. "We need to have more opportunities. Dual learning and training for adults in the workforce – that's what's going to make New Mexico successful. We have new, emerging industries, people of the alternative energy. ing industries - aerospace, film, alternative energy, and we're growing in health care. With the facilities, the model is there.

"Work is the lifeblood of humanity. People have to love what they do and do what they love, and really good jobs are being made available. That's why this partnership is really important.'

U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman joined in the partnership by supporting the federal funding for the renovation and other legislation for higher-education institutions.

The College Cost and Reduction Access Act of 2007 has provided the "largest increase in student aid since the G.I. Bill," Bingaman said. The act provides an additional $200 million in aid for New Mexico families.

The Higher Education Opportunity Act of 2008 increases the maximum amount for the Pell Grant, which will be $6,000 by 2009 and $8,000 by the 2014-15 academic year. The grants also will be available for summer education.

"Manufacturing fertilizers is directly related to energy," Arnold said. "Everything has to be moved. We've been looking at more than $4 a gallon for diesel. It backed down a little. Pecan prices are up, but the higher prices of petroleum have been eating into our profits. And labor costs are up."

Last year, state pecan growers had a good crop and, "decent prices. We made a little bit of money," he said.

The export market helped.

"We had an increase in pecan exports to China," he "The Chinese exports were better than we've ever seen them. The weak U.S. dollar made American products a bargain. Pecans were cheaper than other tree nuts, less than $4 a pound like walnuts.

"And we had a record consumption of pecans in the U.S, about 375 million pounds. The pecan export was 40million pounds.

Nut trees grow from year to year, Arnold said, explaining the alternate-bearing cycle. After a heavy nut production season, like last year, the trees are left stressed.

"The trees' reserves are depleted. They need more water, fertilizer, sunlight to go from one year to the next," he said. "Instead of producing a lot of nuts they're building up their carbohydrates to grow nuts, trying to recuperate.

High temperatures continue, and producers also are watching for late sprouting from nuts.

Pecan growers in competing states have been having weather problems. Georgia has survived a dry spell with late rains. But the rainfall and clouds have been causing problems in that state, insects, fungi and lack of sunlight for photosynthesis to build energy reserves.

The USDA has estimated Georgia production this year 40 million pounds, down from 140 million last year.

Rain also has been bringing problems for Texas producers, with the scab fungus showing up in nut clusters.

Paul Koenig of Young Pecan Co. reported that, although the quantity is down, "the quality is excellent."

The company, which has its cleaning plant on Entrada del Sol in Las Cruces, is buying pecans out of Mexico where the orchard owners are "green harvesting" near Hermosillo, Sonora, and Torreon, Coahuila. The pecans are mature and the hulls still are green. The hulls are splitting, are not stuck to the nuts and can be removed with rollers in the plant, Koenig said.

Greg Daviet, who grows pecans on 250 acres, also sees good quality pecan crop with a high kernel percent filling out the nuts.

"We're seeing more chances of a green harvest, the earliest in several years, because of the early shuck

MARVIN TESNEER I The Las Cruces Bulleti

Shucks on mature pecans are beginning to split in this orchard just east of the Rio Grande. Many farmers see chances of an early "green harvest."

split," said Daviet, who also is president of the Doña Ana County Farm and Livestock Bureau.

"Pecan growers are expected a good crop for an off-year with high quality," Extension Service horticulturist Jeff Anderson said. "They're just hopeful that the prices will be up."

They are watching the pecan cold-storage carryover from last year, hoping that bakeries and confection manufactures will use it up before the harvest starts.

New Mexico pecan growers are faced with higher production costs. Pecan production costs in the Southwest are $2,500 an acre compared with $1,800 an acre in the Southeast, Anderson said.

The annual Pecan Conference and Show is scheduled in Las Cruces on March 1, 2 and 3, which also will feature the Food Fantasy, the recipe contest for new uses of

The New Mexico pecan industry has been growing during the last couple of decades, but the production shows the effect of the alternate-bearing cycle. The production in 1990 was 29 million pounds. In 1995 it was 55 million pounds. It dropped to 45 million pounds in 2000 but it reached 65 million pounds in 2005, which stood as a record for a couple of years. The production value also has fluctuated, $52 million in 1990, $47.9 million in 2000 and $113.5 million in 2005, according to the New Mexico Agricultural Statistics

Riding in on success

Outdoor Adventures caters to cycling community

By Natisha Hales

Because Las Cruces boasts nearly an entire 300 days of sunshine, it's no wonder there's a large group of cyclists who opt to enjoy the weather. The current state of the economy brings even more of a reason to trade in four wheels for two.

The right bicycle and all the accessories for riders can be found at Outdoor Adventures, 1424 Missouri Ave. Employees of the business, including owner Don Donahue and Manager Pablo Lopez, are avid riders, so they have a genuine interest and a vast knowledge on the specialty.

Lopez has been working at Outdoor Adventures for nine years now, he said, starting as a "grease monkey," repairing bicycles and working his way up to a managerial position. Over the years, he said he's noticed that the current location near New Mexico State University has helped business.

NATISHA HALES I The Las Cruces Bulleti

In addition to selling bicycles, Outdoor Adventures offers all the accessories, including gear.

"Because of our location, we do a lot with commuters to the university," Lopez said. "We'll provide services - repairs and tune-ups – but it's also about preventative maintenance, buying heavy-duty tubes and sealers. A bike needs to be dependable, and it's not dependable if you're walking it instead

Outdoor Adventures Manager Pablo Lopez also is an avid cyclist. He said he sold his car 11 years ago and now commutes on a bicycle.

of riding it because it has a flat tire."

While catering to commuters, Outdoor Adventures also caters to the high-end mountain bike racer and all the accessories.
"You can even come and pick up a cool set of shades," Lopez said.

In addition to cycling, Outdoor Adventures also provides a small selection of rock-climbing accessories - ropes, crash pads and harnesses.

"It's a small section of the store," Lopez said, "but we keep it going because most of the time people can't find it anywhere. The closest is probably in Albuquerque."

Because of the mild climate, business is good year-round and Outdoor Adventures currently has seven employees, including manager.

Getting through the tough economy has adversely affected the business, but Lopez said it also has brought more business to the shop.

"The price of everything has seen an increase - some items up to 15 percent," he said. "That's directly related to rising fuel costs, so production is a little more expensive. We're still able to offer highquality products at reasonable prices regardless.

The balance that has come with the rise in prices has been the increase of people who are keeping their cars in the garage and turning to their bikes.

"There has been an increase in interested people who are willing to ride those two miles to work each day instead of drive, like they've been doing for the past 10 years," Lopez said. "That balances it all out a little bit."

Lopez knows what it's like to be a commuter all too well. He sold his car 11 years ago and has been living on two wheels ever since. While he is able to enjoy the weather, he said there's one season that avid cyclists dread - the windy season.

Dos Lunas Tequila is top 10 in Adobe Deli

The city of Deming has welcomed Dos Lunas Tequila with open arms and is now available at the Adobe Deli Steakhouse. This ultra-premium tequila is in the restaurant for the taking, and it is flying off the shelves as one of the top-10 tequilas in the saloon.

Dos Lunas Tequila, an ultra-premium tequila brand based out of Texas, has been taking New Mexico by storm. The tequila's most recent success is inside The Adobe Deli Steakhouse in Deming, N.M. This fine restaurant, saloon and cigar shop is among the most popular steak and seafood restaurants in the state. The premium spirits and cigars carried in the saloon drive connoisseurs from across the state for the opportunity to experience each one, while a sophisticated western theme sets up the mood in this fine establishment.

Dos Lunas Tequila, one of the smoothest and purest tequilas in the world, is 100-percent all-natural and made with no chemicals, enzymes or additives. This award-winning tequila is made in Guadalajara, Jalisco, Mexico, and based out of New Mexico's neighboring city, El Paso. Whether served in a snifter or a shot glass, this tequila is one to savor. Adobe Deli Steakhouse offers the chance for locals to experience the process, quality, and time that go into each bottle. A short ride ends with an exquisite meal and a supreme tequila in Deming.

Adobe Deli Steakhouse is located at 3970 Lewis Flats Road and open Monday through Saturday from 6 p.m. until 10 p.m. The bar is open from 2 p.m. until 2 a.m. Monday through Saturday, and on Sundays from 2 p.m. until midnight. For more restaurant information, call 575-546-0361.

Pearce receives NAM award

U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce has received the National Association of Manufacturers (NAM) Award for Manufacturing Legislative Excellence. The NAM Award honors federal lawmakers whose voting records have consistently supported manufacturing in America. Pearce's record was 95 percent, according to the association.

"In this era of increasing economic uncertainty, Rep. Pearce has demonstrated a true understanding of manufacturing's key role in the strength of the American economy and has acted to protect and create manufacturing jobs," said NAM President John Engler. "On behalf of manufacturers in New Mexico and across the nation, I am proud to say 'thank you' to Rep. Pearce for consistently voting in favor of manufacturing innovation and competitiveness."

The NAM Award is given to members of the House and Senate who support key manufacturing votes 70 percent or more of the time, as determined by an NAM memberled advisory committee comprised of both small and large manufacturers.

In the 110th Congress, 43 senators and 181 representatives earned the NAM Award. Members of Congress are notified in advance when an upcoming vote has been designated a "key vote" by the NAM.

Nominations open for freedom award

Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve, a Department of Defense agency, has opened the nomination season for the 2009 Secretary of Defense Employer Support Freedom Award.

National Guard and Reserve members and their families are eligible and encouraged to nominate employers who have gone above and beyond in their support of military employees. Nominations will be accepted at www. FreedomAward.mil through Jan. 19.

The Secretary of Defense Employer Support Freedom Award is the highest recognition given by the U.S. Government to employers for their outstanding support of their employees who serve in the National Guard and Reserve. The 2009 recipients will be announced in the spring and honored in Washington, D.C., at the 14th annual Secretary of Defense Employer Support Freedom Award ceremony Sept. 17, 2009.

Recipients of the 2008 Freedom Award met with President George W. Bush and Deputy Secretary of Defense Gordon England. Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness, Dr. David Chu presented the awards at a ceremony attended by members of Congress and senior government and military officials. Almost one-half of the U.S. military is comprised of the National Guard and Reserve. The Department of Defense shares these citizen warriors with their civilian employers, many of whom provide significant support to their employees who serve in the National Guard and Reserve. 2008 honorees ranged from a small family-owned transportation business in Utah to large businesses including

Weed-free forage niche market growing

Hay producers can add value to their product by having noxious weed-free for-age certification through New Mexico State University and the New Mexico Department of Agriculture.

This is a win-win situation. A farmer can get a better price for their forage and it helps prevent the spread of noxious weeds," said Tracey Carrillo, NMSU director of seed certification and weed-free forage programs.

Initially, the prevention program targeted baled forage and straw used by the U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management, but Carrillo can see the hay becoming a niche-market for people using horses in restricted areas.

The certification program is the first step to preventing the spread of noxious weeds into national forests and wilderness areas. Presently, forestry service staff are required to feed their pack and riding horses certified weed-free hav when in the forest or wilderness area. Straw used in soil erosion reclamation projects or anifree, said Leonard Lake, invasive plant program coordinator for the U.S. Forest Service Southwest Region, which comprises 11 national forests in New Mexico, Arizona and three national grasslands in New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma.

The Southwest region is just beginning its noxious and invasive weed-prevention program, which will evolve from internal policy to regulating what the public horsemen use when on forest-service land. Lake expects it will be two to three years before the public will be required to have certified weed-free forage when they bring horse feed onto federal property. Once the regulation is implemented a niche-market will develop for noxious weed-free forage.

"Before we can require our people and the public to use noxious weed-free forage while on federal land, we need a source," Lake said. "We have been working with NMDA and Tracey at NMSU to establish a certification program."
Felipe Sanchez of Jarales is one of the first farmers to have his hay certified. He says the cost of certification is offset by the benefits.

"I'm selling my hay at a higher price, $4 a bale more," Sanchez said of the 90 tons that was shipped to various forest service locations in 2008. "I didn't have to treat my fields any different than I had been doing. I just had to have the inspector come out and certify the field before I cut the hay.'

Cost of certification includes $20 per hour for inspection and driving time, 58.5 cents per mile for mileage and $2.50 per acre. A request for certification needs to be made to NMSU's seed certification department 10 days prior to expected harvest date. The crop will be certified using the North American Certified Weed Free regional list and the New Mexico Noxious Weed list.

Once the inspector arrives at the field, he inspects the crop at two entry points, the field perimeter and the storage area. Once approved as noxious weed-free, a certificate of inspection is completed and sent to the producer. The producer will identify the inspected forage by a specially colored twine available through NMSU's seed certification department," Carrillo said.

For more information about New Mexico weed-free forage program, visit www.seedcertification.nmsu.edu or contact Carrillo at tcarrill@nmsu.edu or 646-4125. For questions regarding noxious weeds, contact Jim Wanstall at NMDA, jwanstall@thuntek.net or 505-565-4224.

A 'checklist' for surviving a financial crisis

Try not to listen to doomsayers

Over the past few weeks, the news has been almost incomprehensible. It's hard for many of us to make sense of the failure of major Wall Street firms and large banks and the $700 billion bailout of the financial sector. And it's hard for investors to be calm when stocks have fallen almost 30 percent from their all-time high a year ago. What can you do to cope? Consider the following "checklist" for surviving a financial crisis:

Close your ears - but open your eyes. These days, you may hear some so-called "experts" talking about end-ofcapitalism scenarios. Try not to listen to these doomsayers. We still have the most powerful economy in the history of the world and we will recover from these setbacks. However, even if you close your ears, you should keep your eyes wide open. Specifically, look for opportunities. Stock prices are down now, but they won't always be – and, all else being equal, investors who buy into the stock market at lower prices are likely to earn higher returns than those who buy stocks when prices are higher.

Focus on things you can control. During a financial crisis, your success at weathering the storm depends on your ability to stay calm and concentrate on the things you can control. For example, you can control your emotions so that you aren't panicked into making unwise, short-term decisions, such as putting all your money under your mattress. To a certain extent, you can even control your portfolio's ability to withstand volatility. How? By diversifying your holdings as broadly as possible. The wider your range of investments, the less you'll be hurt by downturns that primarily affect one asset class. (Keep in mind, though, that diversification, by itself, cannot guarantee profits or protect against loss.)

Review and rebalance your portfolio. During this market decline, some of your holdings have probably fallen more than others. As a result, you may now own a lower percentage of a specific asset class than you had originally intended when you built your portfolio. Consequently, you may want to meet with your financial advisor to determine if you should rebalance your portfolio by adding more money to those asset classes that have fallen the most. You may also want to rebalance if your risk tolerance or long-term goals have changed

Look for quality investments. In this economic environment, it's more important than ever to focus on quality investments. If you buy stocks, look for those companies with strong balance sheets. If you're purchasing bonds, stick with those that receive high credit ratings. If we are entering a prolonged economic downturn, these types of investments will, in all likelihood, fare better than lower-quality stocks and bonds.

Be patient. No one can predict when a bear market will end, but history has shown that turnarounds can happen quickly and unexpectedly. So be patient. The most successful investors have the courage to stay the course and take advantage of opportunities while others are "bailing out" of the financial markets.

We may still have some rough roads ahead of us. But if you can check off every item on this list, you may be able to smooth out some of the bumps you'll encounter on your journey toward achieving your long-term goals.

Hold on to what you've got

Keeping loyal customers during a downturn

By J. Roy MILLER
State Director, New Mexico Small Business Development Centers

Every business knows it costs more to acquire new customers than to retain existing ones. Yet many businesses spend lots of money on elaborate advertising campaigns while their profitable, longtime customers walk out the door to do business elsewhere. In this climate of economic uncertainty, it's more important than ever for business owners to hold on to the customers who helped them build their business in the first place

Don't give them a reason to stray. Make customer service a priority by setting the example for your employees, who learn by seeing and doing what you do. Make suggestions and invite workers to come up with their own suggestions for how customers could be better served. Good customer service starts with the boss.

Reward loyalty. Every customer wants to know that his or her business is appreciated, especially when money doesn't go as far as it did even a year ago. Customers often go elsewhere simply because they feel ignored. Let your customers know you appreciate their business by saying thanks through words, letters and small rewards.

Act on complaints. For every customer who complains, another 26 have similar problems they haven't resolved, according to the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs. Think of complaints as market research you didn't have to pay for, and then respond by fixing the problem.

Provide incentives. Promotional campaigns that provide an incentive to existing customers for doing business with your company in the future can generate additional business you would otherwise have missed out on. A discount, gift or chance to win additional services will often cost you little at wholesale but can spur much more in revenue.

Tell customers about incentives or promotions. A promotion can backfire if customers can't take advantage of it. Customers who pay full price and later learn that they qualified for a substantial discount no one told them about might be angry enough to start shopping elsewhere. Be sure that promotional offers are communicated to customers

Stand behind your product or service. Guarantees, whether written or oral, provide trust, and customers come back to businesses they can trust. Many customers are willing to pay more just knowing they have recourse if the product or workmanship should fail.

Make things simple. Make it easier to buy from you than from your competitor by offering convenience and simplicity. Something as simple as including a selfaddressed envelope when documents must be returned tells your customers you care about making their lives less complicated.

Treat your best customers best. For most companies, the top-20 percent of customers contribute 80 percent of sales. Large companies responded to this long ago by introducing loyalty cards that rewarded their best customers with discounts. American Airlines began its frequent-flier program in 1981, and Starbucks is using a similar model in 2008. If you take care of the top 20 percent of your customers, 80 percent of your revenue should be secure.

Listen. Be aware of the needs of your customers even if they aren't expressed. Take time to watch their habits as well as listen to their concerns. This type of research often uncovers hidden opportunities that allow you to meet more of your customers' needs. Actively look for opportunities to provide more value to your customers, whether it's in the form of a more pleasant experience, greater cleanliness or friendlier service.

Mariachi Spectacular Concert to entertain audiences

Conference workshops teach the value of traditional Mariachi music, performance

By MARVIN TESSNEER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The 15th annual International Mariachi Concert – Saturday, Nov. 8, at the Pan American Center – showcases mariachi music popularity with famous performing groups and a workshop, says concert director Phyllis Franzov.

and a workshop, says concert director Phyllis Franzoy.

The performers will be led by Grammy Award-winner Pedro Fernandez, who became famous as a child when he sang the theme song for the movie "La Niña de La Mochila Azul" about a boy who falls in love with a girl who carries a blue school backpack. Since then, he has won gold and platinum recording awards and has appeared in many Mexican films and television novellas, or soap operas.

A popular Latin American singer, Fernandez has recorded more than 30 albums. His album "Para lo Que Entonces" has sold more than 500 million copies, and he topped the Billboard charts with "Si te Vas." His other successful recordings include, "Me Forma de Sentir," "Si No Dejan" and

"Amaneci en Tus Brazos."

Fernandez was born Jose Martin Cuevas Cabos. He took his performing name by combining the names of two singers he admired, Pedro Infante and Vicente Fernandez. He credits Fernandez for starting his career by introducing him as a singer in stage performances.

"There is significance in Pedro Fernandez headlining this milestone celebration because he performed at the fifth and 10th anniversary Spectacular Concert performances," Franzoy said. "Recognized worldwide for his entertaining shows, we are honored that he will return for the 15th anniversary performance."

The conference will include a workshop to promote mariachi music and its influence on Hispanic culture in the Southwest. The workshop is expected to attract 750 students from Las Cruces, the nation and Mexico, coordinator Mack Ruiz said.

Ruiz will present the workshops from Thursday, Nov. 6 through 9, at New Mexico State University's Corbett Center. The workshops will offer instructions in violin, trumpet, guitar, guitarron or deep-bellied guitar, vihuela or small guitar and singing.

"As in previous years, the vision and mission of the conference remains the same, and that is to offer an event that celebrates and embraces diversity through the preservation and teachings of our rich, artistic Southwestern and Mexican cultures," Ruiz said in a telephone interview from Orlando, Fla. "This four-day program is designed for mariachi students of all ages and will deliver instruction at the basic, proficient and advanced levels called for in national standards for arts-music education."

Ruiz has been teaching at the workshop for 15 years at every conference that was held here. He plays the violin and sings with Mariachi Cobre of Walt Disney World in Orlando.

"From my very first year, I started focusing on mariachi music and education," Ruiz said. "I wanted to promote mariachi music and history, to celebrate mariachi as part of the Southwestern culture."

"Preserving the art forms of mariachi music and folkloric dance is the primary mission of the International Mariachi Conference," Franzoy said. "Through educational workshops in music and dance for our youths, these cultural art forms will be preserved through the Southwest. Cultural arts performance bring quality of life to our community and strengthen the cultural ties to our Southwestern heritage."

The concert also will bring back Mariachi Cobre, who has been entertaining audiences since 1982. The group was organized by Randy and Steve Carrillo, along with friend Mack Ruiz.

The group has performed with popular vocalists such as Lola Beltran, Linda Ronstadt, Pepe Aguilar, Pedro Fernandez, Ana Gabriel and Graciela Beltran and had recorded with the Boston Pops Orchestra.

This year's concert will present a new look, Mariachi Reyna de Los Angeles, an all-female mariachi group. Lola Beltran, La Rein de la Musical Ranchera, helped them start their career.

Recently, Mariachi Reyna was featured in a documentary film, "Companeras," recognizing the women for giving voice to Latinas. Singer Vikki Carr called it, "a beautiful sensitive film about mariachi music and the dedicated Latinas who are defying generations of tradition by playing it with such fierce passion and talent."

They also will perform from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 8, and Sunday, Nov. 9, at Young Park.

Since Alvaro Obregon's administration, 1940-1924, Mexican presidents have used mariachi music at political events, and Lazaro Cardinas, who was president from 1934 to 1940, started subsidizing mariachi groups, according to Latino Encyclopedia.

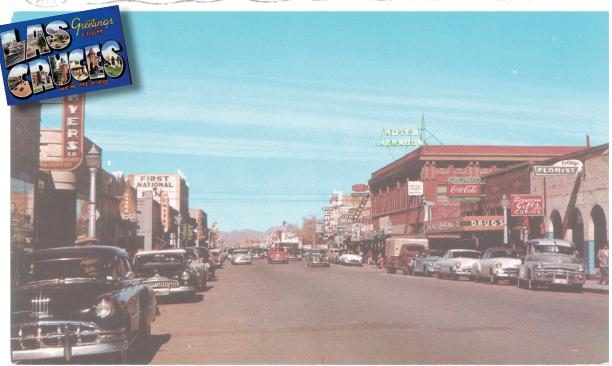

The mariachi beginnings were rural. One of the most important groups was Mariachi Vargas de Tecalitlan that was founded in 1898 by Gaspar Vargas in Tecalitlan, Jalisco. In the 1930s, it was taken over by his son, Silvestre Vargas, who moved to Mexico City in 1934 and is credited with developing mariachi music as it is known today, according to the encyclopedia.

The first mariachi performers wore rural, unmatched clothes. But as the music caught on and moved into urban areas they evolved into a more elegant uniform, the traje de charros, or horsemen costumes, the tight-fitting and ornamental trousers, short jacket, embroidered belts, boots, wide bow tie and sombrero, according to the encyclopedia.

Tickets range from $30 to $85 and information for the concert is available at www.ticketmaster.com or by calling 915-544-8444, 532-6060 or 646-1420. For more information regarding the conference, call 525-1735 or visit the LCIMC website at www.lascrucesmariachi.org.

Nancy Begin: Looking at the world in a different way

Teacher, artist is new to the Southwest

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Each and every still life that Nancy Begin does, she approaches with a new eye, constantly searching for a new angle.

She lives and creates by the motto of Marcel Provst, "The real voyage of discovery consists not in seeking new landscapes, but in having new eyes." Since moving to the Southwest from the East Coast

Since moving to the Southwest from the East Coast just a little over a year ago, Begin has been actively searching for new galleries to show her work in. Now, she will open during the Downtown Ramble on Friday, Nov. 7, at the Main Street Gallery.

"The work I have in the gallery is much more fantasy on a very personal level," Begin says. She will also display her monster boxes, which are made of wood and resemble a series of characters, such as garden monsters, rock star monsters and dancers, among others.

Begin started her monster boxes when she was building furniture. As she built, she used the scrap pieces of wood she had left to "play" and create the boxes with teeth and small features, which became popular and one of her signature products.

However, painting is her true passion and has been since she received her BFA from Syracuse University. Since then, she has studied under Charles Reid and during summers at Bennington College in Vermont.

"There was never a doubt," Begin says.
"I never had to decide what to be."

Begin works in oil paints and watercolor, painting still life and working on plein aire paintings of differing scenes. She also fluctuates between fantasy work and that made from observation.

"Lately I have begun to explore non-representative work, which doesn't have recognizable subject matter," Begin says.

Begin began teaching art at a private high school in New Hampshire and taught there for 13 years until she moved to Philadelphia and began teaching adult art classes at art centers and in her home.

After moving to New Mexico, she began teaching private and group lessons in water-color.

"The people here have been just wonderful and really receptive," Begin says. "Teaching keeps me on my toes, with having to do planning, research and testing."

Begin says she presents her students with problems in order to teach concepts, saying, "I love to present concepts to my students to have them think about what it is they want to paint. I ask them why they are drawn to that and how they will portray an object in their painting."

Begin uses wood scraps from her furniture projects to construct the wood boxes.

Begin likes to have her students study the work of other artists and use the techniques they learn to paint a still life in the style of the artist.

"The end result is a painting that has never been seen before. There may be a million paintings of a teapot, but you've never seen one quite like that before," Begin says.

When Begin sets up to paint, she tries to see the scene in a new way, taking in the shapes and how they relate to each other

"I try to see still life in a different way, in a new perspective, with different colors and a different relationship between the objects," Begin says. "It doesn't matter if it's the first or the 300th still life that I've done, I Begin paints in a series, often doing four or five paintings in a row that have the same theme, such as a series she did while at Bennington College depicting women's issues. She says the five paintings she did for that series just flowed out of her.

"Painting in a series lets me look at what I feel about a particular subject; painting a number of them lets me get all the feelings out onto the canyas." Begin says.

the canvas," Begin says.

"I like to see the painting finished in my head before I start," Begin says. "That way I have a whole idea there in my head to go off of."

She is a member of the New Mexico Watercolor Society, whose paintings will be on display at the Rio Grande Theatre, as well as the Las Cruces Artist's Association, and will show at Cottonwood Gallery this month as part of the LCAA show. Begin will participate in the Downtown Ramble, held the first Friday of every month, from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 7, on the Downtown Mall.

CULTURAL CORNERSTONES:

at the LAS (RUCES Museums

The Branigan Cultural Center – the heart of the city's museums

What do regional artists, ballet folklorico, tattoos, local history, Abraham Lincoln, King Tut and Nazi book burnings have in common? The Branigan Cultural Center on the Downtown Mall, of course!

One of the most historic buildings in Las Cruces began life as a place to enjoy the written word and now it is home to art and culture from our area and beyond. Built during the Great Depression in 1935 with a donation from the Thomas Branigan family, the Branigan Cultural Center served as a library from 1935 to 1979 and then became our city's first museum in

The building's early days as a library are reflected in the windows on the east side, which are decorated with images of nursery rhyme characters. Otherwise, you would never suspect that the Pueblo Revival-style building with an outstand-ing Tom Lea mural in the entry was ever anything other than a showcase for a wide range of exhibits.

The Branigan Cultural Center is home to not only exhibits, but to numerous special events such as the annual Day of Dance in April, Cultural Connections fairs and Jose Tena's Dia de los Muertos altar. The staff at the BCC provides programs such as traditional crafts classes, cemetery tours and special talks related to exhibits.

When the BCC hosted the Tutankamen exhibit two years ago, many visitors admitted it was their first time to enter the building. Others reminisced that it was their first time back since it was a library. With the increasing number of high-quality exhibits on display, many of those first-time visitors have become regulars and even volunteer docents.

Exhibits opening in November are as different from each other as can be. "INK: Tattoos as Personal Expression," which opens Friday, Nov. 14, was curated by the staff and will explore tattoos, equipment and the culture from around the world and across time. Museum Manager Garland Courts explained that the exhibit is part of their goal of "attracting a new, younger audience that doesn't usually come to the museum." He added, "You may not ever go into a tattoo parlor, but you can see one. You can experience it without really (getting a tattoo)."

The exhibit will include tools from those used by the early Polynesians to present-day pneumatic tools. "It is both an ancient art and modern. Every culture has tattoos," Courts explained.

ArtForms, the Artist's Association of New Mexico, will hold their meeting at the BCC at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 13, with guest speaker and tattoo artist Alex Trujillo. The meeting is open to the public and provides the opportunity for an early look at the exhibit and to hear from a local tattoo artist.

Opening during the Downtown Ramble from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 7, is "Fotos de Los Charros Magnificos!" This photo essay by David Shaw explores the world of the Mexican Charreada, or horse rodeo. Shaw stumbled upon a caravan of horse trailers and, curious, followed them. He was led to the world of the charreada and spent the next several years creating beautiful black and white photographs.

Many local artists and arts organizations use the BCC to showcase their work. Upcoming exhibits include the ArtForms annual For the Love of Art Month Member Exhibit and the Las Colcheras Quilt Guild show "Starry, Starry Night" in February; a show of the works of Laurel Weathersbee, Lynn Unangst and Judy Licht; the Black Range Artists Spring Membership show in March; the Artamants Annual Membership Exhibit; the Southern Chapter of the New Mexico Watercolor Society in April; the Doña Ana Camera Club Membership Show; and the New Mexico State University Bachelor of Fine Arts exhibit in May. And that's barely the first half of the year!

There are a number of traveling exhibits on the BCC calendar of events as well. Opening May 20, and running until July 18, 2009, is "Fighting the Fires of Hate." This exhibit on the topic of Nazi book burning will be on loan from the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum. Another traveling exhibit is "Abraham Lincoln: Self Made in America," loaned from the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum in recognition of the bicentennial of Lincoln's birth. Only 40 institutions nationwide will host this exhibit that documents the journey taken by Lincoln from frontier obscurity to the presidency. The exhibit will be supplemented with a locally created piece on New Mexico and the Civil War.

One gallery at the BCC is set aside for a locally curated permanent exhibit, "Las Cruces: Crossroads of History." Both compact and comprehensive, the exhibit covers 400 years of history of the Mesilla Valley with artifacts, documents, photographs and narrative. An online version of the exhibit contains additional narrative and educational materials for teachers and parents. There are also materials that can be checked out by teachers for use in the classroom.

Sometimes you have to get outside to really explore local history. A popular series of tours hosted by the BCC is the Visit our Ancestors Cemetery Tours. The last one for this year is Saturday, Nov. 8, at Slumbering Mountain Cemetery in Organ. It begins at 10 a.m. at the cemetery and is free. Bring water and wear sturdy walking shoes and be prepared for uneven terrain. Tours will begin again next year in March and continue every other month through November.

Other programs include "In the Nick of Time" drop-in crafts events from 1 to 4 p.m. Dec. 19, and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Dec. 20. The fee is $5 per project, including painted tin ornaments, tissue paper flowers or papel picado (cut paper). A new program is the spring break day camps in March. In June and July, the popular Traditional Crafts of New Mexico summer workshops return with corn husk crafts, pine needle baskets, Ojos de Dios, mandalas, retablos, gourd carving and cholcha embroidery.

The BCC offers an amazing variety of exhibits and programming with a small, dedicated staff. Courts is supported by Assistant Manager Rebecca Slaughter, Education Curator Mary Kay Shannon and Administrative Assistant Monica Perry, along with museum system staff.

"It's an old building, but there's nothing

ODE DOWNTOWN RAMBLE

The next Downtown Ramble will be from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 7. The ramble is the monthly artwalk hosted by the art galleries and other venues in the vicinity of the Las Cruces Downtown Mall the first Friday of every month. During this time, refreshments are served and special events, such as the opening of an art show with reception for the artists, will occur. The special events will generally be accompanied by a separate announcement describing the details of that event.

An updated map that shows the location of the galleries along with contact information is available at most of the galleries as well as from M. Phillip's Fine Art Gallery website at http://mphillipsgallery.com/. Once at the website, follow the link to "Events and Art

9 LITERARY OPEN MIC NIGHT AT THE RIO GRANDE THEATRE

Theater Manager David Edwards recently announced the addition of "Literary Open Mic" nights beginning from 5:30 to 7 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 7. The renovated, two-story adobe Rio Grande Theatre is located at 211 N. Downtown Mall. Authors should prepare a five- to six-minute presentation (generally three pages of poetry, prose or a performance piece). A sound system will be provided. Host for the event is poet and editor Wayne Crawford. First Fridays were selected for the Literary Open Mic Nights to coincide with the monthly Downtown Ramble in which many Downtown and near Downtown art galleries remain open from 5 to 7 p.m. Although no intermission is planned, authors are encouraged to ramble before the reading as well as to come and go as needed.

Call Wayne Crawford at 541-8073 or email wayne1@zianet.com for more information.

EIGHT DAYS A WEEK-Saturday

SLUMBERING MOUNTAIN CEMETARY TOURS

"Visit Our Ancestors" series of cemetery tours organized by Branigan Cultural Center will meet at the Slumbering Mountain Cemetery in Organ at 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 8. This is the final tour in the 2008 series. Slumbering Mountain Cemetery is on the north side of the community and at the east end of town. From Las Cruces, take U.S. Highway 70 east towards White Sands. Turn left (north) on First Street, then right (east) on Furnace Street and left (north) on Heavenly Lane, a dirt road.

The cemetery is on a hillside that has returned to natural vegetation of mesquites, cacti and brush. There are no established walking paths. The tombstones and markers, some new, many faded and worn, are scattered across almost three acres. Sturdy walking shoes are encouraged. It is also recommended that participants be prepared for two hours of outdoor activity. Use plenty of sunscreen, wear long sleeve shirts and hats. The tour will wander through the cemetery over uneven terrain and visitors should be aware of possible trip hazards. Bottled water will be available. The program is free and open to the public. No registration is required.

The 2009 series of "Visit Our Ancestors" will include a return to the San Jose Cemetery in Las Cruces and a visit to Missionary Ridge Cemetery in Mesquite. The full schedule for the 2009 is not finalized. Suggestions are welcome. Contact Mary Kay Shannon at the Branigan Cultural Center at 541-2219 or mkshannon@lascruces.org for more information.

MESILLA VALLEY CHORALE PRACTICE

The Mesilla Valley Chorale, directed by Nancy Ritchey, rehearses from 7 to 9 p.m. every Monday in preparation for their Dec. 14 concert at the Rio Grande Theatre. The group has been entertaining Las Cruces since 1972. Known for its versatility, this fast-growing community chorale welcomes experienced singers. The group features four-part music from classical to pop. Rehearsals are held at Good Samaritan Society Las Cruces Village Social Center, 3011 Buena Vida Circle. Call 647-2560 for more information.

MUSICIAN JACK WILLIAMS TO HOST WORKSHOP

Musician Jack Williams will host a workshop at 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 9, at 5138 Silver King Road. Reservations are required and the workshop is $30. Light refreshments and beverages will be served.

Williams' creatively holistic approach to music is intended to help people at all levels of musical skill and understanding. This includes those who have played music all their lives, but who've come up against roadblocks to advancement - which happens even to professional musicians. It also includes beginning musicians and those who've attained a modest level of skill. It is intended to help people who haven't yet begun making music to get a sense of what playing and writing it are really all about and to help them find their own sense of musical direction.

The aim of the workshop is to help participants make music for their own satisfaction and for that of their family, friends, community and perhaps the wider music community. Emphasis will be on the intrinsic worth of the song, the melody, the lyrics and "musicality" rather than on any commercial potential the music might possess.

Visit www.jackwilliamsmusic.com for more information. Call 522-5096 to make a reservation for the workshop.

OASIS PROGRAM CONTINUES FILM SERIES

The Organization of Aggie Students Inspiring Sustainability (OASIS) will show "Ripe for Change" and "Ladies of the Land" at 6 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 13, in Science Hall Building Room 102, on the New Mexico State University campus. "Ripe for Change" examines the host of thorny questions: What is the trade off between the ability to produce large quantities of food versus the health of workers, consumers and the plant? What are the hidden costs of "inexpensive" food? How do we create sustainable-agriculture practices?

"Ladies of the Land" follows new women farmers in Pennsylvania and Minnesota, exploring the ways in which they are challenging the traditional agricultural model, the difficulties they face and the reasons why they love the land.

The series of movies is called "Films that Make You Go 'Hmm," and will focus on serious environmental issues, such as dwindling oil supplies, global warming and the economy in order to promote sustainability. Discussion after every film seeks different perspectives and allows viewers to express their opinions. Admission to the movies is free, and so is popcorn as long as viewers bring their own bowl. Contact oasis@nmsu.edu for more information.

FARM AND RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM PRESENTS A CHAUTAUQUA

Randy Milligan of Carlsbad will perform as Judge Roy Bean in a special presentation "Judge Roy Bean: The Law West of the Pecos," co-sponsored by the New Mexico Humanities Council at 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 13. Milligan, an instructor at NMSU-Carlsbad, has portrayed everyone from Mark Twain to Colonel Mustard in plays and chautauguas, as well as both Theodore Roosevelt and Franklin Roosevelt. Bean was a man who took advantage of being in the right place at the right time and had a unique way of dispensing justice. Join the museum as Milligan brings this fascinating character to life. Admission is free. Call 522-4100 for more information.

ASNMSU CULTURAL SERIES PRESENTS THE OTERO DANCE COMPANY

As part of the New Mexico State University Cultural Series presented by the Associated Students of NMSU, the Otero Dance Company will perform at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 13, at the Rio Grande Theatre. A vibrant cast of international artists will inspire a celebration of the modern interpretations of the world's most popular Latin dances in Otero Dance Company's rhythm and passion. Be seduced by the ecstasy of the tango, the vibrant sensuality of the salsa and the wild intensity of the gaucho. Experience a timeless world of music, song, color, rhythm and passion.

Tickets are on sale at the Pan Am Center Box Office, all Ticketmaster Outlets and online at www. ticketmaster.com, and - if they are not sold-out in advance - they are also available at the door the night of the show. Season tickets are $72; general admission tickets are $12.50; and NMSU faculty and staff, senior citizens, students and children are $10. Contact the Pan Am Box Office at 646-1420 or visit www.gloriatango.com for more information.

® READING ART BOOK CLUB

The Reading Art Book Club will hold its next monthly meeting at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 12, at the Las Cruces Museum of Art. In keeping with the theme of the Rodin exhibition, the selection for November is "Lydia Cassatt: Reading the Morning Paper" by Harriet Scott Chessman.

This historical novel portrays the vibrant art scene of late 19th century Paris and the relationship between American impressionist Mary Cassatt, her sister Lydia and several impressionist painters. This book is available at the Branigan Library, through inter-library loan or new and used online.

Time permitting, the book club will have the opportunity to view the DVD "Great Women Artists: Mary Cassatt."

The Reading Art Book Club is dedicated to exploring the connections between art and literature by reading and discussing books. As much as possible, books selected will relate, echo or enhance the museum's varied exhibitions. The club meets the second Wednesday of every month. New members are always welcome.

Call 541-2322 for more information.

© BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

"La Charreada: Fotos de ¡Los Charros Magnificos!" will open with an artist's reception Friday, Nov. 7, at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St. Photographer David Shaw happened on a procession of pick-up trucks and horse trailers traveling down a dusty road in Encinitas, Calif., and on impulse followed them. This led to Shaw's discovery of the world of La Charreada, the Mexican horse rodeo. An exhibit of silver gelatin prints celebrating the people, Los Charros, and the event, La Charreada, is the culmination of three years of travel into this centuries-old competition and exhibition of horsemanship. "La Charreada: Fotos de ¡Los Charros Magnificos!" remains on display through Dec. 27.

Supplementing the photography will be information panels providing the history of La Charreada and describing the various events and feats. The panels will be presented in both English and Spanish.

Shaw has been involved in photography for more than 40 years. Inspired by Edward Weston's "Daybooks," he began working in black and white using a 4-by-5 view camera. For the Charreada series, Shaw used a twin lens Mamiya camera. Now settled in Las Cruces, he has established Estudio Azul and continues exploring new subjects with his camera.

The Branigan Cultural Center is located at the north end of the downtown mall in Las Cruces. The exhibit and reception is free and open to the public. Galleries are open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. Call 541-2154 or visit http://museums.las-cruces.org for more information.

Nancy Begin will be the featured guest artist during November and December. She is exhibiting her fantasy works which depict her pleasingly peculiar watercolor world and her equally curious "Monster Boxes" which can only be described as irresistibly grotesque pets ... the kind you want to take home. The adorably quirky hand-painted and hand-carved characters are liable to charm and compel one into an adoption frenzy.

The Main Street Gallery continues to exhibit some of Las Cruces' finest artists including the etchings and pastels of Winfrey Hearst, the impressionisms of Annetta Hoover, Judy Licht's brilliant dyes on silk, Daphne Wirthlin's whimsical fantasy scenes, Lois Wilson's fused and dichroic glasswork, Lynn Unangst's Spirit Minders, Margaret Berrier's detailed rock-art jewelry, Joanna Bradley's flamboyant gourd artworks and the authenticated limited edition prints of Robert Highsmith's superb watercolors.

The gallery is located at 311 N. Downtown Mall and the hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturday. Be sure to attend the Main Street Downtown Ramble from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 7. Call 647-0508 for more information.

© GLENN CUTTER JEWELERS AND GALLERY

Amy Rankin, a graduate of New Mexico State University, and Potter Russell Mott team up for an art show at Glenn Cutter Jewelers and Gallery which will run through Nov. 21.

Rankin received her BA and MFA from the art department at NMSU in 1998. While working toward her MFA in painting and drawing, she developed a strong interest in printmaking. Since completing her degree, she has focused on all three disciplines of painting, drawing and printmaking. Currently she teaches all three areas at the University of New Mexico Taos Branch, where she lives. The show will contain some new samples of her printmaking as well as florals, limited edition copperplate etchings of women with snakes and other charcoal still life works and oil paintings.

Mott came to ceramics late in his life. He woke up one day and decided he wanted to be a potter. He decided to learn to throw pottery first and let the other techniques in pottery come to him later. He works in his studio every day and he finds that Raku is his first love, which includes throwing, trimming, drying, glazing, firing and torching. Mott has learned from and apprenticed with Steve Hemingway, Claude W. Smith III and Alex Williams early in his career.

O DOÑA ANA COUNTY GOVERNMENT CENTER

More than 100 pieces of original student artwork from the Las Cruces and Gadsden public schools have been installed in the first-floor corridors of the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd. The exhibit includes paintings, etchings, drawings and fabric designs. The artists range from elementary students to high school students.

The student art shows have been a rotating fixture for Doña Ana County's main lobby since 2000, with hundreds of works by local student artists displayed for the public during that time.

The student art exhibit complements the permanent art collection within the Doña Ana County Government Center, which includes a series of historical photographs in the upstairs rotunda, as well as a spectacular photograph of the Organ Mountains donated in 2007 by Las Cruces artist R. Frederick Silva. The piece, titled "Fall Splendor," hangs on a second floor east wall, adjacent to the main entrance to the administrative offices of the Doña Ana County Board of Commissioners and the county manager.

The public is invited to view the student art show, Caballo de Las Cruces, "Fall Splendor" and "Heart of the Problem" at any time during normal county business hours.

"Recycled," the Las Cruces Art Association's 2008 Theme Show, will run through Tuesday, Dec. 2, at the Southwest Environmental Center's Cottonwood Gallery, 275 N. Downtown Mall. The gallery will host an artist's reception as part of the Downtown Ramble from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 7.

For "Recycled," each of the 25 artists has taken work that was going to be thrown away and remade it, or used objects that were seemingly useless or were found somewhere, and put pieces

© PRESTON CONTEMPORARY ART CENTER

The Preston Contemporary Art Center in Mesilla will introduce the work of seven artists of various media in their 2008 Fall Exhibition through Sunday, Dec. 21. Artists featured include Marika Bordes, wood sculpture; Daniel Boylan, painting; Anki King, painting and sculpture; Shelley Lake, photography; Gregory Litinsky, watercolor painting; Frank Morbillo, sculpture; and Sue Simon, painting.

PCAC Director Paul Schranz says the exhibition provides an interesting mix of figurative works, both painting and sculpture, in strong, expressive and abstract presentations. Also on exhibit are gorgeous panoramic photography and dynamic sculptures of steel, bronze and glass. Works by three artists with roots in the Ukraine, Norway and Haiti maintain the intent to show pieces with an international flavor. Additionally, works by two artists in the 2008 Fall Exhibition are included in the settings of feature films scheduled for release this winter.

The Preston Contemporary Art Center is located at 1755 Avenida de Mercado. Hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, 1 to 7 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Visit www.prestoncontemporaryart.com or call 523-8713 for more

'Break an Egg' offers unique spread of breakfast options

Movie-themed restaurant new to Las Cruces

Hours: 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily

Reservations available

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Old movies like "Casablanca" and "Gone with the Wind" play on the televisions, while an old-fashioned ticket box office greets patrons with the daily specials. Movie posters hang on the walls and the wait staff wear the uniform of a theater usher. This is all inside Break an Egg restaurant, one of the newest restaurants in Las Cruces.

Owner Janice Williams has a background in theater, but worked in the construction purchasing and estimating business for 25 years before venturing into the restaurant business with Break an Egg.

"The name was just something that came to me, and because of it, it blossomed into a movie-themed twist on a restaurant," Williams says. "I have always enjoyed film, theater and movies.

Williams says the key to making Break an Egg a success has been her solid business plan, and says the restaurant was planned for a year before actually opening. She studied traffic flow in different locations and demographics in the Las Cruces area.

"You have to appeal to what the people want and that takes a lot of homework," William says.

Another way Williams was able to offer the quality service was by waiting to advertise for three months. She says this gave her and her staff time to ensure the quality of the food, knowledge of the servers and a solid menu.

"Some restaurants have a problem with taking on too much, too soon," Williams said. "We want steady growth, not immediate growth."

Along with that growth, Break an Egg has become a premier place to have breakfast in Las Cruces. They feature a unique menu that is primarily American with Midwestern flavors. The recipes they feature for breakfast are traditional egg dishes with a twist.

In December, they will expand their menu to include a few new dishes they have developed, including the Bundled Eggs, scrambled eggs wrapped in a thin slice of ham and served over a bed of hash browns with a creamy white wine and chives sauce. Another new item will be the Eggs Rellenos, a chile pepper stuffed with scrambled eggs, crumbled sausage and onion, smothered with jack > cheese and covered with a salsa hollandaise sauce, served with skillet potatoes.

For lunch, the restaurant makes its own burgers and thick, deli-style sandwiches on high-quality breads. Some of the sandwiches include the French Dip, Meatball Sub, Rueben and Corned Beef, among others.

They also feature the New Mexico Burger with sautéed onions, green chile, melted cheddar cheese, lettuce and tomato on a Kaiser roll.

Williams says she likes to push her cooks to come up with new and unique dishes in a mock "Iron Chef" battle. She gives them an ingredient and allows them to use their imagination to create new dishes.

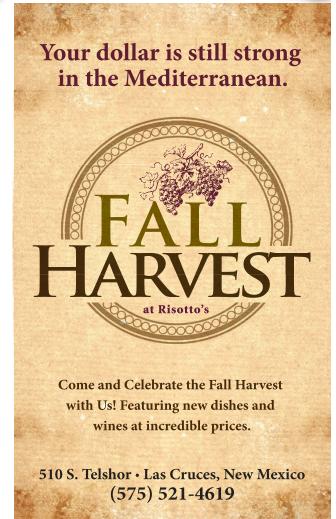

"I like to push their creativity," Williams says. "I tell them, 'Here's what you're going to do, now make it."

Break an Egg is available for meetings and private lunches in their front dining room, as well as business meetings and private parties.

"We feel that once people come in here and experience the atmosphere and taste the food, they will come back," Williams says. "We want to remain a unique and outstanding dining experience. That is really our goal.

Thayer begins role as new director of NMSU art gallery

Leader brings experience, new ideas to the role

Preston Thayer is an insightful, reflective man who doesn't want much attention on him, but when it comes to art, he's a specialist at putting others in the limelight.

"Our primary goal is to make the artist's artwork look good. Careful, thoughtful exhibition design allows us to produce a gallery comparable to other museums in the country," Thayer said of the University Art Gallery at New Mexico State University.

In an age when imagery bombards us and computer-generated imaging, at times, alters reality, Thayer wants to give people a rewarding experience when they see an art piece to appreciate its value and beauty. This is what art galleries can provide and will continue to enhance at the university gallery, Thayer said.

Hired in October, Thayer has taken some time to familiarize himself with the campus, gallery and art department's faculty and staff. He also started a committee consisting of representatives from each of the campus collections such as the Zuhl Fossil and Mineral Collection and the University Museum. This committee will coordinate campus gallery events and work on increasing community awareness of the various collections on campus. He gives as an example, the upcoming gallery opening featuring 28 original Andy Warhol photographs, which will be displayed at the NMSU gallery from Friday, Nov. 14, through Dec. 23.

One of his goals is to find innovative ways for the gallery to promote itself on campus and in the Las Cruces community, as well as regionally and nationally. One outlet involves filming short video clips of the gallery artwork and then posting them to the university's YouTube channel.

He is also looking at a number of different fundraising projects for the gallery and hopes to be included in the planning of the new Arts Complex.

"I'm excited to work with the art department. It's a young faculty and everyone is very energetic. They are all very active professionally and have made me feel very welcome," Thayer said. He added he is also eagerly anticipating the student and faculty exhibitions scheduled for the spring 2009 semester.

Originally from Ann Arbor, Mich., he attended various schools nationwide and holds a doctorate in history of art from the University of Pennsylvania. Prior to coming to NMSU, he worked as a gallery director in Virginia.

Thayer spends his leisure time cooking, reading, traveling and appreciating art whenever he can

Creative Media Institute establishes endowed scholarship

Laurance estate donates $50,000

The Creative Media Institute in the College of Arts and Sciences at New Mexico State University announces the receipt of a $50,000 donation from the estate of Michael Laurance to create the Michael Laurance Memorial Endowed Scholarship.

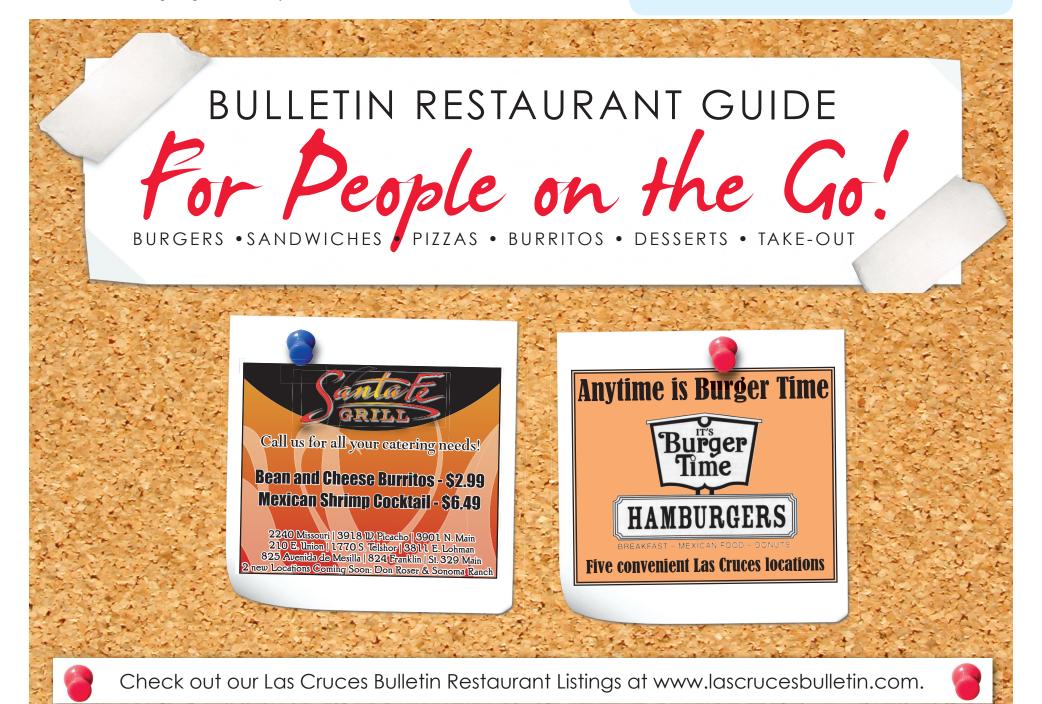

Laurance was an active member of both the Las Cruces and NMSU communities, especially in the film and media world. His tireless efforts in both the Creative Media Institute and the Creative Media Technologies program at Doña Ana Community College were recognized throughout the state. His passion for photography and cinematography led him to a life of adventure and travel seldom seen these days.

The scholarship will fund the "capstone" film production for an outstanding senior majoring in the Creative Media Institute. The funds will provide the budget to write, direct and produce the student's short film. This gift generously provides an opportunity for creative and hardworking young filmmakers to implement their talent and learn valuable production skills.

NMSU, the College of Arts and Sciences and the CMI program expressed gratitude to Sid Goddard for all of his diligence and stewardship over the past months. His hard work has helped ensure the creation of this scholarship. A reception honoring Laurance and his gift to the university will be held in the near future.

For more information about the CMI program, contact Jonathan Benson at 646-5671. To make a donation to the Michael Laurance Memorial Scholarship, contact Scott Anderson at 646-2612 or the NMSU Foundation at 646-1613.

'Showtune Showcase' to benefit the March of Dimes

Mazdra, other area performers to sing Broadway tunes

Cesár E. Chávez Elementary School Speech Language pathologist Janet Mazdra will headline a review of some of Broadway's best shows in "Showtune Showcase" at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Nov. 7 and 8, and again at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 9, at the Las Cruces Community Theatre, 313 N. Downtown Mall.

The show is a fundraiser for the Southern New Mexico March of Dimes.

Tickets are $10 and will be available at the door. A light meal will be served at intermission and 100 percent of the proceeds will benefit the March of Dimes

In addition to Mazdra, performers will include Alma d'arte Charter High School theatre teacher Megan McQueen, Las Cruces artist/actor/playwright Bob Diven, actor and Rio Grande Theatre Manager David Edwards and Las Cruces actor/performers Josh Shakra and Kat Hicks. Musical accompaniment will be provided by Karen Warren on keyboard and Tom Warren on guitar.

The show will feature songs from Broadway shows including "Jekyll and Hyde," "Hairspray," "Little Shop of Horrors," "Crazy for You" and many others."

Mazdra is among 15 Las Cruces women helping Southern New Mexico March of Dimes raise funds during the second annual "High Heels for High Hopes"

The event culminates with a gala dinner and silent auction Thursday, Nov. 20, at Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces, 705 S. Telshor Blvd. A reception and silent auction begin at 5:30 p.m. A fashion show (including Mazdra) is at 6:30 p.m. Dinner and the evening's program begin at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $60 each. Tables are $600 (10 people).

Platform sponsorships are $1,000.

Mazdra and the other 14 women each hope to raise $4,000 – a total of $60,000 – "to support research, education and community service programs of the March of Dimes, an organization whose mission focuses on preventing birth defects, premature birth and infant death," according to www.highheelsforhighhopes.com.

Six Las Cruces salons are sponsoring the women in the campaign. Mazdra is sponsored by Crawford

'Frozen River' explores border people smuggling

Characters find themselves on thin ice

M REVIEW

GRADE

"Frozen River" opens for a one-week run at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla on Friday, Nov 7. It runs for 95 minutes and is rated R for language.

REVIEW BY JEFF BERG

Still another great movie based on true incidents, "Frozen River" offers an unsettling look into people smuggling, something that most of us in these parts are used to hearing about and, at times, even viewing. However, the illegal border crossings in this film take place in the northern United States, specifically in far northern New York State, on the edge of the Mohawk Indian Nation.

At $600 a head, the initial attitude of Ray about smuggling quickly changes when her now missing, gambling-addicted husband drains her finances. Worst of all, the down payment on her new manufactured home is about to go the way of Lehman Brothers if she doesn't come up with some quick cash. Ray teams up with Lila who is Mohawk, after nabbing her while she is casually trying to steal the now missing hubby's car. "The keys were in it" Lila shrugs nonchalantly when caught red-handed in the driver's seat by Ray.

An argument leads to the business transaction, and the dower Lila assures Ray that cops or ICE won't harass her, since "she is white." All goes well for a while until an error in judgment by Ray puts everything in a much different perspective.

In a sidebar story, Ray's two young sons are left to fend for themselves as Ray works her day job as an > assistant manager of a dollar store, while spending the rest of her time driving across the frozen river of the title, smuggling a flurry of people of all nationalities into the United States from Canada.

This allows her elder son to partake in some skullduggery of his own, creating a successful (much to his surprise) credit card scam in order to raise cash to buy his younger brother a desired Christ-

Lila is also on the fringes of poverty. Living in an unheated travel trailer, her only source of income comes from the smuggling business, in which she has teamed up with several other Mohawk people on both sides of the border.

A third party, Finnerty, is a state trooper, who has a rather uneasy affection for Ray and her kids. It might with her kids (an interesting and touching scene takes place when he "solves" her son's credit card scam), or just because he understands the dynamics of poverty, for both red and white people.

Lila and Ray have an uneasy alliance - tinges of racism crop up, as Ray seems to have a disdain for the Mohawk people and the people of different cultures that she is smuggling. But they persevere, and, oh, so slowly, start to understand that they are both in the same predicament, until a near tragedy occurs.

Filmed in a very muted tone - everything is tinged with gray - "Frozen River" keeps its tension throughout, whether it is from the superb acting of Melissa Leo as Ray and from Misty Upham (Lila) of the Blackfoot Indian Nation, or from the teeth-grinding, seat-grabbing feeling one gets as the two women drive Ray's car across the ice. One never knows if all of these fragile things - their alliance, their luck, the ice – will hold on just a little bit longer.

The picture won the Grand Jury Prize at this year's Sundance Film Festival and first-time director/write, Courtney Hunt has crafted a terrific little film, rife with the things that make us human.

Second Sunday documentary takes on Gonzo journalist

Depp and others review writer's wild musings on counter-culture, politics

The Second Sunday documentary series for 11 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 9, will be "Gonzo: The Life and Work of Dr. Hunter S. Thompson" (2008, 118 minutes).
In 1965, Hunter S. Thompson made a name for himself by riding with, writing about and eventually pissing off the Hells Angels, an often-vicious biker gang.

Then he decided to live on the

Through studious drug use, a finely honed sense of black comedy and highly subjective - and frequently fantasy-prone - reporting, Thompson created a journalistic subgenre called "gonzo" that sought a deeper truth than could be achieved by traditional means. Frank Mankiewicz, the campaign manager for George McGovern's 1972 Democratic presidential run, described Thompson's work as "the most accurate and least factual account" of the election season. No doubt Thompson took that as a compliment.

Apart from a handful of recreations and lots of excerpts from Thompson's writing, read by Johnny Depp (who played Thompson in Terry Gilliam's film "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas" and remained a close friend of Thompson's), "Gonzo: The Life and Work of Dr. Hunter S. Thompson" takes a fairly straightforward approach to its

the Room," "Taxi to the Dark Side") mostly alternates between talking heads and archival footage, and even uses two Credence Clearwater Revival songs and The Youngbloods' "Get Together" to establish the period.

Thompson was the rare man whose life drew affectionate tributes from Jimmy Carter, Jimmy Buffett and Pat Buchanan. Like the film, they all admire Thompson's fearlessness without soft-selling his flaws. Apart from some kind words about the Bush-enraged writing of his final years, no one has much to sav about Thompson's work from the mid-1970s on, when the mere act of being Hunter S. Thompson – the outrageous, gun-toting, drug-crazed character who happened to write - became a full-time job. Even in his decline, however, he remained admirably committed. He carved out a piece of America all his own and stayed there until he didn't want to stick around anymore.

The film will be shown at the Fountain Theatre, located at 1269 Calle de Guadalupe, in Mesilla. Admission is $5. Call 524-8287 or 522-0286 for more information.

'Smoke Signals' first for American Indians

Emotionally appealing drama is about love, legacy

The CineMatinee film at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla for Saturday, Nov. 8, is "Smoke Signals" (1998, 89 minutes, PG-13, free admission for all veterans). This was the first commercial feature film written, directed and acted by American Indians and was one of the freshest and most emotionally appealing dramas of 1998.

Victor (Adam Beach) and Thomas (Evan Adams) have been raised on Idaho's poverty-stricken Coeur d'Alene Indian Reservation. One is a taciturn athlete while the other is a socially awkward nerd. The two are drawn together when Thomas gives Victor the money he needs to travel to Phoenix where his estranged and alcoholic father has died. On the road they reminisce about the past and clash with strangers. Victor also learns more about his dad from Suzy Song (Irene Bedard), who was his friend.

Chris Eyre directs this vividly original take on Native Americans based on a 1993 short story collection by screenplay writer Sherman Alexie. Although Beach is convincing as the angry son who must come to terms with his father's love and legacy, Adams steals the spotlight as a storyteller who knows that truth must be told indirectly so it can wiggle its way into people's hearts. The film pokes fun at the interface between life on "the res" and the dominant white culture. It also reveals how ritual, humor and friendship can be healing medicine for anyone caught up in grief.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is at 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members, who are admitted for $1. The Fountain Theatre is at 2469 Calle de Guadalupe in Mesilla. Call 524-8287 or 522-0286 for more infor-

'Changeling' best drama of the year

Jolie offers a powerful performance as Christine Collins

REVIEW BY JENNA FROSCH
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Disbelief. That's the reaction of most of the movie theater during a Sunday afternoon showing of "Changeling," starring Angelina Jolie in one of the most powerful roles she has ever played.

Based on a true story of a mother whose son goes missing in Los Angeles, "Changeling" explores the corruption and lies of the Los Angeles Police Department in 1928 and for years afterward. Jolie plays Christine Collins, a single mother to Walter, played by Gattlin Griffith. One day, while Christine reports to work, Walter disappears and Christine reports the missing child to the LAPD. In the subsequent 24 hours and for weeks following, Christine searches for her son by calling missing persons departments all over the country. All the while, she relies on the LAPD to search along with her.

One afternoon, she is contacted by Capt. J.J. Jones, played by Jeffrey Donovan, who says they have found her son several states away. Donovan is infuriating in his role, belittling Christine's concerns and claiming a "woman's emotion."

The act of reuniting the two offers fanfare and good press for the traditionally malfeasant police department, but the boy they have returned is not her son. This begins a long battle between Collins and the LAPD that leads her to detainment in a psychopathic ward at a local hospital, followed by a slew of events that are not in her favor.

In the meantime, another officer is sent to investigate a deportation issue at the Northcott Ranch in Winevill, Calif., and finds more than he bargained for when he takes in a boy living on the ranch. He soon uncovers a mass murder on the ranch that links many disappearances of boys in the Los Angeles area.

Rev. Gustav Briegleb, played by John Malkovich, tries to expose the corruption of the police department and takes a special interest in Christine's case, helping bring a suit against the LAPD and their poor handling of the case.

Directed by a consistently brilliant Clint Eastwood, "Changeling" is an intense look at a true story of corruption that will leave you with goose bumps and keep you on the edge of your seat the entire 141 minutes of the movie. Eastwood does everything right in the movie, from the music to the lighting to the camera angles and memory flashbacks. He truly shows why he is an Academy Award-winning director.

If an Academy Award nomination doesn't come Jolie's way, I will be shocked. She gives such a powerful and chilling performance as a grieving mother and pioneer in the fight against the corruption of the LAPD and the victim of injustice she saw on the receiving end.

Malkovich plays the radical pastor to a tee, giving the character the needed intensity and passion that he often gives to his roles.

"Changeling" has a way of capturing the viewer's attention and never letting go, even through the very end when the hopes of the audience are still intact. You may find yourself sitting on the edge of your seat, and if you do not already know the outcome of the true story, the movie is especially moving.

Coaching college golfers is similar, many believe, to coaching kickers in football.

You don't.

"There's a lot of over-coaching in college golf," says Scott Lieberwirth, who purposely tries to under-coach the men's team at New Mexico State. "Our golfers are here because they're good players," Lieberwirth says. "You have to let 'em play."

By the time golfers reach college, their swings and techniques are practically set in stone. Lieberwirth might suggest a tweak here, a tweak there, but nothing drastic. Why, as the saying goes, try and fix something that ain't broke?

"I tell our guys that I'm not here to be their swing instructor," Lieberwirth said. "Most of them have their own professional teachers anyway. And I have 11 players on this team. If I spent all my time trying to change their swings – well, that wouldn't work. I do make suggestions if they ask me to."

"During competition, we might discuss how to play this hole or that one. Sometimes I try to keep 'em loose if they're tight. Matt Edwards (former NMSU player) used to get nervous during a round. I'd walk along with him and talk to him just to keep him relaxed.

"It's half psychology, half B.S."
You can't argue with Lieberwirth's approach. His Aggies have won five of their last seven tournaments, dating back to last spring. Included was the Western Athletic Conference championship won on April 30 in Boise, Idaho

No other team at NMSU has ever matched that feat.

With Kevin Lozares firing a final round 7-under-par 65, and Travis Reid shooting 66, the Ags rallied from 10 strokes down to win last week's Herb Wimberly Intercollegiate on their home course. Reid captured the individual title with a 5-under 208.

At the Wolf Pack Classic in Reno, Nev., Oct. 7, NMSU trashed a highly ranked field to win a five-stroke victory. A list of the deceased included Arizona, Brigham Young, Kansas State and too many other notables to list here.

NMSU will play next at the Turtle
Bay Invitational at Kahuku, Hawaii,
Monday and Tuesday, its final tournament of the fall season.

Lieberwirth plans to play Reid at the No. 1 spot, Lozares at No. 2, Tim Madigan No. 3, Josh Stewart No. 4 and Gastone De La Torre at No. 5.

"This is the most competitive team I've ever coached," Lieberwirth says. "I don't remember ever having to give them a pep talk. They know what's at stake. Like I said before, they wouldn't be here if they weren't good players."

Working their teams hard in practice for Friday's showdown are Mayfield High School's head coach Michael Bradley and Las Cruces High School's head coach Jim Miller.

Here we go again ...

LCHS, Mayfield battle for district title

By Craig Massey

For Las Cruces, it's the sports version of The Whole Enchilada Fiesta crammed into two intense hours in one spectacular venue

The annual, local phenomenon that is the Mayfield-Las Cruces High School football game takes place Friday at 7 p.m. at Aggie Memorial Stadium, and the usual crowd of 24,000 passionate fans is expected. Mayfield is the home team and will be on the west side of the stadium.

The teams enter the contest with the District 3 5-A championship on the line (which is usually the case) and identical records from last year – LCHS is 9-0 and Mayfield is 8-1. The Trojans came out on top last year 14-7 top last year, 14-7.

"We've been here before, so it's not anything new," said LCHS coach Jim Miller.

Not only are the records the same as last year, but many of Miller's key players are back again. His quarterback returns, as does his running backs, tight ends, three-fifths of his offensive line and several starters on defense.

"We have some experience, so they know what's at stake," Miller said. "We didn't get it done last year, and that's a motivating factor for our kids. It's going to be a war."

The Bulldawgs, behind a dominant offense, have overpowered everyone in their path this season, while Mayfield's only loss was a narrow defeat to an outstanding Eldorado team. Regardless of the outcome of Friday's showdown, both teams should receive a bye in the first round of the state playoffs, which begin next week. "There are a lot of similarities to last

"There are a lot of similarities to last year," said Mayfield coach Michael Bradley. "The seeds are a little bit different. They're playing to keep the No. 1 seed. We want to be one of the top-four seeds, so we can get a bye."

Bradley said the top-four seeds should be (in no particular order), Las Cruces, Mayfield, Eldorado and Clovis.

The Trojans have faced a very difficult schedule this season, but the Bulldawgs offer an even bigger challenge. It all starts

Volleyball late discovery for Simpson

Middle hitter is key to team's success

As a youngster, Amber Simpson was never guilty of ambition.

It was school and video games, primarily. "I was a real slacker," she said. "The only exercise I got was in my phys-ed class. I played in the school orchestra and that's about all."

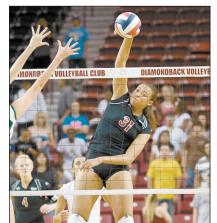

At 6-foot-1 at Quincy, Ill., High School, Simpson was a natural candidate for basketball, "Yeah, but I hated basketball," she said. Worried that his daughter might Worried that his daughter might drift into obscurity as an underachieving teenager, Errol Simpson, Amber's father, convinced her to try volleyball. "Actually, he pushed me into it," she said. "He wanted me in something. I barely knew what volleyball was. When I started playing it, I liked it. That was in my sophomore year. I didn't make the team until I was a junior."

These days, Simpson, who stands 6-2, is New Mexico State's middle hitter. A tall, competitive inside force, she led the Aggies in blocks with 114 before Thursday's match at Nevada. She had 200 kills and 13 service aces.

Mike Jordan, the Aggies' coach, says Errol Simpson, trying to place Amber in a college program, sent him a DVD of her in action at Quincy High.

"The quality of the DVD was horrible," Jordan said. "Cloudy, blurred and grainy. And I didn't See Simpson on PAGE D7

NMSU

There's history behind this one

LCHS, Trojans among state's elite

How did this game get so big? An examination of the history surrounding the Las Cruces/Mayfield game is always fun.
Let's begin with the premise that the Mesilla Valley sports fan is no different than counterparts all over the nation. All local fans want to see excellence on the playing field, and they especially want their teams to win championships. Simply put, Las Cruces High School and Mayfield High School win championships. It wasn't always that way.

Most people agree that the game jumped several levels in profile when Jim Bradley, who is simply the greatest football coach in the history of New Mexico, returned to his home in the City of the Crosses 15 years ago. Bradley had just finished a long and very successful coaching stint in Roswell. Ironically, Bradley had left Las Cruces after being fired as head football coach at New Mexico State University. We were reminded after suffering through NMSU losses at the hands of perennial WAC Conference power Boise State by a combined total of 107-0 the last two seasons, that Jim Bradley still has the highest winning percentage of any Aggie football coach since Warren Woodson retired many decades ago.

When Bradley returned 15 years ago, the Aggies' long-standing gridiron futility had gradually created a real thirst for football excellence at the high school level. Jim Bradley began to harness the power of the community shortly after his return and ultimately the quenching of

Since 1995, Mayfield has won six state championships. The Trojans have also played in the state championship game on three other occasions. Not long after Bradley's return, former Bradley assistant Kirk Potter took over the coaching helm at Las Cruces High. When Potter left for the mirage of greener pastures in Carlsbad, Jim Miller took over the head coaching duties at LCHS. Miller quickly proved himself to be a member of the coaching elite when he promptly led the Bulldawgs to three state titles in four years.

So the success story of high school football in Las Cruces is simple. Since 1995, between Mayfield and LCHS, the City of Crosses has had a team play for and/or win the big school state championship 12 times. Oñate also tossed in a 4-A football championship just six years ago. There is so much winning in the local high school football atmosphere that we have answered the question, how did this game get so big?
Of course there is more to the story than winning. There is also high school football and how it has bonded together the people of this city. Tonight Kevin McGrath and Bob Ogas, two outstanding citizens who have recruited dozens of volunteers and hundreds of sponsors of football, will recognize numerous contributors to the Sandra B. McGrath All-Activities High School Golf Tournament. This event raised an eye-popping $250,000 for athletic programs in the school district this summer. Originally, the tournament served as an exclusive fundraiser for high school football. Over the years, this event has gradually evolved into a symbol of local community action and demonstrated what an incredible catalyst football can be for success in other areas.

Stories of the fun and excitement at the big game each year are endless. The bands at both schools save their best shows for tonight. The pre-game and halftime shows are great. Even the huge concessions proceeds fill the coffers of programs in need.

The fun will begin in the parking lot at Aggie Memorial Stadium in the afternoon. If you have never experienced JIM SPENCE From the

New Mexico State senior Travis Reid was named the WAC Golfer of the Month for October. This is his first career conference honor. A Clovis, N.M., native, Reid won the Herb Wimberly Intercollegiate and finished in a tie for 13th at the Wolf Pack Classic. He began the month at the Wolf Pack Classic Oct. 6-7 with a one-under-par 215 (74-70-71) to help the Aggies win the team title. New Mexico State then returned home where the Aggies won their own Herb Wimberly Intercollegiate Tournament, defeating 17 other teams. Reid won the tournament by one stroke with a five-under-par 208 (72-70-66). The 66 in the final round helped the Aggies overcome a 10-stroke deficit after the first two rounds. Reid averaged 70.5 strokes over the six rounds

Difficult Rainmakers is state's newest golfing 'green' gem

Spectacular course artfully woven into the landscape

One of the newest additions to the fabulous diversity of golf courses here in New Mexico is the Rainmakers Golf Course in Alto, just north of Ruidoso. The Bridge Investment Group out of Salt Lake City created the Rainmakers Golf Community by making the Robert Trent Jones Jr.-designed golf course the center of a 1,000-plus-acre residential development. Just in case you're having trouble picturing the area, the golf course is located immediately to the south and east of the Spencer Theater. I recently had a chance to visit Rainmakers and play the golf course. I found the land and the setting spectacular, and the golf course extremely challenging.

Permit me to begin my review with the blurb (minutely edited) that I found on their website – www. rainmakersusa.com. "Perched at 7,000 feet, Rainmakers Golf Community is embraced by the seasonal beauty and panoramic surroundings that make Lincoln County New Mexico's gem of the southern Rocky Mountains. Renowned for environmental stewardship, Rainmakers is committed to protecting and conserving natural resources and setting a standard for others to follow. Imagine a place of crystal-clear air, warm sunshine and vivid blue skies, championship golf, sweeping mountain views and a history and culture rich with stories of the authentic American West. Rainmakers is a place so tranquil and intoxicating that any memories of harried urban living are all but erased."

If Rainmakers sounds too good to be true, think again. They haven't oversold the magnificent natural splendor nor the special features of the golf layout. Apparently, the developers had in mind a Field of Dreams – if we build it they will come – since the homebuilding is still in its early stages. One friend of mine, who is now building a home at Rainmakers, told me that good lots can be had for around $100 grand. That sounded pretty good, considering the land is every bit as compelling as Santa Fe, and the prices are only a fraction of Santa Fe; plus the weather is much better.

Back to the golf course. The Robert Trent Jones golf-design company did an amazing job carving golf holes out of what is extremely rugged terrain, a mix of high-desert plateau and mountain hillsides. Most of the holes are woven into the landscape so artfully that they appear to be a gift from nature. From the moment you step out of your cart, onto the golf course, your eyes feast on classic New Mexico vistas, which make this truly the Land of Enchantment. There is Sierra Blanca to the west, Capitan to the north, and the Capitan Mountains to the east. Even if you're not a golfer, this is great; there are walking trails all over.

While the yardage is not overpowering – 7,101 yards from the tips – the layout demands that you keep your golf ball on green grass. From the very first hole on, you're struck by the sharp drop-offs on either side, and sometimes at the end (or "runout") of the fairway. Most of the surrounding scrub desert, which is characterized by rocky slopes dotted with piñons and junipers, is marked as hazzard and it is not inviting or safe to walk into.

The first two holes are par fives, the first measuring 662 (not a typo) yards from the "middle" (blue) tees; my tees. The configuration is a bit unconventional, with five par 5's, five par 3's and eight par 4's. Although I thought the two starting holes were harsh, since it's customary to start golfers off with shorter, "easier" golfing tasks as they sometimes stiffly begin their rounds, all of the par 5's are birdie holes if you hit good shots. You come to No. 3. It's only a par 3. But it's a par 3 that drops 200 feet from tee to green! Wow. My favorite hole is another par 3, No. 11, with a green that is set as an amphitheater measuring 29 yards deep and nearly 60 yards wide, allowing for dozens of hole locations.

One of the things I really liked about Rainmakers is how the cart paths remain generally unobtrusive. At times, you drive your cart through the high-desert foliage, giving you a sense you're going back-country, and then you again emerge onto the golf course and are reminded that you now must hit a demanding shot to a huge green with lots of slopes. The greens are generous, with plenty of subtleties, but there are no real tricks. No one will be wisecracking about the "clown's mouth" on Rainmakers' greens. I found that it takes a little time, but you better survey your putts on Rainmakers' greens from all sides, as it's hard to tell what's uphill and what's actually downhill.

Golf Digest rates golf courses on seven criteria: shot values, resistance to scoring, design variety, memorability, aesthetics, conditioning and ambiance. The "shot values" is the one I find most interesting because Golf Digest defines it as how well the course poses risks and rewards and equally tests length, accuracy and finesse. Rainmakers gets high marks for this, which is important to me, since I'm not a "bomb-and-gouge" type player. As for "ambiance," someone from the East Coast might find this layout a bit of a culture shock, but I'm a New Mexican, and I love the way we can make a quality golf course out of desert and mountains. The (expert) course rating is 72.4 with a slope of 133 – not extreme by any means.

The design of Rainmakers is truly extraordinary. Speaking about the seamless introduction of fairways and greens into a wilderness tract, RTJ II describes his effort this way: "The final product is a testament to collaborative development that proceeds with the utmost care and sensitivity to existing landforms, vegetation and wildlife. In my view, the 18-hole package presents the golfer with a unique contrast of flowing fairways and rolling greens with meandering arroyos and natural rock outcroppings that frame the player's journey around the course. With each individual hole offering four to six sets of tee boxes and views that will take your breath away, the builders have created spectacular golf for players of all abilities."

With one caveat. As I played my way around Rainmakers and took in the beauty and the cleverness of the hole architecture, I also tried to put myself in the place of a high-handicap golfer - perhaps one who often comes to our Performance Golf Schools. Truthfully, someone who is a rather reckless slicer or hooker won't have a chance on this configuration. As it should be, the penalties for wild shots are quite severe, and the more inept recreational golfers might be shocked. On many holes, even if you were to find your ball out in the scrub, you couldn't hit it. If you hit an excruciating errant shot bring your pet mountain goat. My friend, the member, says there are rattlesnakes – although I didn't see any. My friend also said he has seen mountain lions, deer, eagles, elk, foxes and coyotes. It's worth noting that Rainmakers was the first Audubon International Signature Golf Course in New Mexico, dedicating 135 of its acres as a wildlife habitat and conservation easement.

Rainmakers has limited golfing memberships to 450. Eventually club members will enjoy golf, tennis, swimming and a fitness center. If you would like to tour the golf course and surrounding area, look at properties and play golf at Rainmakers call 575-336-4653 (GOLF).

Local veterans on center stage on Saturday at Aggie football game

Ole Pete is adding blue and white to his game-day crimson gear for the Saturday, Nov. 8, game versus Hawaii. That's because of the tribute NMSU is paying to those who work so hard to keep us safe.

This Saturday, there is gonna be a patriotic shindig that will honor those who have served in our armed services in the past, present and we will even get a preview of the future. Come to the game and be among the Navajo code talkers and World War II veterans, as well as service men and women who are working hard to protect our homeland on so many fronts.

Las Cruces is a hub of military service for enlisted men and women, officers and those that serve in the National Guard. Most of them have, at one time or another, gone overseas to stand in harm's way so we can live the life we enjoy here in the Mesilla Valley. But this game has so much more to it.

During the second World War, America's enemies were able to intercept messages and could break every code we came up with in transmitting sensitive information to try to win the war. Then one smart general decided to enlist members of the Navajo Nation to relay those sensitive communications, and that was one code the enemies of freedom couldn't break. Two of those heroes will be at the game traveling down from the Four Corners area of our state. Other World War II veterans will be on hand from the Honor Flight that brought these heroes to the nation's capital to see the memorial wall built to honor those who served in that conflict.

You may remember Pete talked about the future. There is going to be a flyover of the newest Raptor fighter plane to come off the assembly line. Aggie Memorial has been host to flyovers from historic B-52's, fighter jets and had service men float in on a parachute, but this is gonna top it all. This fighter jet will figuratively and maybe literally blow you away.

The City of Las Cruces and brass from the military will sign a covenant agreement that will show the appreciation each has for the other and the appreciation we have for everyone working together. The top brass, Col. Jeff Harrigian, will be on hand as will Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagashima and other representatives of the city council.

Did Pete forget to mention that you can see all of this and a great Aggie football game, too? It's a celebration of those who have given and those who continue to serve. It's a crimson, white and blue day, don't forget the 2 p.m. start on Saturday and get ready to cheer for the heroes who make our land great.

Nothing short of a WAC championship will do

Aggie women are on a mission

Head coach Darin Spence has his sights set on the first division of the Western Athletic Conference women's basketball standings, despite a preseason poll prediction of fifth.

He has some new faces from the junior college and high school ranks to go with some returning talented players.

The center of attention is the tall Texan from Tulia, Niki Holt. Holt went to camp this summer. It wasn't the kind that has you sleep in a log cabin and go on nature walks to find arrowheads; it was the Pete Newell camp for centers. Newell was the head coach at the University of California in the late 1950s and got to the NCAA championships with a center named Darrell Imhoff. If you have a good memory you can recall him, but Newell won the NCAA title game with his big man strategy over Jerry West at West Virginia.

He won the semifinals over Cincinnati when they had Oscar Robertson, so his approach is well-proven. Imhoff had a pro career with the Knicks for a few years applying what he had learned from coach Newell. The Newell camp is strictly for post players of both genders. Holt says she has learned a lot and plans to put it to good use for her final year at NMSU.

Senior guard Tyshae Walton and sophomore guard Madison Spence are back from last year's squad. Spence plans to make it to the WAC title game this year. She was sidelined after the semifinal win and wasn't available for the title

She is back in one piece after being named to the WAC All-Freshmen team in the league. Walton has shown steady progress as an Aggie, increasing her scoring average from two to four to six points per game, but that is not her strongest suit on the court. Walton always draws the opponent's top-scoring threat with the assignment to "shut her down." Walton is comfortable in the Pan Am, hitting double figures seven times of the eleven games she has played.

en games she has played. The new faces on this year's team are from Clarendon and Pratt Junior Colleges and from the high school ranks of Texas, California and Nevada. The two junior-college transfers each bring a 6-2 frame to the court. Areyal LeDeatte was the nation's third-best scorer in the junior-college ranks. Danisha Corbett, Brittany Palmer and Erica Sanchez are back from freshmen years to add to the bench. No one has ever picked the Aggies women's team to win it all and yet they have been in the WAC title game three years in a row. You have to prove it on the court, and Spence intends to do just

Aggies sign new soccer coach

Team starts play in fall '09

NEEDHAM

New Mexico State Athletics Director McKinley Boston recently announced that Michael Needham has been named the first head coach in the history of Aggie women's soccer.

"I am pleased to welcome Michael Needham as a new member to the Aggie family," Boston said. "I am excit-ed about what Michael will bring as a leader in building the women's soccer program at NMSU. I'm sure he will be a good fit in our community and especially the soccer community. His coaching background is outstanding, and his vision is very consistent with what I have identified as expectations during this growth period over the next three years. Michael will recruit locally, within the state and west region, and I'm excited about that strategy."

Needham brings a wealth of knowledge to NMSU, including nine years of colligate coaching experience, a pair of NCAA Tournament appearances and an impressive playing career. Needham now has the responsibility to build the Aggie program from scratch with the first game scheduled for the 2009 fall season.

"I am impressed with NMSU's commitment to the community and their enthusiasm with starting a women's soccer program," Needham said.

Prior to NMSU, Needham was in his second year as the first assistant coach at George Mason. He had a hand in every aspect of the program, including on-field direction, budget responsibilities, daily program operations and the student-athletes' academic success. Needham was also the program's recruiting coordinator and the 2009 Mason signing class is projected to be ranked in the Mid-Atlantic Region and the Colonial Athletic Association.

During his two-year stint at George Mason, Needham assisted the Patriots in their return to the Colonial Athletic Association Tournament after a two-year hiatus.

Needham joined the Mason staff after spending a pair of seasons as an assistant coach at UNLV, where he assisted the Rebels to a pair of NCAA Tournament appearances after winning the Mountain West Conference title both seasons.

At UNLV, Needham's primary focus was working with and training the defensive unit. Through hard work and dedication, the 2005 squad only allowed 14 goals en route to a program-best 13 wins. Two Rebels were named all-region honorees, while an impressive eight players were named to the All-Mountain West Team.

Needham also made a solid impact in the recruiting department at UNLV as both recruiting classes were consistently ranked in the west region and in the top five throughout the Mountain West Conference, ranked by Soccer Buzz Magazine. "I have had the opportunity to work with two great collegiate coaches and athletic departments over the past four seasons," Needham added. "The experience I have gained has prepared me to build a championship culture at NMSU.

Preceding UNLV, Needham was an assistant for three seasons at Drury University, in Springfield, Mo. He also spent two seasons as an assistant at Rhode Island and one year as a volunteer assistant at Connecticut College working with the men's soccer team.

Needham also has extensive experience coaching outside the collegiate ranks. He worked with the Region IV Olympic Development Program as a staff coach and prior to that he was with the Nevada Olympic Development Program head coach. He also worked with the Nuesport football club in Las Vegas and spent time at the United Soccer Academy in Delray Beach, Fla., as the director of coaching.

In addition, he was Director of Player Development for Lake Country Soccer in Springfield, Mo., the senior coach/supervisor at the Goal 4Rams Soccer Camp in Kingston, R.I., and a high school coach for boy's soccer in Boca Raton, Fla.

Needham has obtained his United States Soccer Federation National "A" License, a National Soccer Coaches Association of America (NSCAA) "Premier Diploma" in addition to an NSCAA- Advanced National Diploma with Distinction and an United States Soccer Federation National Youth Licensure.

He earned a bachelor's degree in exercise science from Rhode Island and a master's degree in physical educa-tion from Drury. Needham played professionally with the Municipal Goecechea, for the Costa Rican Premier League in San Jose, Costa Rica. At the collegiate level, Needham was a defender on the Rhode Island men's soccer team, which was a NCAA top-25 program.

REID

New Mexico State senior Travis Reid was named the WAC Golfer of the Month for October by the conference office.

Reid, a senior from Clovis, N.M. (Clovis HS), won the Herb Wimberly Intercollegiate and finished in a tie for 13th at the Wolf Pack Classic in the month of October. He began the month at the Wolf Pack Classic Oct. 6-7 with a one-under-par 215 (74-70-71) to help the Aggies win the

New Mexico State then returned home, where the Aggies won their own Herb Wimberly Intercollegiate tournament by beating out 17 other teams. Reid won the tournament by one stroke with a five-under 208 (72-70-66). The 66 in the final round helped the Aggies overcome a 10-stroke deficit after the first two rounds. Reid averaged 70.5 strokes over the six rounds in which he played.

Aggies finish fourth in conference meet

New Mexico State sophomore Brandi Gutierrez earned first team All-WAC honors after her fourth-place individual finish at last week's WAC Cross Country Championships Saturday.

Junior Ingrid Flores and freshman Ian Ruybalid both earned second team All-WAC honors. Flores crossed the finish line 13th overall for the women, while Ruybalid was 14th overall for the

The women's team had four runners place in the top 20, which panned out to a fourth-place team finish, while the men had a sixth-place team finish.

"We were hoping for a little more on the women's side, but we still improved two whole spots from last season and with almost the same athletes," said coach Paul Hakines. "I think that says a lot about the improvement of the women's team."

"Even though the men's team finished in the same place as last season, we are all-around better," Harkins for LCHS in the offensive backfield where quarterback Dante Caro operates a version of the Urban Meyer offense. Caro is a threat to run or throw and he is joined in the backfield by James Hall Jr. and Will Bruce.

"Every other time those guys (Caro and Hall) touch the ball, it's a touchdown,' said Bradley. "They have speed, moves and patience. Their offensive line is playing well. They're extremely hard to stop and it will be a big challenge for our defense.

"They had a lot of juniors last year and now they're ready to go for it," Brad-ley added. "Experience is a huge factor in this game.'

Bradley's Trojans are a physical team that leans on its defense and has a power running attack on offense. Junior quarterback Austin Hooker runs the show, but it is speedy running back Jacob Ceniceros who usually provides the big play.

While the Bulldawgs have a very similar look from last year, the Tro-jans' offense is more of a blast from the past. After offensive coordinator Gary Bradley left to take over the head coaching job at Farmington, Michael Farmington, Michael Bradley turned to his most experienced and most wellknown assistant coach to run the offense.

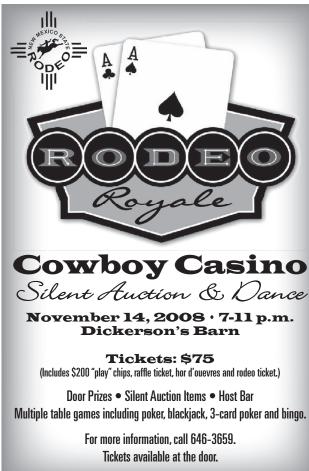

Miller said that with Jim Bradley having a larger say in the offense this year, the Trojans resemble Mayfield teams from the

"Jim Sr. is running the offense again and there's more power-I and wish-bone," Miller said. "It's a smash-mouth type of football ... a little bit different than what they were

"We can't be one-dimensional," said Bradley.
"We've got to be able to pass and run. The strongest part of our team is our offensive and defensive lines.

The key matchup could be how well Mayfield's defense can handle the Bulldawg offense. Miller said Mayfield is always a difficult chore.

"They just reload every year," Miller said. "They always rely on their defense and their front seven has done a good job."

think she was a very good player.
"But the DVD showed her stretching before a match and a loose volleyball rolled past her. She reached down and palmed it with one hand and threw it aside. I thought, wow, with hands that big she must have potential.

"Later, I watched her play in a club tournament in Bloomington, Ill. I was impressed."

When Simpson visited NMSU on a recruiting trip, she liked it. "I thought it was pretty nice," she said. "Especially the green chile. I fell in love with green chile." She also liked Jordan's coaching style, the campus and the climate.

The Aggies, tied with Hawaii for first place in the WAC standings, took a 17-7 overall record to Nevada. They'll finish the road trip Saturday at Fresno State.

Simpson believes her team has finally jelled after an unsettled beginning this season. "We had too many new players early on," she said. "Tough schedule. We're a whole different team now."

NMSU, Texas Tech meet in exhibition

The New Mexico State equestrian team rounded out its fall season last weekend, competing against Texas Tech in an exhibition match-up.

"I'm extremely pleased with the way we finished out the fall season," said coach Andrea Hanson. "I felt this was an important competition for us to work out the kinks and use this as momentum going into the spring season.'

On the Western side, the Aggies defeated Texas Tech 7-1, winning the Horsemanship competition 3-1 and the Reining event In the Horsemanship competition, Caitlin Adams was the Aggies' high-scorer with a 74.5 to 69 win over Jessica Jarvis. Rachael Krause beat Amanda Cage 73.5 to 67.5, while Codi Binkerd grabbed the final Aggie point with a 70.5 to 70 victory over Chelsea Campbell.

In the Reining competition, Tonna Brooks led the Aggies with a victory over Krystal Towle 73.5 to 66. Breanne Ber-trand defeated Chelsea Campbell 71.5 to 0, while Kate Goodwin beat Kelsey Lieuarnce 72 to 68.5. Ashley Dietz finished out the Reining competition with a 67.5 to 62.5 win over Amanda Cage.

In the Hunter Seat, the Aggies faced one rider from Texas Tech. In the Equitation over Fences competition Beth Robinson defeated Tech's Chelsea Hosmer 82 to 70. Amy Lang also faced Hosmer in the Fences competition, winning 84 to 77. Other winners in the Fences competition included Marisa Bernal as she defeated teammate Catie Helmuth while Meg Kelley beat fellow Aggie Krystal Doganay.

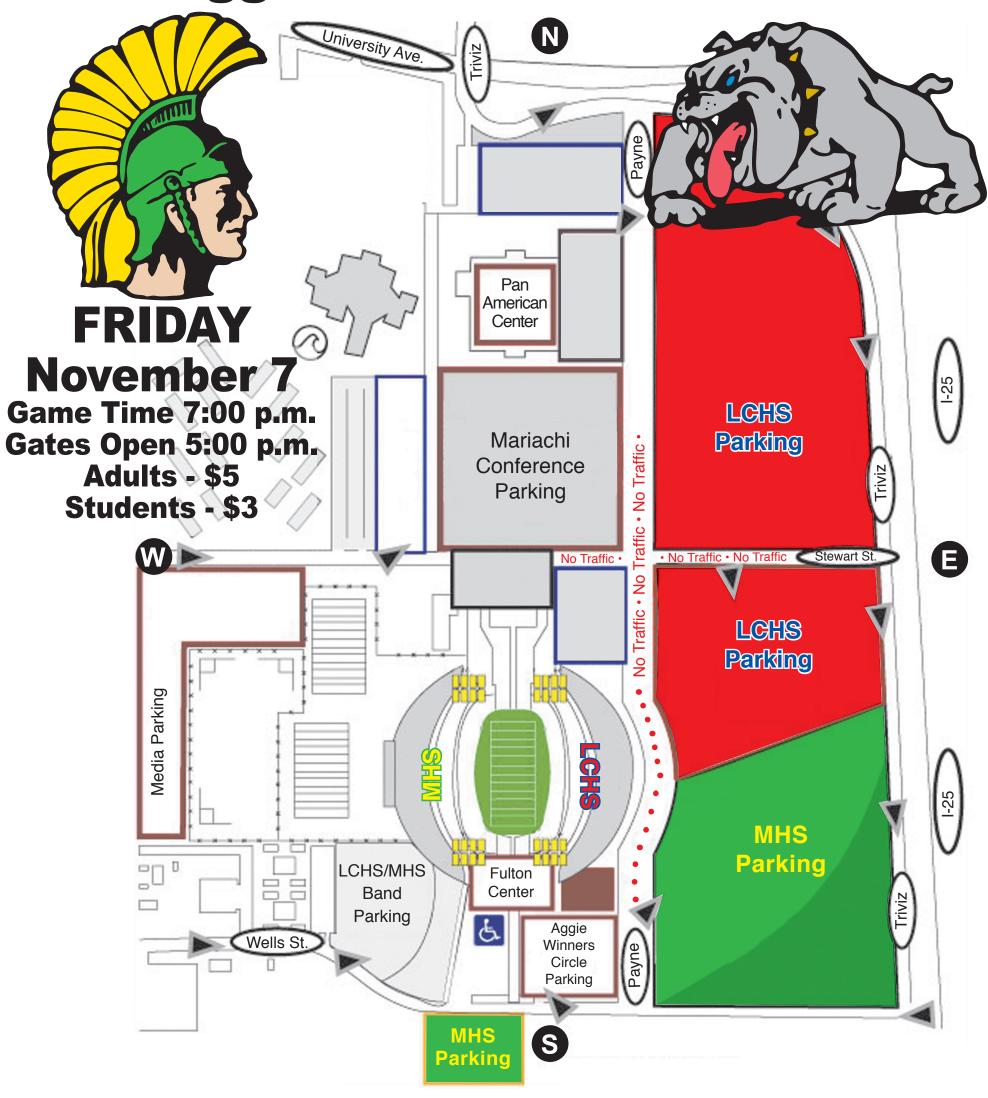

In the Flat competition, Hosmer faced off against NMSU's Marisa Bernal and Erica Daniels. Bernal beat Hosmer 71 to 42, while Daniels beat Hosmer 63 to 54. Teammates Lang and Doganay faced off with Lang coming out victorious, while Jen Friend beat fellow Aggie Laura Mantell.

The Aggies will be back in action after the New Year when they host Kansas State on Jan. 31.

NMSU hosts Hawaii in crucial game Saturday

New Mexico State's football team will be trying to keep its bowl hopes alive in a 2 p.m. game against Hawaii here Saturday.

The Rainbow Warriors, 4-5 and 3-3 in WAC standings, also face a must-win situation if they hope to gain bowl eligibility.

Coach Hal Mumme's Aggies, led by quarterback Chase Holbrook, must shake off consecutive losses to San Jose State, Idaho and Boise State that left them at 3-5 overall, 1-3 in the WAC standings. NMSU must win three of its five remaining games to become bowl eligible.

Defensively, safety Derrick Richardson still leads the nation in tackles with 95.

A brilliant new idea

in courtyard design
This fall showcase entry features an outdoor living space of vast proportions

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

While most homeowners enjoy outdoor meals and gatherings from the privacy of their backyard, one entry in this year's Fall Parade of Homes proved that this is not necessarily the only place to play.

In his first-ever showcase entry at 4301 Venetian Loop, builder John R. Hernandez demonstrated the possibilities with a front courtyard of unbelievable magnitude.

Built as a custom home in the prestigious Sonoma

Ranch Estates, this dwelling was designed to take advantage of the views while providing comfort and privacy.

Hernandez, owner of JR Hernandez Custom Homes, said he knew a great front courtyard was the best option for this east-facing residence, and after visiting the lot, he began to formulate the perfect plan.

When we came out here and took a look at the lot, the main thing that we liked were the views," Hernandez

Creating privacy with the surrounding walls and comfort with several covered patios, he designed a stunning space that brought surprise and delight to paradegoers.

"People really liked the courtyard because of the privacy," he said. "The road sets down, so when cars drive by they really can't see.

Privacy was essential, considering that the courtyard also includes a Jacuzzi and outdoor shower for rinsing off before heading into the house.

When it came to the home's indoor spaces, Hernandez said that for his client, it was about "the bigger the better." Designed on a split floor plan, every room is large with tall ceilings, extensive use of large windows and even large

With a central hallway dividing the home in two, Hernandez set the most eclectic room in the middle, which was originally going to be an enclosed patio.

"We had an idea that it would be kind of like an enclosed porch," he said. As the plan evolved, they decided to make it an indoor room, but used lots of windows for light, stucco on the walls, covered the ceiling in tin and included a huge fountain and fireplace.

"A lot of people liked that room and the tin ceiling because it was something different than what they had seen," said Ginger Moore with EXIT Realty Horizons.

Hernandez even used fixtures that would normally be found outdoors.

"I thought, if it was going to be like an enclosed porch, it should have lights inside that make it look like you are outside," he said.

While the home's other main living areas, including the kitchen, great room, dining room and media room, are located south of this outdoor-style area, the master bedroom is located on the north side and is actually found at the front of the home to take advantage of the views.

"I was trying to centralize everything, make everything even," Hernandez said.

The home's main living spaces are elegant, but they still hold onto that feeling of comfort.

Hernandez and his client actually hosted a party at the home the first day of showcase, which gave Hernandez an opportunity to see how well traffic flows.

"It was a lot of fun," he said.

It also gave them a chance to see the home's possibilities for entertaining, and they found that the kitchen's expansive counter space really came in handy.

"If you are going to have a party, you can lay out everything here," he said of its gleaming granite countertops. The kitchen, which is Moore's favorite room in the house, also includes a double oven, microwave drawer and a large skylight, which keeps the room light and bright.

Working with his clients on all of the interior design accents, Hernandez used several contrasting colors, including those found on the walls of the home's media room, where paradegoers could be found relaxing and watching the movie "Iron Man" on both weekends.

According to both Moore and Hernandez, the buzz about this custom home reached others within the building community who came by to see what the fuss was

"We had one builder who said he had to come over here and see it because people kept talking about it," he said.

Roman columns with a Venetianplaster finish surround the master bedroom's jetted tub.

The master bedroom, located in the front of the house, has easy access to the large courtyard and views of the Organ Mountains.

The large great room includes a dominant fireplace accented with inlaid stone, heavy wooden beams and two sets of double doors leading to the courtyard.

Want to go tankless?

Tankless water heater is an efficient option

Housing is moving toward creating an eco-friendly environment, and energy efficiency within the home can start with a tankless hot water heater.

How popular is the tankless water heater? According to Google, there were 201,000 queries on "tankless water heater" performed in August.

It might be a surprise, but tankless water heaters are not new. They have not been popular in American homes, but are common almost everywhere else in the world.

To learn more about the Rinnai tankless hot water heater, I asked Bruce Rowden at Ferguson Plumbing in Las Cruces to answer some of the most frequently asked questions.

Q: How much will a tankless water heater save a typical family of four on energy bills?

A: For most families, installing a tankless water heater will result in substantial savings on utility bills. Plus some gas/propane models qualify for a $300 energy-tax credit. The average annual operating costs are about $165 to $170. Much of the cost of heating water with a standard tank-type water heater results from heat being lost through the walls and top of the tank. With the tankless system, you only draw water as you need it. If you do not use hot water, the unit does not come on, saving you money.

Q: How does the Rinnai work?

A: A typical hot-water heater holds only so many gallons of water and the tank maintains a constant-heat temperature. The Rinnai has a Continuum system that quickly heats water.

The water flows through the heat exchanger giving consistent water temperature for as long as needed. For example, when the faucet is turned on, the water flows through the heat exchanger, and when the faucet is turned off, the Continuum shuts off until needed again.

Q: What are the drawbacks to a tankless water heater?

A: The tankless water heater is instantaneous hot water and is limited by the heating capacity of the unit. Depending upon the heating capacity or size of the unit, you may not be able to take two showers while running the clothes washer. However, the tankless water heater can supply enough hot water for endless showers. Whereas, with the old technology, a tank-type water heater can run out of water due to the size of the tank.

Q: Is the tankless water heater expensive to install?

A: In new construction, the cost to install is about the same as conventional tank install. Replacing a tank water heater in an existing home with an indoor tankless hot water heater takes a few extra steps, and you'll need additional circuits and wiring to a tankless unit. Because tankless water heaters house more powerful burners than their conventional tank counterparts, they require larger gas lines.

Q: What is the difference in size and space requirements for a Rinnai?

A: About the size of a medicine cabinet. The Rinnai tankless water heaters are 24 inches by 14 inches with a depth of 9 inches. It can be installed inside or outside and weighs 48 pounds and is approved for natural as well as propane gas. The life expectancy is 20 years compared to the water heater of 10 years.

Thanks Bruce for your insight. For more information on the tankless hot water heaters, contact Bruce Rowden of Unlike traditional water heaters, Rinnai tankless water heaters only draw water as the homeowner needs it. If they do not use hot water, the unit does not come on, which in turn saves them money.

The benefits of ceramic blades

Don't let pesky potatoes give you a hard time in the kitchen

By BETHANY CONWAY

When it comes to peeling potatoes, cucumbers and other fruits and veggies, old, rusty peeler designs never seem to do the trick. Sometimes, the frustration makes the impatient chef turn to sharper options such as knives, and this can be dangerous. Plus, these old peelers have never been attractive additions in the kitchen. Remember the old slinky peelers that actually had to take up counter space in the kitchen just to operate?

Imagine if there was a peeler that was attractive easy to use that was attractive, easy to use and could stay sharp for years without rusting. The latest line of unique, ceramic-bladed peelers does just that and also conquers peeling tasks with ease.

What is it?

Coming

several

won't rust and will stay sharp for years. Using an ultra-sharp, advanced-ceramic blade that won't rust, pit or corrode and will remain sharp for years, new ceramic vertical peelers are designed to be fast and ergonomic. Renowned for their exceptional technical characteristics, these "ultra blades" are made of ceramic material that is ground into a micro-fine powder, made into slurry and poured into a machine where it is subjected to 100 tons of pressure and molded.

Following the molding process, the blades are heated at a temperature of more than 1,000 degrees, surface finished and buffed. The blades are then precision-polished, honed and sharpened using diamond wheels to create the cutting edge. The result is a zirconium oxide blade that is extremely sharp, durable and close to diamond in hardness.

How does it work?

Like any sharp kitchen gadget, the ceramic peeler should be used carefully. For safety reasons, when peeling an item that is being held in the hands, the blade should be kept still, and the item should be pushed against it. If a potato is grasped in the left hand and the peeler in the right, the thumb of the right hand is used to push the potato backwards against the blade, turning it slightly so that it digs in and removes the potato skin.

How much does it cost?

For the technical nature of this little gadget, one would think it would come at a hefty price, but it actually retails for about $10.

Ceramic peelers are only the beginning. These efficient, rust-free blades are now available in peelers, slicers, graters and grinders to help with numerous preparation tasks within the kitchen. There are even ceramic scissors.

Sweet Potato Bake

3 cups cold mashed sweet potatoes (without added milk and butter)

1 cup sugar

1/2 cup milk

1/4 cup butter or margarine, softened

3 eggs

teaspoon salt

1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Topping:

1/2 cup packed brown sugar

1/2 cup chopped pecans

1/4 cup all-purpose flour 2 tablespoons cold butter or margarine

In a mixing bowl, beat sweet potatoes, sugar, milk, butter, eggs, salt and vanilla until smooth. Transfer to a greased 2-quart baking dish. In a small bowl, combine brown sugar, pecans and flour; cut in butter until crumbly. Sprinkle over potato mixture. Bake, uncovered, at 325 degrees for 45-50 minutes or until golden brown.

Saguaro's female builder team breaks ground on their first custom home nated by men.

With each woman bringing her own unique skills and expertise to the table, they find strength in each other and work together to produce a quality product.

After receiving her general contractor's license in early 2008, Benavi-dez and her two good friends opened their company in April, celebrating the ground breaking of their first home on career, Benavidez said she knew that female builders were few and far between.

From the beginning of her building

"At the PSI office where you get your license in Albuquerque, I was very surprised to see people taking extra pictures of me and putting them up on the wall like, 'Oh my gosh it's a girl," she said.

Drafting is something that always came naturally to Benavidez, who designed her parents' home when she was only 19 and received her degree in architectural drafting from New Mexico State University shortly after. After designing floor plans for local builders through her long-standing business Elite Home Design, Benavidez isn't afraid to admit that working in the field has required some adjustments.

"There is a big difference between designing a home in the office and actually coming out here to the field and making it work," she said. "I am going to be quite honest, there are no girls out here except for me.

Still, she finds that she has fit in well on the job site and isn't afraid to do the hard labor.

"I am a very down-to-Earth person. I don't mind digging or getting dirty," she said. "Being bilingual is a blessing. It has opened me many doors because most of the crews out here are Spanish speaking."

While Benavidez juggles her days between Saguaro and Elite Home Designs, Miller-Hernandez has her hands full as well working as a Realtor with Century 21 Drue Self Real Estate and her interior design company, RMH Interior Designs.

The goodness of grapes

Spring is not the only time to enjoy this flavorful fruit

By Bethany Conway

Grapes, one of the oldest cultivated fruits, can be a flavorful option in the kitchen. Coming in numerous varieties, these little berries are best known as an essential element used in the creation of one of the most historic substances known to man – wine. Just like the ancient Greeks and the Romans, people throughout the world, including those at the local wine festivals, still enjoy stomping grapes with their feet.

Growing in large bunches, grapes are classified in two ways: table or wine grapes. In general, wine grapes are seeded and are not considered good substitutes for table grapes. Virtually all wine grapes provide tastes similar to the wines they make. For table grapes, one has more than 50 varieties from which to choose, but seedless grapes tend to be preferred.

While grapes are a poor source of vitamin C, they are a great source of acid derivatives known as nonbioflavonoids. One important nonbioflavonoid in grape skin is called resveratrol.

Though the name is long, the explanation is quite simple. Resveratrol is a plant-specific enzyme that exists in 72 plant species, such as grapes, peanuts and pine trees. Grapes are the most abundant source of this health-promoting

In clinical studies, this ingredient has proved to provide better anti-inflammatory effects than well-established antiinflammatory drugs. Grape skin extracts are even reported to inhibit cell growth of certain cancers.

Grapes have been used for treating metabolism disorders, liver, kidney and lung disorders and cardiovascular problems. Grapes are also reported to improve metabolism and have diuretic and light

Used in face creams and skin treatments, grape skin also has tannic substances and essential oils. One company in France actually uses surplus grapes from champagne vineyards to create a skin cream that retails at $130 a jar.

Perhaps the easiest way to take in the goodness of grapes is with a glass of grape juice every day, which over time is reported to lower high blood pressure.

Along with serving a healthy snack of cheese, grapes and crackers, here are some suggestions on how to use this vinegrown fruit around the house.

1. Make a centerpiece: Using fresh, oversized grapes and fall foliage, one can create a centerpiece reminiscent of ancient Rome but perfect for a last-minute gathering. Begin by gathering bunches of grapes like red globe and autumn royal, two widely available varieties known for their large size. Arrange the grapes as desired on a large dish, allowing a few to drape over the side, then add the fall foliage to give the piece contrast.

2. Make raisins: Essential in trail mixes, salads and muffins, dried fruits are made using one of the oldest methods of preserving food, whether it's turning grapes into raisins or fresh figs, dates, apricots and plums into their dried coun-

Around-the-house item: grapes

freshly washed grapes on a tray covered with paper towel or cheesecloth and cover them with another layer of paper towel or cheesecloth to protect them from birds and bugs. Set the tray outside in the sun and let nature go to work.

The whole tray may need to be covered with a strainer or a screen to prevent flies from landing on the grapes. They dry up more each day, increasing in sweetness. The process should take about one week depending on the sunlight and

3. Make homemade wine: Anyone who has attended a wine tasting or appreciated a good glass of wine has entertained the notion of creating their own special reserve. Fortunately, with the increased interest in everything related to wine, home winemaking has become a very popular hobby. New stores and online retailers specializing in home winemaking and home brewing supplies are increasingly common, and there are many books, periodicals and websites now available for aspiring winemakers. Though the process of wine making is fairly straightforward, professionals say that it is not for the faint of heart.

Homemade wines require months and

times years to reach their full drinking

4. Plant grapes in the garden: To add a new element to the garden, try planting a batch of grapes that can live in the Southwest environment. Grapes need full sunlight and high temperatures to ripen, so plant on southern slopes, the south side of windbreaks or the south sides of buildings. Avoid northern slopes and low ground since these will be cooler throughout the growing season, delaying ripening of the fruit. Choose deep, welldrained soils to avoid standing water in the spring and encourage early growth. Grapes should be planted in the spring and approximately 6 to 8 feet apart. Dig a hole large enough to spread the root system out without bending the roots. Do not plant too deeply. Spread the roots and cover them completely with soil.

An easy and healthy snack, grapes contain ingredients reported to improve certain medical disorders.

The tarantula hawk wasp, the state insect of New Mexico, gets its name from its hawk-like hunting process.

State insect was chosen through democratic process

Elementary school in New Mexico led the charge in 1989

For this week's column, with Election Day earlier this week and the selection of a new President of the United States, I stumbled across the story of the tarantula hawk wasp and how a similar democratic process led to its rise as the state insect of New Mexico.

Prior to this week, I was unaware that

Despite being a

from afar.

New Mexico chose this unusual insect in 1989 to become the state's official insect. The insect's selection was prompted by a group of sixth-graders from Edgewood, N.M., who were doing some research on states that had adopted state insects.

Seeing that the state did not have one, they decided to select three insects as candidates and went so far as to mail ballots to all schools in New Mexico for a statewide election. After the tarantula hawk wasp won, elected state officials honored what the children did by what the children did by officially adopting the insect statewide.

Despite being a beautiful insect, this powerful and deadly tarantula should be observed from afar. Named for its hawklike hunting process, this wasp can be up to two-inches long, which makes it one of the world's largest wasps. When this wasp flies, its unique long legs hover underneath a gorgeous metallic blueblack body and deep orange wings.

Male adult tarantula hawks have no stinger and eat only nectar, pollen and fruit while females will hunt tarantulas to feed their young. Amazingly enough, despite its beauty, the female's sting is considered the most painful of any North American insect; however, they tend to sting only when provoked or handled.

Early fall is when females begin hunting their prey. They gaze over the desert floor, tapping their antennae on the ground in an attempt to pick up a tarantula's scent. Upon finding a tarantula in an underground den, the wasp will either drum the ground in an attempt to entice the spider out, or enter the den to flush out the occupant. The wasp must then overcome its enormous prey by stinging the tarantula on the underside, where the legs join the body.

Instead of killing the tarantula, the venom only causes paralysis. The wasp then drags the tarantula to a burrow, stuffs it down the hole, and then lays her eggs on top of the paralyzed spider. Several days later the eggs hatch, and the larvae feed on the still-living tarantula. When the larvae mature, they metamorphose into adult wasps to complete the cycle.

As far as I know, no recount is needed 19 years later – the tarantula hawk wasp is truly one of a kind.

Finally! A pod for Pepper

Celebratory recipes of the baby variety

Pepper's pod finally arrived! Seventeen days ago, my daughter Heather gave birth to a healthy baby girl, whom I nicknamed – nine months ago – "Pod." We agreed that Pod would call Grandma (that's me!) "Pepper." I haven't held her yet but hopefully soon.

My daughter, who lives in England, and I have kept in close contact throughout these long months. I asked the "royal" family to call - day or night - when Pod arrived. Around mid-morning on Oct. 21, I received the news: "Pod's here!"

"A girl pod or a boy pod?" I asked. "Elsie." Photos soon flooded my email inbox.

On the chile heat scale of one to 10, I'd say Pod is already a 10. She's absolutely adorable – gorgeous – a knockout. I bestowed Elsie with the highest pepper honor: "Pod Elsie." Pod Elsie weighed in at six pounds, 11 ounces – now that's a heavy pod for a pepper. In celebration of Pepper's first pod, recipes of the tiny bite variety are in order.

Pancakes Fit for a Pod

2-1/2 cups all-purpose flour 1 cup (6-ounces) semi-sweet chocolate mini morsels teaspoon ancho powder 1 tablespoon baking powder 1/2 teaspoon salt 1-3/4 cups milk 2 large eggs 1/3 cup vegetable oil 1/3 cup packed brown sugar 1/4 cup powdered sugar, for sprinkling 2 cups fresh strawberries, sliced

Combine flour, morsels, ancho powder, baking powder and salt in large bowl. Combine milk, eggs, vegetable oil and brown sugar in a medium bowl; add to flour mixture. Stir just until moistened; batter may be lumpy.

Heat griddle or skillet over medium heat; brush lightly with vegetable oil. Pour 1/4 cup of batter onto hot griddle; cook until bubbles begin to burst. Turn and cook about 1 minute longer or until golden. Repeat with remaining batter. Sprinkle with powdered sugar; top with strawberries. (Adapted from razzledazzle.com)

Pod-a-Cado Dip

3 ripe avocados

3 tablespoons lemon juice

1 cup sour cream

1 package taco seasoning mix

2 (15-ounce) cans fat-free refried beans

1 (4-ounce) can chopped green chiles or 4 fresh green chiles roasted, peeled, seeded and chopped

3 ripe plum tomatoes, coarsely chopped

1/2 cup scallions, chopped 1-1/2 cups grated cheddar cheese Plain or flavored tortilla chips

Cut the avocados in half lengthwise and remove the pits. Using a spoon, remove the "meat" and place in a small bowl. Mash avocados with a fork. Stir in the lemon juice; add salt and pepper to taste.

In another small bowl, combine the sour cream and taco seasoning mix. Stir to blend well.

Spread the refried beans in an even layer on a large round platter. Spread the mashed avocado on top of the beans. Cover with the sour cream. Scatter the chopped olives, chiles, tomatoes, and scallions over the sour cream. Top with the grated cheese.

Pepper's Sour Cream Cheddar Cheese Dip

1-1/2 cup sour cream 1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese 1/4 cup finely chopped onions 3 tablespoons minced jalapeño peppers 1/4 teaspoon salt 1/8 teaspoon red pepper sauce (more to preference) 1 tablespoon milk

Blend all ingredients. If necessary, add another tablespoon of milk for a smoother consistency. Cover, refrigerate at least 1 hour. Makes 2 cups.

Tiny Bite Salsa Dip

1 cup mayonnaise 1 cup sour cream Juice of 3 limes 4 cloves garlic, peeled and crushed

Royally Spiked Pudding

1/2 pint milk

1/2 pint breadcrumbs

2 eggs

2 or 3 tablespoons raspberry jam

STAINMASTER

1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper or to baby bite taste

6 teaspoons butter

1 lemon

1/4 cup baker's sugar

Boil the milk with the butter and pour over breadyolks of the eggs, the grated rind of the lemon and the sugar. Pour into a buttered baking dish or casserole and bake until set. Then take out of the oven and cover with the jam mixed with cayenne pepper. Make a meringue of the whites of the eggs and spread over the top. Bake in oven until top is a pale brown

Elsie's First Bite of Sweet Pod

This recipe calls for petit four molds or individual baking tins.

2 sticks butter

7 ounces good-quality dark chocolate

1-1/4 cup sugar

5 eggs

1 rounded tablespoon all-purpose flour

1-1/2 teaspoon ground chile, New Mexico red to taste and desired heat level the chocolate in a small saucepan or in a bowl in the microwave. If using the microwave, melt in 10-second intervals to avoid burning. Stir frequently.

Transfer chocolate-butter mix into a bowl, add sugar and mix with a wooden spoon. Cool slightly. Add the eggs one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Add flour and chile powder and mix well.

Pour mixture in petit four molds. Bake 10 to 12 minutes. The top should look set, but the inside should still be on the soft side. (To check doneness, insert toothpick. If it comes out "clean," it's done.)

Let the mini bites cool slightly and then turn them out on a rack to cool completely. Continue baking the other batches and repeat cooling steps. Store in a plastic container and refrigerate overnight. Prior to serving, let bites stand at room temperature for about an hour. Yields about 70 tiny bites.
