COUNTY HOSTS FUNERAL SERVICES FOR UNCLAIMED

The remains of 32 people whose bodies were not claimed will be buried Wednesday, May 26, at St. Joseph's Cemetery in Las Cruces, with Jess Williams officiating the non-denominational service. Following current gatherings restrictions because of the pandemic, the ceremony will be closed to public.

Each of the bodies has been cremated, and the remains have been in the custody of the Doña Ana County Health and Human Services Department for at least two years, as required by state law. No family or friends came forward during that period to claim the remains.

Doña Ana County pays for cremation and eventual burial for the remains of indigent individuals who die in Doña Ana County.

The unclaimed remains of military veterans are buried each year at Santa Fe National Cemetery with full military honors. Non-veterans are interred at St. Joseph Cemetery under a contract with St. Genevieve's Catholic Church.

The names of those cremated are:

New Mexico population growth falls well below region, nation

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico's population growth has slowed significantly in the last 10 years and that could be bad news for the state's economy, two Las Cruces economists said.

A report, presented by the New Mexico Legislative Finance Committee (LFC), shows the state's population has grown by only 2.8 percent during the past decade because of declining birth rate and more people moving out of the state than moving into it.

That could be bad news for the state's economic future, and it should trigger changes in the state's economic priorities going forward, the economists said.

"A slowdown like this is not a good sign for economic growth in the state," said Jim Peach, Ph.D., professor emeritus in the New Mexico State University Economics, Applied Statistics and International Business Department (EA-SIBD).

And, although there is no change as a result of the 2020 census, New Mexico could lose one of its three congressional seats in 2030 or 2040 if current trends continue, Peach said.

"The situation is very bleak," said EASIBD Interim Department Head and Professor Chris Erickson, Ph.D.

"The very slow growth that we're experiencing shows the economy is failing," said Erickson, also a Bulletin columnist.

Peach said population demographics like birth rate, death rate and migra-

Opening Up Recycling

Submitted by South Central Solid Waste Authority

With the state and country opening back up, New Mexicans can get back to recycling with a bit more ease. It's been a long year, and if you've been stashing the Amazon boxes because they won't fit in your blue bin, come back out to Las Cruces Recycle Center 2855 W. Amador Avenue or at the Foothills Landfill Composting Facility at 555 S. Sonoma Ranch Blvd.

Masks and social distancing are still encouraged.

"Once we came into the Turquoise level, we knew that there will be more people feeling ready to come deliver the recycling that might have piled up during the past year," Miguel Fernandez, South Central Solid Waste (SCSWA) program administrator, said. "We're ready for people to bring their recycling, but we want to make sure that people remember the basics – break cardboard down and make sure recyclables are clean, dry, and free from food waste."

The benefits of recycling are clear: what doesn't end up in the landfill and can be reused helps protect our environment. But, what is and isn't recyclable still can be a problem.

"If the past year showed us anything, it's that working together is key to solving problems," Fernandez said. "Nationally, the U.S. currently has a 32% national recycling rate, but we're working toward the U.S. EPA goal of 50% goal by 2030."

tion can change over time and there is often little state government can do about them.

Erickson said New Mexico's economic woes can be blamed on the state Legislature and former New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez. Current Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham "has not really had the opportunity to enact economic programs to move the economy forward" because of Covid-19, he said.

Peach and Erickson both said steps the state should take to try to change population decline include greater investment in infrastructure — especially broadband connectivity — and education.

"The number one thing we need to do in this state is fix K-12," Erickson said. New Mexico needs "a different kind of financial model," he said, with more local funding and local control of public schools and "a much better ability to adapt curriculum to local needs like it's done in most other states."

New Mexico may actually find itself spending less money on pre-school and K-12 education if the declining growth rate continues, Peach said. And, it will likely spend more on Medicare, Medicaid "and all of the things that we do for the elderly," he said.

Consolidation should be the direction higher education is heading in the state, Peach said. New Mexico has 22 community colleges, five tribal colleges and five major universities, and "that's too many for a state this size," he said.

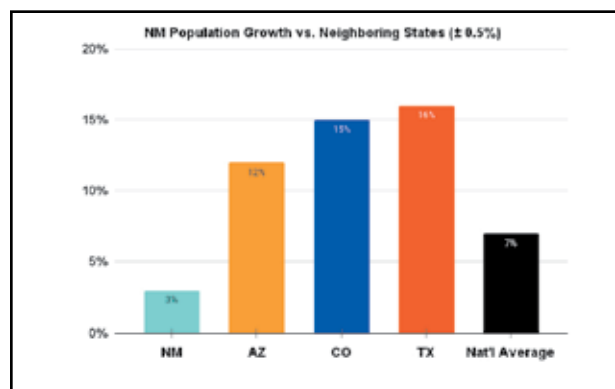

"We should have the best education system at least in the region," Peach said. "Our schools and colleges ought to be as good as those in surrounding states at a minimum."

New Mexico colleges and universities showed they could "move higher education online very effectively last year," Erickson said. "Why open more physical campuses?"

"We should be going in the other direction," said Erickson, adding that he has "become very good at teaching online in the past year."

Peach said the state should not tap its permanent fund (which is a major funder of education in the state) and should not reduce its current $1.75 billion reserve fund.

"Above all, we need stability," he said.

The state's reserve fund remains untapped in part because of a fear that oil and gas will run out in the state, Erickson said. "It will never run out," he said, although the demand may have already peaked.

State reserves are considered "a rainy day fund," Erickson said.

"It's a rainy decade," Erickson said. "Spend that money on something that benefits people. Our children's future is right now being wasted."

Erickson and Peach agreed that the Cannabis Regulation Act passed by the Legislature in a March special session and signed into law in April by Lujan Grisham likely will not produce a big money-making industry for the state.

It's a classic case of "only look(ing) at the benefits as opposed to only look(ing) at the cost," Erickson said. "There's a lot of competition in marijuana right now."

The Legislature also made substantial changes in the state's liquor laws during the 2021 regular session, but that also is unlikely to generate much new income for the state, Peach said.

Both economists said state government should be working to improve New Mexico as a whole rather than focusing on specific industries.

"I don't think we ought to be picking industries," Peach said. Instead, he said, New Mexico leaders should "make this state a really attractive place to live and work."

"I'm not a big believer in trying to bribe potentially large employers to come to our state," Erickson said.

Instead, he said, New Mexico should "grow internally," focusing on "our own business, home-grown entrepreneurs and job creators."

"We can do better and we're not," Erickson said.

He said the Legislature also needs to shift its economic focus from the future to the present.

"If you do it right, more economic activity and more revenue" are possible, he said.

The outcome predicted in the LFC report "is not inevitable," Peach said. "Things change. This is not something that is chiseled in stone."

"The bright spots are that we seem to be recovering from the pandemic faster than we did from the Great (Recession)" that began in 2007, he said.

"It took us 11 years to get back to where we were in terms of jobs before the recession started," he said. "We had just barely done that and the pandemic hit."

Covid-19 caused a huge loss of employment in the state, Peach said, but New Mexico "is coming back a bit faster ... and that's a good sign (and) oil and gas is coming back faster than expected."

"Given the status quo, New Mexico is heading toward having more, older New Mexicans using relatively expensive public services ... and fewer, younger New Mexicans in school and working," the LFC report said. "With birth rates continuing to fall, 43 percent of children who disenrolled from public schools during the pandemic moving out of the state, and the number of high school graduates projected to decline 22 percent by 2037, the state should be intentional about right-sizing capacity to address these trends."

A quarter million miles later, farewell, Rocinante

When I rolled out of Silver City that December night in 2000, I wasn't thinking 20 years ahead.

The new car smell permeated the 2001 Nissan Xterra I'd just purchased at Ridgewood Motors in Silver, the only dealer in New Mexico, or the five states that touch it, that had a model with all the features I wanted: four-wheel drive, CD-plus-cassette stereo, manual transmission and Nissan's Solar Yellow paint color.

Within the week, I had a printer in Alamogordo (where I was living at the time) make a red Zia symbol decal, which I placed on the back door of the SUV.

The Zia is a little worn, but remains steadfast, like the vehicle itself, which has only had three unplanned repairs in its 253,000 miles, most of those logged in the Land of Enchantment. The Xterra has taken me to the corners of New Mexico -- from Shiprock to Hobbs, from Raton to Rodeo -- and many of the cities, towns, highways and byways in between.

My youngest daughter Avalon is almost 18 but was not born when I got the car. When she was 5, we traveled from Alamogordo to Artesia and passed through a small, abandoned-looking town.

"Is this place called Hope?" she asked, reading the highway sign. "Yes," I replied.

"Doesn't seem like there's much hope here," she said.

I hoped against bad luck in May 2001, as I traveled south down U.S. Hwy. 666, the Devil's Highway, from Shiprock to Gallup, before the name was changed to the less ominous U.S. Hwy. 491.

I've traveled U.S. Hwy. 54 many times, most eagerly when traveling to Carrizozo pre-2010 to eat the world's greatest-ever green chile cheeseburger at the now-defunct Outpost Bar & Grill. Of course, if you turn northwest in Carrizozo at the intersection of U.S. 54 and U.S. 380, you're only an hour away from the two originators of the green chile cheeseburger in San Antonio: The Owl Bar and the Buckhorn Tavern are still going strong.

The Xterra may well have saved my life in November 2005. I had just visited the Gila Cliff Dwellings and turned onto N.M. Hwy. 15 when a sudden snowstorm hit. The road was treacherous and I nearly slid down the mountainside before I was able to put it in four-wheel drive for smooth sailing.

Among the New Mexico state highways, I've traveled the lowest number (N.M. Hwy. 1) from the Bosque del Apache to Elephant Butte. I've also traveled the highest number (N.M. Hwy. 2001), which leads up the hill in Alamogordo to the New Mexico Museum of Space History.

My favorite drive along a New Mexico highway is the 15-mile stretch north from Duran to Encino on N.M. Hwy. 3. Leaving the near ghost town Duran, you're in beautiful high forest. A couple of miles in, though, the bottom drops out. And you're faced with a beautiful wide expanse of prairie. My first time, it literally took my breath away. Sometimes, you'll see antelope. The addition of wind turbines has distracted from the once-pristine view, but it's still very cool.

At some point, I dubbed the ## Carniphobia? A common malady for the upwardly mobile

"Doctor, I'm here because I'm a . . . I'm a . . ."

"Relax. Many people have psychological conflicts. Lay back on the couch and tell me about it"

"Ok. It's just that I don't know if it's normal or something I should worry about. I'm a . . . vegan."

"I see. It's not an uncommon condition among the upwardly mobile. Something like 3 percent are afflicted at one time or another. The scientific name is Dysfunctional Alimentary Obsessive Behavior, or in layman's terms, Carniphobia.

"When did you first notice you were eating less meat?"

"In college, I think.

Most of the girls in the sorority house were concerned about their weight. And no wonder! What with the long hours, bad romances and poor eating habits. Red meat was designated the cause so we ate lots of chicken salad and chips and pasta."

"Are you still conscious of your weight?"

"Oh, yes. I'm always counting calories. I keep three sizes of clothes in my closet."

"What sort of Carniphobic would you consider yourself?"

"A recovering one. I still dream about spareribs and hot dogs, tri-tips and shredded beef tacos. Meat must be addictive. I sit there at the table in a fancy restaurant. My friends are eating fried chicken wings or pork fried rice or shrimp cocktail . . . I'm nibbling on crunchy broccoli and taking little bites of fruit compote."

"Does it make you feel good?"

"Well, I admit that I feel a certain smugness."

"Why?"

Economic inequality is a challenge for democracy

Thinking about the future of democracy in the United States and in New Mexico, it's necessary to consider the challenges presented to a well-functioning democratic system by high levels of economic inequality.

In New Mexico income per capita has bounced around for the last 40 years, sometimes being a little higher than 80 percent of the national average and sometimes a little lower. It's perhaps better known that New Mexico is generally at the bottom of the list of states ranked by per-capita income.

Another perspective

KATHY BROOK

on this issue is gained by looking at poverty rates.

New Mexico's poverty rate and its rate for children living in poverty are both about 40 percent higher than the national average.

Low levels of income and relatively high poverty are closely tied to the challenges of accessing good health and medical care, providing equitable education to all students, and promoting an improved quality of life in the 21st century.

The League of Women Voters of New Mexico believes that the state should have a strong leadership role in planning, implementing and funding economic development that includes good jobs with good wages and a healthy quality of life for all residents. However, these actions take time. In the meanwhile, the New Mexico Legislature recently provided some relief for low-income individuals by approving the low-income comprehensive tax rebate and the working families tax credit. Even if the taxpayer does not owe income taxes, the increased rebate is available.

As these mechanisms to address low levels of income are applied, it's also important to explore the implications of wide and growing disparities in income and wealth across the state and nation. For example, it has been reported that the portion of New Mexico's population at the highest income level has expanded its share of wealth during the past year. This is consistent with a comment displayed in social media that we are not all in the same boat experiencing the pandemic; instead, we are in the same ocean with some on yachts and others in rowboats.

According to the Center for Budget Policy and Priorities, from 1979 to 2007 (before the Great Recession), average household income, after transfers and taxes, quadrupled for the top 1 percent of households with much smaller increases for the middle 60 percent and bottom 20 percent. These disparities contribute to concerns about campaign financing and the use of "dark" money.

Our system for funding elections has a history of being dominated by small numbers of wealthy donors. Contributions through Super PACs (political action committees) conceal the identities of the donors, making it difficult for voters to evaluate the information or misinformation directed at them in soliciting their votes.

Education, including media literacy, and civic engagement can be important factors in addressing the challenges posed by economic inequality. With substantial funding being distributed to school districts in response to the pandemic, we as citizens need to monitor how it addresses growing economic inequality and supports democracy.

Kathy Brook and Eileen VanWie are co-presidents of the League of Women Voters of Southern New Mexico.

"Because, I'm suffering! And they're having the time of their life!"

"Like a martyr, maybe. What's on your mind watching them eat?"

"Mostly that I can't wait to get home and dig into the box of candy by my bed."

"Do you feel better knowing no animals were killed for your meal?"

"Some, I guess. But that's not something I lose sleep over. It all comes from the grocery store."

"Did you have some childhood trauma that may have influenced you?"

"Not really. I ran over a cat once."

"Cats eat meat."

"Cows don't."

"Do you feel a special relationship with cows. As a fellow Carniphobic, I mean?"

"No. I don't think about cows much."

"So, you don't eat meat, even though you apparently like it because of your concern about your weight. Is that a fair conclusion?"

"I guess so. And the self-esteem I gain from the sacrifice."

"Time's about up. But my prognosis would be that your Carniphobia could be fairly easily cured if you wished. However moderation should be practiced in all eating habits. Any more questions?"

"Yes. Is tofu really good for you?"

"I would say it ranks with pickled pigs feet."

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

President Biden proposed economic plan should be implemented

To the editor:

With President Biden's proposed programs on infrastructure and families, Republicans are calling them socialism ideas that will move us toward communist countries like

Cuba or Venezuela. That is not true. Capitalism does a good job of providing goods and services like automobiles, groceries, electronics, banking, repairs, haircuts, and clothing. But there are certain collective needs that the private sector has little incentive to provide — such as public education, roads and bridges, broadband access in rural areas, mass transportation, childcare, police, retraining programs and basic research. To have a successful society, we need both.

We have a mixed capitalism/socialism economy. However, during the last 40 years we have reduced funding for collective needs — creating greater inequality. Most other developed countries like Western Europe, Canada and Australia have done a much better job in quality education of everyone, access to affordable health care and providing resources for the less fortunate — like the homeless. These policies have not adversely affected the productivity of the private sector or its ability to provide good paying jobs — it has actually enhanced job creation.

We spend 60 percent of our discretionary federal budget on defense — much more than any other country — including our enemies. Time to take care of our citizens, rather than policing the world. Another desperate need is a tax system where everyone pays their fair share — like we did back in the 60s and 70s. The Biden plan will move us back to a more prosperous economy for everyone.

Xterra "Rocinante," after Don Quixote's horse.

I'm a baseball fan, and Rocinante has carted me to professional games as far east as Tulsa, and as far west as Phoenix. As far north as Denver and as far south as, well, El Paso. During a trip back from Phoenix, one of those unplanned repairs happened. The air conditioning went out. In Arizona. In August. I tried to cool down with some hot Kona coffee from In-N-Out Burger in Tucson, and later learned, after much searching, there is no hotel in Lordsburg with a swimming pool. Could have really used a dip in the water.

Alas, this week, Rocinante and I parted ways. I'd been considering selling it for two or three years, but its usefulness kept preventing me. That, and probably an unhealthy emotional attachment.

In a way, though, it's staying in the family. The new owner, Lanze Hibler, is the son of Elva Österreich, who has worked with me on and off since 1998. There were several times, when Elva and I were both working at the Alamogordo Daily News, I would be with my daughter Avalon, and Elva would be with Lanze, before either one could talk. The first night I had the Xterra, I drove it to the Daily News Christmas party, where Elva was in attendance. Elva rejoined me in 2016 here at the Bulletin.

Lanze needs a four-wheel drive as he's moving to Colorado to begin aeronautics school. He's also mechanically minded, and loves the fact it has a manual transmission.

I doubt he'll need the Xterra to go another 250,000 miles, but I'm pretty sure it will get him where he needs to go. Godspeed, Lanze and Rocinante.

State's licensing agency to oversee cannabis

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

The New Mexico Regulation and Licensing Department (NMRLD) likely will hire 50 additional employees to oversee the state's new Cannabis Regulation Act (CRA), NMRLD Superintendent Linda M. Trujillo said in a telephone interview.

Trujillo said 13 employees have already moved from the New Mexico Department of Health (NMDOH) to become part of NMRLD's new Cannabis Control Division (CCD). That's because CCD is taking over statutory authority for licensing all medical cannabis establishments in the state effective June 29.

CRA, with a total staff of 60 to 70, will oversee licensing of cannabis businesses, manage the state Cannabis Advisory Board and provide enforcement for the new law, Trujillo said.

The legislature passed CRA during a March 30-31 special session, and Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham signed it into law April 12.

New Mexico is the 17th state to legalize the so-called recreational use of cannabis for those age 21 and older, along with the District of Columbia, the Northern Mariana Islands and Guam.

"There is just so much we have to do to make this successful," said Trujillo, who served 2017-20 in the New Mexico House, representing Santa Fe County. "We don't want to crash and burn the way some states have done."

Trujillo said CCD will blend what NMDOH has done to successfully administer the state's medical marijuana program since it was created by the legislature in 2007, with what her staff has learned from other states that already have legalized recreational cannabis.

The agency will also focus on public education and information, Trujillo said.

"What are the key things folks need to know?" she asked, if they are interested in growing cannabis for their personal use or as a commercial enterprise. "Getting yourself educated on what the process is for doing that" is the first step they should take, Trujillo said.

For people interested in starting a cannabis business in Las Cruces, getting a city business license is job one. Visit www.las-cruces.org/2221/Register-or-Renew-a-Business.

The city Economic Development Department (EDD) "is currently working to seek best practices for better understanding what other cities have done in the transition of cannabis legislation," EDD Deputy Director Francisco Pallares, Ph.D., said.

"This includes strategies implemented, lessons learned and evaluating the best approach on the development of the cannabis industry from the local economic development perspective," he said.

EDD will put together information about the new industry "as we craft a strategy for it," Pallares said.

Contact city Business Concierge Donald Bustos at dbustos@las-cruces.org for more information.

At Doña Ana County, a person would need to obtain a business registration/license, Community and Constituent Services Manager Elizabeth Reed said. Visit www.donaa-nacounty.org/clerk/business.

"Any business related to cannabis will be permitted in the zoning district which permits the specific use, i.e., retail, agricultural, manufacturing, etc.," Reed said.

Trujillo said the NMRLD website (www.rld.state.nm.us) has a resource guide about adult-use cannabis. Other state and local resources are also available to assist startups, she said, including local business development centers. But, help from the federal government, including grants and loans, is unlikely, Trujillo said, because cannabis has been listed as a federally controlled and prohibited substance since 1970.

CCD is meeting with staff from the New Mexico Department of Agriculture, the state Environment Department, the state engineer and the state fire marshal's office to gather their input in the drafting of CRA rules and procedures, Trujillo said. The rules will be available for public review and comment by the end of May, she said.

NMRLD had received nearly 80 applications for the 16-member Cannabis Advisory Board, Trujillo said. (Applications closed May 3.) By statute, the board must include attorneys, law enforcement officials, members with previous experience as cannabis producers, officials representing public health, Native Americans, small business development, water resources and others.

The committee also will advise CCD "on the development of rules covering a variety of policy subject matters," NMRLD said in a news release.

CCD will begin accepting and processing license applications for cannabis producers by Sept. 1, the news release said. Commercial sales of cannabis will be authorized by April 1, 2022, Trujillo said.

Personal use of cannabis is "a whole separate thing" from commercial production, the superintendent said.

Under CDA, individuals age 21 and older will be allowed to grow up to six cannabis plants in their homes effective June 29, Trujillo said, with up to 12 plants allowed if there is more than one person age 21 and over at the residence.

Trujillo advised renters to check with their landlords before growing plants on rental property.

For health and safety reasons, CCD will track cannabis plants "from seed to sale," Trujillo said.

NMRLD regulates more than 500,000 individuals and businesses in 35 industries, professions and trades across the state.

La Posta receives 'Backing Historic Small Restaurants' grant

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH
Las Cruces Bulletin

American Express and the National Trust for Historic Preservation have divided a million dollars between 25 historic and culturally significant restaurants in the United States owned by under-represented groups.

The restaurants, including La Posta de Mesilla, will receive funding through the "Backing Historic Small Restaurants" Grant program.

Each restaurant will receive $40,000 in grants funded by American Express and administered by the National Trust. The National Trust will also provide technical assistance to support the use of the grant funds.

In 1939, Katy Griggs Camunez started her own "little chile joint" with four tables on a dirt floor, no running water and her mother preparing food from century-old recipes from local families. It's still in the family, now run by Katy's great niece, Jerean Camunez Hutchinson and her husband Tom. The expanded La Posta compound is recognized on the National Register of Historic Places.

"We are very honored and privileged," Tom Hutchinson said. "They were looking for places with a good story and which are historically prominent. We were very fortunate to be selected."

The funds can only be used to enhance the front area, to clean it up, he said. They had plans pre-Covid to work on the parking lot, so they "dusted off" the existing plans for improvements.

One of the several entrances at La Posta de Mesilla in the town of Mesilla.

"We'll do some parking lot enhancements, some building enhancements out front," Hutchinson said. "You can see where things can get enhanced pretty quickly — from the rock beds to the silent facade. Even the wood trim on the windows could be refinished."

He said work on the parking lot had to stop because that is where the outside tent had to be during Covid.

Now that the county has gone to Turquoise Covid status, the restaurant has been busy inside as well as with curbside services but, Hutchinson said, because he can't find enough staff, they will have to temporarily close inside services on Tuesdays and Wednesdays until folks are ready to look for jobs again.

"As the county opens back up, people have an appetite to get out," he said. "I hope (being closed two days a week) is a temporary thing. It's a dilemma right now for us."

The grant funding will help each restaurant enhance restaurant exteriors, build new outdoor seating areas and upgrade online businesses to help mitigate operating costs as they work to recover from the financial impacts of the pandemic. La Posta is the only New Mexico restaurant selected.

taurants are cultural treasures that strengthen their communities and carry their legacies and traditions forward in deeply meaningful ways," said Katherine Malone-France, chief preservation officer with the National Trust. "These restaurants have demonstrated their resiliency for decades, and even while dealing with the financial impacts of the pandemic, they have continued to support their communities in many ways. We are honored to partner with American Express to help these landmarks write the next chapters in their amazing stories."

Roseanne Liang (“Do No Harm,” “My Wedding and Other Secrets”) co-wrote and directed this 2020 horror actioner about a World War II pilot (Chloe Grace Moretz, “Dark Shadows”) traveling with classified documents who encounters an evil entity aboard her B-17 flying fortress. Nick Robinson, Beulah Koale, Taylor John Smith and Callan Mulvey also star in this U.S./New Zealand co-production.

“Movie: Race for Your Life, Charlie Brown!”

The Peanuts gang is at it again in this feature-length 1977 animated adventure that garnered good reviews but disappointing box office numbers. The story finds Charlie, Linus, Snoopy and their friends away for the summer at Camp Remote, where they endure a variety of mishaps and participate in a whitewater rafting race against a group of bullies.

“Movie: Neat: The Story of Bourbon”

Co-writer/director David Altrogge's ("3801 Lancaster: American Tragedy," "Clemente") 2018 documentary celebrates the artistry of America's only native spirit through an exploration of its history and interviews with those who make it, including master distillers Marianne Barnes and Denny Potter and actor Steve Zahn ("That Thing You Do!").

“Movie: Wander Darkly”

Sienna Miller ("21 Bridges") stars as a woman so emotionally traumatized by a car accident that she believes her injuries were fatal and she's a ghost, thus forcing her and her partner (Diego Luna, "Narcos: Mexico") to dig into memories of their past for answers in this 2020 drama from writer/director Tara Miele ("Starving in Suburbia"). Beth Grant and Vanessa Bayer also star.

Movie: Tracking a Killer

Her father's sudden death leaves teenage Haley struggling with serious anger management issues, but joining friends Elaina and Abby on the track team helps. Things go south, though, when Abby is found dead in the locker room, shortly after a noisy argument with Haley. Police place Haley under house arrest in the suspicious death, but while her mother hires an attorney to defend her, the situation becomes more grave when Haley's assistant track coach is killed too. Laurie Fortier, Jane Dillon and Huntington Daly star in this 2021 thriller.

Charmed

A ghastly fate worse than death awaits Jordan (Jordan Donica) unless the Charmed Ones (Melonie Diaz, Madeleine Mantock, Sarah Jeffery) are able to save him in the new episode "Chaos Theory." Such a rescue would come at a grave personal cost to themselves, however. Elsewhere, Harry (Rupert Evans) sets off on a process of transformation. Poppy Drayton also stars.

tonight's picks

Ryan Seacrest

7 p.m. on KVIA
American Idol

As it does each May, the singing competition comes down to this: the season finale, in which a new "Idol" is crowned and starts on a path to hoped-for stardom. Sometimes, that happens — see: Kelly Clarkson and Carrie Underwood — but on other occasions, it doesn't, so time will tell. As this round of the show ends, judges Luke Bryan (who had a COVID-19 bout during the season), Katy Perry and Lionel Richie weigh in with their concluding opinions on the finalists. Ryan Seacrest is the host, of course.

7:30 p.m. on KFOX
Duncanville

Amy Poehler and Rashida Jones return to their respective voice roles as imaginative teenager Duncan and Mia, his secret crush, as this delightful animated comedy series opens Season 2 with a pair of back-to-back episodes. They've also brought some old friends: their former "Parks and Recreation" cast mates Adam Scott, Aubrey Plaza, Retta and Nick Offerman, all in guest voice roles.

8 p.m. on KRWG
Atlantic Crossing on Masterpiece

Season 1 of this docudrama about the real-life World War II relationship between Crown Princess Martha of Norway (Sofia Helin) and President Franklin D. Roosevelt (Kyle MacLachlan) concludes with "A Queen Returns." With the war nearly over, the president's health takes a turn for the worse. Meanwhile, Olav (Tobias Santelmann) tries to keep Norway out of the hands of the Soviets as he faces rocky relations with Martha.

8 p.m. on KFOX
Bob's Burgers

Bob (voice of H. Jon Benjamin) looks forward to a father-daughter date with Tina (voice of Dan Mintz) on which he plans to introduce her to a beloved old campy vampire singalong movie, until she inadvertently throws a damper on the occasion by inviting some of her friends to tag along in "Vampire Disco Death Dance," the Season 11 finale. Elsewhere, big-hearted Linda (voice of Jon Roberts) endeavors to open a little restaurant for the raccoons who live in the adjacent alley. Guest voices include Jenny Slate and Kurt Braunohler.

10 p.m. on HBO
In Treatment

The doctor is back in, as HBO reboots this character-driven drama about a therapist and his clients, 10 years after the series ran for three seasons with Gabriel Byrne in the shrink's chair. This makeover stars Emmy winner Uzo Aduba as Dr. Brooke Taylor; the ensemble also includes John Benjamin Hickey ("Jessica Jones") as a white-collar criminal undergoing therapy following his recent prison release; Quintessa Swindell ("Euphoria") as a rebellious teenage client; and Anthony Ramos ("Hamilton") as a home health aide. The series premieres with two back-to-back episodes.

11 p.m. on SHOW
Black Monday

Executive produced by series star Don Cheadle, this underrated comedy about a group of underdogs who caused the worst stock market crash in the history of Wall Street returns for its third season. At the end of Season 2, Dawn (Regina Hall) took the fall for the Black Monday fiasco, while Mo (Cheadle), who had fled to Miami, rebounded as head of the newly minted The Mo Co. Andrew Rannells and Paul Scheer also star.

11:30 p.m. on SHOW
Flatbush Misdeemeanors

Series creators and writers Kevin Iso ("High Fidelity") and Dan Perlman ("That's My Bus!") also take the two starring roles in this new character-driven comedy series about city life, specifically, two socially awkward longtime buddies who are struggling to climb out of their own heads and start to thrive in their new surroundings of Flatbush, Brooklyn.

For its 50th animated feature, Disney puts clever twists on the familiar tale of "Rapunzel," with Mandy Moore voicing the heroine whose lengthy hair makes her the captive of a villainess (voice of stage veteran Donna Murphy) wanting to harness its magical power. Zachary Levi ("Chuck") speaks the words of a thief who invades the tower where Rapunzel is being held, then teams with her to escape. The score is by Disney veteran Alan Menken ("Beauty and the Beast").

Justin Hartley

6 p.m. on TLC
7 Little Johnstons

When last we saw them, parents Trent and Amber Johnston were instructing son Jonah to find his own living space within three months. Now, as Season 9 opens, Jonah — who recently turned 21 — is swamped with juggling that house hunt with a job search, not to mention a new long-distance relationship. Elsewhere in the household, daughter Anna is ready to move out as well, since her constant arguments with Amber are putting the entire family on edge.

6 p.m. on FS1
MLB Baseball

A rematch of the 2017 World Series is in the offing tonight at Minute Maid Park, where Jose Altuve and the Houston Astros open up a quick two-game home series against Mookie Betts and the Los Angeles Dodgers. Though the 'Stros won that series in seven games, it is now the Dodgers who sit on top of the baseball world, owning a 2020 championship and a first place standing in the NL West so far in 2021.

7 p.m. on KVIA
Mike Tyson: The Knockout

This two-part, four-hour documentary — which concludes next Tuesday — chronicles the climb, crash and comeback of the polarizing boxing superstar, who rose from a difficult childhood to becoming a world champion in his sport. Tonight's opening two hours begins with Tyson's determined self-transition from mercilessly bullied kid into "the baddest man on the planet." Former trainers Bobby Stewart, Teddy Atlas and Joe Colangelo reflect on Tyson's life in and out of juvenile detention, while former opponents Michael Spinks and Buster Douglas recall their bouts with Tyson.

7 p.m. on OWN
Black Women OWN the Conversation

Emmy Award-winning host Adrienne Bankert joins advocate and community organizer Jotaka Eaddy to talk with a panel of special guests and "real" women about an assortment of topics that all are related to mental health in this new one-hour special.

8 p.m. on KFOX
Mental Samurai

Host Rob Lowe returns to launch the sophomore season of this unconventional competition, an improbable combination of game show, sporting event and thrill ride. Contestants vie with one another, and a ticking clock, while being whipped around the arena strapped into Ava, a high-speed capsule with a robotic arm that can turn the players a full 260 degrees. It's like an obstacle course for the mind, as the contestants fight to stay focused and answer questions of general knowledge.

8 p.m. on KVIA2
Superman & Lois

David Ramsey ("Supergirl") directed the new episode "Man of Steel," which finds Clark (Tyler Hoechlin) still doing everything he can think of to help son Jordan (Alex Garfin), who continues to struggle with his powers. Elsewhere, Lois (Elizabeth Tulloch) recruits Clark to assist her in her investigation, which leads to a surprise encounter. Emmanuelle Chriqui, Jordan Elsass, Dylan Walsh, Erik Valdez and Wolé Parks also star.

8:30 p.m. on TBS
Chad

This audacious coming-of-age comedy series, which casts creator and star Nasim Pedrad in the title role of a 14-year-old Persian boy, borrows a page from the hit musical "Dear Evan Hansen" as it closes out its freshman season with "Finale." After virtually the entire high school gets the mistaken impression that Chad has been the victim of a hate crime, they rally around him supportively. This long-coveted popularity is something Chad has been pursuing all season, leaving him torn as to whether he should tell the truth about what happened.

9 p.m. on KRWG
Race Matters: America After George Floyd

Judy Woodruff anchors this new special in which she and PBS NewsHour correspondents take a look at America a year after the death of George Floyd. While that crime, for which former Minneapolis police officer Derek Chauvin was convicted, definitely thrust the issue of racial equality back into the public discourse, several communities around the U.S. subsequently have seen a rise in protests, police killings and hate crimes.

9 p.m. on KDBC
FBI: Most Wanted

The Season 2 finale "Chattaboogie" finds Jubal Valentine (Jeremy Sisto, guest starring as his "FBI" series character) recruiting Jess (Julian McMahon) and his team to help track down an undercover DEA agent who appears to have gone dirty — and homicidal — in the middle of a major drug operation. Meanwhile, Sarah (Jen Landon) starts to worry that she made a mistake by moving in with Jess and Tali (YaYa Gosselin) too soon. Kellan Lutz and Roxy Sternberg also star.

9 p.m. on KTSM
This Is Us

If fans of this Emmy-winning drama series feel like the current season went by even faster than usual, they're not mistaken: Owing to a late production start due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Season 5 included two fewer episodes than usual. Viewers definitely will be watching "The Adirondacks," the season finale set at the wedding of Kevin and Madison (Justin Hartley, Caitlin Thompson), for clues to what's coming in Season 6, which will conclude the Pearson family saga. Milo Ventimiglia and Mandy Moore also star.

11 p.m. on FX
Mr Inbetween

Scott Ryan returns for his third season of this cult black comedy from Australia, playing hired mob hitman Ray Shoesmith, who struggles to balance his illicit and frequently violent life "on the job" with more normal guises in his private life as single father, boyfriend, caregiver and ex-husband. And you thought your life was tough. Chika Yasumura, Damon Herriman, Brooke Satchwell and Justin Rosniak also star.

Workplace and work style after Covid -19

BY MARKUS BENTON

The pandemic has forced the adoption of new ways of working. Organizations must re imagine their work and the role of offices in creating safe, productive, and enjoyable jobs and lives for employees.

Changing attitudes on the role of the office

Before the pandemic, the conventional wisdom had been that offices were critical to productivity, culture, and winning the war for talent. Companies competed intensely for prime office space in major urban centers around the world, and many focused on solutions that were seen to promote collaboration.

Four steps to re-imagine work and workplaces

1. Reconstruct how work is done
2. Decide 'people to work' or 'work to people'
- fully remote (net positive value-creating outcome)
- hybrid remote (net neutral outcome)

- hybrid remote by exception (net negative outcome but can be done remotely if needed)
- on site (not eligible for remote work)
- 3. Redesign the workplace to support organizational priorities
- 4. Resize the footprint creatively

Workplace Communities

Before the corona virus hit, employees spent untold hours at the office talking with colleagues in the hallway or around the coffee machine. They discussed solutions to problems, provided advice, and served as sounding boards to their coworkers' challenges. Occasionally, they shot the breeze and chatted about weekend plans. For the time being, this crisis is robbing them of those kinds of social interactions.

9 Future of Work Trends Post-COVID-19

1. Increase in remote working
2. Expanded data collection
3. Contingent worker expansion
4. Expanded employer role as social safety net
5. Separation of critical skills and roles
6. (De-)Humanization of employees
7. Emergence of new top-tier employers
8. Transition from designing for efficiency to designing for resilience
9. Increase in organization complexity

How can we put safety first?

The health and safety of the workforce should be management's top priority as it considers how to bring operations back to some semblance of normal. This is, of course, a moral, ethical and legal concern for all companies. And from a business perspective, safeguarding employees' well-being is paramount because no plan to resume normal operations can succeed without them.

Work-At-Home After Covid-19

- Increased demand for work-from-home from employees
- Reduced fear about work-from-home among managers and executives
- Increased pressure for work-from-home for disaster preparedness
- Increased awareness of cost-saving opportunities in work-from-home
- Increased awareness of the potential impact of work-from-home on sustainability
- Reduced Business Travel

Who do we bring back onsite, and when?

Returning to the workplace could mean recalling

FROM THE CHAIRMAN

It's Been an Honor to Serve You

My tenure as board chair of the Las Cruces Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has come to an end. It certainly has been a privilege and an honor. Thank you for the opportunity to serve for you and with you. I'm ready to take on other leadership roles in our community. Como Mexicano-Americano, I take great pride in remaining as a board member of this storied chamber and Hispanic institution.

The year 2020 and the beginning of 2021 have certainly been filled with challenges and unknowns for all of us in business, in our careers and, especially, at home with our families. Many have suffered great loss during a pandemic that shuttered our country. I was not immune to that; I suffered the tragic loss of my precious, ama, the matriarch of la familia Alba and a dear friend, Audrey Hartley. At Casa de Peregrinos, we lost 100 percent of our volunteers to the pandemic; they simply did not feel safe. I know many of you suffered great loss and, believe me when I tell you, all of you were in my prayers.

We all saw people we know -- friends, family and co-workers -- suffer great loss as well. We all went into this pandemic blindly. However, we are coming out of it together.

I'll be the first to admit I was not at my best in my community leadership roles during this pandemic. I knew I had to focus on my family and my mission, especially my staff at Casa de Peregrinos. With that, I feel I neglected some of my other leadership positions. I can look back and learn, but I cannot take back my failures.

The realization that many of my goals as chair were not accomplished will not deter me from striving to make our organization better. I will commit to staying involved as past chair and in the future as a member of the chamber. Nosotros los Hispanos must stay united and confront our challenges together. We must continue collaborations with other chambers and the business community as a whole, as well as advocating for issues that affect small business, entrepreneurship and workforce development to our leaders at the municipality, county, state and federal levels.

I am committed to my family, mission and this community. I challenge you to join me. We all must take active roles in improving our city and the communities where we live. As we struggle to restart after a devastating crisis, we must take a look around us and do our part to make things better.

Today's often divisive climate has, at times, made it difficult to maintain friendships and business partnerships. We hear talk of unity, but it is only talk until actions are taken. We hear talk about tolerance, yet we continue the "cancel culture" mentality.

We must celebrate the successes in our community, like economic development, job creation and more. But we must also address joblessness, homelessness, systematic and generational poverty, healthcare and food insecurity. The bottom line, paraphrasing St. Mother Teresa, is that we must lead person to person and not wait for leadership. We must be the leaders.

Thank you, board of directors and members. It's been my pleasure to serve. And a special thank you to the Amigos. You are steadfast in leadership and always make us look good. God bless everyone and your families always.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Let's reopen businesses to full capacity

After going through a year and three months of the world's domination from the COVID-19 pandemic, we finally can see a pathway to normalcy. The spread of the corona virus and its variants are slowing down in America and other countries around the world.

Safety guideline restrictions that were put in place to help curve the virus are now being cautiously removed by the CDC. Businesses will soon have the opportunity to reopen with even less restrictions and our children will be able to go back to school full time.

We all miss the ways our lives were a year and a half ago, the ability of going to a restaurant and sitting down to enjoy a nice meal without the fear of contacting the virus. Also, we miss visiting our loved ones in person without needing to wear a mask and risking their health. This virus has halted us from going to restaurants, museums, movie theaters, sporting events, concerts, vacations to theme parks, large gathering celebrations and even attending church.

However, the way we used to attend these events and enjoy so many other activities will once again return in our near future.

How are we finally getting back to a place of normality? Why is the spread of the corona virus slowing down?

The answer is that many more Americans are getting vaccinated. I realize that most of you already know this. However, I am reaching out to the individuals who are hesitant about getting vaccinated with any of the three available and free vaccinations.

All Americans have the right and freedom to make our own decision on whether or not to receive their vaccinations. Currently, there has been over 265 million vaccine doses given and over 118 million people fully vaccinated, about 36.8 percent.

Many states and companies are offering incentives to those individuals who are reluctant to be vaccinated. They are offering free rides to vaccination locations and free tickets to sporting events. Ohio is the first state to offer a chance to win a million-dollar lottery for anyone getting a vaccination.

Why are we giving incentives to get individual vaccinated? The goal is to get 70 percent of Americans vaccinated by July 4. If this can be accomplished, we will hopefully have the opportunity to reopen businesses to full capacity. Imagine the change we can make for our city, state, and country with all us being vaccinated and all restrictions removed.

The CDC has lifted its restriction guidelines for fully vaccinated individuals, on mask wearing and social distancing while indoor or outdoor. Fully vaccinated people can also engage in full activities regardless of the group size without wearing a mask. The CDC has also approved children from 12 years and up to be vaccinated. Schools will be able to fully reopen five days a week when more children have been vaccinated.

There are so many great reasons why everyone should get vaccinated. I am truly excited to see the pandemic is being curved downward in America and throughout the world. I am optimistic that all Americans will get fully vaccinated and help our communities fight this virus. We are Americans and there is nothing that we can't do if we are unified and work together.

Many precious souls have been lost and many businesses have suffered and some have closed due to COVID 19. We can now make a difference. Get vaccinated and help us reopen our businesses to full capacity.

May God bless you and all of our family members and friends that we have lost this past year.

furloughed employees, transitioning away from mandatory remote work or ramping back up toward full productivity regardless of where work is being performed. For many companies, it likely means a combination of all three. But as management teams develop strategies to get their businesses back on track, most will probably focus on getting employees who really need to be in the office or on the factory floor back into the building as soon as it is safe and practicable to do so.

What do employees need to manage this change?

Without employee buy-in, even the best-crafted plans are likely to run into trouble. Management teams should lead with empathy and demonstrate an understanding that while all of their employees have experienced this crisis, they haven't all experienced it the same way. Some employees may have conditions that increase their risk of serious COVID-19 infection and may be reluctant to return to the office. Others may be eager to leave remote work behind, but have care giving responsibilities that make it difficult or impossible for them to do so. Sensitivity to this reality is a must.

Digital Security While Working Remotely

Companies of all sizes are under attack. Meanwhile, remote work has become a necessity for modern organizations looking to recruit talent and create business continuity plans. A good example of business continuity occurred in the spring of 2020, when organizations around the world sent hundreds of thousands of information workers to work from their home offices in response to the COVID19 outbreak.

- Avoid public Wi-Fi; if necessary, use personal hotspots or some way to encrypt your web connection.
- Keep Work Data on Work Computers.

Physical Security While Working Remotely

5 simple and effective tips to spring clean your business

BY ALEX BELSEY

During the season of Spring, it can be beneficial to clean not only your home, but other areas of your life too.

For example, if you are a business owner, now can be a great time to reassess where you are and plan for a prosperous future.

Spring is the perfect time for fresh starts and new beginnings — and that goes for your business too.

Spring cleaning may normally involve physically cleaning, decluttering, and organizing your space, but in business, it can extend so much more than that. For example, why not declutter your digital files, organize your budget, optimize your processes, and more?

With the five simple and effective tips below, you will learn how to spring clean your business in easy and impactful ways. You can help your business from the inside-out, improving and refining inner workings such as processes, budget, and workplace culture, through to outward-facing areas such as reputation, accreditation, and outreach.

Read on to discover where to start when giving your business a spring clean, and watch your business grow and thrive as a result.

1. Revise Your Budget & Processes

An important first step in spring cleaning your business is to revisit its crucial core elements especially budget and processes.

Your budget should be as flexible and adaptable as possible. It should be easy to maintain, and most importantly, regularly reviewed. Otherwise, it is easy for costs to creep up and for the business to become unprofitable.

You can use this as a time to assess exactly how and where your business is spending money, and assess whether you are receiving enough benefit from these expenses.

Perhaps there is one area of outreach or advertising that is working well, for example, and another that is weak. Maybe it would be a better decision to invest more in the effective area, and stop paying for the other.

Depending on the size and scale of your business, budgets and processes can quickly become overwhelming and time-consuming — especially if they need to be regularly reviewed. This is a great time to embark on our second tip, getting a fresh perspective from a knowledgeable professional.

2. Enlist the Help of Experts

No matter how experienced and accomplished they are, the best entrepreneurs know when others know better. They enlist the help of experts, specialist advisors, and those with specific skillsets, on a daily basis.

A great way to update and upgrade your business is to do the same. Identify the areas that you most want to improve or seek advice on — such as processes, budget, or advertising, for example — and enlist the help of an expert.

Many companies rely on copywriters with experience in search engine optimization, for example, or bid and tender professionals who can identify the best opportunities and help to win more work for their business.

An expert professional can help you to gain an overview and see the bigger picture in your business, or else home in on the fine details and the specialist support that they can provide.

Rather than trying to learn and execute everything yourself, rely on the knowledge and experience of others, thereby growing your business as a team — whether as a one-off consultation or a more sustained, regular collaboration.

Select the areas of your business on which you wish to focus, then research and reach out to the best professionals who can help.

3. Communicate with Your Team

A spring clean of your business should also involve the help of your team. Now is a great time to discuss your ideas and goals with them, and to get their input.

Not only is this a great way to gain additional insights on where your business might be thriving or underperforming, but studies also show that employees who feel involved and consulted are more likely to be invested in the outcome, and in the business overall.

Additionally, seeking the opinions of your team and genuinely trying to implement their advice, suggestions, and preferences is a great way to foster a strong team dynamic and grow the business organically.

The best leaders are not only concerned with what their employees can do for them, but also what they can do for their employees. Make an effort to foster a workplace culture that is inclusive, communicative, and mutually supportive.

Your business will soon reap the rewards of a happy workforce, with increased productivity, better employee retention, and faster growth.

4. Earn Certifications & Accreditations

A great way to upgrade the inner workings of your business — as well as its image and public reputation — is by seeking official accreditations and certifications.

Certifications and accreditations are a great way to instantly communicate your legitimacy, experience, and trustworthiness to your potential clients.

They help to show that you are fully up-to-date with all the necessary safety protocols and procedures, for example, and that you have undertaken the relevant checks, examinations, and more.

An accreditation or certification can communicate all this with just a simple logo or 'stamp of approval'. In a competitive marketplace, more customers than ever are seeking the fastest and most reliable ways to decide which company to purchase from.

A trustworthy stamp of approval or accreditation could therefore be the difference between standing out from your competitors or slipping under the radar of your customers.

The best choices of accreditation will depend on your industry and sector. Respected accreditations in construction will differ from well-known certifications in accounting, for example, but both would serve the same function as a great way to immediately demonstrate your expertise to potential clients and customers.

5. Align Your Goals with Your Values

Whatever the time of year, be sure to regularly assess your business goals and whether they still align with your overall values and vision.

This might include factors like your working hours, workplace culture, as well as the growth you want to see for your business in the next few years, the problems you hope it will solve, and the customers you want it to serve.

As a business evolves, so too does its owner. Schedule regular and methodical times to take stock of your progress and evaluate your next move.

This way, you can be sure that both you and your business are progressing in ways that always align with the principles, goals, and lifestyle that you value.

Growing up at MountainView Regional Medical Center

By Beryl Ramsey, Interim CEO
MountainView Regional Medical Center

MountainView Regional Medical Center opened in August of 2002. As we approach our 20th anniversary next year, we have employees who have been with us since the beginning and we have employees who literally “grew up” with us. I’d like to tell you about one of them. His name is Brian Lara and he is a certified nurse practitioner at MountainView Urgent Care at Northrise.

Brian began his journey with MountainView as a volunteer greeter in the ICU waiting room. He wanted to volunteer because he felt drawn to healthcare and wanted to get a feel for the hospital environment. Brian’s bachelor’s degree was in industrial engineering, but he knew that he wanted to change his career path. That was in 2007. As he was volunteering, he observed the role the nurses played in caring for patients and how they also comforted family members.

Becoming a certified nursing assistant was the stepping stone between volunteering and becoming a nurse. Brian got his certification here in Las Cruces and he described it as a fun and eye-opening experience. “My first job as a CNA was night shift on telemetry. Yazmine Estrada with the director of telemetry at that time and she was integral in my success,” said Brian.

From the time Brian started volunteering at MountainView in 2007, it was his plan to become an RN. After working as a CNA for about a year, he went through the Roadrunner program at NMSU, which is a RN to BSN track and he graduated in December of 2009. MountainView encouraged Brian the whole time he was in nursing school by adjusting his schedule to meet his coursework and providing scholarship money.

“MountainView also gave me the opportunity to work as a volunteer and as a CNA which gave me invaluable experience toward achieving my goals,” he said.

After receiving his RN, Brian stayed on the telemetry unit for 2 years. He then moved to the emergency room and worked there for 3 years. In 2015 he transferred to urgent care and has been there ever since.

While working in the emergency room, several co-workers became certified nurse practitioners. But it while working at urgent care that Brian decided to go back to school to become a CNP. He enrolled in the program at Grand Canyon University in 2016.

Brian Lara, FNP

“Once again, MountainView was helpful in encouraging me toward the path of becoming a CNP. They supported my schedule change, provided many precepting opportunities and overall made the experience very smooth. Once I was a CNP, I was provided an opportunity/job position as a CNP at the urgent care.”

Brian most appreciates the culture of teamwork at MountainView and believes that special people work here and it shows inside and out. Brian knows that whenever things get difficult, the teamwork really shines and is evident. “Ultimately, it’s the people that I like most and that we are all humans working to help other people, whether it’s our patients, family members or co-workers.

For the future, Brian wants to continue his education by learning more about emergency and urgent care medicine through continuing education and certifications. But for now, the urgent care is where Brian wants to be.

That’s what it means to “grow up” at MountainView Regional Medical Center. Thank you, Brian for all you do for our patients, their families and your co-workers.

Have You Done Your Weight Loss Research?

Obesity increases the risk of potentially life-threatening diseases such as diabetes and hypertension. These diseases can make normal daily activities difficult and significantly decrease life expectancy. In addition, such diseases are often very expensive to treat.

Bariatric surgery enables patients who have been unable to lose weight using diet and exercise alone to lose a significant amount of weight and maintain that loss over the long term. Approximately 228,000 Americans undergo bariatric weight loss surgery each year. When combined with exercise, healthful eating and social support, bariatric surgery can help patients overcome struggles with excess weight and may improve other health conditions. Here’s a look at some of the health benefits of bariatric weight loss surgery.

Benefits of Bariatric Surgery, by the Numbers

According to research published in the Cleveland Clinic Journal of Medicine, the following percentage of patients experienced improved or complete resolution of these health conditions following laparoscopic gastric bypass:

Creating a Family Health Tree

Health conditions are caused by a variety of factors. Environment, lifestyle and genetics all play a role in the development of disease. Knowing your family history will allow you a greater opportunity to make lifestyle changes that can help prevent disease. Use this family history "road map" to get started.

Start the conversation. First make time to talk with your closest relatives — that means your parents, brothers, sisters and children. If your family keeps a written family tree, use that as a starting point. Reach out to other relatives, including grandparents, aunts and uncles, cousins, and nieces and nephews.

Keep a record. Write down your family's health history, including relevant dates, health milestones and relationship to you. Share it with your family members and discuss it with your doctor.

Update information as necessary. Keep track of changes in your family's health record, including diseases or medical conditions, births, or deaths.

You started your family health history. Did you get all the information you need? The National Institutes of Health recommends including these details:

- age and date of birth
- chronic conditions, including heart disease, high blood pressure, diabetes, dementia or asthma
- other specific diseases, including cancer and stroke
- age the family member experienced the conditions
- age the family member had children

Other details may help paint a clearer picture of your family health history, including where relatives lived or what country they came from, if any family member had a developmental disability, and the age and cause of death of deceased relatives.

Family health knowledge is power — create your history today to ensure a healthier future for yourself and your children.

Ways To Keep Your Spine Healthy

Numerous lifestyle factors can throw your spine out of alignment. Some examples include sleeping on your stomach, spending long hours in an office chair and wearing footwear that doesn't offer proper support.

Try these everyday strategies to improve your spine's alignment:

Remain neutral. A neutral position is one in which your spine is naturally curved throughout the neck, middle and lower spinal regions. Choose forms of exercise, such as yoga, that can be done with your spine in a neutral position. Talk with your doctor about spine-friendly exercises you can do at home and those you should avoid.

Sit tight. When sitting in a chair, especially for hours at work, sit up straight with your legs uncrossed and at 90-degree angles. Be sure to rest your back against the chair, as more pressure is placed on the back while sitting than when standing.

Sleep right. Getting enough sleep is important, but so is sleeping in supportive, healthy positions. Sleeping on your back is the best position because it enables your head, neck and spine to line up naturally and remain in a neutral position. Sleeping on your stomach causes strain and pressure on your spine, and can cause pain, numbness or tingling, according to the National Sleep Foundation.

Find the right fit. Wear shoes that provide proper support. Flip flops and high heels should be worn occasionally, not every day.

Maintaining proper spinal alignment requires developing both balance and flexibility. Grab your yoga mat, and adjust your spine with these balance- and flexibility-focused yoga moves:

Child's pose can realign your spine and provide relief to an achy back that's used to slouching in a chair. On your yoga mat, sit on your knees with the tops of your feet flat on the floor. Slowly lower your upper body until your forehead touches the floor. Extend your arms out in front, palms face down.

Seated twist helps lubricate the spine and increase its range of motion. Sitting up straight and cross-legged on your mat, twist your torso to the right, placing your right hand behind your back and your left hand on your right knee. Slowly untwist and come back to center. Repeat on the left side.

Hip Replacement - Procedures and Options

Total hip replacement, also known as hip arthroplasty, can be an effective treatment option for patients with unresponsive chronic hip pain. The procedure was first developed in the 1960's, and now approximately 200,000 hip replacement surgeries take place in the United States each year.

The hip is the largest ball-and-socket joint in the body. It plays a key role in mobility, and if it becomes damaged, it can significantly impact quality of life, making it painful or difficult to walk, stand and sit.

In hip arthroplasty, the damaged joint is removed and replaced with synthetic components made of metal, ceramic or plastic. Other surgical treatment options for hip pain include arthroscopy and osteotomy. According to a study published in International Orthopaedics, approximately 95 percent of total hip replacement surgeries examined in long-term studies successfully continue to reduce pain and improve mobility 10 years after the initial procedure.

What to Consider

Before recommending hip arthroplasty, teams of orthopedic specialists perform thorough evaluations of potential patients. As with all major surgical procedures, potential complications are associated with having a total hip replacement. The procedure requires general or regional anesthesia, and infection, blood clots and dislocation are all uncommon but possible side effects.

While there is no age limit on the procedure, the average age of a total hip replacement recipient is between 50 and 80, according to the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons (AAOS). That is likely due to the fact that the three most common causes of deteriorating hip functionality—rheumatoid arthritis, osteoarthritis and hip fracture—are closely associated with advanced age.

Factors influencing the longevity of hip replacements include the materials used in the prosthesis, the amount of ongoing wear and tear on the joint, and the way the new joint is attached to the bone.

Cemented hip replacements take less time to rehabilitate but are susceptible to loosening, which may require revision surgery. Cementless hip replacements use porous surfaces to encourage bones to naturally attach themselves to the components, a process that can take extra time. The bond, if completed successfully, is stronger and less likely to loosen if the joint is used vigorously. This type of hip replacement is recommended for those with healthy bone mass, typically found in younger, more active patients.

Minimally Invasive Options

Minimally invasive total hip replacement surgical techniques allow surgeons to complete the procedure using one or two smaller incisions. The benefits of this type of procedure include reduced recovery time, less soft tissue damage and fewer cosmetic concerns.

The AAOS estimates the average hospital stay for a patient who undergoes minimally invasive hip arthroplasty is about three days less than those who receive a new hip joint in an open procedure. Minimally invasive total hip replacement is not a viable option for every patient. Speak to your physician team to see if you could benefit from it.

Hip Resurfacing

In hip resurfacing, the surface of the thighbone's femoral head is cut back and covered instead of being removed as in hip replacement surgery. The socket portion of the joint is removed and replaced in both approaches.

The procedure, which was originally introduced in the 1990s, retains more of the original bone, which is important if the patient needs revision surgery on the hip. The socket devices used for the procedure have come under review, however, due to possible metal ion complications and a higher failure rate in patients with smaller frames. Studies suggest hip resurfacing has the highest rate of success in men with large frames.

Volunteer Fair and Giving Day Event Huge Success!

As we are almost half-way through with 2021, many nonprofit organizations, businesses, and individuals, are finding their 'new normal'. Virtual meetings via Zoom and virtual events have become staples in our every day lives, while large in-person gatherings have become a thing of the past...for now....

This year's Volunteer Fair and Giving Day event was held virtually via the Facebook event page on Friday, April 23, 2021. The event was designed to ignite giving across the region for 23 hours, to support causes in our community and to give matching funds to 23 nonprofit organizations.

For the giving aspect of the event, for 23 hours, donors were encouraged to give to their favorite nonprofit organizations to support causes in our community. Donors were engaged via social media and emails for weeks leading up to the event. The event was also utilized to provide organizations with the opportunity to nominate a dedicated volunteer to be recognized via a social media post in the Facebook event page. Volunteers are a vital part of the success of nonprofit organizations. Agencies cannot achieve their mission without the generous time given by volunteers.

AMANDA

The first 23 organizations that successfully registered were eligible to receive matching funds offered by the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico and United Way of Southwest New Mexico. In order to be eligible for the matching funds, organizations must have a 501c3 tax determination or be connected to an organization (as an affiliate or as their fiscal sponsor) that has the 501c3 tax status. Organizations that do not hold such a status were encouraged to still participate and take donations, but they were not eligible for the matching funds provided by our community partners. All donations made during the 23-hour time frame online via the donation link provided were eligible for the matching funds.

Through this event, we were able to promote philanthropy and use social media to engage new donors in our community. Nonprofit organizations were able to reach their fundraising goals, but also reach new donors and share messaging about their vital programming.

Nonprofit organizations and donors throughout our community who participated in the Volunteer Fair and Giving Day event on Friday, April 23, 2021, assisted with raising $19,893.80 which was matched by our community partners for $7,817 for a grand total of $23,708! Our community is so generous and truly amazing!

Now looking forward, the event committee has big dreams to expand the Giving Day event for 2022 by recruiting more organizations to participate in the event. The goal would be to engage more donors and business corporations in creative ways via multiple social media platforms, newsletters, other media outlets, email listservs and so much more!

The Volunteer Fair and Giving Day steering committee includes: Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico, La Casa, Inc., Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity, and United Way of Southwest New Mexico.

FROM OUR U.S. SENATOR

The beginning of the end of the pandemic

BY U.S. SENATOR
MARTIN HEINRICH

I am grateful to all of the New Mexico health care heroes and other essential workers who have stepped up to help our communities weather the challenges of this past year. I am increasingly optimistic that with the widespread distribution of vaccines--and particularly with our strong rollout in New Mexico--we are finally nearing the end of this pandemic.

As part of the American Rescue Plan that Democrats in Congress and President Biden recently passed into law, there was $20 billion to supercharge our nationwide vaccine distribution campaign—including dedicated funding for the VA Health Administration and the Indian Health Service that I secured to make sure vaccines make it to our veterans and hard-to-reach Tribal communities. We also passed $50 billion in new funding for testing, genomic sequencing to stay ahead of the curve on new variants of the virus, and contact tracing efforts so we can finally put an end to this pandemic.

There will soon be $1.2 billion in emergency funding support heading to New Mexico's K-12 public schools to help our educators address students' needs and make sure all of our schools can safely reopen for fulltime in-person instruction. I also fought to secure a $350 billion program that will soon deliver aid to state, local, and Tribal governments to help them cover the emergency expenses of the pandemic and protect the jobs of teachers, firefighters, and first responders.

I also fought to pass additional support for small business owners in the American Rescue Plan, including more support for the Paycheck Protection Program (PPP) and a new $28.6 billion Restaurant Revitalization Fund that is specifically targeted toward small, locally-owned restaurants, food trucks, and bars that are the cornerstones in our communities to help them keep their doors open.

The American Rescue Plan also included critical financial support for families and workers like the $1,400 direct payments, expanded support for food assistance programs, and a historic expansion of the Earned Income Tax Credit to allow workers to keep more of their paycheck and the Child Tax Credit to help parents and families cover the costs of raising a child.

Now that we have passed emergency resources to address the immediate emergency brought on by the pandemic, we need to invest in our nation's infrastructure and human capital to set the foundation for a strong and sustainable long-term economic recovery. Too many families in New Mexico are living without internet access, clean water, and reliable electricity. President Biden's American Jobs Plan is our opportunity to change that.

I am committed to passing legislation in the Senate that will make bold and forward-looking investments in transportation and water systems, in our land ports of entry like Santa Teresa and Columbus to grow our trade economy, and in the clean energy infrastructure that will help us confront the climate crisis and power our economic success in the decades ahead.

President Biden's American Families Plan offers us another once-in-a-generation chance to expand our children's opportunities by providing each and every one of them with a high-quality education from early childhood all the way through to college and a good-paying career. It will also take a two-generation approach to deliver economic security to families by providing much-needed support for child care, making health care more affordable, and establishing a comprehensive, national paid leave policy.

We've learned the hard way over the years that if you don't make these kinds of investments in people and families, that the negative impacts of an extreme event like COVID or a financial crisis linger in the economy. We need to make the right decision this time around to not take an austerity mindset so that we can get the economy going in a way that delivers opportunities for success to all New Mexicans. I will never stop fighting to make sure New Mexico gets the resources it needs to build an economy that grows even stronger and is more diverse than before the pandemic.

I also want to help provide the resources New Mexicans need to get back on their feet after all we have been through during this past year. My office is here to help you navigate any challenges or identify new opportunities. You can reach my Las Cruces Office by calling (575) 535-6561 or by visiting my website at Heinrich.Senate.Gov. Please don't hesitate to contact us if we can be of any assistance to you and your family.

Alma d'arte Charter High School: Preparing artist/scholars to succeed

To fully appreciate the story of Alma d'arte Charter High School—where it's been, where it is today and where it's going—one must also understand its beginnings and the rich past of the historic building that houses the school.

Initially, the property was the site of the original Doña Ana County Court House that existed at the site from the 1890s until 1936. Then, in 1941, Court Junior High School came to fruition through a Works Progress Administration (WPA) project. Following its stint as a junior high school, it became Court Youth Center in 1993 under the direction of Irene-Oliver Lewis who led a campaign to secure more than $6 million to renovate the historic school and developed and implemented an award-winning, after-school arts program using a positive youth development philosophy. The arts integration, positive youth development, and multi-cultural awareness that was created by the Court Youth Center later became the basis for starting a charter school.

After two years of research and meeting with a variety of focus groups, Alma d'arte Charter High School was created. Its founder, Irene Oliver-Lewis—a writer, producer, performer, arts administrator and advocate—envisioned an institution where student's creativity would be awakened and where they may flourish as productive, successful scholars.

Alma d'arte was chartered by the Las Cruces Public Schools Board of Education in December 2002. The school is a pioneering arts-based secondary school serving a diversity of learners through a rigorous academic and integrated arts program since 2004. Alma's dynamic educational program integrates the visual, performing, literary, media, and culinary arts into academic content areas. Students learn to understand and creatively explore the connections between disciplines and diverse ways of thinking. This integrated approach ensures that students develop into creative thinkers equipped to better succeed in a complex society where personal, professional and artistic boundaries are increasingly fluid and career multi-faceted.

In its first year, the arts integration charter high school enrolled approximately 80 ninth and tenth graders split evenly between the two grades. There was one teacher for each "core" subject (English, Mathematics, Science and Social Studies), a Spanish teacher, a visual arts teacher and several Americorps artists in residence that worked with licensed teachers to facilitate arts integration. Americorps artists along with community members provided art enrichment opportunities to Alma students such as jewelry making, band promotion, hand drumming, silk screening and martial arts. The school planned to work with students with special needs through a full inclusion approach and a special education coordinator rounded out the faculty.

From its inception, cross-curricular integration was as equally important as arts integration. Amy Simpson, the school's first English teacher, suggested the implementation of an essential question project where students and teachers would delve into an overarching theme for a whole year. Each course would complete a project that would help students answer the essential question from that content area perspective and students would present their findings to a panel of teachers. Every year since that first year, with the exception of the 2020-21 school year (due to COVID-19), students and teachers have grappled with fundamental questions dealing with the arts, the self, community and how we engage with each.

2010 was the final year in which Americorps participated at Alma, ending a very fruitful period of learning for both students and teachers. With the help of the Americorps artists in residence, many teachers had developed strong arts integration projects that deepened students' understanding of the core curriculum. The essential question projects continued to provide cross-curricular learning for students while the Apprenticeship program served as a culmination of Platica advisory program (another seminal idea of the founders). The Apprenticeship program also culminated with a Senior Panel where seniors shared their apprenticeship experiences along with a reflection of their time at Alma with a panel of teachers. The powerful reflections students share make having a Kleenex a must, along with a good appetite due to the delicious dishes culinary students' often share to ensure a strong score. Teachers are only human, after all.

Currently Alma also provides the offerings of a typical high school such as special education services, assistance for English language learners, Advanced Placement and honors courses as well as Dual credit classes offered in cooperation with the Doña Ana Community College and New Mexico State University. Alma offers free lunch prepared by the culinary students and electives like theater, guitar, dance, yoga, botany/gardening, sculpture, advanced culinary and poetry. The visual art program has become one of the strongest visual arts programs in the city as students have earned best in show honors at every spring Senior Art Show since they have started submitting.

Today, students and staff who are a part of the Alma d'arte learning community are here because they are interested in the value of an educational experience which has arts integration as the foundation to academic excellence. Arts integration provides the skills, methods, strategies, and problem-solving (opportunities) necessary for positive youth development in today's sophisticated multi-media world.

Alma offers a unique school culture that enables students to flourish as artists and scholars in a creative and nurturing environment. This is a home-away-from-home for its students, where they are surrounded by like-minded peers and supportive faculty in a small class setting. Students receive opportunities to participate in a variety of traditional school sponsored activities, special events, clubs, and organizations that enhance leadership skills, develop confidence, and form meaningful memories.

With Alma's high level of diversity, students are emboldened to embrace their individuality and educators work to help them nurture self-expression. Built on passion, discipline and a commitment to excellence this integrative educational experience inspires all students to believe in themselves and what they can accomplish.

Press Your Luck

Elizabeth Banks returns as host (and an executive producer) on this reboot of a vintage game show, in which three contestants compete in a game of wits and strategy, answering general knowledge questions to earn spins at the Big Board for cash and prizes. That's assuming they don't hit the Whammy, which could take away all the prizes they've racked up, leaving them with nothing.

8:02 p.m. on KFOX
Crime Scene Kitchen

The title makes this nutty

kitchen competition series sound like an unholy mash-up of two insanely different genres, and that's only slightly off the mark. Each episode finds host Joel McHale welcoming two teams, each made up of two chefs, into an empty kitchen. Well, not quite empty: The space recently was used to create a fabulous dessert, which has gone missing. The chef teams compete to see which can survey such clues as used kitchen implements, crumbs and raw ingredients to identify what dessert was baked — and then bake it themselves.

"Movie: Hotel Artemis"

Drew Pearce wrote and made his feature directorial debut with this 2018 thriller set in a dystopian near-future Los Angeles, where Jean Thomas (Jodie Foster), a severely agoraphobic nurse, runs a secret facility that caters to criminals (house rules include "no killing of other guests"). The impressive ensemble also includes Sterling K. Brown, Jeff Goldblum, Charlie Day, Jenny Slate and Zachary Quinto.

"Movie: Trumbo"

Bryan Cranston scored a well-deserved Oscar nomination as best actor for his performance in the title role of Jay Roach's 2015 biopic about the life of esteemed screenwriter Dalton Trumbo, who landed on the infamous Hollywood blacklist after he declined to cooperate fully with the House Committee on Un-American Activities looking into possible Communist propaganda in film. Diane Lane, Helen Mirren and John Goodman also star.

"Movie: Nobody"

Bob Odenkirk ("Better Call Saul") stars as a seemingly milquetoast family man who turns out to be so much more after invaders attempt to rob his home in this joint Spanish/Russian/American production. Connie Nielsen, Christopher Lloyd and Michael Ironside star in this 2021 actioner from director Ilya Naishuller ("Hardcore Henry").

"Panic"

Creator Lauren Oliver used her young adult novel of the same name as the basis for this hourlong drama about a group of graduating Texas high-school seniors who compete in an annual series of challenges that this year has ramped up to dangerous levels. Olivia Welch, Mike Naist, Jessica Sula and Enrique Murciano ("Without a Trace") head the cast. (ORIGINAL)

In Focus

"The Cube" (TBS — series premiere, June 10)
NBA All-Star Dwyane Wade hosts this new U.S. adaptation of a hit U.K. competition series in which contestant pairs must demonstrate their skill, determination and sheer nerve as they attempt seemingly straightforward mental and physical tasks. Unfortunately for them, those challenges become exponentially harder because they're confined in the titular glass box that seems to have a mind and attitude of its own. While trying to win the $250,000 jackpot, each team can bring in Wade to compete on their behalf for one attempt only.

"Us on Masterpiece" (PBS — series premiere, June 20)
Adapted from David Nicholls' Booker Prize-nominated novel, this new two-part, four-hour dramedy (which concludes next Sunday) revolves around Douglas and Connie (Tom Hollander, Saskia Reeves), a scientist and artist respectively, whose once provocative differences in personality have only become more tedious over the course of their 20-year marriage. Now that their moody son, Albie (Tom Taylor, "The Dark Tower"), is about to head to university, Douglas thinks it's the perfect time for one last big family vacation. Connie, however, thinks it's the perfect time to ask for a divorce.

Las Cruces School of Dance & Music adds outdoor venue, sets performance schedule

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Covid-19 has impacted every business in Las Cruces differently. At the Las Cruces School of Dance & Music (LCSDM), it sparked a vision, said co-owner Marc A. Moffett. It also resulted in a new outdoor venue at the school, 1390 N. Main St.

“The pandemic forced theaters to close just weeks before our spring performance of ‘Peter Pan,’” said Moffett, who operates LCSDM with his wife, Monique Foster. “For a while, we held out hope that we would be able to get back to the performance by fall. But as the pandemic worsened, it became apparent that the closures were here for the long haul. We closed March 16 to June 1, at which point we opened with a highly limited summer youth program (classes limited to five students, as opposed to our normal capacity of 20).”

Foster said it quickly became apparent that they needed to make some serious adjustments for the pandemic.

“At first, we were just relieved to be able to offer in-person classes and our students were happy to have some place outside of their homes to go,” Foster said. “We recognized pretty quickly that dance training over Zoom was seriously limited, especially for less advanced dancers. You just can’t see technique and alignment clearly from a fixed perspective. And the younger dancers had such a hard time with all the in-home distractions. So even the limited opening was a gift.”

“We are still operating under Covid restrictions, though we will have space in many of our summer dance classes,” Moffett said. “Dance is a performing art and by this spring our students had not performed in almost a year and half — since our last performance of ‘The Nutcracker’ in December 2019.”

“We have very dedicated students,” Foster said. “But it can be difficult to keep up the hard work without the excitement of a show to look forward to. It is also hard to learn how to perform without actually performing. We had to do something and once it became clear that there was a light at the end of the tunnel, we decided to act.”

“We had a design drawn up for an outdoor stage at the studio,” Moffett said. “Since we first acquired the property in 2011, we had planned on building an outdoor stage. Despite the financial strain of the pandemic, this seemed like the right time to do it. We cashed out $30,000 from our retirement savings to cover some of the expenses. Adam Gandy was invaluable to us in overseeing stage construction. His contribution was so crucial that we decided to name it the ‘Gandy Stage,’ for him and his wife, Heather.

“The stage is 48 feet long by 16 feet deep and has its own stage entrance into the studio,” Moffett said. “Adam constructed a rigging to hang a theater curtain as a backdrop and we can cover it with a Marley floor for dance performances. Currently, we can seat 300-plus people in the audience (half that with social distancing). Although the stage is fully ready for performances, we still plan many updates as this becomes feasible, including land-

Academy of Music and Dance has May recital

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

"Get Up, Get Out and Dance!" was the theme of this year's annual Spring Recital at the Las Cruces Academy of Music & Dance (AMAD), 1809 El Paseo Road.

The event was a bit less restrictive than last year's recital, during which families had to see their dancer perform through a glass wall, said AMAD Owner Leslie Kowalski.

"Our studio location has a nice shady courtyard of concrete and grass," Kowalski said. "Surveying the space, our staff decided to turn the walkway into a long, narrow stage. I was able to obtain a Marley dance floor from the Doña Ana Arts Council via Alma d'arte Charter High School," she said.

With the help of some of the dance and music parents, the floor was installed and dancers rehearsed outside.

"I love this floor and this setting! I'm super excited for the dancers!" said long-time AMAD instructor Miss Olivia.

During the recital, "matching clear face shields were worn by the dancers so that parents could see the smiling faces atop the sparkly costumes," Kowalski said.

Each family was allowed four audience members who brought their own lawn chairs and sat in family "pods" in front of their special dancer. To keep the gatherings small, AMAD hosted three different free recitals for small groups May 10-12, Kowalski said.

Summer Dance will begin at AMAD in early June and run through July, she said. New and continuing dancers may participate live or via Zoom.

"We are a small studio that gives extra attention to each and every dancer, ages 2 1/2 to teen," Kowalski said.

Author Breezy Cade to talk about polio, his works

BULLETIN REPORT

Thomas Branigan Memorial Library's Readers of the Purple Sage Book Club welcomes Las Cruces/El Paso author Breezy Cade for a virtual presentation about his books. The Zoom event takes place 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. Thursday, May 27.

In the early 1950s, the last wave of polio swept through the world. Breezy Cade contracted polio when he was a very young boy. Cade chronicles the history of polio (first recognized on an Egyptian carving almost 3,500 years ago) and his experiences in his book "Polio: My Life with the Disease," published in March 2021. Cade will compare polio and the current Covid-19 pandemic during his presentation.

"Writing began as an avocation and a way to make a little extra money, writing magazine articles," Cade said. "It was fun, and I loved the research. I also wrote short stories. An intriguing scenario popped into my head so I began writing it, thinking it would be another short piece. But it got bigger and bigger, turning into two novels. Then came the limited memoir about polio, which was mostly by request from friends. It was natural and spontaneous, and I'm not really sure I should take any credit for it. But here it is, and I hope you like it."

Cade is also the author of the 2012 novel "Walks on Wind," about Belk, a cop with an attitude, and Ed and Letty, a newly married couple. Belk is seemingly at odds with the world. Ed and Letty have budding careers and family plans, but first they need a home of their own. The lives of these three people intertwine in El Paso. The mysteries of the original native inhabitants and the Spanish Conquistadors, the diverse personalities of the characters and the pristine desert landscape all play into this tale.

Published in 2019, "Juan

the Hobo" is the fictional story of an orphan in Cádiz, Spain in 1684. Juan dreams of freedom from the cruel orphanage where he lives. His future takes him to the streets of Cádiz, to the sea, to the new world of the Americas, to the deserts of the north and to a unique group of people in what is now Ciudad Juárez, Mexico and El Paso.

Cade's presentation is free and open to the public.

To be added to the Zoom invite list for the presentation, contact sagelibrary@las-cruces.org with "Cade" as the subject.

scaping, expanded seating and dedicated electric for lighting and sound.

"The stage was built in conjunction with the pre-professional dance company Borderlands Ballet, which is housed at LCSDM," Moffett said. "Borderlands will have full access to the stage for its own performances and other functions."

"Despite everything, the Covid lockdowns inspired us to develop the studio and to bring our plans to life," Foster said. "There is a long tradition of outdoor dance and music performance — including, most famously, Jacob's Pillow in New York. There is something magical about the natural ambience and we think we can develop the Gandy Stage into something special."

"The Gandy Stage has already been put to use, with our dancers performing 'Let the Good Times Roll!' April 3 and May 1," Moffett said. "This show was designed to get the students back to performing and to give everyone a sense of optimism as things slowly begin to come back to normal. We filled both performances to our socially distanced capacity."

"We plan to continue hosting our major performances, like our upcoming 'Nutcracker,' at the Associated Students of New Mexico State University (ASNMSU) Center for the Arts," Foster said. (The Center for the Arts is located on the NMSU campus at 1000 E. University Ave.) "But the stage gives us the ability to do smaller dance and music performances, and boutique performances with Borderlands Ballet. So, it will be a really valuable asset even after the Covid restrictions are lifted."

LCSDM's next opportunity to use the stage will be this summer.

"For the first time ever, we will be able to put on an end-of-summer performance," Moffett said. "This performance will include all the dancers enrolled at LCSDM for the summer session (June 7-July 30). The performance will be done in conjunction with a summer intensive workshop (Aug. 2-6) featuring Jennifer Boren and other professional guests.

"Despite our excitement over the Gandy Stage, we will continue to perform twice yearly at the ASNMSU Center for the Arts," Moffett said.

The next show on the NMSU campus will be "The Nutcracker," which will be performed at 7 p.m. Friday-Saturday, Dec. 17-18.

New mural coming to Downtown Las Cruces

BULLETIN REPORT

Downtown Las Cruces Partnership (DLCP) in collaboration with NMCO Media will paint a new, featured mural on Main Street in Downtown Las Cruces.

"We are excited to champion our small businesses and celebrate the vibrancy and cultural identity of our Downtown," DLCP Executive Director Jennifer Garcia Kozlowski said in a news release.

The new mural will be created as part of DLCP's "Go•Thrive•Be Downtown Las Cruces" campaign "to reintroduce Downtown Las Cruces to residents and elevate tourism in the district," the news release said.

The campaign includes brightly illustrated artwork featuring quail, patterns and floral accents. The campaign will also include a commercial and an updated website to be released in the near future.

Dana Apodaca paints in details for the "Go•Thrive•Be" mural being created in Downtown Las Cruces on Main Street on the first day, May 8.

"The concept of the work was to celebrate the classic New Mexican style we see in daily life, in a way that is fresh, colorful and exciting — kind of a reflection of what is happening in Downtown Las Cruces right now," said NMCO Media Graphic Designer and muralist Dana Apodaca. "It's a reinvigoration of life with new energy, new businesses, new attractions for tourists."

The mural is being painted on the west side of the Insta-Copy Imaging wall at 318 N. Main St.

Insta-Copy has supported DLCP with other artistic endeavors, as they have offered their wall for the "Color Me Cruces" mural which was painted by Christina Ballew and Atom Bomb Studio owners Anahy Nunez and Aaron "Xombi" Valenzuela, the release said.

"My support is in part channeled by my late mother, Diana Lyon, who was a real proponent of the arts and a pioneer for small business in Downtown Las Cruces," Insta-Copy owner Joshua Lyon said. "I'm absolutely honored to have our company be a part of this mural and to showcase the arts of Downtown."

"This mural is a testament to our community, especially the Downtown businesses that adapted and are thriving during the pandemic," said Ballew, muralist and creative director at NMCO Media. "This is a collaborative effort from all involved, and we really hope to energize Downtown with this new artwork." Ballew is also chair of the City of Las Cruces Art Board.

The mural is expected to be completed this month with the

Art showcase and mural reveal is May 22 in Chaparral

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

The Empowerment Congress Doña Ana County (ECDAC) has announced that its DescolonizARTE Youth Art Showcase and Mural Reveal will be held at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, May 22, outside El Bayo Restaurant, 300 Paloma Blanca Drive, in Chaparral, New Mexico.

DescolonizARTE spring workshops in art and social justice with colonia youth from Chaparral and Anthony, New Mexico, will culminate in the showcase and reveal, as the semester ends.

"The mural 'Respirar' was designed by program participants with feedback from Chaparral residents and dissects the idea of breathing during a global pandemic, the environment and justice all within the Chihuahuan Desert," ECDAC said in a news release.

"DescolonizARTE is dedicated to empowering youth through art and social justice education," ECDA said.

Martin Esquivel is the youth program coordinator. The lead artist is José P. Montoya. The assistant artist is Gerardo Caldera.

"Partnering with the Empowerment Congress and guiding colonia youth has been a dream come true," Montoya said.

"The youth took an active role in the design of the mural and created their own art as statements on various issues such as human rights, gender equality and cultural appropriation. I hope that the impact of this work is long-lasting in that the youth learn about justice through critical thinking and art. With the murals, I hope to impact rural colonia communities to think about some of the issues presented to them through public art," he said.

The May 22 art showcase and reveal will include Interviews conducted by the youth that will be on display, Bernice Barrientos said. A few invited guests will speak, the mural will be revealed and attendees will have the opportunity to meet "the artist and teens who helped bring this creation to life," she said.

ECDA began in 2012 as the Doña Ana Quality of Life Initiative. It became the Empowerment Congress of Doña Ana County in 2013.

Former Denny's owner says Las Cruces may soon be home to a Slim Chickens restaurant

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

"We will be there for sure," Dennis Ekstrom about the possibility of opening a Slim Chickens' restaurant in Las Cruces in the not-too-distant future.

"There's no doubt in my mind," said Ekstrom, the former owner of Denny's restaurants in Las Cruces, who owns franchising rights in New Mexico and El Paso for Slim Chickens.

He also owns 12 Del Taco restaurants and opened a new one about a month ago in Truth or Consequences.

"Las Cruces is a prime choice for me," Ekstrom said. "I love that town and I want to be there."

"I just love the focus on fresh," Ekstrom said about the Slim Chickens' menu. "The food is fantastic."

The franchise, he said, is "very focused on a handful of things they do exceedingly well."

The restaurant's atmosphere has "the laid-back look, with that Southern twist to it."

Ekstrom said he had planned to begin the Slim Chickens New Mexico base in Albuquerque, but "stumbled into a conversion opportunity in Farmington." He expects to open the state's first Slim Chickens in Farmington in the next three to four months.

If the same kind of opportunity presents itself in Las Cruces, he said a Slim Chickens could open its doors here sooner rather than later.

"I'm really anxious to get there and become part of the community," said

Ekstrom, who sold the local Denny's restaurants in September 2019.

"When we open a restaurant, we hire 60 to 80 people," he said. And, even after scaling down after the opening, a local restaurant could employ about 50 people, he said, and "be able to help a lot of families succeed."

"I'm excited to get to Las Cruces," said

Slim Chickens opened in 2003 in Fayetteville, Arkansas "with a focus on fresh, delicious food with a Southern flair in a fast-casual setting," according to slimchickens.com. There are now 120 locations in 19 states and in London and Kuwait.

Summer jobs can be a life-changing opportunity

Students who are looking for summer jobs this year may be able to find amazing jobs they would have never been able to find before, thanks to the strange dynamics affecting the workforce post-Covid.

TRACEY BRYAN
The Bridge of Southern New Mexico

Employers are clamoring for talent and having a very hard time acquiring it while the pandemic-related unemployment benefits are disincentivizing some to return to work.

But this is a big opportunity for our young people to seize...and it pays off big in lifetime benefits!

First, the workplace is the best place to genuinely learn the "soft," or employability skills that give them incredible value in their future careers. Summer jobs can be the beginning of a career journey that will point their lives in an entirely different direction than they could have imagined.

Research has proven that summer jobs are tied to higher earning power over a lifetime. Even those first few paychecks are life changing – realizing the good feeling of earning your own money and learning how to manage it wisely.

Summer jobs help students understand the great value of their skills and abilities outside of the classroom, where success is measured primarily in grades, which become mostly irrelevant once the education journey is over.

However, summer jobs are also tied to better academic performance of students after their work experience, partly because what they are learning in the classroom is now more relevant to how it's applied in the workplace. As students prepare for the transition from high school to college, summer jobs can point them in the direction of the right majors, credentials and diplomas, too.

My own journey was deeply shaped by a summer job. I had already had my "first job" working for my dad for free in a restaurant long before I turned 16. But, building on what I had learned there, I got a summer job that completely changed my life. I had the opportunity to work for a major corporation in their internal communications department. High rise building, office-type environment, people wearing suits and ties...very different than what I had experienced before.

The culture of this workplace was completely foreign to me, but I learned and adapted and built relationships with people who wanted to invest in me. They entrusted me with responsibilities that far exceeded my 17-year-old self, but I discovered I was good at researching and writing, which led me to ultimately chose to major in journalism on my way to a career in public relations.

That job paved the way to my next summer and part-time job in public relations at Blue Bell Creameries located in the same town where I went to college. Three years later, I was hired full time and, ultimately, became public relations director. The rest, as they say, is history.

Without those two summer jobs, the rest of my life would have turned out very differently.

There are numerous types of life-changing opportunities that our youth can explore this summer. If you never worked before, a restaurant or a retail store builds an enormously strong foundation of skills no matter where you go. Take advantage of the opportunity to get solid on the basics: customer service, communication, problem solving, teamwork, critical thinking and more. It doesn't matter what you do next, these are the top skills requested by employers in any industry.

If you've already got those skills, then look around. There are jobs available in our healthcare industry, our agriculture industry and our companies who do moving and shipping and manufacturing, just to name a few.

Don't just rely on texting or emails. If you want to distinguish yourself, pick up the phone and call to express your interest and learn more. Go into the business and introduce yourself. Help them see how you can contribute to the success of what they're doing.

You may be just the one they're looking for.

Camels of all types, styles arrive at The Emporium thanks to donation

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

A 1932 short story and a 1934 movie advised that “The Camels Are Coming.” If you visit The Emporium, 106 S. Water St. in Downtown Las Cruces, you will discover that the camels are here!

Volunteer Heather Pollard said more than 200 camels were donated to The Emporium from the Dr. John Bloom estate. The camels were collected by Bloom’s wife, Jo Tice Bloom, during her travels around the world and as gifts.

“For birthdays, Mother’s Day, everybody gave Jo a camel,” Pollard said.

In the collection, priced at $8 to $30 depending on size, you will find bead-work camels as well as camels made of leather, brass, wax, glass, china, ceramic, onyx, stuffed animals and more. There are dromedary (one-hump) and Bactrian (two-hump) camels in the collection, and even a few with riders — including Santa Claus.

Pollard’s favorite in the collection is a small dromedary covered in African beadwork.

Pollard said she rode a real, live camel during a visit to Egypt about 10 years ago.

'Deuce' Benjamin 'right pick' for MaxPreps state hoops player of year

By DAVE BURGE
Las Cruces Bulletin

William "Deuce" Benjamin of Las Cruces High was the easy choice to be New Mexico's top basketball player for the 2021 season, according to the national publication that made the selection.

Benjamin, a 6-foot-1 junior guard, was recently named the 2020-21 MaxPreps New Mexico High School Basketball Player of the Year.

MaxPreps is considered the nation's foremost authority and publication on high school sports.

"It was an easy decision for me," said Jordan Divens, national basketball editor for MaxPreps. "I think he was the clear winner."

Divens cited Benjamin's consistent performance in 5A, New Mexico's large-school division.

Benjamin helped the Bulldogs go 14-1 en route to a berth in the Class 5A state championship game where they lost to Cleveland High School of Rio Rancho, 55-49. It was Las Cruces' first loss since February 2020. The Dawgs had won the state 5A title the previous year when Benjamin was a sophomore.

Divens also said that Benjamin came up big in the state title game this year, which was another factor in him being honored by MaxPreps.

"What weighed heavily was his consistency at 5A and his performance in the state title game despite the loss," Divens said.

This year, Benjamin averaged 27.1 points, 5.7 rebounds and 5.5 assists per game while shooting 50 percent from the field and 87 percent from the free-throw line, according to MaxPreps.

In the state title game, Benjamin had 21 points, 5 rebounds and 5 assists.

"A big part of Max-Preps is our awards and accolades," Divens said. "We really pride ourselves on getting the state players of the year right. We felt Deuce was definitely right."

"Deuce" Benjamin is the son of Las Cruces head coach William Benjamin. The elder Benjamin has a 277-90 record in 12 years at the helm of the program, according to MaxPreps.

The younger Benjamin finds himself in some elite company among Las Cruces High basketball players.

Two other Bulldawg basketball players have earned statewide honors in recent years.

Gordo Castillo, who went on to play college ball at New Mexico State, was named the New Mexico Gatorade Player of the Year in 2006 and 2007. Lucio Luttrell, who played college ball at Western New Mexico, was the state's Gatorade Player of the Year in 2009.

Gatorade is scheduled to announce its state player of the year winners in boys basketball in June.

Aggie women take 10th at Stanford Regional in dream season

The New Mexico State University women's golf team had one of its strongest seasons in recent memory.

Let's take a look at what the Aggie women were able to achieve this spring.

•They scored their first top 10 finish at an NCAA Regional tournament since 2016. They finished tied for 10th at the recently completed Stanford Regional after three days of action in northern California.

•Senior Pun Chanachai, from Bangkok, Thailand, also narrowly missed qualifying for the NCAA Championships as an individual.

•Adding to the glow of the season, the Aggie women also won the WAC championship.

At Stanford, Chanachai led the Aggies, shooting a 2-over par 215 over three days and finishing tied for 18th.

She was the fifth-lowest individual not on a team qualifying for the NCAA Championships. Only the top six teams and top three individuals not on those qualifying teams go to the NCAA Championships, which will be held at May 21-26 at Grayhawk Golf Club in Scottsdale, Arizona.

On the final day, Chanachai shot an even-par 71 and was the only player in the entire field to not record a bogey during the third round. Now, that is consistency.

During the first day at Stanford, teammate Karen Miyamoto, from Chiba, Japan, put on quite a show, shooting a blistering 69. How good was she? Miyamoto birdied five of the first nine holes.

Unfortunately, she cooled off and finished with an 8-over 221 over three days. Miyamoto finished tied for 45th.

Alex Quihuis, from Tucson, Arizona, finished tied for 52nd with a 10-over 223, while Alison Gastelum, from Chihuahua, Mexico, finished 61st with a 12-over 225.

All solid efforts against a strong field.

Arizona State will serve as the host of the NCAA Championships and GOLF Channel will provide live coverage of the final three days on May 24-26.

It seems like the only thing the Aggies didn't do this season was qualify for the Big Dance. It's a shame — golf fans across the nation would have liked this bunch.

NMSU softball season ends with loss in WAC tourney

By DAVE BURGE
Las Cruces Bulletin

The New Mexico State University softball team's dreams of a berth in the NCAA Championships came up just short.

The Aggies, regular season WAC champs and top seed at the conference postseason tournament, fell behind 7-1 to Seattle University and lost in the WAC Championship Game 7-5 Saturday afternoon in Seattle.

The Aggies finished the season with a record of 31-21.

NMSU lost in the opening round of the WAC Tournament on Thursday for the first time since 2014. The Aggie women fell 6-5 to Utah Valley in the first round of the double-elimination tournament.

The Aggies then needed to win two games on Friday to advance to the conference championship game for the 10th straight year. They beat Grand Canyon 6-2 and then beat Utah Valley 4-3 in the nightcap. The final out of the second game came at home plate as Utah Valley was trying to tie it up. Freshman shortstop Jayleen Burton fired a throw home, and catcher Nikki Butler made the tag to clinch a thrilling win.

That propelled NMSU to the championship round where they would need to beat host Seattle U twice to advance to the NCAA Regionals. Instead, the Aggies came up short in the first and only game on Saturday.

Butler, Chloe Rivas and Ramsay Lopez were all named to the WAC All-Tournament Team following the tournament.

For the Aggies, it was season unlike any other.

Because of pandemic restrictions, NMSU had to play its first 21 games in Florida. But the Aggies rebounded after a tough start to win their sixth regular season WAC title in program history.

Knowing the difference between touch and feel

As I see it, golf has a lot to do with touch and feel. The two talents are closely related, but let's not confuse the two.

Feel is about using all your senses and knowing what your body and the club are doing, along with being able to correctly perform what you're attempting to do. Feel is translating what you have perceived, imagined and planned into something that is almost perfect in its correctness.

Touch, on the other hand, is more in the interpretation and execution. With touch, think of playing the piano or violin. You can be a skilled reader of music, knowing each note, bar and inuendo; but if your fingers don't accomplish the polished striking of the keys, frets and strings (touch) the music will lose something.

With putting you can be sharp reading the green speed, slope, grain and break of the putt, but if you don't have a deft touch with the putter stroke few putts will go in. Interestingly the world's most acclaimed violinist, Joshua Bell, who was a nationally ranked tennis player at age 10, and is now a recreational golfer, stated flatly, "golf is simply similar to playing the violin."

Bell is blessed with extraordinary touch, feel and awareness. Golf skills involving touch and feel seem to be rooted in awareness. The very first thing we need to do for raising the bar with touch and feel is to create some enhanced internal awareness whereby our senses are intimately involved with playing the game.

It's not a matter of whether you are a "feel player" or a "non-feel player." It's a matter of incorporating a sense of feel into your ability to execute shots.

It would be very hard to categorize men and women tour players as to feel or no-feel. Ben Hogan was a cerebral as they came when he was studying his swing, crafting his equipment to the precise measurements he thought he needed and being almost OCD with his discipline for practice.

Yet he was the consummate feel player. He didn't want to be told yardages on the course — he sensed the yards. He insisted on using unconventional strategies on holes where only he knew what he was doing. He manufactured the swing with roboticlike mechanics, but he hit the ball purely out of feel.

When he looked at the target, he mentally processed what he saw and then translated that into a swing and a shot which he pictured and felt with his hands.

High-handicappers who struggle to understand their own swing, don't usually have a feel for what they are supposed to be doing with the golf swing, and don't internalize the information from good or bad shots they end up hitting. It isn't that hard but, it does take a willingness to be aware of certain swing techniques, as well as a certain amount of discipline and mindfulness and attention during practice.

Given the right practice, some lessons and a certain amount of patience, you will be able to have a mitt-full of shots with one single club if you understand how to grip the club up and down the handle, and how to use half, three-quarter and full swings. Each club has multiple shots and uses. It's about touch and feel. However, when it's time to swing the club like you mean it on the golf course, you should rely on your feel and not your thinking. Once you've selected a shot, take your brain out of it, while simply trusting your feel.

As for practice itself, try getting a sense of how the ball reacts when struck with different types of shots, from different clubs, different lies and different target areas. While at the "PGA Show" in Orlando a couple of years ago, I had a chance to chat with acclaimed golf writer and commentator Jaime Diaz who had this to say: "Feel might sound complicated, but it's amazing how much your brain can process if you let your imagination do its job. If you lay the groundwork by ingrain-ing good technique with lots of repetition you can develop the comfort and confidence to focus on the target and let your athletic instinct take over. That's when your touch will be most sensitive and when you will truly be playing with the greatest feel."
