School sites under review

Board to make pick by mid-December

By TODD G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

A decision about the site of the new $85 million high school should be made by the middle of next month, said Las Cruces Public Schools Superintendent Stan Rounds.

A concern about the cost of the new high school leading to an increase in the local tax burden to support new construction is now seen as unlikely as the district goes to a different funding approach than traditional general obligation bonding, he told the school board on Tuesday, Nov. 20.

Traditionally, the school district had paid for new school construction by taking out long-term loans based on future tax collections. But Rounds and Herb Torres, the associate superintendent for operations, are familiar with another more shortterm financing option provided by the state, referred to as HB33 based on the legislation that made it possible.

Under the new financing option, the district gets money based on expected tax collections over shorter periods of time, but interest-free. "It's kind of pay-as-you-go," Rounds said.

Freed-up money that would have gone to debt service can go into construction and necessary building maintenance, he said. Ťhis new funding mechanism gives the district access to about $60 million a year with state matching funds available, he said.

The good news in all of this is that the amount of property taxes that goes to paying for school construction can be kept at the same rate of $7.50

New Las Cruces mayor, council sworn in District 6's councillor to be determined by Jan. 15 election

By Todd G. Dickson

"We're going to do great things for this city.

That was Mayor Ken Miyagishima's promise after he and three city councillors were sworn in on Monday, Nov. 19.

"I'm a little speechless," he said.

"It's still sinking in that I won."

The new faces on the council were Miguel Silva replacing Jose Frietze in District 1 and Nathan Small representing District 4 after Steve Trowbridge decided not to run for re-election.

Small said he was humbled to have been selected by the voters and promised to listen. Silva told the audience that they were seeing the formation of a new city council that was open to new ideas.

Although Dolores Connor returns to represent District 2, she could only get support from District 5 councillor Gil Jones to have her continue in her role as mayor pro tem. Miyagishima, Small and Silva backed District 5 councillor Dolores Archuleta to be the new mayor pro tem - the councillor who performs mayoral duties when the mayor is out of town or unavailable.

That wasn't the only change for the city council. Miyagishima, who as mayor chairs the city council meetings, decided to change the rules for public input. Previously, members of the public had threeminute time limits to give their comments on different agenda items or to speak during public input on matters not on the meeting agenda. Although Miyagishima expanded the time limit to five minutes, that's for each person for the whole meeting. Also, each person is limited to providing public input only two times during the entire meeting.

We give thanks

People in all walks of life deserve our thanks today

BY DAVID E. McCOLLUM The Las Cruces Bulletin

Thanksgiving Day is a time to offer thanks for the many blessings we have received during the past year. Traditional meals of turkey, cornbread dressing and pumpkin pie are served across our country as families and friends gather to visit, take time to reflect and pray, and watch parades and football games.

The origin of Thanksgiving Day is somewhat in dispute. We were taught in grade school that the first Thanksgiving celebration was in 1621 among English colonists and their American Indian friends near Plymouth, Mass. Some Southwest historians claim that the first Thanksgiving feast was actually held a couple of hundred years earlier than the Plymouth event. The Southwest Thanksgiving, which was a celebration among Native Americans and their Spanish conquistador guests, is purported to have been held in

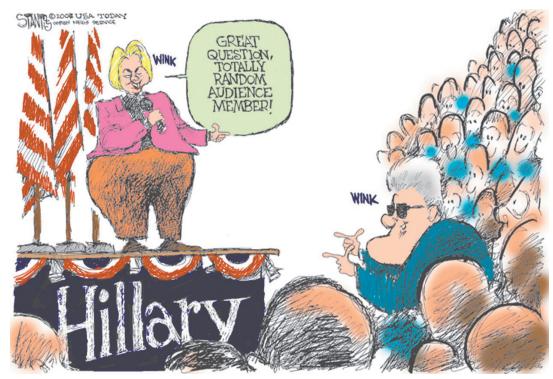

We do know the following facts: George Washington declared a national day of thanks giving in 1779.

- The state of New York, in 1817, was the first to adopt Thanksgiving as an annual holiday.
- In 1863, President Abraham Lincoln officially proclaimed that the last Thursday of November would be celebrated as a national day of thanksgiving.
- President Franklin Roosevelt recommended that the official date of Thanksgiving be changed to what we celebrate today - the fourth Thursday of each November. An act of Congress made this change official in 1941. (This modification was made in support of the retail businesses who claimed that when Thanksgiving fell on the fifth Thursday of November, the holiday was too close to Christmas Day, thus depriving them of several days to sell their Christmas items.) In Las Cruces there are many things that make our community so special. We are truly thankful for the many people who contribute to our lives every day. Some of these special individuals include:

- Volunteers throughout our community who unselfishly commit their time and treasures to help others
- Educators who teach our children (especially those teachers who teach because they love teaching)
- Religious leaders who help us to stay focused on the spiritual aspect of
- Law enforcement personnel who keep us safe and our society intact
- Farmers and ranchers who produce the food and crops that keep us fed
- Local business owners who provide goods and services we use every day
- Health care providers who make us well and keep us healthy
- Elected officials who dedicate their time to manage the growth and development of our city, county and state
- The sons and daughters of our nation who serve in the miltary, and especially those who are overseas risking their lives to protect our cherished American freedoms
- Family, friends and neighbors who watch out for one another As each of you enjoy this brief season of thanks, we respectfully ask that you pray for all the people listed above and others who have given us the opportunity to live in a free country, and especially in our wonderful city of Las Cruces

Statistics challenged

The statistics supplied to the Bulletin by the "New Mexico Teen Pregnancy Coalition" are obviously wrong. The only way for both the state and county statistics to be correct is if less than 15 percent of the state's teens live in 27 of the 33 counties – and these 27 counties include the cities of Albuquerque, Las Cruces and Santa Fe!

A positive contribution

A hearty thanks to a team of people cooperating to save the lives of animals that would otherwise be destroyed due to the pet overpopulation crisis in Doña Ana County.

Vic Villalobos and American Člassifieds sponsored the first LifeSavers companion animal adoption event in conjunction with the Humane Society of Southern New Mexico and the Doña Ana County Humane Society's Animal Shelter. The Spay Neuter Action Program, Horse 'n' Hound Feed 'n' Supply and Better Life Natural Pet Products along with many volunteers came together Nov. 2 to successfully place five companion animals in forever homes at this kick-off of the LifeSavers program.

Thanks also to state Sen. Mary Jane Garcia for acting as honorary chair of the LifeSavers program, to Debbie Hands for the LifeSavers marketing materials and to Abby Osborne and Rebecca Kongs at the Doña Ana Community College Creative Media Technology Program.

Most of all thanks to the individuals who adopted their companions from the Life-Savers event and saving the lives of these wonderful animals. The out-of-control pet overpopulation crisis in Las Cruces and Doña Ana County is a communitywide problem and can only be solved by a dedicated coalition of community leaders and organizations like those involved in this first LifeSavers adop-

China is a threat

It used to be the Japanese were taking over America. "My God they bought Rockefeller Center," people said. China is a commu-nist country and has financially taken over America. Not a peep from anyone except the talking heads in the media.

If they and we do not remove our collective heads from where the sun never shines, it will all be over. It may already be too late

Gov. Richardson not folding his campaign tent yet

State races promise to be intense

Inside

Does Bill Richardson still have a chance to become President Richardson? Well, as they say, "Hope springs eternal ..." There are some hopeful signs but they aren't sparkling very brightly.

Howard Dean still was out in front at Howard Dean still was out in front a this time four years ago when his campaign went into a screaming flame out.

John Kerry suddenly emerged from the middle of the pack to win Iowa and become the overwhelming favorite.

After dropping back from his early summer surge, Richardson is again moving into double digits in Iowa polls as Sen. Hillary Clinton slips amid mounting criticism from her closest rivals.

Sen. Barack Obama and former Sen. John Edwards also are having their problems. Obama's decision not to always put his hand over his heart when the national anthem is played completely baffles me.

As I understand, protocol doesn't require it, but when your father is Muslim and your middle name is Hussein, I don't care how patriotic you are, you don't give detractors the opportunity to question your loyalty.

Another encouraging sign for underdogs is the emergence of former Arkansas

Gov. Mike Huckabee from the Republican pack in Iowa. Rev. Huckabee should be the favorite of Christian conservatives throughout the country but has been ignored up to now because they don't see him winning.

Richardson hasn't been short of ideas to move his campaign along. His Mi Familia organization, targeting Hispanic families seems like an especially good way to tap into a system that can multiply his effort.

And getting himself nominated again for a Nobel Peace Prize further emphasizes his reputation as a diplomat. But somehow none of his efforts have caught him on fire yet.

One recent good sign for his campaign is Rep. Tom Udall's announced intention to run for the Senate seat that many of us felt Richardson would decide to seek.

Udall's entry into that race makes Richardson's intent to stay out of it as definite as I can imagine. Amanda Cooper, Richardson's assistant presidential campaign manager, is Tom Udall's daughter.

Cooper has managed past campaigns for both Richardson and Udall. And now Udall has put out the word that applicants for staff jobs with his campaign should apply to Cooper. You can't get much more tie-in than that.

Maybe with the state gearing up for four congressional campaigns there aren't enough people for all the skill positions and we're going to see some doubling up.

What we do know is that the intensity we saw last year in the 1st Congressional District battle between Rep. Heather Wilson and Attorney General Patricia Madrid can be multiplied by at least four.

That's probably a low estimate because U.S. Senate campaigns involve much higher stakes than House races. There won't be enough television time in a 24-hour day to run all the negative political ads the candidates will want to buy.

People in my business are salivating at the thought of New Mexico becoming the center of the political universe for the next year. But if I were you, I would first investigate the possibility of investing any loose change in a local TV station and then never watching one of those stations for the next year. Stock up on DVDs and plan to see every movie ever made.

I mentioned during last year's nasty 1st Congressional District fracas that half-hour interviews of Heather Wilson and Patricia Madrid conducted by KOB-TV anchor Carla Aragon convinced me that Aragon was the only one of the three for whom I would want to vote.

That comment got a fair amount of play around the Albuquerque area. Aragon, of course, did not jump into the race. But now she has announced her retirement from the news business and I'm wondering about the timing of that announcement.

Do you suppose Carla might have something else in mind? After all, KKOB's Larry Ahrens went that route a few years ago.

Opportunity for land preservation comes from unlikely source

By JIM SARACINO
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

On the environment front, good news arrives from an unexpected quarter.

Out of Las Cruces, a group called People for Preserving Our Western Heritage has made a historic proposition. With the support of a growing list of businesses and organizations, they are calling for the permanent protection of 302,000 acres of federal lands in Doña Ana County.

Why "historic?" The proposal comes from ranchers.

This isn't the first grand vision for protecting expanses of land encircling one of New Mexico's fastest-growing cities. Several years go, the New Mexico Wilderness Alliance, The Wilderness Society and other environmental organizations also proposed protecting a huge chunk of federal land. They advocated using the Wilderness Act and a National Conservation Area to ensure the land remained undeveloped. They gained a lot of quick support. But miscalculations and missteps have brought their effort to a standstill.

The Doña Ana County Sheriff and Sheriff's Posse, as well as the National Association of Former Border Patrol Agents, opposed the plan. They argued it would unwisely restrict law enforcement and hamper rescue operations. They were particularly concerned about any wilderness designation limiting motorized vigilance in border areas.

The Elephant Butte Irrigation District spoke out. It raised concerns about obstacles wilderness designation would create for flood control and ideas for augmenting water supplies in New Mexico's lower Rio Grande valley.

Ranchers, farm credit institutions and the agricultural industry objected. They concluded the stringent restrictions of wilderness designation would make it more difficult for ranchers to continue already hard-pressed enterprises. Ranchers supported the goal of preserving open space. But they warned that ranch failures meant subdivision of their properties, a consequence directly contrary to the goal of preserving rural Doña Ana County.

Wilderness people seriously mishandled relations with Sen. Pete Domenici. They had looked to him to lead the legislative effort. Working with local governments, his staff drafted an ambitious wilderness protection bill. Because it contained a land disposal provision – a provision already present in long-standing federal management plans – environmentalists turned on Domenici. A man responsible for protecting more than 1 million acres of land in this state became the target of personal attacks. Poking a stick at Domenici proved predictably counterproductive.

The Village of Hatch recently rescinded support for the wilderness proposal claiming, among other things, deception by wilderness activists. Congressman Steve Pearce, once on board with Domenici's with Domenici's bill, has announced reservations about any new wilderness designations. Sen. Bingaman is steering clear of the mess. The Internet homepage of the Doña Ana Wilderness Coalition (www.donaanawild. org) has been reduced to a lifeless placeholder site directing traffic elsewhere.

In contrast, the ranchers' volunteer-operated website www. peopleforwesternheritage.com offers audio-visual presentations, position papers, access to public documents and nearly daily updates. It blows away anything the well-funded environmentalists are serving up. That's but one indication of who's got momentum in this contest.

Ranchers, though, are not playing the role of single-minded obstructionists. It appears they meant what they said about wanting to protect open space. They propose to do it principally by protecting undeveloped land without calling it "wilderness."

The draft legislation, titled "Doña Ana County Planned Growth, Open Space and Rangeland Preservation Act," would prohibit the federal lands at issue from ever being sold, mined or drilled. The proposal's innovative "special preservation area" designations set aside vast stretches of open space around Las Cruces but are flexible enough to accommodate law enforcement, agriculture, recreational needs of a growing urban population, and irrigation and floodwater authorities.

In a bill covering 302,000 acres there will certainly be many contentious details. And, no, this bill won't create a formal wilderness like the Gila or the Pecos. But the promise of the ranchers' initiative, coming from a group many environmentalists malign as "anti-environment," is too important to ignore.

New Mexico is split down the middle on most issues. Environmentalists frequently think rallying their own regiments suffices. Perhaps that's why we've only seen one small citizen-initiated wilderness bill pass in the last two decades. That bill, protecting the Ojito Wilderness, succeeded because it had bipartisan leadership and buy-in from local landowners and ranchers. The same can be said for the legislation that saved Valle Vidal from natural gas drilling.

This initiative from Doña Āna ranchers offers hope for protecting public lands in Doña Ana County and elsewhere in New Mexico. Environmental organizations that have claimed a monopoly over that particular line of conservation work have shown they can't get the job done. The fizzled Doña Ana wilderness campaign is only the latest golden opportunity bungled by professional activists. While they stumble yet again, the state is filling up fast with new people. We don't have decades to waste any longer.

Maybe it's past time to let someone else, someone outside the usual enviro circles, have a shot at it. Some fresh faces, shaded by the broad rims of cowboy hats, are volunteering for the job.

Reservoir Update

Bypass water keeps flowing into the Elephant Butte Reservoir and under terms of the Rio Grande Compact that could get the Elephant Butte Irrigation district off to a good start for the 2008 irrigation season.

The Middle Rio Grande Conservancy District has ended its irrigation season and stopped diverting water from Cochiti Dam. That brought the inflow at San Marcial station just above Elephant Butte to 558 cubic-feet-per-second, 35 percent of average flow for this time of year.

If that rate of flow continues, Elephant Butte would contain 399,314 acre-feet of water by Dec. 31. Under the Rio Grande Compact, if the storage of useable water is less than 400,000 acre-feet, Colorado and New Mexico are required to bypass the Rio Grande flow into Elephant Butte, said bureau hydrology engineer Wayne Treers.

The EBID is part of the Texas section of the compact, which starts at the north end of Elephant Butte.

- The reservoir figures are: Elephant Butte 338,653 acre-feet, 19 percent of a full reservoir, an increase of 6,898 acre-feet.
- Caballo 21,658 acre-feet, 10 percent of capacity, 319 acre-feet more than last week

Poll address safety issues on NMSU campus

Most report feeling safe on univeristy campus

By JORDAN BOSTIC The Las Cruces Bulletin

When 32 people were killed by a gunman at Virginia Polytechnic İnstitute last spring, many people were left wondering about the futile situation those victims faced. Unarmed and defenseless against a person with a deadly weapon, they had little or no chance of escape. In the wake of the Virginia Tech tragedy and other incidents of campus violence, a campaign has emerged to protest the ban of concealed weapons on campus.

During the final week of October, students across the country sported empty holsters on campus to protest policies that prohibit students with legal, state-issued concealed weapons permits from carrying their firearms on campus. The protest, organized by Students for Concealed Carry on Campus, added fire to the ongoing debate over matters of campus safety.

A recent survey by the Journalism and Mass Communications department at New Mexico State University asked 221 students, faculty and staff questions about concealed weapons and other issues of campus security. They were posed the question, "Do you think students and staff with permits should be allowed to carry weapons on campus?" More than 82 percent of respondents

"It would be strange to look at the person beside me in class and see a gun," Jackie Choi, a graduate student in the NMSU accounting department, said. "But then again, maybe if someone had a gun at Virginia Tech, it wouldn't have gone so far."

"The idea of a lot of people carrying guns around campus makes me feel way less safe than I do now," Nicole Holguin, a 19-year-old engineering student, said. "I don't like that idea at all.

In the state of New Mexico, there is no state permit required to purchase a firearm. However, carrying a loaded gun in public is against the law unless the person is on private property or is a member of law enforcement.

In addition to addressing the specific issue of concealed weapons on campus, the poll also gathered information pertaining to general safety issues at NMSU.

Most students feel relatively safe at NMSU, according to the poll, and don't feel a need for concealed weapons on campus. Results showed that when asked to categorize how safe they feel at NMSU on a scaled of one to 10, with 10 being completely safe, 50 percent of those polled answered nine or 10. Another 37 percent categorized their safety as a seven or eight on the scale of one to 10.

"The only time I feel unsafe is if I am studying on campus late at night," Choi said. "But it's not something that scares me only on campus. I don't like to be alone at night in parking lots or other areas, either.

In a corresponding question, respondents were asked, "How often do you meet people on campus whom you feel might pose a threat to you or others?" Results showed that 41 percent of those polled answered "never," while 23 percent answered "once a year."

"I have met people on campus that make me feel very uncomfortable," Holguin said. "Not a lot of people, but

Speaker series continues with noted cinematographer

Dan Kully, an accomplished producer, director, editor and cinematographer, will be the final speaker in the New Mexico State University College of Arts and Sciences' fall 2007 speaker series.

The series runs in conjunction with a class on "Women, Politics and the Media," taught by New Mexico Lt. Gov. Diane Denish and NMSU Women's Studies faculty member Mary Benanti.

Kully's presentation, "Television: Different Expectations for Women Candidates," will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 27, in the Creative Media Institute's Digital Media Theatre in Milton Hall on the NMSU main campus. His talk is open to the public. A graduate of Colgate University, Kully is renowned for developing one of the most compelling and effective media consulting operations outside Washington, D.C. – the West Coast office of Laguens Hamburger Kully Klose in Seattle. In 2006, he was the lead partner on a team that helped elect Jon Tester of Montana to the U.S. Senate, helped put Bill Ritter in the Colorado governor's seat and helped defeat property rights measures in Washington and Idaho. He has conducted media training for campaigns and organizations in more than 25 states.

there are definitely some that I wouldn't feel safe around by myself."

In the wake of the Virginia Tech incident, NMSU officials issued an emergency action plan to students, faculty and staff designed to increase feelings of safety on campus. Did it work?

The poll asked the question, "After the Virginia Tech University shooting earlier this year, the administration posted an emergency action plan. How has this plan affected your feeling of safety on campus?" Respondents were given five choices ranging from "what plan?" to "significantly." Thirty seven percent chose "no difference. Another 26 percent of the respondents were unaware of the plan altogether, choosing the answer "what plan?"

"I remember getting the email," Holguin said. "But I don't remember what it said, and it really didn't change anything for me."

Survey responses varied greatest on the final question of the survey, which asked, "Which of the following is most important to address regarding campus safety? There were seven choices, and the biggest number of respondents indicated their concern was centered on car thefts and break-ins. Rape was in second place with 18 percent, followed by pedestrian accidents and random violence, both with 14 percent. More than 9 percent were most concerned about car accidents, while 12 percent chose assault and 7 percent chose theft.

The survey was conducted by members of NMSU's Journalism 484 Public Opinion class on Oct. 29-30. A random sample of 221 students, faculty and staff members were polled by telephone and the sampling error was plus or minus 5 percent. The survey contact is Journalism Department Head Frank Thayer at 646-5048.

music in va

Some people are born with music in 'em. Other people do good with algebra, throwin' a rope or rebuilding engines.

I am blessed with the music. My father's family played, Grandpa played the fiddle, Uncle Wade the banjo, Uncle Bert guitar and second fiddle, Uncle Dink the mandolin and third fiddle, Aunt Effie the organ and "Hi-wa-yen slide git-ar" and my dad, the youngest, played whatever needed played.

Ĭ remember as a boy goin' back to visit in Oklahoma. Saturday afternoon they'd have a "musical." We'd gather at somebody's house. Anybody that wanted to play would sit in a big circle in the living room, including kids. The recognized "first was no singing and nobody else took the lead. In my memory he'd play four or five songs in one key, switch to another key, play a few in that one, then eventually he'd say, "Bert, why don't you play one?" Bert, the acknowledged "second fiddle," would graciously accept the invitation and play his forwarites then page it an down. It tation and play his favorites, then pass it on down. It went on for three or four hours!

old-time fiddle music was a great influence, but I also was a fan of the country music of my time: Lefty Frizzle, Hank Snow, Hank Thompson, Jim Reeves, Faron Young, Kitty Wells, Loretta Lynn. I played in a weekend country band in college. I picked up an interest in bluegrass and Bob Wills swing music. I was so focused on what I liked that I missed Elvis, the Beatles, Bob Dylan and the hundreds of folk and rock bands that were on radio stations I didn't listen to. Today I recognize Mick Jagger, Bruce Springsteen and Madonna's picture, but I couldn't name a song they did.

My brothers are musical, too. Then, somewhere along the line I married into another Oklahoma musical family. They were a step up from us because they could read music! Which just made them even better.

I've been schoolin' my son on the mandolin since he was about 10. He always gripes. Last month he asked if he could switch to guitar. "Sure!" I said. Next thing I know he's in his bedroom trying to figger out Billy Joel's "Piano Man!" Looks like he's caught the bug.

Truth is, he never had a chance. When yer born with the music in ya, it's like breathin'. Oh, did I tell you the mandolin he's been playin' for the last four years was Aunt Effie's? I think she'd think that's cool.

The City of Las Cruces and Rio Grande Natural Gas Association inform their customers that natural gas prices are expected to about 10% higher this winter compared to last year. However, this November's bill will be about 5% less than last year. For example, a customer that used eight units and paid $88 in 2006, will pay $84 this year. The biggest factor that determines an energy bill is the weather. A person's consumption depends on how cold it is outside. The colder it is, the harder your furnace works to warm your home. The harder your furnace works, the more energy it consumes. It's that simple. Consumers can play an active role managing their energy bills by following a few energy saving tips:

Price Notice

· Set your thermostat at 68 degrees; 58 or lower when away from home.

- · Use caulk and weather stripping to seal leaks around
- · Change or clean furnace filters once a month during the heating season.
- · Maintain appliances in proper working condition.
- · Close doors and heating vents in unused rooms.

Medicare Bus pays a visit to Munson Senior Center

The Medicare Bus parks in front of the Munson Senior Center on Monday, Nov. 19, as part of its tour of 180 cities around the nation.

Local seniors get access to advice about Medicare Prescription Drug plan options

By TODD DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The Medicare Bus pulled into the Munson Senior Center on Monday, Nov. 19, to provide help comparing Medicare Prescription Drug plans with the fall open enrollment ending on Dec. 31.

But seniors shouldn't wait until the last minute, said Linda Horsch, an outreach specialist with the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services that sponsors the bus. Procrastinating the decision could result in a delay of getting listed for the chosen plan by January, she said.

Although the bus can set up shop anywhere, the Munson center was able to provide a room that was abuzz with seniors reviewing different plan options with CMS specialists and advisers from the state

Aging and Long-term Services agency.
Counselors helped the seniors review their current health and drug coverage. They compared it to other area plan benefits and choose a plan that best meets their needs for the coming year. Counselors also offered information on premiums, copayments and applications that can save people with Medicare up to $3,600 to help pay for prescriptions.

Those who missed the bus can visit www. medicare.gov or call 1-800-MEDICARE.

Assistance on the Medicare "extra help" can be obtained through a local Social Security Administration office, by visiting www.socialsecurity.gov or calling 1-800-772-1213.

Also, there is a new online tool at the Medicare government website in which users can enter the list of medications that Medicare beneficiaries currently take to determine the amount that each prescription drug plan charges for premiums, co-payments and deductibles. It allows users to compare Medicare prescription drug plans based on customer service and other areas. Users can compare Medicare Advantage plans based on overall quality, disease management, access to physicians and other areas and other areas.

The tool is part of the website's Medicare Path Finder and allows users to compare prescription drug plans based on out-of-pocket costs and pharmacy networks. The website also includes a tool that addresses the "doughnut hole" coverage gap in the Medicare prescription drug benefits.

The Medicare Bus began traveling the country last month and will make stops in 180 cities across the country.

Borsberry decided to dig into the concrete footings to demolish the railroad viaduct over Picacho, which had been erected in 1928. He had planned to blast them out with dynamite, and the city had approved his plan. The contractor, Wylie Brothers of Albuquerque, however, decided that blasting was too dangerous. So, Borsberry had to return to his first plan to dig trenches between the footings and remove them with machinery, which also was dangerous. The overhead spans had been removed.

Butler to challenge Garcia

Commissioner aims to unseat state senate majority whip

Doña Ana County Commissioner Oscar Vasquez Butler has announced he is running to unseat state Sen. Mary Jane Garcia, who is the senate's majority whip.

Butler, who is serving his second and final term as Doña Ana County commissioner, said his campaign will be about making a change in the Legislature.

"We need to work closely together with residents and the other legislators to develop a regional agenda for change," Butler said in his announcement. "In some cases that means promoting economic growth and in some cases that means putting the breaks on reckless development, such as in arroyos and watersheds."

Butler cites his work as a county commissioner to illustrate how responsive he is to the needs of his largely rural constituents. He also notes his work as the past president of the New Mexico Association of Counties as experience in dealing with larger issues and taking those concerns to Santa Fe.

Butler's announcement points to the spaceport tax controversy as Santa Fe not understanding the real needs of southern New Mexico:

"When Santa Fe asks us to raise our taxes for a project in a neighboring county, but is reluctant to compensate volunteer firefighters, fund innovative school programs, senior meals and youth recreation programs, drainage and flood projects, expand community centers and parks, and instead spends most of our tax-payer money in Albuquerque and Santa Fe, it's time for a change."

Much of his campaign platform revolves around his opposition to the local tax option to support construction of Spaceport America, which is in the southern end of Sierra County. Though Doña Ana County residents last spring approved an increase in gross receipt taxes to help pay for construction, spending the money collected is dependent on the formation of a spaceport tax district, which requires the approval of more than one county. Sierra

ER County is expected to ask its voters about a GRT increase next spring and Otero County officials have said they want to put the question on the ballot of the general election next year.

Butler has lived in Doña Ana County since 1995 and has a master's degree in public administration from the per $1,000 of assessed value and provide enough money for the schools to keep up with growth without having to ask voters to approve a higher rate, Rounds told the board.

"I felt it was important that there be no tax increase," Rounds said.

Meanwhile, Torres reported the completion of a series of public hearings on four sites being considered for the district's fourth high school. Comments from the hearings are being passed on to the board members for their review, and they will begin pouring over the details at a retreat on Nov. 30, Rounds said.

It may even require a second work session, Rounds said, but he expects the school to make its decision at the Dec. 18 meeting.

Four sites are currently on the table: East Lohman

Avenue, Dunn Drive, on the West Mesa south of the city's industrial park and off of Dripping Springs Road.

Each of the sites have enough land to accommodate

Each of the sites have enough land to accommodate a 2,000-student high school, but each site has costs and other concerns, such as road development and traffic impact. Each site will require some level of infrastructure work not related to actual school construction, ranging from a low estimate of $5 million for the East Lohman Avenue site to a high estimate of $16 million for the Dunn Drive location.

A site selection committee developed a matrix to rate the sites on these kinds of considerations, as well as proximity to population, neighborhoods and businesses, natural hazards and view. In the matrix, the East Lohman Avenue location earned the highest rating and the West Mesa location the lowest.

But the school board has purposely not tied itself to the recommendation of the committee, Rounds said. The matrix and input from the public hearings provides a wealth of information for the board to make a decision that the community will find most accepting, he said.

With his wife Susana Chaparro at his side, Ken Miyagishima is sworn in as mayor of Las Cruces by Judge Fernando Macias Monday, Nov. 19, in the council chambers.

Sworn in

That rule was put to the test during a public input on the Downtown Tax Increment Development District proposal. (For the story on the TIDD debate, see Page A25.) Dan Jett, a regular city council watcher, reminded Miyagishima that he had campaigned on a platform of "slowing down" to make more deliberative decisions with greater public input. Jett said officials needed to take more time looking into this new funding mechanism or risk being accused of being fraudulent. Miyagishima had to remind Jett several times that his time to speak had expired before he left the podium.

For the councillors, Miyagishima said he would limit their input on individual agenda items to three rounds without time limits – for now.

Before the swearing-in ceremony, the old council did finish up actions on a few pieces of business before being given framed photos of Las Cruces from 1905.

Outgoing Mayor Bill Mattiace kept his comments brief, noting that defeat was "a tough pill to swallow."

"I leave with no regrets, as I know I've brought honesty and integrity to the position of mayor," he said.

As part of the new council's reorganiza-

As part of the new council's reorganization, the council had to appoint replacements to various boards that the departing councillors served on — including having Silva replace Frietze on the Extraterritorial Zoning Authority (ETA). This action comes on the heels of District Judge Jerald Valentine's nullification of an ETA approval of the Puerta de Las Cruces subdivision because Frietze did not reveal land dealings between his nonprofit companies and the developer, Philip Philippou. Should he not appeal the ruling, Philippou would have to bring the large proposal back before the ETA with Silva now on the board. Before running for office, Silva was a board member of the Quality Growth Alliance, which was primarily opposed to Philippou's Vistas at Presidio annexation and development proposal.

Some of the new board appointments may be temporary until Miyagishima's District 6 seat is filled. A special election for the seat will be held Jan. 15 and candidates must file on Dec. 4 at the City Clerk's Office, 200 N. Church St. Candidates must be registered voters who live within the boundaries of District 6. They must collect at least 25 valid signatures from registered voters within the district in order to be placed on the ballot. Absentee voting by mail starts Dec. 19 and early voting runs from Dec. 26

Although discussion about the Downtown revitalization efforts took up the majority of Monday's regular council meeting, Miyagishima took pride in finishing the meeting shortly before 5 p.m. "I think it went pretty good," he said after adjourning the meeting.

First Baptist Church's Living Christmas Tree returns to Las Cruces

70-voice choir, 35-piece orchestra accompanies fantastic lightshow

First Baptist Church will host the 12th annual performances of the Living Christmas Tree Concert Saturday through Tuesday, Dec. 8-11.

The Living Christmas Tree Concert of First Baptist Church has ministered to thousands of individuals in Las Cruces and Doña Ana County. For the 2006 performance, more than 4,000 people attended the performances.

Under the direction of Rev. Mike Edwards, the Living Christmas Tree Concert is a dramatic announcement of the Celebration of Christmas, which has become a holiday tradition for the whole community. The Living Christmas Tree delights people of all ages with wonderful Christmas melodies and fantastic lighting arrangements.

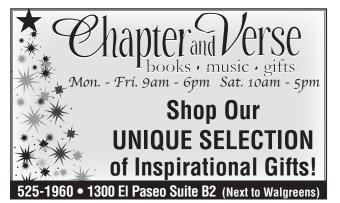

Adorned with the traditional evergreen and draped with red and gold lame, this steel structure reaches 24 feet to the ceiling of the First Baptist Church Worship Center and serves as a platform for the 70-voice choir accompanied by a 35-piece orchestra.

The choir's 90-minute presentation is an incomparable expression of the holiday season's music. This musical extravaganza is animated with dramatic visual effects that are a unique and inspiring observance of Christmas. As traditional and contemporary Christmas carols are sung, 65,000 computer-controlled lights dazzle audiences with a colorful spectacle of exciting color.

Performance times for the Living Christmas Tree are at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, and at 7 p.m. Sunday through Tuesday, Dec. 9-11.

at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, and at 7 p.m. Sunday through Tuesday, Dec. 9-11.

Adoption can have varying effects on a child's developing personality

Don't begin disciplining a child before 15 months old

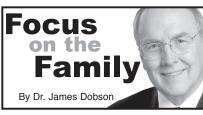

Are adopted children more likely to be rebellious than children born to biological parents? If so, are there any steps I can take to prevent or ease the conflict? My husband and I are thinking about adopting a toddler and the question has me worried.

Every child is different and adopted kids are no exception. They come in all sorts of packages.

Some boys and girls who were abused or unloved prior to the adoption will react to those painful experiences in some way ... usually negatively. Others, even those who were not mistreated, will struggle with identity problems and wonder why their "real" mothers and fathers didn't want them. They may be driven to find their biological parents during or after adolescence to learn more about their heritage and families of origin.

I must emphasize, however, that many adopted kids do not go through any of these personal crises. They take root where they are replanted and never give a thought to the questions that trouble some of their peers. As with so many other behavioral issues, the critical factors are the particular temperament of the child and how he or she is handled by the parents.

I hope you won't be reluctant to adopt that child because some special problems might – but probably won't – develop. Every child has his or her own particular challenges. Every child can be difficult to raise. Every child requires all the creative energy and talent a parent can muster. But every child is also worth the effort, and there is no higher calling than to do that job excellently.

Let me add one more thought. I knew a man and woman who had waited for years to adopt a baby. When a baby girl was finally made available to them, they were anxious to know if she was healthy and of good heritage. They asked if her biological parents had used drugs, how tall they were, whether or not they had attended college, etc.

Then, the father told me later, he realized what he and his wife were doing: They were approaching the adoption of this baby much like they would have bought a used car. They were kicking the tires and testing the engine. But then they thought, "What in the world are we doing? That little girl is a human being with an eternal soul. We have been given the opportunity to mold and shape her as a child of God, and here we are demanding that she be a high quality product." They repented of their inappropriate attitudes and embraced that child in love.

Adopted children, like all children, are a blessing from God, and we are privileged indeed to be granted the honor of raising one of his precious kids.

At what age should discipline begin?

There should be no physical punishment for a child younger than 15 to 18 months, regardless of the circumstances. An infant is incapable of comprehending his or her "offense" or associating it with the resulting consequences.

Some parents do not agree and will swat a baby for wiggling while being diapered or for crying in the midnight hours. This is a terrible mistake. Other parents will shake a child violently when they are frustrated or irritated by incessant crying. Let me warn those mothers and fathers of the dangers of that punishing response: Shaking an infant can cause serious neurological damage as the brain is slammed against the skull. Do not risk any kind of injury with a baby!

Especially during the first year, a youngster needs to be held, loved and calmed by a soothing human voice. He should be fed when hungry and kept clean and dry and warm. The foundation for emotional and physical health is laid during this six-month period, which should be characterized by security, affection and warmth.

faring well

Inventory surplus affecting builders

By Natisha Hales

Even with the sub-prime mortgage disaster, Las Cruces' real estate market is still faring well, according to a panel of local experts at a recent Ad Fed meeting.

"We're doing well," said Gary Sandler, president of Gary Sandler Inc. Realtors. "We're not suffering to the same extent as other parts of the country are expected to suffer."

Sandler said things are slow, but it's part of the market's cycle.

That cycle can dramatically affect the economy, not just the construction industry, said Steve Vierck, president and CEO of the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance.

"It's not just a construction prob-lem," he said. "The title and insurance companies are affected. There's a lot of demand required by new-home building."

However, the problem is that there's too much inventory and not enough buyers, Sandler said.

The Las Cruces area has an inventory of 1,745 new and existing homes, townhomes and condominiums, he said, and just 249 properties are under contract.

'There's a little bit of an oversupply," he said.

However, Sandler added, the newhome inventory has declined, and building permits are down 83 percent since November 2005.

There are a smaller amount of building permits issued, confirmed Michele Marshall, executive officer for the Las Cruces Home Builders Association. The City of Las Cruces issued 43 permits, and Doña Ana County issued 19 permits in September, which is a substantial decrease from the city's 144 and the county's 32 issued in September 2006. Despite the impact homebuilding and construction has on the economy, Marshall said the National Association of Home Builders has reported that the recent downturn is not having a substantial impact on the nation's economy.

However, during the boom there was a "tremendous influx of people who have come in to get into building, and the small builders are now suffering," Marshall said. "A lot of companies are not really sad as the 'outsiders' are starting to go away.'

The housing inventory surplus, however, is not helping the builders as it is the buyers.

"Builders are actually losing sales," Marshall said. "Our associate members are really feeling the pinch right now. But now is a really good time to

Real estate Enlivened Downtown attracts events

Main Street becoming an attractive venue

By NATISHA HALES
The Las Cruces Bulletin

With the success of several events held Downtown, businesses and individuals are looking into renting space around newly reopened Main Street as an ideal venue to hold receptions and other events.

The most recent event held in the Downtown area – other than the regular Farmers and Crafts Market, which meets each Wednesday and Saturday morning on the mall - was the city's centennial celebration, which marked Las Cruces' 100th year of being a municipality.

"It was a very successful event," said City of Las Cruces Downtown Event Coordinator Olivia Hennessey. "There were probably about 220 booths including Farmers Market vendors. I think it was just great.

In August, the city hosted a Downtown event for the New Mexico Municipal League to give statewide delegates the opportunity to witness the newly opened Main Street. The city isn't the only organization hosting events Downtown.

In October, the United Way also held a gala Downtown to give community members the opportunity to witness the revitalization.

"We thought we would try something new, and it was a great opportunity to show off the new Downtown because not a lot of people had the chance to see the changes," said United Way Vice President Mike Zara-goza. "We had little to no problems at all."

It's becoming more of an attractive place to host events, Hennessey said, and the including weddings and quinceañeras.

"Since we've opened the Downtown area, we've had quite a few people interested," Hennessey said.

Because the Downtown area is essentially a city park, those interested in hosting an event must request a permit from the Parks and Recreation office at least 10 working days in advance of the event, said Norma Avalos, senior office assistant for the recreation section of the Public Services department.

The area is open from 5 a.m. to 11 p.m., so if the hosting party requires additional hours or plans on playing music, additional permits are required.

If any more help is necessary, such as blocking off Main Street or any other areas, Hennessey said it's best to contact her.

"It's been a really positive experience," she said. "It (the interest in hosting events) will only increase once the new civic plaza

According to City Manager Terrence Moore, the Civic Plaza, phase II of the Downtown revitalization project, could be completed as early as the summer of 2008, but the city is currently in the process of securing additional funding.

Council approves call for TIDD election

Downtown property owners to decide district establishment

By Natisha Hales

Las Cruces City Council, with a 6-0 vote Monday, approved a resolution to call for an election to establish a Tax Increment Development District in Downtown Las Cruces. The seat for District 6 councillor has not yet been filled.

Property owners of the Downtown Metropolitan Redevelopment Area will now have the opportunity to vote by mail-in ballot on whether they want the TIDD to be established. The ballots will be collected between Dec. 10 and 15, and each onefifth of an acre counts for one vote. Of the total 1,009 votes, the City of Las Cruces will have 134 votes, as the city owns 15.9 percent of land in the proposed district.

If the property owners vote to establish the district, 75 percent of the tax incre-ment drawn from future growth in gross receipts and property taxes generated in that district will go toward improvements in that area. The remaining 25 percent will go to the city's general fund.

Over 20 years, that percentage translates to the city contributing a projected amount of $6.1 million going to the TIDD and a little more than $2 million going to the city's general fund, which provides money for other projects.

While there was debate about whether the federal courthouse should be included in the TIDD – excluding the courthouse will take away from revenues going toward the TIDD and will put more in the city's general fund - city council voted to include the courthouse in the district.

Las Cruces resident Klaus Wittern, however, questioned the percentage of revenues dedicated to the TIDD and whether the city would be able to maintain its additional facilities and operations with 75 percent of the future revenues going toward the district.

Once the TIDD is established, the city will then have the opportunity to ask for assistance from the state and the county, which could add up to an additional $11.5 million for the district.

Since the organizations are not required to provide any funding toward the project, Las Crucen Tammy Smith asked if the council had discussed the worst-case scenario.

"There are a lot of assumptions involved," said city Financial Services Director Mark Sutter. "This is not an easy

John Hernandez, a resident of the proposed district, was concerned about the city exercising its power of eminent domain and asked for council to table the issue and redraft the resolution to state the City of Las Cruces will not use its power of eminent domain and resell any land as private property.

After a quick phone call to a bond council attorney, Sutter said state statute prohibits eminent domain in a TIDD.

Several property owners were, how-ever, completely in favor of establishing the TIDD and wanted to clarify any con-fusion that the city was going to impose additional taxes upon property owners in

"We're using taxes as the property value increases, and that's going to happen anyway," said Mike Beckett, president of Las Cruces Downtown and COAS Books Inc. "I wanted to make that clear. I'm definitely in favor of this. This type of financing (tax increment financing) has been well documented all over."

Micro loans: when businesses need a little boost

Lending especially helpful for small businesses

By KIM BLUEHER Director of Lending, WESST Corp

Editor's Note: This article is part of a series of articles promoting a statewide initiative by the New Mexico Small Business Investment Corporation (NMS-BIC), in collaboration with its lending, investment and educa-tion partners, to provide and distribute articles that aid small business owners and entrepreneurs in obtaining investment funds available through the State of New Mexico. Designed as a financial literacy program, the idea focuses on educating readers about basic business preparation concepts, the funds and services that may be available to readers and the means to access them.

A few years ago a massage therapist came to WESST Corp. because she wanted to open a small office. She had a business plan and some excellent marketing ideas but not much else. She needed a small amount of money to purchase office furniture and equipment to set up her practice. What she needed was a micro loan – a small business loan to help get her business off the ground.

The massage therapist received her loan under the condition that she meet with one of our marketing consultants to help refine her ideas. She began taking classes, including a multi-week class called Marketlink that focuses on delivering a product or service to the marketplace. It wasn't long before her sales skyrocketed from a few hundred dollars a month to a couple thousand per month. Recently she returned for another loan, this time so she could move the business to a larger location and hire other therapists.

Both the original start-up loan and the subsequent loan for expansion are typical of micro loans. Helpful when the funding needs of a business are small, micro loans range from as low as $200 to as high as $50,000.

Loans of this size are often difficult to find - applicants sometimes lack collateral, have suffered credit problems, or have no business experience. If the business is new, banks may view the enterprise as risky. Those who have had credit problems such as bankruptcy or late payments will also have a hard time qualifying for a traditional loan. Micro loans are designed for all of these situations.

WESST Corp is a private, non-profit economic development organization. With an average loan size of approximately $15,000, we can be very creative with collateral. We also want to understand the story behind any credit problems. The manner in which clients have handled past financial problems is a good indicator of character.

But don't assume that there are no strings attached. We require those starting a new business to write a business plan as part of the loan application. While somewhat time consuming to write, a business plan helps clients take an objective look at their business idea and forces them to understand the areas that are critical to the success of the business. We also ask applicants to prepare a 12month cash flow projection to help them learn how cash moves in and out of the business and how the loan will be repaid.

Once a loan is granted, we make sure clients have the resources they need to succeed. One-on-one counseling is provided by consultants that include WESST staff members, as well as community business leaders with specific expertise. Customized solutions, targeted guidance and support are offered

Classes are also available, not only to those with WESST loans, but to people thinking about going into business for themselves and owners of existing businesses who want to grow their business. One of the hidden benefits of these classes is that entrepreneurs who come together to learn often end up supporting each other and making important connections. Micro loans are appropriate in any number of situations. A company may need to purchase a new delivery truck, or startup inventory may be needed. A warehouse or workshop may be necessary. These are typical reasons clients come to WESST, and our clients have started more than 1,850 businesses, accessed more than $2 million in loan capital and created approximately 3,000 jobs.

The massage therapist is doing splendidly in her new location and sales recently topped $6,000 per month. I wish I could say this story is representative of all of our clients but success is truly up to the entrepreneur. It takes creativity, perseverance and hard work to succeed. If we help a potential entrepreneur understand this, and they decide not to start a new business because they realize it will be difficult, we have also achieved

NMSU establishing new culinology degree

New Mexico State University plans to offer students in New Mexico and western Texas the opportunity to participate in a new culinology program blending the culinary arts with food science.

Made possible by a $240,000 U.S. Department of Agriculture grant, the new degree option will be offered by the School of Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Management (HRTM) starting in the fall of 2008. It will combine the culinary arts with the applied science of food research and

Students with a degree option in culinology would be able to receive jobs in the food-processing or food-service industry, for companies like Tyson and Bueno Foods. Students also would be qualified for jobs in research and development kitchens for hotel and restaurant chains.

'Companies are looking for students who have expertise in both the culinary arts and food science. NMSU is responding to what the industry wants," said Priscilla Bloomquist, professor of HRTM and co-director of the culinology project.

NMSU will partner with the El Paso Community College (EPCC) and Central New Mexico Community College (CNM) as part of the program. The two community colleges already offer culinary arts programs. NMSU will focus more on research and development in food science. NMSU also will recruit students from the two colleges.

Students enrolled in the new program will take courses in food production, nutrition, science and management. They also will be required to complete internships in the culinary arts and food science areas.

The culinology option fills an important niche not only in the industry, but in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics as well. It is an important career option for students that the university has not offered before," Bloomquist said.

Real estate takes a holiday?

'Off season' is a good time to buy

Most people are aware the spring and summer months are considered the "high season" for real estate sales. In most areas of the country, sales peak in April and May and remain brisk well into the summer months. The scenario isn't much different in Las Cruces. Warm weather, summer vacation and income tax refunds combine to make it a great time for buyers and sellers to make their moves.

What about the winter months? Do sales take a significant dip in the "off season"? According to statistics from the Las Cruces Multiple Listing and Information Service, the answer is yes – but not much. Take 2006, for example.

During the winter of '06, which fell between Dec. 21, 2005, and March 20, 2006, the 428 closed sales of new and used Las Cruces area homes accounted for 25 percent of the year's total number of closings. Sales picked up in the spring (March 21 to June 20), with 522 sales closed, representing 30 percent of our annual sales.

Closings peaked in during the summer (June 21 to Sept. 20), when the 537 inked deals representing 31 percent of the annual total. The remaining 14 percent of our 2006 sales took place in the fall (Sept. 21 to Dec. 20), with 236 new and used homes reported closed.

If you haven't already done the math, here's what the totals look like: The spring and summer closings in 2006 accounted for 61 percent of the 1,723 homes sold. On the winter/fall flip side, 39 percent of our annual sales were booked. Even though the numbers are a bit leaner on the flip side, buying and selling in the "off season" has its benefits.

Buyers can benefit from lower prices, less competition, motivated sellers, favorable mortgage terms and the possibility of taking a tax deduction for interest paid on closings that take place before the end of the year.

Sellers can also benefit during the winter months. Less competition from other sellers, fewer but more serious local buyers, an influx of snowbirds, and lower interest rates often combine to bring about an impressive number of successful sales

So, does it really matter whether you buy or sell in the "on" or "off" season? Not really. Unlike other areas of the country where winter weather causes a significant dip in sales, Las Cruces enjoys a steady stream of buyers and sellers year round.

From a real estate perspective, Las Cruces area residents are fortunate to live in a market that's conducive to success no matter when they choose to buy or sell

I'll have more in this column next week and on my weekly radio show, so stay tuned. Until then, I hope to ...

Farm Bill protects U.S. agriculture

Price support helps stabilize cotton market

By MARVIN TESSNEER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Foreign cotton-producing countries charge that the United States government is giving its farmers an unfair advantage in the world market with price subsidies that are not based on facts, a New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau spokesman said.

The government Farm Bill includes price supports for American cotton that eventually benefits the consumer, said John Wortman, bureau executive manager.

"I believe that the price supports included in the Commodity Title of the Farm Bill are extremely important to stabilizing the market that assures the provisions to American consumers with an inexpensive supply of food and fiber," Wortman said. "If we didn't have the Farm Bill, it would greatly reduce our ability to feed our own people, which is strategically very important."

The United States is aware that this country does not produce all of the food that consumers need in this country. Many fresh fruits and vegetables, for example, come from other countries.

"The Farm Bill puts us in the position to maintain a viable agricultural base in this country," Wortman said. "If we didn't have that viable agricultural base, we'd be at the mercy of other countries for our food and fiber."

Cotton farmer Bob Sloan said that the cotton price support is tied in the world market and based on a complex formula. The issue has been turned into a "political mess," he said.

"It's unfair when other countries accuse us of subsidizing cotton," he said. "We can't compete with other countries that have cheaper labor, less safety standards and tax incentives and government financing. And they don't have to put up with stricter environmental and chemical regulations like we do."

Sloan also is concerned about what he considered Americans' apathy toward agriculture.

"I don't think that people in the United States are interested in agriculture," he said. "They seem to feel that if we can't grow cotton here, we can import it from another country. The textile mills have moved out of the U.S. to other countries, and they're growing cotton by the mills. And we're buying the finished product."

Sloan is in a good position to understand the cotton problems. He also is president of the South-Central New Mexico Cotton Bollweevil/Pink Bollworm Control Program and a Mesa Farmer Co-op Gin board member.

The cotton industry is monitoring the developments. Fifty years ago Doña Ana County had 15 gins. But now the county has only one gin, Mesa Farmers Co-operative near Vado.

Last year, the B.E. Harvey Gin would have marked its 80th anniversary, but the Harveys had to close it because of the lack of patronage.

Of course, many gins have been consolidated into larger ones because of new machinery that can process the cotton more efficiently. And with the modules that can pack and cover cotton in the fields, the farmers can hold the cotton in the field or gin yards until the gins can process their cotton. Not as many gins are needed to complete the harvest.

The National Cotton Council contends that cotton should not be singled out from the Farm Bill for separate negotiating.

"It is clear that a few cotton-producing countries in West Africa remain steadfast in criticism of U.S. cotton and continue their unsubstantiated claims that U.S. cotton subsidies are responsible for poverty in those countries," council Vice President Gary Adams said. "We certainly understand the economic hardships faced by their growers, but we also understand that the U.S. program is not the cause."

David Hand, vice president of Calcot in Las Cruces, said the cotton marketing service fully supports the National Cotton Council's stand.

The cumulative effect of cotton subsidies by all countries amounts to only 2 to 4 percent of price suppression, according to an International Monetary Fund and United Nations Agricultural Organization.

NATISHA HALES I The Las Cruces Bulletin

The U.S. Farm Bill puts American farmers, including cotton producers, in a position to maintain a viable agricultural base, said New Mexico Farm Bureau Executive Manager John Wortman.

"Additionally, these studies note that improved market access is the vehicle for economic gains," Adams said.

The cotton council also believes that many West African countries do not provide policies to allow growers to obtain the latest technologies that would produce more cotton per acre. The governments also do not allow access to adequate marketing systems.

"Both of these factors mean reduced competition and reduced returns will not be solved by eliminating the U.S. cotton program," Adams said.

However, the sub-prime mortgage crisis has scared some buvers. Sandler said.

"The media reports influence whether a person is going to buy or sell," he said. "But there's still a lot of mortgage money out there. There isn't as much for the 'flaky' people, but there's a lot of money out there. Some people are discouraged, and there's a lot of misinformation have a moderate effect."

To steer potential buyers and sellers from that misinformation, builders and real estate agents can get the a positive message out through media, said Morgan Switzer of the Real Estate Press.

"We're doing so much better than other places in the media," she said.

Advertising such as the National Association of Realtors' "Buy Now" campaign provided that information, she said.

"We were able to localize the message with a template," she said. "There are a lot of different options out there. Advertising is the best investment you can possibly make. Consistency keeps the message out there, and there's market share for everyone."

Rehabilitating individuals of all ages

Southwest Sport and Spine provides advanced therapy

By BETHANY CONWAY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

After a tennis injury in college rendered Denise Campbell a physical therapy patient herself, she found that the field was what she had been looking for in a career.

While Campbell was originally accepted to medical school, she decided she wanted to spend more time with her patients than doctors.

"I started the business seven years ago. I have been a physical therapist for about 22 years. We have lived in Las Cruces since 1990, and this was something that I always wanted to do. So we started out in a small clinic, and we have pretty much expanded every year that we have been open," Campbell said.

Featuring pools in all the facilities, Southwest Sport and Spine provides outpatient physical therapy and rehabilitation services to all age groups. As owner of the spine and orthopedic specialty clinic, Campbell brings a great degree of expertise and has taught spine health around the world, including in Holland and Australia.

Through traveling around the world, Campbell says she has learned that problems requiring physical therapy are the same everywhere regardless of culture or medical system.

"The same things make people better and all people need the same things. People just need to be valued and heard," she said. "When you're entrusted with someone's health it is really such a privilege and responsibility. I've always tried to keep myself well educated and constantly learning new things."

Today, the staff at Southwest Sport and Spine includes office staff, athletic trainers, physical therapists, exercise physiologists and physical therapy technicians and assistants. In order to stay on top of advances in the field, Campbell says they put a lot of work into continuing education for their therapists.

"When someone comes along with a real need that we have no clue about, we go out and learn it. That is my general philosophy. If I don't have a tool in my toolbox to deal with the problem, then we are going to go out and learn it. I've developed into a chronic pain specialist just because I deal with so many difficult spine problems," she said. "We have worked our business so that we have a whole continuum of care. "

On top of the numerous services they provide, Southwest Sport and Spine has an area of their clinic set aside specifically for women's needs concerning everything from childbirth to traumatic injury.

"Getting people back to where they can handle their day, their life, that's why people tend to come for rehabilitation," Campbell said.

As a very health-conscious individual, Campbell sets an example in herself and feels that the individual person is the only one who can make the right health choices. With three children, Campbell says she has always looked after the health of her family as well.

"The whole world is telling you to live a healthy life and it is not working," said Campbell, who said the focus should be on the health of America's youth.

C a m p b e l l said that in the future, her business will also have to focus on meeting the overwhelming needs of the baby boomers.

don't want to just be trying to prepare and fix what was already broken. I want to do that, but if I can help you now with something that is going to make you not end up here 15 years from now or will improve your quality of life, then I want to be involved in that."

DENISE CAMPBELL

—In Good Company: Southwest Sport and Spine Centers=

What inspired you to go into business?

I wanted to have my own clinic since physical therapy school. My passion for my profession, learning and my patients, along with my general dislike of bureaucracies, always motivated me to try and create something better and a business platform to meet the needs of many of our health challenges.

What is unique about your business?

We have developed niche programs to help address our client's health care concerns. We have our aquatic programs, spine care programs, chronic pain programs and women's health programs to meet the need of the community. We strive to make our patients feel welcomed and individually cared for throughout their time in the clinic.

Who are your customers?

People needing physical therapy or seeking health and wellness help. People who have had a prior injury and are not comfortable going to a gym can find help and guidance for their issues with a medical slant. We specialize in spine care, orthopedics, sports medicine, aquatics, women's health, chronic pain and work related injuries. We seek to provide a continuum of care from acute injuries to arthritis groups.

Where do you see the business in five years?

My goal is to continue to service the comprehensive rehab and health needs of our growing community. Along with other health care providers we will all have to work together to serve the ever growing population of our area as well as addressing the health care crisis we have. I also want to become a regional training center for rehab professionals to create a cutting-edge knowledge base for our clients

What is the best part of your job?

Giving patients hope and help in achieving their maximum rehab capacity and improving their quality of life. I enjoy seeing patients that can return to their passions whether it is mothering their children, or getting back on a horse or getting back to work.

How do you keep your competitive edge?

Seeing patients every day shows me how much I do not know. I am on a constant quest to learn all I can to help address our patient's needs, to be the best business possible and create a great place to work. I spend most of my free time learning something.

How are you marketing the store?

1. Doing everything it takes to have a satisfied patient who feels that we cared about them and have worked on their problems the best we could.
2. Communication with the referring medical providers. 3. We use the typical advertising mediums, i.e. yellow pages, newspaper, etc.

What do you look for in an employee?

Some one who has a compassion for helping people, has pride in their work and can demonstrate competency in their area of expertise.

What is the best business decision you've made so far?

In fall 2002 we had a unique opportunity to purchase our building on Locust Street. It was in our five-year plan to be in our own building but not our two-year plan. The opportunity was too good to ignore, but it stretched our business to the max financially, physically and mentally. Our great employees banded together to help the opportunity become reality. We would see patients during the day and work on remodeling the building until midnight. The employees sacrificed along with me in order to make it happen.

What adjustments or improvements have you made so far?

Expanding our aquatic program in all three locations. Establishing an independent location for the Health

BETHANY CONWAY I The Las Cruces Bull

Denise and John Campbell, owners of Las Cruces Southwest Sport and Spine Center, Inc.

and Wellness business. Implementing seamless computerized technology that allows all locations to communicate from patient check in through discharge.

What advice would you give to others starting a business?

Take a real hard look at your true grit. Get a CPA, a patient and understanding bank and surround yourself with people who complement your strengths and counter balance your weaknesses.

What is your opinion of the Las Cruces business climate?

I think it is really good, but in general our community is going to have to step up a level in all aspects to serve the growth that is projected for this area. We have to support our educational institutions to create our workforce locally.

What best prepared you for entrepreneurship?

Growing up with little money and learning to deal with what you had or had to do without. Working for my dad in his business starting at the age of 12 helping him with his books and payroll and continuing on to hard physical labor. Also participating in competitive sports and working with great teams that achieved national championships. The experience with my dad and sports showed me what hard work and dedication can accomplish as well as how you can be on top one moment and struggling the next. The teams showed me what can be accomplished when everyone works together with a common goal. The best preparation was and continues to be my faith in God and His example of being a servant to people and using the talents he has blessed me with to the best of my ability.

What obstacles do you face or have you overcome?

Recruiting and retaining high-quality physical therapists when there is a national shortage of therapists. Surviving the aging of the baby boomers and the health care/insurance crisis.

What is the most important thing about your business that you wish people knew?

I have a passion for helping people long term not just right now. As a company we spend a large amount of money and time educating our staff and developing outstanding programs that will compete on a national and world level.

What are your business goals?

"Change or Die," "Thrive not just Survive," and "The main thing is to keep the main thing the main thing".

NMSU Honors College plays host to 'Great Conversations'

Community gets chance to discuss hot topics with university faculty

By JOEL COURTNEY

The New Mexico State University Honors College is out to prove that the art of conversation is not dead. In fact, they're banking on it.

The Honors College will host "Great Conversations," a chance to participate in a talk led by a member of the Honors faculty or a prominent member of the community with a level of expertise in the subject. Each of the 44 conversations will have their own table, set with eight to 10

The event, held at the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 28, will feature a buffetstyle dinner. Tickets to the event are $75, which includes a $50 charitable donation to the Honors College, or $55 for NMSU alumni from 2002-2007. Attire will be business casual, and there will be a cash bar.

"Great Conversations is premised on the notion that everyone loves a good conversation at dinnertime," said William Eamon, dean of the NMSU Honors College. "We're out here to prove, that at least in Las Cruces, the art of conversation is

The topics available for Great Conversations vary from the arts, business, education, politics and science, with some covering controversial topics such as stem cell research, while others stay safely in the realm of speculation over the future of Aggie athletics.

We're not here to preach or to lecture, just to have a conversation," Eamon said. "A conversation doesn't necessarily get at the truth, it just gets at the human side of things."

In addition to the great ideas that may pass between guests of Great Conversations, Eamon said there is an added benefit for NMSU, which usually only interacts with Las Cruces through athletics and art

"This is really a way for the university to intersect with the community," Eamon said. "And the event will feature many of our top scholars and professors, including Pookie Sautter, Dan Howard, Jim Peach and others.

In addition to top professors, NMSU each table will have at least one student from the Honors College to join in the conversation, according to Honors College Assistant Dean Jill Grammer. Student attendance is possible through a discounted $50 ticket available from the Honors College office.

"We hope that this will be an exciting, stimulating and fun event," Eamon said.

Although there are 44 tables and topics available for the event, Grammer said that several tables have already begun to fill up, including the "Election 2008" discussion with Garrey Carruthers and "The Rise of China" discussion with Ken Hammond. Guests are asked to make their first, second and third choices for table selection, in the hopes that every guest can take part in a discussion that

Through the Great Conversations event, the Honors College is looking to raise funds to endow several scholarships.

'The event will provide entertainment with the added benefit of adding to the scholarship funds," Eamon said.

One such scholarship is the Honors College Scholarship for International Research, which allows an NMSU student to create their own research project in a foreign country and gives them $5,000 to fund that project.

He said, so far, the Honors College's international research scholarship has benefited three talented young women and allowed them to further their careers with a unique opportunity.

The Honors College also is looking to endow scholarships for students from each of NMSU's academic colleges by match pledges from different donors.

Although this marks the first year for the event, Eamon said, his staff have visited similar events hosted by the University of Texas-San Antonio, and he hopes this will mark the first successful year of what will become an annual fund-raiser.

"We're going to take the plunge and see if we can make it work," Eamon said.

The Honors College at NMSU, which began as the university Honors Program in 1965, was established in 2004 to attract top students in all fields from New Mexico and the surrounding region, Eamon said.

Moscow Ballet dances into Las Cruces hearts

DAAC enters world of producing to elevate city's repertoire

The Doña Ana Arts Council, through the Rio Grande Theatre, has taken its support of the arts to a new level with an arrangement of performances by the Repertory Company of the Moscow Ballet two weeks ago.

The company performed two wonderful acts, with the first featuring a world premiere of "Vasilisa," with music by Sergei Rachmaninov and choreography by Moscow Ballet Artistic Director Anatoly Emelianov.

The original story of "Vasilisa" is based on a fairy tale of Russian lore that is similar to the story of "Cinderella."

on a fairy tale of Russian fore that is simlar to the story of "Cinderella."

The Moscow Ballet version, however, has more in common with "Sleeping Beauty," with a Prince Charming to rescue the endangered damsel from the vile Koshei the Deathless.

"Vasilisa" featured a modern twist to the dances of the evil Koshei and his minions the Kikimory, but they blended well with the classical steps that were incorporated for the meeting of the two lovers or the final battle between the hero and villain for "Vasilisa."

The second act was a performance montage of solo and duet pieces from Russia's most famous ballets, including "Nutcracker," "Carmen" and "Don Kihot."

The short dances allowed many of the company members to display their skills, even those that played small parts in "Vasilisa" or weren't involved in Act I at all.

The Repertory
Company of the Moscow Ballet performed scenes from some of the most popular modern ballets
and a world-premiere
of a new ballet,
"Vasilisa," during their show at the Rio Grande Theatre last week.

I've seen plenty of ballet performances, but they have always been TV productions, which fail to capture the essence and beauty of the dancers and their movements. Plus, because of the lack of believability bred by television, you just cannot fathom the strength necessary to perform ballet by watching on a screen.

The performance of "Vasilisa" seemed slightly haphazard, with some movements seeming unpolished. The quality of "Vasilisa" spoke more about the newness of the piece rather than the ability of the dancers. During the snippets from Russia's most well-known ballets, the Repertory Company showed they can perform excellently some of the most difficult routines. Passion exuded from the dancers in "Carmen," and the performance of "Don Kihot" was done with such precision, it must have been danced 1,000 times by that coupling to reach that level of expertise.

The balance, grace and strength necessary to dance ballet continues to astound me, as well as the dedication required for dancing at performance level. As an art lover, I would like to extend my gratitude to the DAAC and their board. Bringing the Moscow Ballet was a great gift to the city of Las Cruces, and they have set a strong precedent for future performances.

This new world of promotion for the DAAC opens up many exciting possibilities for Las Cruces, setting a precedent of excellent shows in our community. Although DAAC will only be bringing three or four of these high-caliber performances over the course of a year, they will help raise the expectations of the local art scene and help foster a way for lovers of great music to see those performances without taking money out of town.

The Rio Grande Theatre will continue to be rented out for artistic performances and will still serve as a home to the DAAC's Magic Carpet StoryTime, Every Other Tuesday and much more, but now there will be even more to look forward to at the theater.

DAAC's next production will be "Night & Day: The Best of Cole Porter" at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 15, followed by Marie Knight's gospel and blues at 8 p.m. Saturday, May 24.

Mirabal blends music and ceremony at Rio Grande

Native artist visits Las Cruces for first time

Whenever Native American musician and Grammy Award-winner Robert Mirabal takes to the concert stage he uses the opportunity to engage the audience in making ceremony – ceremony to heal, honor, and bring blessings for a brighter day.

day.

His new stage show, "In the Blood," does just that, blending scenes from the American experience – past, present and future – with themes from contemporary Native life. Mirabal will be appearing for the first time in the Las Cruces area at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Nov. 29 and 30, at the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Downtown Mall.

Sung in both English and Tiwa, Mirabal's native tongue, "In the Blood" features love songs that merge with ghost songs that roll into Americana ballads and full-on tribal rockers.

To accompany this singular mix of Native roots, rock, jazz and electronica, a special video presentation, "Spirits in the Blood," incorporates sweeping, timeless natural vistas with 21st century cityscapes and a heart-racing, mind-altering hightech lightshow. Using exquisite time-lapse photography, thunderheads build, lightning strikes, and clouds change the subtle light on a canyon wall. In a matter of seconds we see the sun's year-long dance on the Eastern horizon, a rushing trout stream becomes a kaleidoscopic tapestry, and the stars in the heavens pulse out their cosmic message before streaking across the sky ... all set to the music of Robert Mirabal.

On this video canvas, directed by Academy Award-winner Bill Mitchell, are painted the strong and sometimes fragile faces of the people of Taos Pueblo, who after a thousand years still practice the ceremonial life passed on to them by their ancestors. Using rare archival photographs, many seen here for the first time, "Spirits in the Blood" juxtaposes the ancient and modern worlds in an unforgettable way.

"This collection of songs and video reflect the traditional life I live at Taos Pueblo, and also the experiences of a man fortunate enough to travel the world," Mirabal said. "Many of these songs are sung in Tiwa, my native tongue, which is not a written language but passed orally from one generation to the next. If you live a traditional life, you see things differently – spiritually and musically. My music is informed by the ceremonial music I've heard all my life. What I create comes out of my body and soul in a desire to take care of the spirits of the earth."

New renditions of all-time Mirabal

New renditions of all-time Mirabal favorites like "Medicine Man" and "The Dance" shimmer beside new works like "Brave New World," "Pottery Shard Man" and "Holding up the Sky" that ends with an 1866 quote from Sitting Bull. Guitar master Larry Mitchell provides the lightning for the quartet while Patrick Shendo Mirabal, Robert's brother, adds his voice, percussion and flute music. Paul Fowler joins in on keyboards and all manner of electronic effects while Robert drums, sings and plays flute.

Robert Mirabal has won many honors,

His 2001 breakthrough PBS musical production, Music From a Painted Cave, remains a benchmark of Native American musical expression.

Oñate High School puts on 'Grease'

Musical production marks semester's worth of rehearsal

By JOEL COURTNEY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The students of Oñate High School's musical theater class will perform "Grease," by Jim Jacobs and Warren Casey, at 7 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, Nov. 29-Dec. 1, and Monday, Dec. 3, at the Oñate Performing Arts Center, 5700 Mesa Grande Drive.

"We've been working on this since the first day of school," OHS Theater teacher Sherrie Aland said. "We didn't even take role until the second day of class."

According to Aland, students are cast by an open audition and are drawn from students throughout OHS, even those that have no previous theater experience. To make sure there is no bias or conflict of interest, Aland had members of the New Mexico State University Department of Theatre Arts hold the audition for "Grease" in

"All of the students knew their roles over the summer,"

Although most of the semester's work has been done during class time, Aland said the last few weeks have required the group to do set construction over the weekends, as well as some costuming and building after school. Students have been broken up into groups for technical work based on previous skills.

'The kids have been very supportive of each other," Aland said. "Most of the students have had theater class with me before, but for some of them, this is their first time on stage."

"Grease" tells the story of students at Rydell High

"Grease" tells the story of students at Rydell High School in the 1950s and takes its name from the "greaser" subculture of the time. While exploring the themes of love, friendship and even the idea of stepping outside of class/clique boundaries, "Grease" has remained a favorite musical since its first production in 1971.

The story centers around greaser Danny Zuko and

Students from Oñate High School's rehearse "Freddy, My Love" for their upcoming production of "Grease, which opens Thursday, Nov. 29.

goody-goody Sandy Dumbrowski, who met over summer vacation and had a romantic fling. Now that school is back in session, Sandy has transferred to Rydell High to discover Danny is not the same boy she fell for over the summer.

Aland said past musical theater performances have seen attendance between 300 and 350, but so far, "Grease" looks to be the class' first sell-out show, so she recommends purchasing tickets early.

For tickets, contact Aland in advance at 527-9430. Tickets will also be available at the door while they last. Seating is general admission, and doors will open each night at 6 p.m.

Family dysfunction is not only in America

'Death at a Funeral' brings some laughs

> heater will be closed or Thanksgiving night.

By JEFF BERG
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

A decent break as you prep for holiday gluttony, "Death at a Funeral" is one of those flicks that you will see on the video shelf in a few years and wonder, "Did I ever see that?"

It is a farcical, slightly dark comedy, which works well in that respect, but sometimes the gross out and poke fun of everything cliché overtakes the original material, making it not nearly as fun as it could be.

The patriarch of a starchy old English family has passed on rather unexpectedly, much to the relief of some financially strapped kinfolk. Family and friends have gathered at his memorial service to wish him well on his next journey, and to also eat, drink and be merry. But in fact, things soon start to become a bit too merry.

The old gent was not on the up and up as his survivors might have thought, as any amount of cads and bounders have shown up to add some hijinks to the funeral.

Two sons, Daniel and Robert, have never gotten along too well and continue their tiff much to the embarrassment of several other family members who are attending the ceremony. Robert, a successful novelist is not a well-respected man, and Daniel starts to make sure that everyone around them knows that.

A family cousin, Martha, accidentally feeds her paramour a hallucinogenic drug of some sort, with mostly expected results – attempts to fly, animal imitations, slight delusions of grandeur and such, all the while being buck naked (first time I've ever seen a gent spend so much "on camera" time sans bloomers although not graphically) on an outside balcony of the family estate.

To make matters even more chaotic, a mysterious guest shows up at the funeral, one that no one, friend or foe, is familiar with.

Skullduggery is on the stranger's mind (well played by Peter Dinklage, who did such an excellent job in "The Station Agent" and last year's remake of "Lassie") as he corners Daniel and Robert and produces a number of photographs that prove that dear old Dad had a secret life of which no one was aware. The secret life includes costumes of the ancients and questions about the old man's sexual preferences.

Dinklage, at least for me, saved the picture during his all-too-short screen time. Alas, his closing scenes are the reason for the film having the title that it does.

GRADE

Failed eulogies, poop jokes, an overtaxed man of the cloth, jabs at the elderly, little people and funerals in general add to the whirlwind plot, which was directed by Frank Oz of Muppets fame, whose directing work I have never been overly enamored by.

Hence, if you are up for some mindless humor to start your holiday season, this little picture will put you on the right path even if the ending is lame and abrupt.

If not, you can still go to the video store in a couple of years, pick up the DVD and scratch your chin as you wonder ... what did that guy in the Bulletin say about this flick?

What will you do at your funeral? Let me know at jeffberg@lascrucesbulletin.com.

'Lonely Are the Brave' captures dying era

The CineMatinee film at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla for Saturday, Nov. 24, will be "Lonely Are the Brave" (1962, 107 minutes, not rated, made in New Mexico).

This black-and-white film is elegantly directed by David Miller and photographed by Philip H. Lathrop. Blacklisted writer Dalton Trumbo based it on the novel "The Brave Cowboy" by Edward Abbey. The film, which is Kirk Douglas'

The film, which is Kirk Douglas' personal favorite, is a gripping modern western set in the 1950s in New Mexico. It waxes poetic about the vanishing frontier and a way of life doomed by progress and technology. It ends up a contest between an escaped felon cowboy, Jack Burns (Kirk Douglas), pursued by a sheriff, Morey Johnson (Walter Matthau), using Jeeps and a helicopter.

Burns lands in jail over a drunken bar fight in order to free his close friend Paul Bondi, serving a two-year sentence for helping illegal Mexicans cross the border to find work in the United States.

Bondi refuses to escape, claiming to be a changed man who loves his wife and child. So Burns escapes by himself, after receiving a beating from bully Deputy Sheriff Gutierrez (George Kennedy), and first goes to tell Paul's wife Jerri (Gena Rowlands) that her man loves her and will return when his time is up.

The cowboy, on his horse Whiskey, takes to the foothills in the hopes of crossing over to Mexico. Sheriff Johnson is in charge of bringing in the fugitive, and during the course of the chase the wry humored lawman comes to sympathize with the last of the cowboys.

It's a highly symbolic film making the Douglas character a martyr for the cause, while Matthau's warm performance gives the film life, with Douglas effectively becoming the voice of nostalgia speaking out against the dangers of the encroaching jet age and the loss of humanity to the technocrat.

A potpourri of movies, past and present, often with an emphasis on life in the west – which could mean the new west, the old west, or anything in between – the CineMatinee series is designed to offer area residents a brief tutelage of various types and genres of film.

At least one film each month for this series will have a "New Mexico Connection," drawing from the vast pool of movies made in the state or perhaps featuring a star/story drawn from New Mexico talent.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time for CineMatinee is 1:30 p.m., and admission is $3 for everyone except Mesilla Valley Film Society members who are admitted free of charge. The theater is located one block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287 or 522-0286.

A unique treasure of Las Cruces

Fred Stern's rainbows add an artist's touch to the sky

By JOEL COURTNEY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Fred Stern is not your typical artist. While every artist includes thoughts toward light and color in their creation, Stern works solely with light and color for his rainbow "sculptures."

"I refer to myself as the Rainbow Maker, not as an artist," he said.

He began actively creating rainbows in 1992, which he originally viewed as "light sculpt Search at the Pictures." His first was created for the

in the streets.

FRED STERN,

Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, for which he was one of 50 artists from around the world invited to attend.

"Every kid in America does it ... goes out with a garden hose to make a rainbow," he said. "When you get to be a bigger kid, you just need a bigger hose."

Stern has created nearly 50 rainbows, most recently using his unique skill for a rainbow over Mesilla Valley Hospice with the help of the Las Cruces Fire Department two weeks ago in celebration of MVH's 25th anniversary serving the Las Cruces community.

Stern said his outlook changed to seeing the rainbow as the planet's flag, which made him rethink using his creations to only work towards humanitarian causes, most notably those for world peace and global unity.

In 1996, after four years working toward it, Stern was invited to create a rainbow over the United Nations building in New

"I looked at it like flying God's flag over the flag of all nations," he said. "That's probably the critical piece for me."

Although Stern said he loves to support the concept of global unity with his rainbows, lately his major thrust has been doing several rainbow creations for camps for sick children.

"I watch the video from this summer (at Camp Quality for children with cancer) and have to keep pinching myself as I see these kids that have such joy despite their illness," he said. "I don't know if it has a healing energy, but it would be a great gift if it does.

Stern added his favorite part of working with children is taking them to the end of the rainbow for a uniquely magical experience.

"Anytime I create a rainbow on land, people have an opportunity to go to the end of the rainbow," he said. "Because the rainbow is not a real object, as you get closer it gets smaller. Once you're at the end, you're standing in a fullcircle double rainbow that goes from over your head to their feet.

Although the double rainbow is no pot of gold, Stern says he sees it as equally valuable.

"In some ways, getting to the end of the rainbow and seeing yourself inside may be a perfect metaphor for self-discovery," he said.

In addition to his regular work, Stern said he has created two "moon rainbows," one to open a Camp Sundown – for children with a genetic disorder which doesn't allow them to go into the sunlight - and another for an Arab village during a 1999 Arab-Israeli peace conference.

He said the moon rainbows have a ghostlike quality and are paler than those created by sunlight. According to Aristotle, moon rainbows occur naturally approximately every 25 years.

Fred Stern made a rainbow over Mesilla Valley Hospice on Tuesday, Nov. 6, to help them celebrate their 25th anniversary of service.

Stern said he would like to create another moon rainbow in the near future if he can find the right humanitarian cause to support with it. Because the moon rainbow requires absolutely no ambient lighting, he said the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum would likely be the best place locally to attempt a moon rainbow.

Also in the near future, Stern is completing a video documentary on the Avante Garde movement in New York in which he took part. He is also working with a screen writer on a feature film script based on his life.

Stern has been recognized numerous times for his rainbows, including five awards from the National Endowment for the Arts, and was the first individual artist to be awarded for Art in Public Places by the NEA.

He created artwork long before becoming the Rainbow Maker, but most of his early work was also public pieces, including several that revolved around lighting projection.

"I believe if art is anywhere, it's out in the streets," he said.

Although he has served as an associate professor of art, Stern has an extensive scientific background, holding a master's degree in nuclear technology and a doctorate in chemical engineering.

"I taught for a while, but gave it up because I felt I had a responsibility for anyone I taught reactor design to," he said.

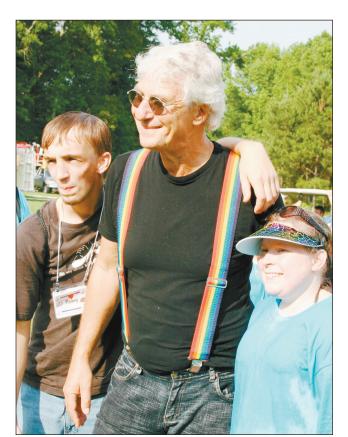

Stern's interest in science led him to computers in the early '80s, and he published one of the first personal computer books in 1982. His computer skills led him to creating a program that would tell him the optimal time and direction necessary for creating a rainbow.

Although he has gotten a tremendous amount of joy being the Rainbow Maker, Stern said he will be giving the technology away to create a rainbow soon, putting all the details necessary to track the Sun's position and the size of the rainbow desired on a website so any organization can create their own rainbows.

For more information about Fred Stern or to see more of his work, visit www. rainbowmaker.us.

Fred Stern's most memorable creation, a rainbow that flew over the United Nations building in New York City, which he thinks of as "God's flag flying over the flag of all nations."

Fred Stern poses with two children from Camp Quality in Arkansas. Camp Quality provides a fun summer camp for children with cancer.

■ FARM & RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

A new exhibit at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum gives visitors an inside look at a centuries-old cowboy culture in France. "Gardians of the Camargue:

The French Buckaroo Tradition" is now open at the museum and will be on display through March 9. This traveling exhibit features 69 framed photographs and artifacts depicting the culture of the Gardians of the Camargue. In a small area of France called the Camargue, along the Mediterranean at the mouth of the Rhone, there are cowboys not unlike our own. They are called gardians. The Brotherhood of the Gardians dates back to 1512 and centers on century-old traditions. In 1905, this culture was revived by a Frenchman named Folo de Baroncelli, a writer and rancher living in the Camargue. Baroncelli was inspired by Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West Show when he saw the show in Paris. The exhibit features the black-and-white photography of Kevin Martini-Fuller, the color photography of Rawls, the interpretive paintings of Karen Foster-Wells, along with tools and clothing unique to the Camargue region.

■ TOMBAUGH GALLERY

The theme of the sanctity of family is explored in this photographic exhibit featured at the Tombaugh Gallery of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Las Cruces. The exhibit originated with the First Unitarian Society of Denver and is a collection of family portraits highlighting families who, today, are forbidden to marry in 49 states. Other "more traditional families" are included because some of them have known discrimination. The photos were taken in black and white by Paul Sorenson, currently the director of Denver Darkroom, Inc., a nonprofit organization that provides photographic instructions and experiences in Denver. Sorensen specializes in portraits of families and individuals. As a local component to complement the show in Las Cruces, family portraits will be lent for display or be by area photographer and activist Charlotte Lipson. "Reframing Family" will be on exhibit to the public through Nov. 30 at the Tombaugh Gallery, 2000 S. Solano Drive. Regular gallery hours are Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Call 522-7281 for more information.

"Country Paradise" by Aleksander Titovets at Glenn Cutter

Titovets mark 15th year in America with commemorative show

Glenn Cutter hosts exhibit for Russian-born regional artists

This year marks the 15th anniversary of the arrival of Lyuba and Aleksander Titovets, Russian-born artists, in the United States. They have chosen to commemorate this special occasion with a two-person exhibition at Glenn Cutter's Jewelers and Gallery from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 24.

Their journey that began 15 years ago represents a true leap of faith. Lyuba, Aleksander and Lyuba's parents came to the United States leaving family behind. They had earned their master's degrees from the Lenningrad University of Fine Arts. Aleksander had been selected to teach as a Member of the Artists of the USSR and Lyuba worked at the History of Culture. They left Russia with only a few possessions, $50 in cash and 10 paintings and came to live in El Paso at the encouragement of a family member at the University of Texas-El Paso. They began by using their apartment balcony at one time for their studio.

The couple said they find it difficult to believe they have been here 15 years and are celebrating such great success in their art careers. "People in the West still believe in the pioneer spirit," Lyuba said. They said they wanted to do this show to thank the people of Las Cruces and El Paso for supporting them over the years.

Siberian-born Aleksander developed classical art skills from The Russian School of Oil Painting. He has participated in competitions with the National Academy of Design in New York and the Oil Painters of America. He won Best in Show in the International Fine Art Competition four years in a row among competitors in his region. He has been guest artist for Great American Artists and Artists of America. He now paints treetops of wintry forests of his Native Siberia that now find inspiration in the landscapes of southern New Mexico.

landscapes of southern New Mexico.

Lyuba's artistic training began at the age of 5 in St. Petersburg. With invitations to national and international juried exhibitions and solo shows, Lyuba's career has soared. In 2000, she received the Dillman's Creative Art Foundation Award from the Oil Paintings of America Juried Exhibition.

Her works were included in a world exhibition in Westminister Abby in London, England. Her name is included in the Archive of the National Museum of Women in Washington, D.C.

The Titovets live in El Paso with their American-born daughters, who are following in their parents' footsteps and are beginning to paint. They choose to live in El Paso, where they find freedom to try new directions in their art. Their work is represented by numerous galleries and in

Border Artists, a misnomer

A collection of some very bright and beautiful artwork awaits your discovery at the Nason House on NMSU campus. My impression of the opening for the Border Artists was a crowded little house full of very sparkling and professional work most of which stood up in its own presence; believable, committed and certainly not amateur. Why they call themselves the Border Artists piques my interest and actually brings bigger thoughts about Las Cruces as an arts community. I am beginning to sense that we who do art in Las Cruces suffer from a lack of selfconfidence, a sense of apathy and a fairly deflated level of expectation. Although I know it to be untrue, I sometimes consider that there may not be all that many artists here in the first place. Why else would there be no fall studio tour, no gallery organization, no printed guide to the arts? Is it a matter of leader-ship or a matter of unformed identity? A matter of lack of focus, or a matter of transitory community membership? I can only hope that, as in most everything else in life, the time is yet to come and that a gradual growing to center, to wholeness, is in the works.

The Border Artists have been an entity for many years, led by Carolyn Bunch and Virginia Ness. Their new president is Jeanne Rundell from The Potteries in Mesilla. Perhaps in their inception they considered their identity as being inclusive to the variety of border cultures that we are part of .. (perhaps not). But if truth be told, they are a majority of the middle class and somewhere near middleaged Anglo artists with the exception of the newest member, Diana Molina, a Latina photographer of some standing in the art world. That is not to diminish their talents or significance, their contribution and sincerity. But why is it that there is not more diversity in the group? If you visit the Hal Marcus Gallery in El Paso, which I hope you do occasionally, you will see a variety of talented and multi-cultured artists on display. Winfrey Hearst is an El Pasoan and member of the Border Artists. But what about reflecting the culture of the border with a bit more accuracy? Perhaps it gets back to this bigger notion of deflated expectation ... yes, it's hard, yes, it takes time and perseverance, but I would think it worth the effort. Or, alternatively, a new name for the group might be in order.

As for the work displayed, exceptional! Most impressive to me were the ceramic chairs of Suzanne Kane, which stood up on curvy legs and hosted a clutch of black clay ravens as they pause in their foraging. Delightful and light-hearted, a spirit we all need to indulge in more often. Along that same playfulness continuum are the paintings of Rosie McLoughlin, full of fantasy and yet deep in their conception. A cat with a figure of a friend, a wobbly school bus with a flock of chickens on the roof; and a surface of impastoed whimsy in bright and happy colors. McLough-lin evokes the make-do (musical) lifestyle of some of those dwelling south of our borders. She was one of two artists who addressed border culture, if tangentially. The other was Diana Molina with her two stunning photographs of Charro and pilgrim. The sentimentality of Carolyn Bunch's Tarahumara people is offputting to me, much too pretty and sweet, but classic in approach and appealing to those who get lodged in the lens of the 19th century with their taste for art. They are heartfelt and expertly done. What about something more gritty and real, the poverty, the struggle for autonomy as a culture? Visually challenging, painterly challenging

Scott Weaver, another new member, has two unusual and artistically rendered photographs. He disclaims any political reference in his "milk bottle" digital image, but I say, like it or not, that human waste as subject matter is undeniably provocative and "of-the-times" we live in. Jo-An Smith references the key doors of Chaco Canyon with her striking abstract painting. Cassandra Lockwood stands out in her metaphorical series on small pieces of softened angst and longing. There are many more fine pieces for the viewer and a definite must-see for all of us while the show is up. The KRWG-FM $\ensuremath{\mathsf{NPR}}$ station benefits from sales of the art work and this seems like a great arrangement and cooperation from both organizations. Congratulations on this collaboration! As a matter of fact, you can get over to see the Fripperies show at the NMSU Gallery (see Art Talk, 11/16/07 at www.lascrucesbulletin. com) on the same visit. Here's the details: The Nason House, across from Kinkos on the New Mexico State University campus from 1 to 4 p.m. Nov. 30-Dec. 1, from 1 to 4 p.m. Dec. 7-8, from 1 to 4 p.m. Dec. 14, and finally from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Dec. 15, for last-minute affordable art for the holidays. For more information, call 646-KRWG (5794). This is the last call for local art-

This is the last call for local artists with accessible studios to join us in the first annual Fall Open Studio Tour which will take place from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Nov. 30 and Dec. 1. There will be maps at each site leading you from one studio to another. So far we have six artists participating and would really like to include more. Please contact me at the paper, and we will include you on the tour. It's going to be fun, in a grass roots, groundbreaking season.

I wish you good work.

Aggies regroup, prepare for NCAA

NMSU's coach overextended his voice barking orders during the three-day event at the Pan Am Center. His vocal chords were almost healed on Monday.

Not to worry. Despite no conference title, New Mexico State finished the 2007 season with a 26-5 record and ranked 14th nationally, the school's highest ever. The Aggies are awaiting an invitation to the NCAA tournament that is almost certain to come at 6 p.m. Sunday. ESPN will televise the tournament bids and regional locations. Jordan and his squad will watch the proceedings from the third floor of the Fulton Center. The public is invited to join them.

"I thought we played pretty well," Jordan said about the finale against Hawaii. "Give them (Hawaii) credit. They kind of frustrated our hitters. Right now they are a little better than we are."

New Mexico State's success under Jordan has not gone unnoticed. He expects to sign three, maybe four, quality recruits soon. NCAA rules prohibit him from revealing names.

In preparation for the NCAA tournament, the Aggies practiced Monday and Tuesday before Jordan sent them home for what's left of the Thanksgiving holiday. They will return Saturday and practice Sunday before adjourning to the Fulton Center to discover their tournament destination and first resund expenses.

the NCAAs which will begin

If Altermatt can't go, Jordan will beckon either freshman Whitney Phillips or Alex Steinmetz at the outside hitter position.

McKines, a great find for Ags

NMSU faces Longhorns in first Legends Classic

By JOHN KEITH
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Like most guys, the smart ones, Wendell McKines leans heavily on his mother's advice. What she says goes.

Which is why McKines, the celebrated 6-foot-5 forward from Richmond High School in California, is playing for coach Marvin Menzies at New Mexico State.

A true freshman, McKines is closing in on one of the Aggies' two starting forward positions. With Herb Pope on standby awaiting NCAA clearance, McKines is a welcome sight.

McKines is a welcome sight.

Menzies' telephone conversation last summer with Stephanie Drake, McKines' mother, apparently swung the deal.

"When I was being recruited my mom decided to call coach Menzies," McKines said. "To check him out. After she talked to him, she said she liked the things he said. My mom is not easily impressed. Her opinion matters to me. I decided this (NMSU) might be a good place to be."

Menzies calls it a major coup. "To sign a player like Wendell late in the summer after everybody in the country was trying to recruit him was a real break for us," he said.

Last season, McKines, quiet, almost shy, was California's leading scorer with 1,058 points. He averaged 35.2 points, 14 rebounds, four assists and three steals a game. His punishing dunks were notorious.

Mark DeLuca, who coaches Pinole Valley High School, one of Richmond's chief opponents, used to marvel at McKines' dunks. "You basically know that if the guy gets within six feet it is going to be a dunk," he was quoted as saying.

saying.

"And there is nothing you can do about it."

McKines reappeared on the open market last summer. His prior commitment to the University of San Francisco failed to materialize.

Menzies was quick to act. The Aggies' coach is no stranger to high school basketball in California. He grew up there, coached there and played and graduated from UCLA in 1987.

"My relationship with the coaches in California played a role in us signing Wendell," Menzies said. McKines, who is still digesting NMSU's basketball system, improves with each game. He scored 19 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in the Aggies' 100-64 victory over LeMoyne-Owen here Sunday. He will take an 11.5-point average to the final four-team round of the Legend's Classic in Newark, N.J. this weekend. NMSU opens against Texas at 5 p.m. (MST) Friday. The other matchup features West Virginia vs. Tennessee. The winners play at 5 p.m. Saturday after the losers' consolation game at 2:30 p.m.

New Mexico State stands 2-2 this season under Menzies. He is not sold on the idea of naming a starting lineup. An eight to 10-man rotation is his goal. "And any one of the starters might come out of the game early, depending on the situation and what we need on the floor," he has said.

Against the Longhorns, look for Menzies to start McKines and Justin Hawkins at forwards, Hatila Passos at center and Fred Peete and Jonathan Gibson at guards

Wendell McKines is quickly working his way into the Aggies' starting lineup. The 6-foot-5 true freshman forward is noted for his ferocious dunks, as shown here in the Aggies' 100-64 victory over LeMoyne-Owen Sunday. McKines recorded his first double-double against the Magicians, scoring 19 points and grabbing 11 rebounds.

Mayfield Trojans were rewarded with a week off as the Class 5-A football playoffs began.

Now, the No. 1 and No. 2 seeds are ready to join in the fray. The top-seeded Trojans will take on Rio Rancho at 7 p.m. Friday at the Field of Dreams, while Las Cruces faces Manzano at 1 p.m. on Saturday, also at the Field of Dreams.

Manzano eliminated Oñate last week, 50-19, in the first round, while Rio Rancho is coming off of a 28-21 win over Hobbs.

Rio Rancho is led by speedy running back Marcus Williams, the brother of New Mexico State Aggie receiver Chris Williams. This will be the first-ever meeting between Mayfield and Rio Rancho.

"He's a pretty darn good football player, but they have a lot of athletes on that team," said Mayfield coach Michael Bradley. "You can't concentrate too much on one guy because of all the other guys.

"They run a spread offense, they're real balanced between the run and the pass," Bradley said. "Williams can catch and run Field of Dreams with the ball and he can make the big play. We'll be aware of him, but the other guys can hurt you just as bad."

The Trojans defeated Las Cruces 14-7 two weeks ago in the regular-season finale and Bradley was happy to have the week off before the playoffs.

Las Cruces coach Jim Miller, however, said his team is very anxious to get back on the field. The Bulldawgs face a big-play Monarchs team that has improved as the season has gone. Manzano's only losses were to Mayfield and Eldorado.

"(Manzano) hit some big plays on Oñate," Miller said. "Their quarterback can throw and run, and they have some good skill guys. This will be a test for us."

Manzano quarterback Matt Dalzall passed for 350 yards and four touchdowns against Oñate and added 95 yards rushing.

In the other two quarterfinal games in the 5A playoffs Friday night, Clovis takes on La Cueva and Cibola plays Eldorado. Admission is $8 for adults, $5 for students.

LCHS boys capture state 5A soccer title

'Dawgs beat Eldorado 1-0

By CRAIG MASSEY

The season certainly didn't begin the way coach Erik Tuchfarber wanted. His Las Cruces High School boy's soccer team lost the season opener 4-0 to Hobbs.

Tuchfarber used the words "worried," "disheartening" and "discouraged" to describe the team's feeling after the loss.

'A, we got shut out and, B, we had four goals scored against us," he said.

But four months later, the 2007 season ended much better than it began. The Bulldawgs defeated the Eldorado Eagles 1-0 to capture the Class 5A Boy's State Championship last Saturday in Albuquerque.

It's Las Cruces' second state championship since Tuchfarber took over the program eight years ago. The Bulldawgs also won it all in 2004.

This year's title came at the end of a long and winding path that took some bizarre twists. Las Cruces had to twice play through its pool in the state tournament after the three squads each compiled a 1-1 record the first time through. Confusion over the tiebreaker system forced the New Mexico Activities Association to let the teams replay

The Bulldawgs then defeated Sandia in the seminfinals 1-0 before advancing to face Eldorado. Officially, LCHS finished the season with a 19-4 record, but Tuchfarber prefers to count the other pool-play games, making it 20-5.

"We felt determined to make sure we did what we had to do to win," said the coach, a former LCHS player. "We won 10 in a row after that first loss and built some team chemistry." Las Cruces, a veteran team with 10 seniors, battled through a very tough district with a 6-2 league mark. The team's leading scorer on the season was Ivan Esparza, but former LCHS football player Marc Ortega stepped up in the state tournament, scoring a goal in each game, including Las Cruces' only goals in the semifinal win and title win.

Tuchfarber praised the work done by midfielder Nick Peña and goalie Victor Rodriguez, as well as the back four – Jerry Yeh, Roy Cheng, Josh Switzer and Victor
Gutierrez, the only junior in the group.

"I didn't know how good we would be this year," said Tuchfarber. "After that first game, we knew we had some

Prep teams shoot for improvement

Tough season ahead

By CRAIG MASSEY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

As the 2007-08 high school boy's basketball season gets under way, Las Cruces has one team hoping to repeat as state champions, one team facing a rebuilding chore and two that are aiming to improve on last

The city's three public school teams began the season last week, each losing their openers to El Paso teams. Mesilla Valley Christian Schools plays on Nov. 27 at home against Hatch Valley.

Mesilla Valley Christian Schools

The SonBlazers are coming off of a dream season where they compiled a 28-2 record and claimed the Class 2-A state championship.

Coach Terry Adler returns two starters from that team, and with a talented collection of underclassmen, the goal is more of the same. Last year, the team's strength was its size and rebounding, but the squad will have a different look this year.

"We're very quick, and we'll definitely play an up-tempo game," Adler said. "We're more scrappy this year and use a lot of pressure defense. We're also a very smart team."

The two returning starters are 6-0 junior point guard Zach Adams and 6-3 sophomore Scott Adler. Adams was named second team All-State last year.

Other top players for the SonBlazers are Tommy

Adler, a 6-2 junior; Greg Patti, a 5-10 sophomore; Alex Pollock, a 6-0 sophomore; and Cody Correa, a 5-10 sophomore. The team's lone senior is Jeremy Roman, a 6-3 transfer from Mayfield who will become eligible to play in late December.

"We have the experience of winning a state championship last year under our belt," Adler said. "I think this sould be a greeight town if we can green beather."

this could be a special team if we can stay healthy."

Oñate

Oñate Coach Richard Robinson, entering his 13th year in charge of the program, says there's a lot to like about his 2007-08 Knights. The Knights are coming off of an 11-14 season.

"We have a real balanced lineup, we have the experience and we have a lot of potential," he said. "This group meshes well together, and they'll do whatever it takes.

It's a well-rounded team, and everyone shoots well."

The squad is led by 6-5 senior J.C. Ayala, a four-year starter. Robinson plans to play 6-3 junior Alex Wright at center and will move Ayala to the four spot,

"That will free (Ayala) up to do more things," Robinson said. "He can use his height on the perimeter."

Also expected to start for the Knights are three juniors – 5-10 Isaac Bonett, 5-8 Stephen Melendrez and 6-1 Abraham Tarin.

"Stephen and Abraham did a great job for us last year as sophomores and Isaac has a lot of speed and quickness," Robinson said.

MayfieldWhat the Mayfield Trojans lack in size, they hope to more than make up for it in quickness and depth

Coach Tommy Morrow's team will lean heavily on team strengths as the squad tries to improve on its 12-15 record from last year.

"We definitely like to play up-tempo," said Morrow, who is entering his ninth year at the school. "We do have a lot of quickness, and we'll be able to use a lot of people. We have good shooters, good ball-handlers and players with a pretty high basketball IQ. Most of what we'll do, we'll do on the move."

The team is led by third-year starter Luis Quiñones, a 5-9 guard who has all the positive characteristics that Morrow mentioned. Other key players include 6-0 senior Artie Villa 5-8 senior Oscar Robles 6-1 junior senior Artie Villa, 5-8 senior Oscar Robles, 6-1 junior Nate Abeyta and 6-2 junior Jon Allen.

Morrow also is looking forward to the arrival of at least a couple of athletes who are currently competing for the Trojan football team.

The Bulldawgs compiled a 19-8 record last year on a senior-laden team led by current New Mexico State Aggie Gordo Castillo. But Coach Mike Smith starts with a clean slate this year and is depending greatly on a solid group of juniors who played on the junior varsity team last season. LCHS returns no starters.

"We're just bringing them along, and we'll see how far we can go," said Smith, who is beginning his 11th season as the Bulldawgs' head coach. "They're doing a good job, and I'm excited to see how far we can go."

At 5-10, Noah Fox is Las Cruces' only senior. The juniors include 6-3 Lucio Lutrell, 5-8 Alejandro Briseno, 6-0 Fabian Vigil, 6-0 Javier Montoya, 6-3 Charles Chavez, 6-0 Avery Allen, 5-10 Mike Garza, 6-2 Richard Mendez and 6-1 Dante Caro, who currently is the quarterback for the LCHS football team.

"The intensity changes a great deal from junior varsity to varsity," Smith said. "They'll have to get used to it. I have to be patient, and the kids have to be patient. It's going to be an interesting year."

How tough are you?

Take the golf doctor's mental toughness test 8.

DR. CHARLIE BLANCHARD

Golf Doctor

Not a round of golf goes by when I'm not asked or needled about some form of mental weakness or breakdown. Usually it starts as a joke, perhaps after a badly yanked putt, although I've learned to detect a silent cry of anguish masked by a nervous quip. In the grill, while a fellow golfer drowns the pain of a final-hole meltdown, I might hear, "Charlie do you know a good shrink?" or "Got any anti-yip drugs in your car?"

The truth is, very few golfers actually seek out help with performance issues. I think it's mostly because a stigma is still attached to what would fall into the broad category of "mental problems." Yet, some golfers freely admit they have mental game problems but won't do anything about it, except flagellate themselves nervously in a seemingly light-hearted manner. Golfers - male golfers in particular – would rather go in for a root canal than admit any weakness of the brain. They would sooner spend a week shopping before they would seek analysis and help for their affliction. So I'm going to help you here, without you having to even make eye contact.

Research has demonstrated (and experts accept) the fact that there are certain kinesthetic, cognitive and emotional attributes and skills that separate the successful competitors in any sport. Excellent performance in golf is highly individual (and greatly internal), and demands an advanced level of psychological self-mastery, combined with a winning mindset. Once a certain level of golfplaying ability or proficiency is in place, then the ultimate golfing results, which we crave - of outstanding play and personal achievement – become a matter of "battlefield" execution under competitive circumstances. The broad range of skills and attitudes – including talents and habits - that winning golf requires can be taught, learned and acquired. All of these can be coached.

Over the years I have developed a variety of performance tools for assessing what golfers are made of. At Performance Golf Schools we use these assessments for individual coaching and game improvement. Among the tools we use is a 100-item self-assessment that covers virtually every aspect of the game. I have condensed this into a simple 25-item test for you to evaluate your own game, and specifically your level of mental toughness. The "questions" are put in the form of "I" statements that you will attach a rating to, from one to four (4 to 1). The lower your score the more you could benefit from improvement coaching.

The Golf Doctor's Mental Toughness Quiz

- 1. I have a reliable and consistent short game around the greens.
- I have a golf swing that I can repeat with good results under pressure. 3. I'm imaginative executing specialty
- and awkward shots, with tenacious scrambling ability.
- 4. I am a really, really good, consistently

5. I handle competitive pressure exceptionally well.

- I adapt to and adjust to golf course and weather conditions quickly.
- I practice intelligently (always targetoriented) with a strong work ethic.
- I consistently demonstrate good course management and decision-
- I do not make "stupid" mistakes that cause me to beat myself.
- 10. I am able to stay focused and concentrate absolutely throughout an entire round.
- 11. I maintain a realistically positive attitude with positive self-talk nearly all the time.
- 12. I do little complaining, but take responsibility for my own decisions and play.
- 13. I am able to control my emotions, reactions and behavior at all times.
- 14. I nearly always handle adversity and bad breaks in a way that helps me.
- 15. I am able to consistently make clearheaded, rational decisions quickly under pressure.
- I possess an in-depth knowledge of the game of golf and the rules of golf.
- 17. I picture myself as a winner and am driven to succeed no matter what.
- 18. I am disciplined about my pre-shot routine, using excellent visualization.
- 19. My confidence is usually high and maintained throughout the round.
- ${\bf 20.}\,$ I can let go of events, feelings and thoughts that are unproductive and self-defeating.
- I repeatedly exhibit exceptional coping skills and problem-solving ability on the golf course.

- 22. I know myself, possessing a sound inner character with strong ego strength.
- 23. I play without much sense of fear, but with a strong sense of passion and playfulness.
- I'm not overly hard on myself, keeping golf in perspective, not sinking into perfectionism.
- 25. I earnestly believe I have substantial control over my own performance on the golf course

(Bonus item; add this to your total score.) I really, really have fun playing

Remember, this is not a scientific instrument, only a guideline to help you do better. You can also have someone who knows you well rate you as a comparison. If you graded yourself with brutal honesty and objectivity, your total score may suggest whether you tend to be mentally tough or a mental weakling. If you scored above 85, either you're a grandiose narcissist or look out Tiger. A score below 60 means you have some developmental opportunities as a golfer. A score below 35 means you're a basket case and should contact a professional immediately. On the golf course you're a danger to yourself and others. Next week... what's next

Freshman forward Wendell McKines led the Aggies to a 2-1 record last week. The Oakland, Calif. native averaged a team-high 15.3 points while he provided 8.3 rebounds per game. In his first career start, McKines had a team-high 17 points on 8-of-14 shooting with nine rebounds against UC Davis. A tribute to the supporting cast and Jennys...

For every Marvin or

Sylvias and Patsys

With this being the week of Thanksgiving, ole Pete would like to share his thanks with all of you Aggie fans and to give a tip of the 10 gallon to some folks whose names you don't know, but work awfully hard to make the Aggies the best they can be.

These folks don't want the spotlight although they deserve it. They are the ones who work late. work on weekends, listen to the problems of others all year long and keep on doing what they are charged with cause they believe in the

For every Marvin or Hal there are a dozen Sylvia's and Patsy's and Jenny's who do their best to make sure their bosses have their schedules up to date, their shirts are tucked in and their anniversaries remembered. Not to mention the letters, memos and other duties as assigned that occur through the course of every day.

Pete is thankful for the coaches and academic advisers who are so patient with the student-athletes. Like in all walks of life, there are some who take to learnin' naturally and others who need a little boost from time to time. There's always a Troy, Erica and James in Aggieland doing the work that ole Pete wouldn't have the patience to do. Bless them for it.

Those who help mend the players when they get hurt need a special portion of turkey this holiday too. Athletic trainers have to be completely flexible, because the only people they ever see are the ones who don't feel good. When Pete's rheumatism is acting up, I'm a little ornerier than Hal there are a dozen normal, so I can imagine a sprained wrist or broken bone or twisted ankle can cause a sour disposition, but the Karas and Jims and Dominics just grin and bear it 'cause they knew going in to the deal that was gonna be part

Pete is also thankful for those fans that are Aggies through the good and bad. They don't speak up as loudly as the others who only seem to have something to say when the Aggies have their back against the wall. Life has so many good things to it; I can't put them all into words.

Needless to say, Pete thinks about that every time I gather around the Aggies campfire, glad you could join me this holiday and I hope you're with your family, givin' thanks as well.

League teams struggling

JACK NIXON Iack's Corner

The WAC basketball race is under way, and the preseason jockeying for position has seen some unexpected turns in the first week of the season. Those picked to chase the Aggies have some upsets, which means two things to me. A tighter-than-expected conference race and probably only one bid to the NCAA tournament, but there is a long road stretching before us, before we have to get too concerned about it. It does set the stage for a super WAC tournament in mid-March for those who will be heading to the Pan Am

Specifically, Utah State was tabbed either first or second in the league depending on who you believe. The Navyclad Aggies at the time of this writing have dropped two in a row on the road to schools that normally aren't national powerhouse teams. The Blue steers stumbled at Weber State and at UC Irvine. Jaycee Carroll's supporting cast may not be as strong as initially projected. Without being on hand in Logan, it is hard to say with certainty, but there could be injuries or other elements that have entered into the mix, regardless, Stew Morrill isn't happy with that

Less happy, I am guessing is Steve Cleveland at Fresno

State. The Bulldogs lost the third game of the exempt tournament they host to San Diego State and were beaten on the road by Cal State Bakersfield. The Roadrunners of Bakersfield nipped the runnin' raisins by one, but that stuff isn't supposed to hap-pen to a first division WAC team. Fresno State also is dealing with the arrest of Rekalin Sims, a transfer from Kentucky, on a felony charge.

Nevada was supposed to be down a little and the Wolf Pack is one and one at this hour, losing to Central Florida in the Shadow of the Epcot Center to start its season. Aggie fans, who are awaiting the arrival of Herb Pope and Jahmar Young, had their feelings hurt by a good Ohio University team as well as the meeting with the Blue Devils at Duke.

You have to step back though and remind yourself that what should be sometimes isn't in athletic competition, and that the league race will be the thing that will fuel the real deal when it comes to showing what you have on the court. If there is more parity in the league than was originally thought, the fans are the real winners.

I won't say it is a down year for the WAC. I think it would be more accurate to say there are more teams than originally thought that are works in progress at this point. Maybe the parity of the college football year has spilled into the hoops arena

Oguh is now second on the NMSU career list for total blocks.

Senior Night an awesome experience

Aggies finish second in WAC tournament, await NCAA bid

JORDAN BOSTIC First Serve

Well, I am exhausted!

The last two weeks have been very emotional, to say the least. It all started when I began to think about Senior Night. Ever since I watched Senior Night during my freshman season, I have looked forward to it. Our program does an awesome job honoring our seniors, and the fans, players and coaches always make the seniors feel extremely loved and appreciated. Our Senior Night was

I woke up that morning feeling very weird. I was a mish-mash of emotions. On the one hand, I was excited for the seniors to have our special moment. On the other hand, it was overwhelming to think of it being our last time playing in the Pan Am as Aggies. I spoke with the other seniors about it, and they all said they woke up feeling strange as well.

The underclassmen went all out for us to commemorate Senior Night, and it was so awesome! They decorated the locker room with streamers, and there were homemade posters wishing all the seniors luck above our respective lockers. In our lockers were a bouquet a flowers, a special T-shirt, a personalized scrapbook and a bag of Hershey's Kisses. I even got a Marshalls gift card from Krystal, who knows that I practically live there! By the time the night ended, we all had three bouquets of flowers (my house has never been this fragrant!) and enough goodies that we needed extra sets of hands to help us to our cars after the match.

The T-shirts and the scrapbook have become a tradition for the seniors at NMSU. This year's T-shirts were crimson with hot pink lettering and said "Pretty in Crimson: Senior Night 2007." The back of the shirt listed each senior's name and jersey number. Even though they accidentally spelled my name wrong (it's Bostic, not Bastic!), I absolutely loved the shirt. However, the scrapbook was my most precious gift. In it, each one of the girls made a special page, recounting memories and funny stories from my time at NMSU. We seniors started to read them before the match, but we had to stop because we all started tearing up, and we needed to focus on the game.

Playing in the game on Senior Night was the most fun I have had all year. Coach let me play front row, and it was so, so, so fun for me! We were all relaxed and enjoying ourselves, and several fans commented to me after the game that it was great to see us smiling so much. The ceremony afterward was amazing, especially the surprise slideshow and the hilarious blooper reel. I had a hard time keeping my emotions in check, but I managed to get through my long list of thank yous.

Sometimes when you play a sport, you get caught up in thinking about yourselfhow much playing time you get, what coach yelled at you, how another player gets to do something you don't. Senior Night made me aware of how much bigger volleyball is at NMSU than just one individual. I realized how much people really do love to watch our team play and how much it means to them when we try our hardest and play well. Our fans are some of the kindest and most genuine people I have ever met, and it's humbling to hear them say that they appreciate you. To everyone that cheers us on, I want you to know that our whole team appreciates you more than we can ever express. What we have at NMSU is incredibly special, and as I move on to other things in my life, I will always cherish the relationship we had with our

After that emotional roller coaster, it was back to serious, serious business: the WAC Tournament. It was so wonderful to be hosting and playing in front of our fans. We had a fabulous banquet at the Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum that I think all the teams enjoyed. Helen of Troy, one of the sponsors, gave every girl an incredibly generous goodie bag that included a blow dryer, a hair straightener, a curling iron and other hair and skin products. It felt like Christmas!

As for the games, we did our job and made it to the final against Hawaii, just like we hoped. The championship match was another doozy (seems to be a trend when we face off with the Wahine). Each team made some spectacular plays and competed at a super-high level. At one point, I was literally shaking because my adrenaline was pumping so hard. Speaking of pumping, I managed to strain a muscle while executing a lunging fist pump after Kim Oguh made a huge kill. How funny is that? What can I say, I get pretty into it!

In the end, it didn't really come down to the spectacular plays. It came down to taking care of the easy ball, and Hawaii edged us out in that category. Congrats to Hawaii, and good luck in the NCAA Tourney. As for us, we will have to wait until Sunday to see our fate in the 64team tournament. This year is time for us to make NMSU history and go further into the tournament than ever before. With everyone's support, I know we can do it. Go Aggies!

NMSU lands six on all-WAC squad

Aggies finish second in WAC tournament, await NCAA bid

The Western Athletic Conference announced that six New Mexico State volleyball players earned All-WAC honors for their performances during the 2007 season. Senior Kim Oguh (El Paso, Hanks HS), juniors Amber Simpson (Quincy, Ill.), Krystal Torres (Las Cruces, Mayfield HS) and Lindsey Yon (San Antonio, Texas) were named to the first team, sophomore Krista Altermatt (El Dorado Hills, Calif.) was named to the second team, and freshman Bryja Rodgers (Iowa City, Iowa) was named to the All-freshman team. Head coach Mike Jordan wasn't too surprised by the selections made to the teams.

"I think they all earned it because they've worked hard all year," Jordan said. "Their skill level has improved a great deal in the last year."

You led the way for the Aggies in kills just one shy of 400, followed closely by Altermatt and Oguh, who added 326 and 324 respectively. You finished the regular season sixth in the WAC in kills, while Simpson was second in the conference in hitting percentage with a .341 percentage,

Aggie Trivia

Answer: Three. The Aggies tallied 100 points in the win over LeMoyne-Owen, Nov. 18. Last season, NMSU had two consecutive games when the Aggies scored 100-points or more, which was a feat that previously hadn't occurred since the 2000-01 season. while Oguh was fourth in the same category, also hitting above .300. This was Yon's first time selected for first team All-WAC, while Oguh and Simpson were selected to the team for the second consecutive season. Simpson was also a second team selection in 2005.

"Oguh and Simpson have been two of the better middles in the conference the last couple of years so it really doesn't surprise me that they got the honors again,' Jordan said. "Yon is a great player, and her confidence has really improved over the season, especially with having to deal with her arm injury. I am proud of her."

Rodgers was the only freshman to be selected to the All-freshman team, while sharing the setting duties with teammate junior Alyssa Gintant (Libertyville, Ill.). Rodgers is second on the team in assists with 547 on the year, as she averaged 6.08

"Our middles have really brought the setters along, and Brynja has improved a lot this season," Jordan said. "I think she kind of surprised some people because not many expected her to see much court

Seven different schools were represented on the first team overall and eight overall. Hawaii, the first seed in the WAC Tournament, had three players on the first team and second seeded NMSU had four. Nevada placed two on the first team, while Idaho, San Jose State and Utah State all had one player on the first team. Hawaii's Jaime Houston was named Player of the Year, and Utah State's head coach Grayson Dubose was named Coach of the Year.

A home with symmetry and curves

Builder experiments with round rooms

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

In the Pueblos at Alameda Ranch builder Michael and Judy Floyd are creating a uniformed block of unique homes. Starting with 5184 San Carlos, they are building homes with elegance and efficiency combined with great views of the Organ Mountains.

Michael said that he likes the lot at 5184 San Carlos because he was able to purchase all of the surrounding lots and establish his "own neighborhood so to speak." Residents will have the advantage of a uniformed-looking neighborhood with a common level of quality.

We don't call these patio homes, we call these homes. Almost all of the other builders around here call them patio homes, and part of the reason is that we are the only builder in the whole Pueblos at Alameda that got our lot specially designed for non-zeroed outlines," he said. "We can set out houses anywhere on the lot, and we have no set backs. It's an advantage for us because we can put windows all around and bedrooms any way we want, and we have 16 lots that we can do this with. It helps us in our design."

The home at 5184 San Carlos has all of these advantages, along with a unique floor plan that includes large, round rooms and round corridors.

"I am designing a house for myself right now that is almost all round, so I designed this house as an experiment to see how it fits and how it looks, and I like it," he

While the idea of a round living room might stump some - Michael said that the biggest challenge was proving that there was furniture that would fit. His wife Judy, who does the interior design for their homes, has proven that the right kind of furniture makes for a radiant, round living room.

"The nice thing about it is that you don't have square corners to line up the furniture. It creates more seating and living areas within the room," Judy said. "We found a sofa that lends itself very well to the round room.

Not just builders, the Floyds are also dealers of Custom Cupboards, which are the cabinets found at 5184 San Carlos and the majority of their homes.

"We were the largest buyer, so they said we should be the dealer, so we did. We used them exclusively back years and years ago. They have great variety, and they are custom built. If you want a special size they make it for you," Michael said.

These cabinets are found in the home's stylish kitchen, which also includes a pot filler and an island with granite countertops and bar seating.

"We like the Southwest style and that's what sells, but we like to add a contemporary touch to it rather than rough and real rustic," Michael said.

All of the bedrooms have their own bathroom, which Michael said he does for those whose children are already grown and therefore only intend on having guests. This way, he said, guests don't feel like they have to walk down the hall and share a bathroom, which allows for more privacy.

The master bathroom has a jetted tub, a large walk-in shower and his-and-her closets.

Michael said that the hardest part of building the house was the framing for the round rooms and corridor.

"A lot of the walls are double framing, so we had to explain to the carpenters what we wanted and the perfect radius, everything has to be very symmetrical," he said. "There is not another house around here that has a round living room. It is a layout where we departed from the normal effects."

The modern Christmas mantel

A history of the Christmas wreath

The Christmas season is here, and once again decorations will be retrieved from stored boxes and we will remember all of the ideas we had for last year that we plan to do again this year. Time has a way of sneaking up, or perhaps time just goes faster as we get older. Still, every year when decorating for Christmas it is interesting to explore again the traditions and history of the decor we use each year.

The holiday Christmas wreath dates back to the ancient Greeks and Romans as they used evergreen leaves and garlands to make headdresses that were awarded as prizes to Olympic athletes, military heroes and kings. The traditions of evergreen wreaths symbolized the promise of new or everlasting life.

The custom of using wreaths as holiday decorations arrived in the American colonies in the 18th-century through German and Swedish settlers. In the late 19th century, thanks to Charles Dickens and other Victorian champions of Christmas, holiday wreaths conveyed festive good wishes on the front doors of homes across the country. By the early 1960s, new materials such as silk and vinyl opened the door to more life-like Christmas decorations, making the choice of colors and textures limitless.

The traditional Christmas wreaths in Christianity are a symbol of faith. Since Christmas wreaths are a circle with no beginning or end, they symbolize God's eternal existence and mercy during the Christmas season. When the Christmas wreaths are decorated with evergreen leaves and branches they symbolize everlasting life and God's everlasting love.

Their green color is a representation of hope and new life.

Decorating with wreaths for the holidays can be simple and fun. Christmas wreaths can adorn any part of your home, inside or out. It is common to find a number of wreaths on doors, over mantels or hung in windows. The wreath is usually made of evergreens, most often pine branches or holly. They can be real or artificial and decorated with a variety of items including pine cones, holly ber-ries, fruits and flowers or just about anything you can imagine.

Evergreen plants
– such as holly, ivy and pine – which stay green all year, have long been used to create holiday wreaths. Such greens as holly, ivy and mistletoe have special meaning since they not only stay green, but bear fruit during the harsh winter months.

If your Christmas decorations need an over-haul or there's an interest in creating a new wreath, here are some easy decorating tips. Traditionally Christmas wreaths are popular on front doors. The modern Christmas mantel, however, is now adorned with the Christmas wreath above it and garland sweeping across the front of the fireplace, which can be simple vet dramatic.

The Christmas

wreath, a historic

holiday decoration,

can be used to adorn almost any part of the home and is easily constructed.

To create a wreath that decks the mantel with natural beauty, buy a premade green wreath at a hobby or home improvement center. The wreath comes in different sizes with the greenery attached to a round wire base. I suggest buying an oversized wreath for over the mantel.

Next, buy a pre-made garland with a variety of Christmas decorations already attached. The garlands are usually six feet long. Decorative garlands come with poinsettia flowers, roses, fruit, pine cones and are colorful and ready to use. Intertwine the decorative garland into the wreath and attach the garland with wire. Usually, one pre-made decorative garland is good for one wreath. If you like bows you can add one or leave it simple.

The modern Christmas

mantel includes the draping of decorative garland on the front of the mantel, instead of placing the garland on top of the mantel. The mantel-draping garland should be the same decorative garland used in the wreath.

MARIANN NOVACK Design Diva

In creating the draping decora-tive garland, intertwine a plain evergreen garland with the decorative garland to give it fullness. The evergreen and decorative garlands are twisted together and can be held together by wire. The evergreen garland comes in six-foot lengths. One garland is too skimpy, but when two garlands, one evergreen and one decorative garland, are twisted together it become full. It will take two garland lengths to drape the fireplace. Bows or tassles can be added at the ends and middle of the garland for color. This same garland will also look nice on a staircase or around front doors. Let the holidays begin!

ESFI warns of holiday decorating hazards

Practice safety during the winter season

During the holidays, many people put themselves at increased risk of fire and electrocution. The Electrical Safety Foundation International (ESFI) urges consumers to follow these important safety tips when decorating for the season. Each year holiday decorations and

Each year holiday decorations and Christmas trees account for almost 2,000 fires and cause more than $41 million in property damage.

The simple truth: many of these fires could be prevented. According to research almost a quarter of all Christmas tree fires are started because the tree was placed too close to a heat source. According to a recent ESFI study more than 20 percent of Americans do not take the simple step of turning off lighted decorations before going to bed.

ESFI encourages everyone to be safe by following these important safety tips when decorating:

- Before you begin, read and follow the manufacturer's instructions concerning installation and maintenance of all electrical decorations.
- Inspect each decoration before plugging into an outlet.

- Prevent shock by plugging outdoor decorations into circuits protected by ground fault circuit interrupters (GFCIs).
- Avoid plugging in too many holiday lights and other decorations into a single outlet. Overloaded outlets can overheat and cause a fire.
- Be careful not to mount or hang light strands in any way that might damage the cord's insulation.
- Use only lights and electrical decorations that have been certified by a recognized independent testing laboratory such as UL, CSA or ETL.
- Before using electrical products outdoors, make sure the product is approved and marked "for outdoor use."
- Send warranty and product registration forms to manufacturers. That way, they can notify consumers promptly in case of a recall or safety concerns.

 Turn lights and other decorations off when leaving or going to bed.

ESFI reminds everyone that electricity is a powerful tool. It can also be a lethal hazard. Better safety standards have reduced electrical hazards that cause deaths, injuries and property damage. But good safety habits are still the best prevention against electrical hazards.

For more holiday electrical safety information, please visit ESFI at: www. holidaysafety.org.

Enjoy turkey even after Thanksgiving Around-the-home item:

Avoid boring repetition with these creative uses

BY NATISHA HALES
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Even with at least 20 guests who stopped by for Thanksgiving dinner, chances are there are still heaps of turkey meat left on the serving platter. Before resigning to the fact that the family must have plain turkey sandwiches for the next week, there are also some creative ways to enjoy the leftover turkey.

Before the creativity begins, however, it's important to make sure the turkey is stored properly to prevent food-

To ensure turkey meat will stay fresh and to prevent the growth of harmful bacteria, turkey should be refrigerated or frozen within an hour of serving. If the turkey is stuffed and left out for longer than an hour, the stuffing could become contaminated by the bacteria, and it is best to throw the stuffing away. If the stuffing is still good, remove it from the bird and store separately.

Fresh turkey can be stored in the coldest part of the refrigerator for no longer than two days, and turkey can be frozen for up to two months. If freezing the turkey meat, it is a good idea to slice, cube or shred the meat and freeze it in separate containers of one-cup servings. That way it will be easy to use for future recipes.

Once the turkey is stored safely, a family can enjoy the meat for the next couple months in a variety of ways, such as the following.

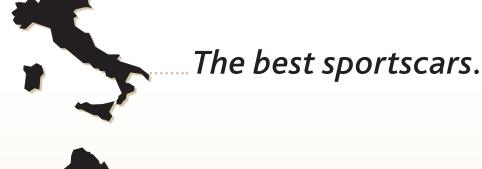

Turkey Lettovers

- 1. Make a casserole or turkey pot pie. If the thought of having leftover turkey for a week is less than appetizing, use the leftover meat, stuffing, gravy and vegetables and bake a casserole. The family is sure to enjoy the meal almost as much as they did Thanksgiving
- 2. Make a soup. Boil the turkey carcass until the remaining meat has fallen off the bones. Wrap the meat in cheesecloth, and once the cloth has cooled, remove any remaining bones from the meat. Combine the meat, broth and any leftover vegetables from the meal to complete
- 3. Make an open-faced turkey sandwich. Instead of using cold turkey meat and mayonnaise stuffed between two slices of bread, heat the turkey, place over a slice of bread with leftover stuffing and drizzle with gravy. Serve with leftover sides for a complete meal.

4. Have turkey pitas. Dice leftover turkey meat, season with cumin and salsa, and place in pocket bread. Top the pita with lettuce and cheese and serve.

5. Give the leftover meat to Fido. If interested in sharing the Thanksgiving meal with your furry pet, there are several guidelines to follow. Do not feed the skin to a dog because they are not able to digest it. Do not give any bones to a dog, as turkey bones are small and fracture easily, which may cause a dog to choke, and if swallowed, bone fragments can puncture internal organs.

6. Give leftovers to the homeless. Probably the most efficient way to get rid of turkey leftovers – as well as all the Thanksgiving sides - is to make a plate for someone in need.

Big family sets out on big business

De La Paz construction specializes in 'make readies'

By BETHANY CONWAY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

After growing up in the building business working with his father and uncle in El Paso, D.J. De La Paz took his family's company, De La Paz Construction, to a new level in Las Cruces.

"Here in Cruces I have worked in construction for quite a while. I got my own license a couple of years ago, and I was a framer by trade, so when I first got my license that is what we did," De La Paz said.

After downsizing this year from 18 employees to six, De La Paz says that business has slowed down, but he is still keeping busy. As of today, the construction company has built up a good reputation with the cities real estate companies and mainly does what De La Paz calls

"make readies."

"The last couple of years have been interesting. We had to kindof step back and take a look at the market, because it is very soft right now, a whole lot of houses are sitting empty. So we went from working with the bigger builders to become more of a one-stop shop remodeling type contractor," he said. "What our main thrust is now is we are the company that the Realtors call when they get ready to list a house. Our specialty is what we call make readies."

He said that when real estate companies are getting ready to list a house they call De La Paz Construction and tell them what needs to be done to raise the curb appeal of a home, or perhaps what things need to be done that are consistent with what is sell-

But De La Paz said that they will do just about any renovation, including garage conversions and additions. Individuals coming to New Mexico to retire don't necessarily find what they are looking for in a city's new homes, he said, but rather they find an older home with character that just need some minor renovations.

That's where we come in.

That is our comfort zone. They want to get value and quality and they give us the vision and its our job the accomplish that vision," he said. "The last couple of years we have done a lot of roofing. We do stucco, we paint, we patch drywall, we texture, we which he competes, he said that it is quality that sets the myriad of contracting companies apart.

"It's a very competitive market, and there are a lot of things that I wish were a little different," he said. "There is a lot of folks out there that are not licensed, they're not bonded, they're not insured and they don't have workman's comp. They don't have a lot of the overhead that we have, so that is one of the challenges.'

While he does build houses from the ground up and can do both commercial and residential building, he said he enjoys remodeling because of its pace and flexibility.

The several houses that they do build, for the most part, are pre-sold to family and friends.

"I feel comfortable being a mom and pop. You see these other big companies and to them the money is what matters," he said. "To me if you don't take pride in what you're doing, if you're all about streamlining the process and pumping out as many houses as you can, there's going to be some corners cut, there is not going to be as much attention to the detail and the quality, and people don't deserve that.'

De La Paz's wife Rose is the president of the company and does all of the accounting and paperwork. He said that it is a good balance because she is better with the administrative side of the job, which he said is a very important part of their business.

The couple has their hands full outside of the company as well, with seven children from ages 23 to 8, along with one 4year-old grandson and a granddaughter on the way.

"Family is a big thing for us," he said. "Spending time with family is important."

De La Paz says all of the children take pride in the family's business, and he is hopeful that the ones that are involved will eventually take it over.

"Matt works with me, Alix works with me, and the little guy (Cody), he loves to work," he said. He added that he is hoping to expand and progress in his business for the future of his family.

Create gravy goodness

By BETHANY CONWAY

While fat gives lots of flavor to food, it is not always desirable to have in one's diet. Good gravy should have only enough fat to allow flour to thicken the liquid – much more and it becomes greasy. In order to deal with the fat content in gravy, there is a tool that will help to reduce, remove or clean up fat before serving that hearty gravy goodness. While it is possible to remove fat from stock by spooning it off, it is much easier to use a gravy or fat

What is it?

A fat or gravy separator is a tool constructed of heatresistant plastic with a stopper that keeps fat out of the spout, while a shield prevents gravy from spilling, and a strainer catches unwanted bits. How does it work?

Fat separators work by separating gravy and fat. It's like a measuring cup, but the spout comes from the bottom so the fat stays behind as the liquid is poured. After allow-

Have a safe and worry-free holiday season

Tips for welcoming guests with special needs

There's nothing quite like a house filled with family at the holidays. But if the family includes a diverse mix of guests – such as elderly parents, expecting mothers, or even a relative with an injury – there might be concerns about how to make them feel at home.

Worries can be put aside because it is easier than most people think to make a home accessible to the whole family, thanks to a few simple fixes.

The first important tip to keep in mind is not to go over the top and remodel the entire home to make it accessible to holiday guests. Concentrate instead on the four areas they will be frequenting most: entryway, hallways, bathroom and dining room.

Before welcoming guests into the home, make sure they can easily enter. If it will be dark when guests arrive, be sure to illuminate the pathway or sidewalk leading to the front door. Solar lighting and/or pathway lighting is easy to install and provides consistent lighting.

The pathway to the home should not only be well lit, but easy to navigate. Prune shrubs and trees and remove any debris to create a clear pathway for any guests in a wheelchair or using a walker or cane. If inclement weather is expected, be sure to shovel and heavily salt the area to prevent slips or falls.

Hallways

Once inside, it is important to continue to make guests feel at home. And the best way to do that is to make the hallways to critical areas (such as the kitchen, bathroom and dining room) easily accessible.

For guests in wheelchairs or with a walker, make sure the pathway is 32 inches wide. Clear any electrical cords and clutter from the area so it is easy to navigate. In addition, area rugs should be moved (as they can often become slippery) or secured to the floor with non-skid

Bathroom

One of the most frequently used and most dangerous rooms is the bathroom – so be sure to give it the attention it deserves. Start with the toilet. Whether guests are pregnant, in a wheelchair, or have knee and back trouble, the height of a toilet seat is important. An elevated toilet seat decreases the amount of stress put on the legs, knees and back. Plus, an ADA-compliant seat easily attaches to the bowl (and is easily removable when guests leave) and features a contoured design so it blends with your existing bath decor.

Designer handgrips placed on the wall next to the toilet will be of great assistance as well. New styles with attractive finishes not only enhance the look of the bath, but also provide additional safety and support. Plus they are easy to install before guests arrive.

In addition to these safety items, ensure throw rugs are slip-resistant and keep necessary items, such as soap dispensers and hand towels, close to the edge of the countertop making it easier for guests to reach them from a seated or standing position.

Dining Room

Finally, since the holidays often revolve around sharing a special meal together, focus the majority of efforts on the dining room. Consider the number of guests that are expected around the dining table and adjust the room to meet any special accommodations. Be sure to create enough space behind the table and at each place setting for pregnant guests or those with special needs.

It is important to prepare bathrooms in the home for holiday guests that are elderly, handicapped or pregnant.

An often-overlooked element of the dining room is lighting. While candlelight can set the mood, it can also prohibit guests with poor eyesight from seeing their plates or other guests. It is ok to keep the candles burning; however use a secondary light source, such as a chandelier on a dimmed setting to provide additional lighting

With the holidays just around the corner, get ready for a season filled with love and laughter. And by following these simple tips, one can rest assured that the home will be the heart of it all.

Bath safety product line and may other safety décor items are available nationwide at select retailers or at select home health and medical suppliers.

How to fit a hot breakfast into your weekday routine

Some simple suggestions for the morning meal

As the crisp fall mornings give way to the dim and frosty daybreaks of winter, cravings of comfort food for breakfast begin before braving the chilly commute to work or school. Unfortunately, many busy families fall prey to the myth that a hot breakfast is a luxury that can only be indulged on a leisurely weekend morning. But just because there is not much extra time before heading out the door doesn't mean that a hot meal is beyond

There are all kinds of quick and easy options for working a warm breakfast into your morning routine. No matter how crunched for time, consider meal options like quiche and breakfast casseroles. They both allow for the majority of the prep work to be done the night before and can be cooked virtually hands-free in the morning while going about the daily routine.

Don't let the thought of leftovers discourage the pos sibility of making a larger breakfast dish such as a quiche or strata. According to the American Egg Board, if refrigerated and stored properly, leftovers containing cooked egg can be reheated and enjoyed within two to three days. Be sure to divide large amounts of leftovers into small, shallow containers promptly after serving them and refrigerate them immediately so that they will cool quickly. For an additional measure of safety, thoroughly reheat all leftovers to 165 degrees F before serving.

Chefs suggests that tackling the morning time-crunch is as simple as looking for ways to tweak traditional hot breakfast favorites that will help to enjoy the same great tastes on a tight schedule. Think about the classic plate of eggs, bacon and toast: if eggs are scrambled with cheese while toasting two pieces of bread then it is possible to have a delicious, portable sandwich version of the same meal in five minutes

Consider some of these additional options for a warm, satisfying breakfast when on-the-go:

Just because it's quick doesn't mean it can't be decadent. Open a package of refrigerated crescent rolls; separate the triangles and brush with melted butter. Add in some turkey and Cheddar cheese slices, jam or even chocolate chips for delicious breakfast croissants

- Don't forget about the classic bowl of instant oatmeal when looking for easy, warm breakfast options. Spice up this old favorite with dried fruit or crushed nuts. For those really short on time: drizzle very hot tap water over instant oatmeal for a warm and soothing breakfast in five seconds.
- For those savory breakfast cravings, try melting shredded Cheddar cheese with bacon over an English
- muffin using the toaster oven or even the microwave. For a quick crowd pleaser, make a few extra pancakes with a weekend batch, and refrigerate in plastic bags. In the morning, heat up the pancakes and microwave with frozen sausage links. Wrap each link in a pancake for a hearty breakfast that can be eaten in the car or on the way to the bus stop.

For another great way to start the day with a warm meal when short on time, try breakfast wraps. This easy favorite is sure to appeal to the "grab-it-and-go" mentality of the morning routine.

Cheddar Bacon Breakfast Wraps

- 1 tablespoon butter or olive oil 3/4 cup chopped red or green bell pepper 1/4 cup thinly sliced green onions
- 4 large eggs
- 4 large egg whites
- /4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1 1/4 cups (5 ounces.) shredded Sharp with bacon (7- to 8-inch) flour tortillas or
- flavored wraps, warmed

Melt butter in a large nonstick skillet over mediumhigh heat. Add bell pepper; cook and stir four minutes, stirring frequently. Add green onions; cook one minute.

Beat together eggs, egg whites, salt and pepper. Add to skillet; cook and stir until eggs are almost set. Stir in cheese until melted and eggs are set then remove from heat. Spoon into tortillas and roll up

Substitution: Six whole eggs may be used in place of the combination of four large eggs and four large egg

Variation tip: For a Southwestern flavor, substitute chopped cilantro for the green onions and spoon one tablespoon salsa over each tortilla before filling with egg mixture.

To Make Ahead: Cool immediately, wrap in plastic wrap and refrigerate for up to two days. Discard plastic wrap and place one Cheddar bacon breakfast wrap on a microwave-safe plate, cover with a sheet of waxed paper and heat in the microwave at 50 percent power, 45 to 60 seconds or until heated through.

Serves four.

Coming up: Cyber Monday!

'Hot' bargains also available on the Internet

Happy Black Friday! The day after Thanksgiving is historically known in the United States as "Black Friday." Black Friday is typically the busiest retail-shopping day of the year according to blackfriday.com. Many retail stores opened before dawn on Black Friday offering huge discounts on items. The origin of Black Friday dates back to the early 1970s and refers to "when retailers went from being unprofitable, or 'in the red', to being profitable, or 'in the black', at a time when accounting records were kept by hand and red indicated loss and black profit.

For those of us who prefer to stay clear of traffic jams and long lines there's "Cyber Monday" a term that originated in 2005. Cyber Monday refers to the Monday immediately following Black Friday, which unofficially marks the beginning of the holiday online shopping season. I suggest beginning your shopping spree at www. deciopasta.com for pod-hot pasta gift baskets and gift boxes. Scott Morrison, owner of DeCio Pasta in Tempe, Ariz., offers more than 20 varieties of pasta flavors. My favorite is habanero.
