New regents for NMSU

Anaya, Gallagher, Kellum out; Anaya, Gonzales, Salopek in

By TODD G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

During former New Mexico State University President Michael Martin's send-off last Summer, regents Chairman Robert "Bob" Gallagher jokingly predicted Gov. Bill Richardson wasn't going to re-appoint him when his term expired this year.

GALLAGHER

He was right. Richardson on Mon-He was right. Richardson on Monday, Nov. 24, announced three new appointments to the New Mexico State University Board of Regents, replacing Gallagher as well as Regent Steve Anaya and Student Regent Ed Kellum, whose terms were all expiring Dec. 21

ing Dec. 31.

The new student regent will be Christopher Anaya, a sophomore government major and son of Regent Steve Anava.

The other new appointments are NMSU graduates Thomas R. Salopek and Javier M. Gonzales.

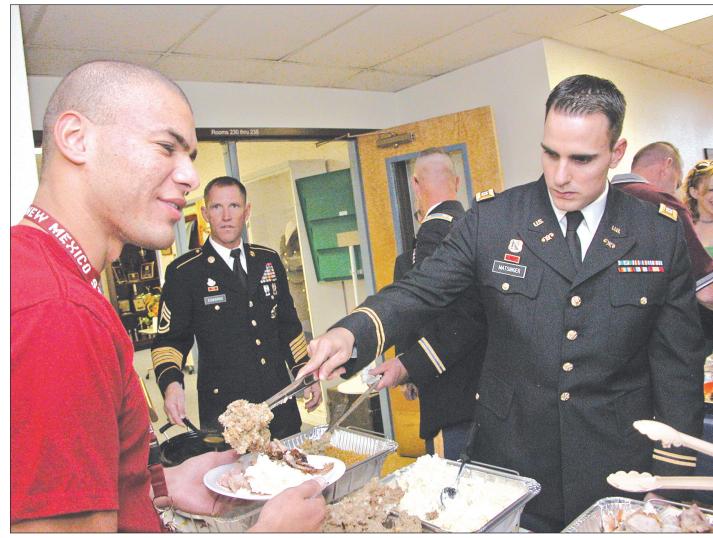

Thomas "Dick" Salopek is a pecan farmer who owns two farms in the Las Cruces area. His bachelor's degree in agronomy and soil science was from NMSU.

"The Salopeks are one of the prime agricultural families in New Mexico,' Richardson said. "Dickie will add this kind of perspective to the regents."

According to the governor's announcement, Gonzales has a broad background in media and government. He is president of IronStone, a small

New name for Desert Park group expands learning role, resources By TODD G. DICKSON

Signs from U.S. Highway 70 that guide people down a dusty road to the expanse of preserved wild land north of Las Cruces still call it the Chihuahuan Desert Nature Park, not by its new moniker as the Asombro Institute for Science Education.

But the name change is really more about the resources, people and learning offered through the 960-acre park, according to Executive Director Stephanie Bestelmeyer. Though the park aims to educate all visitors – from school children to curious retirees taking a break from their travels - about the often hard-tospot beauty and life in the desert, the nonprofit organization that created the nature park out of extra, unfenced land south of the Jornada Experimental Range is about more than just creating walking trails with displays

Besides establishing the desert park, the Asombro organization develops classroom materials, trains teachers, offers programs to the public and supports scientific study to improve science literacy.

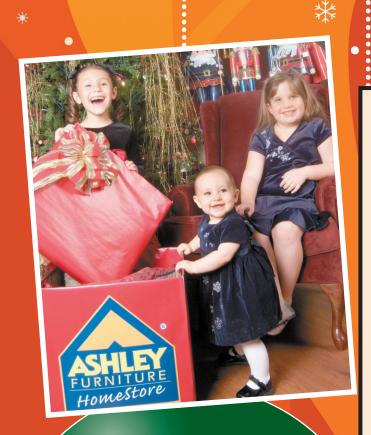

But just being known as the Chihuahuan Desert Nature Park didn't adequately describe all these activities. With the help of a consulting firm, asombro - the Spanish word for wonder - was selected along with institute for science education.

"Asombro fit perfect," said Bestelmeyer, who holds a doctorate in biology, studied wolves and taught in middle schools in Colorado before falling under the spell of living in the Chihuahuan Desert. "We're not only about the desert," she said. "What we do is about how we learn new things through science.

Asombro's efforts have grown from a group that formed a nonprofit organization in the 1990s to create the desert park, which was originally part of the even more expansive Jornada Experimental Range, but was sectioned off by a mistake in fencing. In 1998, the land was officially made a park for the group to

With a little help from her family and friends, Olga Granado – second from left – distributed turkeys Tuesday, Nov. 25, to families she's come to know well through her work with Prison Family Services. In two days, they were able to obtain 210 turkeys and 30 gift cards for needy families. Pictured with Granado in her driveway before making the deliveries, from left, are her son Fernando Corona, Teresita Soto and Rocio Gilbert. Granado was the director of the Frank Villegas Hospitality House at the Southern New Mexico Correction Facility, a reassuring place for families of inmates for visitations. She is now battling cancer and an estimated $7,000 is being raised to help her pay for her next round of surgery. Donations can be sent to the Olga Granado Benefit at Bank of the West, account number 294037346. Besides working at the hospitality house, Granado's tireless volunteerism recently was recognized with a state award. Her desire to help continues, despite her struggle with cancer.

This vacant lot on the corner of Central Road and Mesa Drive is destined to become a 73-unit apartment complex unless objecting neighbors can convince city council the proposal amounts to incompatible spot zoning. The city's planning and zoning commission recently approved the zone-change request for the project.

East Mesa apartment complex plan has neighbors concerned

Planned amenities cater to military families

By Todd G. Dickson

The neighborhood surrounding a 9.6acre vacant lot on the corner of Central Road and Mesa Drive are a mixture of single-family homes, mostly sitting on eighth- to quarter-acre lots.

That lot could soon be turned into a gated 73-unit apartment complex complete with a swimming pool, barbecue pits and putting green, linked by walking and jogging paths. Geared to providing apartment living to accommodate expected future troop growth at White Sands Missile Range – very near Oñate High School where most of those troop's teen children are expected to attend – the apartment complex won't be possible without a zone change from single-family residential (medium density) to multi-dwelling (low density).

Late last month, the Las Cruces Planning and Zoning Commission approved the change, though in a split vote because of objecting neighbors.

Leading the charge against the development is Jose D. Rodriguez, who lives near the lot and says such an apartment complex is totally out of character with the surrounding homes. "There's nothing like it in the area," he said.

Besides citing the proposal as "spot zoning," Rodriguez questions whether the proposal has gone through the proper prity process. For example, he can't find city process. For example, he can't find evidence in the proposal's case file that it went through the city Development Review Committee before being brought before P&Z. He also has questions about the property ownership.

A Portland, Ore., company, More Gelt Holdings LLC is developing the apartment complex. The company did hire Denton Ventures of Las Cruces for a traffic study that says the project wouldn't add a significant increase in traffic to the area. Rodriguez disagrees with the

The proposal comes up before the city council for a first reading on Dec. 15 and the council could take action by Jan. 26.

Pink ladies offer thanks for support

This year's campaign raises $600,000 for cancer research

The Las Cruces Bulletin has graciously donated an entire page in this week's newspaper (page A15) to allow us to thank the sponsors and contributors who helped raise more than $600,000 during the 2008 "NMSU Aggies Are Tough Enough to Wear Pink" campaign. As we reviewed list after list with the names of the hundreds of sponsors and contributors who made this possible, we realized that simply saying "thank you" was not enough. So here is some background.

In 2007, the "NMSU Aggies Are Tough Enough to Wear Pink" campaign was developed as a breast cancer fundraiser tied to NMSU football. Our goals were simple: to raise breast cancer research funds and to raise breast cancer awareness. Happily, our first year's work concluded with a contribution to Cowboys for Cancer Research of more than $284,000.

In January 2008, as we began work on year two, our fundraising and awareness goals remained the same. We also challenged ourselves to reach out to touch lives in Las Cruces and southern New Mexico. Our first job was to surround ourselves with the best and brightest volunteers in this community. With that done, we asked our 2007 title sponsors, Memorial Medical Center, MountainView Regional Medical Center and New Mexico State University, to again sponsor our event. With their usual generosity, all three agreed.

In late summer, we launched our "Who Do You Wear Pink For?" awareness campaign thanks to the combined efforts of the Las Cruces Sun-News, Las Cruces Bulletin, Radio of Las Cruces (KGRT, KHQT, KKVS and KSNM), Comcast Cable and KVIA-TV. In the days preceding the Oct. 18 Aggie football game, the spirit of the Las Cruces community kicked in as events began falling into place.

- NMSU's Department of Art hosted a special gallery show. Proceeds from a special play penned by NMSU's Ruth Cantrell were designated for our cause.
- More than 500 luminarias lit the sky over Aggie Memorial Stadium in a special ceremony remembering breast cancer survivors and victims.
- More than 300 men attended a luncheon hosted by KVIA-TV's Rick Cabrera, featuring national Men Against Breast Cancer spokesman Marc Heyison. More than 300 women attended

Polar bears aplenty

I am getting really tired of these environmentalists who challenge our way of life every day. Patti Graff got her polar bear point published when even the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) says the population of polar bears is in fact increasing dramatically in places. She even got in some factually deficient comments about electric cars, but that can be another letter.

Today there are about 25,000 of the furry white critters, more than any time in the 20th

The World Wildlife Fund found that of the 20 polar bear populations worldwide, very few are decreasing. And guess what? Those are in areas where air temperatures have fallen, not risen.

Hmm. We're getting more bears where it's getting warmer.

Now, this does not give us free rein to pollute. We should be working for cleaner fuels and fewer emissions. But please, let's be fair and honest in your arguments.

Yes, we know, it doesn't fit the global warming story line. But that's why we call it a "story line" and not a fact.

Editor's note: The letter writer cited the following URL as his source for polar bear statistics: www.worldwildlife.org/species/finder/ polarbear/polarbear.html.

Transparency questioned

At the Nov. 3 Las Cruces City Council meeting there was an item on the consent agenda regarding Groundwork Doña Ana. This item was pulled by two councillors for discussion, which was definitely necessary as we did have a discussion for over an hour.

At the beginning of the presentation, we were given a 69-page appendix that was not included in our packet, which referenced more information such as interviews with stakeholders, assessments of activities and funding to name a few.

Also, after part of the discussion and some very good questions, it was apparent that we would be needed to also approve a Memorandum of Understanding at a December meeting.

Robert Garza, assistant city manager, suggested to table the item for 30 days so that more information could be disseminated to the council and the public, plus have the memorandum and resolution at the same time, but both attempts failed.

My objection is not the content or the intention of Groundwork Doña Ana, but the fact that over the past year we have all asked for transparency and that is not what happened in this case. There were no briefings to the council or the public before the request for a resolution on this project. This is not an extension of a water or sewer line or a facility that has been on the Capital Improvement Plan, but a new subject matter that has not been presented to anyone in an open meeting that will result in changes to many areas of our community for the long term. All we needed was 30 more days.

Law enforcement officers seldom punished for abuse

Who is representing the people?

What remedies do people have if they are mistreated by law enforcement officers? Last week an interim legislative committee considered the question and heard evidence that there isn't much that can be done under present law.

Testimony indicated that complaints to local officials seldom result in any action. Albuquerque has some police oversight mechanisms, but no one present recommended them as being models others should use.

Generally, there appeared to be agreement that law enforcement misconduct should be handled at the local level but that most attempts to do so are not working because local officials tend to support each other.

Likewise, internal affairs investigations by police departments seldom result in any penalties against officers. According to testimony, internal reviews protect law enforcement from the public and there is no mechanism for protect-ing the public from police misconduct. The New Mexico Law Enforcement Academy trains and certifies law enforcement officers and can decertify them after receiving and investigating complaints. Typically, it is a cumbersome, slow-moving process that doesn't result in many decertifications.

Arthur Ortiz, director of the academy, testified to the committee that he is speeding up the process but that failure of local sheriffs and police chiefs to report misconduct is his biggest problem.

Paul Borunda, a citizen from Las Cruces, presented the panel with numerous instances of police misconduct that he said have gone unpunished in Las Cruces because of interlocking relationships among local law enforcement officials. He recounted his efforts to find anyone at the local or state level to take any responsibility for overseeing law enforcement misconduct.

Borunda also spoke of efforts to get Attorney General Gary King involved in law enforcement misconduct, but his reply was that his job is to protect the state and not the people.

King then told the committee that his client is the state and not its people. He said misconduct charges should be taken to local elected officials and if they aren't handled to the satisfaction of the public, they can be turned out of office at the next election.

Committee Chairman Sen. Cisco McSorley of Albuquerque complimented Borunda on his tireless efforts doing what no local or state agencies do.

McSorley concluded that since law enforcement oversight is not working at the local level, an entity should be created at the state level to oversee. investigate and punish law-enforcement misconduct. He asked King to compute the costs of establishing a state review

It seems as though our country is missing something if we can't protect our citizens from those few cases when law enforcement officers get out of hand. Our founding fathers knew the horrors of living in police states. They wanted to protect the public against such conditions.

They provided us with a judicial system to insure that protection but it is a very cumbersome and expensive process.

And if local law enforcement violates a person's civil rights, redress can't be found in local or state courts. Only federal courts handle such charges.
It seems to me I have heard attorney general candidates run for office as the people's lawyer. It sounds good in campaign material. But it's not the truth. The attorney general defends the state against its people.

Have you noticed that when the governor takes an action requiring legal defense, he hires his own lawyers to defend him. Sometimes the attorney general is on the other side of the case So who is representing the people? Both the governor and the attorney general would say they are. But are they really?
Bill White, a municipal judge from

Edgewood, east of Albuquerque, told the panel that the biggest problem with police misconduct is that Congress has made surplus military equipment available to civilian police departments, which now use that equipment in a manner that has built a paramilitary culture within police departments. Police are supposed to serve and protect the people.

Helping 'Generation Me' at Thanksgiving

Generational forces shape how today's Americans approach the celebration of the Thanksgiving holiday

By MICHAEL SWICKARD For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Americans have many different ways of viewing Thanksgiving depending on when they were born and how they were raised. I am a baby boomer, the son of a military soldier, so I grew up with plenty of training and reinforcement in the act of being aware and thankful.

My world from the very beginning was one of "please and thank you." The world I was born into, while appreciative of my talents, did not see me as the be-all endall, rather, I was a part of something greater.

I was raised to know and care about the history of our great country from the very first Thanksgiving to now. That history is an integral part of my profound thanksgiving.

Americans are divided by descriptors like baby boomers, Generation X and the most recent, "Generation Me." I have not thought much about "Generation Me" other than to view them and their music with alarm. as was done by all previous genera-

Sitting down for the Thanksgiving feast are people who bow their heads reverently and give thanks. Then there are others who mutter impatiently, "About time."

With the butter from homemade rolls on their lips, this second group, many of whom are from "Generation Me," carp about what has not come their way. Thankful? I should say not. Their mantra is, "I deserve this and more." I am painting with a wide brush, so there are Many people consider this day a day of lassitude and gluttony; another day off from work with pay. I am susceptible to such feelings. Still, I grew up with a different view of the holiday. W.J. Cameron said, "Thanksgiving, after all, is a word of action."

The holiday was my father's favorite, even above Veterans Day. As a soldier on the frontlines for several years, I suspect he carried thoughts of the times he might have died in war, and those who did. Alas, he never would tell stories, but at times he got that far-

He was all for a holiday where we gathered to celebrate something positive. He was his most talkative, not that it was much, on Thanksgiving. One winter day in Colorado Springs where we were living, he and I went to the store for a couple of last-minute things. I do not remember exactly what he said, but it was close to this:

On the spur of the moment I asked, "Which Thanksgiving did you like best?" He took a long puff on his cigarette and said meditatively, "Thanksgiving 1944 in Italy."

It was just me and him in the car. That far-away look came to his eyes. 'It was the first hot meal me and my buddies had in a while. As I was sitting there eating, I realized that the war was coming to an end and next Thanksgiving I had a good chance of being home. I was warm and full and happy. I have never been happier than at that moment.

For my normally stoic father that was more words in a row than I had heard before. We drove up to the store and he retreated back to his quiet nature. He was quite frugal with words to anyone other than those who served with him in combat. And with them they talked in code with one or two words and knowing looks.

It took me many years to really understand what he meant with his story. I give thanks that he and 16 million other Americans gave years of their time for the war so I could grow up in freedom.

I do not know how, but we baby boomers owe "Generation Me" our best effort to help them develop a sense of thanksgiving. We must not fail them.

One day, they may find thanksgiving on their lips. It will make all of the difference in their lives if they connect with Thanksgiving.

Will you? Is that a consideration when you go to last one was a joke!)

Should you? If you are in a business that sells and manufactures an American product, then you certainly hope the rest of the country prefers to buy something "Made in America." And, in these hard economic times, buying American will benefit your neighbor's job security as well.

Granted, origin is not always clear. For instance,
Toyota's headquarters is in Tokyo. It's listed on the Japanese stock exchange. It is a Japanese company. They are called foreign cars. Yet they have a manufacturing plant in Alabama! Ford Motor Co. headquarters is in Dearborn, Mich. It is on the New York Stock Exchange. Henry Ford invented it! Yet the Ford F150 pickup is built in Mexico!

Can both or either be labeled American under COOL regulations? I suspect there will eventually have to be "variations" of COOL. One of the difficulties implementing the "American Label" on beef, for example, is that packing houses process Mexican cattle that come into Texas feedlots, and use beef shipped to their plant in refrigerated trucks from packing houses in

In one days' processing it is common to hang these carcasses side by side, for ground beef to be commingled and the specific origin of each to be lost. Maybe we could establish categories like, Pure American Cool, Quasi American Cool or Possibly American Cool. It would depend on the percentage of U.S. raised beef in the mix. Other factors to be considered would be the amount of Canadian grain in the ration, the number of Mexican cowboys on the ranch or the presence of Irish whiskey behind the seat of the feedlot managers' pickup! A lot of details remain to be worked out.

There was a restaurant in Arkansas that offered squirrel stew. It was quite popular and was always crowded. One customer inquired of the owner how they could find so many squirrels?

"Well," said the owner, "We do have to cut it with a little mule meat. But," he said, "only 10 percent."

"Really," said the customer. "I guess that's fair."

"Yup," said the owner. "One mule for every 10 squirrels!"

But I wonder are they American squirrels?

County audits election

As required by New Mexico election law, Doña Ana County has audited 2 percent of its voting machines used in the Nov. 4 election to determine whether they accurately recorded votes.

The audit involves hand-counting ballots cast for president in randomly selected machines and comparing the total hand count to the number of votes counted by each machine and printed out on election night. If the difference in the count differs by more than 1.5 percent, a manual recount of all votes must be held in the legislative district where the machine in question was used.

The Doña Ana County Bureau of Elections audited three machines (2 percent of the machines used in 115 precincts). In two precincts, there was zero difference between the hand count and what the machine reported on election night. In the third machine, there was a three-vote difference out of the 336 votes counted by the machine, giving Barack Obama two votes fewer when counted by hand and John McCain one vote more when counted by hand. Translated, the machine counted votes accurately to within .0089 percent.

All three voting machines performed within the state's parameters for accuracy when recording votes on Election Day.

According to the New Mexico Secretary of State Office, each county is required to report the election audit results to the public to allay any concerns that the machines are inaccurate to the point where election results could be questioned.

Ruth will be setting policies and priorities for the commission's U.S. section of the international border, the El Paso office reported.

The IBWC is responsible for applying the boundary and water treaties between the United States and Mexico and settling differences between the two countries. The commission operates and maintains flood control levees, international storage reservoirs, diversion dams, wastewater treatment plants, an IBWC news release said.

Previously, Ruth had worked for 25 years as the IBWC Special Projects Department principal engineer, overseeing the Office of Construction Activities and the Office of Facility Planning. As principal engineer, he supervised the construction of the South Bay International Wastewater Treatment Plant in San Diego, Calif., and the development of wastewater infrastructure for Mexican border communities through a program funded by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Crime Stoppers: Man wanted in shootings

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a reward of $2,000 for information that leads to the arrest of Oswaldo Corral who is wanted for his involvement in two shootings earlier this month. Las Cruces Police

CORRAL learned that Corral, 30, was involved in a Saturday, Nov. 15, shooting in the parking lot of the Ten-Pen Alley bowling alley, formerly Sun Lanes. That shooting critically wounded a man. Two days later, on Nov. 17, the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office began investigating a shooting in Mesilla Park that claimed the life of 30-year-old Steven Apodaca. Corral has since been named a suspect in that shooting

RESERVOIR UPDATE

Warmer temperatures in the higher elevations caused the Upper Rio Grande Basin snowpack to drop to 26 percent of average, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation El Paso Field Office reported in its river advisory.

The bureau also reported that the Elephant Butte Reservoir surface was measured 14,468 acres, an increase of 789 acres. A better-than-average spring runoff and a reduction of irrigation during the summer rain season accounted for the increase, the bureau reported. $\,$

The reservoir storage figures are:

- Elephant Butte 591,364 acre-feet, an increase of 5,930 acre-feet, 30 percent of a full reservoir, 61 feet below the spillway and an elevation of 4,346 feet.
- Caballo 19,308 acre-feet, 9 percent of capacity and an increase of 552 acrefeet.

Oso Diaz, a heeler from Las Cruces, won the three-horse trailer as the high-point roper with 22 points.

Diaz is well-known to ropers. For years, he has served as arena flagman during roping events, dropping the flag when the contests end to signal the secretary to stop the timer

The saddle winners on the first day of roping were Wade Baize, No. 5 and Under category, and Jason Morris, Las Cruces, No. 6 and Higher. On the second day the winners were Shanna Ivey, Las Cruces, No. 5 and Under, and Darryl Sullivan, Las Cruces, No. 6 and Higher.

The categories are established by the U.S. Team Roping Championships, rating ropers according to their ability, from novice ropers to the top ropers in the nation to even out the competition. The ropers add up their USTRC rankings when they form a team, and they cannot exceed 15 as a team, according to the roping committee.

The payoffs with average timing on four ropings for the top three ropers in each category, starting with the header, were:

No. 15 Roping – Wade Baize and Shane Sproul, 28.44, $1,110; Preston Sharp and Wesley Reno, 28.62, $830; Greg Miller and Jason Morris, 29.35, $560.

No. 12 Roping – Greg Miller and Oso Diaz, 33.56, $1,740; Dos Landsheft and Jason Morris, 34.62, $1,160; Bo Morris and C.W. Gomez, 36.93, $900.

No. 11 Mega Roping – Larry Esmond and Jim Richards, 46.72, $2,300; Scott Eschenbrenner and Mike Acuna, 48.69, $1,700; Jared Udall and Oso Diaz, 49.17, $1,200.

No. 10 Mega Roping – Brandon Barker and Preston Tharp, 44.95, $1,900; Denny Calhoun and Bill Hudman, 51.20, $1,400; Scott Eschenbrenner and Steve Brown, 56.35, $1,000.

FFA students learn about agriculture

By MARVIN TESSNEER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

One of the rewards of teaching vocational agriculture at Las Cruces High School is watching young people develop their skills, not only in class, but in careers and family life after graduation, three teachers said.

The Las Cruces program has 350 students.

The teachers are Star Dean, horticulture; Phillip Beard, farm mechanics and livestock; and Patrick Howard, environmental science, forestry, wildlife and animal science.

"It's a great opportunity to introduce children to the world of agriculture," Dean said. Her course covers greenhouse production, landscaping, floral design and home maintenance.

"I like to start students out in the classroom and watch them develop and mature," Beard said. "I like to see them come back and see them in successful careers and happy marriages."

"What I enjoy while working with students the most is seeing students mature and becoming productive citizens." Howard said.

tive citizens," Howard said.

His program covers animal genetics, nutrition and reproduction with beef cattle, swine, sheep and horses. He also instructs his students in large animal skeletal and circulation systems and endocrine glands and hormones.

Among local FFA youths' recent accomplishments was winning the Horse Evaluation Career Development gold emblem at the national convention in Indianapolis. The team members were Erin Van Pelt, Katy Rosencrans, Jodi Lindsay, Veronica Alba, Erica Duran and Joslyn Beard.

The Las Cruces FFA Chapter also won a silver emblem in the Environmental, Natural Resources Career Development Event. The team members were Bryan Weaver, Chelsea Howard, Katie Grandle and Taylor Weaver. Howard was their adviser. The students won the award with environmental analysis and soil testing water analysis.

Area embraces bike giveaway

Jim Franklin charity effort takes off

By Todd Dickson

Despite tight economic times, people are generous when it comes to giving needy kids some wheels.

Last year, local firefighters and others in public safety began participating in the Jim Franklin's Bike Giveaway, created in 2003 by Jim Franklin and Pete Camacho both with Rio Rancho Public Safety.

That first year, 50 bikes were given out. This year, with local firefighters participating in the "Rumble in Rio," an annual charity boxing event for the program, Las Cruces now has 100 bikes to give out, and organizers are predicting they may even double that amount by the time the bicycles are given out Dec. 13 in the parking lot of Rawsons Builders Supply, 2355 E. Nevada Ave.

To donate to the bike giveaway, call 635-6210 or email LCBikeGiveaway @vahoo.com.

Along with bicycles, the children also will be issued helmets. The cost for the bicycles range from $40 to $100, depending on the age of the child. Local agencies that service needy families are providing information about the number of bikes needed. All of the donations benefit the children.

Seeing Green

Green is everywhere, but what does it mean? Green means environmentally friendly products that reduce harmful emissions of Carbon Dioxide CO² or lower the amount of energy used. It can also mean keeping "green" in your pocket. Sun-Tech Services, Inc., wants you to know it pays to Go Green!

Going Green can mean lower monthly energy bills. Sun-Tech has a ProgressivTube Passive Solar Heating System. Don't let the name fool you, it's not complicated!

What the Passive Solar Heating System does is "pre-heat" your water with heat generated by solar panels. Although simple in design, the ProgressivTube can save you up to 80% of your costs for heating water for your family. Plus the ProgressivTube doesn't require pumps, controls, or any mechanical or electrical devices to operate.

Another advantage to going green is the available tax credits. Did you know that there is now a 30% solar tax credit, which can help reduce the cost of your Passive Solar Heating System? Sun-Tech has many green products, so you can go green and save!

In addition to getting information about environmentally friendly solar systems from Sun-Tech, you can also learn about highly efficient, green KINETICO salt-free water softeners and Reverse Osmosis systems. Right now at Sun-Tech, you can save 10% on a salt-free water softener and K-5 Reverse Osmosis system from KINETICO!

Sun-Tech Services has been providing "Green" solar hot water heating systems and KINETICO high-efficiency salt-free water softening and reverse osmosis drinking systems to the Las Cruces area for over 25 years.

Tour and meeting on University corridor planned for Tuesday

City wants citizens to 'think about' future of street bordering NMSU

The City of Las Cruces will host a walking tour of University Avenue from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 2. The tour will begin in front of the Toucan Market, 1701 E. University Ave., in the Pan Am Plaza and move west to the intersection of Main Street and University Avenue.

The purpose of the tour is to invite eople to think about what they like about University Avenue and what they would like improved or changed.

There will also be information on the planning process and what elements of the area can be built upon and what needs improvement. The tour is part of the public planning process currently underway for reviewing and updating the University Avenue Corridor Plan and Zoning.

In addition to the tour, there will be a public meeting from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Wednesday, Dec. 3, at Corbett Center on the second-floor lobby. The meeting will initiate design options for the University Avenue streetscape and roadway and review the Jordan Gateway Project for New Mexico State University.

The purpose of the meeting is to start reviewing and drafting conceptual designs for the University Avenue roadway, intersections and streetscape from I-25 to I-10 and also to receive comments regarding the development options for NMSU's Jordan Gateway Project. Staff from NMSU and the city will be on hand to assist the public's participation in activities that will guide the planning process for these projects. Property ownuniversity staff, faculty and students are encouraged to attend.

The existing University Avenue Plan and Zoning Code are available for review at the City Clerk's Office, 200 N. Church St. and online at www.las-cruces.org/cd. Individuals who are unable to attend the meeting and have comments or questions may call Susan Lowell at 528-3079 or email slowell@las-cruces.org. People with disabilities who need special accommodations to fully participate in the walking tour may call the Las Cruces Community Development Department at least 48 hours in advance at 528-3043.

The TTY number is 528-3016.

Promise for Success meetings set

The Promise for Success Initiative will hold two public meetings in Doña Ana County on Wednesday, Dec. Community members will learn about new proposals to support youth and families and provide feedback to shape the planning and implementation of the new proposals.

The Promise for Success Initiative is a planning effort to create a comprehensive, community-based strategic approach to reduce the incidence and severity of delinquency, abuse and neglect, truancy, substance abuse, gangs, runaways and school failure.

The Promise for Success Initiative was initiated by the Gadsden Independent School District (GISD) and the Children's Court Division of the Third Judicial District.

"The Promise for Success Initiative demonstrates Doña Ana County's commitment to a brighter future for our children," Third Judi-cial District Court Judge Fernando Macias said. "It is my hope that the greatest impact of this process will be to improve opportunities for the young people."

In September, members of Doña Ana's school districts, judicial system, state agencies, local government, service providers, the faith community and others participated in a two-day planning session to review local quantitative and qualitative data, learn about national best practices and develop a strategic plan to improve outcomes for children and their families in Doña Ana.

The meetings will be Wednesday, Dec. 3, from 6 to 8 p.m. at Gadsden High School, 6301 Highway 28, in Anthony and Alma d'arte Charter School, 402 W. Court Ave.

Representatives La Clinica and Ben Archer Clinic will be on site offering free health services including blood pressure and sugar testing. Transportation will be provided to the meeting in Anthony.

Students needed for dual-credit classes

Free online NMSU class teaches science and math

By Todd G. Dickson
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Two free online New Mexico State University classes to give high school students dual credit while learning how math principles come into play at the molecular level or in hydraulic engineering are in need of students to enroll as soon as possible.

To offer these spring semester classes, NMSU needs at least 20 students signed for each, but so far only a handful of students have registered.

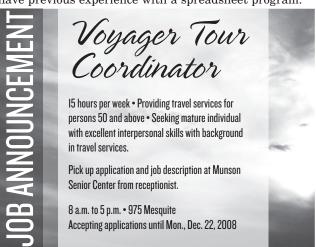

The classes are being made available through a program at NMSU called Project MESH, funded by the Department of Education with the goal of increasing the representation of minority students – particularly minority women – in science, engineering and other mathematically intensive fields. The classes are open to anyone with a high school algebra II course or its equivalent as a prerequisite. They are entirely online courses. Besides being offered at no tuition cost, all materials will be available online with no cost for a textbook.

The classes are "The Mathematics of Hydraulic Engi-

The classes are "The Mathematics of Hydraulic Engineering," which earns a math and civil engineering credit and "The Molecular World," which earns a chemistry and math credit. To register or for more information, contact Kitty Berver, director of Distance Education, at 646-5872, kberver@nmsu.edu, or David Finston, professor of mathematical sciences, at 646-2637 or dfinston@nmsu.edu.

Finston said these classes will show students how mathematics can provide solutions to real-world problems and tasks.

To participate, students must have approximately nine hours a week to devote to class activities. A weekly assessment will be required. Students must have regular Internet access, and a high-speed Internet connection is recommended. Students will submit assignments using Microsoft Excel or Open Office (a free download). Tutorials will be provided, however, and students do not have to have previous experience with a spreadsheet program.

provide educational opportunities, but the name change to Asombro is very recent.

Not only is the new name more accurate, Bestelmeyer said, but it also helps the group gain additional funding. About 60 percent of the group's funding comes from competitive grants, with the rest coming from a mix of individual contributions, fundraising and program fees, which are kept low to make Asombro's programs more affordable to schools and the public, Bestelmeyer said. Asombro's staff consists of two full-time positions and one part-time position, but its efforts are supported by many volunteers.

During a field trip to the park last week, Booker T. Washington third-grade teacher Nellie Chavez said she treasures the materials and people from Asombro. Besides field trips, people like Asombro's Program Coordinator Rink Somerday frequently come to the schools with exciting activities. Chavez said Asombro offering bilingual materials is a rarity in educational programs.

When Asombro is part of the school's day, Chavez said the children are mesmerized by Asombro's hands-on activities. "The kids are having so much fun learning," she said.

In January, Asombro is offering training for middle school teachers called the Real World-Real Science Program. It will provide pre- and post-field trip activities, as well as a field trip for middle school students. The program focuses on some of the most up-to-date scientific information on global climate change and other topics. Applications are available on Asombro's website (www.asombro.org), and teachers can still sign up for the training, Bestelmeyer said.

Last weekend, Asombro's board and staff held a strategic planning meeting for the new year, including plans to host family programs at the park on astronomy, deserts and archaeology/anthropology, along with the annual Butterfly Flutterby in August. Students and teachers in kindergarten through third grade can look forward to the Chihuahuan Desert Expo in late April. Students will be able to visit hands-on activity stations to learn about the weather, plants, animals and soil of the desert.

Also, a full archaeological survey of the Chihuahuan Desert Nature Park will be completed in 2009 by board member and archaeologist Mark Sechrist.

Meanwhile, the park's next public program is the Winter Nature Walk on Dec. 20, beginning at 9 a.m. Bringing people closer to the desert is still the heart of what Asombro does, Bestelmeyer said.

"Here is this magnificent place less than 10 miles from their home," she said. "A lot of people don't really realize they live in the desert.

"The amazing thing to me about this place is I can leave our offices (in the Downtown Mall) and in less than 30 minutes, I'm out in the middle of nowhere."

The park is a place for people to slow down and see what's living in the desert outside their homes, she said.

That's what the park did for Asombro volunteer Donna Yargosz, who has been with the organization since she retired here after a career of teaching in Indiana. Like many people who came to Las Cruces because they were taken with the setting, the park has given her greater insight into the plants and animals of the desert she now lives in. Volunteering also allows her to use her teaching experience to give back, she said.

To Bestelmeyer, that's what the spirit of "Asombro" is all about – opening people's eyes to the world around them.

"I want to thank Steve Anaya, Bob Gallagher and Ed Kellum for their great service to the university," Richardson said.

Because of press reports about a perceived schism between Richardson and Gallagher – who is also president of the New Mexico Oil and Gas Association – Gallagher issued a letter Tuesday, Nov. 25, thanking Richardson for letting him serve on the regents board.

"This discussion should not be about me or about the governor or about who said what to each other, this discussion must center on continuing to move our great university forward." Gallagher wrote.

Be a Santa to a senior

Home Instead Senior Care is teaming up with nonprofit agencies and area retailers to collect, wrap and deliver gifts to lonely and needy seniors in Las Cruces.

The program runs through Dec. 22. The public is asked to visit the Christmas tree in Mesilla Valley Mall where they can pick up an ornament, buy items listed and return them unwrapped to the mall Customer Service Center, along with the ornament attached. Home Instead Senior Care will collect the gifts and enlist the volunteer help of its staff, caregivers, senior-care business associates, nonprofit workers and others to wrap and distribute the gifts to these seniors.

There will be a community gift-wrapping party on Monday, Dec. 22, and the general public is invited to come and help.

Gifts will be delivered to Gifts will be delivered to seniors in the community on Tuesday, Dec. 23. Anyone interested in Anyone interested in volunteering to help on the citywide gift-wrapping day, can contact Jan Wimsatt at 522-7133. Businesses and civic organizations are encouraged to contact the local Home Instead Senior Care office about adopting groups of seniors.

"Be a Santa to a Senior each vear sets new records in contributions of gifts to a group that often is forgotten during the hectic holi-day season," said Wimsatt, owner of the Home Instead Senior Care office serving Las Cruces. "While children are the beneficiaries of many holiday programs, people often don't think about the isolated and lonely seniors who need to be remembered as well during this season. Be a Santa to a Senior also is designed to help stimulate human contact and social interaction for older adults who are unlikely to have guests during the holidays.

The popular campaign has delivered more than 1,200 gifts to local, lessfortunate seniors and is being planned again this holiday season. Area retailers, along with agencies that serve older adults, have partnered with a local senior-care service to make sure that isolated seniors receive gifts and companionship through the Be a Santa to a Senior program.

Callejoneada celebration coming to Downtown Las Cruces

CINDI FARGO
Executive Director of
Las Cruces Downtown

Downtown Las Cruces Partnership is kicking off a new event called a "Callejoneada" in downtown Las Cruces during the WinterFest Celebration on Friday, Dec. 5. The Callejoneada is a Las Cruces version of a traditional Mexican and Spanish rambling street party with strolling mariachis and Folklorico dancers. The first event occurs from 6 to 8 p.m. Dec. 5 at the WinterFest celebration in the north block of the Downtown Mall. The event begins immediately following the Mayor's Christmas Tree Lighting.

Christmas Tree Lighting.

Musicians will make 15-minute long stops from Mountain to Las Cruces Ave. along the Mall. Downtown Callejoneada sponsors include: Innovative Touch, the D'Antonio Law Firm, COAS Books, BeYoung Hair Salon, Ruben Smith for La Esquina Plaza, the Main Street Gallery and Big Picture Studio and the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership. We all invite the public to join the traveling street musicians anywhere along the route and sing and dance along the way.

Our plan is to regularly schedule the Callejoneada event at locations throughout downtown and develop the event as a regional draw, local attraction and tourism activity with varying kinds of music throughout the years. National Geographic Traveler recently published an article on the Callejoneada celebrations occurring in many towns in Mexico. The Callejoneada will become a new tradition in Las Cruces. As the only community in the United States doing the Callejoneada – it will be a developing mark of distinction for Downtown Las Cruces.

Our student interns from New Mexico State University's Business and Entrepreneurship programs have come to assist us with the development of this event and other arts related activities. We thank Dr. David Boje and the students for their generous donation of time to kick off the Callejoneada event. Rocio Gamboa, has been our team leader on this project, along with her assistants.

We thank you for your support of this emerging event. Call 525-1955 if you have any questions. See you at the Callejoneada at WinterFest!

Thanks for Giving

It is Thanksgiving, and what a perfect time to thank those who make great contributions to the revitalization efforts in Downtown Las Cruces. This time, we want to say a special thanks to our board members. If you serve on a board of directors, you know what commitment is required. Our board members dedicate their time, talent and treasure to the community-wide effort to bring downtown back to life. It is always a good time to say thanks — and we cannot thank them enough.

A mission, a code, a standard at White's Music Box

Recently I visited Mike White at his downtown store — White's Music Box. I was there to ask Mike about concerts he had co-hosted in the past. While there, I discovered a great marketing tool that really makes sense. Each of the pianos has a card wrapped around the music desk on the piano. It contains the Piano Manufacturers Association International's "Retailer Code of Ethics"

The Code represents the Retailer Code of Ethics — a voluntary set of goals and principles established to guide the conduct and character of retail piano dealers across America. When you visit a store that embraces the Code, you can expect to receive accurate, reliable information presented in a positive manner. We hope this will make piano buying a pleasure. Look for this endorsement wherever you shop for a piano. Our store is proud to uphold the Code.

Our Mission:

- To enhance the quality of life in our community by encouraging music participation.
- To present our product lines in a positive, honest and realistic manner that shows respect to our cus- tomers, our store and our industry.

- To educate our customers on the qualitative issues that can help them make an informed buying decision.
- To help our customers select and ultimately purchase the piano that best meets their needs and desires.

Our Commitment:

- We will continually improve our understanding of the products we represent, so that we might better present these products to our customers.
- We will avoid making statements about our competitors and their products. When asked to comment on competitive products and services, we will provide only relevant information that is specific, quantifiable and well-documented.
- We will refrain from personal attacks or speculation regarding the morals, ethics or viability of our competitors and their suppliers.
 We will make no statement that appeals to ethnic or
- racial bias.

 We will refrain from advertising our store, our considered false, misleading or deceptive.

We will not present or quote a price on any product products and our services in any way that might be

- We will not present or quote a price on any product that we are not currently authorized by the supplier to sell.
- We will not challenge or question a customer's purchase decision after the customer has accepted delivery from a competitor.
- We will continually strive to establish and uphold the highest standards of integrity and professionalism in the process of serving our customers.

Now, let me say, I have not played the piano since the third grade, when I tortured Sister Mary Paul Daniel through the scales. Bearing those scars, one would expect that I would never touch the ivories again. But "The Code" hanging atop the music desk on the piano caught my attention. I read the retailers' commitment in full and then actually tenderly tinkled along on a few keys.

My point is this – if "The Code" had not been attached to the music desk and held my attention I would have never dawdled over the piano. The marketing worked. And it worked especially because I am a consumer who cares about who I do business with and how they approach their business — and in that I am not alone. This is as good as a note personally signed by Mike that says, "We conduct ourselves ethically and professionally and here is our commitment to you."

Every business should have a mission statement, and the owner and employees should be able to articulate that mission clearly to clients. What a great way to engage them — with a sincere statement about who you are and what they can expect from your business.

It seems in our very busy, challenging lives there is little time to get to know one another in or out of the business environment. And yet, the relationship with clients is the most important thing a business owner has to offer. If you don't have a "code" of your own, think about developing one. Share that mission with your clients. Believe me, people still want to know who they are doing business with, be it a piano purchase, collection of works of art, or getting a great enchilada plate at your favorite restaurant.

75 years ago 1933 • Science magazine published an article by Mesilla Valley resident L.E. Freudenthal, "Flood and Erosion Control as Possible Unemployment Relief Measures."

- Las Cruces FFA youths placed fourth in the National FFA Livestock Show Swine Judging in Kansas City. J.Z. Rogers, Willie Nakayama, Noel McCoullough and Wayne Hudspeth were the team members.
- Justine Page advertised enchiladas "served in a typical home environment" at his restaurant at Church Street and Bowman Avenue.

50 years ago 1958

- Snow had delayed the cotton harvest, and farmers had picked only 77,877 bales, 5,220 of which were Extra-Long Staple.
- Mrs. L.E. Freudenthal, who had a record of 25 years of civic work, was listed in "Who's Who of American Women."
- Carlsbad turned three of five Las Cruces High School fumbles into touchdowns to win 20-14.

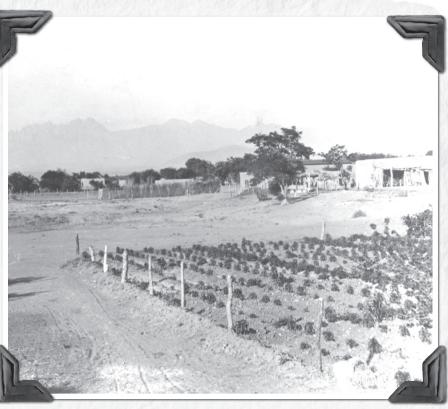

• Plaza Cine was featuring singer Pedro Infante and Rosita Quintana in "El Mil Amores."

25 years ago 1983

• Maggie Blankinship, 79, of Hatch, marked 50 years serving as a foster parent. During that period, she had cared for more than 30 children. "It's always been one happy family," she said. She said that she liked working with the younger children who came from broken homes or who had handicaps. She also liked working with older children who were getting involved in crime and drugs "because they didn't know any better. There must be a better place for them than jail," she said. During the Depression years, foster parents did not receive compensation. Later, the Department of Social Services paid an average of $225 a month for each child.

- Traffic was directed into the West Picacho Bridge east-bound lane because four panels on the westbound lane were collapsing. The city and state were pumping liquid cement beneath the bridge supports before replacing the panels.
- Western New Mexico played a slow-down, stalling basketball game, which aggravated New Mexico State fans, but the Aggies managed to prevail 53-44.
- Dr. Harold R. Matteson was named Honorary American Farmer Degree recipient, the National FFA's highest award. He was selected for the award for his work directing the Center for International Programs at New Mexico State University.

This undated photograph of Mesilla was taken when gardens were part of the residential areas. The garden has deep furrows and a high border, typical of irrigated fields.

ing the Las Cruces community to "A Night in Bethlehem," from 5 to 8 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7, at the church, 1405 S. Solano Drive. Visitors will hear festive music and wander through the streets of Bethlehem, visit a live nativity scene with real animals, taste food at the Bethlehem Bakery. They can also create fun projects in the market place shops including pottery, jewelry, herbs and spices, painting, stonemason, carpentry, weaving and a musical instrument shop. Guests can talk with shopkeepers, shepherds and Joseph and Mary and hear the beautiful story of God's love and a promise fulfilled. It's a Christmas experience where participants can do more than just hear about the birth of Jesus – they'll see, touch, feel and smell what life was like during this miraculous time.

■ ANNUAL FIESTA IN TORTUGAS

The annual fiesta in honor of Our Lady of Guadalupe presented by La Corporación de los Indigenes de Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe, Tortugas Pueblo will take place from Wednesday, Dec. 10, to Friday, Dec. 12.

The Fiesta in Tortugas celebrates the apparitions of Our Lady to the Indian San Juan Diego. It is a time of thanksgiving and worship for all the participants. The corporation welcomes participation by the general public and asks for the general public's assistance in respecting the time-honored traditions of the village.

The celebration begins on 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 10, with a candlelight procession from La Capilla to the Casa del Pueblo where an all night vigil or Velorio will be held. The Danzantes and the Malinches will be performing traditional dances throughout the night. On Thursday, Dec. 11, a candlelight procession will be held beginning at 5 a.m. The image of Our Lady of Guadalupe will be taken to the Sanctuario de Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe. Registration for the pilgrimage begins at 6 a.m. at La Casa del Pueblo. The general public is urged to join the procession. On Friday, Dec. 12, the Fiesta continues with the 9 a.m. fiesta mass celebrated at the Sanctuary of Our Lady of Guadalupe.

Informality with adults is a sign of societal change

Six-year-old is using humor to show defiance

It seems to me that children are far too familiar – too informal – with adults today. When I was a kid, we always addressed grown ups by "Mr." or "Mrs." Or if they were in the family, we called them "uncle" or "aunt," or "Grandpa" or "Grandma." We would never have referred to an adult as Sam or Alice. But today's parents don't teach that courtesy to their children. Some of them introduce 4-year-olds to adults by their first names. Am I the only one who is concerned about this? What can I do to counteract this trend with my own son and daughter?

I've been bothered by that same observation. It's a by-product of a cultural shift within society itself. We are less respectful of one another today in many ways. Fifty years ago, for example, men didn't curse around women and cultured women didn't curse at all. How that has changed. Both men and women used to address each other with formal titles (Mr., Mrs., Miss, etc.) unless they had become very close friends. Now, a waitress whom you've never met approaches your table and says, "Hi, I'm Stephanie and I'm going to be serving you today."

I don't suppose today's informality is harmful, although I agree that children should be taught to speak to their elders with certain deference. I still like to hear them respond with "Yes, ma'am" and "No, sir," instead of "yeah," "yep" and "nope." When their manners are respectful, their entire demeanor is on a higher plane.

As for how you can instill these and other courtesies in your child, you simply make up your mind to do it. You might explain that there are many things your family does differently than others: For example, "We don't use bad language, we don't attend certain kinds of movies and we don't (fill in the blank)."

Why? Because, we've set a higher standard for ourselves. This is what makes us unique as a family. Someday you will understand that, too.

I could use some advice about a minor problem we're having. Tim, my 6-year-old son, loves to use silly names whenever he speaks to my husband and me. This past week it's been "You big Hot Dog." Nearly every time he sees me now he says, "Hi, Hot Dog." Before that, it was "Dummy," then "Moose" (after he studied "M" for moose in school). I know it's silly and it's not a huge problem, but it gets so annoying after such a long time. He's been doing this for a year now. How can we get him to talk to us with more respect, calling us mom and dad, instead of hot dog and moose?

Ordinarily, it would not be a big deal for a child to use a playful name for his parent. But that isn't what appears to be happening with Tim. It sounds more like a classic power game to me. And contrary to what you said, it is not so insignificant. Your son is continuing to do something that he knows is irritating to you and your husband, yet you are unable to stop him. That is the issue. He has been using humor as a tactic of defiance for a full year.

Focus on the Family
By Dr. James Dobson

It is time for you to sit down and have a quiet little talk with young Timothy. Tell him that he is being disrespectful, and that the next time he calls either you or his father a name of any kind he will be punished. You must then be prepared to deliver on the promise, because he will continue to challenge you until it ceases to be fun. That's the way he is made. If that response never comes, his insults will probably become more pronounced. Appeasement for a strong-willed child is an invitation to warfare. This is the time to deal with it.

Annual 'Merry Christmas, Las Cruces' begins Thursday Methodist churches join together to present musical gift to city

St. Paul's United Methodist Church, 225 W. Griggs Ave., in conjunction with the other United Methodist churches in Las Cruces, will present the 2008 edition of "Merry Christmas, Las Cruces," titled "Two from Galilee"

Highlighting this year's production is a dramatic performance of an adaptation of Marjorie Holmes' best-seller, "Two from Galilee," which is interspersed with music by chorus, soloists, and orchestra. Performances will begin with an evening show at 7 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 4. Performances are also set for 7 p.m.

Friday, Dec. 5, and 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6. The music will be performed by the Chancel Choir along with singers from each of the participating churches. The drama is directed by David Edwards and the music is directed by Dr. Douglas Weeks. Tickets for the production will be free, but a love offering will be received to underwrite some of the production expenses other proceeds will benefit Community of Hope.

Cooperating churches include Morning Star United Methodist, University United Methodist, El Calvario Methodist, odist Church and the Wesley Campus Ministry. The focus is to share the joy of the Christmas story through music, dance, pageantry and drama in an exciting manner appropriate for persons of all ages. The drama features some outstanding local actors, including Amber Fajardo, Bobby Harrison, Norman Harrison, Cindy Murrell, Brandon Brown and Mike Cook.

"Merry Christmas, Las Cruces" is now in its 13th year and is a gift to the Las Cruces community from the people of the United Methodist churches in Las Cruces. In the hurried atmosphere of the world today, church members believe that a glimpse of the personal insights concerning that first Christmas can help people rediscover some of the universal values of Christmas. They encourage every one to attend and enjoy this wonderful Las Cruces holiday tradition.

Tickets are available through the church offices; Sew What's New, 3961 E. Lohman Ave.: Hubbard's Music N More, 445 Foster Road and at the door.

Great Blessings on a Short Budget

Pr 25:11 A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver.

Words are very powerful and can be of tremendous help and encouragement. With so many assaults against the home, have you taken time to tell your husband or wife that you love him or her? Do we show the love of Christ to those around us with good words?

We ought to choose our words carefully to be sure that we give good words. For example: words to express our love, and words to show compliment. We should be sure to share words of security. Instead of words to wound, words to build should be that of the Christian. We need to tell those we love words of satisfaction. To those with difficulties, we should share words of kindness and helpfulness.

Words fitly spoken are words that are spoken at the right time for the occasion. To be sure, your spouse would probably enjoy to hear how much you love him. Your children would be strengthened with words of praise and satisfaction. Your employer would be helped with words of gratitude spoken from you today.

This time of year we tend to grab generic gifts to appease those around us. But truly, a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver. Perhaps the best gift we will give is the gift of a fitly spoken word.

I leave you with these wonderful words spoken to us by our great God. For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John 3:16

Domenici: More diabetes awareness needed

American Diabetes Month highlights diagnosis, treatment and research

U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici is encouraging New Mexicans to become more aware of the risks associated with diabetes, a disease that increasingly affects families throughout the state.

As part of American Diabetes Month, Domenici advocated more testing and treatment for the disease, which affects 57 million Americans nationwide and as many as 170,000 adults in New Mexico.

"Early detection of this disease is so important so that people at risk can take action to control and treat this devastating illness. Diabetes is already taking too big a toll on New Mexico families, and I would challenge everyone to be aware of the risks," Domenici said. "The American Diabetes Association's 'ABC's of Diabetes' initiative gives us a quick steps to help prevent or delay the onset of diabetes."

The ABC's of Diabetes involves monitoring several key factors – average glucose, done with an A1C test every six months to measure how well their diabetes is being managed; a target blood pressure of less than 130/80 mmHg; and bad cholesterol

(LDL) below 100 mg/dl and healthy (HDL) cholesterol above 40 mg/dl for men and 50 mg/dl for women. (Learn more by visiting www.diabetes.org or calling 800-DIABE-TES.)

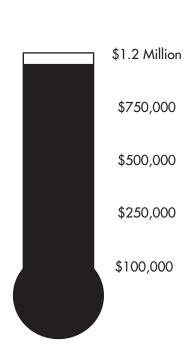

As a result of an American Indian diabetes program that Domenici helped create in 1997, more than $1 billion in federal funding has been provided for American Indian diabetes prevention and treatment programs. This effort gave the Indian Health Service annual mandatory funding specifically for diabetes prevention and treatment programs. That program began with a mandatory $30 million annually for five years and has been expanded over the past 10 years to $150 million a year.

Mesilla Valley Hospice Continuing the Dream

Thanks to the help of our community, all funds needed for the Mabee Foundation Grant have been raised! Now, Mesilla Valley Hospice needs YOUR help to raise the last $109,000 to match The Kresge Foundation funds.

Each dollar you give will be matched so the impact of your donation can be doubled!

We are currently at 91% of our goal, and we have until December 31st, 2008 to raise the remaining funds.

As the season of giving begins, please remember Mesilla Valley Hospice... where your comfort, your family and your wishes are our job.

NM partnership wins prestigious MarCom Platinum Award

New Mexico Health Care Takes on Diabetes program selected from 5,000 entries

The New Mexico Health Care Takes On Diabetes (NMHCTOD) Compendium, produced in collaboration with the New Mexico Medical Review Association (NMMRA), has won a prestigious Platinum Award in the MarCom Awards 2008 competition. The Platinum Award is presented to those entries judged to be among the most outstanding in the competition.

The MarCom Awards is an international, creative competition that recognizes outstanding achievement by marketing and communication professionals. Entries are judged by the Association of Marketing and Communication Professionals (AMCP).

As part of its mission, AMCP fosters and supports the efforts of creative professionals who contribute their unique talents to public service and charitable organizations. Judges are industry professionals who look for companies and individuals whose talent exceeds a high standard of excellence and whose work serves as a benchmark for the industry. More than 5,000 entries were received from throughout the United States and several foreign countries in this year's competition.

This honor reflects the commitment of health care professionals who care deeply about people with diabetes, and who are dedicated to creating high-quality, practical tools that support those who provide diabetes care in New Mexico," said Dr. Bruce A. Mann, NMHCTOD Steering Committee chair. "I'm proud to be associated with this outstanding group of professionals.'

"We're so proud that NMMRA's collaboration with NMHCTOD has been recognized by the MarCom Awards," said Dan Jaco, chief executive officer. "This award underscores the value for us in partnering to support health care professionals in the state with outstanding educational and communications products.

MarCom statuettes were designed and individually cast by the same artisans that craft the Oscar, Emmy and MTV Awards. Winners were selected from more than 200 categories in seven forms of media and communication efforts: marketing, publications, marketing/promotion, public service/pro bono, creativity and electronic/interactive. About 18 percent of the entries won the Platinum Award, the organization's top honor. A complete list of Platinum Award winners is on the MarCom Awards website at www.marcomawards.com

NMMRA is a not-for-profit, physician-sponsored organization that is New Mexico's federally contracted Medicare Quality Improvement Organization and Medicaid External Quality Review Organization. The organization works with health care providers, consumer and health care organizations, and state and federal agencies to improve the quality of health care in New Mexico.

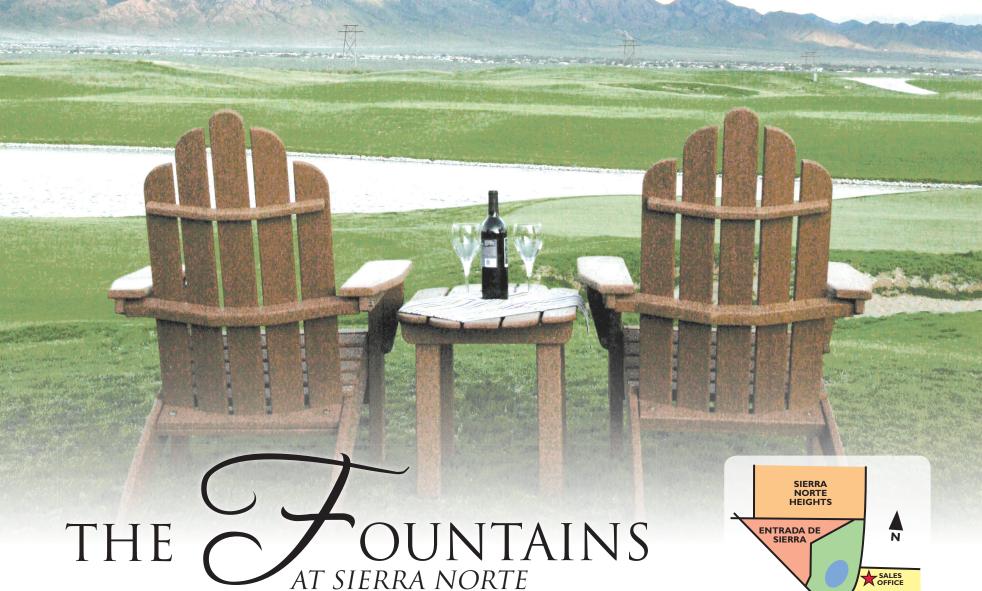

NMHCTOD is a coalition of 30 health care organizations that joined forces in 1999 to reduce the negative health effects associated with diabetes among citizens of New Mexico. NMHCTOD's activities focus on provider and consumer education, prevention, early diagnosis and appropriate treatment of people with diabetes.

feeling the downturn

More community support is needed

There's a reason why this holiday season is also dubbed the giving season, and it's not just because you "give" presents to friends and family for Christmas.

Whether the spirit of giving really exists or the cold weather and ringing of bells outside of grocery stores puts you in the mood, the holiday season is historically the time of year that nonprofit organizations see the most donations. They're also the months they see the highest demand for services.

This year, these nonprofits have an even higher need for donations, as money is tight everywhere, and there's an increase in people using their services. Families who before were struggling, yet still managed to get by, now find themselves in line at El Caldito Soup Kitchen or the Community Action Agency Food Bank because they have to skip out on bills in order to buy groceries

To compound the issue, the first thing people tend to cut in their budget is money they donate to charitable organizations, and sometimes, that's not something that can be helped.

Many of us take these organizations for granted and believe that they're going to be open forever. Unfortunately, when we hear that the Boys and Girls Club couldn't afford to pay their electric bill or the local Red Cross may have to fold under another chapter to survive, that's when the community takes

It shouldn't have to come to that. These organizations should be able to stay afloat year-round so that they don't have to be in these situations. They are providing services for children, families and even animals in our community. If you can't pro-vide monetary donations, maybe you can donate your time or an item for a food drive, or whatever it may be.

The Bulletin published the 2008 Community Wish List, which outlines many local organizations in the community and lists what they need to continue providing services for clients.

Our charitable organizations are there to help the needy, and we should be there to help them. That's one sector of business that doesn't need to come to the community for a bailout. When that happens, shame

Nonprofits Educators join The Bridge board

University, DACC sign memorandum of agreement

By Natisha Hales

Waded Cruzado, interim president for New Mexico State University, and Doña Ana Community College President Margie Huerta recently signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with The Bridge to describe the makeup of The Bridge Board of Directors.

The board, which meets monthly at the DACC Workforce Center, 2345 E. Nevada Ave., includes Cruzado, Huerta, Las Cruces Public Schools Superintendent Stan Rounds and members of the education, industry and business communities of Doña Ana County.

The Bridge is a newly formed nonprofit organization stemmed from the Regional Education Initiative, a task force designed to help students graduate from high school prepared to face an internationally competitive workforce. Appropriately named The Bridge, the organization brings together education and business.

We are delighted and honored with the opportunity to be a part of this transformative project," Cruzado said in a press release. "NMSU is about the multiplication of opportunities to be successful through meaningful experiences in teaching, research and service. The Bridge will be a vehicle that will allow us to provide educational opportunities and to elevate the quality of life of many New Mexicans.

Along with Cruzado, Huerta also will serve on the board of directors and will take the position of vice chair.

As Las Cruces Public Schools Superintendent Stan Rounds looks on, Doña Ana Community College President Margie Huerta, New Mexico State University Interim President Waded Cruzado and Advanced Care Hospital of Southern New Mexico CEO Suzanne Quillen sign a memorandum of understanding with The Bridge, outlying the makeup of the organization's board of directors.

"DACC is excited to be a full partner in this important initiative, which will yield a trained workforce," Huerta said.

The MOU includes details of the support that NMSU, DACC, LCPS and other institutions will provide for The Bridge during the first three years.

"This is truly an exciting day as we 'bridge' the collaboration among education, business and economic development. The significance of signing this agreement today demonstrates the strong commitment leadership in business and education have about partnering to build a qualified, diverse workforce," said Suzanne

Gina Orona-Ruiz: Working to create a safer environment

La Casa director doing her part to diminish domestic violence

By NATISHA HALES
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Even before she entered college at New Mexico State University, Gina Orona-Ruiz knew she wanted to help the crime victimes. Now, her entire career after college has been making a difference in the lives of victims of domestic violence and helping them realize that they can move on.

While earning her bachelor's degree in criminal justice at NMSU, Orona-Ruiz served as a victim's advocate for the district attorney's office. While she worked with victims of many different crimes, one case in particular stood out in her mind.

"One case involved a woman who was very badly beaten," she said, "and I remember realizing how complex the entire process was."

After graduating, Orona-Ruiz ran a batterer's program at a domestic violence shelter in El Paso.

"Once I started working at the shelter, I realized this is where my heart really is," she said.

She commuted from Las Cruces to El Paso until there was an opening at La Casa. Now, Orona-Ruiz has worked for La Casa since 1996 and has been leading the local efforts against domestic violence.

For the past seven years, Orona-Ruiz has played an administrative role in the process as executive director.

"I do a little bit of everything," she said.
"I oversee the operations of the whole agency, the coordinators and the financial aspect of it all. I make sure we have the funding to continue our programs, so I write grants. In seven years, a lot has happened."

Since Orona-Ruiz has been the executive director, she has helped to increase the entire operational budget by approximately $1 million and has been able to increase the number of employees from less than 40 staff members to 54.

She added critical services, such as outreach advocates and a liaison between the state Children, Youth and Families Department and the nonprofit organization. Even more important has been the expansion of the organization's facility, which is currently finishing up the first phase of construction.

"There was just not enough space," she said. "We had issues of cramped programming space, and we're adding 10 bedrooms to the shelter. We lacked private space and are incorporating transitional housing."

La Casa also is reaching out to other institutions in the community and the state by working with New Mexico State University to implement the Hispanic Family Violence Institute.

"This will allow us to provide technical assistance and training (on domestic violence in Hispanic families) throughout the state," she said. "We've applied for a Health and Human Services federal grant, and that will allow us to offer training outside of the state."

With the institute come services such as the translation hotline, which allows interpretation services for organizations with a language barrier; webinars geared toward Hispanic domestic violence; and the visiting advocate program, which will enable advocates from other communities to visit La Casa and mirror the organization's trained staff.

"The institute is probably the most effective service we've implemented," she said. "We've enhanced relationships with the state and the community and enhanced business opportunities, and that's really important to the safety of our clients."

While she may not see the clients as often as she used to, Orona-Ruiz knows that her work is equally as important as working with victims of violence first-hand with victims of violence first-hand.

"I've done the frontline work, and I've seen how many people have gained the strength they need to help themselves," she said. "But I also know that if I don't do my work, the staff can't do theirs. So I tell them to ask them what their clients need. That's how we've had these services. We know that these programs work.

"There are people that think, '(Those victims) are always going to be victims,' but I almost always run into past clients at the store, and they tell me how they've moved on or how they've gotten help. This is very inspirational. They come to us, and they can leave (their situations) if things in the community are working right."

La Casa contributes to preventing and eradicating domestic violence in Doña Ana County by providing comprehensive services, including a shelter and non-residential services, which include public awareness, legal, child and outreach services.

"In order to diminish domestic violence in all its forms, we have to work together," she said. "Our biggest job is the work we do in the community. We do a lot of work educating – even if it's about bullying. We're helping the community have a no-tolerance attitude. It's about changing societal attitudes, and that's a huge job. People start accepting it one (person) at a time, and we have a long way to go."

Besides working her hardest to diminish domestic violence through her position at La Casa, Orona-Ruiz also reaches out to her family, empowering her 14-year-old daughter, Gabriela.

"I always want little girls to know they can do whatever they want and be whoever they want to be," she said. "You almost have to reach out to let girls of all ages know that. Violence against women is out there, and that's a scary thing, so I try to educate and give the opportunity of empowerment for young girls.

empowerment for young girls.

"Growing up in Lordsburg (N.M.), being the executive director of La Casa is not at all what I thought I would be," she said. "This field began with women's leadership, and I'd love to see young girls involved in this measurement."

this movement."

While Orona-Ruiz said she is excited about the movement La Casa has made so far, she'll be especially happy when the second phase of construction – transitional housing – is complete.

"That is something to help the clients move forward and help make everything a reality," she said. "The longer the term (they're away from their situation), the more effective."

Can't sell or rent your home?

'Buy and bail' is not a viable option

In last week's column, I shared with my readers the story of an actual Las Cruces area homeowner (I called him Mr. B – for buyer) who purchased a new home about a year and a half ago with the intention of living in it for quite some time. The tale didn't begin there, however. It actually began a few weeks ago when Mr. B received a terrific out-of-town job offer and needed to figure out how much profit he would realize if he sold his house today.

To make a long story short, the value of Mr. B's home is now around $10,000 less than it was when he purchased it 18 months ago. Since he only made a small downpayment and financed almost the entire purchase price, Mr. B finds that his mortgage balance now exceeds the value of his home by around $7,000.

For those of you who haven't had the privilege of owing more on your home than it is worth, the state of affairs is referred to as being "upside down." Add to the mortgage deficit the cost of selling the property, and Mr. B's total shortfall balloons to around $13,000. As you might have expected, Mr. B had little interest in "paying" to sell his home.

The next order of business was to explore renting the property. Unfortunately, renting is not on Mr. B's option list either because the market rent for his home will fall about $350 per month short of covering his monthly mortgage payment. Add-in a yearly vacancy factor and a few bucks here and there for maintenance, and Mr. B could easily find himself "feeding" his investment to the tune of $5,000 to $7,000 per year. Needless to say, he wasn't enamored with this option either.

After pretty-much exhausting his choices, including refinancing the property, Mr. B came to the conclusion that he really had only two remaining alternatives: Walk away from his investment and pay for the privilege sometime down the road or remain here in Las Cruces and forego the new job opportunity. Being a prudent person, Mr. B opted to stay put and dismissed entirely the notion of walking away from his home. Not all homeowners are as practical as Mr. B., however. Some decide to abandon their current home and replace it with another using a technique called "Buy and Bail."

There are serious financial and legal consequences for the homeowner

who chooses

this option.

In a nutshell, the Buyand-Bail scenario is one where a homeowner plans ahead of time to purchase a home elsewhere (the Buy) with the intention of discontinuing making payments on the "upside down" or impossible-tosell home that he or she is about to abandon (the Bail).

How do these folks get a loan for a new home when they're barely able to hang on to their current home? Often, they'll convince the loan officers that they plan to rent out the first house and use the rental income to qualify for the mortgage on their new home. In some cases, they actually manufacture a bogus rental agreement to use as proof the home has been rented. In essence, the Buy-and-Bail folks try to qualify for a mortgage on a new home just as they stop making payments on their old home, but before any negative reporting or foreclosure notices appear in their credit files or on the pub-professionals who might find themselves caught up in the process. One of the most serious downsides to this practice is that foreclosure ruins a person's credit rating

Foreclosure filings stay in one's credit file for seven years, making it difficult to qualify for new credit cards, loans and even insurance. Then there's the negative impact foreclosures have on the old neighborhood. Real estate agents and owners alike can only sit on the sidelines and watch while abandoned homes pull down property values in the area.

The true downside to the Buy-and-Bail scheme, however, is the fact that submitting bogus paperwork to a lender in order to qualify for a mortgage is a crime – in most cases, a federal crime at

The Institute for Marketecology certifies the organic cotton traceability. The IMO tracks a bale of organic cotton from the farm to Japanese textile mills, said Brett Bakker, New Mexico Organic Commodity Commission.

"Our role is to certify the process of any organic product to assure that the customers are getting what they are paying for," Bakker said of the commission. "Organic cotton has to be documented from the farm, the gin, the warehouse, the trucks or rail freight cars and the ships that take it to Japan.

"IMO assigns a unique number to each bale of organic cotton and can trace the cotton back to the farm where it was grown."

Gins process both organic and nonorganic cotton, and the commission assures that there is no contamination.

"We make sure that after non-organic cotton is ginned, the machinery is cleaned and purged of the non-organic cotton before they run organic cotton," Bakker said. "The gins have to be documented that they have been purged of non-organic cotton."

Organic cotton production means that no toxic or persistent insecticides or fertilizers are used. Third-party organizations certify that organic producers use accepted methods, according to the Organic Trade Association.

Organic cotton production in 24 countries increased 53 percent from 2005 to 2007. Organic cotton sales are projected to increase from $583 million in 2005 to

cotton grower

$2.6 billion by the end of 2008. The 2007 organic cotton production was 265,517 bales, according to the association.

Alvarez grows 800 acres of organic cotton near La Union, and he has been exporting cotton to Japan for seven years.

"They've been loyal customers, and I try to fill their needs," Alvarez said. "The main reason they've been buying my organic cotton is because they are environmentally conscious. And they like my brown and green colored, extra-long staple Pima cotton."

Cotton growers can now buy cotton seeds that can produce colored fiber in the bolls.

"The Japanese are looking for more organic cotton growers, and the Mesilla Valley is very suited to grow organic cotton," he said. "We don't have any insect pressure here. We haven't had any boll weevils or pink boll worms this year.

"We have a killing frost here that they don't have in other organic cotton growing areas. That means we don't have to use chemicals to defoliate to get rid of the leaves so that we can harvest the cotton bolls."

The leaf-hopper can infect crop fields with the curly-top wilt, but Alvarez controls the leaf-hopper with a powder that irritates the insects and stops the field invasions. The powder is not a chemical insecticide and is acceptable under organic standards.

Alvarez uses cow manure as a fertilizer that he ages for one year before applying it to his fields.

The Japanese made a documentary film of his farm a few years ago.

"But this time they brought a camera crew and a famous Japanese actress omoko Yamaguchi who is going to start her own line of clothing that is made with organic cotton," Alvarez said. "They had a good time and took a lot of pictures, and we got to know them."

Alvarez's farm was developed by his grandfather. He took over the farm in 1974 and started raising cotton, chile and alfalfa, at first with traditional uses of chemicals.

About 16 years ago when Alvarez's son, Dosi, was about to be born, he became concerned about the possible health hazards of chemicals to children and employees.

"And my son turned out all right," Alvarez said.

About the same time, Hermann Buhler AG, a Swiss company, had told the former Southwest Irrigated Cotton Growers that it was looking for growers who would be interested in growing organic cotton.

"We gave it a try and started out with 25 acres to see if it could be done," Alvarez said. "We increased the acreage through the years until the whole farm is organic."

He was talking about around 1,200 acres of organic cotton, chile and alfalfa.

"There's a good market niche for these crops," Alvarez said. "I can't grow enough organic cotton to meet the demand."

His wife, Norma, raises Quarter Horses for racing and uses the farm's organic alfalfa as feed. She raises the horses for breeding stock and sells them as yearlings.

"Environmentally conscious or chemically sensitive people really want organic products," said Alvarez in an NMSU agriculture information article. "I like the idea that my employees are happy because they don't have to mess with chemicals. We all go home worry-free because we're not exposed to these hazards."

Consumers are interested in organic cotton for sanitary products, make-up removal, cotton swabs and home use, like towels, bathrobes, sheets and blankets, according to the Organic Trade Association.

As a measurement for the demand of organic cotton, in 2006, organic fiber lines and clothing sales in the United States grew by 26 percent from the previous year to reach $203 million, according to the Organic Trade Association 2007 manufacturer survey.

The association's survey also learned: Women's clothing accounted for 36 percent of consumer sales in 2005 and amounted to $57 million; men's and children's clothing grew 56 and 52 percent in 2005, while infants' clothing and cloth diapers grew 40 percent and accounted for $40 million in sales.

in the workplace."

To put The Bridge in motion, a nationwide search for an executive director has been started, and the search committee is currently in the process of interviewing applicants.

The nonprofit program will execute the goals of the Regional Education Initiative, a task force that was started in May 2007 under the auspices of the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce Education Committee, chaired at that time by Patsy Duran.

The task force was created soon after and involved all aspects of local education in addition to branching out into the community and the region, incorporating business leaders who represent the seven state-adopted career clustes and educators from the Hatch Valley and Gadsden school districts.

After hiring an executive director, the next goal of The Bridge is to incubate smaller, satellite high schools that provide alternative education that focuses on career and technical education. Two locations have already been approved – the Arrowhead Research Park and the West Mesa.

We are delighted and honored to be a part of this transformative project.

Continuing an 11-year legacy

New owners of Scrub Fashions follow in mom's footsteps

By Natisha Hales

In 1994, Linda Franco started offering medical apparel and accessories with quality customer care to medical professionals from the trunk of her car. Her commitment to customer service led to a successful business that became a destination for the medical community.

Franco passed away in February, leaving her legacy to her daughter, Jessyca Chavez.

Together with her husband, Duane Chavez, Jessyca is striving to continue the legacy that is Scrub Fashions, and the hundreds of loyal customers who have come with it.

While they're following in Linda Franco's footsteps, the couple also is trying to make the store their own.

Duane Chavez, who is originally from Española, brings

Business in time for the Holidays! his management experience to the table. After getting a bachelor's degree from the University of New Mexico, he went on to manage Bennigan's restaurants in Albuquerque and Las Cruces.

'I knew what Las Cruces was all about," he said.

His restaurant management career took him to larger metropolitan areas, such as San Jose, Calif., and Denver, before he returned to northern New Mexico and bought his own restaurant.

Jessyca Chavez, who also earned a bachelor's degree from UNM and is now getting a master's degree at New Mexico State University to prepare for medical school, is an entrepreneur in her own right. She earned her associate real estate broker's license, and earned titles such as Miss Española and Mrs. Las Cruces.

Living in Las Cruces for three years now, the Chavezes took advantage of their opportunities to blossom in the growing city.

"I dedicated a lot of my time to also help the Francos," Duane Chavez said.

Watching her mother run her Scrub Fashions business, Jessyca Chavez learned from her mother's business

"Her strengths were really on focusing on her customers and talking to people," she said. "That's what made everyone so committed to her business."

While Jessyca Chavez spends most of her time furthering her education, Duane Chavez manages the store, which offers the latest high-quality names in medical apparel, such as Cherokee and Dickies Medical.

"This was her legacy," Duane Chavez said. "She left her footprints in the community with this business, and we're keeping it in the family while keeping up with the times."

Keeping up with the times means that some customers are not able to get down to the boutique at 2595 E. Missouri Ave. So began Scrub Patrol, a mobile service provided by Scrub Fashions.

'It's about selling comfort to the medical community," Duane Chavez said. "I do deliveries, but sometimes I go there and give them an invitation and take them water bottles (with the Scrub Fashions and Scrub Patrol logos), and then we'll come back."

Duane Chavez said that they will do group fittings for an entire medical office on location because they know how difficult it is to get everyone down to the store.

While certain things have remained the same as they were when Franco ran the store, such as the catchy purple

For starters, the couple expanded to include the entire building in which Scrub Fashions is housed. Then, they computerized the entire bookkeeping system, which Franco did by hand for 11 years. Slowly, the Chavezes are subtly transforming Scrub Fashions into a boutique, with soft, inviting colors, curtains and comfy furniture.

"A lot of time, customers will bring in their husbands or their kids, and they're waiting for them," Jessyca Chavez said. "We want them to be comfortable."

Most importantly, however, has been developing a sense of pride in taking over Scrub Fashions.

"My mom used to say, 'This is your store, I just work here,' to her customers," Jessyca Chavez said. "She was so nonchalant about it. We're about family, and I do understand that a lot."

We get to create a new day every day," Duane Chavez said, "and we take pride in whatever we do."

Talking business with owners Duane and Jessyca Chavez

What inspired you to go into business?

Growing up around family that has and has had businesses has given us a great foundation to where we are today. We have learned a lot by seeing what they have had to prove to become great entrepreneurs. After college, we purchased and built a northern New Mexico restaurant and sports bar and built it from the ground up. This experience gave us working knowledge, know-how and customer service skills that are priceless in the service industry. Now, we are blessed to have taken over our family business here at Scrub Fashions and are proud to use our knowledge from past experiences.

What is unique about your business?

We are a specialty store that has competitive, discount prices for namebrand medical uniforms and accessories. We will meet or beat any prices from our competitors, mainly the mail-order catalogs. We are family-owned and operated, giving personal service and attention to all our customers by keeping it local. We will deliver orders for our accounts straight to their work place, free of charge.

Who are your customers?

Everyone! Although we would like for the whole community to come in and see what we are all about, we typically cater to the medical, dental and health professionals. We invite all the community to come in and see what we can offer them.

Where do you see the business in five years?

We think we are on a great track right now, by keeping our name rotating in the community and with the continued support of Las Cruces and the surrounding area, but we are looking to expand to other locations.

What is your business philosophy?

Our goals first and foremost are keeping our customers happy by understanding their needs and striving to keep our customers satisfied and comfortable with what we have to offer. We pride ourselves in staying with the momentum of seasonal styles and catering to our customers with a smile.

What is the best part of your job?

The best part of our job is getting to know our community and building friendships. We get to go to work every day and have fun while we do it. Every day is an adventure! We also get to work hand-inhand with each other as a couple and are very blessed for that because we work very well together.

How do you keep your competitive edge?

Keeping up with the times and technology. We computerized the business this summer and are faster and more efficient than ever. This has allowed us to move forward with other branches of business such as our new delivery service. We now offer medical apparel fittings for our accounts and offer outside sales and delivery through Scrub Patrol.

How are you marketing the store?

We have learned that personal service and attention in this field of service has been the most beneficial to our growth and potential. We recognize that going out in the community and sharing our ideas and products every day makes one happy customer come back for more. We have recently started delivering Scrub Fashions and Scrub Patrol water bottles all around the city. We use these to keep our name fresh in the minds of our customers and hopefully attract new friends and customers alike.

What do you look for in an employee?

Someone who is committed to doing a good job and takes care of customers as they would take care of family. We have three employees – Maria, Risher and Gina – and we like to keep a closeknit team and family environment with them. They are a fundamental role in our success. Thank you for all your time and talent, ladies.

What is the best business decision you have made so far? Making the decision to move back to Las Cruces from Arizona to continue the family business that was built 11 years ago. We continue the legacy of service that Linda Franco, our mom, has brought to this community.

What adjustments or improvements have you made so far?

We continue to strive for improvement every day. We pride ourselves in what we can offer our customers and keep our products constantly rotating. We are in the process of painting and decorating the inside of the store to give more of our personality and warm vibe.

What best prepared you for entrepreneurship?

Definitely our work experience along with our education. Duane graduated with a bachelor's degree in business and communications from the University of New Mexico. He worked in management and traveled with Bennigan's restaurant from 1997 to 2002. After purchasing and running Dos Amigos Restaurant and Sports Bar in Española, N.M., for four years, he had the opportunity to manage for Texas Roadhouse and now is moving forward with Scrub Fashions and Scrub Patrol, his most recent endeavor Jessyca graduated with a bachelor's degree from the University of New Mexico. Her focus of study was community health, emergency medicine and flamenco dance. She also obtained her associate broker's license in real estate in 2004, while helping Duane run their restaurant. She now is back in school at New Mexico State University, preparing for medical school, and helps at Scrub Fashions in her spare time.

What advice would you give to others starting a business?

Use your resources, take your time and make time to have fun. People want to be a part of a project or environment that is consistent and happy. Keep people as your primary focus, and good things will

What items do you carry, and what are their price ranges?
The brands we carry are top-of-the-line for medical apparel: Cherokee, Landau, Barco, Peaches, White Swan, Prestige, Dickies Medical, Urbane, Z-Coil, Spira, Izzy, Nurse Mates, Littman stethoscopes and blood pressure cuffs – a wide array of medical accessories and what a professional needs to function in their working environment. We also carry therapeutic shoes and all styles of lab coats. Scrub tops range in price from $16.95 to $24.95 and pants range in price from $16.95 to $24.95.

What is your most popular item?

Our scrub sets, ranging in price from $22 to $24 a set. We have a variety of seasonal and fun, hip styles of print tops

What is your opinion of the Las Cruces business climate?

It has steadily increased, and we see great potential in this "undiscovered" little city. Las Cruces has a wonderful and warm community of people, and we can only see positive and exciting growth from

What obstacles do you have or have you overcome? Taking over for our mom, Linda, who passed away this year, has been an insurmountable task. It was hard in the beginning to take over from where she left off, but with the love and support from the community, we make progress every day. We strive to do things and take care of customers with the level of compassion and quality that she had while implementing our own ideas and working on our own strengths.

What is the most important thing about your business that you wish people knew?

The most important thing to know is that we are family-owned and have been operating since 1994. This business started out of the trunk of Mom's car and then moved to a little shop on Madrid Avenue before relocating to Missouri Avenue. Mom worked so hard and left her footprints in this community and left her business for her kids to preserve. We are so extremely grateful for all the support from our loyal customers who keep believing in us and our products. Our mom always like to say when she was talking to a customer, "This is your store. I just work here.'

An economist's Thanksgiving list a little different

Las Cruces area may not see a recession

... the fact is, the fundamentals of Las Cruces

are strong

Listening to NPR recently, I heard reference to the slowing economy 11 times in less than an hour. It is true that the national economy is likely in recession, and our local economy is showing signs of slowing down. But the fact is, the fundamentals of Las Cruces are strong. At least as measured by employment growth, we may not even see a recession. This is certainly something to be thankful for. Given that it's the Thanksgiving holiday this week, I thought I would give you a list of other things to be thankful for. But my list is a little unusual in that it is the list of an economics professor who specializes in studying the Las Cruces economy.

Eight things to be thankful for

1. The expansion of Fort Bliss. Yes, Fort Bliss is in El Paso, but the increase in troop strength is massive, and the economic impact will spill over across the state line. When you include troops, dependents and support staff, 100,000 people are expected to move to the El Paso area before the build up is done. The expansion at Fort Bliss should add 1 to 2 percent to the growth rate of our local economy through 2012.

2. The future combat systems brigade. Future Combat Systems is the largest military research and development program in world history. Much of the testing will be done at White Sands Missile Range. The FCS Brigade is expected to bring 4,500 new troops to WSMR, 6,000 total when dependents are considered.

3. Foxconn. The giant maquila Foxconn is being built near the Santa Teresa border crossing. When Foxconn opens next year, it is expected to employ 10,000. A second phase will employ another 10,000 sometime in the next three years. Foxconn will be a magnet for suppliers and some will locate in Doña Ana County.

4. New Mexico State University. Our region's largest single employer is doing well, with enrollment up for the third year in a row. Impoverished students may not spend as much as householders, but more students does mean more local spending in total. While not mentioned as often, external funding for research is also up. The faculty and staff funded by research dollars are a benefit to the local economy.

5. The Downtown Tax Increment Development District (TIDD). Actually, the tax law passed by the Legislature in 2006 that created TIDDs is too generous to local municipalities. But given that it is too generous, I'm thankful that our local officials have created a TIDD so that at least we benefit locally from the Legislature's largess.

6. Large service sector/small manufacturing sector. Las Cruces has a relatively large service sector, that is less subject to the business cycle, and a relatively small manufacturing sector that is more sensitive to the business cycle. The combination means we are relatively insulated from recession. That is especially good news given the condition of the national economy.

7. Low unemployment. Shortly after I moved to Las Cruces, the unemployment rate topped 9 percent. In September, that rate stood at 3.8 percent. Under any circumstance 3.8 percent is low, but for a community like ours, located near the border and composed of workers with a large proportion of high school dropouts, our unemployment is really low.

8. My family. Hey, it is my list. Did you really expect me not to include something personal? I am blessed with a son doing well in college, a daughter doing well in high school and a lovely, loving wife who has just started a new career as a science teacher. Who could ask for more?

All and all, we have much for which to be thankful. Happy Thanksgiving!

What does the rescue plan mean for you?

If you've watched the news from Wall Street and Washington, you've seen a hefty amount of drama. But in the end, what will it mean to you?

Congress last month agreed on a $700 billion plan called the Emergency Economic Stabilization Act of 2008 to revive the credit markets and restore the flow of credit to the U.S. economy. The legislation will, among other provisions, give the Treasury Department the ability to purchase up to $700 billion in mortgage-backed securities and other troubled assets from banks and financial firms, though some of this spending authority will be subject to Congressional approval.

This rescue package has both supporters and detractors. Its proponents claim that you, as a taxpayer, will ultimately reap rewards when the Treasury eventually sells the currently distressed assets for a profit. However, while no one can say for sure when, or if, this will happen, it does seem likely that the bailout could have some real benefits for you as an investor.

benefits for you as an investor.

Why? Because one of the most important goals of the bailout is to help "unclog" the credit markets and put more cash back into our financial system. The subprime mortgage crisis has sucked an enormous amount of liquidity from our markets; without this liquidity, banks have become unwilling, or unable, to extend credit to consumers and businesses. When businesses can't get credit, they can't expand their operations – and that makes it hard for them to make a profit.

As an investor, of course, you are looking for profitable companies in which to invest. So, to the extent that an infusion of liquidity may help the fortunes of many businesses, you now may face a brighter investment horizon.

Furthermore, the bailout may calm the financial markets – and calmer financial markets are more conducive to long-term investing. As an investor, you may find it hard to stick to your strategy when you see the stock market show giant gains one day, followed by huge losses the next.

Nonetheless, as you look ahead, don't be surprised if some volatility continues, although it will hopefully be less extreme than what we've seen.

Fortunately, you can take effective action against market fluctuations, whatever their size, by diversifying your investments. Talk to your financial advisor about how to diversify your portfolio in a way that's appropriate for your risk tolerance and time horizon. Be aware, however, that diversification, by itself, cannot guarantee a profit or protect against a loss.

Also, keep looking for quality investments. During market downturns, even quality stocks can lose value. But these same stocks often recover quickly when the market turns around. Look for good, solid companies whose products are competitive and whose management has enunciated a strategy for future growth.

Here's the bottom line: The government's rescue plan may well help investors. But by following proven strategies, such as diversifying your holdings and investing for quality, you can build a portfolio that can navigate even the choppiest financial waters — without having to bail yourself out.

AG says state title insurance rates unfair

Attorney General Gary King says reverse competition still plagues title insurance rate making in New Mexico and must be removed before new rates are set by the Public Regulation Commission's Insurance Division.

The attorney general this week urged the superintendent of insurance to reject an 18-percent rate increase for title insurance proposed by the title insurance industry and instead lower rates by at least 6 percent. Title insurance provides lenders some assurance that the home purchaser will have clean title.

"Excessive transaction costs can be a drag on the economy, and we're asking the Insurance Division to give people thinking of buying a home some relief in the form of lower title insurance prices," King said. "Our title insurance expert testified once again that his analysis shows New Mexico consumers are paying too much."
Expert Birny Birnbaum prefiled direct testimony for the recently completed 2008 Annual Title Insurance Hearing in Santa Fe. In his testimony, Birnbaum concluded: "Reverse competition is the dominant characteristic of title insurance and escrow markets in New Mexico and other states. The competition for the referrers' business involves the title agent or title insurer providing things of value to the referrers and passing these sales and marketing costs onto the consumers.

Setting title insurance rates is based primarily on allowances for reasonable expenses, and the AG's expert maintains that reverse competition creates unreasonable costs, which should not be used for rate development.

Program gives women new opportunties

Helping donors do good...forever.

At 52 years old, Polly Bencomo still has a lot of learning left to do, and being able to learn at a university is a dream come true for her.

Bencomo first enrolled at Doña Ana Community College (DACC) in the summer, studying to become a health information technician and is continuing on during the fall 2008 semester.

"You never stop learning. Education is good, and it is something that can never be taken away from you," Bencomo said about returning to school.

Bencomo would be a set and the set and t

Bencomo would have returned to school sooner if she had the resources, but the single mother of three could not find the time or the money.

"I finally just decided to bite the bullet and go back to school," Bencomo said, so she returned despite the fact that she did not have enough money to be a student. Until now. On Friday, Bencomo was one of four on Friday, Bencomo was one of rom women to receive a SpringBoard! Scholarship, created through the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) to help improve the lives of women in southern New Mexico by providing opportunities for advanced education. SpringBoard! committee members make recommendation to the CFSNM for scholarships and grants, then the Foundation awards the money.

This program specifically targets young women who have a hard time getting into an educational program because they either dropped out of school and had children or had to go to work and now realize they need more of an education to do better in life," said Ammu Devasthali, a founding member of SpringBoard! "Even though we are technically helping one woman with scholarships, the ripple affect is helping a lot more people because that one woman continued her education.'

Bencomo agrees. To her, returning to school is impacting her whole family.

"I really want to be a good example for my kids. It is important to me to be that example that says education is very important," said Bencomo, who received her associate's degree in 1976. "The degree I got that long ago wasn't helping me. I was a single parent raising my kids and I struggled all those years trying to get a good job. It's very, very hard to get a job without a good education."

The SpringBoard! Scholarship program was established in 2004 when the CFSNM, and women like Devasthali, realized there was a need for educational advancement among community women.

The SpringBoard! committee reviews grant application at their latest meeting.

Since 2004, SpringBoard! has awarded 14 scholarships to deserving women. One scholarship is like the $1,000 scholarship Bencomo received, the other is a $500 'Over the Rainbow Scholarship" established to honor the memory of Dorothy Ellen Baker, a daughter of an Appalachian coal miner who valued higher education for women.

Because of Baker's belief in education, two of her daughters completed their Ph.D. and became professors - one is a long-time professor of government at New Mexico State University. SpringBoard! also awards grants to women wanting to focus on small business ventures, and helps with smaller fees associated with education. Recently, a young woman was unable to pursue her education because she did not have the $40 needed to take her GED. When SpringBoard! awarded her the money, she was able to take the GED and pursue higher education.

Devasthali said the SpringBoard! committee usually receives a little more than 30 applicants each year, and they are limited by the amount of money raised for the program.

Bencomo is grateful she was one of the women selected for a scholarship.

"SpringBoard! helped me reach my dream of returning to school," Bencomo said. "Eventually, I would like to continue my education even more and become a social worker helping battered women. This is just the beginning."

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is a charitable resource linking donors with community needs. Founded in 2000, the CFSNM uses knowledge to help connect people who care with causes that matter. Donors are encouraged to inquire about donating to an existing fund or creating a new fund. Call the CFSNM at 521-4794 or visit www. cfsnm.org for information about making a charitable contribution to your community.

Securities Division protects New Mexicans from fraud

New Mexico Regulation and Licensing Department

The Securities Division of the New Mexico Regulation and Licensing Department is cautioning investors to avoid making impulsive and uninformed decisions about their long-term financial holdings in response to the unprecedented volatility on Wall Street.

"Investors should resist the temptation to make hasty decisions about their investments or finances," division Director Bruce Kohl said. "And now is the time to be especially wary of unsolicited financial advice offering new investment opportunities. We know from past experience that con artists follow the headlines to exploit the worries of everyday investors. In times of confusion and uncertainty, there are always those who will try to prey on the investing public."

Turmoil in the home-mortgage market creates opportunities for crooks to peddle phony real-estate investments that promise enormous returns, Kohl said, and soaring energy costs have inspired scams disguised as oil and gas partnerships and alternative-energy projects. The Internet has given a global grasp to con artists who disguise themselves as online "friends" eager for your partnership in money-making ventures.

Whatever the offer, Kohl said, investors should be suspicious of any sales pitch for complex investment products that fails to offer clear disclosures of associated risks and costs. They should always seek the advice of a trusted investment adviser or financial planner before investing.

But when even the nation's top economists can offer little reassurance about today's financial markets, it's natural for some people to panic and make reactive, emotional decisions rather than anticipatory, rational ones. Here are some ways the Securities Division can help you keep your wits about you:

Before giving your money to a salesperson or company with which you've never done business, contact the New Mexico Securities Division at 800-704-5533 to verify that the investment firm or salesperson is licensed in the state of New Mexico and that the investment product being offered is registered with the state. The Securities Division also keeps a record of companies and salespeople fined or disciplined for violating security regulations or targeted by consumer complaints.

Request written information, such as a prospectus or offering circular, that fully explains the investment being offered. The documentation should contain enough clear and accurate information to allow you or your financial adviser to evaluate and verify investment details.

Get a professional, trusted thirdparty opinion when presented with investment opportunities that seem to offer unusually high returns in comparison to other investment options.

If you participate in an employersponsored retirement plan, such as a 401(k), get unbiased advice and guidance before making any significant changes to your long-term savings and investment strategy.

The Regulation and Licensing Department Securities Division protects New Mexicans from fraud and financial abuse by licensing investment professionals, registering securities offerings made in the state and investigating financial fraud and other violations of the state securities laws. Its Savvy Investor program offers free seminars on how to avoid investment scams and identity theft and how to make the most of investment dollars.

To report suspected fraud or financial abuse or for more information about keeping your money secure in insecure times, contact the Securities Division at 505-984-0617 (toll-free 800-704-5533) or www.securities.state.nm.us.

Finance New Mexico is an initiative of the New Mexico Small Business Investment Corporation (NMSBIC) and its partners to assist individuals and businesses in obtaining skills and funding-resources for their business or idea. THE AGENDA

MVEDA forum

The Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce has joined forces with the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces, New Mexico State University, Doña Ana Community College, Las Cruces Public Schools, The Bridge and MVEDA to bring to the community an exciting guest speaker for the Business On The Border Luncheon on Tuesday, Dec. 2, from 11:15 a.m. until 1 p.m. at the Columbus Conference Center, 901 Avenida de Mesilla.

Armando Aguirre will be sharing with attendees an innovative educational concept happening in various parts of the nation called Early College High School. Aguirre serves as the principal of Mission Early College High School, the first of its kind in El Paso. In addition to his presentation, lunch attendees will also be provided with a brief update-progress report from The Bridge.

Every chamber member is strongly encouraged to attend this luncheon and see how education, business and government are working effectively together toward the continued improvement of education and workforce development in our community.

Luncheon cost is $10 per person, payable at the door by cash, check or major credit card. The meeting is open to the public, but due to space constraints, RSVP is required for this event and can be made by emailing rsvp@mveda.com or by calling the MVEDA office at 525-2852.

Support local vendors during the holidays

Arts scene adds Southwest flair

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Searching for the perfect gift doesn't have to be that difficult. Sure, Dad is hard to shop for, Mom is nearly impossible, and a gift for a brother or sister could break the bank, but one option many Las Crucens don't consider are the homemade and creative options available from local artisans and crafters that may fit on anyone's wish list.

In the weeks before the holiday season, Las Cruces bustles with venues for buying local products in the form of arts fairs, craft markets and bazaars.

"Shopping from local artists is a great way to find one of a kind items that you can't find anywhere else," says Olivia Hennessey, Downtown events coordinator for the City of Las Cruces. "Also, by shopping at neighborhood markets you help the local economy stay strong."

One event that could fit the bill for any shopper is the La Casa Bazaar, sponsored by La Casa, Inc., a domestic violence shelter that helps protect people from abusive situations through shelter, support and other services for victims. Patricia McClure with La Casa says the bazaar caters to a wide variety of people and features numerous kinds of arts and crafts.

"This is the largest fundraiser La Casa does, and there are more than 155 vendors who sign up," McClure says. She says a group of 30 volunteers, called the La Casa Guild, work year-round to make sure the event is a success.

McClure says keeping money local is an important part of being a part of the Las Cruces community.

Las Cruces community.

"I look at it as a community effort," McClure says. "I'm a big supporter of the farmer's market and I try and support however I can. I am a big believer in keeping money local."

She says shopping locally is a unique opportunity to get something not normally found in a large department store.

"When you shop locally, you are getting something really special," McClure says.

"And in these hard economic times, we have to support each other and the local people who are creating all of these beautiful things."

Here are a few of the places to look for local merchandise in the next few weeks before the holidays:

----- FEATURED ARTIST-

Timothy Baquera: Silversmith and jeweler

Creative mind lends itself to the designs of Jones & Co.

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Timothy Baquera began his career designing jewelry more than 40 years ago, first learning the art of beadwork from his mother. In 1970, he started an apprenticeship with a silversmith, learning the art of molding metal in to art.

He took his skills into overall jewelry making, working in Native American jewelry, becoming specialized in creating works of art from precious metals and stones. He worked in the Las Cruces and El Paso areas in the late 1970s, then went on to sell his art in Old Town Albuquerque and Santa Fe, but a tragedy took him and his family to California, where he began another apprenticeship, learning the art of fine gold and precious gems jewelry design.

"I sat and learned what they did, and it was quite a journey for me," Baquera says. He says he learned a lot more of the methods involved in fine-jewelry making.

Not long after, Baquera began melding his

Not long after, Baquera began melding his Native American jewelry skills with his newly acquired fine gold and precious stones creations to create a unique, one-of-a-kind line of jewelry that he sold throughout California.

"Because I've gone and done a lot of things, it's easy to sketch out something, to show me a picture of something and recreate it," Baquera says.

Baquera says many of the stones he works with may look the same, but by sitting and listening to them, he can create something beautiful.

"The stone talks to you if you can sit and listen to it," Baquera says. "It's a challenge to make something that's a wearable item. You have to try and respect the customer, what they want, and the stone and what you are creating from it."

In working with a client, Baquera says he likes to get to know the person he is creating a piece for by listening to what they have to say.

to what they have to say.

"I start with having them describe what they like, what they would like to wear every day," Baquera says.

"I get my inspiration from the customer."

Baquera then uses the method that best fits the stone and the best way to mount it. "There are so many different methods, I draw from my experience and what's the best way to do it," he says.

Two methods he uses regularly are the lost wax carving process and the hand fabricating method. The lost wax carving process involves taking an item and creating a jewel in a piece of wax. The wax then becomes the metal, and then the stone is mounted. The second way, hand fabrication, starts out with casting the ring and setting the stone.

"The method really varies from stone to stone," Baquera says. "I usually design around the stone, sketching it out, designing and redesigning until I get a consensus of what the customer really wants, then I adjust it from there."

After Baquera lived in California, he and his family moved to Colorado where he sold his designs across the state. He won first place at the Historic Downtown Laramie Art Fair in 1996 and became known in the Colorado art community as a master craftsman.

Baquera returned to the Southwest in 1998 when his wife was diagnosed with cancer and wanted to move closer to her family. She became a cancer survivor, and now, their family calls Las Cruces home.

Along with jewelry, Baquera also creates hand-crafted hair accessories

Baquera also creates matching pieces using turquoise, a popular Southwest stone.

While still new to Jones & Co., 1300 El Paseo Road, Baquera has discovered that this job allows him to put forth all of his efforts and skills in both fine gold and American Indian jewelry. The store features a showcase dedicated to Baquera's designs, highlighting the skills he has spent more than 40 years perfecting.

"I fit in with this group of jewelers, and it's nice to work with other talented jewelers," Baquera says. "I try to bond with what I'm making for the customer because, really, I am helping create wearable art that will become an heirloom someday."

Baquera says he tells stories with the work he does in metal. "You have to express yourself in a way that really keeps you going," he says. "I like to feel like the jewelry is an expression of myself."

Central Elementary begins crochet club

Teachers and staff donate materials

Central Elementary School fourth-grade students have started a crocheting club, said Principal Eloisa Solis.

"The club started with monitor and volunteer Irma Gomez showing one student how to crochet. Now the group has grown and the girls meet after school and select the item to be worked on." Solis said.

school and select the item to be worked on," Solis said.

When asked why they are so interested in this almost lost craft, the girls said they found a connection to math. "We get to count by twos, threes, fours and so on. There is addition and multiplication. We also work with creating patterns and different designs and sometimes we work with symmetry. The best part is that it calms us down," the girls told Solis.

The first item finished by club members was a scarf. The girls are now crocheting for their parents' Christmas presents. Yarn and needles for the club were donated by Central Elementary staff members and by Gomez.

CALL TO ARTISTS

© FOR LOVE OF ART CELEBRATION SEEKS ARTISTS

The Town of Mesilla seeks artists to participate in the seventh annual For the Love of Art Celebration on the Mesilla Plaza from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 14, 2009.

Work must be original and created by the displaying artist. Artists must be present during the event. No imported, kit or commercial objects accepted. Artists must have, or obtain, a business license in the Town of Mesilla effective for the year March 15, 2008 through March 14, 2009.

In 1999, February was declared For the Love of Art Month in Las Cruces. The event in Mesilla is held in conjunction with the Las Cruces celebration in an effort to promote art and the business of art.

The deadline for artists is 5 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 31, 2009. For more information, call the Town of Mesilla at 524-3262, ext. 116, or email kmedina_tom@comcast.net.

@ AUDITIONS FOR "QUILTERS" AT THE BLACK BOX THEATRE

Auditions for "Quilters" by Molly Newman and Barbara Damashek, directed by Jim Eckman, will be held at 6:30 p.m. Dec. 2 and 3, at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Downtown Mall.

"Quilters" is the story of Sarah and her six daughters, a pioneer woman of the homestead era, told through music and dance. Each song or "story" is introduced by a quilt block that represents or describes the story. The play describes the life of the pioneer woman on the prairies of the United States, the joys and sorrows, the good times and bad. The play culminates in a legacy quilt that tells the story of the life of Sarah and her daughters.

Seven women, ages 16 through 60, and two young men, late teens through 20s, are needed for the performance.

Auditions will consist of reading from the script. Participants should be prepared to sing one song of their choice or from the show. A perusal script is available at the reference desk in the Thomas Branigan Memorial Library.

Rehearsals will commence Jan. 3, 2009, and will be Monday through Friday up to the opening of the show. Rehearsal starting time will be decided by consensus of the cast and director.

"Quilters," directed by Jim Eckman, will run in March during Women's History Month from March 6 through 29, 2009. Contact the director at jiminie44@comcast.net or 373-0717 for more information.

@ LAS CRUCES MUSEUM OF ART

The Las Cruces Museum of Art is currently accepting proposals for solo and group exhibitions by artists living and working in New Mexico, Arizona and Texas, to exhibit work in 2010. The prospectus is available online at the Museum of Art website http://museums. las-cruces.org and includes more information on proposal requirements. The deadline for submissions is June 19, 2009.

Artist proposals must include a brief statement on the proposed exhibit including media, general content of the show and proposed use of floor space. The proposal package should also include artist resume, artist statement and 10 to 20 thumbnail images of works for each of the artists included in the proposal.

Prominent members of the New Mexico artist community have been selected as the jurors including Cyndi Conn, visual arts director/curator of the Center for Contemporary Arts in Santa Fe, Arif Khan, gallery director of the Tamarind Institute in Albuquerque and Preston Thayer, director of the University Art Gallery at New Mexico State University. This is a wonderful opportunity for regional artists to show their highest quality work and receive museum-level exposure. Past exhibitions have included installations, sculpture, large-scale drawings and a variety of other media.

Call 541-2221 or email jmiller@las-cruces.org for more information.

© PRESTON CONTEMPORARY ART CENTER

This is a call for all media artists over the age of 18, who submit works that use nylon as the medium or as the content. The exhibition entitled "The Nylon Show," will be held at the Preston Contemporary Art Center in Mesilla, from Friday, April 10, through Sunday, June 28, 2009. The deadline for submission is Saturday, Dec. 1. Artists can submit up to five entries on a CD or DVD; a $30 submission fee is required. For a complete prospectus, visit the gallery or download from www.prestoncontemporaryart.com.

"Nylon" as a word suggests a variety of connotations within the art world in terms of nylon as a medium or as content. It can be considered a textile with surface, weight and strength, while at the same time offering elements of sexuality or spirituality in content. Its uses are multiple and as diverse as providing a surface for art or a human protection from death (Kevlar is but one type of nylon). The exhibit is about both media and content. Call 523-8713 for more information.

@ MESILLA VALLEY FINE ARTS GALLERY

The Mesilla Valley Fine Arts Gallery located at 2470-A Calle de Guadalupe, in Mesilla, across from the Fountain Theatre has immediate openings for local artists of all media and styles, including contemporary and abstract. For further information, call 522-2933, drop by the gallery or visit www.zianet.com/mvartgallery.

9 AUTHOR BOOK SIGNING

Geography writer Gregory McNamee and photographer Stephen Strom will discuss and sign copies of "Otero Mesa: Preserving America's Wildest Grassland" at Barnes and Noble Booksellers, 700 S. Telshor Blvd., from 6 to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 2.

'Otero Mesa" takes readers on a narrative and photographic journey of the half-million acres of unfettered grassland in southern New Mexico's Chihuahuan Desert. Home to migratory songbirds, rare native pronghorns, prairie dogs and stunning visual scenery. Otero Mesa is captured in the sonorous narrative of nature writer Gregory McNamee and the exquisite landscape and wildlife photography of Stephen Strom and Stephen Capra. Readers will come to realize the detailed contours, the vast horizons, and the unique wildlife of Otero Mesa. The cast of characters – agaves, ocotillos, vuccas, golden grasslands, yellow-headed blackbirds, kestrels, pepperweed and storm-covered mountains - embody the wild views of Otera Mesa, just as McNamee's four chapters - "The View from an Aplomado," "The View from a Missile," "Oil" and "Otero Mesa and the Fate of the Land" – represent the diverse human views.

The event is free and open to the public. Call 522-4499 for more information.

® STITCH 'N' VISIT

§ LA CASA BAZAAR

Music, mailboxes and marvelous merchandise will be featured at the La Casa Bazaar, an annual fundraising event for La Casa, the shelter for victims of domestic violence and their children. The Bazaar will be held at the Dickerson's Event Center, 3900 W. Picacho Ave., and will open with a preview from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 5, and continue from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6, and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7.

Tickets for the preview party are $12 and may be purchased in advance or at the door. This is an evening when vendor booths have special items for sale as well as some great bargains. Prime-time shopping on Friday includes snacks, a beverage and smaller crowds. In an effort to encourage shoppers to "go green," Friday night shoppers will also receive a reusable shopping bag from Albertsons.

Decorative mailboxes will be featured at the silent auction, a favorite booth at the Bazaar. Many of the boxes will be decorated so they may be used any time of the year. Winning bidders will be notified at 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7, before the Bazaar closes.

More than 100 artists will stock their booth spaces with merchandise, including clothing, decorations, jewelry, sculpture, pottery, furniture and many more items that are certain to delight the most discriminating shopper. Some shoppers report they begin and complete their holiday-season shopping at the La Casa Bazaar.

Children who attend the Bazaar on Saturday and Sunday are never charged the nominal $3 admission fee, but this year it will be suggested that children help fill Santa's sack. Each child 12 and under, who attends the Bazaar will be asked to remember a child at La Casa by contributing a new pair of socks or new T-shirt to Santa's Sack.

© NEW MEXICO FARM AND RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

The spirit of living in the rural Southwest is reflected in the "Western Heritage" art show presented at the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road, through March 28, 2009. Paintings, sculpture, wood crafting, gourd art and photography created by the members of the City of Artists Promotional Association inspire a deeper appreciation of New Mexico's rich heritage and can be viewed during the hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

© GLENN CUTTER JEWELERS AND GALLERY

Glenn Cutter Jewelers and Gallery will host Susi and Richard Bergquist through Dec. 31. The Bergquists are well known ceramic artists from San Simon, Ariz. Susi Bergquist does figures based on American Indian Folklore made of ceramic. There are coyotes, wolves, birds, ravens, owls, deer and many other animals. She also does ledger drawing depicting Indian history. Her wall pieces are call mojaves and are hummingbirds, bears, rabbits, porcupines and other creatures. She will also have some etchings, engraving and reduction linocuts.

Richard Bergquist is just as talented. He does santos or saints clay creations that sit on a shelf with objects representing the miracles of the saints at the base. Each saint has the professed blessing on the back of the pieces. He also does clay wall angels and nativity sets.

The two make all of their own ceramic clays from scratch. She makes figures from stories she draws of her own unique style. The figures are embellished with beads, fabric and hair the way the original Mojave Indian figures were.

② BLACK BOX THEATRE

"Photos and Fibers" an exhibit by John Gustinis and Joan Jensen, is currently on display at thetheatregallery at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Downtown Mall in Las Cruces. John Gustinis studied physics in Rochester, N.Y., then worked as a technician and engineer at several universities. Jensen studied art in Pasadena and then history at the University of California at Los Angeles. They met in 1971 in San Francisco while both were involved in the anti-war movement. This is their first exhibit together.

After moving to Las Cruces in 1976, they studied art at New Mexico State University off and on. Gustinis branched out into photography and Jensen into fiber arts. They claim to be modernists at heart, growing up during the era of abstract expressionism, but have ventured on to include more representational objects in their work as well, including landscapes, insects and plants. They spend much time outdoors. Jensen hikes while Gustinis kayaks. These experiences find a way into their art in many ways: colors, textures, images, forms, light and

NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY ART GALLERY
The New Mexico State University Art Gallery will exhibit a selection of 28 Andy Warhol photographs beginning with a gallery reception through Dec. 23. Original photographs taken by Warhol between 1970 and 1987 capture artists, celebrities and socialites as color Polaroid images, while the streets of New York were the subject of many of the black and white silver gelatin prints.

Warhol used photographs as the basis for his paintings, and so there are multiple, often repetitious images of any given subject. This, in turn, fed into the repetition seen in his silkscreened images - multiples of Jackie Kennedy or Elvis being among Warhol's most iconic works.

The gallery is located at 100 Williams Hall, Solano Drive at University Avenue. Call 646-2545 for more information.

® BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

"La Charreada: Fotos de ¡Los Charros Magnificos!" will be on display at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St. Photographer David Shaw happened on a procession of pick-up trucks and horse trailers traveling down a dusty road in Encinitas, Calif., and on impulse followed them. This led to Shaw's discovery of the world of La Charreada, the Mexican Horse Rodeo. An exhibit of silver gelatin prints celebrating the people, Los Charros, and the event, La Charreada, is the culmination of three years of travel into this centuries old competition and exhibition of horsemanship. "La Charreada: Fotos de ¡Los Charros Magnificos!" remains on display through Dec. 27.

Supplementing the photography will be information panels providing the history of La Charreada and describing the various events and feats. The panels will be presented in both English and Spanish.

Shaw has been involved in photography for more than 40 years. Inspired by Edward Weston's "Daybooks," he began working in black and white using a four-by-five view camera. For the Charreada series, Shaw used a twin lens Mamiya camera. Now settled in Las Cruces, he has established Estudio Azul and continues exploring new subjects with his camera.

The Branigan Cultural Center is located at the north end of the Downtown Mall in Las Cruces. The exhibit and reception is free and open to the public. Galleries are open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. Call 541-2154 or visit http://museums.las-cruces.org for more information.

Her exhibit includes award-winning paintings from recent shows as well as affordable miniatures.

Bobbie Widner prefers to express her talent in subject matter from abroad, mainly France and Italy, rendering in an old masters' style.

Beginning Wednesday, Nov. 26, through Jan. 5, 2009, the gallery will hold a "Holiday Sale of Original works and New Photography." A reception will follow on from 4 to 6 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 29, with cookies and cider. They will feature original unframed art works, a bargain for holiday gifts by saving the price of a frame.

In addition, the 30 artists of the Gallery offer art in many mediums, which include original paintings, encaustics, infused glass art jewelry, handmade cards, stained glass, photography, creative gourds, affordable prints and miniature paintings.

The gallery is located at 2470-A Calle de Guadalupe, across from the Fountain Theatre. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. Call 522-2933 or visit www.zianet.com/mvartgallery for more information.

International Delights: More than a traditional restaurant

Come and enjoy the hummus and gyros

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

World travelers who enjoy the cuisine of the Mediterranean, Europe or the Middle East don't have to travel quite that far to sample the flavor of those regions – they can do that at International Delights Café, 1245 El Paseo Road.

Owner Fatah Hafassa opened International Delights Café in 1997 after moving from Santa Fe and finding that Las Cruces contained a lot of potential for the particular cuisine Hafassa could offer.

"I wanted to introduce that type of cuisine to this part of the world," Hafassa says. "We have a different approach to café style. The menu itself is a product of years of experience working in places from London to Zurich, Switzerland to Los Angeles."

Hafassa has experience cooking, but says his primary focus lies in customer service and front-of-the-house duties. He prides himself in having the ability to find the good people who can compliment the business he has built.

"This city has experienced a lot of growth in the last 10 years or so," Hafassa says. "We are fortunate to be a part of this growth. Seeing your product or venture flourish and grow as the city grows is exciting. The timing was right for a business like this when I opened."

On any given night, patrons will find college students

On any given night, patrons will find college students studying, groups enjoying coffee, book clubs meeting and friends enjoying each other's company. International Delights Café offers free wireless Internet and plenty of space in their building and on their patio.

Some of the dishes they offer include the Gyro Plate,

Some of the dishes they offer include the Gyro Plate, served with a Greek salad and choice of one side dish, or the Mezza, hummus (garbanzo bean dip), tabouli (parsley and wheat salad), babaghanoudj (eggplant dip) and dolma (grape leaves stuffed with rice).

The cafe also offers more traditional fare in their chicken salad and albacore tuna or turkey and Swiss sandwiches. Their sandwiches come on a choice of sourdough, whole wheat, ciagatta, croissant or pita, along with lettuce, tomato and a choice of soup, salad or French something different – not just another restaurant."

The café is also known for their coffee shop with beans from around the globe.

Hafassa says students should feel comfortable going in to do their homework or bringing the family to explore the cuisines of different places around the world.

The café offers counter service, which saves time when people have a set time for lunch. They are open seven days a week and also cater for graduation parties, private business lunches, luncheons and much more.

The majority of their food items are healthy options for patrons, and Hafassa says they make sure their produce is chopped and cut every morning and the food is made to order.

They have a wide selection of desserts, including cakes and pies, along with the Turkish favorite baklava, a rich, sweet pastry found in many cuisines of the former Ottoman, Arab and Iranian countries.

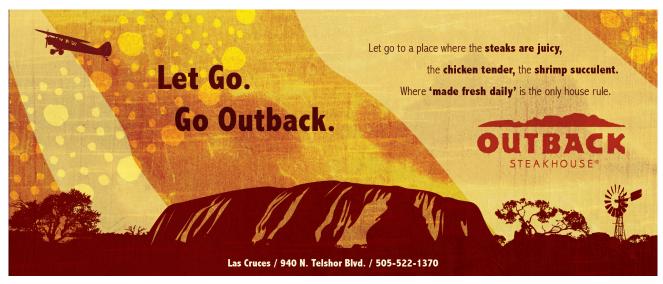

The café also offers breakfast options until 11 a.m.

"We are the only locally owned place that is open after 10 p.m. in Las Cruces," Hafassa says. "We really take pride in what we do and I think we have a really good product that people definitely enjoy when they buy."

'Cinderella' charms audiences

All ages can enjoy this re-telling of a classic

REVIEW BY TODD G. DICKSON The Las Cruces Bulletin

If you think you know "Cinderella" by heart, you may want to check out the American Southwest Theatre Company's production of this fairy tale about a young girl who – well, you know, wicked stepmother, evil stepsisters, fairy godmother, Prince Charming, glass slipper fits.

fits.

But this play by Sue Hollenbeck – found after searching through numerous versions of the classic story, according to Tom Smith of the New Mexico State University Theatre Arts Department, who co-directed the play with Rebecca MacCallum – adds some new characters, a few different plot twists and answers some lingering questions.

Through some fun comic moments with an exuberant cast, "Cinderella" turns out to be a fun evening for all ages, such as the audience I saw the play with at NMSU's Hershel Zohn Theatre. Yes, there were lots of girls, but there were college students and older couples also enjoying the play.

The play begins in familiar enough territory. In a washroom with piles of clothes that Cinderella must endlessly wash for her keep. Cinderella is played with a perfect mix of big-eyed wistfulness and engaging sorrow by Denise Castañeda, a NMSU theater senior, who even has a pleasant singing voice when she is called on to sing a couple of times.

This Cinderella dreams of the world outside and, thankfully, this play gives her someone to tell those dreams to, rather than through soliloquies. That person is Patches, played by another NMSU theater senior, Josh Tafoya. Patches is a sweet, but dim, friend of Cinderella – her only friend – who sneaks visits with her. Patches works in the castle of the royal family, providing opportunities for Cinderella to share her dreams and travel, and he lets her know about what's going on with the royal family, especially Prince Charmaigne – which is often mispronounced as "Prince Charming."

Keeping "Cinderella" from the outside world is her stepmother, played more as a broad, foolish woman than someone full of spite by Ruth Cantrell, who is well-known to local theater patrons. Through her conversations with Patches, we learn that Cinderella endures this life of drudgery out of guilt for her father abandoning his new wife and family.

Besides performing endless chores for her stepmother, she also is servile to the whiny dictates of her two stepsisters, Petunia and Gladiola. NMSU theater students Sarah Vannest playing Petunia and Amy Archibeque playing Gladiola almost steal the show with their antics. More spoiled and supercilious than cruel and mean, they provide many laughs through farce reminiscent of the old "I Love Lucy" show. Think of Lucy and Ethel working on the candy factory assembly line and you get the kind of thing that these two pull off as the sisters who are both allies and competitors. Archibeque is the standout, showing a wonderfully animated comic flair – her Gladiola is a cartoon come to life, with fawning eyes, a dexterous face and an unselfconscious use of her whole body. She is the "Lucy" of the two, if you will.

Because we all know the tale, let's fast-forward to the ball, where a couple of other new twists are added. Prince Charmaigne is being pressured by his parents to marry Princess Goldenrod, who's even more vain than the stepsisters, but wealthy enough to save the kingdom from bankruptcy. Another NMSU student, Katie Lovato, has the thankless task of playing what turns out to be the most unlikable character in the whole play.

After meeting the transformed Cinderella, Prince Charmaigne – played more earnest than princely by NMSU student Sean Dolan – must decide between the woman who would be best for his family, or the woman who has captured his heart. This complicates things enough to make the story new and engaging, even for the adults.

If you noticed that there are a lot of NMSU students in this production, that is true, but they all do a great job of breathing life into this familiar fairy tale. Assisting this troupe is Candace Craig-Hardie of Lordsburg, which made the ballroom scenes work especially well. The production crew employs some creative techniques to create magical moments when the story calls for them.

Atomic theory not all that difficult to understand

Black Box Theatre's 'Copenhagen' is anything but dry

REVIEW BY JON SWALBY For the Las Cruces Bulletin

No Strings Theatre Company at the Black Box Theatre presents the Tony Award-winning "Copenhagen," written by Michael Frayn, directed by Zac Bannister and produced by Ceil Herman. The play features Richard Rundell as Niels Bohr, Claudia Billings as Margrethe Bohr and Josh Shakra as Werner Heisenberg

Werner Heisenberg.

When I first read this play's press release, I became worried. The plot sounded as if it might be dry and tedious and I got the impression that if one did not have a working knowledge of atomic structure and of the history of "the bomb," it would be easy to become lost. I was close on a couple of counts. The play did strike me as being a bit tedious. It seemed like it took a very long time to get to the meat of the matter. Dry, it was not. While there are numerous references to historical data, I didn't really become lost in them. They were necessary to set the places, the characters and the time lines. The historical knowledge I was concerned about would have been an advantage, but turned out to be a non-issue. That left the press release.

So, let me try to decipher what I saw last night. Niels Bohr was a Danish physicist. Werner Heisenberg was a German physicist and was Bohr's young protégé. They worked together from 1924 to 1927 and were among a handful of scientists who developed an understanding of atomic theory. They collaborated until 1933 when the Nazis came into power. From that time on, due to the exclusion of Jews from Nazi Germany's vision, a continued collaboration became difficult. it became impossible when the war began in 1939.

The story revolves around Heisenberg's travel to Copenhagen in 1941 to meet with Bohr to determine what they had discussed in those early war years. Germany had attempted to develop "the bomb" but failed. Whether this was due to a lack of expertise and execution, or a lack of conviction appears to remain a mystery to this day.

The crux of this play is the reminiscing, the discussions and the arguments that go on between Bohr, his wife and Heisenberg while trying to remember exactly what each had said to the others in that 1941 meeting. These discussions are interestingly staged in spotlighted cameos, if you will. One or two of the characters would be in the dark while the speaker was lit. I found this very effective in isolating the memories and thoughts of each individual

Another interesting technique was the use of repetition, which was explained to us by Bannister prior to the opening of Act 1. There are several "catch" lines or phrases, which take on different meanings each time they are used.

In Act 2, the audience is visually and physically distanced by the use of black costumes and music stands placed between the audience and cast. According to Bannister, this was done to heighten the isolation and encouraged the audience to focus on the dialogue. In Act 2, we finally learn exactly what Bohr and Heisenberg were trying to remember and determine.

It wasn't until after the play, as I was walking to the parking lot, that I realized – thanks to a quick conversation with Shakra – that we had essentially seen the play three times. That is how the repetition Bannister referred to earlier came into play. Each iteration brought more to light. We began to have a better understanding of the relationship between the principle players. We knew them better. We understood their pain and anger. I'll leave you with that.

Would I encourage you to see this play? Certainly. Despite "Copenhagen" being fairly complicated and challenging to comprehend, I liked it. It is well written and I think that the direction was "interesting." Don't take that to mean that the direction was done badly. It was just unusual. There's nothing wrong with unusual.

"Copenhagen" runs through Sunday, Dec. 7, at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Downtown Mall. Reservations can be made by calling the theater at 523-1223 or visiting www.no-strings.org.

'Bottle Shock' is a fun film with a fine bouquet

Pullman, Pine star in this quirky drama

REVIEW BY JEFF BERG

"Bottle Shock" is a movie with dueling personalities. On one hand, it is a really fun and interesting true story about how the California wine industry drubbed the French wine industry some years back in a formal taste test, thus gaining much fame and fortune for domestic grape stompers. This part, especially the scenes that contain Alan Rickman, is really, really good.

contain Alan Rickman, is really, really good.

The other part is a rather clunky love story, which could have been better filled by allowing Rickman more screen time.

The story starts in the mid 1970s. Bill Pullman, as Jim Barrett, a former lawyer, plays the owner of a struggling California winery, and his son, Bo, has come home to loaf and roost. They don't get along too well, and this is well documented in their friendly boxing matches which helps the two men let off steam.

On the other hand, Rickman (as Steven Spurrier) is a serious wino, or wine shop owner, perhaps leaning toward being an oenologist. His small English shop is suffering, and on a dare from a friend, he sets out to prove that the French are overestimating their skills when it comes to winemaking. He ends up, of course, in the Napa Valley of California, where he encounters several vineyard owners, eventually bumping into the Barrett's.

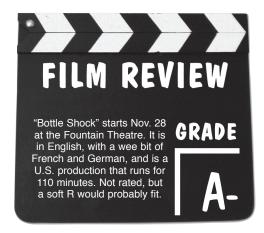

Snobbery ensues, as Spurrier is not initially impressed by the California offerings and has several sharp verbal bouts with Barrett and others. Bo, sporting a very bad wig, more or less stands aside, observing, but also wooing a new wine intern, the beautiful and smart Samantha.

This is a weak part of the film. Sam seems like an afterthought, and her role is not well played by Rachael Taylor. Her perky attitude and flirty demeanor attract another young man who works at Barrett's winery, Gustavo, who is secretly making his own wine while trying to manage the Barrett establishment.

It is not long, however, until Spurrier comes to see the quality of the California wines that he tastes, and decides to take some back to France for the blind taste test competition that he has set up. The competition leads to some surprises, and has probably helped California wineries in sales over the years – 457 million gallons of California wines were sold in 2007.

Almost every character in this beautifully photographed film is clearly drawn. Pullman does a great job of portraying a man who has given up money for passion, Rickman is superb as the slightly haughty Englishman who comes around, Bo is a slacker royal and Sam, well, she is just kinda there – a distraction at best.

A brief, but very erroneous scene also mars the production a bit, when a fully uniformed United States Postal Service carrier wanders into Barrett's vineyard to hand him a Western Union telegram. (Sorry, but I pick up on these things and this one was too obvious to ignore, since I wore one of those uniforms for too many years, and Western Union was not part of the job.)

All in all, "Bottle Shock" is a very fun and light picture. Don't take it too seriously, since there are moments when the bouquet is just a little bit off. Wine connoisseurs will appreciate this quote from Galileo that one of the characters shares during a sparkling moment: "Wine is sunlight held together by water."

This is a rosy little movie held together by its overall tone and the presence of Rickman.

There will be free drawings for bottles of wine and other goodies, before each screening, compliments of Vintage Wines of Mesilla.

New Mexico-made film perfect for the holiday

'The Milagro Beanfield War' directed by Robert Redford

The CineMatinee film at the Fountain Theatre for Saturday, Nov. 29, is "The Milagro Beanfield War" (1988, 117 minutes, rated R, but just barely, made in New Mexico). Out of state relatives in town for the holiday? Then they (and you) need to attend our special screening of the quintessential made-in-New-Mexico movie.

"The Milagro Beanfield War" was directed by part-time New Mexico resident Robert Redford and adapted from John Nichols' 1974 novel. The film is set in a small town in northern New Mexico where a developer is building a leisure-time resort replete with condos, tennis courts and a golf course. When Joe (Chick Vennera), a handyman from Milagro, irrigates his half-acre beanfield with water from an acequia, which is controlled by the development, he sets in motion a series of events that reveal the underside of the Anglo's vision of progress.

Among the colorful performers in this picaresque

Among the colorful performers in this picaresque tale are Salsa singer Ruben Blades as the sheriff who tries to stem the tide of troubles in the town; Brazil's Sonia Braga as Ruby, the community's passionate political activist; John Heard as a burnt-out 1960s lawyer and publisher of the local newspaper; Daniel Stern as a graduate student from the East who is studying Hispanic culture; and Christopher Walken as an undercover agent for the state police. A religious old man and his angelic companion (Roberto Carricart) serve as catalysts to bring about Hispanic solidarity.

serve as catalysts to bring about Hispanic solidarity.
Screenplay writers David Ward and John Nichols have successfully translated the novel's delightful mix of fantasy, folklore and comedy to the screen.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is at 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members, who are admitted for $1. The Fountain Theatre is at 2469 Calle de Guadalupe in Mesilla. Call 524-8287 or 522-0286 for more information.

'Twilight' a perfect date movie

Vampire teen flick endurable to novel-series newcomers

REVIEW BY JIM HILLEY

"Twilight" is an adaption of a book in the four-part Twilight Saga written by Stephenie Meyer. The "Twilight" series has been scooped up by millions of fans and has been compared to the Harry Potter books. Meyer even credits J.K. Rowling, author of that series, as one of her influenced.

Young Bella Swan, played by Kristen Stewart, moves from her home in Tuscon, Ariz., where she has been living with her mother, to Forks, a small town in Washington. Her father is police chief in the community of 3,000, and though she hasn't visited the village since childhood, she seems to fit in well with the other high school kids.

Soon, Bella crosses paths with Edward Cullen, played by Robert Pattinson, a member of a family with some rather odd qualities. Pattinson also played Cedric in "Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix.'

Readers of the books, and probably anyone who has seen a trailer of heard the buzz about this movie, know what the oddity is - they're vampires.

The film is mostly a tale of teenage romance, with a fair amount of action and some suspense mixed in. The film is targeted at a female audience, but if your girlfriend is going to drag you to a chick flick, this is not a bad one to choose. Just don't feel bad if all the guys in the movie are better looking than you, and remember, you get to choose the next movie.

While the lead characters never seem to develop any great chemistry in this movie, the supporting cast is rather good, and they have all the best lines. The high school scenes could come out of any number of teen mov> ies, or teen television series for that matter.

Naturally, when a vampire falls in love with an ordinary human, well, there's going to be trouble all around. Soon dead bodies are turning up, the police chief is making sure his daughter is carrying pep-per spray and a group of mysterious bad guys appear.

The pace of Twilight starts out pretty slow, and doesn't really pick up until near the end. If you find all the romantic scenes boring ... well the state of Washington is really beautiful.

I went to this movie with no knowledge of the books, and frankly I am not in the target audience - not even close. I left the theater feeling entertained and maybe even a little pleasantly surprised. I believe people who are familiar with the books will really enjoy it. It has a good enough plot and enough action and suspense to make it interesting.
I'll give this movie three stars out of five. If your girlfriend wants to drag you to this, resist a little, but let her talk you in to it.

Smooth Lou and the Ags in one gulp

Lou Henson looks like a million dollars. He walks without a cane now. He swims, works out in the gym and plays golf.

More importantly, he still buys lunch. We dined exotically at University Golf Course last week. Hamburgers. "Why me?" he asks when told I needed an interview.

"Slow news week," I said. Henson laughed like always, proof that he can still take a bad joke.

Lou is, and will always be, a heavy-weight. A stud. He's friendly, outgo-ing, and he never met a handshake he didn't like. I remember when he coached the Aggies, he always listed his number in the telephone book. That took guts. Most coaches either have unlisted numbers or none at all.

Aware of Lou's basketball expertise, I asked for his take on the Aggies' current team that has looked potentially strong so far this season. Lou credits coach Marvin Menzies. "Marvin is doing a great job," Henson said. "He gets out in the community. He's visible. He's organized and well-known as a good recruiter. That's a key. You have to have players to win.

"I go to practice once in a while, and I go to the games. From what I've seen, let me tell you, Marvin's team is talented. Real talented.

"They're young, though. It's going to take time for them to develop. By the time the conference schedule comes around, they'll be hard to beat.

"They can do the five things all good teams have to do. No. 1, they can fast break. No. 2, they can penetrate. You have to be able to penetrate. They have good inside talent and they can shoot the threes. They can also hit the 13- to 15-foot shots. That's very McKines (Wendell, the Ags' sophomore forward) can jump high for a guy his size. Good rebounder. They're going to be good inside with those two 6-11 guys (Chris Gabriel and Hamidu Rahman). They're both freshmen, though.

"And, hey, they can hit free

Henson, a strong disciple of good defense, predicts the Aggies will be strong in that area. "They can play man, zone, they can cover the floor and block shots," he said.

"You give them time, they'll be something to watch."

New Mexico State, 2-1 after last Friday's victory over Pepperdine, faces a tough road swing that begins at Long Beach State Sunday. NMSU faces Kansas, the defending national champs, on Wednesday and North Texas Saturday.

I thought about asking Henson for a prediction but declined.

He's too classy to touch that one.

LCHS, Trojans in Saturday re-match

The teams are the same. So are the coaches, the players and the stadium.

But the stakes will be higher on Saturday when the Mayfield Trojans and the Las Cruces Bulldawgs meet for the second time this month.

The two powerhouses face off in the Class 5A state football semifinals at 1 p.m. Saturday in Aggie Memorial Stadium. About 26,000 people watched LCHS defeat Mayfield 22-21 three weeks ago in the regular-season finale for both teams. This time, the winner moves on to the state championship game and the loser

In the other Class 5A state semifinal game on Saturday, Clovis plays Eldorado Wilson Stadium in Albuquerque.

Even though they are very familiar with each other, the head coaches for Mayfield and Las Cruces said the preparation remains the same. The only difference is they have an extra day to prepare because the game is on Saturday.

"As a coach, we have the same routine," said Mayfield coach Michael Bradley. "We'll still watch the same amount of film and see what we did right, what we did wrong last time and what we need to do to get better."

Bradley said the biggest challenge in LCHS-Mayfield games is the noise.

"It's loud at Aggie Memorial Stadium in there," he said. "We're trying to prepare for everything, but it's hard to simulate that noise in practice."

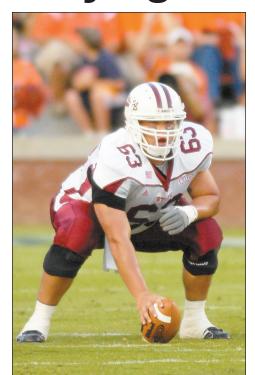

When Las Cruces coach Jim Miller watches film of the Trojans, he sees enough big plays to be concerned. Mayfield blew out La Cueva, 45-7, in their semifinal game last week and surprised Las Cruces with some big pass plays in the first meeting with the Bulldawgs.

"La Cueva turned the ball over four times, and Mayfield hit some big plays in the passing game," said Miller. "And they hit some big plays in the first game against us. Their quarterback (Austin Hooker) is throwing the ball well and that opens up their running game. We have to be aware of both."

Aggie center defies medical advice

By JOHN KEITH
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Despite doctor's orders, he played last Saturday on one leg, practically.

"My mom didn't like it either," laughed

Richie Bolin, New Mexico State's starting

The concern was understandable. Bolin had suffered a torn ACL in his right knee during the Aggies' 48-45 victory at Nevada

"They told me I'd never play again," Bolin said. "I knew I would, though."

Following a four-week sabbatical from competition and with his knee embalmed in tape, Bolin returned to play against Fresno State on Nov. 15. "The doctors kept telling me not to," he said. "I decided to go ahead and try it anyhow. I didn't have any problems. My knee didn't feel bad at all."

Last Saturday, the knee entombed in a brace and heavily taped, Bolin played against Louisiana Tech. "All 80 offensive plays," he said proudly.

NMSU's medical team has apparently surrendered. Bolin is determined to give it another shot in the Aggies' finale Saturday at Utah State. "I'm a senior," he said. "It's our last game and we still have something the next level (the NFL), so why not?"

Surgery, Bolin knows, is mandatory at season's end. "I figure I'll go on and go through with it (surgery)," he said. "Might as well have it done while I'm young."

Most of Bolin's blocking assignments

call for lateral or backward movement. It's easier on knees than going forward. "We don't call many running plays," he said. There's not much forward running, so I don't have much uncomfort."

Coach Hal Mumme explains the importance of Bolin's presence in the lineup. "The two most important guys on offense are the quarterback (Chase Holbrook) and the center," Mumme said. "The quarterback calls the plays, the center calls the blocking assignments

"When Richie's in there, it has a calming effect on the other guys. He's a senior, a leader, and they know it."

Holbrook is most certainly convinced. He plays his best working behind Bolin. Against La Tech last week, Holbrook threw for 486 yards and four touchdowns. He was well protected.

"When he's (Bolin) playing, the rest

LCHS, MHS highlight holiday

State semi-final game set for Saturday

Sports fans in the City of the Crosses will enjoy a special holiday-season treat at 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 29.

Mayfield and Las Cruces share what is perhaps the greatest cross-town high school football rivalry in the entire nation, and these teams will play a state championship semi-final game at Aggie Memorial Stadium. A significant portion of our local citizens have been wearing red and blue or green and gold in anticipation of this event since Monday. A crowd of 28,000-plus is anticipated.

When the Bulldawgs and Trojans meet in the playoffs, the intensity of this rivalry heightens to a feverish pitch. Notoriously competitive, the outcome of most of these contests goes down to the final plays. The Bulldawgs won the district championship game three weeks ago by a single point in the final minute. The Trojans held off LCHS last year in the

At stake tomorrow is yet another berth in the state championship game against either Clovis or Albuquerque Eldorado. Amazingly, after the 2008 season ends, either Mayfield or Las Cruces High will have played in the New Mexico High School championship game 13 times since 1995. And since 1995, the City of the Crosses high school football programs have won 10 titles, with Mayfield winning six (including the last three), Las Cruces winning three and Oñate winning one. Perhaps next week either Las Cruces or Mayfield will earn the right to hang yet another championship marker above the locker room entrances at the Field of Dreams.

This week, the players and coaching staffs for both teams have continued to employ the work ethic that brings them to the brink of another championshipwinning opportunity. Concentration on specific assignments and an emphasis on leadership and teamwork are a way of life at both programs. A combination of the dedication of these young men and their coaches to intense year-round training processes and the deep level of financial support this community provides for them, has brought incredible regional notoriety to our city.

Tomorrow, people from all over the nation will be in Las Cruces to witness this unique event. In doing so, they will pour tens of thousands of dollars into our local economy. Additionally, our city will generate an enormous payday for the New Mexico Activities Association, the body that regulates high school athletics in our state. As far as the NMAA is concerned, Las Cruces is the city that keeps on giving.

On KSNM-AM 570, the radio coverage will reflect the magnitude of the interest in this event. The show will begin two hours before kickoff with interviews of former players and coaches. There will also be an intriguing discussion of coaching and athletic match-ups. At 1 p.m., Brad Beasley and I will have the great privilege of providing the live call of the game. It will be a blast.

We hope to see you there.

Can old dogs learn new tricks?

New research in neuroscience may say it is possible

I am suggesting that your brain

is inviting you to be young again.

The more we learn about the human brain, the more amazing it is. New research in neuropsychology is telling us that, as we get older, our brains can actually get better instead of the other way around. Now understand that I'm somewhat of a specialist in gero-psychology, seeing lots of Alzheimer's patients in a clinical setting, and this is good news. The phenomenon is called brain plasticity, and as golfers, we should be informed, and yes excited,

To keep things simple – in a $realm\ which\ is\ \bar{truly}\ not\ simple-let$ me pique your interest with some truths about the brain and how it. works. Our brains may be the most adaptable organ we have. While it was once thought that our brain just gradually deteriorated as we aged (from 50 on) neuroscience is demonstrating that the aging brain can change and actually improve. It means that learning new ideas and behaviors is possible. But learning requires memory, suggesting that brain training and brain experiencing are probably worthwhile, even as we advance and our bodies stiffen.

Let's take the average 60-year-old golfer. He's been playing about the same game, on the same golf course, with the same group, using the same swing, getting the same results, for about the last 15 years. Time, and habit, along with Arthur(itis) have beaten him into submission, so he tends to accept golf stagnation. One of the things we know about the aging brain is that if you keep doing the same thing over and over again, especially when you're older, you end up making your brain more rigid. Do you want a cement brain? Basically that's what happens with Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder (OCD), where the mind-driven behavior becomes stereotyped and beyond the individual's control. It's nowhersville as a golfer.

Fundamentally, what I'm saying is that if you want to improve your golf game as a senior you can't rely on upgrading your physical skills. You have to change your brain, and here's what you need to know to do that.

First of all, brain plasticity requires motivation. You have to be willing to change and be in a mood to learn new stuff. In golf, that translates to taking lessons and trying things out of your comfort zone. It may also mean getting into a more golf-like routine of practicing and maybe even working out.

Secondly, we can only change things we're aware of, $150⁰⁰ - $175⁰⁰ more space for your toes to stretch, curl and even wiggle. Plus, they're protected by our non-metalic safety toe. Built to Fit. Built to Last Red Wing Shoes of Las Cruces 142 Wyatt Drive • 524-2486 Open Monday-Friday 10am-6pm • Saturday 10am-2pm and things we're paying attention to. Please note that high self-awareness is one of the key requirements of mental toughness. Golfers need a lot of feedback, both from observers and themselves. I mean both positive and critical feedback. When you heighten your self-awareness you increase your chances of understanding what went wrong - and then correcting it. Again, we have the ability to change.

Thirdly, challenging ourselves with new tasks and games turns on the brain plasticity switches. Play new golf courses, perhaps even with different companions. Be willing to upgrade your equipment and take advantage of new technology. We absolutely have to step out of our comfort zone once in a while if we are to grow and improve, regardless of our age. Some of the excuses I hear for not doing anything different are lame. For example, I hear, "If it ain't broke don't fix it." My belief is if you're not the best you can possibly be, then it is "broke" and maybe you can do better. But that's just me – a self-avowed lifelong overachiever. Another really lame one is if I get better, my handicap will go down. I guess my editorials are no comfort to sandbaggers. I'm interested in golfers who consider themselves students of the game and who want to reach their potential. Staying entrenched in habits may be comforting but it's a no-growth behavior.

Research is telling us that learning new skills and behaviors is the very best way to slow mental aging. Can an old dog learn new tricks? You bet. The bad news is that intensive learning, in many cases, is harder when we get older. And as we get older we tend to resist things that are harder. Trying to learn a new language, for example, is much easier at age six than at age 60, mainly because humans have a hard-wired "language learning device" acting much like a brain sponge in children. Still, throughout the lifespan, challenging ourselves with new and difficult tasks turns on the brain's plasticity switches. Doing the same old thing over and over turns off those switches.

So I'm suggesting that your brain is inviting you to be young again. The bottom line for you and me as senior golfers who want to get better is skill acquisition. Skill building would certainly extend to learning new mental toughness techniques, such as acute visualization. We can go a long way by promoting positive brain change (no, it's not too late!) through harnessing our potential for brain plasticity. Be open-minded. Try different problem-solving approaches. In golf that means different shots and creative strategies. And mostly don't get stuck in old habits.

Here are some resources for you. The first is "The Brain That Changes Itself: Stories of Personal Triumph from the Frontiers of Brain Science" by Norman Doidge. Publishers Weekly says this about Doidge's book: evidence is turning up to show that the brain can rewire itself ... (and) can be strengthened just like a weak muscle ... (it's) about some of the least understood marvels of the brain." A reviewer notes, "buy this book and your brain will thank you." Next consider author Sharon Begley's "Train Your Mind, Change Your Brain: How a New Science Reveals Our Extraordinary Potential to Transform Ourselves." Dense with research findings on human potential, this fusion of psychological, spiritual and neuro-scientific approaches to growth represents and neuro-scientific approaches to growth represents an overview of how people can become more intellectu-ally open and more skilled at what they most like to do. Lastly, I recommend a DVD, "The Brain Fitness Pro-gram," done in 2007 for PBS Television. If you're looking for inspiration to change your old habits and start rewiring your brain, regardless of age, this video will do that. Books and videos are all available through Amazon and Barnes & Noble.

Natalie McMillan is a 17-year-old senior at Mesilla Valley Christian Schools. She is a power forward on the varsity basketball team, averaging 15 points, nine rebounds, six blocks and two steals per game. McMillan is a great spiritual leader, as well as a leader on the court.

She has a 3.5 GPA, is a member of the National Honor Society, is involved with the Rotary Club and her church youth group and is interested in majoring in business and pre-law.

Greg Patti

Greg Patti is a 16-year-old junior at Mesilla Valley Christian Schools and is a shooting guard for the varsity SonBlazer's basketball team. He averages 13 points, three steals and Patti is a leader on and off the court. He has a great sense of humor and is active in his church. Patti has a 3.5 GPA, and when not on the court or in the classroom, he enjoys golfing and hanging out with the guys.

Much to be thankful for

NMSU athletes, fans are generous

Pete knows that the Thanksgiving Day holiday was Thursday, but I want to take the opportunity to share with you the things that I am thankful for. There are so many things that warm an ole prospector's heart, and I'm not sure where

How about the generosity of our community? Through the athletics department, Aggie fans near and far contributed to operation Crimson Ribbon that put more than 1,000 of our service men and women in the stands for every home football game. It takes a special person to give and we have some of the best givers wearin' Crimson and White. While we're at it, let's add the businesses that sponsored the bleacher creatures for home football as well. These kids got a good taste of how much fun it can be to go to an Aggie game, some of them come from situations where there is no money for entertainment like this, so again, Pete's heart is warmed by this giving spirit.

This saddletramp's eyes grow misty when I think back about how much good is being done by the department's effort to raise money for breast cancer research. More than half a million dollars has been added to the fund at New Mexico State University and the University of New Mexico. Pete thinks about my sis who left this world prematurely to this cussed disease. I rise up a little prouder when I see what the Aggies have taken on toward this mission.

I am thankful for Chase

Holbrook. Not because he threw for a lot of touchdowns and led the Aggies to some exciting wins. But because he is a true gentleman, he stayed for more than half an hour on the field after the last home game, signing autographs and hearing from Aggie fans who thanked him for coming to town. His behavior after a tough loss was admirable.

There are also thanks to the people in the athletics department who will never get to hit a 3-point shot, slam a volleyball for a point or do an end-zone dance, but they are a part of the team that makes that all happen. The Janets and Nancys, the Connie Lous and Nates are doing their job day after day without a headline or a letter jacket. The Anns and the Jennys, the Marthas and the Sylvias, who answer the phones, relay the information to their bosses and do it all with their eyes on the greater good, rather than an all-conference award.

We have a wonderful life here in the Mesilla Valley. It isn't about always getting your way or having the best possessions in your neighborhood. It's about giving and caring, I am so thankful we have those kinds of folks around the Aggie campfire.

Basketball teams gear up for holiday matches

Aggies shut down Pepperdine

There are several reasons to be excited about the coming hoops season. The men's team hits the road Saturday, Nov. 29. for a week out of town. NBA style, and the women host their Thanksgiving event in the Pan Am.

The holiday tournament is becoming a regular-schedule item for head coach Darin Spence's squad. This year, Loyola is in town along with Texas A&M from Corpus Christi. Spence's crew has had a pair of heartbreaking losses on the road and are no doubt be happy to get some home cooking on the court after some Turkey Day vittles on Thursday. Madison Spence showed she can light it up ringing up 30 points at Kent State. The emergence of Danisha Corbett has been a nice plus, too. Corbett has been out of the blocks quick on both the offensive and defensive side of the court, defense is what makes coach Spence happiest during the games.

The men's head coach, Marvin Menzies, has some momentum to take on the road. Sunday, Nov. 30, his team tries to conquer another West Coast opponent at Long Beach State. The 49ers were one of the weakest opponents the Aggies faced last year, but Dan Monson has propped things up heading into his second term on the beach. Donovan Morris is back to do most of the scoring, but a transfer from Colorado State and highly touted freshmen are making Monson's squad competitive. They lost a squeaker to Wisconsin on the road and are unbeaten at home. After the 49ers, NMSU faces the defending national champions in Lawrence, Kan. The Jayhawks are not expected to be in the running for the Big 12 title, but should have a talented team. A visit to one of college basketball's greatest arenas is a trip highlight as well. Allen Field House matches the Cameron Indoor Stadium and Freedom Hall for college hoops lore. You may recall the Aggies were at Duke and Louisville a year ago. The final stop on the road is in Denton, Texas, for some payback to the Mean Green. North Texas stole one from the Aggies in the Pan Am last year.

Here are reasons for a good season in this reporter's opinion. The hustling way the Aggie men have played defense so far. Gordo Castillo has had two good games on the "D" side of the ball, and the way NMSU shut down Pepperdine in the second half, Nov. 21, was fun to see. No one doubts the shooting capabilities of Jahmar Young and Jonathan Gibson and the addition of Troy Gillenwater is a third inside weapon that brings more to the table. The season is young, but a fast start is the best way to get a winning year on the horizon.

Did You Know ...

The Aggie football team concludes the 2008 season at Utah State. The Navyclad Aggies lead the all-time series, 26-6, but NMSU defeated Utah State in the 1960 Sun Bowl, 20-13.

The NMSU men's basketball team returns to Lawrence, Kan., for a game at Kansas Dec. 3, which is the first meeting in 43 years between the two programs.

Aggie student-athlete spotlight

Madison Spence Sophomore Women's Basketball

Sophomore guard Madison Spence became the 15th Aggie and the first since Dec. 4, 2003, to record a 30-point game, as she scored a career-high 30 points against Kent State, Nov. 23. Her 30-point outburst came on 8-of-15 shooting, and she made five 3-pointers, which was also a new personal best. She was 9-of-11 at the free-throw line and had a season-high seven assists in the game. Spence has now scored 10 or more points in every game this season and leads the team in scoring (16.8 points per game), assists (2.75 assists per game) and 3-pointers made (10-of-20).

Senior Volleyball

Senior Lindsey Yon averaged 3.80 kills per set while leading the Aggies to two wins the in the WAC Tournament. She was named to the all-tournament team for the second consecutive year. You posted a pair of double-doubles, which makes 12 this season. She also came up with 3.40 digs per set and had five service aces on the week

Men's Basketball

New Mexico State sophomore guard Jahmar Young led the Aggies to 90-66 win over Pepperdine Nov. 21 at the Pan American Center. Young posted a game-high 21 points, which was also a season-high mark. He was 8-of-12 from the field and 4-for-4 from the free-throw line. Young also added a career-high six assists in the victory. At No. 20 Southern California, Young scored a team-high 16 points, but the Trojans avoided the upset, 73-60, at the Galen Center in Los Angeles, Calif., Nov. 18. Young also recorded a career-high seven rebounds.

of the team feels more comfortable," Holbrook said. "Grady (Mike, Bolin's backup) is good, but he's only a freshman."

Holbrook and Bolin are roommates. There's coldblooded ribbing between the two. "Before last Saturday's game," Holbook said with a mischievous grin, "I told Richie to suck it up. Throw some vapor rub on his knee and get out there and play. Put a Band Aid on it."

Bolin's absence only compounded the problems NMSU's offensive line has endured this season. Tackles Kyle Smith and Joe Buschmann are out for the season with injuries. Right tackle Patrick Blount spent time healing on the bench but has returned.

"It's been something new every week," Bolin said.

"It's been something new every week," Bolin said. "Right now, we're playing up front with one freshman, one sophomore, one junior and two seniors."

Mumme voices strong admiration for his senior center. "He's the greatest guy I know," said NMSU's coach. "On the plane ride back from Nevada, he told me that he was not out for the season. That he would come back and play again.

"Somehow, despite the severity of his injury, I knew he might."

earlier this month, Las Cruces got its offense going in the second half, especially in the fourth quarter. While the Bulldawgs hit some big passes, they also took control on the ground behind the running of James Hall Jr. Hall had another outstanding game when LCHS beat Manzano 42-33 in last week's playoff game. The senior running back had 24 carries for 192 yards in that contest.

"We played a pretty decent game against (Las Cruces) until the fourth quarter," Bradley said. "We have to do a better job of finishing out games in the fourth quarter."

Miller said both teams are similar in that they are effective at running the ball and can also strike through the air. Both teams are also very familiar with each other.

"They know us, and we know them," Bradley said. "We're not going to fool each other. The young men will determine who wins and who loses. It's making tackles on defense and blocking and executing on offense.

"In that first game, I'm not sure if Cruces won it or we lost it. But there's no question that they won the fourth quarter and that's what counts"

Miller said the game likely will come down to big plays and turnovers, a recipe Mayfield used to roll over La Cueva.

Ags jump to No. 25 in volleyball

NMSU finishes 2nd to Hawaii at WAC tourney

The New Mexico State volleyball team jumped back into the American Volleyball Coaches Association (AVCA) Division I poll.

The Aggies are ranked No. 25 after finishing runners-up at the Western Athletic Conference Tournament last weekend in Honolulu, Hawaii.

The Aggies, 23-8, are in the AVCA national poll for the first time since they were No. 23 in the pre-season poll Aug. 19.

"We've been playing well for the most part, and if you stay away from bad losses, then typically the voters take notice," Aggie coach Mike Jordan said. "I'm proud of our players and how hard they have worked but we've been here, before and national polls don't mean a whole lot at the end of the day."

NMSU finished the tournament 2-1 after sweeping Fresno State in the quarterfinals before beating San Jose State in the same fashion. NMSU then lost in the WAC final 3-1 to No. 6 Hawaii.

All of NMSU's losses came at the hands of teams that have been ranked at some point during the season.

Five of the Aggies' eight losses were from teams in the top 10, including a loss from Stanford and Texas, who are currently No. 2 and No. 3 respectively.

NMSU went on a 15-match winning streak and was victorious in 19 of 21 matches dating back to Sept. 13 when the team defeated UC-Santa Barbara 3-1 in Stanford, Calif. In those 19 victories, the Aggies swept their opponents 15 times.

NMSU finished WAC play 15-1 in regular-season play and earned a share of the regular season title as Hawaii won the conference tournament to earn an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

The Aggies have two more matches before the NCAA Volleyball Tournament selection show that will air on TV on ESPNU at 8 p.m. (MST) according to ESPN.com. Fans should check local listings for air times.

NMSU will celebrate Senior Night on Thanksgiving Day with a match against Virginia Commonwealth University at 7 p.m. (MDT) in the Pan American Center. The match will be broadcast on the radio at KSNM AM 570 with Kyle Doperalski giving the play-by-play action.

The apple of Mesilla Park's eye Experience 'the charm and quality of a bygone era'

By Bethany Conway

Built in 1869, the historic home located at 3392 Apple Cross Place has a long history in the Mesilla Valley made evident by the huge trees that make their home in its landscape.

Set on .42 acres, it was constructed when the area around it was mainly farmland and it originally included a farm and carriage house along with quarters for the farmhands living on the property.

Today, it's hard to believe the Mesilla Park home was built more than a century ago with all of its modern elements. Rather than a rugged exterior, its elegant porch and grey stucco make it stand out among the yellow leaves of the surrounding mulberry trees as if it were brand new. Inside, newly laid wooden floors and refinished walls, some in Venetian plaster, make the home look like it was finished only yesterday.

Perhaps only indications that the home is almost 140 years old are its adobe walls, some more than 20 inches and an authentic carriage door used to add privacy to the casita's bedroom.

"It's got some history to it," said Beth Dage of Steinborn GMAC Real Estate. "It's in such a great area."

Completely renovated in 2007 by owner Cali McCord, former operator of Meson de Mesilla, she brought her classic style to this Mesilla Park manor.

'It didn't look like that when I sold it to her," said Dage, who has seen the house change through the years and heard stories of its history from her colleagues.

The most interesting part about this residence is how it has evolved over time to include two houses in one.

Walking into the home, one first finds a large, open space containing the living and dining room. The area, complete with one of three fireplaces, serves as the main living space and is located right next to the original kitchen, which has been completely remodeled and includes all new stainless-steel appliances.

While the home still holds onto its historic feel, new floors varying from wood to carpet to tile and several modern light fixtures work to bring it into the 21st century. The same can be said about the use of glass block in every bathroom.

In the original part of the home, the spacious master bedroom, which rivals the great room in size, includes an office, a seating area with a fireplace, two walk-in closets and a large master bathroom.

Two pairs of French doors found in the master bedroom offer entrance into the front porch; a large, enclosed area that creates the home's frontal façade.

"That is where you would entertain," said Dage, who has invited other Realtors over for lunch to enjoy the home's outdoor space.

Upstairs from the main living spaces, a room almost like an observatory is filled with light by square windows that line every wall. While it is now being used as a home gym, the space presents the perfect place to sit down with a good read.

Aside from the home's original living spaces, McCord's main project was turning the old carriage house into a more than 1,500-square-foot casita. Combining it with the rest of the house, she created guest quarters that contain a kitchen, living room, bedroom and bathroom.

The best feature of the house is not only the lot, but the casita," Dage said. "This home is almost made for two families.

"Whoever buys it can have an extended family live in the casita, whether it is an elderly parent or college student.'

The casita's kitchen, which is even larger than the original kitchen, includes stainless-steel countertops and an area for a breakfast nook.

Creating a divider between the bedroom and the rest of the casita is the old carriage door, which McCord had repainted and installed so that it can easily slide open and shut. While this might be the best historic attribute in the home, perhaps the home's most stunning renovation is the casita's great room, which includes a large fireplace covered with inlaid stone from wall to

Connecting all of the spaces is a centrally located laundry room, which can be entered through the garage and accessed from both the main home and

While two kitchens might seem like a little much, for chef McCord and other cooking enthusiasts as well as those with extended family, this home might iust fit the bill.

With a kitchen even larger than that found in the original home, the casita offers a place for guests to stay in comfort.

The casita, which initially was a carriage house, includes heavy vigas and the original carriage door, which is used as a divider between the bedroom and the rest of the living space.

Size does matter ... in the kitchen

How to make a small space appear larger than it is

It's no secret the kitchen is the heart of the home. And with a little ingenuity, a small kitchen can make a big impact.

The challenge in a small kitchen, however, is to design it so that it not only functions efficiently, but also appears larger than its actual footprint. There are all sorts of tricks to make close culinary quarters work and look stylish at the

One of the simplest ways to achieve more space in a small kitchen is to organize your items more effectively. Think in terms of reducing countertop clutter. It's the No. 1 rule for making rooms seem more spacious. Maximize storage space by installing sliding storage units in drawers to provide easy access to knives, spices, food wraps and utensils.

Most cabinets have room above them and storage can be added with wall-hung cabinets that extend to the ceiling. Not only will you add extra storage for lessfrequently used items, you'll also make the kitchen seem much larger. Use a pot rack whenever possible. Pots and pans are big and bulky and take up the majority of your cabinet space.

If you are thinking about replacing appliances, consider appliance fronts with stainless-steel panels to reflect light or create a seamless effect by covering all cabinets and appliances with the same surface treatment. Line the backsplash with stainless steel, pressed tin or iridescent-glass tiles to lighten up dark, under-cabinet spaces. In smaller kitchens, an attractive backsplash can add charm and make your space feel larger at the same time. Consider using mirrors on the backsplash for a bit of sparkle or painting it to add a punch

Even the smallest kitchen can be made to look larger by using light colors and keeping the cabinets uncluttered.

Light-colored ceramic or stone tiles are more expensive, but they really add a wow factor to your kitchen. To create an even greater impact, install them on the diagonal rather than simply straight up and down. This will also make the space seem larger.

Cabinets can also have a personality, and inserting glass panels in some of the cabinet doors to add depth can help take away the solid look of wood. Displaying the most attractive china or sparkling crystal attracts attention and adds design flair. If the budget is an issue, instead of buying new cabinets, try replac-ing a few of the solid-wood cabinet doors with frosted glass ones Whether you prefer a Southwest, traditional or contemporary style, there are so many choices available and installing lighting inside. Not from metal finishes to natural stone and tiles to the shape of the sink. only will you gain a visual effect with the light and airy effect from the glass faces, but you'll also be adding another dimension of light, which will make the kitchen seem much larger.

When it comes to lighting, think in terms of layers. Use task lighting to illuminate the workspace and ambient, indirect light to add overall brightness that will also make the space look larger. Keep fixtures sleek and simple so they don't make the kitchen feel cluttered or crowded. Track lighting works well for kitchens because they can be angled to illuminate every nook and cranny and are dimmable. They are also inexpensive and readily available at most home improvement stores. The addition of cabinet hardware also needs to remain simple. Use plain knobs and drawer pulls to avoid clutter.

Also a must, under-cabinet lighting adds depth and dimension to a kitchen, as well as practical illumination for countertops and cooking areas. You'll feel as if you have more workspace because you can see it better, and the kitchen will seem much warmer and more comfortable.

It is also possible to trick the eye with clever flooring choices. Run floorboards lengthwise for vertical perspective, or use larger floor tiles on the diagonal to make the room seem wider. Choose mediumsized, understated tiles rather than a busy mosaic pattern that might seem to shrink the room.

With more appliances manufacturers creating products for small spaces, an increasing number of kitchens are being designed with spaces for small refrigerators that fit under the counter, instead of large ones, which can visually overwhelm a small kitchen. Stoves, refrigerators and microwaves are now manufactured for small apartments where space is at a premium. A small island can be a lifesaver in a tiny kitchen. Most people think they don't have room for one, but the chances are they do. You generally only need 30 in. between counters and the island to comfortably pass through. If you can't put in a real island, use a kitchen rolling cart with pullout shelves and a wooden top. This multifunctional piece can serve as an island, workstation and a storage area with a small table. With a kitchen that's really small and dark, open the kitchen up with a pass-through or half wall. You may want to knock down the top half of a wall to let in some natural light. Use the lower half to create a bar/counter area with an overhang and some stools underneath. On the kitchen side of the lower wall, install some cabinets or shallow, open shelving for added storage.

Keep the color palette simple to avoid overwhelming the space. Choose a light semi-gloss paint for a bit of shine. Light colors open up the space and the gloss reflects the light.

Size doesn't have to be a problem, with a little ingenuity small kitchens can have a big impact with simple lines, added cabinets, bright colors, track lighting and a colorful backsplash, making the kitchen appear larger than it actually is while adding punch and a personality all at the

From farmer and rancher to builder and developer

Jeffrey Isaacks has watched the East Mesa grow by leaps and bounds

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

On a cold, windy day in the Organ Mountain foothills, builder Jeffrey Isaacks seems right at home amid the rugged mountainside.

"I really like this area up here on the East Mesa," he said at his latest project on County Road D-87. "This lot has such nice views."

While most people retreat to the comfort of the valley, Isaacks is used to the outskirts of Las Cruces, as his family was one of the first ranching families in Doña Ana County

According to a book titled "The Isaacks Clan," his great grandfather, Jefferson D. Isaacks, came to Las Cruces with his family in the late 1870s to establish his ranch, and by the early 1900s, "Jeff Isaacks was one of the most successful and largest cattle raisers in that section of the Southwest. He shortly moved to the county seat, established a modern farm home, invested in various enterprises" and established himself as a well-known citizen of Las Cruces.

His ranching legacy has continued, and today, Jeffrey Isaacks still dabbles in farming and ranching.

"To this day, I can't sleep 'til 7 a.m.," he said, reminiscing about his chores as a young boy, feeding and gathering the farm animals and doing various jobs around the ranch. "We had lots of fun growing up."

As the middle child of 10 siblings, Isaacks saw the entire spectrum of life on the farm and has seen the East Mesa grow in ways he could never have imagined.

"When they first came here, (my great grandfather) had almost all of this mesa," he said. "The amazing part is all the homes up this way."

Isaaks still owns a ranch on the East Mesa and a hay farm in Doña Ana County where he makes his home and still operates out of a farmhouse from the 1900s.

Not only does he have a long history in the area, but his wife, Trudy, is a relative of Oliver Lee, and has also watched the city grow and prosper.

After receiving his bachelor's degree in agricultural business from New Mexico State University, those around him figured Isaacks would follow in his relatives' footsteps. Instead, he went in another direction and pursued his fascination in building.

"I started out framing for other contractors and decided to get my (contractor's) license," he said.

To date, he has built more than 100 houses, including his newest project, a ranch-style home at the foothills of the Organ Mountains.

"I like the western-ranch style," he said, adding that this includes high-pitched roofs and large, wrap-around front porches.

Though he said he hopes he is known for the ranch-style home, his work can be characterized on a broad scale.

"I've built houses and worked on several projects. I left here in 1990 and went to Phoenix to learn how

The most challenging thing is giving the customer the kind of home they will be proud of.

JEFFREY ISAACKS, homebuilder to do commercial," he said. "I've done all styles – motels, strip malls and several concrete buildings."

He has built approximately 50 commercial buildings, and, as a lover of the great outdoors, the last one was right up his alley – a 148,000 square foot, $38 million Cabela's Sports Warehouse.

"I've worked on a Best Buy and a couple Bed Bath & Beyonds," he added.

On top of all this, he has also developed land in the City of the Crosses, much of which has been in his family for years, including several apartment complexes.

Today, he builds one to two houses a year, taking his time to make sure everything is done with the utmost care.

"I am very hands-on. I am here for every aspect of the project. I try to visit every day with the customer, make sure everything is going their way," he said. "I try to exceed the customer's expectations and I hope the quality meets their every desire." His newest home on the East Mesa includes sustain-

His newest home on the East Mesa includes sustainable material, passive-solar construction, Low-E windows and many other "green" attributes. In the future, he is hoping to have the opportunity to build an LEED certified home and explore new products that can make a home more efficient.

After helping to build Habitat for Humanity homes in Arizona, he said he is looking to continue his relationship with the nonprofit organization locally.

"I did a couple of them (Habitat for Humanity homes) in Phoenix, and it was fun," he said. "It amazes me how much people can do with a little guidance."

Regardless of what style he builds, Isaacks said he does his best to make the customer happy and will always rely on word of mouth from a satisfied client.

"You try to fit the project to the owner and keep the budget where it needs to be," he said. "The most challenging thing is giving the customer the type of home they will be proud of."

With exposed duct work, concrete countertops, modern lighting and a state-of-the-art hood over the range, Isaacks gave this ranch-style home a contemporary look.

Around-the-house item: cotton balls

Cotton ball arts and crafts

Create your own white Christmas this year

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

Now that Thanksgiving is over, it's time to get into the Christmas spirit, and there are plenty of around-thehouse items to help.

It all starts with a simple product that most people have conveniently tucked away in their bathroom cabinet – cotton balls.

These little puffs, normally used for medical procedures like flu shots and blood donations, present the perfect substitutes for snow. Whether it's a diorama or a manger scene, they can be used to deck the halls in many ways.

And their uses don't stop with Christmas decorations. Their ability to soak up liquids also comes in handy. Perhaps the best part about this age-old product is Perhaps the best part about this age-old product is that it comes in bulk, and there are always uses for an oversupply. Here are some suggestions:

1. Scent the room: Saturate a cotton ball with a favorite cologne or perfume and drop it into the vacuum cleaner bag. Now, as the vacuum is run over the carpet, the scent will be released and gently permeate the room.

2. Make a Christmas snowman: This traditional holiday project finds a home in classrooms across the country. To make a snowman, trace three circles in descending size on a piece of paper at least as thick as construction paper. They can be as large as desired. Now, fill in the circles with cotton balls by dabbing a bit of glue onto the paper and sticking a cotton ball to the dab of glue. Continue until the circles are covered with cotton.

Use glue to connect the three circles from smallest to largest, making the shape of a snowman. From here, the possibilities are endless. Use brown construction paper to make twig arms. Add real buttons using a hot-glue gun or using black construction paper, cut out very small black circles to serve as little pieces of coal to make Frosty's hat and eyes. Of course, don't forget to make a carrot for a nose

3. Deodorize the refrigerator: There is no denying it. Sometimes the refrigerator just doesn't smell fresh. For a short-term solution, dampen a cotton ball with vanilla extract and place it on a shelf. It acts as a deodorizer and offers its own pleasant scent.

4. Fight mildew: When mildew builds up in the

4. Fight mildew: When mildew builds up in the cracks and crevices of the bathroom and kitchen, or even the grout between tiles, cotton balls can help get to hard-to-reach spots. Soak a few cotton balls in bleach and place them in those difficult spots. Leave them for a few hours and when they are removed the mold will be gone. Finish by rinsing the areas with warm water.

5. Start a fire: Whether at home or on a camping trip, cotton balls can help start a fire in the dreariest of conditions because of their flammability. Either throw a couple cotton balls in with the firewood or roll one out like a string and use it like a wick.

6. Save rubber gloves: For those who have manicured nails, it is important to keep them covered while washing dishes. At the same time, it is hard to keep from puncturing plastic gloves with long fingernails. In order to keep gloves in tact, put some cotton balls in the end of each fingertip and they will make a soft barrier.

One of the oldest cultivated agricultural products, cotton balls can be used to decorate for the holiday season.

7. Protect ears: Cotton balls make great earplugs. Take a couple extra on a family vacation just in case the sleeping situation gets complicated. On top of blocking out loud sounds, they can also keep water from entering the ear canal during bathing for those who suffer from an ear infection.

8. Make a cotton Christmas tree: Another great art project is the cotton Christmas tree. First, make a cone shape with a big piece of green construction paper, and then glue it, standing up, on a paper plate. Give kids glue and cotton balls and let them cover the cone. Once that is done, the cone can be spray painted green and ornaments can be added using a hot-glue gun. Use sequins, ribbons or any other items around the house for decorating.

Getting the home ready for the holidays

Make your mark with homemade projects

The weather is changing and the days are getting shorter, which means the holiday season is here. While preparing to host family and friends, now is the time to dust off those old decorations and to consider some simple ideas to add a festive feel to the home this year.

Those who have a busy schedule or a small budget can look for inspiration to decorate for the holidays. By following a few simple instructions, these inexpensive decorative projects can add a special touch:

Wrap a wreath

Decorating a wreath is an easy at-home project that will highlight the front door for the holidays. To create a unique wreath, gather the materials, including a fresh pine bough wreath, garland, ribbon, pinecones and berries. The first step is to wrap ribbon around the wreath gluing every four inches to secure. Next, wrap garland around the wreath gluing every four inches to secure. Then, glue a variety of pinecones and berries in place around the frame to give it a festive look. The final step is to attach a wire loop on the back of the wreath using picture wire. Once this is done, adorn the front door with the new masterpiece.

Decorate the mantel

During the holidays, the fireplace mantel is the perfect place to add festive decorations. It is the one area in the home that will get a lot of attention. Most people decorate their mantel with garland, but consider adding lights and bows to brighten it up. In addition to decorative garland, include eye-catching ornaments or even candles. Remember, the mantel is the centerpiece of the room, so choose colors that complement the décor for a fresh look.

Create a centerpiece

Making a holiday centerpiece is a fun activity that can help spruce up the table with little effort. Start with a wicker basket and glue pine branches or garland in the bottom of the basket, lining the basket. Then, arrange an assortment of artificial fruit or holiday ornaments over the pine branches or garland. Once the right look has been achieved, lift each piece of fruit or holiday ball carefully and glue back in to position. After the fruit or ornaments are in place, add accents such as candy canes, berries or even small pinecones to liven it up. Finish the centerpiece by tying a ribbon into a bow and gluing it to the front of the basket. The table will be ready for a joyful holiday meal.

Spruce up the coffee table

To highlight the coffee table, gather a decorative tray, tiny holiday ornaments, holiday ribbon and various sized pillar candles. Arrange the candles on the tray in an asymmetrical pattern. Fill the spaces with the ornaments, weave the ribbon among the tray and light the candles for a soft and portable ambiance.

Customize a candy dish

Candy plays a central role in most holiday celebrations, so embrace it by making a large, decorative candy dish to put on display. First, glue candy canes side by side to the outside of a terra cotta pot. For extra sparkle, add other decorations such as beads or ornaments. Then, wrap a ribbon around the pot and tie in a bow. After the candy canes are in position and the ribbon is secure, fill the pot with an assortment of wrapped candy for guests to enjoy.

Are you ready for some leftovers

Put some spice in yesterday's Thanksgiving

Once Thanksgiving Day is over, I bet your refrigerator will look a lot like mine – crowded with plastic containers filled with leftovers. This includes 10 pounds of turkey leftover from a 40-pounder, 2 quarts of cranberry sauce, gravy, mashed potatoes, green beans, enough stuffing to pack another turkey and probably other victuals already forgotten.

If you didn't serve chile-infused dishes on Thanksgiving, shame on you! But now is your chance to play catch up with left-overs. Conjure up your own recipes or try one or more of mine. They're easy to whip up – perfect for worn-out early-bird Black Friday shoppers.

Chorizo Chilewich

In an iron skillet, sauté chorizo until browned. Stir in prepared stuffing and heat until warm. (You select the chorizo and stuffing ratio.) Place the chorizo stuffing (about 1 cup per serving) on a warm and toasted whole-wheat sub roll and scatter with shredded, sharp cheddar cheese. Enjoy. Optional: Add a slab or two of green chiles. Serve with sliced oranges and tortilla chips and salsa.

Add 1 or 2 tablespoons of minced ser-ranos or jalapeños to one cup of stuffing. In a pan over low heat, warm the chile stuffing, stirring constantly. Warm turkey slices and place on a crispy luncheon bun. Top turkey with chile stuffing.

English Muffin Medley

Spread each slice of English muffin with mayonnaise and a thin layer of mashed potatoes. To each slice, add a thin layer of cranberry sauce, followed by a slice or two of turkey breast and a slab or two of green chile. Spoon stuffing over the chile and cover with a crisp piece of lettuce. Cover with the remaining slice of bread and press down firmly. (Adapted from grouprecipes.com.)

Stuffed Green Chile Bagel

Place one or two turkey slices and a couple of tablespoons of stuffing on a green chile bagel. Warm sandwich in microwave. Before serving, top the stuffing with cold cranberry sauce.

Southwest Hollandaise Sauce

Prepare a classic hollandaise sauce recipe stirring in 1 or 2 minced jalapeños. Serve over warm vegetables. Or place bite size pieces of vegetables on an open-face toasted English muffin, spooning hollandaise sauce on top.

Hot Tom! Burrito

Mix bite-sized pieces of turkey and cubes of baked potato with chopped chile, onions, salt and pepper to taste and place on flour tortilla and roll. Smother with favorite cheese and microwave until warm. Top with cold cranberry sauce and a dollop (or two!) of sour cream.

Gospel Rescue Mission gets help from LCAR

Elsie Bonfantini. chairman of the Las Cruces Association of Realtors Community Service Committee, loads her car with turkeys, stuffing and other items to be taken to the Gospel Rescue Mission. From Oct. 30 to Nov. 20, the organization collected turkeys, cranberries yams, potatoes, vegetables, eggs, chicken broth, stuffing and rolls to help the mission feed an expected 450 people. According to Bonfantini, the organization was able to collect 100 turkeys this year, and she made several trips daily to drop off the goods at the

Spicy Mashed Potato Pancakes

2 cups mashed potatoes 1 large egg, beaten lightly 6 tablespoons flour 1 and 1/2 tablespoons grated onion Fresh or roasted chile, seeded, stemmed and minced Salt and pepper to taste Vegetable oil for frying

In a medium bowl, whisk together the mashed potatoes and egg. Add the flour and onion and mix together well. Add salt and pepper to batter if desired.

In a large skillet or on a griddle, heat vegetable oil

(about 3 tablespoons) over medium-high heat. Drop heaping tablespoons of batter on skillet. Flatten each dollop of batter slightly with the back of a spoon to create the cakes.

Cooking time is about a minute per side or until golden brown on each side. Makes 5 servings. (Adapted from mrbreakfast.com.)

Creamy Turkey Enchiladas

Leftover cooked turkey (white or dark meat pieces 1 or 2 cans cream of celery soup or cream of chicken

can diced green chiles (mild to hot) or use 4 roasted peeled, seeded and stemmed green chiles

1 regular size package plain tortilla chips, crumbled

1 (8-ounce) package cheddar cheese, grated 1 (8-ounce) package Monterey Jack cheese, grated small white onion, chopped

3 jalapeño peppers

In a medium skillet: Sauté onions in butter or margarine until golden brown. Add green chiles, soup and 1 soup can of water. Stir and simmer until heated. Crush tortilla chips, using 1/2 of package. Spread a layer in bottom of baking dish. Evenly place a layer of cooked turkey on top of chips. Spoon a layer of 1/2 of soup mixture over chips. Add jalapeños. Sprinkle with 1/3 of both grated cheeses. Repeat chips, turkey and soup mixture; top with grated cheese. Quantity is determined by the amount of turkey available. For larger amounts, simply continue to layer ingredients.

In a conventional oven: Bake in oven at 350 degrees until thoroughly heated and cheese is bubbly.

In a microwave oven: Heat at medium high power until thoroughly heated and cheese is bubbly. (Adapted from aliciasrecipes.com)

Jalapeño Cranberry Salsa

1 (12-ounce) bag fresh cranberries, chopped

4 green onions, minced

2 jalapeño peppers, minced

2/3 cup sugar

1 tablespoon crushed dried mint

6 tablespoons lime juice 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger

Mix ingredients together and serve.

Chile Cranberry Salsa

2 tablespoons orange peel 2 cups fresh cranberries, minced

1/4 cup onion, minced

1 tablespoon cilantro, minced

1 tablespoon ginger root, minced chile serrano (or favorite chile)

Salad oil to taste (optional)

Mix together and serve salsa over turkey or use as a refreshing dip for tortilla chips. (Adapted from Internet Meal-Master, 1996)
