City center funding OK'd

Convention center to cost $27 million

By TODD G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces City Council agreed Monday, Sept. 17, to take out a $27.36 million loan to build a convention center, which will be sited on the New Mexico State University campus.

The 25-year loan from the New Mexico Finance Authority will be paid off through a combination of lodger's tax, a $2.50 per room surcharge and through revenues from the center.

The council also approved awarding $2.17 million to H.N.T.B. of Los Angeles to design and plan the convention and civic center. The total architectural award is $2.54 million with gross receipt taxes and a contingency fund added.

Where the debate was once if the city could support a convention center, most of Monday's discussion was on how much environmental savings could be built into the center.

City staff architect Tomas Mendez told the council that, at the very least, the center should get an entry-level Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) green building rating certification by the U.S. Green Building Council.

LEED-certified buildings aim to use few chemicals, reduce waste, conserve energy and water and don't release greenhouse gases. Buildings get varying levels of LEED, with very few buildings earning the top platinum rating, Mendez said.

BLM to shut down disputed rock pit

Agency to pursue reclamation of Robledo Mountain quarry

By $Todd\ G.\ Dickson$ The Las Cruces Bulletin

Opponents to expansion of a rock quarry in the Robledos scored a victory last week when the state Bureau of Land Management decided to shut it down and begin looking at ways to restore the area, which grew into a visible scar on the mountain range.

More than two years ago, a group of residents began organizing in opposition to a proposal before the Bureau of Land Management to allow blasting the quarry, called Community Pit 1.

In the 1960s, the quarry had actually operated as a community pit where anyone could load up a truck bed with the distinctive yellow stone. About that time, enterprising local contractors began using the stone for rock wall construction.

As the city grew, so did operations at the pit and heavy equipment began to be used to extract the rock, said Tim Sanders, currently the district assistant manager with the BLM Las Cruces District Office. In the early 1990s, the BLM restricted rock extraction to four operators, he said. At the height of production, the pit produced about 30,000 tons of rock a year.

Over the years, however, numerous homes were built neighboring the entrance to the rock pit off Shalem Colony Trail. Also, about 20 years ago a significant discovery of pre-dinosaur tracks from 270 million years ago was made just north of the pit.

Aloha, Wahine!

Nationally ranked Hawaii back in Las Cruces Saturday to avenge last year's loss to Aggies

By DAVID E. McCOLLUM
The Las Cruces Bulletin

I have to admit that I have no earthly idea what a "Wahine" is. What I do know is that Wahine is the name given to the Hawaii women's volleyball team. They always have a talented group of young athletes who expect to win every match they play. Last year they traveled to Las Cruces with a national ranking and were upset in five games by our Aggies in front of a raucous home crowd that had squeezed into the sold-out gym at Las Cruces High School. (Most of last year's Aggie volleyball matches at home were at LCHS because of the extensive renovations being made to the Pan American Center.)

This year, the green-clad Wahine return to Aggieland as the 13th ranked team in the country. Our own Aggies are also nationally-ranked at 25th after opening the season with 11 wins and only two losses. Those two losses were to experienced, nationally ranked teams, #7 Texas and the almost unstoppable #1 Nebraska, last year's NCAA champion.

Hawaii is expected to arrive in Las Cruces with an 8-3 overall record. Their three losses came against Michigan, Oregon State and UCLA. Hawaii and NMSU share a common opponent, the University of Louisville whom the Aggies beat in an incredibly exciting five-game match in the Nebraska tournament. Hawaii defeated Louisville in four games on Hawaii's home court in the Wahine Classic tournament semi-finals.

Aggie Coach Mike Jordan expects a huge, partisan crowd Saturday night in the Pan Am Center. Last time the Wahine played the Aggies in the Pan Am, more than 7,000 local fans showed up on a Sunday afternoon to cheer for the Aggies. There are rumors that an NMSU pep band is being assembled to add to the frenetic environment.

In 10 years, Jordan has built a so-so Aggie volleyball program that drew only a couple hundred fans per game, into a well-respected nationally-recognized program. An example of Jordan's influence came unexpectedly a couple of weeks ago when Jaki and I were in Albuquerque to attend the Aggie-Lobo football game. We stayed at the Nativo Lodge, the same hotel chosen by the Gonzaga volleyball team. (They were in Albuquerque to play in the Lobo invitational tournament.) Jaki and I had the opportunity to visit with several of the Gonzaga players who noticed our crimson Aggie shirts which prompted them to tell us that they all knew Mike Jordan and how well the NMSU volleyball program has developed.

Mike's Aggies certainly now have their fair share of outstanding athletes. In this week's Bulletin, sports editor John Keith has featured one of the talented newcomers, Lindsey Yon who transferred from that other Aggieland, Texas A&M. (See John's story on page one of sports.) Lindsey could easily be mistaken for a New York model. If you met her on the street you would have no idea that this demure blonde from Texas could transform into a ferocious power-hitter who has already been recognized as one of the top players in the country.

However, Lindsey is just one of several Aggie volleyballers who can dominate a game. We encourage you to come out and join us at Saturday night's game. It will start at 7 p.m. Because of the anticipated large crowd, we suggest you plan to arrive early. The seating is open, which means all seats are "first come, first served." Even if you have never attended a volleyball game, this will be a good time to have your first experience. The tailgating starts at 5 p.m. on the north and east sides of the Pan American Center.

We hope to see you there. Go Aggies!

Life Saver event planned for this fall

The Humane Society of Southern New Mexico (HSSNM), in partnership with the Doña Ana County Humane Society's (DACHS) animal shelter, is in the process of scheduling the first Life Savers event for late October or early November.

Life Savers is a project that will invite business sponsorships of innovative off-site adoptions for shelter and rescue animals.

As our public presentations in August suggested, it is one of our agency goals to insure that shelters are the preferred source of companion animals in order to increase adoptions and save lives while bringing altered, vaccinated, chipped and licensed animals into the community.

Our public presentations also outlined the need to develop coalitions where allied organizations can work together to bring the best practices forward. In this way, the burden of placing more pets into homes is shared and the problem benefits from a greater number of individuals and entities who donate skills, knowledge, energy and an active voice to the community. Life Savers will ask the business community to step forward with HSSNM and the DACHS shelter to sponsor and bring a lifesaving event, a community-based solution to a community-wide problem.

Several businesses are already on board, as is City Manager Terrence Moore, who has promised a city commitment. Each business sponsor is asked to carry out the responsibilities and tasks necessary to plan an exciting event, to provide the media with event information and to assume as much labor hours in executing the event as possible in order to minimize burdens to the Doña Ana shelter. HSSNM is committed to helping businesses plan the event with the input and approval of the shelter director, Mr. Alan Davis.

Another example of Life Saver support in assisting the shelter is that each business will be required to send their staff to pre-event adoption counseling training. The curriculum is under development by skilled individuals who will be training the staff of the participating business. These trained counselors will help guide people toward choosing pets that best fit their lifestyles and increasing placements in forever homes.

This solution-oriented project will reduce time demands on shelter staff at each Life Saver event. The newly trained adoption counselors will be encouraged by HSSNM to sign up as volunteers with DACHS in order to assist adopters visiting the shelter in search of their new four-footed family member.

We will be informing Life Savers businesses about the services that each provide and will encourage them to call each other directly in planning their event. These sponsors have already indicated that the resources and adoptable animals you bring to the pet overpopulation problem will be welcome at their events. Each organization represents an essential set of skills, staff, volunteers and networks, all of which are vital in addressing our counties need for teamwork which is critically needed to help turn around our growing pet overpopulation problem.

Thank you for your time today and all that you as individuals and organizations accomplish for the animals.

'Stealth census' may mean big payoff for state of New Mexico

Attempt to adjust count causes ruckus

Inside

By Jay Miller

Ten years ago, the 2000 census had been a major news topic already for more than two years. This time around, most of us haven't given it a thought. But many Americans are about to be giving the census much more attention.

For the past two years, the Census Bureau has been sending 1 in 40 Americans a 67question monthly survey. Few people are complaining so there has been little publicity. Unofficially, it is being called a stealth census. The first results of those surveys are about to be released, so we may be hearing more about the stealth census soon. The census has been a big headache for the past 20 years or so. The problem is undercounting. Ever since the first census in 1790, national leaders have known there are people out there who aren't getting counted. And that's a big deal to members of Congress and to every state and local official in the nation. You see, Congress reapportions itself after every census. The members of the House of Representatives remain at a constant 435, divided proportionally by state.

And therein comes the rub. Every time a census is taken, some states gain representatives in Congress - and other states lose. All those states close to either gaining or losing a member of Congress want to make darn sure the count is as close to fair and accurate as it can be.

It is important to a growing state like New Mexico because having an additional member of Congress means more representation, plus one more person to bring home goodies from Uncle Sam.

A fair and accurate census count also is important to municipalities and counties because a lot of federal money is distributed on the basis of population.

Countless solutions have been tried to achieve a more complete count. The 1980 census hired thousands of additional workers to scour street corners and allevs to count the homeless. People who live in the country were given street addresses to make them easier to pinpoint.

But there were still too many uncounted. So in 1990, computers were brought to the rescue. Washington wizards somehow figured out a way to estimate how many people they miss. That formula was then applied to the actual count from the census takers and resulted in something called the statistical

It shouldn't take much imagination to picture the controversy that resulted. Lawsuits, brought by the losers disadvantaged by the statistical count, argued that the Constitution doesn't allow computerized corrections.

The 2000 census managed to get many problems ironed out. So now the census bureau is busying itself with providing more information. Those of you who have received the "long" census form in the past realize that no longer is the government just counting people. It is putting us into innumerable target federal money to those in need of additional governmental services, such as minorities, the poor, children and the elderly.

At first those categories were designed to

Those categories are important to a state like New Mexico because we have more people in needy categories than any other state. Thus our state receives the most dollars back per dollar we pay in federal taxes. And since such categories are the most undercounted, New Mexico has the biggest stake in as complete a count as possible.

Recently the government has been adding many more categories into which it pigeonholes us. First, new categories were added to help local governments decide where to put schools, roads, stores, hospitals and restaurants. Then additional categories were designed to describe local populations to those who wanted to start a business.

So now, we no longer will have a 53-question "long" form, it will be an even longer American Community Survey, designed to learn even more about us.

Not everyone is happy with all the prying. Some will consider it an invasion of privacy. The Census Bureau says America is changing and we need a yearly survey to keep with

Garlic mania

As we pulled off of California Highway 101 into Gilroy, I was assailed by the pungent odor of garlic. When I rolled down the window my eyes began to water and my nose tingled. A blind man driving down the road wouldn't need a sign to tell him he had arrived at the Annual Garlic Festival!

If there were any secular or religious worshipers of garlic, Gilroy would serve as their Mecca. Yet it is not alone in its oleic appeal. I flew into Wenatchee, Wash. one summer. As we deboarded the airplane, the pleasant aroma of the apple orchards filled the air. I began to salivate. Another time I saw a bumper sticker on a fertilizer salesman's truck in the agriculturally rich San Joaquin Valley near Bakersfield. It read, "I 'heart' Ammo-To each his own.

Certain smells can bring back vivid memories. I spent a lot of my working life in the feedlots. When I drive through towns like Hereford, Texas or Dodge City, Kan., my mind fills with nostril images of front-end loaders cleaning pens, moldy hay, fer-menting grain, Terramycin on my fingers, rumen contents and feedyard dust. An olfactory bouquet that still gives me a warm feeling. On the other hand, when I smell new mown hay or a farmer out cutting his five-acre lawn, I roll up the window and grab my allergy pills!

We spent a day at the garlic festival and ate or tasted a panoply of garlic concoctions; sausage, chicken, bread, pork, prawns, artichokes, rattlesnake, ice cream, squid, potatoes, corn on the cob, candy, oysters, honey, caulking, house paint, deodorant, fly spray, time-release suppositories and mouthwash.

It has qualities that are touted, particularly as being "good for the heart," and although that is disputed, it is certainly a good excuse should the "patient" be shunned by friends and family for having halitosis strong enough to drive a hyena off a bucket of baboon livers.

"Whoops, sorry darlin'. I chew this clove of garlic to prevent artistic fibrillation. I think your bangs will grow back!"

Next morning as we were leaving Gilroy we remarked that we could no longer smell that deep, penetrating garlic odor. Then an oncoming vehicle swerved wildly and I saw the driver grabbing at

Maybe, we observed, we had become used to it. Moral: One man's hog farm is another man's garlic shampoo.

Likes El Paso stations

I disagree with your thoughts about the Albuquerque TV channels and news (Opinion, Sept. 7).

I feel we are much more regionally tied to El Paso than Albuquerque and what affects El Paso and surrounding areas often affects us. The only advantage might be getting more information on state government activities from Santa Fe. I doubt we would get better local coverage from the Albuquerque news outlets. Admittedly, it is not the best from El Paso.

If I remember correctly, the local independent TV channel started out as KSNM and was located in the First National Bank tower. The owner was forced to sell due to an FCC ruling on multimedia competition in the same market area as he also had the FM radio station with the same call letters. Apparently, the two media could not financially operate independently, and he sold them both. The new owner moved the transmitter to Chaparral, trying to pick up more of the El Paso audience and advertisers, and changed the call letters to KZIA.

Wilderness sentiment

Although we embrace public participation as part of the democratic ideals, sometimes even that system can get muffled by special interest groups. There has been a lot of heartfelt commitment for the protection of the Organ Mountains and other special natural areas as wilderness. We need to use that as our indicator of

Letters to the Editor where the real public sentiment lies.

At the Nov. 4 public meeting, more than 400 wilderness supporters spoke up about the need to protect some of our most special wild places for our children and grandchildren. Twenty-three organizations, including six local hunting and sportsmen organizations, agreed to compromise wilderness boundaries. More than 180 businesses announced their support for wilderness. These and many other moments show how important this plan is to our community's future.

There have been many individuals who have sincerely participated in a community coalition that has worked for more than a year to bridge differences and protect land. Our interest is in the quality of life for our community which includes protecting special places like the Organs and Broad Canyon. If you want to honor the processes that support dialog and consensus building to support wilderness, encourage U.S. Sens. Pete Domenici and Jeff Bingaman to listen to our voice.

Energy record ugly Las Cruces City Council has passed a largely ceremonial resolution supporting investigation of El Paso Electric rates by the Public Regulation Commission which prompts the question: what has the city done to reduce our energy bills up 'til now? The record is dismal.

A favorable option to purchase power lines was allowed to lapse last February. The purchase would have allowed Las Cruces to purchase power from El Paso Electric's antiquated facilities. It would also have allowed power distribution to be financed by inexpensive tax-exempt bonds rather than corporate debt. None of our city leaders bothered to request analysis of the potential benefits to ratepayers. Meanwhile, our residential electric costs continue to be 50-80 percent higher than Albuquerque's.

City staff recommended approval of a 25-year franchise agreement earlier this year that would have increased franchise taxes on your electric bill by 50 percent. It also would have reduced city leverage in future negotiations with power providers. Only broad citizen protest resulted in postponement of the franchise deal.

City Council takes credit for intervention in the recent El Paso Electric Rate Case that resulted in smaller rate increases than the utility requested. But Public Regulation Commission staff and other interveners tell us the city contributed no meaningful proposals or research, did not retain expert counsel, and was a spectator during the case. The city apparently filed intervention papers for public relations purposes only.

Finally, look at your natural gas bill. The city has raised fixed monthly charges to $13.75 per month, making natural gas outrageously expensive to low-income and conservation-minded low use consumers.

Monthly energy costs can total 30 percent of disposable income for the less fortunate. It's time for the city to stop grandstanding, and do something constructive for ratepayers – for a change. RONALD & VIOLET CAUTHON

Election Announcements

Mercurio to run for mayor

Retired scientist favors inner-city green space

Jon J. Mercurio has announced his candidacy for mayor of Las Cruces. Mercurio, 64, is a retired federal scientist who operates a successful small business based in Las Cruces.

In his announcement, Mercurio said he is running on a platform of fiscal responsibility that stretches across the spectrum from smart growth, participation of the average citizen in their government, open government, infrastructure improvement for the existing community, job creation and quality of life.

Mercurio holds masters and doctoral degrees in atmospheric physics from UCLA, as well as bachelor degrees in mathematics and economics. He is a co-recipient of the Army Scientist of the Year award and prior to retirement was the acting director of the former Army Atmospheric Sciences Laboratory at White Sands Missile Range. He is a Vietnam-era veteran and a former professional flight instructor-pilot and owner of a flight school in Los Angeles. He has lived in Las Cruces since 1984. Prior to moving to Las Cruces he was an assistant professor of physics at the University of Missouri. "We need a more diverse economic base.

"We need a more diverse economic base. One cannot expect the current strategy of continual housing construction as the only prop for the local economy to have long-term success," Mercurio said in the announcement press release. "It creates a vicious cycle that feeds only on itself, with the benefits going only to the 'early-in' developers and the need for increased taxes to support the additional infrastructure on the community. We have seen the median home price escalate and the inventories increase such that the values of existing homes are stagnating.

"I support the concept of a large green space in the middle of the city in lieu of the Downtown Mall. The taxpayers should not be re-building the Downtown, which was an ideal proven wrong in many cities, including ours, over the past 40 years. The commercial market should be impetus for such rebuilding with the local government providing incentives that will entice merchants and entrepreneurs to take the risk. The private, not the public sector, should be assuming such risks. Our Downtown is hard to get to, has few attractors unless you have a need to visit a government office. Meanwhile, the continuing annexation is only forcing people further away from Downtown. They will remain in their own local community unless they have a reason to fight the increased congestion that the central city spaghetti bowl of streets provides. Traffic, current and future is an issue that has not yet had an intelligent

In his announcement release, Mercurio said local environment "has lost much of the attractiveness that greeted me 23 years ago" and that Las Cruces is beginning to resemble Tucson, which will rob the city of its distinctiveness and increase taxes. Housing construction starts should be more in line with current demands, he said, because of limited water, which he said won't be solved by building a desalination plant. "The 'build it and they will come' concept is killing our community," he said.

Mercurio said the city needs fresh ideas and creative thinking, which he claims is lacking in the current city council membership. "One can spew all the 'mom and apple pie concepts' and sound good," Mercurio said in his release, "but until we focus and truly concentrate on specific problems, all we have is 'pie in the sky."

Mercurio said he doesn't need the mayor's salary and, if elected, promises to donate it – after expenses – to local charities and city projects he supports. "I am not entering this race for political reasons or self promotion," he said. "I am in it for the citizens and the betterment of our city."

Gurley enters District 1 race

Activist second to announce Frietze challenge

Ron Gurley, who describes himself as a local activist with 50 years of public service experience, has announced his candidacy for the Las Cruces City Council District 1 seat.

A 14-year resident of the district, Gurley said he is running to assure meaningful involvement of residents in city policy-making.

"One of the things I am most proud of is that people came to me to get the public involved in the decisions related to the transition of Memorial Medical Center to private ownership," said Gurley in his press release, which noted that he arranged public input, including electronically beaming a hearing to outlying communities. "I think public involvement resulted in certain guarantees to the public in the lease contract."

Gurley is active in health care policy bodies, as a member of the state Medicaid Advisory Committee and the Doña Ana Health Alliance, which includes the DWI Council. He has worked as a chief probation officer and authored the book The Juvenile Offender and Texas Law. He is on the board of the J. Paul Taylor Juvenile Justice Center.

In his release, Gurley said he developed and is implementing special intervention training for law enforcement and first responders who encounter the mentally ill in crisis situations.

"I think training, recruiting and compensation aimed at achieving the highest performing police, fire and other first responders is a front-line priority for the city," he said

Gurley, the one-time chairman of the Las Cruces Ethics Board, is the retired national director of human resources development for the U.S. Department of Agriculture. He now works as a part-time development officer for New Mexico State University and runs his own human resource consulting business, through which he has been a strategic planning facilitator and equal employment opportunity investigator.

Gurley is a member of the League of United Latin American Citizens and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He organized their first joint Regional Civil Rights and Race Relations Conference with NMSU in 2006.

Jose Frietze, founder and CEO of Families and Youth Inc., is the District 1 incumbent and is running for re-election. Besides Gurley, another challenger to Frietze is Miguel Silva, who once headed the city's recycling program and was an appointed county commissioner.

Evans race a rematch – sort of Primary opponent to face incumbent's wife

Doyle Pruitt, a Republican that unsuccessfully ran last year for New Mexico Public Regulation Commission, has announced his bid for the District 4 county commission seat. In his announcement, Pruitt said he has

In his announcement, Pruitt said he has entered the race to "level the playing field and give better representation to the constituents of District 4 than has been given in the past."

District 4 is currently represented by Kent Evans, who he ran against for PRC. Both Evans and Pruitt lost in the primary to Earl Greer of Truth or Consequences. Evans is ending his second term and can't run again because of term limits, but his wife Anna Mae Evans has announced she is running for the vacancy.

"Someone is needed to look out for the safety issues of the county, which have been sorely overlooked in the past," Pruitt said in his announcement. "We are a flood prone area, which is due to the lack of infrastructure mandated to the builders. We should have had drainage canals like Albuquerque, Las Angeles and other cities that have had similar problems in the past."

Pruitt said he will advocate for more planning between the Las Cruces City Council and the Doña Ana County Commission on flooding issues. City officials have said that its current network of drainage ponds works well and reduces sediment pollutants before the water returns to the Rio Grande and is absorbed into the subsurface ground water.

Pruitt has a degree in structural engineering and said the county needs such people as himself who will look at the problems from a "logistical and sane perspective."

Pruitt has lived in Doña Ana County for eight years, and has been very active in the politics of the city, county and state. After serious thoughts of relocation to Colorado, Pruitt said he has decided to keep his home here and be a part of the solution to the problems that exist.

MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

TODD DICKSON I The Las Cruces Bulletin

State Sen. Mary Jane Garcia talks about her legislative experiences in the Las Cruces Bulletin office Tuesday, Sept. 18, as she announces her re-election plans.

Garcia to run again

Doña Ana lawmaker first ran for Legislature 20 years ago

By Todd G. Dickson

Should she be re-elected in 2008, it will mark 20 years that Mary Jane Garcia has been the state senator from the village of Doña Ana.

Over the years, Garcia has become a critical player in Legislature, where she is the Majority Whip in the Senate.

As a result, Garcia has been able to successfully champion for difficult legislation, such as the cock-fighting ban passed in the last session.

While she has always had opposition in the general election, for the first time she will be faced with an opponent in the primary – county commissioner Oscar Vasquez Butler has announced he will run.

"It was kind of disappointing," Garcia said when Butler told her that he would be challenging her in the primary. But Garcia said her constituents know of her commitment to making improvements to her home village and how her position in the Legislature helps her district.

"Seniority matters," Garcia said.

Garcia visited with the Bulletin after visiting Las Cruces middle schools and elementary schools in an effort to promote civic involvement for young people. The school visits are part of the America's Legislators Back to School Program.

"The America's Legislators Back to School Program not only gives me the opportunity to discuss the nuts and bolts of government with our young people, but also, I am able to contribute in an educational capacity – which is very important to me," Garcia said.

Denish endorses Montaño

Lt. Gov. Diane Denish announced she is endorsing Steven Montaño, who is running for Steve Trowbridge's open District 4 seat on the city council.

"He understands economic development and he understands the city of Las Cruces," Denish said in her endorsement. "He'll work with the other councilors to make sure good things happen for the city."

Montaño is one of three candidates who have announced they are running to fill the vacancy. The other two are Isaac Chavez and Nathan Small.

"I feel honored that the second-highest elected official in the state would go out of her way to endorse a local candidate here in Las Cruces," said Montaño, who heads the Las Cruces office of the state's Economic Development Department. "It's quite an honor when one of your bosses will endorse you."

Rock pit

According to the BLM's own experts, the pit was never quarried correctly from the top down. The top of a ridge capped by a thick layer of limestone was too hard for earth-digging equipment to break through, so the pit instead was quarried from its outer edges until a butte with steep faces was created in the middle of the pit.

That's when the local BLM began pursuing a plan of controlled blasting to break up the lime capstone. Because the rock prices had never been updated, the BLM didn't make enough money to reclaim the pit, so the plan called for the rock to cost more in return for allowing the blasting of the limestone.

Opposing neighbors were skeptical of the plan because of past experiences with BLM officials being non-responsive to their complaints about noise and dust from the pit and what they felt was lax management by the BLM over pit operations.

The neighbors formed a group called Friends of the Robledos and filed an appeal against the BLM's Environmental Assessment finding in favor of the blasting plan, which also included more stringent dust control measures.

The Interior Department's Board of Land Appeals in Virginia ruled June 27 in favor of the appeal, which found that the plan didn't adequately respond to concerns about storm water drainage and pollution.

Originally, local BLM officials responded to the decision by saying the appeal decision meant they would have to revise the plan and put it out for public comment again. Besides having to restart Environmental Assessment process, the appeal ruling required that a specialized Environmental Protection Agency permit be issued for the water discharge issue. BLM officials discovered that the EPA had already spent more than a year revising its requirements for the permit and couldn't say when the new requirements would be established new requirements would be established.

"We simply didn't see an end (to the process)," Sanders said.

Meanwhile, mining operations had become so hazardous at the pit that only one contractor remained working at the pit, which was becoming more limited every day. With the remaining operator's contract up for renewal, local BLM officials met with their state Director Linda Rundell.

Considering the obstacles to taking a more aggressive approach to clearing the pit and reclamation – along with the fact that no one was taking rocks from the pit – the BLM officials decided to close down the pit and begin evaluating what it will take to reclaim the area, which an early rough estimate has put it at more than $2 million. Once local BLM officials have a better estimate, then they will seek to have that money put in its budget.

But reclamation work at the site may not have to come out of the BLM's budget.

About the same time that residents were organizing against the rock pit, another group – involving many of the same people – began an effort to protect the Paleozoic trackways. Working with U.S, Sen. Jeff Bingaman, the group is calling for a large area surrounding the rock pit to be made a national monument and the rock pit access road would also be its entrance.

While the rock pit is an ugly scar on the Robledos that can be seen as far away as Telshor Boulevard, the view from the pit of the rural farm valley and Rio Grande north of Mayfield High School is spectacular. The reclaimed pit had already been talked about as a possible future home for the monument's visitor center and parking.

Greg Smith, president of the Paleozoic Trackways Foundation, said feelings about the pit by the group havew always been mixed – while some tailings have covered up trackways, the mining also has unearthed some new discoveries, such as records of some swimming creatures never seen before.

Although the pit operators in recent years have taken greater care is digging up the type of sedimentary rock that the trackways are found in, "there's no way to calculate what's been lost," he said.

When contacted by the Bulletin, Smith said the group hadn't heard from Bingaman about his thoughts on added the pit to the monument proposal in order to expedite reclaimation efforts. One of the criticisms from opponents to the trackways proposal is that the pit marred the view so badly that it doesn't live up to the ideal of a national monument.

"If handled properly, (the rock pit site) could be a great gateway to the trackways," Smith said. Friends of the Robledos' Ken Kentosh said he is just

Friends of the Robledos' Ken Kentosh said he is just glad as a neighboring resident to see the pit being inactive so there is less dust, noise and traffic. Kentosh acknowledged that he was pleasantly surprised to learn of the BLM decision – an about-face that doesn't happen often with the BLM, or other large federal agencies for that matter.

Still, the past mismanagement of the pit lingers. Kentosh noted that he understood the BLM made more than $100,000 off of recent rock sales from the pit and voiced skepticism about estimated funding. Also, considering the BLM past "mismanagement" of the pit that led to its current unsafe conditions, he said the group's members remain guarded in trusting BLM's plans for reclamation, For example, the BLM is considering having New Mexico Tech do the more detailed evaluation of what needs to be done to restore the area. BLM also consulted with New Mexico Tech to come up with its blasting plan, Kentosh said

"Still, we've achieved our first goal of having the pit no longer operational," Kentosh said. "Frankly, we never thought that was possible and we were always willing to work with the BLM to make sure things were done properly."

Center

While some of the best energy savings technologies results in high up-front costs, Mendez said the design will attempt to incorporate uses of gray water, solar and wind energy and reuse of materials.

Council members agreed, however, that delays in construction are costly. The center's design process – which includes public input through design charrettes – is expected to be completed by spring of next year so that construction can begin in the summer. Completion of the center is expected in about two years.

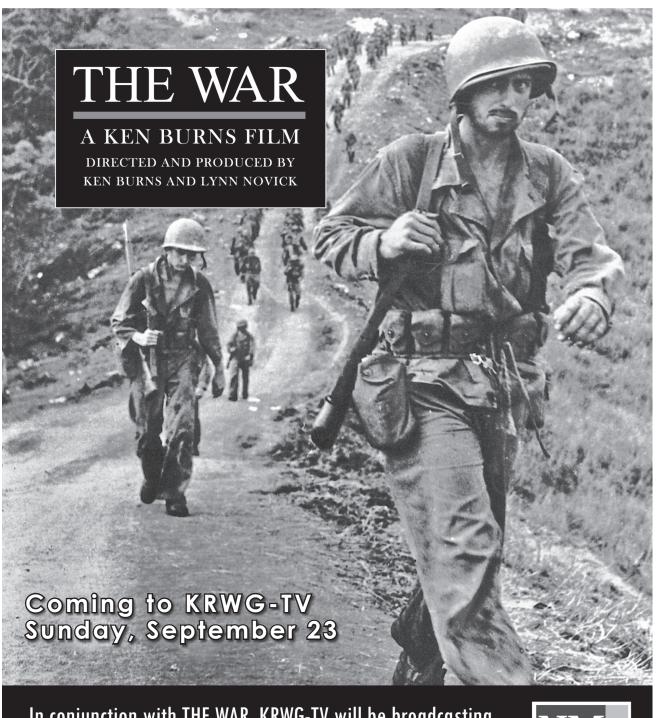

A marketing study commissioned by the city recommended that the city develop a "mid-level" convention center, requiring about 20,000 square feet for exhibits, 10,000 square feet for a main ballroom and 5,000 square feet for meeting spaces. Also it would need space for support services, landscaping, parking and a kitchen that could handle serving up to 2,000 people at a time.

Mayor William "Bill" Mattiace said what pleased him

Mayor William "Bill" Mattiace said what pleased him most is that no city general fund money will be going to the center and repeated his desire to have a private company manage the facility, making it a model for other city's convention centers.

In other business, the council approved spending more than $250,000 on the design, planning and construction of a Downtown civic plaza just east of the reopened Main Street and south of the Bank of the West. The plaza will become the new home for the Farmers and Crafts Market and councillor Steve Trowbridge said those merchants need to be listened to and accommodated.

Mattiace agreed, noting that the outdoor market each year attracts thousands to the often vacant Downtown Mall area. The city's Downtown revitalization plan includes fully reopening Main Street, creation of the civic plaza and attracting new businesses and investment through allowance of mixed uses.

Delegation defends HELSTF

U.S. Sens. Pete Domenici and Jeff Bingaman recently moved to maintain a high-energy research program at White Sands Missile Range and force the Department of the Army to justify proposed budget cuts.

Last year, the range's High Energy Laser Systems Test

Facility (HELSTF) had a $16.4 million budget, but the Army is only seeking $2.8 million for the next fiscal year. The Senate Armed Services Committee authorized $7.5 million for the program at Domenici's request.

Domenici, with Bingaman as a cosponsor, has offered an amendment to the FY2008 Defense Authorization Bill (HR.1585) that addresses future funding for HELSTF. The Senate this week resumed consideration of this bill, which authorizes defense policies and programs.

The amendment would prohibit the Army from taking irreversible action to close HELSTF and require the Secretary of Defense to provide a report to Congress that contains a cost-benefit analysis of the proposed budget cuts for HELSTF, including an evaluation of the cuts on work carried out by the Navy, Air Force and other federal agencies that use the facility

Domenici, Bingaman and U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce also issued letters to secretaries of the Navy and Air Force, as well as the director of the Missile Defense Agency, alerting them to the proposed HELSTF budget cuts and asking them to assess the impact of such a reduction on their research and development programs.

"We urge you to direct the appropriate test and evaluation element in your agency to immediately engage the Army and the Department of Defense to assess the potential risks to your programs and ensure that your test and evaluation support requirements are clearly understood and accommodated without increased risk before any irreversible action is taken," the New Mexico lawmakers

Trek for Trash volunteers sought

Keep Las Cruces Beautiful and the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department Codes Division are seeking community volunteers to participate in the 2007 Trek for Trash campaign, scheduled Saturday, Oct. 13, in Las Cruces and Doña Ana County.

Chris Bigelow, coordinator of Doña Ana County's Keep America Beautiful grant, said the county will provide trash bags, gloves, safety vests, bottled water and roll-off containers for the 2007 event. In addition to volunteers, he said corporate sponsors are asked to assist with event costs and supply donations. The trek is part of a statewide cleanup effort to raise public awareness of the impact of litter.

In the county, the event will get underway at 8 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 13, at several community centers across the county, where supplies will be available for volunteers. Once the Trek for Trash is underway, groups of volunteers will target their own communities for a coordinated cleanup.

Keep Las Cruces Beautiful is also having their 13th

Annual Trek for Trash on Saturday, Oct. 13, from 8 a.m. to noon in neighborhoods all around Las Cruces. KLCB's goal is to have 300 volunteers and remove 6 tons of litter and debris during the event.

A celebration for KLCB volunteers will follow at the Dream Center of Las Cruces, 1400 N. 6th St., where International House of Pancakes will host a brisket lunch. There will be drawings for prizes and all volunteers will receive "goody bags" with coupons donated by local businesses.

Beginning in 1995, then-Gov. Gary Johnson began the Trek for Trash program, which has grown every year since, with hundreds of thousands of tons of trash collected and properly disposed of since its inception.

"In Doña Ana County, we want to set an example of public-private cooperation that makes a real difference in cleaning up our communities," Bigelow said. "To do this, we really need volunteers and corporate sponsors to assist us."

Elementaries sign up for walk-to-school day

More than 20 schools in NM participated last year

Hillrise and Mesilla elementary schools have already signed up for International Walk to School in the USA Day, which will be Wednesday, Oct. 3. It's part of an effort in all 50 states and some foreign countries to encourage children to walk, bike, skate or roll safely to school.

"In New Mexico, we call it Walk and Roll to School Day, to include those traveling in wheelchairs, or by scooter, skateboard, rollerblades, bicycle, etc.," said Beverly Friedman, public information officer for the New Mexico Public Education Department (NMPED).

LCPS schools can sign up to participate in Walk and Roll to School Day as late as the day of the event. Schools who sign up earlier will be eligible for prizes. Visit www.walktoschool.org to sign up.

Hillrise and Mesilla elementaries are among 10 schools in seven New Mexico communities who have signed up for the event. Hillrise was among about 5,000 schools in all 50 states who participated in International Walk to School Day in October 2006.

School Day in October 2006.

"The purpose of the day is to encourage children to walk to school," said Hillrise Elementary Principal Andrea Fletcher. "Just a generation ago, most kids walked or biked to school. Today, it's only around 20 percent. Walking to school has many benefits for the child, the school and the community. Walking also protects the environment by decreasing emissions from cars," she said.

"This will be the first time we have had an event like this," said Mesilla Elementary School nurse Kim Schulmeister. The school "is partnering with the New Mexico Department of Health and the trustees of the Town of) Mesilla to encourage students and staff to increase their physical activity levels by walking or biking to school and participating in other events," she said.

Both schools are part of the national Safe Routes to School (SRTS) program, which began in Marin County, California in 2000. Governor Bill Richardson signed the New Mexico SRTS bill in 2003. Jessica Frost is coordinator of the state SRTS office, which is part of the New Mexico Department of Transportation. A federal law passed in 2005 allocates $612 million over five years for a national SRTS program. New Mexico will receive $5.1 million of that money through 2009.

The Partnership for a Walkable America sponsored the first National Walk Our Children to School Day in Chicago in 1997, modeling after the United Kingdom's walk to school events, according to www.walktoschool. org. "By 2004, nearly three million walkers worldwide celebrated the seventh annual International Walk to School Day. Last year in New Mexico, we had more than 20 schools and more than 2,000 students participate in the event," said Friedman.

Any Las Cruces schools who wish to participate in International Walk and Roll to School Day are asked to register at www.walktoschool.org. They also are asked to contact Jessica Frost at (505) 476-2155 or Jessica.Frost@state.nm.us. Visit http://nmshtd.state.nm.us/main.asp?secid=15411.

'Pink' seminar to address cancer awareness

Thursday lecture and information fair will feature local researchers and experts fighting to halt women's cancers

Anyone who has been to an Aggie versus Lobo game knows the rivalry between New Mexico State University and the University is alive and well. The two state schools are locked in a perennial competition over sports, academics, funding and general bragging rights.

ics, funding and general bragging rights.

But in 2001, a group of NMSU and UNM researchers and scientists put aside that rivalry to form a collaboration that has produced groundbreaking research.

Nationally recognized NMSU synthetic chemist Jeffrey Arterburn and research scientists from the University of New Mexico Cancer Center will discuss their partnership and their groundbreaking research during a "Hope Through Research" presentation at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 27, at the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road. Other speakers include June Mumme, Dr. Warren Alexander, Dr. Katie Rasila, Dr. Melanie Royce, Larry Sklar and Eric Procesnitz.

The free seminar begins at 5:30 p.m. with an informational fair and is part of the NMSU Aggies ARE Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign, which is raising awareness and funds for breast cancer and women's cancers research at NMSU and UNM Cancer Center.

So far, the partnership has proven itself worthwhile. According to national experts, the group's discoveries related to a new estrogen receptor will dramatically impact the way breast cancer and other women's cancers are diagnosed and treated.

Fifth graders increase nutrition knowledge with NMSU Just Be It! program

New Mexico State University's Just Be It! Healthy and Fit obesity prevention program increased the nutrition knowledge of fifth-grade students in Rio Arriba, Santa Fe and Los Alamos counties by 27 percent during the 2006-2007 school year.

"We're really excited about the first year's outcome," said Diana Del Campo, professor and Cooperative Extension Service specialist in child development and family life. "The first year's level of success is a good baseline for the next four years.

What is significant with this study is that we have a control group of fifth-graders who did not receive the nutrition classes but were tested," she said. "Their increase in knowledge was 4 percent.'

The five-year study being conducted by NMSU's College of Agriculture and Home Economics' Cooperative Extension Service home economists enters its second year with nutrition and fitness field trips and individual classroom follow-up sessions. Field trips are scheduled in Santa Fe on Sept. 20, Los Alamos on Sept. 25, Española on Sept. 27 and Pojoaque on Oct. 2.

During the field day students participate in four workshops where they learn about the food group pyramid, the nutritional qualities of vegetables and fruits, the three types of exercise and how much activity they should have each day and how to develop a healthy dietary habit. The students also have an opportunity to taste different fruits and vegetables such as kiwi, jicama, sugar snap peas and red bell pepper to see which they like.

Just Be It! is more than a field trip. When the students return to school they are given a test to demonstrate what they have learned that day. Select classes will have followup visits by home economists and nutrition educators to reinforce the information taught during the workshops.

The program also includes eight newsletters for parents and teachers, along with home activities to help extend the learning experience to the entire family.

Mayor's Ball raises funds to support local nonprofits

Nearly $70,000 netted for Community Foundation

By Joel Courtney

The 2007 Mayor's Ball, the city's largest formal get together, has come and passed earlier this month, and through their participation, attendees have raised nearly $70,000 for the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM).

Funds raised by the Mayor's Ball go to support the operational costs of the Community Foundation, which in turn works to support the needs of the area and the nonprofit agencies that serve southern New Mexico.

"This money will help everyone in the community," CFSNM Executive Director Stephanie Johnson-Burick said. "The money goes to support the foundation so we can make our community a better place."

Part of that service is the collection of philanthropic funds from local donors that can then be distributed to supplement the grants provided to nonprofits by federal and state government.

"Donors can come to us and fulfill what they're passionate about," Johnson-Burick said.

The other function of the Community Foundation is using its connection between area organizations to bring about changes the community needs.

"We're a catalyst. We bring key players together to address issues in the community," Johnson-Burick said.

Several years ago, after a number of child abuse cases were reported in the media back to back, community leaders began requesting that something be done to combat the problem. The Community Foundation formed the Child Safe/Niños Seguro, which works to reduce the problem of child abuse throughout Doña Ana County, as well as the Las Companeras and Kid Talk programs. Las Companeras helps teach new mothers how to raise children with the help of more experienced mothers, while Kid Talk provides a 24-hour outlet for children to talk to someone about anything, from abuse to problems at school.

Johnson-Burick said although people who attended the enjoyed a great time at parties throughout the city and finished the night off with dessert, dancing and a performance by Cirque de Soliel, they have given a huge contribution to their community.

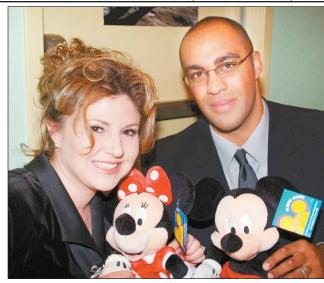

"Everyone who attended that night gave back," she said.

"And I just want everyone to experience that feeling."

The Doña Ana Community College will be holding the third annual An Evening with Amado Peña beginning at 6 p.m. Friday, Sept. 21, at the Hotel Encanto, 705 S. Telshor Blvd.

The event, which is the brainchild of DACC Campus Executive Officer Margie Huerta, brings Amado Peña and his artwork to raise scholarship money for the community college. Peña, who is recognized as an artisan of the Pascua Yaqui Tribe of Arizona, donates one of his paintings each year for the event that is made into poster and tile prints. He also donates 40 percent of the sales of his artwork from the evening's art sale.

"I think one thing community colleges have that universities don't have is a more intimate relationship between the students and the faculty," Peña said. "(Community college students) don't see this institutional nightmare in front of

The evening begins with cocktails and and art exhibit along with a silent auction of the artwork of local artists. The 2007 Peña event is the first time that local artists have been tied into the fund-raiser, and the artists have each donated a piece of work, whose sale price will be donated 100 percent toward the scholarship fund.

Local artists participating in the event include: Joe Dominick, Maria Simpson, Ouida Touchon, Kurt Van Wagner, George Mendoza, Rosie Carrillo, Virginia Romero, Caryl Porter, Linda Laitner, Jim White, Lolita Quintana, Glenn Schwaiger, Abby Osborne, Phil Yost, Rafael Aguirre and Lydia Bennett.

"I'm very excited that we have a community that embraces him (Peña) and embraces the arts in general," Huerta said. "This is the right event for our community college."

At 7 p.m., the event will have a dinner along with entertainment, followed with an art sale of Peña's work and the results of the silent auction. Immediately following the art sale, the event will conclude with a dance.

DACC doesn't offer traditional art classes like those found in a traditional university, but Huerta said there is a large connection between the trades and the arts, with several requiring the same skill sets. She noted that the school's welding program has classes that teach art welding in addition to the professional skill.

As a way to promote the arts in it's students' lives, DACC is offering a discount on student tickets and the opportunity for businesses and individuals to sponsor students to attend the program.

'Art, in general, enhances the quality of life and gives you a different perspective on things," Huerta said.

Peña, who also has his own foundation to raise scholarship money for needy students called the Art Has Heart Foundation, said he believes strongly in finding a way for students to pursue their education.

"I wouldn't have gone to school if it wasn't for my scholarship," Peña said. "As small as it was, it was still valuable to me."

"Once this scholarship is established, anyone can donate to it," said Erlinda Portillo, DACC's coordinator of public relations and resource development.

Although this marks the third year the event has been raising money for scholarships, Huerta said now DACC will finally have raised enough to start awarding that money to

She expects the event to raise at least $30,000 this year, but hopes that it can continue to grow each year with the community.

may expand the event into other areas of art, but this will always be an Amado Peña event.'

"You walk away with a good feeling when you're able to do something with artwork that you can't normally do," Peña said. "When you see it become a positive venue, you want to continue to be a part of it.'

Tickets to An Evening with Amado Peña are $60 for regular admission and $35 for students. Tickets can be purchased at the door, but those interested are asked to RSVP to Erlinda Portillo at 528-7070.

On Saturday, Sept. 15, Safe Haven Animal Sanctuary held a cat adoption day at its thrift store on Wyatt Drive.

Of the six cats available, two found new homes and owners.

Safe Haven is a nonprofit, no-kill shelter for primarily abused and abandoned pets. Sometimes, dogs and cats end up at the shelter when their owners die, are divorced or move.

Those pets who are not adopted will live out their lives at Safe Haven, located on three acres of the Cronin Ranch east of Las Cruces.

The ranch has kennels, a cattery and play areas that can accommodate up to 21 dogs and 30 cats.

Money to operate and upgrade the shelter comes from donations and goods sold at the thrift store, located 144 Wyatt Drive. Store hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday.

For more information about Safe Haven, call the thrift store at 541-4942 or the shelter at 527-4544. Its website is www.safehavenanimalsanctuary.net and email is safehaven@zianet.com.

Baked goods, livestock exhibits popular at Southern State Fair

By Marvin Tessneer

Many Southern New Mexico State Fair supporters look at the annual Baked Goods Auction as a combined fund-raiser and social event.

This year's Baked Goods Auction will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 3, in the Special Events Center. Last year, sales raised $30,925 that will be used for fairgrounds improvements.

Sale superintendent Shelley Noe said bidders, individuals and businesses, are by invitation, and she sends out an average of 200 each year.

"And each year I've increased money for the fair through the baked goods auction," she said.

After the Baked Good Show she puts items in separate baskets, supplemented with gift certificates, to present at the sale.

"Alot of people who have been supporters of the fair for years come back to the Baked Goods Auction because they know the money is going for improvement of the fairgrounds," fair executive director Marilyn Bagwell said.

The liveliest bidding will be for the bestof-show blue ribbons and engraved silver tray winners for adults and youths that are donated by the Las Cruces Bulletin.

Contestants like to see what other bakers are creating, and during the Baked Goods Show they will be able to see: Yeast Bread and Rolls, Quick Bread, Cakes, Iced and Non-Iced; Pies, Cookies, Candy, Pecan World, Choco-Holics Delight and Decorated Cake- Special Design

Another popular sale is the Junior Livestock Sale that is slated for 7 p.m., Friday, Oct. 5, in the Livestock Show Barn. Last year, auctioneers sold 142 animals that brought in $253,406 for the young exhibitors.

The auction is preceded by a buyers' barbecue. The money that 4-H and FFA youths gain from the sale of their animals is used for future projects or to put in college funds.

Another exhibit of agricultural interest is the 100 Percent Cotton Contest sponsored by Rod and Mary Lou Tharp. Prizes include Best-of-Lot, $25; Second Best-of-Lot, $20; Third Best-of-Lot, $15; Fourth Best-of-Lot, $10, and Fifth Best-of-Lot, $5.

Other exhibits are: Agriculture, Cotton, Vegetables, Chile Ristras and Hay; Home Economics, including Canned Goods and Dry Food; Quilting; School Arts and Crafts; Fine Arts and Crafts; Photography; Floriculture and Horticulture; Knitting and Crocheting; Needlework, and Youth Exhibits, including Agriculture, Home Economics Foods, Sewing, Handicrafts and Hobbies and Art.

The fair also will offer four nights of a wide range of entertainment in the Budweiser Pavilion.

On first night, Thursday, Oct. 5, Liquid Cheese will present their version of Ska music at 9:30 p.m..

On Friday, Oct. 5, Josh Grider will perform before a hometown crowd.

Las Cruces' Delk Band will do the warmup for the Bucky Covington show, slated for 9:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 6.

Sunday, Oct. 7, will be Hispanic Heritage Day, featuring music by mariachi groups and dancing. The performances will start at noon and continue until mid-afternoon. The mariachi groups will include:

Thank you from St. Mary's-at-Hill

By BISHOP MELVIN PICKERING

The vestry on behalf of the Congregation of St. Mary's Anglican Church and clergy wish to express thanks to many who have helped us as we completed our second year in the beautiful historic St. Mary's-at-Hill Anglican

About a year ago, we had the memorial service for one of the daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Hill. Like the wells of old, some of these facilities fell into disuse, and are now being recovered. That is the story of St. Mary's-at-Hill and the generous descendants of Dr. and Mrs. Hill. Family members have gifted two parcels of land north of the church to the St. Mary's present congregation. This increased the land owned by St. Mary's five-fold. The church has adopted plans to build a parish hall and upgrade the bathroom facilities. We hope that this fall we can begin construction on the new Sunday School and fellowship areas. However, we now have a vacation trailer with a chemical toilet and space for a Sunday School on loan to the parish, and we are currently conducting Sunday School in the facilities.

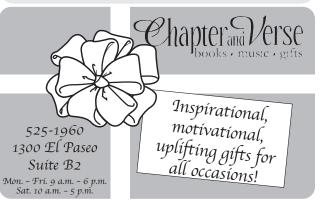

Last year, the flash floods devastated our building and grounds, and we suffered an uninsured flood loss in excess of $7,000. The small congregation and friends have been generous and been able not only to cover that loss, but also paid an extra $8,000 on the debt retirement of what was St. Barnabas Anglican Church. Of course, we now have flood insurance. We changed our name to St. Mary's-at-Hill Anglican Church and moved into the historic building Oct 1, 2005. The congregation that had been meeting in the chapel of the bishop's home less than a year, purchased the building and moved into it, starting with broken glass, doors torn off, no heat or air conditioning and .09 acres of land. We were gifted Bibles, prayer books, hymnals, an altar, pulpit, lectern, a organ, candle sticks, chalice, paten, credence table, kneelers, altar bells and installed a gifted bell in the tower. God has blessed us, and we wish to thank all those that have contributed to the new beginning of Historic St. Mary's Anglican Church. Especially, we are grateful for deacon and later Father John Grady, Sr., who died the first year of our life in St. Mary's. He made the lovely altar rail, and he and his widow Rita (who now lives in Alaska) made countless sacrifices to launch the new congregation. A special thanks for the donation of the adjacent land by the kin of Dr. and Mrs. Hill: Mr. Kent Elliot, of El Paso, Texas, wanted to have a memorial service for his mother at St. Mary's. We were glad to have this Holy Eucharist for the family in memory of his mother. Kent and his wife Marsha expressed their gratitude and when asked what they could do to express their appreciation, we told him of our concern for more land. He began to contact his uncles and aunts, and they were glad to donate the land to our church. They are: Alta LaVoyne Newman, personal representative of William Campbell Newman, deceased, Jean C. Price and her husband Richard; Charles H. Newman, joined pro-forma by his wife Eddy Jean Newman; George Elliott Newman joined pro-forma by his wife Denise Newman; Mary Ann Christie, now known as Mary Ann Leslie of San Antonio, Texas. The family has not only been generous in the gift of the land but in sharing their memories of growing up in the Hill Community.

This public thank you would be incomplete without mentioning the generosity of two of our neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Smoky Blanton, who provided their pump to help us pump the flood waters out of the church basement, and the countless ways the people of Hill Baptist Church have befriended us both during our recovering from the floods and in the entire two years we have shared. The congregation and individuals at Hill Baptist have certainly set a good example of caring for a neighboring congregation.

More knowledge about SIDS can prevent a needless tragedy

Compliant children need fairness to avoid feeling powerless

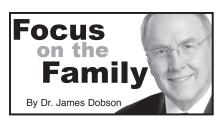

I have great fear that my baby will die when I put her in her crib. What is known now about sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS)? Have researchers figured out what causes these tragic cases where seemingly healthy babies die while sleeping?

Sudden infant death syndrome is still a major concern, killing about 2,500 babies each year in the United States alone. We do know more, however, about the circumstances that are often associated with this

A study was conducted by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission with the collaboration of researchers at the University of Maryland and the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, Mo. The results were presented at a meeting of the Society for Pediatric Research in 1996.

The epidemiologist who directed the investigation, Dr. N.J. Scheers, said: "We have not found a cause of SIDS, but our results show that specific items of bedding used in the U.S., such as comforters and pillows, were associated with an increased risk for death to prone-sleeping infants whose faces became covered, compared to infants on their sides or backs without soft bedding under them.'

It was concluded that babies placed on their stomachs in soft bedding are more likely to re-breathe their own carbon dioxide that is trapped in the blankets and pillows around them. In about 30 percent of the 206 SIDS deaths in the research project, babies were found with bedding pressed against their noses and mouths. Most of them were under 4 months old and could not extricate themselves.

The advice now being offered by doctors is that parents place their infants on their backs, not on their stomachs or sides, and that a minimum amount of loose bedding be kept in the crib. Experts also recommend that pregnant women avoid smoking for a host of reasons, one of them being that prenatal smoking is a major risk factor for SIDS. In addition, secondhand smoke may also put infants at risk for SIDS. Aside from the danger of SIDS, children should not be exposed to smoke.

Following this advice won't eliminate all cases of SIDS, but it could save hundreds of lives every year.

What are the special needs of a compliant kid - one that goes along to get along? Does he have any special needs?

That's a great question, and the answer is yes. When one child is a stick of dynamite and the other is an all-star sweetheart, the cooperative, gentle individual can easily be taken for granted. If there's an unpleasant job to be done, he may be expected to do it because mom and dad just don't have the energy to fight with the tiger. When it is necessary for one child to sacrifice or do without, there's a tendency to pick the one who won't complain as loudly. Under these circumstances, the compliant boy or girl comes out on the short end of the stick.

The consequences of such inequity should be obvious. The responsible child often becomes angry over time. He has a sense of powerlessness and resentment that simmers below the surface. He's like the older brother in the parable of the Prodigal Son, told by Jesus. He didn't rebel against his father. He stayed behind and ran the farm while his irresponsible brother squandered his money on fun and games. Who could blame him for resenting little bro? His response is typical of the compliant, hard-working sibling.

I strongly recommend that parents seek to balance the scales in dealing with the compliant child. Make sure he gets his fair share of parental attention. Help him find ways to cope with his overbearing sibling. And, within reason, give him the right to make his own decisions.

There's nothing simple about raising kids, is there? Even the "easiest" of them needs our very best

Hide and Seek with God?

Has finding God's will for a major decision ever been frustrating to you? Me too! A few years ago I had an experience that gave me confidence that if I tools decised to be a few tools. that, if I truly desired to know and do it, God would keep me in His will.

To protect the innocent I will not give you a name, but years ago one of my children loved to play hide and seek in the house. She wasn't very good at it. As I counted to 10, she would run off to hide. "...9...10, ready or not here I come!" As I begin my search I would say, "Where's my little girl hiding?" A reply would come from the living room, "I'm in here." Hmmm. As I walk into the living room, she would be standing up in a corner, in plain sight, with her eyes closed, giggling. Hmmm.

One day I shared with my wife, "TJ, our daughter is so bad at hide and seek I think something might be wrong with her." She smiled and said, "The point of the game for her is not to hide from you, but to be found by you." Hmmm. Isaiah 30:18 The LORD longs to be gracious to you; he rises to show you compassion. For the LORD is a God of justice. Blessed are all who wait for him!

I don't have time for a sermon, but this verse means that the Lord longs to meet your longing for Him with His provision. When our longing is for God Himself, He gives us Himself and all we need. Notice how this provision also includes His direction ... Isaiah 30:21 Whether you turn to the right or to the left, your will hear a voice behind you, saying, "This is the way; walk in it.

Have confidence that if you seek God with all of your heart (Jeremiah 29:13), you will find Him and the direction you need - He wants to be found by you!

NMSU to enter WAC bid

University wants to host '09, '10

tournaments

By Natisha Hales

New Mexico State University has decided to enter a bid to continue hosting the men's and women's Western Athletic Conference basketball tournament in 2009 and 2010.

The decision to enter the bid, however, would not have been made unless the university continued to receive support from the City of Las Cruces and other entities that have helped make the previous tournament such a community success, said NMSU Athletic Director McKinley Boston.

"We absolutely would not even begin to submit a bid if we didn't have partnership with the city, state, corporate support and community leaders," Boston said. "It just couldn't work." To host the WAC basketball tournament, Boston said NMSU received help from the City of Las Cruces, the State of New Mexico, organizations such as the New Mexico Restaurant Association and private businesses.

When NMSU submitted the first bid in 2005 to host the 2007 and 2008 WAC basketball tournaments, the City of Las Cruces agreed to provide resources for lodging for men's and women's basketball teams, coaches, officials and others involved, said City Manager Terrence Moore. "That was a tremendous commitment on our part," Moore said.

When the city met with NMSU in August to discuss the upcoming bid, Moore said the city's interest was to offer the same level of commitment as Though the 2007 WAC basketball tournaments were successfully hosted in Las Cruces, more schools are expected to enter bids.

"It's anticipated to be more competitive this year because we anticipate five (other) schools in the Western Athletic Conference submitting proposals," Moore said. "That is somewhat of a concern. However, I feel that the community is fortunate because we have the event again in 2008."

The University of Nevada, Fresno State and Utah State are anticipated to be the most competition.

Utah State, located in Logan, Utah, may enter a bid based on using a facility in Salt Lake City, and Nevada and Fresno State have both hosted WAC basketball tournaments successfully.

However, NMSU set a record for all-session passes sold, and the university had the most attendance for supporters of the winning games.

Allstate to bring 200 jobs New claims-handling office to open in January 2008

By Natisha Hales

At least 200 jobs will come to town when Allstate opens its new Las Cruces claims office in January 2008.

The insurance company announced an expansion of its "Express" claims-handling model, and the Las Cruces office will be one of nine Express offices in the country, according to a press release.

The claims office will use 33,000 square feet of office space, the entire second level of a building under construction at 170 Roadrunner Parkway. If that space wasn't available for Allstate, the company may have looked over Las Cruces, said City of Las Cruces Economic Development Administrator Christine Ochs.

"When Allstate came to Las Cruces, they were looking for existing space because they need to be in operation quickly," Ochs said. "Allstate was very impressed with our community, workforce and cost to do business, but if we had not had a building they could get into quickly, they would have chosen another community and only kept us in mind for the future."

Ochs said the builder and the city worked together to assure all modifications on the building – owned by George Rawson and represented by NAI 1st Val-ley Realty – would be ready for Allstate in no more time than it would take to make changes to an existing building in another the Allstate Express office, and the city was chosen based on several criteria – the cost of living, availability of talent and the ability to maintain operations when severe weather occurs in other parts of the country.

Economic development incentives and assistance from the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance and the City of Las Cruces also helped.

"Las Cruces residents' great work ethic and an important bilingual capability to better service our Spanish-speaking customers were also important factors," said Allstate Claim Service Manager in the press release.

The majority of the jobs in the center will be claim processing specialists, who will begin employment at an hourly rate of $10.85, said Allstate spokeswoman Melissa Stoloff, and a leadership team also will

Economy continuing to prosper

Low average wage, business climate remain challenges

By Natisha Hales

The local economy is doing better than last year, but average wages and workforce development are still major con-cerns, according to the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance's annual report.

MVEDA President Steve

Vierck said it's impossible to compete with a mediocre workforce, which goes hand in hand with wages and salary.

Vierck said the average wage in the county is at $13 an hour, but it needs to be increased.

"We need to keep moving this up because, remember, we're still in a situation where we're 30 percent below the national average. Actually, we're 10 percent below the state of New Mexico, which is kind of at the bottom of the chain," Vierck said during a luncheon for MVEDA partners and stakeholders Sept. 14. "But we cannot elevate salary and wage levels if we don't elevate the training and education levels of our workforce. This is probably the most important thing we need to do."

According to MVEDA's annual report for the 2006-07 fiscal year, nine projects bringing a total of 554 jobs with an average salary of $27,158 were created.

"We're improving the economic standard of living for people living in the county," Vierck said. "That's what it all boils down to. If we're not doing that, we're not achieving our purpose."

Though the average salary is still a challenge in the local economy, Vierck said the business climate and workforce ratings have increased since last year.

Fifteen local industries in aerospace, high technology, business and financial services, manufacturing and food processing were surveyed, and 63.3 percent rated the business climate as good and excellent, while 60 percent rated the workforce as good and excellent.

The fact that 6.7 percent rated the business climate as poor, and 20 percent gave the workforce a poor rating is still a challenge, Vierck said.

DAVID McCOLLUM I The Las Cruces Bulletin

"We're not going to compete with a mediocre work-force," he said. "This is where the emphasis has to be. We can't compete being average, we have to become excellent. Let's really get behind this workforce development initiative, and let's become the best

Because the rating has improved, however, is a sign that the upcoming year may be a successful one, Vierck

Signature Event draws a crowd

Curtis Zimmerman a hit among attendees

By BETHANY CONWAY

The Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce Annual Signature Event took place Tuesday, Sept. 18, at Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces, and the roar of laughter from Curtis Zimmerman's presentation signaled a good time among attendees.

"There will be a reason behind every action you take today," said Zimmerman, a nationally renowned motivational speaker. "The only time you are growing and changing is when you are a little uncomfortable.'

With strange gestures, juggling and even fire eating, he got the entire crowd involved. Zimmerman said that for his presentation, "Living Life at a Performance Level," he compiled a two-day workshop into one day.

"You are all writing a show, it's called your life," he said. "Today is about you realizing that you are the star

He suggested that attendees cast their show wisely and ask themselves if the people in their lives build them up or tear them down.

"Everyday that you open your eyes, it's the opening day of your life," he added.

The major focus of his presentation was how to become a leader in the workplace.

"It doesn't matter how long you have been doing something if you have not evolved in what it is you are doing," he said. "I could care less about what you think you are gifted in because passion supercedes natural ability every

He emphasized that every attendee was in the "peoplebusiness" and a major component of being a leader is how you interact with people.

"People want a human connection. What you have to do to be a leader is just be a person. If you want to retain good people you have to understand where their reference is," he said.

At one point, a juggling extravaganza had every attendee out of their seat, testing their skills as jugglers. Zimmerman explained that the three balls represented oneself, one's family and one's job, which are factors that everyone must struggle with in their daily lives.

He also stressed that failure is a natural component on the road to success.

"The reason I can do this (juggle) is not because I am talented, it is because I have dropped the ball many more times than you. That is the key to success."

The second half of the presentation consisted of group activities and interaction among attendees in exercises that emphasized communication, identifying stereotypes and bringing to life everyday activities that can be harmful in the workplace.

On a more serious note, Zimmerman shared his life experiences, or what he called his "realsumé" with the crowd. He explained that his struggle with his mother's alcoholism, and his own dyslexia and celiac disease, a digestive disease that interferes with absorption of nutrients from food, made him focus on what he can do, rather than what he can't. Zimmerman was hospitalized 37 times before the age of nine, and said he is lucky to be standing here today.

He told attendees never to stop trying and not to be discouraged by failure.

"You know how you can tell if you're done developing?" Zimmerman asked attendees. "If you're still breathing,

Sure, it's a buyer's market

Completing the purchase still requires win-win thinking

I remember the scenario as if it were yesterday. I received a call from a frantic homeowner who needed to sell his house - and quick! He had purchased a newly constructed home out of state, but would lose it to another buyer if he couldn't produce a purchase contract for his house within fourteen days. To add a little perspective to the story, the number of days required at the time to sell a similar Las Cruces area home was in the 150-155 day

Once I understood what the seller wanted to accomplish, I put together a plan to help him get the job done. In essence, the idea was to identify the highest possible price at which buyers would still be willing to compete against one another for the property. After that, an aggressive marketing plan would be employed to alert realty agents and the public to the terrific buy that was beckoning from literally around the corner. To make a long story short, the plan worked, and the seller received three offers within 72 hours of signing the listing.

Two of the offers were at full-price – from buyers who submitted information regarding their loan qualifications, earnest money deposits and proposed closing dates. The third offer was from a buyer who really wanted the house because he has relatives living on the street," but had not yet applied for a mortgage. Additionally, his offering price was thousands of dollars below the competing offers and was supported by a very, very small earnest money deposit. After eliminating the third offer, the seller negotiated with the remaining two buyers before making an agreement with the one whose terms most closely met his needs.

After the negotiations were complete and the news of the outcome was disseminated to the non-prevailing agents, I asked the agent of the third buyer why the buyer's offer was so far below the asking price and why the buyer hadn't established his qualifications prior to making his offer. After all, there were two competing fullprice offers and the buyer truly wanted to live on that particular street. His answer: "My job is to get them a good deal." Well pardon me, but from my perspective it appears that the assignment was to secure the house for the buyer. How do I know? Because the agent said it was his job to get the buyer a good deal - not that the buyer had instructed him to "get him a good deal." Unfortunately, the buyer's agent forgot to include anything in the offer that might excite the seller, so the buyer's offer was immediately tossed aside.

I encountered a similar situation a couple of weeks ago, when an agent brought to the table an offer on one of my vacant listings. The offer was thousands below the asking price, subject to the sale of another property, from a buyer who had not yet been Whether you're buying qualified for a mortgage, and whose earnest money deposit was very small. In essence, the offer asked the seller to take his house off the market for a couple of months and make payments while the buyer attempts to find a buyer for his house and learn whether or not he's qualified for a loan. Needless to say, the buyer's offer was rejected. When I asked the buyer's agent why the buyer didn't include in the offer anything positive for the seller, the response was again that the buyer's agent's job is to get the best deal for the buyer. Okay, I see no problem with that. After all, that's what we agents do.

 $What some {\tt professional} \, and \, nonprofessional \, negotiators$ forget from time-to-time, however, is that there has to be something in the offer for all parties. The term "best deal" isn't necessarily synonymous with the term "one-sided deal". One of my favorite observations is that if an agent can figure out how to give each party what they want, they'll hurry up and sign before somebody changes their mind. The opposite of that scenario is a win-lose, wherein one party imposes their will on the other party, without the benefit of any positives for the party who is being imposed upon.

The bottom line here is that buyers and sellers are both entitled to "good deals", whatever that means to them. Good deals are far much easier to come by, however, when both parties can claim victory - no matter how small. In the book Done Deal: Insights from Interviews with the World's Best Negotiators, by Michael Benoliel (Platinum Press, 2005), top negotiators agree on three negotiation components:

• Negotiate from both sides of the table. To be a master

Real Estate Connection

negotiator, you need to come to the table with a clear understanding of not only what your objectives are, but also the other side's interests and goals.

- Map out your strategy. Before entering any negotiation, be aware of all the possibilities that exist. Examine all the options and determine which ones are most likely to help you reach your overall goal.
- Increase your negotiating power. The outcome of any negotiation will not be determined by who has the most total power, but who has the most power that is specifically relevant to the negotiation at hand.

Whether you're buying or selling, it's never too late to bone up on how to successfully negotiate. Learning how to identify what will make the other party happy can make it far easier to achieve that which will make you

I'll be discussing negotiations as well as our local sales production in next week's column and on my weekly radio show, so please stay tuned. Until then, I hope to ...

High Tech Consortium recognizes support from local individuals

By Todd G. Dickson

Through incentives and collaborative efforts, New Mexico is "standing at the crossroads" of a more technologically based economy, according to Stephan Helgesen, director of the state Economic Develop-ment Department's Office of Science and Helgesen, who spoke to the High Tech Consortium of Southern New Mexico at its annual banquet Saturday, Sept. 15, said the state is focusing its efforts on five major technology and business clusters;

- Aerospace and aviation
- Bioscience
- Energy, environment, wind and water Information technology
- Nanotechnology and microelectronics

To make these areas of inquiry evolve into cornerstones of the state's future econ-omy, Helgesen said the state will combine proven approaches - such as tax incentives that have brought the movie industry back to New Mexico – and more collaboration by the state's "leading-edge" educators and entrepreneurs.

These technology clusters are largely composed of "fledgling companies" that are more likely to sprout industries at their birthplaces than to be lured to New Mexico, though that may have to be the "Plan B" in some cases, he said. At worst, New Mexico could pick up some of these industries' "leftovers," Helgesen said.

That's because the state needs to reduce its "brain drain," he said, by stimulating young people's interest in science and technology fields, move them quickly into vocational-oriented training and then provide entry-level jobs after their training.

Also, too often the results of New Mexico's researchers are exporting their advancements to be developed elsewhere, he said.

With improved communications between government departments, Helgesen said the state is seeking ways to capitalize regionally on advancements from its educational institutions, national labs and military research contractors.

For example, say the state supports creating the world's fastest supercomputer, which leases out its use to not only the national labs and university researchers, but also to businesses, which also giving time to public school students.

As Spaceport America construction begins, he said New Mexico also will be looking to be a leader in creating energy independence while streamlining its gov-ernment and developing its plans for sci-ence and technology more from the groundup instead of the top-down.

Helgesen said these changes will make organizations like the High Tech Consortium critical players in an economy less dependent on traditional agriculture and more dependent on the knowledge of its

Along with Helgesen's talk, HTC gave out its annual awards. They were:

Gary Gomes - Technical Achievement of the Year. "With his extensive networking and telecommunications background, he has jumped right into the fray of the technical, economic, social, and political issues surrounding the implementation of broadband in southern New Mexico," said Carolyn Kuhn, HTC president. "He has been instrumental in moving HTC's broadband efforts forward and encouraging local and county leaders to view HTC as an appropriate player to facilitate further study and recommendations for a future broadband implementation.

- Sara Pirayesh Volunteer of the Year. Kuhn said Pirayesh volunteers her time helping HTC get media atten-tion and improving its website, while working full-time at the Arrowhead
- Center.

 Todd Dickson Community Supporter of the Year. Kuhn said Dickson is "an advocate for all things high-tech," future-oriented, and making southern New Mexico a better place. When he puts pen to paper and attends commu-nity forums and events, people know something important is going on."
- Karen Lieberman Educator of the Year. Lieberman recently retired from New Mexico MESA, which Kuhn described as an important organization promoting excellence for teachers and students in math, engineering and science at all grade levels. "Through the efforts of NM MESA, thousands of students and teachers have been able to access innovative, hands-on training at NMSU and in the classroom," Kuhn said.

Getting more southern New Mexico students the opportunity to enter a field of science and technology is the purpose of HTC's new scholarship program in honor of the late Len Sugerman and Lonnie Sumpter, both founding members of the consortium. Kuhn said the longtime spaceport advocates who died over the past couple years believed in the group's mission "to encourage a vibrant high-tech business, research and academic community to enhance the quality of life in southern New Mexico."

"(WAC officials will look at) other criteria to make (the tournaments) a quality experience," Boston said. "We demonstrated we can make it an event and our fans will support it.

The 2007 tournament's success may put Las Cruces at an advantage.

"It was a very hospitable experience, a lot of people enjoyed themselves," Moore said. "Things were very organized. We received a lot of compliments to that effect being offered by the various coaches – they were very complimentary of the city of Las Cruces and the university. I look at that as a positive sign, but then again, you never know, it does get competitive.

To ward off the competition, Boston said the same help received in the last tournament will be needed in 2009 and 2010 tournaments.

"It's a cross-section of lots of people that need to step up to give us the best chance to secure the bid," he said. "We have to put together the best financial package to help us successfully get the bid again. But we're a vear-and-a-half out, and there are a lot of unanswered questions.

The bid was due to WAC officials by Friday, Sept. 21, and officials will meet the following week to discuss the proposals.

IN GOOD COMPANY: CHEEKY BABY

Premier baby store opens in Mesilla

Cheeky Baby translates to cute as a button

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

When it comes to cute and cuddly there is no better place in Las Cruces than newly opened Cheeky Baby. Specializing in baby clothes, toys, furniture and gift items, Cheeky Baby is the city's premier children's boutique.

We've got things that everybody can afford," said Laura Romanelli, who co-owns the store with Christy Saiz. The inspiration for Cheeky Baby came from their experiences as mothers. Saiz has three children, Zack, 4, Braden, 3, and her newest addition 4-month-old Allessandra, while Romanelli has an 8-year-old boy, Nicolas, and an 11-year-old girl, Katriana.

Both moved here from bigger cities and wanted to bring something special to Las Cruces. They agree that Las Cruces is a great place to raise a family and their baby store fits in nicely.

The two get their ideas for the store from research, reading magazines and children's publications.

"We get ideas from what we use ourselves with our own children. What socks stay on the best, just little things that you only know once you have a kid," Saiz said.

"We are able to find things that are different than Target, Wal-Mart, those kind of places," said Romanelli.

The store is beginning to attract more regular customers and the top sellers are their gift items, which can be anything from small toys and stuffed animals to room décor and diaper bags. They also make custom baby shower gift packages, and can make custom children's clothing.

When we order clothes we only order two of each size so that when you come here you are going to get a really unique outfit," added Saiz.

As a new business, Saiz and Romanelli said they are still trying to figure out exactly what brings people in to the store and deal with the sporadic customer attendance. "You go through your quiet times and your really busy times," Romanelli said. "As the town grows I think the shopping areas will grow."

The owners of Cheeky Baby know how hard it is to shop with kids, so they added a kids play area in the store.

Romanelli said the best thing so far about business in Las Cruces is working with the public. "One thing I brag about since I moved here is that everyone is so friendly. People love the store and they are very receptive to us, she said.

Saiz, who is from Phoenix, and Romanelli, from Los Angeles, said they have enjoyed the transition to Las Cruces and are looking forward to the growth of the city and their business. They hope someday to combine Cheeky Baby with Romanelli's own store Cheeky de Mesilla.

"I think the thing that makes Mesilla so unique is the historical aspect, the quaintness of the buildings, you know it's different, it has its own feeling," Romanelli said. "We would like to get more involved in the events that go on. There is a lot of excitement with the things that are going to come

Laura Romanelli and Christy Saiz opened Cheeky Baby to give Las Crucens more options for newborn and toddler clothing.

IN GOOD COMPANY: CHEEKY BABY

What inspired you to go into business

We are both mothers of young children and have grown accustomed to the shopping options afforded in larger cities. Unfortunately, living in a smaller town historically has meant fewer options. We feel that a growing city such as Las Cruces should be able to provide a full range of newborn and toddler clothing and accessories. As we are mothers and deal with our kids everyday; this need spurred us to discuss the idea of a baby store. Eventually Cheeky Baby came to fruition.

What is unique about your business?

We are the only upscale children's boutique in the Las Cruces area. We have a personalized baby registry, maternity items, custom furniture and bedding, and a play area to keep the little ones busy while mom shops! Being a small business, we can offer personalized services that the larger chain stores cannot, to include a personal shopper and free gift-wrapping with all purchases.

Who are your customers?

Our customers range anywhere from the expectant mom to the new mom, as well as, the doting grandmother or anyone with a need for that special gift that sets you apart from the rest.

Where do you see the business in five vears?

We would ultimately like to combine the two businesses Cheeky de Mesilla and Cheeky Baby. This union will expand our business to include tween, juniors as well as hip, affordable clothes for the college students.

What is your business philosophy?

To provide personalized customer service and exceptional products that are affordable for every budget and often overlooked in smaller towns.

What is the best part of your job?

Meeting and getting to know people in the area and helping them find the perfect item whether it be in the shop or special ordering it for them.

How do you keep your competitive edge?

We are the only store of its kind in the Las Cruces/Mesilla area. We offer special gift services like a personal shopper,

Laura Conniff: ARE TOUGH ENOUGH TO WEAR Contributing to a life-changing cause

Board of Regents chair stresses importance of early detection

By NATISHA HALES
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Editor's Note: This is part four of a four-part series introducing the four honorary co-chairs of the committee organizing the New Mexico State University Aggies ARE Tough Enough to Wear Pink fund-raising campaign. Each chair – June Mumme, wife of NMSU head football coach Hal Mumme; Magellia Boston, wife of NMSU Athletic Director McKinley Boston; Laura Conniff, chair of the NMSU Board of Regents; and Pat Sisbarro, vice president of Sisbarro Dealerships – is a breast cancer survivor.

Having the responsibility of chair of the New Mexico State University Board of Regents and being co-owner of a successful real estate business makes it tough for Laura Conniff to slow down.

But when the successful businesswoman was diagnosed with breast cancer in January 1997, she had to do just that, although that's not how she saw it.

"Everybody's got ups and downs," she said. "Breast cancer was just another up and down for me."

Fortunately, Conniff's cancer was detected early and treated quickly. Her mother is a 16-and-a-half-year breast cancer survivor, so Conniff had been getting mammograms earlier than the suggested age.

The support she received also helped her through her experience.

'I was lucky. I had great support from my family," she said. "My husband (John) was as good as you can get in this situation, and we had only been married for three years at the time.

"I had my mom, who already had been through it. My children were not panicked because they had seen my mother get through it."

After several surgeries, the threat of cancer was gone, but Conniff said she still sees an oncologist once a year.

"The pain stays with you a long time," she said. "Any of us can die at any time. It makes you lose your innocence, but it needs to be put in perspective.

"But there are more and more people that are survivors. To me that's the point. There are lots of folks out there that have had cancer and are doing great.

As she regularly contributes to the community, Conniff has also helped several community events supporting cancer awareness and research, but the NMSU Aggies ARE Tough Enough to Wear Pink fund-raising campaign caught her interest.

"I found myself wanting to do everything," she said. "But my time on Earth, regardless of this diagnosis, is

"I helped with a walk for cancer, and I donated money, but there hasn't been anything local that's specific for breast cancer. This is really important to me, obviously because of my association with NMSU. It put the whole thing into a great package."

Conniff attended the NMSU rodeo team's Tough Enough to Wear Pink event and thought it was a great idea when June Mumme, wife of NMSU head football coach Hal Mumme, invited her to become an honorary chair for the campaign.

"I thought it was a great idea to involve this many people," Conniff said. "It's a well-timed event."

Conniff said at the next joint Board of Regents meeting for NMSU and the University of New Mexico, NMSU faculty will provide a presentation about research being conducted.

The money raised during the campaign will go toward breast cancer and women's cancer research conducted by NMSU and UNM through the Cowboys for Cancer Research. "I'm going to challenge UNM to do a football game and donate the money to Cowboys for Cancer Research," Conniff said. "This gives the opportunity for everyone to be supportive.

"I'm very amazed at how successful this has been. If we had more time we could have raised a lot more

Though the money raised will benefit research toward finding a cure, Conniff stressed that early detection is important as well.

"I feel so lucky to have been diagnosed early," she said. "I'm lucky to be able to do all the things I'm able to do now because of early detection." And Conniff does a lot.

As chair of the Board of Regents, Conniff – who has lived in Las Cruces since junior high – is an integral member of the governing body of NMSU. Each governor-appointed board member is responsible for setting policies and procedures, adopting a budget and employment of the president of the university. There are five regents who serve staggered six-year terms and one student regent who serves a two-year term.

Conniff began her first term as regent in 2001 and was re-appointed to her second term in January. She also was chair of the search committee when Michael Martin was hired as president.

Conniff also takes the time to volunteer with other NMSU organizations. She was the first woman to serve as the president of the NMSU Foundation and has been a member of the NMSU College of Business Advisory Council since 1998. She also is a former member of the NMSU

Her day job, however, is running Mathers Realty, which was started 40 years ago by her parents. Conniff has been a licensed Realtor for 26 years and has been a broker for more than 20 years. The company handles full sales and property management of rentals.

"I've been involved in all the aspects of the business," Conniff said. While a student at NMSU, she managed apartments and she is now co-owner and co-broker of the business.

Despite her busy schedule as regent and co-owner of Mathers Realty, Conniff also takes the time to contribute to the community and the state.

She is currently a board member for First National Bank and was a founding member of the Board of Directors of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico. She is a member of New Mexico Amigos, the official goodwill ambassadors for the State of New Mexico.

In addition to all of her other community contributions, Conniff said she feels the need to join the NMSU Aggies ARE Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign because she is a breast cancer survivor.

"I feel incumbent to give back in this manner and raise funds," she said. "It's important we do all we can to get rid of it. It's important for all of us that we get this resolved before our daughters face this kind of problem.'

The Whole Enchilada Fiesta offers fun and food for the entire family

Annual fiesta will host more than 15 bands at the Las Cruces Sports Complex on Sept. 28-30

By JOEL COURTNEY

As the City of Las Cruces roars to life with the start of schools and the return of college students, residents will have a chance to "spice up" that life with the 27th annual Whole Enchilada Fiesta.

The fiesta runs Friday, Sept. 28, through Sunday, Sept. 30, at the Las Cruces Sports Complex, near and around the Meerscheidt Recreation Center on Hadley Avenue.

Included in the festivities will be fun and games for children at Enchilada Land, the eighth annual Rods and Rides Car Show for car and bike enthusiasts, all genres of music from bands that traveled from throughout the Southwest to perform on the event's two stages and much more.

"We try to appeal to a variety of people," said Gary Perez, board vice president for The Whole Enchilada

Headliners from the Spanish and country music scene such as Tobias Rene and the Tony Marquez Band will hit the TWEF Main Stage on Friday night, while tejano favorites Bobby Pulido and Masivo star on the Main Stage Saturday night. Sunday night will feature Whole Lotta Rosies, L.A.'s all-girl AC/DC tribute band, on the Main

Throughout the weekend, Roberto's Stage will feature disco from Fungi Mungle; classic rock by Windy City, Home Grown and the Cadillac Kings; and more from the Deming Fusiliers' bluegrass to mariachi by Mariachi Femenil Flores Mexicanas con Orlando-Antonio Jimenez. Since its first year in 1980, The Whole Enchilada

Fiesta has drawn more than 10,000 people to the area each year, which makes it the largest fiesta of its kind in

In 2006, the fiesta relocated from the Downtown Mall to the Las Cruces Sports Complex to avoid the construction of the Downtown revitalization efforts. In addition to the new location, TWEF also began charging for admission in 2006 to help offset security and marketing costs and to allow the board a better way to count the event's attendance.

"We estimated about 35,000 visitors last year. I think it will be between 40,000 and 45,000 (attendees) this year,"

Seníor Portraíts Portraits - Design - Custom Framing Specialty Photo Finishing 1801 Avenida de Mesilla . 505.52.ARTSY Perez said. "I think people that attended last year will talk well about it."

Entrance to the fiesta is $2 at the gate, except during the Whole Enchilada Parade, when entry is free. Admission in the Fiesta Garden, a 21-and-over section of the event where beer may be purchased, is $5 on Friday and Saturday, and $2 on Sunday.

Although the fiesta begins on Friday evening, the events truly begin at 10 a.m. Saturday with the 27th annual Whole Enchilada Parade. Nearly 50 floats, along with marching bands, vintage cars and horse brigades, will travel from the corner of Hadley Avenue and Walnut Chrost toward Salana Drive A front pring posts and Salana Chrost toward Salana Pring A front pring posts and Salana Street toward Solano Drive. After turning north on Solano Drive, the parade will head toward the end of its route, Apodaca Park.

Parade fans are known for grabbing a spot along the route quickly, so those interested in viewing the parade are encouraged to arrive early.

"The parade is a great opportunity for organizations and persons to showcase their talents and a fun activity that many in our community anticipate each year," TWEF Board President Quent Pirtle said.

The other "big" attraction of The Whole Enchilada Fiesta is the making of the world's largest enchilada at 11 a.m. Sunday by Las Cruces' very own Roberto Estrada, who has been building the massive Mexican dish since the fiesta's inception. In 2000, Estrada was entered into the Guinness Book of World Records for the 10-foot, 5-inch diameter enchilada he created, and he continues each year to spend up to 150 minutes cooking together three 250-pound torti-llas, 75 gallons of red chile sauce, 175 pounds of cheese and 50 pounds of chopped onions at 550 degrees.

Before the behemoth enchilada, at 2 p.m. Saturday a 500-pound organic salad – dubbed "The Whole Ensalada" – will be created by Mountain View Market. Although Guinness lists the world's largest salad as made up of 10,000 pounds of iceberg lettuce, Mountain View's salad will feature 480 heads of organic lettuce along with organic bell peppers, cucumbers, tomatoes, broccoli and red onions. Despite being denied a place in the record books for now, Mountain View Market's Produce Manager Jason Joachim is looking to create more awareness in the community about organic foods and sustainable agriculture through the "ensalada."

Throughout each day The Whole Enchilada Fiesta will host a carnival, as well as vendors selling arts and crafts and a variety of foods.

The fiesta also will feature foot races and a horseshoe and a huacha tournament.

Perez explained that the biggest problem facing The Whole Enchilada Fiesta is the negative image that it received some years back, and the board has since eliminated the board has since eliminated the second seco nated that problem, but is still working on removing the stigma.

"We've had no significant problems with the crowds like we had years ago," Perez said. "The environment and atmosphere has changed over the years. It's not just a big 'beer party.' We're really trying to emphasize the music."

According to Perez, the board has worked hard to make the event one where families would have fun and feel safe bringing their children.

"I would really like people to come back to the fiesta and give it another try. I think they'll be surprised."

'The Other Conquest' shows the painful Aztec conversion

By JEFF BERG
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

"The Other Conquest," originally released in Mexico in 1998, with a short U.S. theatrical release in 2000, is back for another go-round.

Upon its initial U.S. release, it did quite well at the box office, but was buried after the distributor went out of business. But a new distributor uncovered this interesting historical picture and has brought it back to the big screen.

The picture takes place in the 1520s, during a short but violent confrontation in which the invading Spanish are seeking to eliminate the Aztec religion and culture. An accompanying priest attempts to halt the bloodshed without success, and several of the surviving Aztec people are taken prisoner, including a son of Aztec emperor Moctezuma, Topiltzen.

Topiltzen, the keeper of the Aztec codex, bluffs the priest, Friar Diego, into thinking that he is starting to see the light, so to speak, the "light" that these invaders are trying to show through conversion to Catholicism. To prove their "faith," the Spanish claim to be doing all the killing in the name of the Virgin Mary, and to prove that, they tote along a rather life-like statue of Mary wherever they go.

When Topiltzen is tortured by the Spanish, the statue of Mary is there, too, overseeing the event. She/it becomes omnipresent for Topiltzen, even appearing in his dreams and later in a hallucination.

Later, Topiltzen meets Hernando Cortes, who only spares his life because his new concubine is Topiltzen's half-sister, Tecuichpo. Apparently Moctezuma was the father of many.

Then the film awkwardly fast-forwards a few years. Topiltzen is now "studying" under Friar Diego (and with his double-dealing half-sister) to become a man of the cloth himself, while learning Spanish from her. However, it also happens that Topiltzen and Tecuichpo are having an affair, and now she is pregnant.

Damián Delgado stars as the son of an Aztec emperor, Topiltzen, in "The Other Conquest," which opens at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla on Friday, Sept. 22.

Outraged by this, the Spanish toss her in prison, which adds an extra layer of grief to Topiltzen's life.

He has now lost everything – his family, his culture, his religion and his lover. But the omnipresent figure of the Virgin is still with him.

And that is where the title, "The Other Conquest," slips into the story.

For the most part, "The Other Conquest" is an interesting film, with a strong and attention-demanding script. The acting is top notch in general, but there seems to be some skimping on the locations and such. Most of the film takes place indoors, and it shows. Sometimes the sets look like they were meant to be for a play, but the good use of lighting and camera angles does help to give it a better feel. Much attention is paid to the film's details, and the more you know about this time of Mexican/Aztec history, the better off you will be.

All in all, "The Other Conquest" is a pretty decent picture. It conveys its message well — "try to see with your eyes, not your faith" — and gives strength and dignity to a culture that was doing just fine, thank you, prior to European invasion. One can even draw numerous parallels to current military struggles.

Watch the acting, logic out the story and you'll certainly gain a respect of one man's fight against invaders from another world.

P.S. – Leave the kids at home!

"The Other Conquest" is screened nightly at 7:30 p.m., with a Sunday matinee at 2:30 p.m. only. The Fountain Theatre is located at 2469 Calle de Guadalupe in Mesilla.

Jeff Berg loves many little-known movies. Find out more at jeffberg@lascrucesbulletin.com.

A taste of the 'good life'

'Tortilla Heaven' shows miracle food's effects on small town

The CineMatinee film at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla for Saturday, Sept. 22, will be "Tortilla Heaven" (2007, 97 minutes, PG-13, made in New Mexico). This screening will be the southern New Mexico premiere of "Tortilla Heaven."

A tightly knit New Mexico community is unexpectedly thrust into the national spotlight when the face of Jesus Christ appears on a tortilla as the owner and head cook prepares for the Sunday lunch rush. Isidor Navarro is the owner and proprietor of Tortilla Heaven — a modest Mexican restaurant located in the remote town of Falfurrias. Though Tortilla Heaven may indeed have the best food in all of New Mexico, the only people aware of the restaurant are the 72 other residents who live in Falfurrias.

All of that changes one fateful Sunday, however, when the citizens of Falfurrias file into church to pray the Lord's Mass and Isidor steps into the kitchen to make some fresh tortillas.

When the dough that morning proves especially hard to handle, and Isidor curses the difficult mixture before slamming it down on the grill, the Godfearing cook is suddenly taken aback when the face of Christ appears on the burnt tortilla. Of course, in a tiny town like Falfurrias it's impossible to keep a secret, and the very next day curious citizens are filing into Tortilla Heaven to find out if there is any truth to the rumors concerning a divine flatbread.

As Isidor realizes the moneymaking potential of the culinary anomaly and begins to charge admission, worshippers begin to appear from all corners of the state and Tortilla Heaven soon begins to turn a tidy profit. Later, after a series of incredible miracles are attributed to the tortilla, a shady city-slicker named Gil Garcia appears at Tortilla Heaven throwing around such words as "expansion" and "franchising."

It doesn't take much for Gil to convince Isidor to sign on the dotted line, and it's only when greed begins to plague the citizens of Falfurrias that the true miracle comes to light.

A potpourri of movies, past and present, often with an emphasis on life in the West – which could mean the new West, the Old West or anything in between – the CineMatinee series is designed to offer area residents a brief tutelage in various types and genres of film.

At least one film each month of the series will have a "New Mexico connection" – drawing from the vast pool of movies made in the state or featuring a star/story from New Mexico talent.

Unless otherwise noted, CineMatinee screening time is 1:30 p.m., and admission is $3 for everyone except film society members who are admitted free of charge. The theater is located one-half block of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287 or 522-0286.

ASTC starts season with gala

Americana 'Bus Stop' opens Sept. 27

By Joel Courtney

Along with the opening of the 2007-08 season, the American Southwest Theatre Company and New Mexico State University President Michael Martin will hold a Presidential Gala for the opening night of William Inge's "Bus Stop" at the Hershel Zohn Theatre.

The event will serve as an introduction to those who may be unfamiliar with the theater and the shows they offer. Notable guests to the event include Mayor William "Bill" Mattiace and Las Cruces Public Schools Superintendent Stan Rounds, as well as LCPS School Board members Gene Gant and Chuck Davis.

Tickets to the Presidential Gala are $15 and are available at the Hershel Zohn Theatre ticket office, 646-4515. The gala will begin at 6 p.m. with the curtain rising at 7 p.m. Hors d'ouevres will be served, and there will be an extended intermission with coffee and dessert.

According to ASTC Marketing Chair Mike Cook, middle and high school theatre students from throughout Doña Ana County have been invited to the event at the special ticket price of $5 each. In addition to students from the LCPS, children from Gadsden High School, Alma d'arte Charter High School and Mesilla Valley Christian Schools have also been invited to participate.

We want them to see the great work the NMSU Theatre Arts Department is doing and encourage them to become theatre majors at NMSU," Cook said. "NMSU has a very talented staff of directors, set and lighting designers, costumers, writers and actors that provide tremendous opportunities to theatre students. With the staff and faculty, the students, ASTC and other supporters working together, the Theatre Arts Department produces some absolutely outstanding plays and musicals.

For the upcoming season, ASTC plans to get those who have never visited the theater and those who have not visited the theater in a long time to come to Hershel Zohn and enjoy what the New Mexico State staff and students have to offer.

"I want more than anything for people to see these shows and enjoy the wonderful experience that only live theater can provide," Cook said.

Museum wins parade float awards

The New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum received two major awards for its float in the New Mexico State Fair Parade on Sept. 8.

The museum received the Governor's Most Extraordinary Award, as well as the Most Spectacular Award. The theme for the parade was "Ropin', Ridin' and Rodeo: 50 Years of Tingley Coliseum," and the Museum's award-winning float was organized and put together by Shawnna Brown, the executive director of the Farm and Ranch Heritage Foundation.

The large float was pulled by a tractor-trailer rig and included a variety of characters and displays that matched the parade theme. The state's main cultures were represented and other characters included a trick roper, cowboy and farmer, and a tight-rope walker under a striped tent to represent Tingley Coliseum's circus history

Objects featured on the float included a wishing well, a wool-spinning wheel, an 1800s fringe-top surrey that had been used to carry dignitaries in Tingley for many years, an old-fashioned ice cream cart, 10x10 cardboard cutout of Brown's husband, Jim Dewey Brown, riding a bronc and cutouts of Roy Rogers and Dale Evans. Rogers had been one of the first stars to appear at Tingley.

The New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum won the Governor's Most Extraordinary Award and the Most Spectacular Award for its float entry in the New Mexico State Fair Parade.

La Posta de Mesilla

Earliest records indicate the La Posta Compound was originally constructed in the 1840s. Sam Bean and his brother, Roy Bean, operated a freight and passenger service line to Pinos Altos from this building in the 1850s. After the Civil War, the La Posta Compound became an important stop on the Butterfield Stagecoach Line. During the 1870s and 1880s, the Corn Exchange Hotel, one of the finest lodges in the Southwest, operated from the building. John Davis, the proprietor of the hotel, died in the late 1870s. However, his wife, Augustina, continued to operate the hotel, a restaurant and other businesses in the building until the early 1900s. La Posta de Mesilla Restaurant originated in the northwest corner of the building in 1939 by Katy Griggs Camunez. The business has grown to become one of the most famous restaurants in the Southwest, occupying 10,000 square feet of the La Posta Compound, which now includes several shops. After Katy passed away, the prosperity and business was acquired by a great niece, Jerean Camunez Hutchinson and her husband Tom, a.k.a. "Hutch who continue to offer the same quality food and great service in the unique dining environment Katy created.

The restaurant offers many fine traditional "New Mexico" Mexican dishes made from century-old recipes handed down over the years from the Fountain, Chavez and Griggs families. One of their most famous dishes, the "Tostada Compuesta," originated at La Posta in 1939. This dish consists of a toasted corn tortilla cup filled with frijoles, red chile con carne, topped with chopped lettuce, dice tomatoes and grated Cheddar cheese. If you prefer green chile, the "locals" favorite is the sour cream enchilada. This dish consists of corn tortillas smothered with green chile sauce, topped with grated cheddar cheese or monterey jack cheese and sour cream, and includes refritos, rice and our very tasty Mexican slaw. Other La Posta favorites include their compuesta salad, red enchiladas, folded and rolled tacos, beef or chicken flautas, chile rellenos, as well as a wonderful selection of desserts including their very delicious homemade flan and empanadas. Perhaps one of their best kept secrets is their tasty succulent steaks, served with your choice of baked potato, red enchilada, or steak fries, and ncludes a side of their green chile (of course!)

The staff of La Posta welcomes you to Mesilla and hope you enjoy your visit!

FEATURED ARTIST -

Serving as an artist's springboard to success

Jud Wright opens his new gallery to new artists and those 'on the verge'

One thing I have noticed is that most artists don't know how to promote themselves.

JUD WRIGHT,

By JOEL COURTNEY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Those who attended the 2007 ArtsHop were among a select group who were able to experience the newest art gallery in town on its opening night. The Justus Wright Galeria, 925 S. Walnut St., owned by artist Justus "Jud" Wright has become an artistic outlet for its owner and for the plethora of talent in the region.

"I think we had at least 400 people come through the door that night," he said.

Wright has run Del Valle Printing at the Walnut Street location for the past 25 years, but he said that modern advances in the printing world have made this new adaptation possible.

"We've made the change into the digital industry," he said. "Now there are just two or three of us doing what would have been the work of 15 people just 10 years ago."

ago."

Not only have thes technological changes allowed Wright to cut back on staffing, but they have freed up space in the Del Valle building that was used to house machinery.

Wright, who has been creating art in nearly every medium throughout his life, said he likes the idea of having a place to hang his own artwork, but the main purpose of the Justus Wright Galeria is to provide another stepping stone for those artists that are "on the verge."

Wright said he enjoys

Wright said he enjoys interacting with artists because of their fun personalities, but wants to help them take their careers to the next level.

"One thing I have noticed is that most artists don't know how to promote themselves," he said.

In addition to providing this extra push for up-and-coming artists, Wright feels his gallery can help provide an outlet for those just beginning their artistic journey. He is providing one room in his gallery solely for use by area high school students that will be rotated through the schools on a month-bymonth basis.

"I want these young kids to be motivated," he said.

Wright said he began to develop his own artistic style when he was only 14 years old, and when he was 16, quit high school athletics to fully embrace his art. "That's when my style began to evolve," he said. "The way to become successful at anything is you have to sacrifice everything you have"

While attending high school, working for a local printing company and doing design jobs on the side, Wright earned his first gallery showing at Corbett Center at the age of 17.

After graduation, Wright looked into art school in Denver, but chose instead to work for a printing company in the Denver Tech Center as it began to grow. He remembered how corporate employees would eat at the restaurant next door to the print shop and would see the print shop created logos when they passed.

"I still see some of the stuff on TV that I did. I charged $100 for a logo when an ad agency would have charged them $50,000 or $100,000," Wright said.

When his father-in-law, who still lived in Las Cruces, wanted to invest in creating a local print shop, Del Valle Printing was born, and Wright's Printing was born, and Wright's artistic focus left the realm of fine art once again.

Wright continued to create his work throughout the last 25 years, even creating the official poster for the International Mariachi Conference once and also creating yearly and also creating yearly posters of his original artwork for the Catholic Diocese.

Among Wright's body of work is his yearly Christmas illustration, which he admits is a very meaningful time for him.

"I'm really into all the holidays, but Christmas inspires me the most," he said.

The Justus Wright Galeria displays several originals by Wright, as well as prints from nearly all of his work. Also on display through the month of September are fractal images by Maria Kruse, oils and mixed media by Olivia Medina and a variety of work by the students of Oñate High School.

Though the gallery has been open since Sept. 7, Wright said he has plans for something larger in the near future.

"That was just our soft opening, but we will have a grand opening sometime in November," he said.

■ BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

Branigan Cultural Center will host portraits of Salvador Dali by photographer Philippe Halsman and a 13-piece suite of illustrations Dali created for Lewis Carroll's book "Alice Wonderland" through Saturday, Sept. 29. There will be no charge to view these exhibits. Dali created his original interpretations of the 1865 children's classic "Alice in Wonderland" in 1968-69. The print suite was published in 1969. The prints glow with vibrant colors that convey the viewer through Dali's strange, allegorical landscapes. The Halsman photographs, by contrast, evoke Dali's playful, whimsical side. Whenever Dali imagined a photograph so strange that its production seemed impossible, Halsman tried to find the solution and invariably succeeded. Halsman's unique photographic interview, "Dali's Mustache," was published in 1954. In 1958, Halsman was named one of the world's 10 best photographers in an international poll. The exhibition of Dali prints and Halsman photographs come to the Branigan Cultural Center through Blair-Murrah, a service organization that provides a wide range of exhibitions to institutions worldwide. The two BCC exhibits, offering a rare combination of talent, are perfect companion pieces to the "Dali Illustrates Dante's Divine Comedy" at the Las Cruces Museum of Art, running through Sunday, Nov. 25.

■ FARM & RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

The New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum is opening a new temporary exhibit that explores the castas (castes) of New Spain in the form of beautiful prints. "Castas: Emergence of a National Identity" is a collection of 24 framed replicas of portraits painted during the late 1700s in Mexico. The collection depicts the various racial, ethnic, and social castas that made up the society of colonial New Spain as the period was coming to an end. The exhibit, organized by the National Hispanic Cultural Center's Research and Literary Arts, will be on display through Jan. 20. When the Spaniards arrived in the New World, they carried with them a fascination about race. New Spain was home to many different ethnic groups, and the Spaniards developed a complex racial and social class system known as the castas. The paintings produced primarily during the 18th Century attempted to show the different combinations made possible by the intermixing of the various ethnic groups. The paintings typically show a couple along with their child (or children), including an inscription that describes the ethno-racial make-up of the family. The paintings illustrate more than a concept of socio-economic structure. They also examine daily, Spanish colonial life - how people dressed, types of occupations performed, what foods were eaten. Moreover, the collection is a tribute to "mestizaje," or the blending of various cultures. The concept of castas was never fully accepted and developed after the Spanish Colonial period, yet its influence can be traced in some of the attitudes and perspectives emerging from that time. The portraits are a celebration of the many groups that have contributed to creating a common heritage. The museum is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information, call 522-4100.

Raul Dorn's subterranean highway our community. Most of us rely on literal subject matter, including myself – nouns rather than verbs. Raul Dorn, an abstract artist, has a series of paintings up at the White Raven Studios that are worth contemplating and enjoying. An added aspect of this artist's "oeuvre' is that he is articulate about it. Artists ought to be able to express their ideas verbally and Dorn does it pretty well. "Imagery slowly emerges from rapid under-painting, as if up from the water table beneath the surface of experiences. The painting begins to collapse the past and present, knowledge and innocence, consciousness and sub-consciousness ... behind the visible."

The paintings at the White Raven are dealing with pure artistic questions. They reference his inner landscape in signs most of us feel familiar with. Encapsulated in this idea of the internal journey, one would, metaphorically speaking, have to find gas, food and lodging along the way. Dorn's paintings exert a tremendous fascination to this viewer, stemming from the artist's pictorial language and his authentic innovativeness. There are large flattened shapes of radiant color, juxtaposed cheek and jowl with black linear directional line, confidant and winding, or broken and chopped to small remnants, like skid marks or directional pathways. As if a "rest stop" comes the arabesque, lovely and repetitively graceful. Along the journey one senses the occasional U-turns and wrong ways leading in circles and finally bringing the eye back to the thematic highway. In these works, it becomes apparent that Dorn approaches his real greatness origin, much like channeling or meditation. The rewards are then invigorating, sustaining and cleansing." Words spoken by a man who finds time every day to paint in his simple studio, chiseling out his sacred hour from a day packed with social and economic demands. Dorn is the Visual Arts teacher at Alma d'arte Charter High School. He is also the father of a high-speed 5-year-old boy and a nearly grown teen-age son and spouse to Tauna Cole-Dorn, adjunct professor of Foundations at NMSU and an artist in her own right.

"This painting process often shifts me to a higher vibration, or centered

The essence of these paintings is coloristic brilliance and confidant mark making. The abstracted subject matter leaves much room for interpretation; one senses Dorn's attempts to broaden the mind and refine the spirit of the viewer with his gestural shapes and lines. These compositions generate thought and become catalysts to think things that you haven't thought before; feeling a bit of the trance state one finds oneself in when navigating a long open highway.

If anything could be improved it would be the small task of leaving behind his use of dressmaker pattern tissue in some of his collage work. This particular effect is overused among newer artists, and has become somewhat of a cliché, especially considering the wealth of acid free tissue weight papers now available to artists for collage. It's the whole notion of authenticity and avoiding clichés that we must constantly challenge ourselves with. There may be some resonance in using found materials but this one is ready to be lost again.

One more thought about "authenticity" would be that, after touring the galleries at ArtsHop recently, there seem to be a sub-set of artists who rely on formulaic and "old saw" motifs, which leave the viewer with a hunger for more authenticity, more originality from what they see. How many more Guatemalan children or big sky sunsets do we need in the world, or for that matter, in Las Cruces? C'mon, it's the new century! Move on from sentimentality and hackneyed subject matter, it's so ... done-already.

While you visit White Raven, you will find the "lone creature" sculptures of Ohio artist, Natalie Wetzel, well-crafted and amazingly innovative. Also showing is a selection of remarkable lithographs and mixed-media works by a nationally known artist, Sloat Shaw, from Massachusetts whose work echoes Dorn's theme of "bridging the path between our world that we acknowledge, and the hidden world that we just glimpse in our dreams." (Shaw)

"Gas Food and Lodging," paintings of Raul Dorn, hangs at White Raven Studios, 425 W. Griggs Ave, through Oct. 19. The gallery is open from noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. For more information, call 525-9543.

An angry opponent Saturday

JOHN KEITH Sports

There is nothing more hostile, I am told, than an angry rattlesnake.

You might ask Jared
Kaufman, the punter on New Mexico State's football team. He hunts rattlers for fun.

Hal Mumme, the Aggies' coach, broached the subject during his Monday press conference. "He (Kaufman) picks up rattlesnakes in the desert to shock his friends," Mumme said. "He said the main thing is to get one that is laying around and is not mad.

"I guess I feel like we're messing with a mad rattle-snake at Auburn Saturday."

"They have not come alive offensively yet," Mumme confirmed. "I'm kind of hoping they won't against us.

Dangerous or not, NMSU and Auburn te it up at 5 p.m. in Auburn, Ala.

"They (Auburn) all can run and they are big, strong and fast," Mumme said. "T'm sure they don't know much about us. They probably think we're a third world team. That we're Division 1AA. They probably can't even pronounce Las Cruces.

For sure, Aurburn has watched game tapes of NMSU's 29-24 victory over UTEP last Saturday. They saw the Aggies hike their record to 2-1 despite an inconsistent performance. Mumme's team dropped two touchdown passes, missed two field goals, one at point blank range that could have sealed the win, yet they were persistent enough to triumph over the young but talented Miners.

We overcame our ability to choke," Mumme said. "I'm serious. We could have choked with all the bad things that happened."

He gave the Aggies' defense credit. Three fourth down stops, one close to NMSU's goal that forced UTEP to settle for a field goal. It was probably NMSU's best defensive showing since Mumme and his staff were hired in 2005.

Asked if he partied hard following the game, Mumme said yes, he did. "Until 4 a.m. I spent most of the time on the telephone talking to Leach (Mike, Texas Tech's coach and a former Mumme assistant at Kentucky.)

"He called to congratulate us. He thinks Mike Price (UTEP's coach) is one of the best coaches in America. I do

For Lindsey Yon, it was not to

Could have been, but two years of volleyball at Texas A&M failed to click. Call it a bad marriage.

Not to worry, however. After long deliberation, eventually landed on her feet as the outside hitter at New Mexico State.

New home, new life.

From playing two years at A&M, her No. 1 dream choice, to NMSU, a school she never considered following a celebrated career at Ronald Reagan High School in San Antonio, Texas.

"When I made my official visit here last summer," Yon said, "Kim (Oguh), Briana (Akrie), Anna (Callis) and Alice (Borden) showed me around the campus. Things just clicked. I knew this is where I wanted to be."

For Aggie coach Mike Jordan, the second time was a charm. He first tried recruiting Yon after her storied prep career. No deal. You was sold on A&M.

She enjoyed her freshman year there. Played often, performed well. The future looked bright indeed.

Until suddenly her life turned sour with the death of her mother, Debra Yon, who lost a long battle with cancer. It was a devastating experience for her.
"She

"She was my best friend," Lindsey said. "I went back to A&M for my sophomore year but my heart was barely in it. I didn't get to play much and my coaches weren't very encouraging."

At mid term
Yon withdrew from school and thought about quitting volleyball for good.

Jordan, who had discovered her departure, e-mailed her to see if she might have a renewed interest in the sport. "I didn't want to talk to anybody then," Yon said. "I had accidentally broken my arm and I was wearing a cast. That didn't

"But he (Jordan) mentioned that he had talked with my mother when he first recruited me out of high school. That he thought she was a nice person and that he was sorry about her death. That impressed me.

Mayfield to face Manzano Saturday

By Craig Massey

While one team is working to fine tune its passing game, the other must wait to see when its passing leader will return.

The Las Cruces Bulldawgs and the Mayfield Trojans return to action this weekend and both face challenges in the passing game.

The Bulldawgs play host to Los Lunas Friday night at 7 p.m. at the Field of Dreams, while Mayfield plays Manzano at Albuquerque's Wilson Stadium at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday. Oñate took on Hobbs Thursday night after enjoying a 34-14 win over Silver City last week.

Las Cruces enters Friday's contest with a 3-0 mark after defeating Sandia 27-13 last week. In that game, running back James Hall rushed for 185 yards on 22 carries and quarterback Dante Caro added 136 yards on the ground. The passing game, however, accounted for only 77 yards and that has head coach Jim Miller somewhat concerned.

"We're running the ball well, averaging 320 yards per game," said Miller. "But we didn't do a good job in the red zone (last week) and we missed some opportunities. We're going to have to throw the ball better.

Las Cruces faces a 1-2 Los Lunas team that is coming off of a win over rival Belen. Their losses were to Sandia and La Cueva.

They have a lefty (quarterback) who likes to throw deep," said Miller. "They have a 3-5-3 defense and they're real aggressive with a lot of stunts. They're improving so it will be a tough ball game.

The Trojans, who saw their state-leading 28-game winning streak snapped two weeks ago, bounced back with a narrow 11-6 win at Carlsbad last week. They played without starting quarterback Matt Sandoval in that contest and he will likely miss Saturday's game, and maybe even next week's contest. The Trojans

The American Volleyball Coaches Association/CSTV released its poll on Monday with New Mexico State ranked

The Aggies, who are 10-2 overall and opened up Western Athletic Conference play with sweeps over Fresno State and Nevada, gained 115 total points to get the No. 25 ranking. Head coach Mike Jordan was happy to hear the news

"I think we're capable of playing at a high level and we're certainly a top-25 caliber team.

We've been there before, but being a top-25 team doesn't guarantee wins, Jordan said.

This is the second consecutive year NMSU has reached the top-25, getting as high as No. 21 in 2006. They finished the vear at No. 23.

The Aggies' only losses came at the hands of No. 1 Nebraska and No. 7 Texas. NMSU is one of only two Western Athletic Conference teams to currently be ranked.

NMSU will host No. 13 Hawaii on Saturday.

Pink is in at New Mexico State

PETE Petes Ponderings

When the hubbub started last spring at a rodeo, ole Pete became curious about this 'wearin' of pink' trend that seems to be sweeping through Aggieland. The rodeo team showed they cared about cancer awareness by givin' to the Cowboys for Cancer research folks.

I've had wind of those ropers for a long time, Rawlie Jackson and the Calhouns have been two of the fundraising trail bosses for many years and all they have done is good for the

Now coach Hal Mumme and his son, like all good Aggies, love a rodeo. Coach's better half June is right there with them on that and when they saw the good being done by the ropers and riders it reminded June of an event she helped put together back in the bluegrass state of Kentucky. After some checking, June found out that NMSU was among the world's leaders in developing a way to detect the initial stages of breast cancer and hopefully finding a cure

She saddled up with Magellia Boston, school regent Laura Conniff, Pat Sisbarro and some other good ladies in putting together a night at the football stadium that has become known as "NMSU Aggies are Tough Enough to Wear Pink." That is coming up, Sept. 29, when Arkansas-Pine Bluff comes calling.
Aggie researchers Doc Jeff

Arterburn and Doc Charles Shuster are the men who feel they are on to a means of finding out what causes the cancer cell to appear in women. The same chemical can be used as part of the approach to stopping it cold. They have partnered up with the UNM cancer research hospital to cowboy up so they can put this side winder of a disease down, hopefully for

Other schools have done similar events with women's Olympic sports but there hasn't been a school that has put it front and center on the major stage of a Division I football game. Ole Pete hopes this will be an event that grows and grows 'til these types of calls to duty aren't needed anymore because medical science has whipped this cussed disease and made it a distant memory.

What can Aggie fans do? Come to the game and bring a friend who needs to know about breast cancer awareness. They may not be die hard football fans, but the more folks that know to check regularly for the existence of the disease means more have a chance to survive it, just like Mumme, Boston, Conniff and Sisbarro have. Surviving breast cancer is more than a slogan for those fine ladies, it is something they have lived. Coach Hal will be sportin' a pink towel and it will be the perfect complement to his game day attire.

Aggie train moving forward with time

Football program on track

JACK NIXON

Iack's Corner

The victory over UTEP last week is another lurch forward for the momentum of the Aggie football program. I see this progression as being similar to the journey of a long

It is likely some of you have never ridden a train but it goes like this. You leave the station with kind of a jolt as the massive machine starts down the track, you pick up a little speed gradually as you chug through the yard past the other trains and eventually you are heading down the rails with real momentum and power toward the rest of your journey.

It takes a locomotive more time because of the size of the load it is pulling. Like a Division I football program, there is much that must be carried along to make it all work. The attitude of the team, support from fans, corporate dollars and the seal of approval from the administration all have to be on board or the train won't make it past the first tank town on the route. Similarly moving a football program from mediocrity in the Sun Belt to the first division in the WAC takes rate, no one stands in its way. The Aggies are picking up that momentum now that their diesel has left the steam engines on the side rails. The second half of the UTEP game showed a sharpness of focus that arrived just in time. Two conference wins last year over teams that had beaten NMSU in the initial season in the WAC showed the locomotive was starting to pull the massive load a little faster. The team's defense made two fourth down stops against a Miner running back that had been unstoppable the week before versus Big 12 opponent Texas Tech.

Like that 40-ton luxury liner, the momentum will continue to slowly increase with the likelihood that there may be some momentary lags while refueling or moving up a steeper grade. I can remember watching Nebraska football in the early 1960s, tickets weren't hard to get and their steam engine was on the short track to frustration. A new conductor named Bob Devaney arrived and the train started down the track that was built for an express not a local.

Last week, conductor Mumme sounded the whistle versus the Miners as the train rolled into open country. Get on board now and you can ride in the "dome car" to get the best view, don't wait or all that will be left is caboose

Live AggieVision off to a great start at New Mexico State University has successfully launched AggieVision, an aggressive endeavor to produce and distribute 43 live athletic events during the 2007-08 academic year.

Already, AggieVision has produced and distributed five

All 43 live events will be distributed to Comcast Entertainment Television (CET) for telecast in four major New Mexico markets (Las Cruces, Albuquerque, Santa Fe and Gallup), while Time Warner cable in El Paso will also carry all events live. AggieVision has also secured deals with two major regional sports networks, as Fox Sports Net Arizona and Altitude Sports & Entertainment will carry selected games live and on a delayed basis. With the distribution to all four entities, AggieVision reaches 12 states and over eight million subscribers, including 175,000 Comcast subscribers in the state of New Mexico, 5.4 million Altitude subscribers, 2.5 million FSN-Arizona subscribers and 120,000 Time Warner El Paso subscribers.

Comcast Entertainment Television (CET) also replays each event at 2 p.m. the day following the live telecast, giving additional opportunities for NMSU fans to watch the games. Available on Channel 4 in the Las Cruces area, Comcast Entertainment Television (CET) provides local programming exclusive to New Mexico and unavailable on satellite television.

"AggieVision presents an enormous opportunity for our student-athletes, coaches and teams to showcase their talents, the university and the Las Cruces community," NMSU associate athletic director Steve Macy said. "Using the collective talents and skills of various university resources, we have created a mobile productions unit that not only supports live athletic events, but the entire university."

AggieVision's live events feature university branding and imaging messages, including inside looks at various university departments, research projects and personnel. The mobile productions unit also handles all production and distribution of coaches' shows.

Chris Williams, NMSU's wide receiver, was named Western Athletic Conference Player of the Week following the Aggies' 29-24 victory over UTEP last Saturday.

Chris Williams named WAC 'Player of the Week'

Receiver gained 212 yards and scored twice in Aggie win over UTEP Miners

New Mexico State wide receiver Chris Williams, Hawaii linebacker Solomon Elimimian and Boise State kick returner Rashuan Scott were named the Western Athletic Conference offensive, defensive and special teams players of the week,

Williams, a junior from Rio Rancho, N.M. (Rio Rancho HS), caught eight passes for 212 yards and two touchdowns in New Mexico State's 29-24 win over UTEP. In the fourth quarter, he scored both touchdowns with an 82-yard reception and a 59-yard reception, the latter being the game-winner. The 212 yards are the sixth most by any player in the nation this season. His seven touchdown receptions on the year are tied for the fifth most in the country.

Elimimian, a junior from Los Angeles, Calif. (Crenshaw HS), led the Warriors with a career-high 14 tackles (7 solo) in Hawaii's 49-14 win at UNLV. He had one and a half tackles for a loss in helping to hold the Rebels scoreless for a stretch of more than 48 minutes during the game. Hawaii is second in the WAC and 34th in the nation in total defense allowing just 313.7 yards per game.

Scott, a senior from Henderson, Nev.

(Green Valley HS), returned two kickoffs for a 36.5-yard average in Boise State's 24-14 win against Wyoming. In the fourth quarter after Wyoming had scored a touchdown to make it 21-7, Scott took the ensuing kickoff 52 yards to the Wyoming 40-yard line to help set up a Bronco field

Also nominated on defense: sophomore cornerback Kyle Wilson, Boise State; junior defensive end Jason Roberts, Fresno State; sophomore defensive tackle D'Anthony Smith, Louisiana Tech; junior linebacker Joshua Mauga, Nevada; and senior linebacker Dante Floyd, New Mexico State.

Other special teams nominations: senior punter Kyle Zimmerman, Fresno State; junior punter Tim Grasso, Hawaii; junior kick returner Weldon Brown, Louisiana Tech; and junior place kicker Brett Jaekle, Nathan Enriquez, who usually starts at the Trojans' "slash" position, took over at quarterback against Carlsbad and scored on a 4-yard touchdown run.

"Nathan did a good job," Bradley said. "It was his first game at quarterback from start to finish and he executed well. We don't really have to change much of the offense with him in there.

Bradley said he knew Carlsbad would provide a solid challenge for his team. The Cavemen returned 34 seniors.

"They ran the Aggie Air Raid offense and it's the first time we've faced that," Bradley said. "I thought we did a pretty good job defensively."

Mayfield faces a different challenge in Manzano, a squad that has depth and talent at the running back position. The 3-0 Monarchs have defeated Oñate, Del Norte and Valley.

"They have two excellent running backs who are capable of putting up big numbers," he said. "Their running backs are similar to what Clovis has. They're a scary team."

Another challenge for the Trojans will be having to play an afternoon game on the road. Bradley said the team will travel to Albuquerque Saturday morning.

After the loss to El Paso Montwood two weeks ago and the struggle against Carlsbad, the second-year coach is also concerned about the cohesiveness and leadership of this year's team.

"We haven't played great defense up to this point," said Bradley. "We need to execute better on offense and defense. We haven't been on track since the Clovis game. We just need to try to get better every week and make sure our attitude and leadership improve. If it doesn't, we'll be an average football team.

Lindsey Yon prepares to spike the ball.

Yon

When I came, I knew right away this would be a good fit."

So here Yon is, leading the Aggies with 178 kills prior to Thursday's match with Utah State. Despite her right arm that is still mending. "It hurts every time I play," she said. "And I still don't have the strength I had in high school. But it's getting bet-

She is looking forward to playing 13th ranked Hawaii at 7 p.m. here Saturday. The Aggies, 10-2 before Thursday's match, hope for a healthy turnout

"She (Yon) is a competitor," Jordan said. "She plays hard. Good shot blocker, too. She knows the game well.

"Next year, after her arm is completely healed, I look for greater things.

"She gets along with everybody here and she definitely seems happy.'

A house-hunters dream

A versatile floor plan, style and efficiency at 1926 El Presidio

This is a Southwest

rustic looking home

that you would find in a higher price range.

FARRELL THURSTON

Homebuilder

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

When shopping for a house in Sonoma Ranch, some may find this golf course community a bit pricey. However, this Farrell Thurston home at 1926 El Presidio has all the luxuries at a price that doesn't stop the heart.

With 2,262 square feet, four bedrooms,

With 2,262 square tile throughout and imported, rustic style Mexican counters and cabinets, this home combines great style with affordability.

The home begins with a covered front porch and courtyard. The first room can be used as a formal dining area or perhaps a game room, and has a Venetian plaster fireplace for added luxury.

"I can see a pool table in this room. At least that's what I would do," said Farrell Thurston, owner of Farrell Thurston Construction and Thurston Realty. "Our theme is to give people more choices."

The home is complete with a built-in speaker system that plays music in the dining room, living room, master bedroom and backyard patio simultaneously.

"You see a lot of features in this home that you find in more expensive homes, such as the speaker system throughout the house. Built-in entertainment systems usually add $15,000 to a home, here it only adds about $5,000. And I could probably tell you that it's more energy efficient than other houses in this price range," Thurston said.

The spacious and bright den or family room shares its space with the kitchen and is complete with a 3000

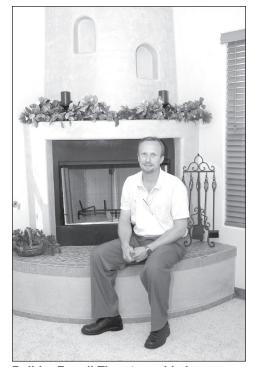

Lumen Projector.

"My favorite feature is the den and the kitchen area because every thing is right there. You've got a real nice large den, about the size of a twocar garage, right next to the kitchen and breakfast nook. It's a great spot to entertain and to be with the family," Thurston said.

The kitchen is any cooks dream with a huge pantry, exceptional cabinet space, including windowed cabinets to display some of your finest dinnerware, and Onyx solid surface counter tops which "look like stone but are easier to maintain."

The house has a Southwest theme throughout with authentic Mexican cabinets in the kitchen and both bathrooms. Along with these stylish imports, a beautiful hand crafted Mexican mirror in the bathroom adds a touch of luster. "This is a Southwest rustic looking home that you would find in a higher price range," Thurston said.

Builder Farrell Thurston added many luxuries to 1926 El Presidio that you would find in a higher price range.

The master bedroom is spacious and bright. Its many windows flood the room with light. The master bathroom is something to rave about with a 6-foot jetted tub, walk-in shower, rustic light fixtures and a double vanity with a makeup table. The master closet has two shelves and is about half the size of a normal bedroom.

"This is a real nice energy efficient home with a lot of features you would find in custom homes like the arches, the tub, and the plant shelves."

A certified Energy Star home, 1926 El Presidio was made with a Manabloc plumbing system, which provides homerun distribution of water. "It's like a circuit breaker for your plumbing. It's an energy saving feature. It saves the amount of water it takes to get hot water," Thurston said.

Style, efficiency and a versatile floor plan add up to a home hunter's dream at 1926 El Presidio.

"It is important to have something that looks nice and performs well without a sky-rocketing price," Thurston said. "It's a really great home at a really great price."

Is your bedroom a good place to rest?

Too many nights of poor sleep have a cumulative effect, creating a health condition called sleep deprivation, which ranks right up there with poor nutrition and insufficient exercise as the basis of many serious health problems. The mind and body do not shut down during sleep. This is the time when the brain consolidates the day's learning into memory and improves the ability to learn repetitive skills. During sleep, the body does its maintenance work, replacing old cells with new ones and regenerating organs and muscles. The work that sleep allows during the night is vital for you to function optimally during the day. Stress, clumsiness and constant fatigue are a few of the symptoms of sleep deprivation.

Surprisingly, the culprit may not be the number of hours you are sleeping, but the environment in which you sleep. According to the Better Sleep Council, "sometimes bedroom decor just is not enough." Some tips to consider for a good night's sleep is a bedroom temperature between 60-65 degrees and a dark room that will not allow the rising sun to stimulate the brain and disrupt your best hour of sleep before you plan to awaken. And finally, your mattress should meet your needs for ideal support and comfort.

The proper mattress, though often a neglected element, is a critical factor in determining a peaceful night's sleep.

Sleeping environment may encourage sleep deprivation

How do you buy a mattress? The selection of more than 11 stores in Las Cruces should make your buying easy. A trained sleep consultant in those stores is most qualified to help you select the ideal mattress to meet your needs. Mattress dealers spend a lot of time keeping up with the latest technologies, understanding the physiological aspects of comfortable sleep and acquiring the highest caliber products to offer their customers. During the selection process, consider firmness, comfort, mattress size, most suitable pad, frame and the best value to fit your budget. Because it's useless to test a mattress without stretching out, curling up and testing different sleeping postures, a sleep specialty store is the place to feel most at ease while trying out beds.

The primary focus is on the mattress and the size, shape and level of firmness to fit your needs. Many people are unaware that by the time the mattress is noticeably worn out, their bodies have already suffered the consequences. The foundation may no longer serve as a shock absorber. What may have been comfortable and supportive five or 10 years ago may no longer be your healthiest choice. It is important to re-evaluate your mattress set annually, rather than depending on the warranty to decide when to make a change. The warranty period is concerned with product defects and workmanship mistakes, not gradual changes in physical requirements. Some helpful hints for prolonging the life of a mattress are the proper rotation and know that vacuuming is the preferred way to clean a mattress.

Nowhere is the adage "you get what you pay for" more appropriate than in the purchase of good quality bedding. Here are four simple steps to keep in mind when buying a mattress.

First, lie down. Sitting on the edge of a bed offers no indication of the comfort or the support you will experience. Test the mattress in your usual sleep position, using a pillow if you normally sleep with Second, bring your partner. Both sleep partners should try out the mattress. Side sleepers should check for sufficient cushioning of shoulders and hips. Too hard a surface causes a buildup of pressure points, restricting circulation and causing tossing and turning.

Third, buy the best mattress you can afford. You will spend a third of your life on this new bed. The benefits you receive from a good night's sleep will affect the way you look, feel and perform during the other two-thirds!

Fourth, give equal attention to the accessories. A new sleep set should be placed on a sturdy bed frame with a center support. A mattress pad is necessary to keep the mattress clean.

As for sheets, the higher the thread count, the better the pad. Proper spinal alignment includes the right support for you head and neck. Throw out dusty old pillows and go for goose down, the most supportive and longest-lasting pillows. Once your bedroom passes the goodnight's sleep test, you are ready to welcome the morning!

Manual to assist emergency preparedness

Techniques offered to stabilize adobe buildings during flooding emergency

The National Center for Preservation Technology and Training (NCPTT), an agency of the National Park Service located in Natchitoches, La., awarded Cornerstones Community Partnerships, the Santa Fe-based historic preservation nonprofit, a grant to produce the first emergency flood-mitigation manual geared to adobe architecture. The manual will assist emergency pre-paredness teams, homeowners and contractors in the stabilization and recovery of storm-damaged earthen buildings and homes in the western United States and the Mexican border region.

In response to last summer's disastrous flooding in southern New Mexico, Cornerstones developed techniques to stabilize and recover adobe buildings soaked by flood waters. During the 2006 summer monsoon season, heavy rains breached arroyos and severely damaged or destroyed sections of southern New Mexico towns and cities. One of the hardest hit was Hatch. Nearly 400 homes in Hatch were damaged when waisthigh water poured into the town. Because first responders to the emergency, as well as homeowners, had no idea how to stabilize severely watersoaked adobe walls, Hatch citizens approached Cornerstones for advice. Cornerstones is nationally recognized for its expertise in assessing, restoring and maintaining historic earthen architecture. Cornerstones' work in Hatch pointed to the need for a manual to address the problems facing flood-damaged earthen build-

"We are very pleased that the NCPTT is partnering with Cornerstones in the creation of this vital tool for storm mitigation on adobe," said James Hare, Cornerstones' executive director. "Cornerstones is essentially the only SWAT team for disasters related to adobe structures. We are thrilled to have the opportunity to pass on our expertise to communities who need to respond quickly and effectively to this kind of crisis.

The manual is the first of its kind to focus on disaster conditions affecting adobe buildings. Many publications address a variety of disaster mitigations, but none specifically deals with adobe. The storm damage to buildings in southern New Mexico revealed a need for the dis-semination of technical information to regions where adobe architecture is prevalent. The preservation of cultural landscapes is at stake. Most of the damaged homes in Hatch date to the early twentieth century and feature adobe construction distinctive to the Southwest. Because many Hatch residents did not know what to do when floodwaters invaded their houses, they abandoned their homes and moved into FEMA trailers. This type of response precipitates the loss of whole streetscapes of vernacular structures, causing the character of an entire town to change and threatening the survival of cultural landscapes that define the region.

Cornerstones' manual arms homeowners and contractors with procedures for emergency response and stabilization, helping people to recover and preserve their flood-damaged homes and increasing the likelihood that cultural landscapes will remain intact.

Last year NCPTT, whose mission is to advance the application of science and technology to historic preservation, launched a special research initiative in response to damage done by hurricanes Katrina and Rita. The aftermath of those devastating storms brought to light a need for further research into mitigation of storm damage to cultural resources. Cornerstones' manual uniquely responds to NCPTT's special initiative by focusing on adobe buildings. The grant monies from NCPTT will support not only the preparation and publication of the manual, but also its dissemination to homeowners and contractors throughout the Greater Southwest.

Making dreams a reality

Builder Dale Schueller looks to the future

I think Las Cruces

will continue to grow and self sustain.

DALE SCHUELLER,

Homebuilder

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

Dale Schueller has been building homes in Las Cruces since he attended NMSU, in fact it's what put him through college. He received his degree in industrial engineering, and as of today has been building in Las Cruces for 32 years.

"Las Cruces has been good to me," Schueller said. "Engineering plays an active role within the profession of building so there are certain things that I have brought from the classroom to the business."

His company, Schueller Homes, builds new homes, additions, and remodels older homes around Las Cruces. They also do framing for other building companies as a subcontractor.

"We have our own framers, painters and trim people instead of sub-contractors. These people are basically in-house, which I think makes a better product," Schueller said.

As a co-developer of Sonoma Ranch, Schueller says that he has put much of his effort into its development. He considers it to be his biggest accomplishment in the city.

"I think it's a really excellent addition to Las Cruces and a first class community," he said. "Sonoma Ranch and Boulders on the Green have received numerous awards on the national and international level for design and product quality."

Schueller is the builder/manager of Boulders on the Green, a 55 and over active community in Sonoma Ranch. This golf course community features luxurious retirement living and award-winning architecture.

"I enjoy making peoples dreams their reality," he said. "We offer a full range of choices and work with the customers to create a home that is unique for them, and we do it all on a very personal level. The owner is very hands-on."

Schueller says the most rewarding part of his job is customer satisfaction. A member of the Las Cruces Home Builders Association, each year Schueller estimates that he builds 60 homes in Las Cruces.

"Pointing back to Sonoma Ranch, that is a fairly large contribution to the community," he said. "The building industry is constantly changing and is in a constant state of flux. It is my desire to complete the dreams of my clients, so the hardest thing is finding different things to accomplish that."

"We are a growing community and I think a good friendly community," he added. "I think that Las Cruces will continue to grow and self sustain. I look forward to the potential of the Spaceport, the expansion of White Sands Missile Range and Fort Bliss. I think those are good things. I think NMSU is a great school and offers lots of opportunities for those who attend."

Schueller is also co-owner of R&D Electric, and co-manages three restaurants in Ruidoso – Casa Blanca, The Texas Club and Western Grill – with his partner

Builder Dale Schueller says there are great things in the future for Las Cruces. On the left, Schueller's partner Brian Padilla, on the right, Dale Schueller and Schueller's sister Pam Terpenning

Brian Padilla. He also owns a body shop here in town named Mike Day's the Body Works. He says collecting cars is his vice, and he owns three fully restored GT500s, and several other "Ford muscle cars."

Still, his love for cars falls low on a long list of priorities. "I have an active four year old and right now that is my focus," he said of his young daughter. He attributes his success to the support of his parents, his wife, and the community in general.

Schueller's son, Kyle, just graduated from NMSU with a bachelor's in mechanical engineering and the majority of his family are NMSU graduates, including his wife. His son, along with Padilla, has a business in Las Cruces called L.E.D. Visual Solutions.

"We appreciate Las Cruces and the opportunities it has presented to us, and we are happy to give back to the community and proud to support NMSU and Las Cruces"

Make kabobs for easy grilling

Skewers allow versatility

By BETHANY CONWAY

Summer will soon turn to fall and mowing the lawn will be replaced by raking the leaves. So why not celebrate what summer is left with your barbecue grill and a few friends? When it comes to grilling, it's essential to have the tools to keep the grilling experience enjoyable and fun. Kabobs are perhaps the easiest grilling idea, and can be made successfully with skewers and just a few simple steps.

What is it?

Barbecue skewers, found just about anywhere, come in a variety of materials and lengths. There are flat, extra wide, double-prong, nickel-plated, stainless steel or just simple wooden skewers. Today there are even flavored skewers that make this easy meal even simpler. The size and type of skewer should be chosen based on the amount and type of food you intend on cooking.

How do you use it?

Kabobs are easy to prepare. Simply spear the item with the skewer and continue until the skewer is full. It helps to soak wooden skewers prior to using them.

Kabobs can be made with just about anything you can be added as well.

Dust off that peroxide bottle

H2O2 can be used for more than disinfection

By Natisha Hales

Usually brought out from under the sink to disinfect minor cuts and scrapes, other uses of hydrogen peroxide (H2O2) are numerous.

The weak acid, though it appears colorless, is actually a pale blue liquid that was discovered in 1818 by Louis Jacques Thenard. Since then, low concentrations of hydrogen peroxide have been used to bleach, disinfect and even deter fungus on fish and fish eggs.

The household bottle of hydrogen peroxide is a low concentration of the acid, usually 3 percent, and is usually

If the bottle of hydrogen peroxide is hardly used in the home, here are several ways to put it to use.

1. Whiten whites. Using a cup of hydrogen peroxide in a load of white laundry instead of chlorine beach will still whiten your clothes. However, use caution, and don't pour the liquid directly on the clothes.

2. Whiten teeth. Gargle with a teaspoon of 3-percent hydrogen peroxide solution for five to 10 minutes. Not only will the solution kill germs and bacteria that grow in the mouth, but it will act as a whitener as well.

3. Disinfect household areas. Soak a toothbrush in 3-percent hydrogen peroxide between brushing so that illnesses aren't spread and bacteria does not thrive on the

4. Wash meat. Using salt and hydrogen peroxide in cold water is a good way to remove harmful bacteria and viruses from fish, chicken and other meats.

5. Keep vegetables fresh. Washing vegetables in a solution of salt, hydrogen peroxide and water will clean vegetables thoroughly and keep them fresh. Spraying a solution of 1/2 cup of water and 1 tablespoon of peroxide also will remove harmful pesticides.

6. Remove blood stains from carpet and clothing. A few tablespoons of peroxide poured onto a blood stain will remove the stain in minutes. Be careful of the color of the fabric, as hydrogen will act as a bleach. 7. Protect plants. Using hydrogen peroxide in a watering solution for plants can enhance root development and treat root rot.

8. Remove finger and toenail discoloration. Soaking hands and feet in a hydrogen peroxide-water solution will remove any yellowing from finger and toenails.

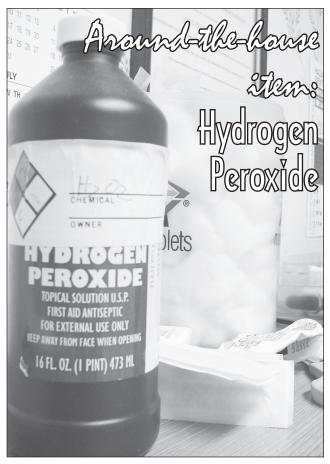

9. Sanitize public drinking fountains. To ward off potential illnesses from using a public water fountain, pour some hydrogen peroxide on the spout and let it sit for a few seconds. Turn the water on and wait about five seconds before drinking it.

10. Clear up acne. Dab hydrogen peroxide onto skin two to three times daily, and the acne will dry up.

11. Remove wax from ears. Flush out wax buildup by pouring a few drops of hydrogen peroxide into the ears. Tilt the head and let it sit for a few minutes, then flush the ear out with warm water.

12. Bleach hair. A 3-percent solution can be used to bleach human hair, which gave birth to the term "peroxide

13. Clean wounds. Peroxide can also be used as a medical solution to clean wounds and remove dead tissue.

Hydrogen peroxide, though widely used to treat minor cuts and scrapes, has many other household uses.

Red, white and drunk all over!

Author takes readers on a wine journey

A favorite (free) e-newsletter to which I subscribe is that of Canadian-born Natalie MacLean (nataliemaclean.com), an internationally acclaimed accredited sommelier who is classy, sassy, witty and downright brilliant.

Natalie is also the author of the book, "Red, White and Drunk All Over: A Wine-Soaked Journey from Grape to Glass"

(Bloomsbury USA; reprint edition, 320 pages paperback) available Oct. 16 in major bookstores and online. The book was recently chosen the Best Wine Literature Book in the English language at the Gourmand World Cookbook Awards. The competition receives more than 6,000books from 60 countries each year.

It's not a wine for dummies kind-of-book or a how-toguide but rather, Natalie explains on her website, "... stories about wine - tales that I hope will both entertain my readers and also teach them a lot." Natalie's tales include the night she worked as an undercover sommelier at a five-star French restaurant to "appreciate what good wine service is in a restaurant. That mainly involved dripping very expensive red wine on white linen tablecloths and guessing - with conviction - at wine matches for haute cuisine. I felt this would make for far more interesting reading than just listing 20 things you need to remember when choosing from a wine list.

Natalie also rolled up her sleeves to pick grapes "for a marvelous and nutty winemaker ... under a blistering hot sun. Then back at the winery, I became one with my subject; essentially, a human grape: sticky, purple and completely crushed." (At the 2007 World Food Media Awards in Australia, Natalie was named the World's Best Drink Writer. The competition received more than 1,000 entries.)

"Red, White and Drunk All Over" appeals to two groups: beginners "just starting to learn about wine . and to the already

"knowledgeable ... who will enjoy reading about the inside stories about people in the international wine world." It will also appeal to members of wine clubs to give them new ideas for themes, tastings and discussions and to those traveling to

Now back to Natalie's classy and clean (no ads) website. Everything you wanted to know about pairing wine with food is just a mouse click away. The site also includes articles, wine and food job postings, and upcoming wine festivals and tastings. Visitors can watch or listen to TV, radio and podcasts that cover a range of topics from pairing wine with food to "The Five Toughest Foods on Wine," which she describes as "problem children of cuisine" - salad and vegetables, spicy dishes, take-out and frozen food, cheese and chocolate.'

I invite you to spend an evening navigating Natalie's nifty site while sipping a glass of vino and savoring Sexy Baked Olives & Feta Cheese and/or Hot-n-Spicy Shrimp (recipes below) - it's an unforgettable wine-soaked journey indeed.

Sexy Baked Olives & Feta Cheese by Chef Kathy Casey

Level of difficulty: easy

French feta is a mild, creamy cheese and is really my favorite to use in this recipe. I serve this in the same iron skillet I use to make the dish. This recipe can easily be multiplied for a large crowd. Natalie suggests Cabernet Sauvignon New World (red) or Verdelho (white) for this spicy appetizer.

3/4 cup mixed imported olives, not pitted, drained (do not use oil-cured olives)

1/2 teaspoons chopped fresh thyme

1 teaspoon minced lemon zest

1/8 teaspoon dried red pepper flakes 1/2 teaspoon fennel seeds

1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil

1 thick piece (3 1/2 to 4 ounces) feta cheese

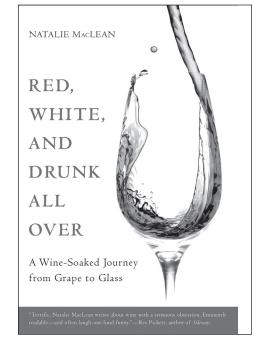

In a small bowl, toss the olives with the thyme, lemon zest, red pepper flakes, fennel seeds and olive oil.

Lightly oil the bottom of a small 4- to 5-inch ovenproof skillet, such as cast iron.

Place the cheese in the center of the pan, then top with the marinated olive mixture. Use a rubber spatula to get all the goodies out of the olive-tossing bowl and onto the cheese. Some olives will stay on top of the cheese and some will fall to the side. At this point, you can cover and refrigerate the skillet for up to 1 day. When ready to bake, preheat oven to 400

Bake the cheese and olives for about 10 to 15 minutes or until cheese is soft and gooey. Serve immediately, right out of the pan, with slices of rustic bread, crostini, pita or pita chips. Serves 5 to 8.

Chef Kathy Casey is a food, beverage and restaurant concept consultant and food writer. She owns Kathy Casey Food Studios, a consulting and special events venue and co-owns with husband John Casey her café and specialty food concept, Dish D'Lish®. This recipe is from Dishing with Kathy Casey: Food, Fun & Cocktails from Seattle's Culinary Diva, Sasquatch

Natalie MacLean's awarding-winning book, "Red, White and Drunk All Over: A Wine-Soaked Journey from Grape to Glass" will be available in major bookstores on Oct. 16.

Hot-n-Spicy Shrimp by Chef Mary Beth

Level of Difficulty: Easy

1 pound of 21-25 count shrimp (preferably Wild American Variety) 6 tablespoons of Old Bay Seasoning

2 tablespoons of

Worcestershire sauce 3 teaspoons of regular Tabasco

(can use the fiery brands such as Habanero) Water to cover shrimp, brought to a boil

4 tablespoons of Old Bay Seasoning 2 tablespoons of salt

Bring the water to a boil and add the 4 tablespoons of Old Bay Seasoning and 2 tablespoons of salt. Add the shrimp until cooked. They are cooked when the shrimp turns pink. Do not overcook. Remove from water, drain and let cool. When peeling the shrimp leave the tails on. Devein the shrimp using a de-veiner.

Add the rest of the ingredients together: the 6 tablespoons of Old Bay Seasoning, the Worcestershire sauce, the Tabasco and chill until the shrimp are cool. Serve. If you like it a little spicier, add more Tabasco or Old Bay. Serves 4
