Ancient Canyon

"Ancient Canyon," artist Tony Pennock's water-tank mural, was painted in early 2014. It's located at the end of Sedona Hill Parkway, off Sonoma Ranch Boulevard. Pennock is best-known for his water-tank murals, but his art is far more expansive and wide ranging. See the full story and more photos of his work on the Arts and Entertainment cover, page 21.

Program links students with partners to learn practical, life skills

news release

As part of a new Las Cruces initiative that connects classrooms with community partners, more than 350 students at Lynn Middle School are learning life and academic skills by making recycled projects, which will be showcased to the public through a virtual gallery starting March 17.

Working with Lynn art teacher Stephanie Preciado-Shelton and consumer science teacher Tif Valles and other community instructors and supporters, the Lynn students are creating a range of self-selected projects that use recycled materials, with many projects focusing on blankets for Mesilla Valley Community of Hope or a recycled art and fashion show, titled "Lynn Middle School Virtual Showcase (Student-led Recycled Art, Fashion and Media)."

The project is the first school-based program to launch through Community Partners in Education (CPE), a grant-funded initiative working to improve educational outcomes by connecting teachers and students with knowledge and resources from the community. CPE initiatives include CommunityShare and Hazlo (www.hazlo-foundation.org), which connects students with mentors, tools and funds to complete projects chosen by individual students.

CPE is coordinated by Cruces Creatives, Las Cruces Community Schools and CommunityShare. It is funded by Las Cruces Community Schools and the Stocker Foundation.

Through the work of making and documenting their projects, students are learning and using skills like geometry, integrated language arts and product lifecycle design, as well as skills like how to paint, sew, fix zippers and buttons, recycle paper and make and use natural dyes.

"People are thinking students aren't learning in this environment," Valles said, but the student projects "showcase all the amazing things kids are doing."

Community members can support the project in several ways:

- Sharing skills and knowledge with students by signing up on CommunityShare Las Cruces (www.communityshare.us/las-cruces/), a nonprofit, free-to-use platform that connects teachers with community members who can support education.

- Donating prizes for students.

To coordinate a material or prize donation, contact CPE Community Engagement and Education Coordinator Abby Nayra at a.nayra@crucescreatives.org.

Las Cruces Utilities to Resume Compost Pickup

By Cassie McClure

Las Cruces Utilities (LCU) resumes its free residential and commercial distribution of its Class A+ compost, which had been paused due to COVID-19. Residents can receive five buckets per trip, and while they are encouraged to bring their own buckets, empty and filled buckets are available for pickup. However, residents are asked to wear masks and social distance when they arrive at Jacob A. Hands Wastewater Treatment Facility (JHWWTF).

LCU's "black gold" compost contains micronutrients like zinc, manganese, copper, and boron – all beneficial for plant growth and sometimes lacking in local soil, even in the fertile Rio Grande Valley.

LCU Crew Leader Wastewater Anthony Archibeque gets more buckets of Class A+ biosolid compost ready for customers. With Dona Ana County in the yellow zone, LCU can help residents get their gardens ready for spring with free compost.

The compost is produced at JHWWTF, resulting from solids removed from the wastewater treatment process. The dewatered biosolids are transported from the JHWWTF and dried on a five-acre cement floor at the LCU West Mesa Wastewater Treatment Facility. The compost "cooks" at a temperature of 131 degrees Fahrenheit to kill off harmful bacteria.

Residents can pick up five-gallon buckets of compost from the JHWWTF, 2851 W. Amador Ave., during regular business hours. If residents need more than for a normal-sized garden plot, perhaps for farming, truckloads of compost can be pick up from the compost facility directly at the LCU West Mesa location and loaded with a front loader.

For both the Amador and West Mesa locations, please call the JHWWTF at 575-528-3597 to set an appointment for pickup.

Las Cruces Police Department

A 13-year veteran of the Las Cruces Police Department, Community Liaison Officer (CLO) Aaron Glymph, uses his position to interact and build relationships with people from all walks of life in the Las Cruces community.

"Being in this role allows me to touch people's lives and improve our community. I really enjoy connecting with people and hearing their stories," Glymph said.

Part of his role as CLO entails involvement with the city's Weed and Seed and Teen Connection programs. Weed & Seed was started as a U.S.

Department of Justice Grant program, but it has evolved into more than an after-school and summer program for at-risk youth.

The program now includes mentorship, educational, nutritional and life-skills assistance for entire families, positive daily interaction with law enforcement officers and support services for the community. The program serves children kindergarten through high school and has expanded in recent years to a separate program for middle school and high school students called Teen Connection.

Glymph said he has had opportunities to be involved in other volunteer activities close to his heart. He has either run or biked in more than 20 Law Enforcement Torch Run for Special Olympics events. Glymph had the honor to be chosen to run the Special Olympics torch through Austria in the Law Enforcement Torch Run for Special Olympics Final Leg of the 2017 Special Olympics World Winter Games.

The Habitat for Humanity 911 build initiative is another activity in which Glymph has actively participated. First responders volunteer each year to help construct several Habitat for Humanity homes, working alongside the families building and receiving the homes.

Glymph is a Mayfield High School graduate and has served on the LCPD Honor Guard, as a DARE instructor at Alameda Elementary School and as a member of the Organ Mountain Technical Rescue Squad. Glymph has a passion for the outdoors and wilderness.

Aggie sports seasons like no other

About a year ago, on a nice February Saturday, as I was driving near the New Mexico State University campus, I said, "I should go to Presley Askew Field and check out the Aggies' baseball team and their star, Nick Gonzales."

Then I looked at my to-do list and said, "Better not. I can go later in the season when it's a little warmer."

Alas, the season was soon canceled, along with all other sports, and nobody could watch — or play — any games for a long time.

Live sports are back for NMSU, but not on campus, or anywhere in New Mexico. Here's an incomplete review of what you've missed, what all of us — except the teams, and maybe Jack Nixon — have missed.

VOLLEYBALL*RICHARD COLTHARP

From the Publisher

The Aggie women's volleyball team, as of this writing, are undefeated 7-0 on the season, all conference games. That 7th victory was the 500th for Coach Mike Jordan. It feels like Jordan and his exciting teams have always been a bit underappreciated, so it's bittersweet he hit this milestone with no Aggie fans to watch.

PLAYING ON SUNDAYS

There's a common phrase you hear from sportscasters during college football games on television: "This kid's going to be playing Sundays," a reference to a player being good enough to go to the NFL, where games are played on Sunday.

Well, this year, the whole Aggie football team is good enough to play on Sunday. To be specific, Sunday, Feb. 20. NMSU played a "home" game at UTEP's Sun Bowl, hosting Tarleton State, a Texas team. It wasn't a joyous return to the field for the Aggies, as they lost 43-17, but after more than a year without being able to play a game, the athletes were just grateful to get back to doing what they love to do. They get to do it again in the Sun Bowl 3 p.m. Sunday, March 7, against Dixie State.

AGGIE BASKETBALL

Last fall, the Aggie basketball teams trucked west to set up camp in the Phoenix area, after the governor shut things down in New Mexico. Basically, they've become permanent road teams, and being nomads with no home-court advantage is difficult, to say the least. The Aggies finally found another "home," playing at Eastwood High School in El Paso.

Due to COVID-19 issues, both the men's and women's teams have had to cancel or postpone games. The Aggie men have had to call off eight games, and the women, five. The Aggie women are 5-10 on the season, and the men are 6-6. Having a losing conference record is not like Aggie men's basketball, but after their last three losses, they've come back the next night and avenged the loss. If they could win the conference tournament, they could still make it to the NAAs.

As weird as this year has been, the only thing we can expect is the unexpected.

Best and Worst of Times

It is the best of times. Calving at its finest. The calling of those chosen to tend God's creatures. To take part in simple miracles. To alter the balance of life on earth by one small addition.

It is the worst of times.

Calving in the midst of a winter when one needs a depth finder to see the top of the market. When it is less worrisome to lose oneself in the task of daily responsibilities easing the burden of birth,

BAXTER BLACKOn the Edge of Common Sense

than thinking about the price of next fall's overcrowded weaner crop.

A dilemma, some would say.

But does knowing the decreased value of beef make a cowman think less of that heifer in trouble or that new calf layin' in the straw? Does her dollar price somehow affect her value as a creation? As a work of art planned, worked on and created by a cowman, a cow and God?

Does the price of a first-calf heifer affect a cowman's responsibility to her well-being? Does his effort, concentration and skill decrease when she's calving as the market price decreases? Does he try harder to get a live calf if she's worth more at the sale?

These questions are best answered not philosophically or hypothetically, but in reality. At 3 a.m., when you hook the chains to newborn feet and start to pull, does cost cross your mind? When you rub the calf down and push him under her flank, do you see dollar signs?

When you gaze over the field and see cows grazing contentedly while calves chase each other around 'em, do you get a good feeling? Smile maybe and relax for a moment, thankful all is well. Or are you too occupied with their price to appreciate what you're seeing?

The dilemma I'm presenting really isn't much of a problem for most cow people. The calving barn is a long way in time, miles and thought from the auction ring.

After all, we tend to our flocks in bad weather, hard

The high cost of saving money on full display

Everybody loves deregulation, until their kid gets sick from drinking the water.

And for good reason. Deregulation is always good for business, at least in the short term. Dumping toxic chemicals into the river or onto the ground is always going to be better for the bottom line than safe treatment and disposal.

And it's not just business. Government has found deregulation is a surefire way to increase its own "efficiency." The superfund site at Griggs and Walnut in Las Cruces was the result of cleaning solvent used by the National Guard being dumped on the ground.

A 2013 email from an official in the Michigan Treasurer's Department predicted that switching the Flint water supply off the Detroit system would save as much as $300 million in the next 25 years.

No state has embraced deregulation as tightly as Texas, and no person has extolled its virtues as loudly as its former governor, Rick Perry, who for a precarious two years and nine months was in charge of protecting the environment for our entire nation.

Which is why Texas is the only state in the nation with its own energy grid. If they were connected to the national grid, they would have to abide by the national regulations. Their way has been a lot more profitable for the energy companies and cheaper for the consumers, until it got cold.

A winter storm swept across the country last week, causing traffic problems and icy sidewalks in other states, but it knocked out the Texas power grid.

Gov. Greg Abbott responded by going on Fox News and blaming the Green New Deal. He is now calling for an investigation of the ironically named Electric Reliability Council of Texas, which oversees the power grid, to determine what went wrong and ensure it never happens again.

Here's my prediction. They'll discover what went wrong is they didn't winterize the system, even after a similar storm 10 years ago provided ample warning they needed to. And the way to prevent it from ever happening again is by winterizing the system.

But, here's the hard part, that's going to take government mandates, not recommendations.

Like all issues involving government, regulation requires a balance. I'm not saying more is always better. Consumer reporter John Stossel has made a cottage industry of exposing ridiculous government dictates.

City and county managers have to always be vigilant for both corruption and arrogance within their inspections and regulations divisions. Bribes to government inspectors are a hallmark of corrupt regimes.

Beyond outright corruption, the regulatory process is often more adversarial than need be for those wanting to invest in a new business.

Business interests

should be considered in any regulatory decisions, but they can't take priority over health and safety.

Getting the balance right requires having different voices at the table. That clearly is not happening in Texas, where the last Democrat to win a statewide election was former Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock in 1994. I'm not sure if it's happening in New Mexico either, where Democrats hold all statewide offices.

There is a heavy cost when we get it wrong. As I write this, at least 58 people have died in the storm. It is expected to cost as much as $50 billion to rebuild. President Joe Biden has declared an emergency, releasing federal funds to help pay for recovery in the Lone Star state.

It's time to end New Mexico's lobbying secrecy

By SEN. JEFF STEINBORN

As I begin my 13th year as a legislator, I have seen New Mexico achieve progress on many important issues. Regrettably, one area where we continue to resist reform and lag behind other states is the need for full transparency regarding the role of lobbyists and those who hire them in the legislative process.

We continue to have a system where most lobbying activity and funding spent by companies and special interests to effect legislation are not disclosed to legislators or the public. This lack of disclosure contributes to critical information not being known by decision makers while policies are being made. The system invites corruption.

I often describe the job of a legislator as being a detective. While voting on bills, legislators must figure out the true purpose and effect behind each piece of legislation, often left wondering which company, industry or organization is behind it. Not knowing these details prevents elected officials and the public from effectively doing their job to properly scrutinize each proposal.

Because lobbyists do not always make their role known in creating legislation and advocating for or against policy, the true significance of a piece of legislation is often obscured. To quote an old expression, "Show me your friends and I'll show you who you are." Understanding the context of a bill is extremely important to understand its purpose and effect.

New Mexicans deserve better. With a $7.4 billion annual state budget and the lives of our citizens and children on the line, we need to put all information on the table regarding the legislature's decision-making process. It's time for New Mexico to follow other forward-thinking states and require full disclosure of all lobbying activity and money spent influencing policy. Fortunately, this session we have several pieces of legislation that can accomplish this and improve the transparency and performance of the legislature.

Senate Bill 314 would require lobbyists and their employers to report on every bill and official action they lobby on, and Senate Bill 311 would require them to disclose the total amount of money spent lobbying policymakers.

If enacted into law, these reforms would, for the first time, enable us all to see exactly which companies and interest groups worked for or against a piece of legislation or policy, and the money spent doing so, and gain a better understanding of who is pulling the levers of power in our state. This knowledge would in turn lead to improved decision making, public participation and accountability.

Diverse states across America, both Democrat and Republican, have enacted these reforms. The governor and the Independent Ethics Commission have joined the call for disclosure of lobbyists reporting all bills they lobby on.

It's time for the Legislature to give New Mexicans the information we need to make the best decisions for our future.

When the Senate Rules Committee considers SB311 and 314, I hope we will finally put the interests of New Mexicans first and create these powerful new tools of transparency and governmental effectiveness.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A look at bias

To the editor:
I am sad for my hometown Las Cruces. I have been on a two-year journey. It began after I witnessed disdain from city councilors, from the dais, to our unique community and historians. After visiting the council, I decided to find out just what fueled this disrespect that I and Armando Limon, of Mesilla, chronicled in letters to the editor.

We both saw right through the tautology-filled rhetoric disguised to allow discrimination. We saw a curious “Western” themed slanted view of history, except instead of George Washington we had Pat Garrett the bad guy, murdering people for fame, wiping out the buffalo, etc. These “cultural proficiency” experts chose to ignore wife Apolinaria Gutierrez Garrett and daughter Elizabeth Garrett, who wrote our state song. I remember back at IHM Catholic school doing a book report on her. Now those three are out.

Implicit bias has been soundly debunked: by its creators in 2015, by four psychological community meta-analysis in 2017 and by a decisive meta-analysis in 2019, which concluded that it “should not be used to inform public policy.” What should have been heralded in 2017 and again in 2019 was that the notion that all white Americans being inherent racists was proven false.

My search has brought me to Las Cruces Public Schools: In 2019 the anti-discrimination policy was modified to include the discredited “implicit bias” and also “cultural proficiency curriculum.” Stuningly, regarding cultural proficiency, I found out that implicit bias is its bedrock to this day. These simply do not belong in an anti-discrimination policy.

I am requesting the anti-discrimination policy immediately be changed to the previous version, the one where Dr. Martin Luther King had invoked Lady Justice to ask for a color-blind society. Sadly, it is not that way now.

Create public bank

To the editor:
The Bank of North Dakota was created in 1918. It was in the middle of a giant Wall Street swindle starting with creating the Federal Reserve Bank, followed by WWI, rampant debt creation in the economy, followed by a massive banking crash in the 1930s. The extremely wealthy became even wealthier. Basically, it’s the same scenario we have experienced since 1998, when the Glass/Steagle Act was repealed.

Glass/Steagle required bankers to run honest banks instead of casinos to fleece the middle class. Since 2000, we’ve had a replay of 1910-1930. The Bank of North Dakota has cruised honestly through the whole sordid swindle and been profitable and honest. The proposed New Mexico public bank is modeled on the BND. So, naturally, our bankers don’t want honest competition. So, they’re against a public bank for New Mexico. It would provide honest banking to all our business community. We need honest bankers, and the public bank would make that possible.

Disney imagineer joins Virgin Galactic team

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH
Las Cruces Bulletin

With preparations underway for the first future astronauts to arrive at Spaceport America, Virgin Galactic has brought in Joe Rohde as a strategic advisor to help design and guide the overall experience.

Rohde is Virgin Galactic's first experience architect, bringing more than 40 years' experience from Walt Disney Imagineering where he led projects that transformed the image of Disney's iconic experiences and attractions. According to a Virgin Galactic press release, the work he is starting will “stimulate curiosity, guide the imagination and anchor the Virgin Galactic customer experience with purposefulness and meaning.”

Rohde recently visited New Mexico for the first time and, from Spaceport America, spoke about his initial thoughts for a short video as he starts his journey to develop the experience.

“When I was born, there was nothing in the sky except stars,” he said. “I have seen the entirety of the history of space unfold across my lifetime.”

As someone who has spent his career working with the transformational power of adventure projects, Rohde said those experiences can change people.

“This is one of the most profound things that can happen to you,” he said of the Virgin Galactic space experience. “To go to space and look back at the earth is a spectacular opportunity with huge potential for transformational change in a person.”

Rohde said this particular location in southern New Mexico has two powerful draws. It's at a powerful juncture in time. Having been here with cultures passing through back as far as can be measured, it is also the place from which new history is going to begin.

“It's very rare to be a person who gets to be in the place, at the time when history begins,” he said. “What Virgin Galactic is doing is democratizing space travel has reached a moment where it is about to enter history. It's happening right here in New Mexico.”

Rohde called it a “machine for epiphanies, activism and social action that is producing heroes.”

With grant, NMSU, DACC partner on engineering pathway

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

The Two- to Four-Year Pathway for Successful Transfer And Retention (STAR) of Engineering Students is a relatively new partnership between New Mexico State University and Doña Ana Community College to serve a common objective of getting more engineering-bound students into NMSU classrooms and successful, high-paying careers.

The STAR program got a five-year grant of nearly $1.25 million from the National Science Foundation beginning April 1, 2020 — shortly after state public health orders forced NMSU to extend spring break by a week and begin online learning for most courses.

The pandemic kept the STAR program from reaching its original enrollment goal of 30, said NMSU Engineering Professor Muhammad Dawood, Ph.D., but principal investigators from DACC and NMSU were able to recruit an initial cohort of 15 students, including many who received needs-based scholarships of up to $10,000.

“The connections we’re making for DACC students with faculty (at) NMSU and beyond, and the contacts NMSU has with industry that DACC may not have in engineering” are even more important benefits of the program, said DACC Dean of Science, Engineering and Mathematics Joe Butler, who also is the community college’s acting vice president for academic affairs.

A recent online cohort meeting was “really rewarding,” Dawood said, because it showed STAR students are “just so excited to be there.”

“I thought this program would be a good fit for me because I would love to further my education,” said STAR student Paige Martin, who is majoring in aerospace and mechanical engineering at DACC and wants to become an aeronautical engineer. “I believe this program will benefit me when applying for internships and job employment because I will have the best help getting one.”

Another STAR student,

Kurt, plans to transfer from DACC to NMSU this fall and change his major from general engineering to electrical engineering. He heard about STAR from Program Coordinator Anja Hansen.

“I think this program will benefit me the most with internships while in school and job hunting when I graduate,” he said.

PAIGE MARTIN

I think it will positively impact my time here at DACC and NMSU.”

Another STAR student is a chemical engineering major at NMSU who wants to become a professional chemical engineer and astronomer. STAR “is going to connect me with other students who are in the same field and we can grow together as professionals,” the student said. “I believe this program will benefit me when applying for internships and research programs during my career because it shows I am a student who can fit into diverse activities and getting my tasks done with responsibility.”

“It’s a treat to listen to someone say, ‘Oh gosh, this came along at exactly the right time,’” Dawood said. It’s really, really a great opportunity.”

STAR’s goal is to bring

“I am also looking forward to the mentorship they offer in this program, about 100 students into the program during a five-year period, he said. It is targeting students who spend at least one semester at DACC and could complete a four-year engineering program at NMSU with financial assistance and guidance.

STAR includes 26 faculty who provide mentorship to participating students, Dawood said. Third- and fourth-year engineering students also act as mentors. The NMSU College of Engineering provides participating students with internship opportunities to gain experience and knowledge in the industries in which they hope to become employed, including aerospace, chemical, civil, electrical, mechanical and other engineering fields, he said.

With a bachelor’s degree in engineering, a graduate could go on to earn $60,000 or more a year working locally or across the country for a national laboratory, a defense contractor, the military, a private company or another employer, Dawood said.

Students who transfer from DACC to engineering-related technology programs at NMSU and choose to go into the workforce “don’t have any difficulty getting positions,” Butler said. “Those are jobs in our community now.”

“We are very passionate to see our students succeed,” Dawood said. “The opportunities are huge.”

To continue instruction during COVID-19, Dawood said some instructors have “gone way beyond to create online labs” while face-to-face instruction isn’t possible.

Scholarship funds that STAR students receive can be used to pay for books, lodging, tuition and other expenses, Dawood said.

“We need to get people to benefit from these grants,” he said.

For more information, contact Hansen at 575-646-5234 or anjah@nmsu.edu, Dawood at 575-646-5498 or dawood@nmsu.edu, and Butler at jrbutler@nmsu.edu. Visit www.star.nmsu.edu to apply and for more information.

PetSmart grant to assist with spay/neuter, vet care

BULLETIN REPORT

One of the most common reasons pets are surrendered to shelters is lack of affordable veterinary care. Due to cost and other barriers, pets in under-resourced communities often do not have access to basic care like spay/neuter services, vaccinations, dental care and other medical and preventive care.

With a $40,000 grant from PetSmart Charities, the Spay Neuter Action Program (SNAP) and Doña Ana County Humane Society (DACHS) are collaborating to support pets and pet owners in need of these services through DACHS' Animal Relief Fund and SNAP's spay/neuter vouchers.

"This has been a challenging year for all of us," said Julie Miller, SNAP board president. "With the help of PetSmart Charities, SNAP will be able to continue our mission of helping spay and neuter pets despite the pandemic. As of January 2021, we are proud to report more than 23,000 animals have been spayed or neutered through our program since 1998."

"With poverty levels in our region well above the national average, we know how hard pet owners in our county work to make ends meet," said DACHS Executive Director April Anaya. "With support from PetSmart Charities, families in need are able to access life-saving medical care for their pets and not be forced to make tough decisions, like surrendering their pets to already overcrowded shelters and rescue organizations."

SNAP issues vouchers to qualifying low-income individual and families in Doña Ana County to get their family dogs and cats spayed/neutered at a free or reduced cost. Visit <https://snapnewmexico.org/> or call 575-524-9265. On Facebook, visit www.facebook.com/spayneuter

DACHS serves as an advocate for animals and their owners in Doña Ana County to maintain an environment of respect, responsibility and compassion through education, legislation and leadership. The organization is committed to reducing animal overpopulation and defending abused animals. Visit www.dachslc.org, call 575-647-4808 or email dachslc@gmail.com. On Facebook, visit www.facebook.com/DonaAnaCountyHumaneSociety.

Since 1994, through its partnership with nearly 4,000 humane societies and pet rescues across North America, PetSmart Charities has helped more than 9.5 million pets to find loving homes via its in-store adoption program in more than 1,650 PetSmart stores. The leading funder of animal welfare also has donated more than $451 million to positively impact communities, to connect people and pets, to help preserve families and to improve access to veterinary care through initiatives like the one with SNAP and DACHS.

House passes bill to toughen human trafficking laws

By WALTER RUBEL

Southern New Mexico
Journalism Collaborative

Legislation to toughen penalties for the perpetrators and provide protection for the victims of human trafficking passed on a 63-3 vote Monday, Feb. 22, in the state House of Representatives.

House Bill 56 would change the crime of human trafficking from a third-degree felony to a second-degree felony if the person being trafficked is age 18 or older or a first-degree felony if they are younger than 18. It would also ensure that victims forced into prostitution could not be charged with a crime.

"It takes the criminalization of the victim out of the process," said cosponsor Rep. Liz Thomson, D-Albuquerque. "Right now, if you are trafficked for sex work, you can be prosecuted. And we don't want the victims to be further traumatized."

Thomson said the in-

creased penalties were needed to match the severity of the crime.

"Under our current statutes, there are worse punishments for trafficking in drugs than there are for trafficking in a human being," she said.

The bill would also expand the definition of human trafficking to include anyone "harboring, maintaining, patronizing and providing people for such purposes." And it expands the definition of coercion to include physical restraint or the threat of physical restraint.

It would also include human trafficking under state racketeering laws, meaning it would cover forced labor beyond prostitution.

"It's not just sex crimes, it's labor crimes as well," Thomson said.

Perhaps the most controversial part of the bill involves changes to who would be required to register as a sex offender. Under this bill, those who entered into conditional discharge agreements in the past would now be required to register as sex offenders for the first time.

Rep. Moe Maestas, D-Albuquerque, who cast one of the three "no" votes on the bill, said the retroactive aspect of the provision makes it a violation of the court agreement entered into by all parties in the case.

"The government can't do stuff retroactively," he said. "The judge, the defendant, the attorneys on both sides all left the courthouse knowing that person was not going to have to register."

Conditional discharges are only available to defendants with no prior felony convictions, at the discretion of the judge. The defendant must complete a series of conditions established by the court to avoid formal conviction.

The state Law Offices of the Public Defender (LOPD) argues in the fiscal impact report on the bill that it would take discretion away from the court.

"The proposed change in the law would tie the district court's hands and require sex offender registration — which is onerous, stigmatizing, and can last for 10 years or life, even in the most sympathetic cases," LOPD said.

Cosponsor Rep. Georgene Louis, D-Albuquerque, said that change was needed to provide clarity and reduce ambiguity as to who was required to register.

The bill now moves to the Senate for consideration. A similar bill passed unanimously in the House last year but did not get a hearing in the Senate.

Also under consideration this year is House Bill 73, which would require Internet filters to block websites known to facilitate human trafficking or prostitution; or display child pornography, revenge porn, or obscene material that would be harmful to minors. It is awaiting its first hearing in the House Consumer and Public Affairs Committee.

Raising the American flag at base camp on the Kuwaiti border.

Las Cruces veteran was part of Desert Storm front lines 30 years ago

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

Thirty years ago, then U.S. Army Staff Sgt. Kevin Dasing and other members of the Third Armored Cavalry Regiment based at Fort Bliss in El Paso were on active duty in the Persian Gulf, part of Desert Storm, the coalition led by the United States that drove Iraq out of Kuwait.

The Gulf War began Aug. 2, 1991, when Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein ordered the invasion of Kuwait, claiming it as Iraqi territory. Dasing, who retired from the U.S. Army in 1994 and is now commander of Disabled American Veterans Chapter 38 based in Mesilla, and other members of his Fort Bliss regiment shipped out less than two months later, on Sept. 30.

They remained in the gulf until March 21, 1991.

Dasing landed at King Khalid Airforce Base in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

"As soon as we walked out, the heat hit us," Dasing remembered. It was 115 degrees.

He and about 6,000 other troops from Fort Bliss were the only desert-trained personnel in the Army, Dasing said. Some soldiers from less arid parts of the U.S. came to be known as "zombies," because they walked around all night, unable to sleep in the heat.

Positioned in Saudi Arabia near the Kuwait border, "We dug in and started living life," Dasing said. "We became masters at making camps," he said, as soldiers built a "tent city."

Dasing's role included trading with neighboring

Marine and naval units for everything from water, toilet paper and pharmaceuticals to apples, oranges, coffee makers and generators.

At 33, "I was the old man of the unit," Dasing said. Part of his charge was "to keep the kids (soldiers in their late teens and early 20s) busy," he said. Troops engaged in "Desert Olympics," wearing gas masks and competing to see who could dig the deepest foxhole.

Dasing said he remembers an Army chaplain leading a small group of soldiers singing carols during Christmas time. "You would hear it echo across the desert, from camp to camp," he said.

The soldiers were sometimes visited by American civilians who worked for U.S. oil companies, who would bring their wives and children to the camp to share ice cream and play football.

"We waited for war," Dasing said.

That came for American troops Jan. 15, 1991, with the beginning of Operation Desert Storm, the codename of the combat phase of the Gulf War.

"My company led the whole 18th Airborne across the berms," he said.

Often scouting ahead of other troops, Dasing said he and his unit saw combat with regular Iraqi troops and the fabled Republican Guard.

"We killed a lot of people. We did," Dasing said. "That was our job. We had to do that. We destroyed a lot of tanks. We captured a lot of equipment."

U.S. Army SSG Kevin Dasing after returning from a firefight at the Ar Rumaylah Airfield, north-west of Kuwait.

Dasing remembers being confronted by an Iraqi lieutenant in a bunker complex. The Iraqi pointed an AK-47 at him and pulled the trigger. The rifle misfired. Dasing returned fire and killed the Iraqi.

Dasing also remembers being so tired he walked across a battlefield during a firefight to get to his next position.

At one point, he and other soldiers met a group of Ethiopians who were on a pilgrimage in the Iraqi desert and didn't know there was a war going on. He also remembers a soldier who kept a king scorpion as a pet, often walking it on a homemade leash. The scorpion came back with the soldier to Fort Bliss, but only survived about 40 days. Other soldiers had lizards as pets.

Moving across the desert, Dasing said a ceasefire was ordered just before his unit reached the Euphrates River. They were the first to return to their base at the border, he said, racing through the half-mile deep "Wadi of Death."

"We weren't going to be left in Iraq," Dasing said.

Packing to return home meant finding space for a wide range of "souvenirs, that included Iraqi money and sniper scopes, Iraqi flags and uniforms and even watches with Saddam Hussein's face on them.

Dasing brought home three full duffel bags, including one weighing 150 pounds, he said.

He also has albums full of photos — including many he took — of his time in the gulf.

Among his most enduring memories of the gulf, in addition to the extreme heat, were the Acapulco Chicken TV dinners, Mounds bars and lasagna that were supplied to the soldiers in great abundance and eaten "for breakfast, lunch and dinner," Dasing said.

Dasing held many different job titles in the Army, he said, and became one of only two noncommissioned officers in the Army to serve as an historian.

"I enjoyed my time," he said. "I knew what had to be done and I just did it."

Dasing's service included 24 years in the Army, ages 17-41, and four in the ROTC. He still belongs to the U.S. Army Brotherhood of Tankers.

tonight's picks

Erin Krakow

5 p.m. on OXYGEN
One Deadly Mistake

Detectives in Florida work overtime to identify the body of a young woman found floating in a river in a new episode called "The Silent Witness." The sheer brutality of the murder and what appears to be a bottomless pool of potential suspects leave investigators puzzled until they uncover a silent witness to the crime.

6 p.m. on LIFE
Movie: Girl in the Basement

Inspired by true events, this 2021 crime thriller chronicles the harrowing story of Sarah, a teenager whose father held her prisoner in the basement of their family home for more than 20 years. During her captivity, the abusive older man would sneak down to the basement periodically to sexually abuse Sarah, having told his wife and Sarah's siblings that she had run away with an unsuitable boyfriend none of them liked. Judd Nelson, Joely Fisher, Stefanie Scott and Emily Topper star.

6 p.m. on TCM
Movie: Dances With Wolves

Kevin Costner's 1990 Western about a white man who goes to live with American Indians and learns to appreciate their way of life won Oscars for best picture and best director. Costner stars as John Dunbar, a decorated Union soldier who mans a remote outpost in the Dakotas, where he is the only white man around. He slowly gets to know and admire the indigenous people. Oscar nominees Mary McDonnell and Graham Greene co-star.

6 p.m. on BBCA
A Wild Year On Earth

The new episode "November-December" opens as millions of migrating Monarch butterflies converge in the forests of Mexico for the winter, a gathering that coincides with the Mexican Day of the Dead. Meanwhile, in arid South Africa, returning rains are welcomed by nesting birds, and in Australia, warming waters trigger the annual coral spawning in the magnificent Great Barrier Reef. Laura Carmichael ("Downton Abbey") narrates.

7 p.m. on HALL
Movie: It Was Always You

Elizabeth's (Erin Krakow) engagement planning may be thrown off schedule when a severe storm strands her fiancé in a completely different part of their town when they were supposed to meet to finalize last-minute details. Having his free-spirited brother David (Tyler Hynes) around isn't proving to be very helpful, either, but as Elizabeth starts to feel overwhelmed by a looming engagement party, David prompts her to question some big life decisions in this 2021 romance.

7 p.m. on OWN
Love & Marriage: Huntsville

Marsau lets Wanda know in no uncertain terms that her recent behavior has been completely unacceptable in the new episode "To Martell the Truth." Elsewhere, Melody turns her heartbreak into song and also brings in someone to talk to the kids about the divorce. The guys go camping and, after an accident, Martell reveals a startling secret. After filing for divorce, Melody returns home, where things get heated with Martell.

Stefanie Scott

9 p.m. on HBO
Movie: Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure

Slacker dudes Bill and Ted (Alex Winter, Keanu Reeves) have a lot riding on their final history report. For one thing, if Ted flunks history, he's off to military school in Alaska. But thanks to a mysterious stranger and a time machine, the boys deliver a presentation that knocks everyone's socks off, complete with actual historical figures from Socrates to Sigmund Freud.

tonight's picks

Tina Fey and Amy Poehler

6 p.m. on KTSM
The 78th Annual Golden Globe Awards

They're longtime BFFs and frequent collaborators, but something magical seems to happen when Tina Fey and Amy Poehler team up as co-host for an awards show. That showbiz "great conjunction" makes a happy reappearance for this year's Golden Globes, the Hollywood Foreign Press Association's annual ceremony honoring the best in both film and television for the past calendar year. This first-ever bi-coastal Globes ceremony will feature

Fay at New York's famous Rainbow Room and Poehler at the Beverly Hilton in Los Angeles, with nominees joining remotely throughout the telecast.

6 p.m. on BRAVO
The Real Housewives of Atlanta

The group's final dinner in Isle of Palms ends on a sour note after Kenya's investigation in the new episode "The Usual Suspects." Elsewhere, a frazzled Drew is feeling completely overwhelmed with the move into her new home, while Kandi reveals a secret about what she heard the night of the bachelorette party.

7 p.m. on FOOD
Worst Cooks in America

Season 21 wraps up with "Fight for Finale," which opens with the remaining recruits competing in a relay race that tests their speed, knowledge and skill in the kitchen. Next, chefs Anne Burrell and Carla Hall teach the two finalists how to prepare a three-course, restaurant-quality meal, a final challenge that gives those recruits a last chance to show off the culinary skills they have acquired. Judges Adrienne Cheatham, JJ Johnson and George Mendes then sample their dishes in a blind taste test to decide the winner.

7 p.m. on HALL
When Calls the Heart

In a new episode called "Honestly, Elizabeth," Helen Bouchard (guest star Teryl Rothery) gets to work editing Elizabeth's (Erin Krakow) manuscript. The unexpected arrival of Lucas' (Chris McNally) mother makes Elizabeth more than a little nervous, while Lee (Kavan Smith) sustains an injury to his back. Meanwhile, a newcomer arrives with words of comfort that prompt Rosemary (Pascale Hutton) to reflect on what she wants in life.

8 p.m. on KDBC
NCIS: Los Angeles

In the new episode "Can't Take My Eyes Off You," Nell (Renée Felice Smith) continues to keep Callen (Chris O'Donnell) in the dark about their team's search for Katya, but he succeeds in tracking down the person who has been tailing him in a remote location that is teeming with Russians. Ultimately, he finds himself face to face with Anna (recurring guest star Bar Paly). Nicki Micheaux and Alex Portenko also guest star.

8 p.m. on KFOX
Bob's Burgers

Bob (voice of H. Jon Benjamin) and his kids (voices of Dan Mintz, Eugene Mirman and Kristen Schaal) dread their annual family picture day, when Linda (voice of John Roberts) puts them through torment getting an ideal shot for the holiday card. This year, she's determined to get the ultimate photo by forcing them out into the wild, an expedition that predictably goes badly in the new "Die Card, or Card Trying." Rob Huebel is featured among the guest voices.

9 p.m. on KDBC
NCIS: New Orleans

After a petty officer is shot down by a sniper, Pride (Scott Bakula) and his NCIS team set out on the trail of the killer, only to discover pretty quickly that the hitman may not be acting alone, in the new episode "Homeward Bound." Jason Alan Carvell, Brannon Cross and Justin Mortelliti guest star; Vanessa Ferlito, Necar Zadegan and CCH Pounder also star.

Nick Jonas

7 p.m. on KTSM The Voice

The Emmy-winning musical competition series returns for Season 20, which also makes the 10th anniversary of the show. Pop music superstar Nick Jonas reclaims his red judge's chair on the panel, along with returnees John Legend, Kelly Clarkson and Blake Shelton. This season's Battle Advisors include Emmy- and Golden Globe-winning actor and singer Darren Criss; international Grammy-winning artist Luis Fonsi; Grammy-winning R&B star Brandy; and Grammy-winning country duo Dan & Shay. Carson Daly also is back as host.

7 p.m. on STARZ
Movie: Ruth: Justice Ginsburg in Her Own Words

In this critically acclaimed new documentary, Oscar-winning filmmaker Freida Lee Mock chronicles the remarkable life and career of Ruth Bader Ginsburg, who was deemed virtually unhireable at the start of her career because she was a woman, even though she had graduated top of her class from both Harvard and Columbia Law Schools. She went on to become the second woman ever appointed to be an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

8 p.m. on FOOD
Easter Basket Challenge

Forget robins, one of the first signs of spring's imminent arrival is this delightful new baking competition, in which host Sunny Anderson takes viewers into a whimsical world of Easter treats. Canadian-born chef Jordan Andino and "Masterchef" winner Claudia Sandoval are the judges as seven bakers execute Easter-themed challenges over five episodes. In the premiere, Anderson tasks the bakers with creating jellybean-inspired pop art pastry tarts and oversized sweets.

8:01 p.m. on KFOX
9-1-1: Lone Star

The 126 team is dispatched to a funeral where another dead body has crashed the service, then to a hospital where an MRI machine has gone haywire in the new episode "Displaced." Elsewhere, Tommy and Owen (Gina Torres, Rob Lowe) both feel out of place in their own homes as Gwyn (guest star Lisa Edelstein) moves into the Strand residence.

10 p.m. on HBO
Beartown

In the new "Episode 2," Peter (Ulf Stenberg) does everything he can think of to coach his juniors to a semi-final victory, with the financial future of the arena at stake. Feeling under pressure from virtually everyone in town to pull out a win, Kevin (Oliver Dufaker) turns for support to Maya (Miriam Ingrid), the only person who expects nothing from him. Later, a horrifying act of violence sends a celebratory evening off the rails.

It finds the two co-hosts heating up the competition when they ask our Makers to create a Mobile BBQ Grill with all the fixins'. Before they can start cooking, though, they must first prove they can create fire by fabricating a brazing torch.

9:01 p.m. on KTSM
New Amsterdam

One of TV's top medical dramas finally returns for Season 3 — with an additional two seasons already on order from NBC — after delays from the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and related production issues. As the action resumes, medical director and widowed single father Dr. Max Goodwin (Ryan Eggold) finds himself and his dedicated team struggling to remain optimistic in the face of a medical crisis that only exposes the gaping inequities of the U.S. healthcare system. Freema Agyeman and Tyler Labine are among other returning regulars.

How Heart Disease Presents

Because of the heart's vital role in pumping blood, heart trouble can wreak havoc on other parts of the body. If you experience unexplained physical symptoms like the ones listed below, pay attention — your heart may be trying to tell you something.

Circulation issues. When the heart cannot pump enough blood to meet the body's needs, poor circulation may cause effects all over the body. Peripheral arterial disease, for example, can cause weakness, skin that is cold to the touch and cramping in the legs and feet. Other cardiovascular diseases can cause swelling, pain, or numbness in the legs, ankles, feet or hands.

Cognitive impairments. When the heart's ability to deliver a steady supply of blood is hindered by disease, it can also impact brain function. For example, when heart failure reduces blood flow to the brain, it can lead to problems with thinking and memory. If heart failure is not treated promptly, the heart becomes weaker, and what started as a mild mental impairment may progress to vascular dementia.

Fatigue. Unusual tiredness can happen for many reasons, but heart problems are a well-known cause. For instance, fatigue can begin to appear months before a heart attack, as an artery grows increasingly blocked. Fatigue can also be a warning sign of heart failure or heart rhythm disturbances such as atrial fibrillation.

Organ malfunctions. When the heart is not functioning properly, other organs may be affected. For example, low blood pressure due to heart failure can cause chronic kidney problems. Heart illnesses can also impact the intestines, liver and many other organs.

Many people expect heart disease to involve dramatic symptoms such as crushing chest pain, but the signs can be much more subtle. Don't brush off the following warning signs.

- Anxiety. Heart attacks and other forms of cardiovascular disease that reduce blood flow to the heart can trigger feelings of anxiety and panic.
- Dizziness. Heart failure and heart attack both reduce blood flow to the brain, which can lead to lightheadedness.
- Fainting. Passing out occurs when blood pressure drops dramatically — it is never normal and may be a sign of a heart rhythm disturbance (arrhythmia) or heart attack.
- Persistent cough. A cough that worsens may be caused by fluid buildup in the lungs, a symptom of heart failure.
- Tingling limbs. A "pins and needles" sensation in the arms and legs can hint at an impending heart attack.

If you experience any of these symptoms, call 911 or seek emergency medical care. MountainView Regional Medical Center is an Accredited Chest Pain center with PCI Certification.

Breaking Heart Attack Stereotypes

When you think of a typical heart attack patient, there's a good chance the person who comes to mind looks something like this: an older man in his 50s or 60s, clutching his chest in sudden pain. That doesn't always align with reality, however. Which of these people do you think is most at risk for a heart attack?

SCENARIO #1: A 65-year-old woman with a family history of heart disease is overweight, but gets a moderate amount of exercise and tries to follow a healthy diet. She is aware that her weight and family history put her at higher risk, but her cholesterol and blood pressure numbers are good, and she keeps in close contact with her doctor.

SCENARIO #2: A 40-year-old man maintains a healthy weight by vigorously exercising every day but also consumes a high-fat diet. He has a family history of heart disease and smoked in his youth, though he quit at age 30. He rarely visits the doctor, only going when he is actively ill or injured.

SCENARIO #3: A 55-year-old woman has no family history of heart disease and works in a high-stress job. She exercises sporadically and has a family history of diabetes. She doesn't have a primary care doctor, though she does her best to maintain a healthy diet.

While all three individuals have some level of heart attack risk, the woman in scenario 1 is at less risk of having a heart attack than the individuals in scenarios 2 and 3. Her relationship with her doctor allows her to monitor her risk factors and take appropriate and timely action to keep her health in check. The man in scenario 2 consumes food that raises his heart attack risk, along with having been a smoker in the past, and the woman in scenario 3 is unaware of her risk level because she doesn't see a primary care doctor.

Educating yourself about your heart disease risk and maintaining a close relationship with your primary care doctor are important parts of managing the risk you live with every day. Don't take a chance — heart attacks don't follow a script.

You know the obvious ways to keep your risk of cardiovascular disease and heart attack low — maintain a healthy diet, don't smoke and exercise regularly. Now it's time to tackle the rest.

- Limit alcohol — Limiting the amount of alcohol you consume to two drinks a day for men or one for women can cut your risk of cardiovascular disease.
- Avoid stress — Stress not only increases the amount of the hormone cortisol your body produces, which can contribute to blockages in the arteries, it can also encourage you to eat more unhealthy foods or sleep less than usual.
- Keep learning — Stay up-to-date on the latest recommendations for heart health. New developments are being made every day!

Cardiovascular Disease Prevention

Cardiovascular disease (CVD) is the leading cause of death for men and women worldwide. In honor of American Heart Month, now is the perfect time to reflect on what can be done to prevent CVD from affecting your family. Every year, the United States spends more than $300 billion on CVD, including health services, medications and lost productivity. According to the World Health Organization, CVD kills an estimated 17.3 million people every year, and it is projected to remain the leading cause of death until 2030.

Your home is a great place to start your family's journey to being heart-healthy. Go through the items in your kitchen and toss foods with empty calories, such as sodas, sugary snacks and refined cereals. Replace these foods with fresh fruits, vegetables and unrefined whole-grain foods. With a well-stocked kitchen, there won't be as many excuses to dine out instead of cooking at home. For the occasions the family does go out for dinner, review the restaurant's nutrition information beforehand, and don't be afraid to ask the waiter about how entrees are prepared to see if you're making a healthy choice.

Regular exercise is crucial to staying heart-healthy. The American Heart Association recommends 150 minutes of moderate-intensity physical activity every week. Any activity that burns 3.5 to 7 calories per minute is considered moderate-intensity exercise. In a fast-paced world this can be difficult, but with a little creativity and a few adjustments, it can be easier for everyone.

Begin by making everyday tasks more physically active. For example, try parking farther away from your destination, or instead of sending an email to a coworker, get up and meet face-to-face. While at home, organize active forms of entertainment for the whole family, such as a scavenger hunt or a game of capture the flag. If the weather isn't suitable, play a family-friendly cardio DVD and get everyone to participate.

Too little sleep can throw off hormones and other chemicals in the body, leading to weight gain, diabetes and heart disease. For the family to get the recommended seven to eight hours of sleep every night, ready your brain and the environment before bedtime. Make sure the bedroom is quiet and comfortable and don't do anything mentally stimulating like watching television. Avoid heavy meals in the evening. If you are a little hungry before

Health in Numbers

Remember these numbers to maintain a healthy heart:

Alcohol intake: One drink per day for women and two drinks per day for men

Blood pressure: Less than 120/80 mmHg

Body mass index: Greater than 18.5 but less than 25

Cholesterol: A total score of less than 180 mg/dL

Fasting glucose: Less than 100 mg/dL

Physical activity: 150 minutes per week of moderate activity, 75 minutes of strenuous activity bedtime, aim for a light snack like yogurt instead.

Regular physical exams can help the entire family stay on course to being heart-healthy. Before making any serious adjustments to your diet or exercise regimen, check with your doctor to make sure these changes work with your family. Any tobacco use increases your chances of developing the disease. Smoking or exposure to secondhand smoke is the second leading cause of CVD worldwide.

Cholesterol Management and Numbers

Heart disease, the leading cause of death among men and women in the United States, is responsible for approximately 500,000 deaths annually. High cholesterol is one of the primary risk factors for heart disease, heart attack and stroke. The condition can be clearly identified with blood tests, but many people don't understand what cholesterol is or how it's broken down into low-density lipoproteins (LDL), high-density lipoproteins (HDL), total cholesterol and triglycerides.

Understand the good, the bad and the ugly of cholesterol by learning what each component of your blood test means and where your levels should be.

- Total cholesterol should be less than 200 milligrams per deciliter (mg/dL) of blood. This number combines HDL and LDL present in your blood.
- HDL levels below 40 mg/dL are considered a major risk factor for heart disease because HDL, known as the "good cholesterol," actually protects against heart disease by preventing LDL cholesterol from building up in the arteries.

Ideally, your HDL level should be above 60 mg/dL.

- LDL results higher than 130 mg/dL are considered high. This "bad cholesterol" encourages artery-clogging cholesterol buildup.
- Triglycerides are a form of fat that stores excess energy from the food you eat. When triglycerides are found in high levels — greater than 150 mg/dL — your physician may suggest treatment to prevent atherosclerosis, the hardening of your arteries due to plaque buildup.

A well-constructed cholesterol reduction plan begins with lifestyle choices.

Eat with purpose. Start bringing your total cholesterol levels down by avoiding saturated fats and foods that contain high amounts of cholesterol. While you're at it, reduce your low-density lipoprotein (LDL) levels by eating more high-fiber foods, such as apples, barley, kidney beans, pears and prunes. Fish, such as albacore tuna, halibut, herring, lake trout, mackerel and salmon, contains high levels of omega-3 fatty acids, which also lower LDL numbers.

Actively diminish your risk. Being overweight can increase your risk for high cholesterol, partly because the food choices that led to weight gain likely included foods that increase bad cholesterol levels. Modifying your diet and incorporating 30 minutes of brisk physical activity into your daily routine can help you lose weight, lower your bad cholesterol and raise your good cholesterol.

Heart Disease Risk

Your blood pressure, cholesterol levels, body mass index (BMI) and fasting blood glucose offer an accurate glimpse of overall heart health. By comparing your numbers with healthy target ranges, you can evaluate your heart disease risk and take steps toward a healthier lifestyle.

BMI - Calculated using your height and weight, BMI helps you determine how much body fat you carry. A BMI between 18.5 and 24.9 indicates a healthy weight. A person is considered overweight if his or her BMI is 25 or higher and obese if BMI is 30 or higher.

Cholesterol - Cholesterol comes in two forms: high-density lipoprotein (HDL) and low-density lipoprotein (LDL). While HDL helps keep your heart healthy, LDL can contribute to blockages. Adults age 20 and older should have a cholesterol screening at least every five years. Total cholesterol levels should be lower than 200 mg/dL, triglycerides lower than 150 mg/dL, LDL cholesterol levels lower than 100 mg/dL, and HDL cholesterol levels higher than 40 mg/dL in men and 50 mg/dL in women, according to the American Heart Association.

Blood Pressure - When blood pressure is higher than it should be, your heart has to work harder to pump blood, which can damage your arteries. Normal, healthy blood pressure is defined as a reading of 120/80. A blood pressure reading of 140/90 indicates hypertension, or high blood pressure.

Fasting Blood Glucose - Healthy adults ages 45 and older should have a fasting blood glucose screening at least every three years. A healthy fasting blood glucose level falls between 70 and 100 mg/dL.

Tips to Overcome Weight-Loss Challenges

Weight influences nearly every aspect of cardiovascular health. Weight loss can help reduce your blood pressure and Type 2 diabetes risk, but staying motivated is often a challenge. If you've hit a roadblock on your journey to a healthy weight, consider these tips.

Get enough sleep. When you are sleep deprived, you're more likely to overeat and munch on unhealthy snacks, which can sabotage an otherwise healthy eating plan. Strive for eight hours of sleep each night.

Set attainable goals. Running a 5k or losing 30 pounds are great long-term goals, but neither is achievable overnight. To avoid getting discouraged, start small. Aim to lose 10 pounds initially or to walk for 30 minutes every day.

Limit temptation. Buy fruit and other healthy snacks and leave potato chips and ice cream on the grocery store shelves to make daily food choices easier.

Taking charge of your heart health begins with understanding your heart disease risk. To learn your numbers, speak with your doctor.

After Max's (Cheyenne Jackson) boss, Carter (Julian Gant), helps Kat (Mayim Bialik) win a seat on the local business council, he feels betrayed when she doesn't vote in favor of allowing Max's bar to stay open later in the new episode "Business Council." Meanwhile, Sheila (Swoosie Kurtz) asks Max to help her move some of her furniture so a boyfriend can move in, and Randi (Kyla Pratt) asks Phil (Leslie Jordan) for help with a photography project. Yvette Nicole Brown guest stars.

Jennifer Dundas, Patch Darragh and Michaela Watkins also star. (ORIGINAL)

“Tell Me Your Secrets”

From creator/writer Harriet Warner (“Call the Midwife,” “Footballers' Wives”) comes this 10-episode drama series that stars Lily Rabe, Hamish Linklater and Amy Brenneman as people each with troubling histories who are pushed to the edge as the truth about their pasts and motives is revealed. # Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum reopens

BULLETIN REPORT

The New Mexico Department of Cultural Affairs (DCA) has re-opened the state's eight museums – including the Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum (FRHM), 4100 Dripping Springs Road in Las Cruces – and seven historic sites in accordance with COVID-safe practices and public health measures to protect the well-being of patrons, FRHM said in a Feb. 3 news release.

Hours at FRHM are 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday-Saturday.

"We are excited and grateful for the opportunity to reopen FRHM," said FRHM Executive Director Heather Reed. "While we have worked hard to stay connected to the public through our online offerings during the temporary closures, and will continue to do so, our staff also has worked hard behind the scenes to prepare for this reopening. We look forward to seeing everyone again and providing our guests a safe environment to experience our state's amazing history through our museum exhibits and livestock areas."

FRHM is a member of the state Department of Tourism's New Mexico Safe Certified program and offers plenty of room for social distancing on the 47-acre campus and 100,000-square-foot main building, the news release said. Capacity is 75, with face coverings required indoors and outdoors.

is FRHM's featured exhibit. It stretches through two galleries and tells the story of the transformation of the Tularosa Basin during World War II and beyond. A new feature is the historic horse-drawn hearse that likely was used for transporting the bodies of Pat Garrett and other prominent Las Cruces during the early 20th century.

Other featured exhibits include "Agricultural Beginnings," the "New Mexico Colonial Home," "Wheels & Gears," "Home Sweet Home," "Grist for the Mill" and "The Cowboy Way: Western Drawings by Robert "Shoofly" Shufelt.

The museum has begun a new series on its Facebook page (www.facebook.com/NMFRHM) called Herd at the Farm & Ranch. The series, which will be every other Thursday, consists of five-minute interviews with museum staff and others connected to the museum's mission, including historians, farmers, ranchers and scientists.

FRHM visitors may also take a walk to see museum livestock, including seven different breeds of beef cattle (and several baby calves born during the closure), horses, sheep and a donkey. The Heart of the Desert Gift Shop and Snack Bar will be open during museum hours, and Friends of the Museum membership passes and Culture Passes will be honored.

As part of DCA's Invite an Educator program, teachers, parents and groups may invite an FRHM educator or curator to do an online presentation on All About Sheep, Desert Plants of the Southwest, Museum Careers, Reading Roundup, The Life of a Cowboy, Self-Sufficiency in the Tularosa Basin and History Happened Here: All About Oral History. More topics are on the way.

Visit <https://dcaeducates.nmcculture.org/category/new-mexico-farm-and-ranch-heritage-museum/> for more information.

Some of FRHM's usual offerings will be closed during the museum's period of partial reopening, the news release said, including the indoor and outdoor play areas, barns, cart tours, greenhouse, pony rides, classrooms, theater and demonstrations.

Museum admission is $5 for adults, $4 for senior citizens, $3 for children 4-17 and free for children 3 and under as well as Friends of the Museum members with their card. New Mexico senior citizens are admitted free on Wednesdays.

FRHM and other DCA museums, historic sites and cultural institutions first closed due to COVID-19 March 16, 2020, reopened Sept. 24 and closed again Oct. 23.

Artist Tony Pennock: Water-tank murals and much more

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Artist Tony Pennock painted his first water-tank mural in Las Cruces before graduating from high school.

Nearly 50 years later, he has painted 10 water tanks in the area and has created considerably more memorable art, making him one of the best known and respected artists around.

With the water tanks alone covering about 140,000 square feet, there can't be too many artists anywhere with so vast a canvas.

A Las Cruces native, Pennock began drawing and painting at an early age.

"I was doing it all the time," he said.

And why not? Pen-

nock's father was an artist, working for Warner Brothers, and his mother is beloved Las Cruces artist Carolyn Bunch.

The water-tank mural story began for Pennock when he was attending Mayfield High School in 1973. Through a friend of his father's, Pennock learned that the Las Cruces chamber was looking for a muralist to paint a water tank.

Even though he was only 17, Pennock won the commission. After reworking the original design, which he said was too stiff and militaristic, Pennock spent six months creating "La Entrada" (originally called "Jornada del Muerto") near the intersection of Triviz Drive and East Griggs Avenue. It depicts the journey of 300 families traveling along El Camino Real from Mexico as they came to settle in what would become the state of New Mexico.

With help from Burke

Outdoor Advertising owner Sammy Burke, Pennock even built his own scaffolding for the project.

Pennock went on to earn a bachelor's degree in fine art from New Mexico State University. He began work on his graduate degree in architecture at Yale University, which he completed at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque. Pennock taught Architecture 102 at UNM for three years. He also stayed briefly with his sister in New York City — she had showgirls as roommates, he remembers — where he had the opportunity to study "lots of architectural design." Pennock returned to Las Cruces to become a full-time professional artist.

Having learned a great deal from the first one, Pennock painted a second water-tank mural near Interstate 25 and Walton Avenue in about six weeks. Pennock has painted murals on five water tanks in Las Cruces, three in Truth or Consequences and a Buffalo Soldier on a water tank in Radium Springs near Fort Selden Historic Site, about 20 miles north of Las Cruces.

Pennock said he continues to "look for signs of fading and graffiti" on his murals, touching up and restoring them as necessary — he's repainted the tank near Walmart three times in the last 40 years.

"I like to see the cars driving by," Pennock said, knowing that his work is "educating people about their history and culture."

Pennock used a grid transfer system that is thousands of years old to paint the murals, he said, transferring one inch of the grid design on paper to four feet of the actual mural, copying one square at a time.

"The hard part is the color. It never translates from the mockup to the surface," he said. "A lot of it is science," Pennock said, "how light works, how it reflects."

In creating the giant murals, he had to consider not only proportion, but also psychology, including how some colors advance and others recede.

“You blend between emotion and intellect,” Pennock said. “That’s the secret.”

But while he is best known for the water-tanks murals, Pennock’s long career as an artist includes a great deal more painting, drawing and etching for many public art projects, exhibitions and private commissions.

“I’ve been very lucky,” Pennock said. “We never say no — that’s the secret. You have to wear a lot of hats to survive.”

Currently, Pennock is working on a set of six

“Apache Mask,” 2019 mono-types life-size Native American sculptures for the Hacienda del Camino Real in Radium Springs.

He has drawn inspiration for the project from the photographs of Norwegian photographer Carl Lumholtz (1851-1922), who traveled widely in Mexico and the Southwest, taking photographs with his Polaroid Land Camera; and from American photographer Edward Curtis (1868-1952), who photographed and documented Native American life in the American West in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Court House mural, “Doña Ana on the Camino Real”

Among Pennock’s favorite artists is American painter John Singer Sargent (1856-1925). He also greatly admires the unknown artists who created ancient cave paintings in Europe and he also is a fan of the work of “the unsung heroes of illustration,” whose drawings and paintings filled books and manuals before photography.

Trying to pick a favorite piece from among his own work is a challenge for Pennock.

“Everything I finish for a week is my favorite,” he said.

Pennock is about to return to his teaching roots, as he will soon begin a class in Las Cruces in figure drawing. As a teacher, he said, he “is not dazzled by technique. What I want is that heart.”

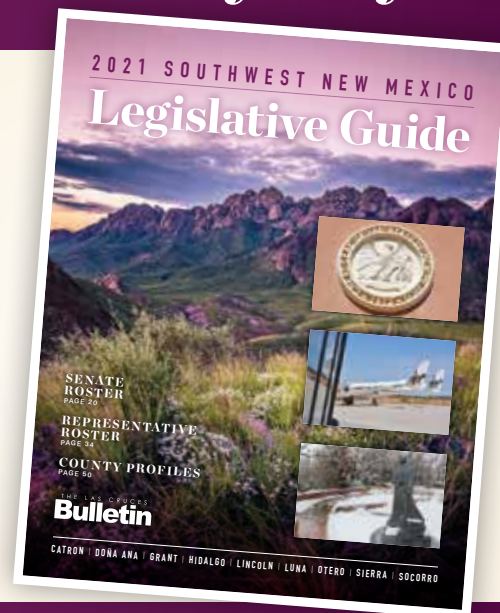

Paraphrasing English poet, painter and print-maker William Blake (1757-1827), Pennock said art is “the alchemy of the imagination. You just keep fighting the canvas until it comes. If you stay with it long enough, [the muse] lets you in.”

Broadway actors: NMSU Theatre Department's virtual guests

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Broadway and touring company husband-and-wife actors Matt DeAngelis and Christine Dwyer will be the special guests of the New Mexico State University Theatre Department during a free, Wednesday, March 3, virtual presentation, 12:30-1:30 p.m. Mountain Time.

The presentations are part of the Theatre Department's initiative to engage students during the pandemic, which has prevented live theatre productions for nearly a year.

"I connected with most of these artists by attending the Theatre Makers Summit Conference, virtually, in November, and reached out to guests I viewed who I thought would inspire our students," said Theatre Department Head Wil Kilroy. "The conference was filled with accomplished Broadway artists. However, Matt DeAngelis is a former student of mine from the University of Southern Maine. I directed him there as a prince in 'Into the Woods,' got to see him perform in Boston in the national tour of 'Hair,' and reconnected when I took NMSU students to New York City and we saw 'Waitress' on Broadway, and Matt was part of the show — a great surprise!"

DeAngelis made his Broadway debut in 2009 in the Tony-winning production of "Hair," and continued with its production in London. He also was part of the first national tour of "Hair" and its Broadway revival, and was in the casts of the first national tours of "American Idiot" and "Once." DeAngelis has appeared in nearly 2,000 performances during the past five years. On television, he has acted in "Person of Interest,"

"Madam Secretary," "Marvel's Daredevil," "Chicago PD" and other shows.

Dwyer made her Broadway debut in "Wicked," and played Elphaba in a touring production of the show. She played Maureen in the national tour of "Rent" and has appeared in regional theatre productions of "Tommy" and "Gypsy."

DeAngelis and Dwyer co-own The Working Studio, a music, theatre and acting studio. They also have launched a master-class series called "Upgrade Your Audition."

"We are so excited to be returning to Las Cruces [virtually] to teach this group of passionate and excited students," DeAngelis and Dwyer said. "We were here last year and were able to see the production of 'Spell-ing Bee' and were super impressed. Can't wait to work with everyone again!"

Upcoming guest artist presentations, each from 12:30-1:30 p.m. Mountain Time, are:

• Wednesday, March 17: Director, producer, playwright and dramaturg Jamil Jude, artistic director at True Colors Theatre in Atlanta. Jude has served as producer in residence at the Mixed Blood Theatre Company in Minneapolis and as a play-producing fellow at Arena Stage in Washington, D.C. He co-founded

Colored People's Theatre in Washington, D.C. and has led productions in the nation's capital, Denver and the Twin Cities.

"I'm excited to speak to the students at NMSU," Jude said. "Having spent their lives in an ever-increasing, digitally active world, there is so much this generation will change in our field. I'd love to help them on their journey by providing some perspective from my career and time spent and to challenge them to take their passions and drive our industry forward."

• Wednesday, April 14: costume designer Benny Lumpkins, whose TV credits include "9-1-1," "Fallout" and other series and films.

• Wednesday, April 28: Broadway producer Brian Moreland: "Blue," "The Sound Inside," "Sea Wall/A Life" starring Jake Gyllenhaal" and the shutdown-interrupted "American Buffalo," starring Laurence Fishburne.

Previous guest artists who participated in the program were theatre director Sammi Carnold and stage manager Matthew Stern.

Desert Sunrise Studio offers Zoom

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

Desert Sunrise Studio, 537 N. Alameda Blvd., has a virtual open studio via Zoom at 1 p.m. every Friday, and SoulCollage at 1 p.m. every other Wednesday until April 21.

In the open studio, “we start with a short check-in, then spend 45 minutes to an hour working individually on whatever each person wishes,” said studio owner and Las Cruces artist Jan Hampton. “We end with about 30 minutes of discussion and sharing of our creations. This sharing has been inspiring to many of us, expanding our repertoire of creative activities,” Hampton said. She said five-10 people from three time zones in the United States attend the meeting each week.

In SoulCollage, “we adapt to the attendees, sometimes beginning with questions from newcomers and answers from those with experience with the SoulCollage process,” Hampton said. “The meeting is set up similarly to Zoom Open Studio, with each participant working quietly on whatever part of the SoulCollage process s/he wishes during most of the hour-and-a-half session. This meeting also includes people living outside Las Cruces.”

Hampton is a certified SoulCollage facilitator. SoulCollage is a copyrighted “expressive arts practice” for groups or individuals. # City schedules public art installations

CITY OF LAS CRUCES

News release

The Las Cruces City Art Board is guiding several high-profile public art projects to be completed in 2021 that will enhance the visual identity of two new facilities being built in Las Cruces and the Las Cruces City Hall lobby.

These projects are aligned with the vision of the Las Cruces Public Art (LCPA) Master Plan, which promotes the link between art and quality of life.

"It's an exciting time for public art in our community," said city Quality of Life Department Deputy Director Rebecca Slaughter. "The city's art board, in collaboration with city departments, is finding opportunities to connect public art to new construction, as well as to existing public spaces, which not only adds to the vibrancy and beauty of the city, but also enhances the quality of life of our community."

"We worked hard to establish a public art master plan that clearly defines the mission, vision and goals of the Las Cruces Public Art program," said city Art Board Chair Christina Ballew. "Our current projects are only the beginning of our efforts to take LCPA to the next level that will help establish Las Cruces as an art destination."

One upcoming art installation is connected to the general obligation bond (GO) Fire House No.

3 project. The piece will be incorporated into the exterior of the new fire house. The public art project is in the artist jury selection process to choose the top-scoring applicants from a pool of 107 artist entries submitted during the national call for entries. Three finalists will then be invited to present their art design for the project that will eventually become a focal point at the new fire house location, 201 E. Picacho Ave.

Las Cruces City Hall, 700 N. Main St., is on track to receive a site-specific indoor art project commissioned for the central pillar in the lobby. The installation, commissioned through a jury process in early 2020, was originally scheduled for completion in March 2021 but has been delayed due to COVID-19 travel restrictions. The project is now tentatively scheduled for completion in June.

Artists will have an opportunity to submit applications for another public art project connected with the new animal shelter, another GO bond project, at the corner of Rinconada Boulevard and Bataan Memorial West. A call for entries is expected this month. Information and instructions for applying will be announced and posted on the public art webpage at www.las-cruces.org. Local artists are encouraged to submit applications.

Members of the city Art Board are appointed by the mayor. Members, in addition to Ballew are: Susan Frary, vice chair;

Alysa Iyana Grayson-Aulbach, secretary; and members Saul Ramirez, Chantelle Yazzie-Martin, Susan McNeill and Katrina Chandler.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the city Art Board can apply at <https://onboard.las-cruces.org/board/1177>.

In 2013, the city council created the art board to advise the council on public art.

NMSU Art Museum retablo exhibit open by appointment

By AMANDA ADAME

NMSU News

The New Mexico State University Art Museum (UAM) will host its first spring 2021 virtual program in connection with the museum's newest exhibition, "Saint Joseph & The Laborers."

The exhibit, curated by NMSU graduate student Courtney Uldrich, delves into the role of the laborer through the lens of Mexican retablo imagery.

The exhibition will be on display in the Margie and Bobby Rankin Retablo Gallery at UAM by appointment through Nov. 6.

A retablo is a devotional painting of saints, religious personages or votive offerings traditionally created on small sheets of tin-coated iron. There are two types of retablos: the Santos and Ex-voto. Their purpose is to induce spiritual qualities of love, respect, devotion, faith, sacrifice and humility directed toward the person or thing they represent.

The museum's next event, "Joseph's Feast Day," will feature a community-sourced collection of homemade altars built by confined families all around the world. Altars can include retablos, photographs, food offerings, rosaries, milagros or other materials that may connect to stories of surviving COVID-19, struggles with illness or hardship and other journeys associated with labor.

Photos of completed altars may be sent to artmuseum@nmsu.edu March 1-18. Submissions will be posted on UAM Instagram (@nmsuartmuseum) on Saint Joseph's Day, March 19.

March exhibit features Huber, friends, students

BULLETIN REPORT

The March art exhibit at Doña Ana Arts Council (DAAC) will feature artwork by Las Cruces artist and art teacher Wayne Carl Huber and eight of his students: Joy Calvert, Penny Duncklee, Jane Grider, Richard Harris, Maria Lopez, Carmen Navar, Beverley Pirtle and Ana Maria Uranga.

The exhibit will be available for viewing 9 a.m.-5 p.m. March 1-26, at DAAC's Arts & Cultural Center, 250 W. Amador Ave., and noon-5 p.m. Saturday, March 13.

"This group of artists present an impressive résumé," said DAAC Executive Director Greg Smith. "Several are signature members of the New Mexico Watercolor Society (NMWS), and most have received awards. Their work has been seen nationwide and outside the United States. Visitors will have the opportunity to see landscapes, figurative work, abstracts and still lifes, all with vibrant colors and various mediums."

Huber started his art career at the University of Michigan and eventually finished with a degree in art education from Eastern Michigan University, DAAC said in a news release. After teaching for a few years, he earned a master's of fine arts degree from the University of Arizona in Tucson. In the 1970s, he started teaching at the collegiate level in St. Louis.

Huber's career includes representations in galleries, many one-man shows, group shows, juried exhibitions and awards for his work, DAAC said. Since moving to Las Cruces, he has taught at the Las Cruces Museum of Art, El Paso Museum of Art, Doña Ana Community College and private art classes.

NMWS signature member Calvert has studied with David Drummond, Tom Jones, Ken Hosmer and Jeanne Hyland. Her work can be found in private collections from California to North Carolina, and she has won awards in several regional shows, DAAC said. Calvert serves on the board of NMWS's southern chapter.

Duncklee has illustrated and painted the covers of books and magazines and shown her work both regionally and nationally, winning awards. She is an NMWS signature member.

Grider's education includes coursework at the Chicago Art Institute. Grider uses both pastel and watercolor to create landscapes that reflect the local scenery.

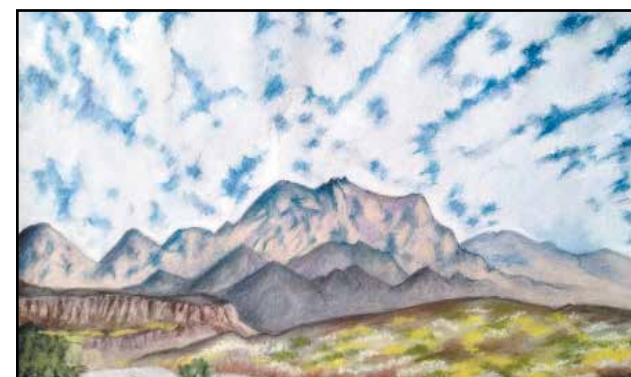

Harris, a self-taught artist, captures the elegance and magic of birds. He has received formal training from Julie Ford Oliver and Nancy Begin. Harris works in watercolor, acrylic and water-soluble oil paints.

Lopez, a retired teacher, often integrated art into other subjects to stimulate her students' interest in learning. Upon retiring, she began painting landscapes in oil and now paints mostly stylized portraits and figures in acrylic. She focuses on color, lines and shapes to guide the process of discovering her subject matter.

Navar, an award-winning, multi-media artist, recently received a bachelor's in fine art degree and a degree in multidisciplinary studies in drawing from the University of Texas at El Paso. She has been in various solo, juried and non-juried art shows in El Paso, Mexico, Latin America and at the UTEP Glass Gallery. Navar teaches art from her home studio and believes strongly the arts can be used to heal.

Pirtle has been taking art workshops since 2007 and achieved NMWS signature status in 2018. She loves to paint expressive landscapes, animals and florals. Pirtle paints mainly in the wet-to-wet style, allowing the medium to guide her work. She often adds details after the paint dries.

Uranga, a member of the Artist Guild of New Mexico, has studied art at New Mexico State University, Northern New Mexico College and in northern California. Her work, influenced by Impressionist study of color and light, captures the dramatic movements found in nature.

Arts Council seeks investors to join the Arts 100

BULLETIN REPORT

“To promote the creative economy, cultural tourism and local pride that can grow in proportion to how the arts thrive here, the Doña Ana Arts Council (DAAC) has added an additional opportunity for supporters to invest in our community through the arts,” DAAC Executive Director Greg Smith said in a news release.

DAAC is looking for 100 investors willing to make a significant impact, Smith said. Seven have already stepped up: Jordan Wolle, Michael and Barbara Mandel, Tom Kirschbaum, Kim Kirschbaum, Barbara Reasoner, Dan and Mary Lere and Hal and Carol Henthorne.

DAAC has assurances that the number will continue to grow during the coming months, with a goal of reaching 100 by the end of June, Smith said.

That support is more important than ever, he said, because state public health orders have caused the cancellation or postponement of many events that regularly generated funds for DAAC.

“The arts thrive in our region, and this community steps up to see that continue,” Smith said.

“As this region celebrates 2021 — The Year of the Artist — DAAC is celebrating 50 years that the organization has been promoting the arts here,” he said. “Those years have seen DAAC offering children’s programs, adult classes and workshops, gallery shows, performances, awards ceremonies, artist relief fund grants and fairs. Under DAAC’s direction, those years also saw the remodeling and reopening of the Rio Grande Theatre, 1998-2005, and theatre operation, 2005-17.

“The Mesilla Valley and nearby areas are home to a wide range of arts and artists and to a broad spectrum of supporters of the arts,”

Arts Council supporter: ‘I want to do what I can’

By BARBARA REASONER

Doña Ana Arts Council
Board Member, President Emeritus

I moved to Las Cruces from Denver primarily because of what I viewed as a stunningly talented art community. Taos and Santa Fe receive the lion’s share of the art publicity statewide, while there’s this Mesilla Valley jewel with so many unheralded artistic facets.

I became involved with the Arts Council before my boxes were even unpacked, ushering and handing out programs at the Rio Grande Theatre. Within three months of moving here, I found myself at Young Park helping set up and decorating tents for the Renaissance Faire.

Fast forward. I became a board member and then president during the painful separation of handing the Rio Grande Theatre over to the city.

This last year has played havoc with all nonprofits. DAAC was unable to have the Renaissance Faire this past fall – our major fundraiser to support the children’s programs and support the Mesilla Valley artists. To make matters worse, we will not be able to hold our second-largest fundraiser, the annual Las Cruces Arts Fair, at the convention center next month.

The Arts 100 is a major fundraiser and a way for the DAAC board of directors, community and art patrons near and far to step up and show support for our artists during this “time of COVID.”

I feel such a sense of community with the artists I’ve met and those I’ve created art with, that I want to do what I can to help close the gap to make certain that we keep DAAC thriving until we’re back on track with all the wonderful events we put on. It’s important to do all we can to help the artistic life blood of this community to keep flowing.

Barbara Reasoner’s six-year term on the DAAC board of directors ends in June. She was board president 2017-19.

Smith said. “These pieces have fit together over the past 50 years to ensure that the arts have flourished here.

DAAC offices and its arts and cultural center are located at 250 W. Amador Ave.

Remodeled RAD Retrocade will re-open

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

“There’s no way RAD’s not coming back. We are reopening,” said RAD Retrocade Bar and Grill owner Alex Macias.

Macias and his wife, Mariana, decided to close RAD at the beginning of the pandemic, even before the state order to close businesses. They opened the business at 201 N. Main St. in downtown Las Cruces June 26, 2019 and had about 50 employees when they closed last March.

“Let’s keep the customers safe,” was the Macias’ great concern, he said. “So, we closed our doors before we had to.”

“This is a horrible thing we’re going through,” Macias said, adding that his wife has lost four family members to COVID-19.

The couple and their children live in El Paso.

“Our main concern is, we don’t want to be part of the problem. We want to be part of the solution,” he said. “Let’s put things in perspective. We want to reopen, but people are dying. That’s why RAD has been very quiet about everything. Let’s get to a place where we’re safe.”

Because food sales do not comprise 51 percent of its business, RAD has had to follow state health restrictions imposed on bars rather than restaurants. That’s been frustrating, Macias said, especially when breweries have been allowed to reopen.

“We haven’t made a big fuss about,” he said, but added, “It’s been financially horrible for us.”

Macias said he and his wife have just reopened the bar they own in El Paso, and they hope to be able to reopen RAD in Las Cruces soon. As to a specific re-opening date? “Ask the governor,” Macias said.

The closure has given the Maciases an opportunity to think about ways to improve RAD, he said.

“We have all this time,” he said. “How can we make this place better?”

Renovations are underway on the first floor, he said, and there are also changes being made to the menu. Later, RAD will continue with its pandemic-interrupted plans to renovate its second floor.

About 2,000 square feet upstairs will be converted into a place for “the real gamer games,” Macias said. It will include another bar, a pool table, dart boards and retro arcade games.

And, Macias is planning to open another location at Santa Fe Place Mall on Cerrillos Road in Santa Fe — “a true ‘80s, inside-the-mall arcade,” he said.

“I’m so excited, I can’t contain myself about that,” Macias said.

“We’re really looking forward to the day when we can reopen,” said the NMSU graduate. “We want to do something great for the community. Las Cruces has just been so good to us.”

Lou Biad is Chile Association’s member of the year

BULLETIN REPORT

The New Mexico Chile Association (NMCA) has named chile entrepreneur Lou Biad as its 2021 member of the year, NMCA said in a news release. It’s the first award NMCA has given out.

The honor came during NMCA’s Feb. 2 virtual annual meeting.

Biad’s father started working in the industry by planting chiles in Arrey, New Mexico, in 1951, NMCA said. Lou Biad then built the first chile dehydrator in New Mexico in 1958. He was the first to bring mechanical dehydration to the industry, which revolutionized the way red chile was processed.

Biad served on New Mexico State University’s Chile Task Force and was one of the founding members of NMCA. It was Biad’s leadership and vision that formed the industry-led chile association to advocate for the industry.

NMCA Executive Director Joram Robbs presented the award to Biad at a chile-dehydrating plant in Radium Springs.

“The word that describes Lou Biad is passion,” said Cervantes Enterprises partner and NMCA Treasurer Dino Cervantes of Las Cruces. “He is extremely passionate about the chile industry and that follows through with anything he does or puts his mind to. Lou saw the need for the industry to work together to solve issues that threatened the industry, and his legacy lives on through this association. There

The New Mexico Economic Development Department's (EDD) Job Training Incentive Program (JTIP) Board has approved grants to train 232 New Mexico workers (230 trainees and two interns) — including more than 150 in Las Cruces, Mesilla Park and Deming — EDD Sec. Alicia J. Keyes said in a news release.

The JTIP grants total $1.77 million and will support training at 11 companies, including cheese manufacturing in Las Cruces, pecan farming in Mesilla Park and wine-making in Deming.

Funds have been approved for the following companies:

- Saputo Cheese USA, Inc., Las Cruces: 150 trainees. Saputo Cheese is one of the top 10 dairy processors in the world, employing approximately 17,200 people worldwide. The plant in Las Cruces produces Frigo Cheese Heads string cheese. The company plans to expand the Las Cruces facility, investing approximately $30 million to double its production capacity, and will add production lines along with an employee facilities center and wastewater treatment center. This is Saputo's first JTIP application. Average trainee salary: $16.81; total funding amount is $668,735.60. Visit www.saputocheese-usa.com.

At its Feb. 16 regular meeting, the Las Cruces City Council passed a resolution "declaring the city's intent to issue taxable industrial revenue bonds of up to $13.5 million for the purpose of inducing Saputo Cheese USA, Inc., to expand its operations by purchasing additional equipment at the city's West Mesa Industrial Park," the city said in a news release, adding that Saputo Cheese purchased F&A Dairy in 2018.

- Worthington Farms LLC, Mesilla Park: one trainee. Worthington Farms produces pecan products, including flavored pecans, oils, syrups, nut butter, soaps, lotions, lip balms and sugar rubs. Last year, Worthington Farms began securing operating capital to build a 5,000-square-foot facility to include shelling lines, a commercial kitchen and other equipment to allow it to become more profitable, keep the full production process local and lease facilities to other pecan producers.

Average trainee salary: $28.58; total funding amount is $102,955.12. Visit <https://worthington-pecanfarm.com/>.

- New Mexico Wineries, Inc. (dba Lescombes Family Vineyards), Deming: one trainee. Lescombes Winery crafts more than 40 different wines under many labels, including Blue Teal, D.H. Lescombes, Soleil and St. Clair. Lescombes also operates a number of bistros and tasting rooms, including D.H. Lescombes Winery & Bistro, 1720 Avenida de Mesilla in Las Cruces. Average trainee salary: $15.50; total funding amount is $10,230.00. Visit <https://lescombeswinery.com/>.

Biad turns 90 this year

Central Loan consolidates

Central Loan Company's longtime office at 104 S. Water St. sits empty after its owners consolidated operations at the 2607 N. Main St. location. After 65 years in the Water Street building, Central Loan co-owner and former Las Cruces Mayor Ruben Smith said the decision to leave the location was emotional, but it made sense for the business. All seven employees who worked in the Water Street office have moved to the North Main office, he said. Central Loan is the oldest, locally owned finance company in Las Cruces.

Evaluation, research program taking off at NMSU and beyond

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

RACHEL BOREN

The Southwest Outreach Academic Research (SOAR) Evaluation & Policy Center at New Mexico State University “is a perfect example of an entrepreneurial venture,” said Las Cruces Public Schools Superintendent Karen Trujillo, Ph.D. “There was a need for a culturally responsive, comprehensive program evaluation in education programs, and the NMSU Alliance for Teaching and Learning provided the funding and structure to make the SOAR lab a reality,” Trujillo said. “I am very proud of the work I did to get started and Rachel [Boren] and her team have continued to increase their capacity. The fact that it is still in existence five years later is exciting.”

Since SOAR began in 2015, it continues to evaluate NMSU programs in a number of departments, and it has expanded its outreach to include community programs that aren’t directly affiliated with the university.

“Our goal is to really help principal investigators inside NMSU or directors out of NMSU, or other nonprofits that need help,” SOAR Director Boren, Ph.D., said.

That help could be evaluating an NMSU research grant, conducting a detailed survey to help the new Doña Ana County behavioral health collaborative define the local need for services or working with The Bridge of Southern New Mexico or the Asombro Institute.

Boren said she enjoys the challenges and opportunities of working on a variety of projects “in all these different areas of social sciences and education.” In each case, it is up to Boren, SOAR Senior Program Specialist Germain Degardin and the doctoral students who assist them to find the best way to measure each organization’s goals and outcomes.

“No two projects are identical,” Boren said. “Their approach is never going to be exactly the same, and the outcomes are different.”

Many NMSU faculty are involved in grant work, she said. They are seeking program evaluations for grant-funded research projects with the hope of obtaining an R1 “very high research” rating.

The Las Cruces-based LC3 behavioral health collaborative, on the other hand, wanted to better understand the gaps in local behavioral health services and how it can best serve the community.

It’s also a great opportunity for the four doctoral students who are working with Boren and Degardin “to learn about research methods and program evaluations in a real setting with real clients and real projects,” Boren said.

“Local data is the pathway to understanding the barriers we need to address in behavioral health in our community to transform a system that works for all of us, and we were happy to partner with Dr. Boren and her team at NMSU SOAR,” said LC3 Collaborative Coordinator Rose Ann Vasquez. “The community-needs assessment will inform our next step of developing new services to meet those needs, reduce stigma and increase access to behavioral health.”

“The NMSU SOAR lab has been our evaluation partner on a new model for the senior year and for dual credit in New Mexico,” said The Bridge of Southern New Mexico President and CEO Tracey Bryan. “The Gadsden [school] district, Doña Ana Community College and The Bridge of Southern New Mexico partnered to launch a “blended senior year” for a group of students in Santa Teresa High School who would combine their senior year of high school with their freshman year of college.

“Thanks to Rachel Boren and the work of the SOAR lab, we were able to track the experience and outcomes of 34 students of the school and college instructors and gain valuable information about what works well, what were the obstacles and if the model is working for students,” Bryan said. “The first-year report confirmed that almost all students succeeded in either achieving or moving toward their college credentials, maintained strong GPAs and reduced any concerns students may have had about pursuing a college degree.”

Boren said that while COVID-19 has impacted some of the projects she has worked with, work is still coming SOAR’s way despite the pandemic.

“A lot of what we were doing was already online,” she said. “People are trying to find new ways to transfer what was happening from in-person to online. Data entry, surveys, online focus groups — we’re seeing that people can participate in data collection ... from all over the state, whereas before that may not have been the case.

And, when the pandemic is over, Boren said, some of the online work they are doing will no doubt continue.

“It’s just exciting for us just to get to learn from these different experts who are so passionate about what they do,” Boren said. She grew up in North Carolina and on the East Coast and has lived in New Mexico since 2017.

“For me, constantly learning about our state and all these groups around the state, it’s exciting,” Boren said.

NMSU scientists collaborate on NSF COVID-19 research on Southwest bats

By MINERVA BAUMANN
NMSU News

Can COVID-19 infect bats in the Southwest? If so, how would it effect spread of the virus in humans? Those are among the questions two New Mexico State University professors and a researcher from the University of Wisconsin School of Veterinary Medicine hope to answer with a $200,000 National Science Foundation Rapid-Response Research grant.

"I've been working a long time on spillback of pathogens," said Kathryn Hanley, NMSU regents professor of biology and co-principal investigator of the project. "We've seen SARS-COV-2 in bats, dogs, cats, lions, tigers and even mink. Once a virus gets back into wildlife, it's hard to find a treatment. SARS-COV-2 can get back into wildlife. My concern is bats."

Teri Orr, co-principal investigator and NMSU assistant professor of biology, who specializes in the study of bats, and Tony Goldberg, co-principal investigator and professor at the University of Wisconsin, whose work focuses on the ecology, epidemiology and evolution of infectious disease, are Hanley's collaborators.

Their project focuses on characterizing the susceptibility of North American bats to SARS-COV-2 infections. One hypothesis they're testing is the susceptibility of 17 targeted species of bat in the Southwest that may be based on genetics, behavior and life stage of each bat species. Another hypothesis is whether bat species with a high prevalence and diversity of native coronaviruses may be resistant to SARS-COV-2 infection.

"The species we have in New Mexico are extremely social, which is potentially problematic," Orr said. "Bats don't social distance on their own. From thousands of New Mexico freetail bats at Carlsbad to the tree bats that only roost as individuals or individuals with offspring, they could play an important role in spreading the coronavirus by how they come in contact with humans."

Orr and undergraduate biology student Daniel Ibanez and graduate student Lauren MacDonald started field work last summer, collecting bats throughout Doña Ana County and Grants. They also identified sites in Arizona.

"I participate in data-collection adventures, where I help by catching bats, and in the processing component, where we collect oral and rectal swabs, wing biopsies and blood samples," said Ibanez, who graduates with his bachelor's degree in biology in May 2022.

"I am obviously interested in whether SARS-COV-2 has, or has the potential, to spillback into North American bats. However, I am also interested in the other viruses our bats are carrying," said MacDonald, who will earn her master's degree in biology in May 2022.

The team is careful in collecting samples. They wear masks, shields and gloves.

"We don't kill the bats," Hanley said. "We've collected hundreds of bats. Our team is COVID tested the most of any research teams. We are very careful not to have any infectious contact with the bats."

The team is waiting for results of genetic analysis to understand what shapes risk of coronavirus transmission in Southwest bats.

Enrollment open for New Mexicans seeking health insurance

BULLETIN REPORT

BeWellnm, the New Mexico Health Insurance Exchange, has announced ongoing special enrollment for the New Mexico Health Insurance Exchange, which ends May 15. The special three-month re-opening of the Affordable Care Act (ACA) insurance marketplace provides uninsured New Mexicans with a new opportunity to find affordable coverage.

"BeWellnm encourages all uninsured New Mexicans to begin the enrollment process as soon as possible, because of the limited amount of time to find comprehensive, affordable health insurance options," said Maureen Manring, director of communication and outreach for beWellnm. "People who have lost job-based insurance during the pandemic or remain uninsured may not realize they are now eligible to enroll in the marketplace."

Manring said more than 56,000 uninsured New Mexicans qualify for significant premium reductions.

"Having the security of health insurance coverage may be more affordable than you think," Manring said. "BeWellnm is the only place where you can get financial assistance to provide you with low-cost or no-cost insurance, and free local help to explore your options. If you are considering enrolling in health insurance, call 1-833-862-3935 for assistance or visit beWellnm.com and schedule a virtual appointment. You could be covered by March 1, so sign up now. All plans cover the 10 essential benefits, such as doctor visits, hospital stays, maternity care, emergency room care, prescriptions and more."

Federal law and regulations provide protections against preexisting condition exclusions in health insurance coverage. Health plans must permit New Mexicans to enroll regardless of health status, age, gender or other factors that may predict the use of health services. With the special enrollment period underway, the New Mexico health insurance companies participating in the beWellnm marketplace include:

- Ambetter from Western Sky Community
- Blue Cross and Blue Shield of New Mexico
- Friday Health Plans
- Molina Health Care of New Mexico
- True Health New Mexico

Financial help is available to New Mexicans who qualify. A premium subsidy helps pay for health insurance, and the amount is based on income, family size and other factors.

The beWellnm team of certified navigators, enrollment counselors, agents, brokers and staff services are free, Manring said. They are available to help those in need review and explain health insurance options through telephone assistance or virtual appointments at 833-862-3935 or online by visiting beWellnm.com.

Manring said BeWellnm was created to help individuals and small businesses get access to affordable health insurance plans. BeWellnm helps consumers compare health insurance plans and

Osteoarthritis

Don't let it slow you down!

Osteoarthritis (OA) is one of the most common joint disorders, especially in adults over the age of 60. Two of the most commonly affected joints are the hip and the knee. Common symptoms are morning stiffness, where you feel like you need to get up and moving for 20 or 30 minutes before you "limber up", creaking or popping sounds from your joint, as well as pain and swelling which is typically worse towards the end of the day.

For a lot of people, the thought of knee or hip arthritis leads right to joint replacement surgery. While total hip or knee replacement surgery is an effective treatment for severe pain and disability related to OA, it's not for everyone and certainly shouldn't be the first line of treatment. Hip and knee replacements are major surgical procedures and are accompanied by significant risk. On top of that, both require months of recovery and rehab, and neither is a guaranteed solution with data showing that 10 to 20% of patients are not happy with the outcome after total joint replacement.

So if replacement isn't the first and only option, what else is there?

Exercise

Many studies have shown exercise to be beneficial in reducing pain and disability resulting from OA. Exercise can help regain range of motion and reduce stiffness around the joint. It also helps strengthen the muscles surrounding the joint which reduces the stress placed on the joint during activities.

Manual Therapy

Manual therapy is a hands on approach that can include joint manipulation (a quick thrust, often accompanied by a "pop" or "crack"), joint mobilization (more gentle, graded movements of the joint), and soft tissue mobilization (various forms of massage). These techniques have been shown to be effective in treating OA, especially when combined with exercise.

Weight Loss

Significant benefits have been shown in overweight patients with OA who have shown a 10% weight loss. We take thousands of steps in a day, and each step puts stress through our hips, knees, feet, and other joints. When you consider reducing that force by a few pounds a few thousand times a day, a little weight loss can add up to a big difference!

These are three effective and conservative treatment options that your physical therapist can use to help decrease the pain that you're feeling from arthritis. With a thorough evaluation, your PT can determine which options will best help you meet your goals and get back to whatever level of activity you're aiming for. On top of these options you PT can also consider things like bracing, and help you consider options your physician might be able to provide like injections or medications.

Just because joint pain is starting to slow you down, doesn't mean you have to live with the pain, face surgery, or give up your independence. Conservative treatment options from your physical therapist are an effective way to treat osteoarthritis and can help get you more active with less pain!

Diversity is making its way into professional golf

Unless you follow PGA Tour golf closely and watch untold hours of tournament TV broadcasts, you may not know the name Kamaui (ka-my-yoo) Johnson. Johnson is a 27-year-old professional golfer from Tallahassee, Florida, who became attached to golf in a most improbable way.

As a slightly built Black teenager of 14, Johnson was living in a two-bedroom apartment with his mother, grandmother and five other children. The dwelling was on the perimeter of Haliman Golf Course in Tallahassee.

One day in 2007, as Johnson was making sort of a golf swing with a stick (which had fallen from a tree), by chance he was noticed by Jan Auger, the course's general manager. When Auger inquired why the boy wasn't in school, he replied he was being home-schooled. Actually, labeled as a "slow learner" he had dropped out of the eighth grade. He has since earned his GED.

CHARLIE BLANCHARD

Sensing there was something special about the polite kid, Auger invited him to the course and told him there would be a 9-iron and a bucket of balls waiting for him. The rest is history, albeit a quite circuitous one.

Johnson began doing odd jobs at the golf course, like cleaning carts and painting, in return for rounds of golf for only $1. Picking up cast-off golf clubs and extras from members, he played with a hodge-podge set, but his talent grew.

Johnson worked hard and practiced hard to make up for his late start in the game. For the most part of the last decade he has been grinding on pro mini-tours, including the Florida Professional Tour and the Advocates Pro Golf Association (APGA) Tour.

The APGA was founded in 2010 by CEO Ken Bently, who is a Farmers Insurance Company board member, as a means and opportunity to prepare minority golfers to compete and gain better access in the world of professional golf. Presently the PGA Tour has only four Black players.

Sixty years ago, professional golf had none, until the PGA of America (pre-PGA Tour) rescinded its "Caucasians only" in its bylaws in 1961. Johnson has become the poster child of the fledgling APGA, owing partly to his winning the Tallahassee Open three times and the 2020 APGA Tour championship.

Farmers Insurance has provided funding for APGA Tour events, and has sponsored at least two players, Johnson and Willie Mack III.

"We value diversity and are proud to help support the APGA Tour in its mission to level the playing field for many talented golfers," said Jeff Dailey, CEO of Farmers.

In late January, Johnson was awarded a sponsor's invitation to the Farmers Insurance Open at Torrey Pines, Jan. 28-31. Unfortunately, Johnson tested positive for COVID-19 just prior to the start of the tournament, and he had to withdraw. His spot was filled by Mack.

Virtual event will honor late running enthusiast

BULLETIN REPORT

A longtime stalwart of the Las Cruces running community, the late Lawrence Joy, is being honored with a virtual 5k sponsored by Las Cruces Running Club (LCRC).

The Run for Joy virtual race is March 1-31. It commemorates Joy's contribution to road racing in Las Cruces. Joy died Oct. 16 in Albuquerque. He was a founder of LCRC in 2012, serving as president and in other capacities. He and his wife, Dorota Gruca, tirelessly promoted the club and its races, as well as assisting and training runners at all levels.

Runners can register for the Run for Joy at www.runsignup.com. Cost is $20, and a shirt will be provided. Proceeds will be donated to the American Heart Association. COVID-19 restrictions prevent running a group race, but subsequent annual events are planned in Joy's memory.

"We'll truly miss Lawrence MCing our events," said fellow board member Randy Castellano. "He was literally the voice of the club."

"Lawrence was the most exuberant, upbeat and vivacious person/runner I ever knew," LCRC board member Michael Lilley said. "He never failed to lift everyone's spirits and get them pumped up about a race and all the preparation it entailed."

Joy also was a former announcer for NMSU Aggie basketball and the NMSU marching band. He also owned a public relations/marketing firm in Las Cruces for many years and was marketing director for a Domino's BAM/Team Bailey franchise in Albuquerque at the time of his death.
