FEMA APPROVES UPDATED ALL-HAZARDS MITIGATION PLAN

After a two-year planning process, efforts to improve and update the County's existing All-Hazards Mitigation Plan have paid off with approval from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

"FEMA's recent approval of our updated plan makes Doña Ana County eligible to receive post-disaster funding after a presidentially declared disaster, making it easier to address urgent and potentially hazardous situations in communities that experienced severe weather. Disaster caused by weather-related hazards can be a dam failure, flash flooding, severe wind, earthquake, drought, extreme heat or cold, hail, lightning, wildfire and others," said Doña Ana County Flood Commission Engineer Supervisor Michael Garza.

The goal of the mitigation planning effort is to identify the extent to which each jurisdiction is vulnerable to natural hazards, then identify and prioritize actions to reduce or eliminate long-term risk to life and property from high-risk hazards. "Mitigation is more about how we as a community can prevent or lessen the impact of such events when they do occur in our county," Garza said.

A core component of the mitigation planning process involves a risk assessment of the natural hazards most likely to occur within each jurisdiction. This involves analyzing historical data, taking inventory of at-risk infrastructure, and ultimately assessing the vulnerability to these hazards. Most importantly, we then must establish goals, actions and projects that mitigate the associated risks. "The development of this mitigation plan is vital to ensure that historical infrastructure is preserved, protected, and that new growth is safe and sustainable," Garza added.

In November 2019, the Doña Ana County Flood Commission Office and the Office of Emergency Management joined forces with multi-jurisdictional planning and steering committees comprised of representatives from Doña Ana County, the cities of Anthony, Las Cruces, and Sunland Park, the Town of Mesilla, the Village of Hatch, the Elephant Butte Irrigation District and New Mexico State University. They met regularly throughout 2020, as representatives from each jurisdiction provided input on behalf of their communities, which helped to review and update the existing 2012 All-Hazards Mitigation Plan. The recent FEMA-approved plan is adopted through 2026, at which time a new update will be required.

Participating jurisdictions, along with consultants at JE Fuller, completed a final version of the plan update in February, and received final FEMA approval of the plan in June 2021.

Team effort to help campers, hikers in distress

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Teamwork is critical when someone is lost or injured in the Organ Mountains, Las Cruces or the desert.

The Las Cruces Fire Department's (LCFD) Technical Rescue Team and Mesilla Valley Search and Rescue, Inc. (MVSAR) are working more closely together than ever to utilize the strengths of each group and their combined training and experience to rescue lost or injured campers, hikers and backpackers. The teams often train and deploy together to conduct rescues and extractions and respond to other emergencies.

"We realized that our paths crossed a lot," said LCFD Battalion Chief Jeremiah Lay. "It's a really, really good group effort."

MVSAR members "have expertise, have been around for a long, long time and do numerous missions a year," Lay said, so the group was added to LCFD's resource list. He said LCFD also works with other teams that are part of the local search and rescue network, including Doña Ana Search and Rescue and Organ Mountain Technical Rescue, plus the New Mexico State Police (NMSP), Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office (DACSO) and Las Cruces Police Department (LCPD).

"I love 'em," MVSAR President Vic Villalobos said of Las Cruces firefighters. "They're a good group of people. Their professionalism is top notch. We just work really well together."

LCFD's Technical Rescue Team and MVSAR worked with DASO and NMSP in May to rescue a group of 24 hikers that had become "separated, disoriented and stranded in the Organ Mountains," according to an LCPD news release.

Villalobos also remembers a joint rescue operation in 2019 when a hiker had fallen in the Organs helicopter, which arrived within an hour. The hiker was hoisted out of the canyon he had been trapped in and transported to a hospital.

"He survived because of the life-saving actions taken in the field," Villalobos said.

Because firefighters are trained as emergency medical technicians, the incident commander for an MVSAR mission will call in LCFD if there is any indication of an injury, Villalobos said. EMTs can also administer medication, if necessary.

That LCFD has a swift-water rescue team and MVSAR has a boat. It is another example of their partnership, Villalobos said.

"That makes a pretty good marriage," said Villalobos, who has volunteered with MVSAR since 1997, participating in more than 500 missions and leading the group since 2000.

The LCFD Search and Rescue Team has 21 members, with seven on each shift, Lay said. All are medical professionals with extensive training in swift-water, confined-space — elevators, trees and tunnels, for example — and rope rescues and heavy extractions. Some team members were deployed to New Orleans and Houston to help with hurricane recovery, said Lay, who has been with the LCFD Technical Rescue Team for 15 of the 16 years he has been with the fire department.

MVSAR, founded in 1995, has ground, canine, ATV, communications and drone teams. Team members have extensive experience in searches and familiarity with the Organ Mountains, where many searches and rescues have taken place over the years. Its canine team also does cadaver searches.

MVSAR members must be at least 16 years old, Villalobos said. You don't have to have any previous experience to join.

MVSAR meets at 6:30 p.m. the second Thursday of each month at A Bite of Belgium restaurant, 741 N. Alameda Blvd.

Safety tips for hiking, camping

- Follow the Scout motto: Always be prepared.
- Know where you're going, how long and how difficult the trek will be and what the weather conditions are and could become.
- Tell at least one person where you're going and when you expect to return.
- Dress appropriately, including layers that can be easily removed. Wear a proper head covering. Wear comfortable boots or hiking shoes suitable for the terrain to be covered.
- Take a flashlight and extra batteries, first-aid kit, pocketknife or Leatherman tool and plenty of food and water.
- Take a fully charged cell phone and, if available, a portable charger. Avoid depleting the phone battery by overusing the camera function.
- Don't go alone.
- Keep your group together unless it's essential to separate.
- If you get lost or need help, call only one person to alert emergency response. Save your phone battery so search and rescue can stay in touch with you.
- Follow all signs and stay on established trails.
- Beware of snakes that are more active during warmer weather and as daytime temperatures rise. Snakebite victims should seek help immediately.
- Beware of wild animals in the Organ Mountains and elsewhere, including bobcats, mountain lions, coyotes, foxes, deer and African oryx.

New law authorizes medical aid in dying in New Mexico

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Elizabeth M. Whitefield End of Life Options Act will “assist people in getting medical aid in dying if that’s their choice,” said MaryKay Brady of Las Cruces, a board member of the newly formed End of Life Options New Mexico (ELONM) nonprofit, and a longtime advocate.

The act was passed by the New Mexico Legislature during the 2021 session and took effect in June.

Brady said New Mexico is the 11th jurisdiction (There are nine other states and the District of Columbia) to enact a medical-aid-in-dying law, which she said makes access to end-of-life options easier for terminally ill patients while maintaining safeguards.

The bill was named for the late state District Court Judge Elizabeth M. Whitefield of Albuquerque, who died in August 2018 after an 11-year battle with cancer.

Whitefield testified in support of the End of Life Options Act when it came before the state Legislature in 2017, according to the End of Life Options New Mexico website.

“Cancer has stolen everything from me; my ability to work, my ability to eat, my ability to drink,” she testified. “Don’t let me die without dignity. I implore you to give me the choice that is right for me.”

The bill did not reach the floor of either house for a vote that year or when it was reintroduced in 2019.

State Sen. Carrie Hamblen, D-Doña Ana, voted in favor of the bill this year exactly one year to the day after the death of her friend, Cheryl Swannack, a Las Cruces artist, producer and community activist who suffered from Parkinson’s Disease.

“I cast my vote in honor of Cheryl,” Hamblen said.

“Cheryl loved New Mexico. It was her home,” Hamblen said in a Facebook post. “Although she shared a wonderful life with her partner, Nancy, in Washington D.C. ... Cheryl would have loved to have taken her last breath in her New Mexico home. But, because we didn’t have any Death with Dignity provisions/laws in the state, she couldn’t.”

Swannack, 73, died March 15, 2020 in Washington, D.C.

The most important reason for passing the act was terminally ill patients’ “decreased ability to enjoy life,” Brady said, including their loss of control over bodily functions.

These patients “would like to live,” she said, but “life as you and I enjoy it isn’t possible.”

Under provisions of the act, death results when a patient takes “a specific, compounded drug,” Brady said.

He or she is usually asleep within three to five minutes and dies within an hour.

“No one wants to talk about death and dying, but it’s going to happen,” said Brady, a retired banker who moved to Las Cruces from Deming five years ago.

Her mother suffered from Alzheimer’s disease and died in 1992. Her husband, who had “multiple health issues,” died in 2008.

ELONM provides information and helps people plan and take action related to end-of-life options and care, according to endoflifeoptionsnm.org.

“We will help with end-of-life planning,” said Brady, who has already made all those decisions, including putting her medical plan on video and wearing a DNR (do not resuscitate) medic-alert bracelet.

Details of End of Life Options Act

The New Mexico House of Representatives passed the Elizabeth M. Whitefield End of Life Options Act 39-27 in February. The state Senate passed it 24-17 in March. Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham signed it into law in April. The act became effective June 18.

The act defines medical aid in dying as “the medical practice wherein a healthcare provider prescribes medication to a qualified individual who may self-administer that medication to end that individual’s life in accordance with the provisions of the act.”

Under the act, a healthcare provider “may provide a prescription for medical aid in dying medication” to someone who has the capacity to make a decision about ending his or her life, has a terminal illness (as determined by a doctor), has voluntarily made the request for medical aid in dying and has the ability to self-administer the medication.”

The patient’s request form must be signed by two witnesses, at least one of whom is not a family member of the patient or associated with a healthcare facility connected to the patient’s care. Neither witness can be the patient’s healthcare provider.

The law provides for a 48-hour waiting period after the prescription for medical aid in dying medication has been written before it can be filled.

Language in the act states that it “shall not be construed ... to constitute suicide, assisted suicide, euthanasia, mercy killing, homicide or adult abuse.”

Find the act at nmlegis.gov. Search for HB 47 or by title.

“I looked at it as a gift to my son,” Brady said.

“He knows exactly what my values are,” she said.

“I am passionate about this,” she said. “Anything I can do or say so people don’t have to struggle.”

In-person meetings return at City Hall

David McDaniel was one of 12 people who spoke to the Las Cruces City Council at its July 19 meeting, as the council returned to in-person meetings at Las Cruces City Hall for the first time in about 16 months. McDaniel spoke in opposition to the council’s resolution extending Mayor Ken Miyagishima’s emergency proclamation mandating that face masks be worn during in-person meetings by the unvaccinated. The council voted to extend the emergency proclamation through July 23.

Restaurant workers need some love too

Be kind. Re-wind.

Remember that label on your rented VHS tapes in the 1980s and 90s?

We may need to revive that slogan, with a variation: "Be kind as you dine."

With the twin dilemmas of staffing shortages and product shortages, local restaurants are struggling to take care of customers, which have come back in droves.

"People are going out a lot," said Jerry Harrell, general manager of Double Eagle and Peppers in Mesilla. "A lot more than 2019. Maybe it's

RICHARD COLTHARP
From the Publisher

the 'finally-free syndrome.' People are having dessert more, they're having second drinks more and they're splurging on higher priced items more."

They're also having to go to their Plan B, or Plan C, order.

"I'll have the portabella burger."

"I'm sorry, we're out of that."

"OK. I'll have the green chile chicken alfredo."

"I'm sorry, we just ran out of that too."

Harrell said the outages come from the restaurant distributors, who say they aren't really shortages, but problems with the supply chain. If a boat in Los Angeles is backed up in harbor, or if a trucking distribution center in Dallas is having issues, it could affect what is available in Las Cruces.

Unfortunately for restaurateurs, there is no consistency with the product issues.

"One week they'll be out of one thing, so you double-order that the next week," Harrell said. "But then they'll be out of something different."

The issue of staffing is not unique to restaurants. People across the country, across industries, are having difficulty finding people to hire. Businesses everywhere complain of people coming to work for a month, a week or even just a day, then not showing up again.

Many blame it on an unmotivated work force, who benefited from Covid stimulus money and increased and extended unemployment payments that are still coming. Harrell agrees.

"We just can't find many of our old workers," he said of reliable restaurant veterans who were laid off during the restaurant shutdowns of the pandemic.

The difficulties extend beyond Las Cruces. Harrell, who has served statewide roles for the New Mexico Restaurant Association, said there are as many as 9,000 unemployed restaurant workers across the state.

The servers who have come in, most of them 25 and under, Harrell said, lack restaurant experience.

"Many of them didn't grow up eating courses, so they don't

Downtown eyesore persists

By ROB MCCORKLE

Guest column

We are rapidly approaching the midway point in yet another year. Local media carry news stories about the future of the City of Las Cruces and its new budget, its new strategic plan for the next five years, proposed funding to continue renovation of the historic Amador Hotel and other ongoing plans to revitalize Downtown. But, oddly enough, there's been zero mention of the persistent "elephant in the room" sitting at the southern gateway to Downtown Las Cruces.

Anyone who has lived in Las Cruces for more than a decade, and even relative newcomers like myself, have gotten an eyeful of the partially completed, two-story skeletal steel, concrete blocks and slump brick monstrosity that looms over one of the city's busiest intersections at South Main and Amador. Former Councilman Jack Eakman dubbed the building at 430 S. Main Street the "eyesore of District 4." Ironically, the hulking structure and surrounding property purchased in 2008 by El Paso developer John Hoffman from the county sits directly across the street from the offices of the handsome, new Convention and Visitors Bureau tasked with promoting tourism in Las Cruces and its resurging downtown district.

City officials and city council members have come and gone in the ensuing years, trying in a number of false starts to work with the owner and his representatives to issue building permits and see that city codes are followed in the property's development. Hoffman ultimately became so frustrated with building code requirements that he ceased development plans and signed a long-term lease with the non-profit Las Cruces Community Partners (LCCP), headed by local developer Bob Pofahl, to handle the property. City officials have stated they never have seen a copy of the lease agreement.

A local news story printed in 2019 reported that LCCP, which had acquired a 50-year lease of the property from Hoffman, had planned as far back as 2017 to convert the incomplete structure and surrounding property into a restaurant, office space and a retail complex. But lack of progress on the project led to the expiration of two building permits.

A Bulletin story in August 2018 reported that the city council had authorized then-City Manager Stuart Ed to begin negotiations with Hoffman to purchase the property. However, Ed was quoted as saying those efforts were thwarted because the owner and lessee had refused to allow access to the property to the city's appraiser. However, subsequent emails between Hoffman's representatives obtained through an Inspection of Publication Records Act request indicate that arrangements were ultimately made for city reps to access the property.

More recently, emails show that Mayor Pro Tem Kasandra Gandara in late 2020 met with Pofahl, who had been in discussion with a local retailer interested in converting the shell of a building into a bicycle shop, taproom and coffee shop. What transpired from that meeting is unknown.

What I do know is that my entreaties to receive up-to-date information from Mayor Ken Miyagishima and District 4 Councilor Johana Bencomo have been deflected with obfuscation and excuses about why nothing has been done. The mayor told me in an email that the city had something in the works with the property owner, but that Covid-19 interrupted plans for a face-to-face meeting. He has pledged the city will be "open and transparent" about handling the Hoffman property conundrum. Really? Bencomo said in an email the city's hands are tied since the "city does not have an ordinance to compel private property owners to finish or remove a business, unless it's a threat to public safety." The developer has secured his middle finger salute to Las Cruces with ugly chain link fencing to deter trespassers.

I was hopeful with the city's hiring of Ifo Pili as the new city manager that a conclusion to this long-running nightmare might finally be at hand. We shall see. Pili has tasked Assistant City Manager Eric Enriquez, who oversees the city's Fire, Community Development and Public Works departments, with tackling the District 4 eyesore situation. That's good news. However, the bad news is: as of June 14, when I spoke with Enriquez, he showed he knows little about the situation. However, he assured me he would talk with the Community Development Department director and city's legal department to start "gathering the history" about 430 S. Main St.

"This is something I will take on," Enriquez said. "Win, lose or draw. I will tackle it. If we need to change things, we will."

When asked if the city council has taken the advice of former councilman Eakman and adopted a new ordinance to prevent similar situations from occurring in the future, Enriquez responded in the negative. Enriquez said he will be looking at whether the solution perhaps lies within the city's existing family of codes or with property maintenance, public nuisance or vacant properties ordinances.

"I don't want to reinvent the wheel," Enriquez said. "I need to see what the plan was and what's going on. You've got blight. We need to take care of the blight. No excuses. We need to get to the bottom of this."

So, what's it costing Hoffman to poke Las Cruces in the eye? According to county tax records, the El Pasoan paid just a little more than $3,000 in 2020 on property valued in 2016 at $265,800.

But what is the "District 4 eyesore" costing Las Cruces citizens for aesthetically marring the look of the southern gateway to Downtown and retarding Downtown revitalization? After 13 years, it's priceless.

I certainly hope Enriquez will succeed where others have failed the public all these years due to staff turnover, bureaucratic strictures and what appears to be a sheer lack of political will to slay this elephant. The time for resolution is way past due. Please do something! Employ eminent domain. Declare the property a public nuisance and take legal action if necessary. Time's a wastin' and my eyes are mighty "sore."

Dignity in work

I am writing this in response to Mr. Rubel's insightful opinions on "guaranteed basic income."

He lays out his misgivings with the entire concept well. I believe it is immoral to receive while others are toiling away at work. The government should never endorse this, nor undertake this.

There is dignity in work, this nation was founded on self-reliance, all major faiths in some way preach the dignity of work, while of course helping the downtrodden.

I commend Mr. Rubel for having the fortitude to speak out and voice concerns that many in this community share.

X2nSat Found Space in Las Cruces for a Gateway to the Future

By Cassie McClure

Driving back from Truth or Consequences to the El Paso International Airport, Garrett Hill was still looking for a location for growing X2nSat, one of the most veteran data transmission and management companies.

The company uses signals from the ground to satellites instead of earthbound communication systems, so Hill needed wide-open spaces. Luckily in the car, he got a call from Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance. Had he considered the Las Cruces Innovation & Industrial Park (LCIIP)?

"I drove into the park, got out, and tried to think why I didn't originally consider Las Cruces," he said. "But the longer the thought, the fewer reasons I had."

As CEO and founder, Hill created X2nSat in 1996 with a mission to provide reliable, wireless network and communication solutions to a variety of North American industries through satellite communication. X2nSat broke ground on the world's only fifth-generation Las Cruces Satellite Gateway facility in 2016 and now features a large main office building and numerous antennas. The 10,000 square foot office facility consists of a large data center and the main office space, accommodating up to 30 employees.

The primary purpose of a Satellite Gateway is to transmit data from the national fiber networks to the fleet of satellites. Most gateways are home to large dish antennas and satellite equipment that convert radio frequencies into internet protocol signals for terrestrial connectivity.

X2nSat's Las Cruces Satellite Gateway is perfect for the company's needs. There is plenty of open skies uninterrupted by mountains or hills, and the weather is mild. Unlike most gateways, the Las X2nSat CEO and Founder Garrett Hill needed the space to communicate with a network of satellites and he found it in the Las Cruces Innovation & Industrial Park.

Cruces facility provides the space and infrastructure needed to develop new satellite networks that can provide customizable solutions for their customers.

"In addition to its topography and environmental advantages, Las Cruces was chosen based on its geographic separation from X2nSat's headquarters in Petaluma, California, and its proximity to

New Mexico State University and University of Texas at El Paso," said Hill.

"This talent pool will allow X2nSat to offer job opportunities and internships to local engineers," he said. "We can't hire them all, but we're doing our part."

The Fair Board

It was every fair board's nightmare when the lightning hit the stage.

Course, it might have been expected; it was just another page.

In a trail of disasters that befell our county fair.

That began when Dr. Knockwurst told us we should be aware.

That a stomatitis outbreak might shut down the

of Common Sense

rodeo.

Not to mention all the entries in the Junior Livestock Show.

Then the week before we opened they began to excavate

Down the center of the highway that runs up to the main gate.

Of course, they hit a waterline. We were Lake Louise by dawn.

But no water in the spigots in the barns or in the john. So we planned on shuttle parking using pon-tons and canoes.

But we finally wound up asking folks to just take off their shoes.

And the carnival got testy 'cause we couldn't build a bridge.

Plus the vendors all were grumblin' due to decreased patronage.

But the tractor pull went OK 'cept they pulled a light pole down.

Which played havoc with the dog trials when two handlers almost drowned.

On the morning of the last night the promoter called to say

That the singer had a sore throat and could not perform, no way.

But by noon it didn't matter 'cause the clouds came rollin' in

And the crowd all left in lifeboats so by five we pulled the pin.

We retreated to the office down beneath the grandstand seats

Where the fair board did its business and hashed out the balance sheets.

'Cause tonight we were survivors. Like a pile of used retreads

Only glad that it was over, all we did was shake

our heads

And ask ourselves why anyone would take this thankless chore

When a kid, in tow with mother, stuck his head in through the door.

He had lost his yellow ribbon, she explained, both drippin' pools,

And wondered if by some small chance, if it weren't against rules...

Could we? "Course we could!" I shouted. "We're the fair board! That's our thing!"

So we picked him out a dry one. It was like we crowned him king.

And he tried to say his thank yous but his tears got in the way.

Time stood still as he departed. No one had too much to say

Till the lightning hit the stage lights, then I heard me volunteer,

"I reckon we should get them fixed 'fore we do much else next year."

understand those things,"

Harrell said. "They're younger, and many aren't drinkers, so they don't know about wines and different drinks."

Those types of issues, combined with inexperience, and amplified by the lack of products, lead to confusion and missed orders. And, in some cases, upset customers.

"Most of them are patient and understanding, but some get frustrated,"

Harrell said. "And while they're not overtly rude, they do take it out on the server, by short-tipping, or no-tipping, like some-

Honoring sacrifice

Lt. Gov. Howie Morales was in Las Cruces July 15 to speak at a meeting of the New Mexico State Transportation Commission, supporting a resolution to name a portion of Interstate 10 near Deming in honor of slain New Mexico State Police Officer Darian Jarrott. The meeting was held at the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum. Jarrott, 28, was shot and killed during a Feb. 4, 2021 traffic stop near milepost 101 in Luna County. The resolution, which was unanimously adopted by the commission, designates I-10 from mile marker 84.8 to mile marker 103.1 as New Mexico State Police Officer Darian Jarrott Memorial Corridor. County backs 'green rights'

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Doña Ana County Commission voted unanimously at its July 13 meeting to adopt a proclamation in support of Green Amendments for the Generations, a non-profit established in 2019 to support constitutional environmental rights amendments in states and nationally.

The proclamation passed by the commission states that the Green Amendment movement "seeks to ensure that all people have access to pure water, clean air, a stable climate and a healthy environment."

"The health of our communities is dire," state Sen. Carrie Hamblen, D-Doña Ana, said at the meeting, as she spoke in support of the commission adopting the proclamation. Hamblen is also president and CEO of the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce.

In addition to supporting Green Amendments, Hamblen said the commission should have "a plan for action and resolution" to protect air, land and water quality and for the transition from extractive industries to green industries.

"The state's come a long way, especially over the last year," Commission Chair Manuel Sanchez said.

Visit <https://fortheGenerations.org/>.

At the July 13 meeting, the commission also unanimously adopted a resolution that adds two additional voting convenience centers for the 2022 and 2023 elections in Doña Ana County.

In addition to the 40 convenience centers that now exist, the commission added locations at Loma Heights Elementary School, 1600 E. Madrid Ave., and Highland Elementary School, 4201 Emerald St.

County Bureau of Elections Supervisor Andy Perez said the additional voting locations are needed to reduce waiting time to vote at existing convenience centers.

The commission also unanimously adopted a resolution adding 19 precincts in the county, effective Jan. 1, 2022. Perez said the additional precincts, which will bring the county's total to 189, are based on the turnout at the past two local elections.

County Clerk Amanda Lopez Askin said the 2020 Census data, which her office is waiting to receive, may add a few more precincts.

Occupational therapist running to stand up for 'freedom'

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

As a candidate for the District 5 seat on the Las Cruces City Council, Ronnie Sisneros said he is "standing up for people's rights and individual freedom."

Sisneros was raised in Roswell, New Mexico, and has lived in Las Cruces for the past 17 years. He has been an occupational therapy assistant at Good Samaritan Society in Las Cruces for the past year. Before that, he worked for Genesis Health Care, a long-term care facility in Las Cruces, for 15 years. Sisneros was an assistant manager, dairy clerk and a union representative at grocery stores in Roswell before moving to Las Cruces.

Sisneros, 58, is making his first bid for public office.

Sisneros said a number of issues prompted him to run for city council, including council efforts "to ban the sale and use" of handguns.

The council's passing a resolution in 2018 dealing with school safety was "a typical knee-jerk reaction rather than dealing with the issue," Sisneros said.

Sisneros said he wants Las Cruces children to be safe, but "they don't have the right to take our guns," he said.

The "liberal-progressive view" of education in local schools and the vote by the Las Cruces Public Schools Board of Education earlier this year to change the name of Oñate High School to Organ Mountain High School also prompted his decision to run, Sisneros said.

RONNIE SISNEROS

"Citizens said, 'Don't change the name,' but the school board did it anyway," he said.

"Individual rights and liberties" bring the issues together, Sisneros said.

The view that anyone who is not a liberal and a progressive "must be a racist, to me, that is just literal nonsense," Sisneros said.

"I have been an activist all my life," he said, fighting for "individual rights and liberties."

Sisneros said he stood up to management when a complaint was raised because he was speaking in Spanish to a resident at a long-term care facility. Communicating with patients in a way they understand is a job responsibility, he said, and so is protecting their confidentiality.

"I'm not going to let that slide," Sisneros said.

"Right is right," he said. "I put myself out there. I could have gotten fired."

District 5, which includes northwest Las Cruces, is currently represented by Councilor Gill Sorg.

Sorg, who is completing his third four-year term on the council, is not running for re-election.

Roads, more parks and infrastructure are important issues in District 5, Sisneros said, along with easy and safe access for traffic within the district, walkability, more trees and development.

Sisneros said he is "100 percent behind veterans and 100 percent behind cops."

"What about paying respect to these people?" he said about veterans. "It shows the city does care about their sacrifice."

"I support law enforcement without reservation as they are the backbone of a civilized society," Sisneros said on his campaign website.

Sisneros said Las Cruces is not a well-run city.

"How about some accountability?" he said.

Councilors are "supposed to represent the people who live here, pay taxes," Sisneros said. The entire council is "as far progressive as it can be," he said. City council members are "just doing what they want to regardless of what the people say," Sisneros said.

Acknowledging that city council races are nonpartisan, Sisneros said he is running as a Republican and a conservative.

If elected, Sisneros said his first priority will be to learn everything a city councilor can and cannot do.

"My hope is to work with whatever city council there is to rescind decisions that have been made in the past. I want to make Las Cruces into what it was."

Sisneros has a bachelor of science degree from Eastern New Mexico University and an associate's degree in occupational therapy from ENMU-Roswell.

He is a state-licensed occupational therapist.

David Tofsted is treasurer of Sisneros' campaign.

Contact Sisneros at 575-636-3684 and sisnerosforcitycouncil@yahoo.com.

State agencies tout water conservation in Lower Rio Grande

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

This summer, the New Mexico Interstate Stream Commission (NMISC), in conjunction with the Office of the State Engineer's (OSE) Las Cruces District IV Regional Office, will hold a series of online public outreach meetings to inform Lower Rio Grande area farmers about how to apply for grants that will compensate them for opting to let their land lie fallow instead of pumping groundwater to irrigate crops, OFE and NMISC said in a news release.

The online meetings will be held 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Thursday, July 29; 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 3; and 1 to 2 p.m.

An Elephant Butte Irrigation District crew works on footing for a distribution box on the Picacho pipeline.

Thursday, Aug. 5. Visit www.ose.state.nm.us and click on hot topics for more information.

The meetings are part of a groundwater conservation pilot program "to help our state and water right owners to better understand the physical impacts of reduced groundwater pumping," said State Engineer John R. D'Antonio. "This program is essential for the future management of the aquifers in the Lower Rio Grande at sustainable levels."

The public outreach is part of NMISC's implementation of the state's 50-Year Water Plan, the commission said.

"Low reservoir levels and lingering drought are just two of the many water challenges OSE and NMISC are faced with across our state," the agencies said in a news release. "However, none is more profound than the pending litigation with Texas over water availability in the Lower Rio Grande. While this litigation works its way through the courts, there is no question that New Mexicans need to work together to maintain the productive aquifers in the Mesilla and Rincon valleys.

"Given the decline of these regional aquifers – since the signing of the 2008 operating agreement between the Texas irrigation district, the federal government and the Elephant Butte Irrigation District Board – it is imperative that New Mexico continues to work with local entities to establish groundwater conservation practices that will help sustain aquifer levels for the purpose of a water source and a drought reserve in future years," D'Antonio said.

Elephant Butte Irrigation District (EBID), based in Las Cruces, "is already decades into implementing most of the measures discussed in the plan," EBID Treasurer-Manager Gary Esslinger said in a statement.

"The district and its agricultural producer members began planning and implementing water stewardship measures over 100 years ago and continue to this day," Esslinger said. "Their planning and other actions have continuously proven to be successful water management techniques.

"When New Mexico's 50-Year Water Plan was first enacted in 1987, EBID was one of the first to submit and receive acceptance of their regional plan," Esslinger said. "The district began studying and implementing sustainable improvement and conservation programs long ago and continues to develop new approaches and methods.

"More than 30 years later, EBID is still working, not just to plan, but to implement projects in fulfillment of both legal obligations and the driving need to conserve and protect water resources during frequent regional droughts."

New Shepard rocket ship carries four into space from Texas

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH
Las Cruces Bulletin

In 11 minutes, the world changed again as Jeff Bezos, his brother Mark Bezos, female aviation pioneer Wally Funk and 18-year-old Oliver Daemen blasted off into space, 62 miles above the Earth, on Tuesday, July 20. The flight took off just across the border from southern

New Mexico near Van Horn, Texas.

Two New Mexicans were along for the ride. Jeff Bezos was born in Albuquerque and Funk is from San Miguel County. Funk, at 82, now holds the record as the oldest person to go to space, something she set her mind on when she was 17.

The vertical launching New Shepard space vehicle is designed to carry people and payloads on brief trips to suborbital space. The 59-foot-tall (18 meters) craft is named after NASA astronaut Alan Shepard, whose suborbital jaunt on May 5, 1961, was the United States' first crewed spaceflight. Shepard's daughters were on-site to witness the flight.

During a press conference following the flight, Bezos thanked every Amazon customer and employee "because you guys paid for all this."

He said his expectations for the flight were high, but they were "dramatically exceeded."

"It felt so normal," he said. "It was serene and peaceful and floating was a pleasurable experience. It is a most profound peace."

"It was way more fun than it looked," Daemen said after watching a recap video.

But Bezos also talked about seeing the Earth from space.

"As we move about the planet, we are damaging it," he said. "It is amazing to see how fragile it really is."

Mark Bezos said on the flight with the team, on loan from the Explorer's Club, was a piece of canvas from the Wright Flyer, the plane that the Wright brothers flew; and a bronze medallion made from the first hot air balloon in 1783, the first time man ever left the Earth in controlled flight.

They also had with them the goggles Amelia Earhart wore on her flight across the Atlantic.

"I like to think if Amelia were here, she would be very proud of what we are doing," Jeff Bezos said.

She retired from Edward Jones in 2016.

For over 30 years, Connie played in the flute section in the Mesilla Valley Concert Band at NMSU under direction of Dr. William Clark.

Her lifelong interest in music led her to become a supporter of the NMSU band department and of KRWG where she served on the Board of Advisors.

During her life, community service was important to Connie.

For many years, she was involved in the American Association of University Women, and the League of Women Voters, and she enthusiastically worked in local elections.

She was a skilled crossword puzzle enthusiast and had a great love and talent for quilting.

Her association with other quilting enthusiasts provided a place for good memories and happy times. Many lasting friendships were made.

Connie was a great friend and knew that good work and friendships were the essence of her happiness.

She had a delightful sense of humor and always had an amusing or funny story to share.

We will cherish her memory and celebrate a life well-lived.

City installs first 'pop-up' bike lanes

BULLETIN REPORT

The City of Las Cruces is inviting bicycle riders to take a ride in the city's first pop-up bike lanes.

"Pop-up bike projects are temporary bicycle-lane improvements on city streets that provide a fun way to get active and make the road safer for cyclists," the city said in a news release. Pop-up bike lanes promote cycling, demonstrate road design meant for both automobiles and bicycles and help inform future bicycle infrastructure improvements, the city said.

The current project is a part of the city's ongoing efforts to improve active transportation or "human-powered transportation like walking or biking" in Las Cruces to create a "healthier, safer and overall more livable community for everyone."

The first pop-up is on Idaho Avenue/south Walnut Street and Nevada Avenue from the intersections of Lees Drive/Idaho to Nevada/Triviz Drive (near Young Park). The pop-up was created with temporary barriers, signs and lane markings.

Anita Elliott Worthington, 82

Anita Elliott Worthington, a resident of Good Samaritan Independent Living, died at her home on Wednesday morning, July 14, 2021, from multiple health issues. Anita was born in Washington, D.C. on September 3, 1938, to John and Winnie Elliott. She grew up in D.C. and graduated from Marjorie Webster Junior College with an English degree. She married Elliott Robert (Bob) Worthington on her 21st birthday, after meeting him on a blind date when she was 19.

ANITA ELLIOTT WORTHINGTON

Anita enjoyed many notable accomplishments and vocations during her life while also supporting Bob's career as an Army Officer. She earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Utah in 1973 and a Master of Business Administration from Trinity University in 1980.

Anita focused on raising their children and volunteering in the many communities where they lived. She served many years as a Girl Scout leader, participated in civic organizations, and kept the home fires burning while Bob served two combat tours in Vietnam. As their daughters got older, Anita entered the paid workforce as administrative assistant to the owner of Pace Foods (Pace Picante Sauce) and progressed to several high-level management positions. Anita was the Fox-Stanley Photo national warehouse manager in San Antonio, TX, the first woman to serve at that level for Fox Photo. Later, she and Bob founded Worthington and Worthington Management Consultants, with Anita as president, and she began her professional writing career.

In Las Cruces, Anita worked at a local art gallery. She later managed the southern NM office for the 1990 U.S. Census. When the Census was completed, Anita shut down the office and turned her amazing talents to serving in leadership positions in the many state and national patriotic and genealogy organizations to which she belonged, including Daughters of the American Revolution, Colonial Dames, and others. Anita enjoyed many hobbies throughout her life, including sewing, arts and crafts, genealogy, theater performances, collecting and enjoying art, reading, movies, puzzles, and Scrabble. She loved the family's cats, which accompanied them on many adventures including camping, and whose antics have become family lore.

Her favorite pastime was spending time with family and friends.

Traveling was one of Anita's and Bob's shared passions. Bob was a private pilot, and they owned several planes over a forty-year period in which they flew to four countries and landed in every state except Hawaii. Together they planned and guided small groups of general aviation planes through northwestern Canada and all over Alaska. Anita served in several leadership positions in state and national aviation organizations and was recognized twice as member of the year by the United States Pilots Association. Her experience in aviation led her to create and write a column, "The Right Seat," for a national aviation magazine.

Anita and Bob lived in many places before settling in Las Cruces, NM, in 1987. When Bob retired from teaching at New Mexico State University, they turned their attention to their second home, an eighty-acre ranch in the Sacramento Mountains that included a trout stream. Bob built a log-sided house which Anita decorated as a multi-generational family retreat. Anita loved spending snowy winters beside the fire, enjoying the deer and elk playing in the fields in front of the cabin.

Anita was an extraordinarily strong role model for her daughters and grandchildren. Highly intelligent, witty, and always a compassionate friend, she was a bright, sunny ray shining on all her friends and family. She is survived by her husband, Bob; daughter Susan Bontly of Las Cruces; Julie Coley (Steve Coley) of Irving, TX; Karen Worthington (Mark Crowe) of Maui, HI; siblings John (Jack) Elliott and Susan Elliott Chikar; and five grandchildren, Stephen Bontly, Megan Coley, Matthew Coley, Maile Crowe, and Grace Crowe.

She is predeceased by her parents; her son Robert Scott (Scotty) Worthington, who died at age two; and her grandson David Christopher Bontly, who died at age two.

Anita has requested no memorial services. Her family appreciated the compassionate care provided to Anita in the last few days of her life, which allowed Anita to come home and be with her family before passing.

She asked that any memorial contributions be made in her honor to the Mesilla Valley Hospice at 299 Montana Ave., Las Cruces, NM 88005 or www.mvhospice.org.

tonight's picks

Dakota Laden

6 p.m. on LIFE
Movie: Next-Door Nightmare

Sarah and Kyle, a young couple, receive a warm welcome from their neighbor, Helen, when they move next door to this charming, charismatic older woman. First impressions can be deceiving, however, and it's only much later that they discover to their horror that Helen is a deeply disturbed psycho who is obsessed with becoming a surrogate mother to Sarah — and doting grandma to the child Sarah is expecting. Julia Borsellino, Mark Taylor, Deborah Grover and Marium Carvell star in this 2021 thriller.

6 p.m. on TCM
Movie: Chitty Chitty Bang Bang

Based on a story by James Bond creator Ian Fleming, this musical kiddie fantasy frightened a few youngsters in its 1968 debut with its villain, the "child catcher," who goes after his quarry with a gigantic net. But the real star is the flying car whose engine sounds give it — and the movie — its name. Dick Van Dyke stars as Chitty's creator, a widowed father of two. His fantastic flier carries him and his children off to a fantasy land where adventures ensue. Sally Ann Howes and Lionel Jeffries also star.

6 p.m. on BBCA
Eden: Untamed Planet

Helena Bonham Carter ("The Crown") narrates this stunning new six-part natural history series from the producers of the Emmy-winning "Blue Planet II." The series takes viewers to the four corners of the Earth to visit the few remaining untouched lands, which still teem with mind-boggling biodiversity. The premiere, "Borneo: Sacred Forest," focuses on the richest rainforest island of them all, home to 60,000 species of plants and animals, 6,000 of which are unique to this location. This series will be simulcast on BBC America and AMC.

6 p.m. on OXYGEN
Cold Justice

Detective Tonya Rider joins veteran prosecutor Kelly Siegler in tiny Picayune, Miss., where they try to pick up a killer's long-dormant trail in the new episode "A Touch of Evidence." The victim in this heartbreaking case was Leola Jordan, a 91-year-old grandmother, whose murderer stabbed her nearly 40 times while she was in her bed. The investigators hope DNA may point to her assailant's identity, which may also reveal another tragic family secret.

7 p.m. on TRAV
Destination Fear

Paranormal investigators Dakota and Chelsea Laden, Tanner Wiseman and Alex Schroeder hit America's haunted highways, byways and backroads to find the scariest locations in America as they open Season 3 of this spooky docuseries. The season opener finds Dakota taking the team to Waverly Hills Sanatorium in Louisville, Ky. The now-closed facility was once a tuberculosis hospital where the death rate was so high, the staff installed a "body chute" to hide the constant flow of deceased patients from those living there.

9:15 p.m. on HBO
Movie: Freaky

Director and co-writer Christopher Landon earned widespread praise for this 2020 slasher comedy, which puts a clever if wildly perverse spin on the familiar body-switching comedy "Freaky Friday." Kathryn Newton ("Supernatural") stars as bullied teenager and high school mascot Millie Kessler, whose victim days are over after she unintentionally switches bodies with a middle-aged serial killer known as the Blissfield Butcher (Vince Vaughn). Critics lauded both Newton and Vaughn for their performances as each other's characters once the "switch" has happened; Katie Finneran and Alan Ruck co-star.

11 p.m. on HBO
Tig Notaro: Drawn

Emmy- and Grammy-nominated comic Tig Notaro earned raves from many critics recently for her acting turn in director Zack Snyder's horror blockbuster "Army of the Dead," a role she'll soon reprise in an animated Netflix prequel series, "Army of the Dead: Lost Vegas." First, though — and on a related note — Notaro returns to HBO in her first fully animated stand-up comedy special. Ellen DeGeneres is executive producer on this project, her third professional collaboration with Notaro.

tonight's picks

Brian Howe

6 p.m. on AMC
A Discovery of Witches

Philippe (James Purefoy) provokes Matthew (Matthew Goode), goading him into revealing his terrifying vampiric blood rage to Diana (Teresa Palmer) in "Episode 6." Meanwhile, Diana learns of the prophecy that predicted her arrival into this time and place. Later, after Matthew tells Diana how Philippe died, the couple finally are married.

6 p.m. on LIFE
Movie: Murder on Maple Drive

A status-hungry couple purchase a home in an upper-class neighborhood after they find a deeply discounted property that was the scene of a murder-suicide by the previous owners. Once they move in, they're encouraged when a neighbor is quick to befriend them. When strange and unsettling things start to happen, though, the couple develop a serious case of buyer's remorse — especially after they begin to suspect their friendly neighbor may have had a hand in their home's violent history.

7 p.m. on AMC
Kevin Can F... Himself

Nick's (Robin Lord Taylor) timeline shifts just as Allison and Patty (Annie Murphy, Mary Hollis Inboden) prepare for the big night in a new episode called "Broken." Meanwhile, Kevin, Neil and Pete (Eric Petersen, Alex Bonifer, Brian Howe) start a band, but Neil soon grows paranoid that Kevin secretly has other plans when he finds a fertility clinic brochure in the trash. Elsewhere, Tammy (Candice Coke) and Patty get closer.

8 p.m. on KRWG
Unforgotten on Masterpiece

In the new episode 3, Cassie and Sunny (Nicola Walker, Sanjeev Bhaskar) interview each of the four suspects, but all of them deny knowing the victim, Matthew Walsh. DC Collier (Lewis Reeves) finds the storage unit, which contains a small freezer holding the dismembered head and hands of Walsh.

8 p.m. on KVIA2
Wellington Paranormal

While investigating a call from a freaked-out pizza delivery guy who reports he was attacked by a big dog wearing jeans, Minogue and O'Leary (Mike Minogue, Karen O'Leary) soon suspect a werewolf is loose on the streets in the new episode "She-Wolf." In pursuit of the beast, they encounter a young woman named Sheena (guest star Ana Scotney), only belatedly realizing Sheena is the werewolf, not a victim — and she's fired up for revenge against the ex-boyfriend who gave her "the curse."

10 p.m. on HBO
The White Lotus

Bereft of his beloved electronics, Quinn (Fred Hechinger) very reluctantly signs up for a scuba class with his dad, Mark (Steve Zahn), who's wrestling with some unsettling revelations about his late father, in the new episode "Mysterious Monkeys." Elsewhere, Shane (Jake Lacy) recruits Armond (Murray Bartlett) to help him plan a romantic evening that will rekindle things with Rachel (Alexandra Daddario).

10 p.m. on NGC
Gordon Ramsay: Uncharted

Chef Gordon Ramsay crosses the Mackinac Bridge into the Upper Peninsula of Michigan to reveal some of the culinary gems that originated with the miners of the region in the new episode "Michigan's Yooper Cuisine." After diving into Lake Superior in search of burbot (a cod-like freshwater fish) among the shipwrecks, Ramsay hunts woodcock in the forest and helps a monk build a fence for his thimbleberry jam business. Local food legend James Rigato also schools him in other culinary secrets of the area.

11:30 p.m. on SHOW
Flatbush Misdeemeanors

After breaking protocol, Dan and Jess (Dan Perlman, Sharlene Cruz) are forced to face some inevitable consequences at their job in a new episode called "Breaking." Meanwhile, Kevin (Kevin Iso) is sorely peeved to discover Dan lied to him about Zayna (Kristin Dodson). Eventually, the fracture between these two longtime friends drives Kevin to seek Drew's (Hassan Johnson) friendship, all of which culminates in a tragic outcome.

tonight's picks

Nathan Dean
7 p.m. on KVIA2 Roswell, New Mexico
Still reeling from the events of Season 2, the aliens and their human allies are drawn back together through a threat from a stranger who seems oddly familiar and a murder that has yet to happen as this cult sci-fi reboot returns for its third season. These new episodes will involve reunions, break-ups and the imminent death of someone they all hold dear. Jeanine Mason, Nathan Dean, Michael Vlamis, Lily

Cowles and Tyler Blackburn are among the returnees; new recurring actors include Steven Krueger, Michael Grant Terry and Gillian Vigman.
7 p.m. on HGTV Celebrity IOU
In the new "Josh Groban's Life-Changing Gift to His Bandmate," crooner Groban calls on hosts Jonathan and Drew Scott to give his colleague and friend of 20 years Mark a badly needed renovation. Mark's cramped garage studio is not adequate for a musician of his caliber, so the makeover includes a state-of-the-art recording setup, and an outdoor oasis for him and his whole family to enjoy.
8 p.m. on TRAV Monsters and Mysteries in America
In a new two-hour episode called "Monstrous Revenge and The Shapeshifter," vengeful mutant creatures savagely prey on the innocent without remorse. In other segments, a shapeshifting werewolf guards a region of the Louisiana swamps, while a zombie witch rises from the grave to terrorize the living. Finally, a UFO sighting leads to a new theory about the origins of Bigfoot.

9 p.m. on KRWG POV
Filmmaker David Osit's entertaining, insightful and often surprisingly funny 2020 documentary "Mayor" follows Musa Hadid, mayor of Ramallah, the de facto capital of the Palestinian National Authority, as he tries to keep the city running despite Israeli occupation of his home. Hadid, whom Osit followed over the course of two years, emerges as an immensely likable, hands-on public servant, who relishes his direct connection with Ramallah and its people, whether he's coping with a sewage spill or berating a bus driver for exceeding the speed limit.
10:24 p.m. on HBO Catch and Kill: The Podcast Tapes
This six-part docuseries adapted from investigative reporter Ronan Farrow's acclaimed podcast concludes with a finale called "The Spy," in which undercover operative Igor Ostrovsky reveals how he was hired to gather potentially compromising information on Farrow, as well as how an unexpected turn of events prompted Ostrovsky to become an important source for Farrow instead.

In Focus

“He’s All That” (Netflix — movie premiere, Aug. 27)

This reimagining of the 1999 teen cult hit “She’s All That” turns the tables on the genders and stars newcomer Addison Rae as an influencer who accepts the challenge to transform her school’s biggest loser (Tanner Buchanan, “Cobra Kai”) into the prom king. Rachael Leigh Cook, who played the transformed party in the original, is the influencer’s mother here, in a cast that also includes Madison Pettis and Kourtney Kardashian.

“Generation 9/11” (PBS — new documentary, Aug. 31)

A U.S.-British-French co-production, this new two-hour documentary marks the 20th anniversary of the terrorist attack on New York’s World Trade Center by following children born to fathers who died in the collapse of the Twin Towers. An estimated 108 children, unborn on the day of the 9/11 attacks, lost their fathers in that tragedy. The film introduces several of those young people, weaving together such subsequent personal milestones as their first day of school and how they learned about the circumstances of their father’s death.

Community theater returning after Covid hiatus

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Live theater returns to the stage at Las Cruces Community Theatre (LCCT) with its production of "Harvey," starring Brandon Brown as Elwood P. Dowd and Lennie Brown as Veta Louise Dowd Simmons.

The show will be performed at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Aug. 20-21, 27-28 and Sept. 3-4; and 2 p.m. Sundays, Aug. 22 and 29 and Sept. 5.

Additional cast members are David Edwards, Cindy Murrell, Ed Montes, Vanessa Dabovich, Mike Cruz, Alecks Rundell, Erin Wendorf, Alex Wheeler Larkin and Nathan Harper.

Gail Wheeler is the director.

"I think that we all learned – really learned – the incredible importance of family and need to broaden the definition of family during difficult times," Wheeler said.

"Shows are very much like families, and in our case the roles and members have changed over time, kind of like real life. We don't always agree with family – just like Elwood's family doesn't believe in Harvey, but whether or not Harvey is real, it's important that we respect the fight that he might be..."

"LCCT is super excited to finally be able to get 'Harvey' onto the stage with a live audience in the seats," said LCCT Board of Directors President Janet Beatty-Payne.

"A year and a-half after it was supposed to open, the cast has changed some, but the classic story remains as endearing as always. As we welcome our patrons back to LCCT, we are excited to unveil some upgrades to our theater space, such as a new ADA-compliant family bathroom in our front lobby and new carpeting throughout. Even though we couldn't put on shows during the Covid-19 closure, we used that time to do these upgrades that will make coming home to LCCT more comfortable and convenient for all."

Playwright Mary Chase won a 1944 Pulitzer Prize for "Harvey." The 1950 movie version starred James Stewart and earned him an Academy Award nomination. Josephine Hull won a best-supporting actress Oscar.

Elwood P. Dowd is an affable man who claims to have an unseen (and presumably imaginary) friend, Harvey, a 6-foot, 3 1/2-inch-tall tall pooka.

Former Las Cruces resident wins international vocal competition

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Former Las Cruces resident Tawanda Suessbrich-Joaquim was co-winner of the Sarah Vaughan International Jazz Vocal Competition held in early June at the New Jersey Performing Arts Center.

Tawanda was a finalist among hundreds of applicants from around the world and was co-winner along with Gabrielle Cavassa of New Orleans.

Tawanda grew up in Las Cruces and moved to Los Angeles two years ago, said her mother, Christina Suessbrich, who lives in Las Cruces.

Tawanda performed at Boba Café and other venues in Las Cruces, and studied contemporary music with a focus on vocal performance at Santa Fe University of Art and Design.

Tawanda is currently working on a CD, which will be released later this year.

"It was an incredible honor to receive this award, especially coming out of such a year as last year," Tawanda said. "There was so much fear – the fear of being alone, of not succeeding, of being a woman of color in this sociopolitical climate, of not being strong enough to make it through. Ultimately, it was and is always love that holds and carries me all the way to the big stage. I have the support of my ancestors, my family, friends and mentors all over the world to thank.

"And I also want to express gratitude for my birthplace and my home, Las Cruces, New Mexico, for instilling a groundedness within me that I wouldn't be me without," she said. "Now that I've seen more of the world, and am living in Los Angeles, I can honestly say it is a gift to be from there. Even when I'm away, I'm inspired by our most beautiful sunsets, the vastness, the warmth and the perseverance of the desert. The space. The quietude. A land without distraction."

Tawanda also called Las Cruces "a land with just a little bit of jazz! I was raised in a multicultural household and had been singing mostly classical music, showtunes, pop music and my own originals before I was exposed to the world of jazz in college. This music is the language of improvisation and emotion, born directly out of the Black experience. It filled in so many blanks for me.

"I have a jazz album on the way," she said. "It should be here next year. It will be my kind of foray into this genre, so I'm excited to finish it and share it with my community. I look very much forward to my future in multi-genre fusion, as influenced by my melting-pot of a background.

"There are many things in the works," Tawanda said. "I just signed with a management company, and as the world opens up again in this new way, and the album comes closer to finishing, I look forward to the opportunity to stop by home in Las Cruces to sing for my homeland and show her how much I've grown!"

'Celebrate Authors 2021' welcomes more writers for event

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

"Celebrate Authors" will be held 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 19, in the boardroom and Roadrunner Room on the second floor of Thomas Branigan Memorial Library, 200 E. Picacho Ave.

The event is free and open to the public.

Moonbow Alterations and Moonbow's Book Nook are the sponsors.

Celebrate Authors 2021 will feature authors from Las Cruces and surrounding area with books published in 2019, 2020 and 2021.

Here is the second group of four authors signed up for this year's event.

Celebrate Authors started in 2014.

Ellen Roberts Young

has been a member of the writing community in Las Cruces since 2004. She has two full-length collections, "Made and Remade" (2014) and "Lost in the Greenwood" (2020), as well as poems in numerous print and online journals. She is an editor of Sin Fronteras/Writers Without Borders Journal. She blogs at www.

FRANK THAYER

freethoughtand-metaphor.com and offers her books at ellenrobertsy.com.

"I am fortunate to have had two very different books accepted for publication this past year," Young said. "'Transported' (Finishing Line Press) is a chapbook about my childhood travels when my father got a Fulbright grant to teach in Egypt and the way that experience shaped me. 'Lost in the Greenwood' (Atmosphere Press) is a collection of poems centered around the Unicorn tapestries of 500 years ago, their art, their mysteries, their world and their fascination."

"Greenwood" was a finalist in the poetry division of the National Indie Excellence Awards.

Frank Thayer is a Las Cruces author and professor emeritus at New Mexico State University. A New Mexico native, he also taught in Canada for 11 years before returning for a 30-year career at NMSU. Thayer wrote three journalism textbooks during those years. Thayer was an author of the 2015 books "The Aztec UFO Incident" and "Magic in the Desert," the latter being the story of the undefeated 1960 Aggie football season. Thayer's fiction focus began in 2016 with "Cobston Trilogy: The Ontario Horror," followed by "Terror Tales of the Southwest," then "The Whispering Darkness," and followed by "The Vampire of San Vicente" in fall 2020 during Covid.

In June 2021, Thayer published a horror novella, "A Taste of Salt." Thayer said he is heavily influenced by classic authors such as Edgar Allan Poe, H.P. Lovecraft and Arthur Machen. He feels comfortable with one foot in the world of the supernatural, Thayer said.

For something completely different, Thayer is now completing a novel about dysfunctional college administration in the 1960s titled "The Quantum Jump Machine."

While Thayer is dedicated to classic supernatural horror tales, "this book in preparation reminds readers that some things are just ... funny," he said.

"I wrote my first story at age 6, my first (fairly decent) poem at 12," Thayer said. "I can't tell anyone else how to do it or how not to. If it is important to you, you'll find your way."

Jack Eakman writes about his passion for leadership and what brings out the best qualities in those we entrust with our futures. His foundation is built upon his education in management and public administration, his experiences as a factory worker, laundry washman, hospital manager and administrator, Las Cruces city councilor (2015-19), member of many boards of directors and mentee, then mentor of many.

Eakman credits "the relatively few leaders who have made positive and dramatic improvements in our daily lives," he said. He relates the qualities and talents of those leaders that set them apart: "their ability to inspire, ignite self-motivation, set up competent teams, create ground rules that expedite advancement and bring about self-satisfaction and (make) friends and associates for life."

"Better leaders bring about healthier and more fulfilling lives," said Eakman, adding that he writes to inspire leaders to bring out the best in others.

Eakman published "Thank You for Leading" in June 2020 and "Thank You for Your Lessons" in December 2020.

Growing up in rural Pennsylvania, Eakman and his two brothers began learning about leadership at an early age.

Their father was a kosher butcher five days a week and a pastor on Sundays. Their mother taught piano lessons, with their father driving her to students' homes every Saturday and writing his sermon for the next day while waiting in the car.

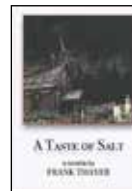

"My mother and father became leaders right before my eyes," Eakman said, "transforming themselves from the effects of backbreaking laborers into spiritual beacons."

Rosemary Matos spent most of her life in Minnesota. Retirement and sunshine brought her and her husband to Las Cruces nearly four years ago. She has enjoyed writing since being on the newspaper staff in high school.

Journaling, short stories, letters and poetry have been an important part of her life, Matos said. Recently, memoirs and children's books have become an interesting and fun method of expression, primarily influenced by extended family members and various pets owned by her four children, she said.

Rosemary enjoys reading, traveling, gardening and spending time with her children and grandchildren.

"Writing doesn't come easy to me, but it is worth

'Rooster' next story in family reading series

BULLETIN REPORT

Local actor and singer Cassandra Reveles will present "The Rooster Who Wouldn't Be Quiet! ("El gallo que no se Callaba!") by Carmen Agra Deedy at 7 p.m. Friday, July 23, via Zoom. The story will be told in both Spanish and English with audience participation.

This is the sixth story in the Children's Reading Alliance's 10-part series of Talking Stories/ Cuentos que hablan quality children's literature, told by local performers, produced by Children's Reading Alliance (CRA) and sponsored by The Las Cruces Bulletin, New Mexico Humanities Council and the National Endowment for the Humanities. The program is free. Subject matter is appropriate for families.

Through the monthly program, families are invited to Zoom with a different local performing artist to enjoy a story together and participate in discussion with open-ended questions that encourage critical thinking. Participants receive a copy of the book. Program themes celebrate speaking your truth and the courage to resist bullying. After the performance, the audience is invited to explore the story's themes through intergenerational conversation.

the effort involved and it brings me to a sense of well-being," she said. "The next project I have in mind is an epistolary novel, in addition to a series of children's books."

After many visits to Cuba with her husband, Matos discovered a story needing to be told, she said. The 1950s and '60s brought profound changes to Cuba. Her book, "Promises," is based on the life of a military family and friends of the family during those difficult years in Cuba. Culture, food and revolution are vividly described in this brief history, as are love for family and country. And of course, there is betrayal.

"Promises" is not yet available, but will be published by the time Celebrate Authors is held.

Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces author Judy Cicero has a new book, "Tate and the Lotus Pond: A Fantasy," recently released by RoseDog Books.

"Tate and the Lotus Pond: A Fantasy" follows boy hero Tate and Little-One, a refugee baby spider, in their search for Little-One's home web on the mysterious lotus pond, according to a news release from the publisher. "These unlikely friends, accompanied by Tate's imagination, face the dangerous Bully Fish, menacing Sumo Snails, the evil Kameko, a renegade turtle taxi driver and the deadly Steaming Vapors" on their web-finding journey. "They are befriended by the illusive Morning Glories, noisy Frogflings, generations of Lotus plants and the Parasol Ants. Tate and Little-One are honored for their bravery and wild imaginations with a welcome-home tea ceremony hosted by Geisha Butterflies, dancing Fireflies and their family and friends."

Originally from Ohio where she received her undergraduate and graduate degrees in social work from Heidelberg College and Case Western Reserve University, Cicero moved to Las Cruces in 1994.

Cicero "discovered her creative writing muse upon the birth of her granddaughter and grandson in 2005," she said, and "began writing whimsical fairy tales and fictional adult novellas."

Cicero said her new book "is dedicated to children who struggle with being different, overcoming great obstacles in life, and through unlikely friendships, survive and thrive."

Her other works include "Sour Grapes and Shadow" (an animated short film), the books "The Extraordinary Magic of Everyday Life" and "Do Drop In" and other short works for children and adults "that depict those who persevere and joyfully embrace life in spite of difficult circumstances," she said.

Ranch exhibit honors women

BULLETIN REPORT

The New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum (NMFRHM) is paying tribute to the women making a difference in New Mexico agriculture, the museum said.

A new, rotating wall display in the museum's central corridor is called "Her Land: Women in Agriculture." The first person featured in the exhibit is Felicia Thal, a longtime rancher in northeastern New Mexico who passed away last year at the age of 92.

The exhibit, which is now on display, will be changed every four months to feature a different woman involved in New Mexico agriculture.

The first honoree led an extraordinary life. Thal was born in Durban, South Africa, in 1928.

Her adventures led her and her husband, Alan, to New York, Minnesota, Detroit, Kansas City and eventually New Mexico in 1972. The Thals decided to make cattle ranching a priority and fell in love with the northeastern part of the state and bought a ranch north of Las Vegas, New Mexico.

Thal, a woman of varied interests and many talents, began to focus on raising cattle and quickly became one of the state's leaders in the industry.

The display features photographs and objects, including branding irons.

Author, director will sign 'Walking with Herb' DVDs at COAS Books

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH

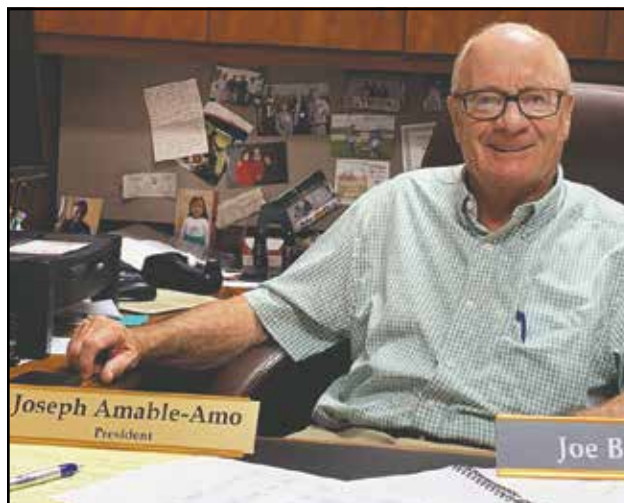

Las Cruces Bulletin

After a national theatrical release, Las Cruces-based feature film "Walking with Herb," starring Edward James Olmos, George Lopez and Kathleen Quinlan, is being released on DVD.

The DVD will be available at COAS Books, at 317 N. Main St., beginning with a signing on Saturday, July 31.

Book author and film executive producer Joe S. Bullock and film director and producer Ross Kagan Marks will be signing the DVD from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the bookstore.

Bullock said the movie's screenwriter and Tony Award-winning playwright Mark Medoff, who died in

"Walking with Herb" book author, golfer and banker Joe S. Bullock at his desk at First American Bank.

April 2019, loved this project so much it may have allowed him to live a little longer to see the project become a reality.

"I think he loved this project so much and had so much fun doing it," Bullock said.

Bullock said Medoff took the book "Walking with Herb," and made some

"brilliant" changes to the story.

"Mark takes it from a deeper, darker place," Bullock said. "It's about the spiritual journey that Joe Amable-Amo has. And Mark had a brilliant idea that we should make the two lead characters Hispanic. We have two of the best Hispanic actors in the world."

The PG-rated film shot in Las Cruces and Artesia, New Mexico, is about Amable-Amo (Olmos) a bank executive and former amateur golfer struggling with his faith after an unexpected tragedy. Faced with doubts about himself, his purpose and his belief in God, Joe is stunned when God tells him that he's been chosen to inspire the world and play in a world championship golf tournament.

Guided by God's eccentric personal messenger, Herb (Lopez), Joe learns that the seemingly impossible is possible.

"To a person, every actor I talked to said this was the most fun they had making a movie," Bullock said.

"Kathleen Quinlan walked by and hit me and said, 'Joe, thanks for writing that book. I'm having so much fun,'" Bullock added.

Bullock, who is a banker and a golfer, said Marks would call him about banking and golfing technical advice, like how a golfer would play a certain kind of shot.

In the book, he said he had the main character learn an old-fashioned putting technique.

"There was this English golfer around the turn of the century who had this way to putt. He claimed he was the best putter in the world," Bullock said.

"Edward James Olmos spent two hours learning it," he added.

It is gratifying to Bullock that the film, mostly shot in Las Cruces, was also shot in his hometown of Artesia.

He describes one of his most memorable moments as watching at dusk, from the parking lot at the Artesia County Club as a caravan of trucks drove into town.

"Walking with Herb" was on the side of the semis," he said.

"It was like the circus coming to town."

NMSU theater season to include plays, musical, readings

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

The New Mexico State University Theatre Department has something for everyone in its 2021-22 season. All shows will be performed at the AS-NMSU Center for the Arts, 1000 E. University Ave., at the corner of University and Espina Street on the NMSU campus. Performers will be NMSU theater students and staff as well as community actors.

Here is the schedule of shows for the fall of 2021 and the spring of 2022:

- “Fefu and Her Friends,” written by Cuban-American playwright Maria Irene Fornes (1930-2018) and directed by Theatre Department assistant professor Nichole Hamilton. The play will open Thursday, Sept. 23 and continue through Sunday, Oct. 3.

The play, which is the dramatic equivalent of a collection of poems, tells the story of seven friends who gather at Fefu’s house for a kind of reunion, explore their lives — the pain, strain, comforts and fragility of women’s experiences. After the initial scene in the living room, cast members visit the kitchen, a bedroom and a garden, with actors performing the same thing four times so the audience can see it from each different perspective.

- “The Thanksgiving Play” will be a staged reading of a play written by California-based Native American (Sicangu Lakota) playwright and choreographer Larissa Fasthose. It will be directed by Theatre Department professor Claudia Billings, and will be performed Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 16-17. How does one celebrate Thanksgiving and Native American Heritage Month at the same time? That is the question facing three “woke” white thespians tasked with devising an elementary-school pageant about the first Thanksgiving while avoiding any cultural missteps.

- “Syd, The Solstice Kid,” is the Southwest premiere of Storybook Musical Theatre (SMT) for the whole family.

The adaptation is by Lani Brokman, with music and lyrics by Susan Bardsley.

In the show, Syd wants answers! Why are the days so short in December? Where does the sun go? Join Syd as he travels around the world finding answers.

- “Mojada,” by Luis Alfaro, directed by Theatre Department associate professor Larissa Lury and performed Thursday, Feb. 17 to Sunday, Feb. 27, 2022. From www.dramatists.com: “After a harrowing journey across the U.S.-Mexico border, Medea and Jason have made it safely to the States, where they can work toward a better life for their family. While Jason is convinced the future looks bright, Medea fears a darker fate as they face the challenges of living without documentation. The play is a blending of Euripides’ classic Greek tragedy with Mexican folklore as it explores the tragedy behind America’s immigration system and the destiny of one family caught in its grip.”

- Two staged readings will be presented Friday and Saturday, March 4-5, 2022. The NMSU Theatre Department’s High Desert Play Development Workshop, founded in 2005 as a bi-annual program that solicits new plays from 15 to 20 nationally renowned, emerging playwrights, will present new works by two playwrights in a weeklong developmental reading program in which a director, a dramaturg and actors prepare the script for a public staged reading. The workshop is currently managed by Larissa Lury.

- Broadway Onstage, the annual Theatre Department fundraiser, will be presented by the department and the American Southwest Theatre Company, the nonprofit created by Tony-winning playwright Mark Medoff to benefit the students and staff of the Theatre Department. Broadway Onstage will feature favorites from current and past Broadway shows. It will be performed Friday and Saturday, April 29-30.

“Our students and all of the faculty/staff at NMSU are thrilled with the plans to once again open our doors to the public and provide live theater to our community,” said NMSU Theatre Department Head Wil Kilroy.

“While we remained active during the Covid restrictions with numerous video presentations, nothing can compare to having performers there ‘live,’ with an audience — to hear their laughter, gasps and applause,” Kilroy added.

“It truly is an exchange between performers and audience and it’s been sorely missed,” he continued. “We will hope to celebrate with an opening-night reception for our first show with all ticket holders for that night invited to come meet the cast and crew.”

Remembering Vietnam service in video, museum interview

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

An exhibit called “Through a Different Lens: One Woman’s Experience,” about longtime Las Cruces resident Frances F. Williams’ civilian service during the Vietnam War, was supposed to open to the public at Branigan Cultural Center in March 2020, but then state public health orders closed museums across the state.

No one got to see the exhibit because of Covid-19, so Williams put together a five and a half minute video at <https://vimeo.com/514404777> about the exhibit, which includes many photographs that Williams and others took while she was in Southeast Asia.

You can also watch a City of Las Cruces Museums System interview with Williams about the exhibit at www.facebook.com/LCMuseums/videos/3740837659284014.

“I was called by the Pentagon (in early 1968) to see if I would be willing to go to Vietnam (as a volunteer) because there was a great deal of difficulty getting supplies out to the field to the soldiers,” said, Williams, 92, who worked for the U.S. Army at White Sands Missile Range (WSMR) for 37 years and has lived in Las Cruces for 67 years.

“The computer system used was on a contract and the company was not exactly aware of the Army supply system,” Williams said. “I agreed and was sent to the 14th Inventory Control Center in Long Binh, Vietnam, but was housed in Saigon.

“Three weeks after I got there, the Tet offensive (Jan. 31-Sept. 23, 1968) began and all hell broke loose. I was being shot at from the Catholic church in Saigon by snipers while waiting for my bus to take me 26 kilometers away to my workplace.

“After I was able to report to work, I found out that there was the 24th Evacuation Hospital, taking in the wounded from the field, stabilizing them, then sending them to Japan. Since I was only working 12 hours a day and a workaholic, I went over to the hospital to volunteer with whatever I could do. I was a gofer, a letter writer and had many experiences with the soldiers, nurses and doctor I worked with.

“No one knows how bad combat is until you see it up close and personal as I did.

“I also met a famous New Mexico artist, Michael Naranjo, who I wrote a letter for to his family, and then wrote a personal letter to them as well. Michael, a Tewa Indian, is from the Taos Pueblo, and has become an internationally famous bronze artist and also is sculpting in marble. His famous Eagle Man statue is in the courtyard between the Branigan Cultural Center and the museum. The letter his family wrote back to me is one of the displays at the exhibit. To see those young men in the flower of their lives, wounded, hurt, physically and mentally, was an experience that I will never forget. Every now and then those pictures come into my head, triggered by some incident, and I feel the tears welling up.

“We may not have belonged in Vietnam, as many critics say, but, by God, when our troops are deployed anywhere, they deserve our support and commitment. Going on this mission was one of the best things I have ever done, and in the exhibit, I focused on the people and children of Vietnam who also suffered. U.S. soldiers were so kind to the kids and that is another story that has not been told. God Bless our troops wherever they serve and God Bless America.”

“This tells a story that I don’t think has ever been told about Vietnam,” Williams said.

During her career at WSMR, Williams served as director of civilian and military equal employment opportunity programs and also oversaw budgets and human resources for the instrumentation directorate. She also has experience as a professional mediator as well as an instructor in employment law. Williams helped start Temple Beth El and has volunteered for, among other things, the city and state housing authorities, the New Mexico Commission on the Status of Women, the Vietnam War Memorial Committee and with WSMR museum and historical foundation. Williams ran for mayor of Las Cruces in 2003. She was a charter member of the New Mexico Ethics Commission, serving a two-year term that ended June 30.

Dealing with a kitten overload

FROM THE CAT'S MEOW ADOPTION CENTER

We have 34 kittens at our facility, on top of the adult cats we have had for some time, and at least 60 kittens waiting to come in. And the calls just keep on coming.

The City of Las Cruces encourages responsible animal ownership through: owner identification and licensure; population management primarily through sterilization; humane care; vaccination against rabies; and physical control of pets.

There is also an "abandonment" ordinance making it unlawful to abandon a pet, but when a pet's owners have not gone through licensing steps, including microchipping, it is impossible to identify and locate them.

The most serious deficiency in the above guidelines for responsible pet ownership in Doña Ana County is population management. Simply stated, Las Cruces and the surrounding area has a serious cat overpopulation problem. There are too many cats to care for, and the most effective solution to this problem, sterilization, is not being implemented on a scale sufficient to resolve the problem.

The Cat's Meow Adoption Center has been dealing with a huge influx of kittens.

At Cat's Meow, many calls we receive are from people who have found a momma cat with kittens in their yard or garage or underneath their porch.

A public service announcement put out by Animal Service Center of the Mesilla Valley has instructed people to leave the litter alone and call one of the rescues for help. The rescues are overflowing!

A large part of the problem is that people are not getting their pets spayed or neutered, either because they don't think it's necessary because they intend to keep their pets inside (escapes happen, and sometimes are abandoned when owners change location) or because they cannot afford to have it done (veterinary care can be very expensive).

There are programs such as SNAP (Spay Neuter Action Program) for low-income residents. The demand is so high, their budget becomes stretched, as they do rely on grants and donations.

So, really, when it comes down to it, ordinances are only as good as the budget to enforce them. And there are so many cats!

We, at Cat's Meow, make sure that every cat adopted from our facility is spayed/neutered, vacinated and microchipped. We have been holding clinics to make that happen (largely at our expense), not only for our adopted kittens but when there are some slots available we offer to sterilize other cats as well.

Feral cats

Stray cats are not feral cats, ferals are not strays. A feral cat is one that was born outside and has never had interaction with a human.

Kittens born of a feral momma are not necessarily destined to become feral unless they don't get human interaction. Feral cats have lots of kittens and we have taken in as many as we can.

There is a program that helps to reduce the feral cat population, and it works! It's called TNR -- Trap, Neuter and Release.

Not a lot of people are aware of how bad cat overpopulation is here. It is going to get worse (is getting worse) if something isn't done about it. There is a group doing TNR here ("Broken Promises": <https://bestfriends.org/our-work/supporting-network-partners/broken-promises-sw>), but they cannot handle the load by themselves.

If our cat population is greatly reduced through sterilization, fewer will have to be euthanized and our shelter can start moving toward being a "no-kill" shelter.

ACTion to resume monthly low-cost microchip clinics

BULLETIN REPORT

ACTion Programs for Animals (APA) of Las Cruces will resume its monthly low-cost microchip and vaccination clinics starting Saturday, Aug. 14. The clinic will be held 8 to 10 a.m. at the APA adoption center, 537 N. Solano Drive.

The following services will be offered at $15 each during the clinic: microchip; Bordetella vaccine; DAPP (Distemper, Adenovirus, Parainfluenza and Parvo) vaccine; FVRCP (Feline Viral Rhinotracheitis, Calicivirus and Panleukopenia) vaccine; and rabies vaccine.

"We're extremely happy to begin offering affordable clinics to the community again," said APA Executive Director Michel Meunier.

"Animal welfare is a priority for us at APA, and getting your pets vaccinated and chipped is very important when it comes to their health and safety," Meunier added.

APA is a progressive animal welfare organization seeking to improve the quality of life for companion animals in Doña Ana County and greatly reduce the number of unwanted animals impounded and euthanized at the municipal shelter.

Since May 2012, more than 5,000 animals have been rescued.

Las Cruces Bulletin

Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce President and CEO Debbi Moore participated in 671 Zoom meetings during the year following state public health orders closed businesses because of Covid. She still remembers the very first one.

It was a woman who owned her own small business, closed by the health order, crying because she wasn't sure how she would pay the rent or feed her baby.

"We had to get people in line to get money out there," Moore said, "to get resources out there for business."

Moore had dealt with

the recession that started in 2008 when she was with the Rio Rancho Chamber of Commerce. But Covid was different because "people were dying," Moore said.

"We had to step back and look at the whole picture," she said. "You had to pivot."

Businesses needed guidance on a host of fronts, Moore said.

The Greater Las Cruces Chamber and other chambers in the county "were in the trenches," she said.

CYNDI ARMILJO

BRANDI MISQUEZ

chamber's other two employees, Brandi Misquez and Cindi Armijo, also had to help business owners and employees cope with isolation and grief.

"We had to calm fear," Moore said. "We had to put hope back in the scenario."

Moore, Misquez and Armijo answered 12,636 phone calls (an average of 1,053 per month) during the March 2020 to March 2021 period and spent more than 10,500 minutes (175 hours) per month answering those calls. That doesn't include the amount of time they spent on research follow-up to the calls.

"It caused us to be very sensitive to people's needs at a whole new level," Moore said.

"Covid broke our hearts," she said. It also "brought out a new part of our hearts. That's what I want to hang onto moving forward."

Covid also helped the greater chamber create and strengthen partnerships with other chambers, organizations like The Bridge of Southern New Mexico, Las Cruces Public Schools and state and local governments and others, Moore said.

In particular, the Las Cruces Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce "were right there with us," she said. "We're all working together. We all want a better community."

With schools closing, it meant helping people cope with daycare challenges. For essential businesses, it meant helping find ways to keep employees safe. For restaurants, it meant finding ways to help them stay open and keep their employees and customers safe as they provided pick-up and takeout service.

"Businesses were resilient. We're a very resilient community," Moore said. "We survived Covid together and we can navigate to the normal together."

Going forward, Moore said many businesses will conduct more of their sales online. That will have to balance with how "they draw the customer back into the business," she said, and with more employees working from home.

"I think it's going to be different," Moore said.

For the greater chamber and other organizations, there will be an increased focus on job training and retraining, she said, and connecting current and future employees with new career paths. It will also mean nurturing entrepreneurs as they create new businesses, and helping existing businesses find the employees they need to fully reopen and to expand.

"We're the keeper of the jobs," Moore said.

Fed action enables quick recovery from pandemic downturn

The rapid economic recovery from the Covid recession is remarkable.

Just a year ago, many feared that economic recovery from the pandemic might take a five years or more. In June last year, Fed Chair Jay Powell was predicting that full recovery would take 30 months. In fact, real GDP most likely will fully recover this quarter, 15 months sooner than Powell's projection.

This is amazing given the strains faced by the economy over the last year and is a testament to the resilience of the capitalist system. But there is more to the story. Had we just relied on capitalism and free markets, the result would have been much different than what we are observing. Heroic intervention by the Fed to ensure adequate liquidity has been critical.

The liquidity provided by the Fed has been of the firehose variety. Through the purchase of multiple classes of assets — short term and long-term federal debt, municipal bonds, private mortgages, corporate bonds — unprecedented level of cash have been injected into the economy.

Add to this, lending facilities that offer loans directly to private business and you see a full spectrum of intervention into the economy. As a measure of the vastness of the Fed intervention, consider this fact: Total Fed provided liquidity has doubled since the beginning of the pandemic.

This massive intervention has associated with it two major concerns. First is the fear of a taper tantrum.

Financial markets have come to depend on the Fed to maintain liquidity in markets, so as the Fed tapers off purchases, markets could react badly. It happened before and in circumstance far less extreme. In 2013, coming out of the Great Recession, the Fed announced the slow reduction in asset purchases; federal government bond yields spiked. That time, markets eventually recovered, but the fear is that this time, with markets even more heavily dependent on Fed purchase, the consequences of a tapering could more dramatic.

The second concern is, of course, inflation. Many economists expect inflation to be around 3 ½ percent during 2021. This is more than in recent years, but put in historical context, is not that high. Long term inflation is expected to hover at about 2 percent annually.

Given the extreme dislocation suffered by our economy since Covid, it would be surprising if the economy didn't suffer from transitory shortages and consequent price spikes.

Indeed, if you look in detail at price data for April, it turns out that 10 percent of the price hike can be attributed to a single product category, which is automobiles.

The auto industry famously has been victim of a shortage of computer chips arising from decisions early in the crisis to cut back on orders.

But such problems are clearly transitory and with time, auto prices will settle down. Similar stories can be told in other industries, from construction to disposable diapers. These too shall pass.

Still, the chance that the extraordinarily expansive monetary policy now in effect will result in sustained high inflation can't be ruled out.

But if higher inflation is the price to pay for the rapid recovery, then so be it. Putting people back to work is an important goal and if 4 or 5 percent inflation is the cost, it's worth it.

Community Foundation's '100 Who Give' on tap, helps nonprofits

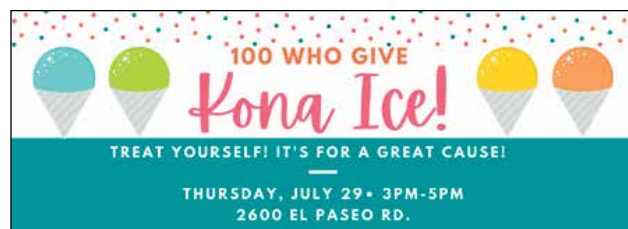

BULLETIN REPORT

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico's (CFSNM) 100 Who Give Founders Circle will host an outdoor fundraiser from 3 to 5 p.m. Thursday, July 29, at CFSNM, 2600 El Paseo Road.

During the event, there will be a giveaway of Kona Ice to anyone who stops by to make a donation, CFSNM said in a news release.

Along with Hispanic Leaders in Philanthropy and the Boomerang Philanthropists group, 100 Who Give Las Cruces is one of three giving circles hosted by the nonprofit CFSNM.

"100 Who Give Las Cruces is an outlet that allows anyone to give back to the organizations that make southern New Mexico a great place to live," the news release said.

"The concept is 100 people giving $100 to collectively raise $10,000 for a charity or cause within the community. The beneficiary is chosen by those who donated, through a nomination and voting system," the news release added.

In 2019, 100 Who Give Las Cruces was created by Tamara Ahner, Diane

Calhoun, Terra Winter, Chriss Martinez and Ann Woodling. It will celebrate its second anniversary with an in-person giving event Thursday, Sept. 30 at Icebox Brewing Company, 2825 W. Picacho Ave.

The nonprofits that have received funding from 100 Who Give include Casa de Peregrinos, Catholic Charities, Aggie Cupboard, Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces, La Casa, Inc. domestic violence program and Soroptimists International of Las Cruces (SILC).

"SILC was thrilled to receive funding from the 100 Who Give event and CFSNM," said SILC President Esther Devall.

"We are part of a global volunteer organization that provides women and girls with access to the education and training they need to achieve economic empowerment," Devall added.

"The funds we received will be used to help fund one of our signature programs, the Live Your Dream Awards," she said. "This is a unique education award for women who provide the primary financial support for their families. It gives women the resources they need to improve their education, skills and employment prospects.

"Nearly all the women who receive the Live Your Dream Award have overcome enormous obstacles, including poverty, teen pregnancy, substance abuse, homelessness and domestic violence," Devall said.

"The recipients can use the cash award to offset any costs associated with their efforts to attain higher education such as books, tuition, childcare and transportation."

"Thanks to this gift from 100 Who Give, Soroptimist International of Las Cruces will be able to give five more Live Your Dream Awards to deserving women in our region," Devall said.

If you can't attend the July 29 fundraiser in person, you can donate online at <http://bit.ly/100WhoGive>.

Aggie sports back in business

Welcome back, Aggie fans.

It's time to get out to some games and root for the home team.

New Mexico State University Athletics Director Mario Moccia has announced that all Aggie athletics venues will return to 100 percent attendance capacity for the upcoming 2021-22 season.

That's welcome news for sports fans.

That major announcement came shortly after Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham ended the county-by-county color-coded system and lifted all Covid-19 health restrictions on business and day-to-day activities starting on July 1.

What that means is Aggie fans will be able to go out and see their favorite team at home and have

New Mexico State University will allow 100 percent attendance capacity at all its sports venues for the coming school year. That means football fans will be able to enjoy some action at Aggie Memorial Stadium.

a little fun this school year, Moccia said.

"We are very excited," Moccia said. "This is a shot in the arm for Aggie fans. I think this will help spur football season ticket sales and well as other ticket sales."

Moccia talked to the Las Cruces Bulletin while hosting an invitation-only celebration and unveiling of Cantera Negra being named the official tequila of NSMU athletics on July 8 at Elephant Ranch.

The event was well-attended by enthusiastic fans ready to get back to normal.

"As you can see, people are really anxious to be around other people, be around Aggie events and hang out with everyone," Moccia said.

The Aggies will kick off their football season with a home game on Aug. 28 against archrival UTEP. Other home football games will be against South Carolina State (Sept. 18), Hawaii (Sept. 25) Utah State (Nov. 6) and UMass (Nov. 27).

Last week, NMSU also announced season tickets for men's basketball are now on sale. It will mark the return of men's basketball to the Pan American Center after an absence of nearly two years.

Basketball fans who renew their season tickets or become new season ticket holders before Aug. 15 will receive a souvenir lunchbox that features the jerseys of all former Aggies who have gone on to play in the NBA. The front of the lunchbox features former Aggie great and 2019 NBA champion Pascal Siakam, who is with the Toronto Raptors.

It's sure to become a collector's item.

Moccia is certainly optimistic about the upcoming year and the return of home athletic events.

"If we do our part from a competitive standpoint, we could be on the cusp of an all-time record-setting year from a ticketing standpoint," he said. "People are ready to go to games. They are ready to go out and ready to support (the Aggies). I think it

ENMU hires Weir as AD

Eastern New Mexico University in Portales has hired former New Mexico State University men's basketball coach Paul Weir to be the school's new athletics director.

Weir served as the Aggies head coach in 2016-17, leading the team to a berth in the NCAA tournament.

He left to coach the University of New Mexico, serving as the Lobos' head coach for four years.

Most recently, Weir, a native of Canada, served as the head coach for Canada's under-19 national team.

NMSU men hoops to play Wazzu

The New Mexico State University men's basketball team has added Washington State to its 2021-22 nonconference schedule.

The Aggies will travel to Pullman, Washington, to play the Cougars on Wednesday, Dec. 15, 2021. A tipoff time has not been determined.

It will be the fourth all-time meeting between the two schools, all happening in the last three years. The Aggies lead the all-time series 2-1.

Women's soccer to get lights

The New Mexico State University women's soccer team will soon be getting lights at its soccer complex.

A $600,000 project will add lights to the school's Soccer Athletics Complex, home to the women's soccer team since 2012.

The project is expected to be completed in August.

Former state Sen. Mary Kay Papen is credited by NMSU officials with securing the money for the project.

The team's schedule for its 2021 season will be released later this month.

Running club to host youth runs

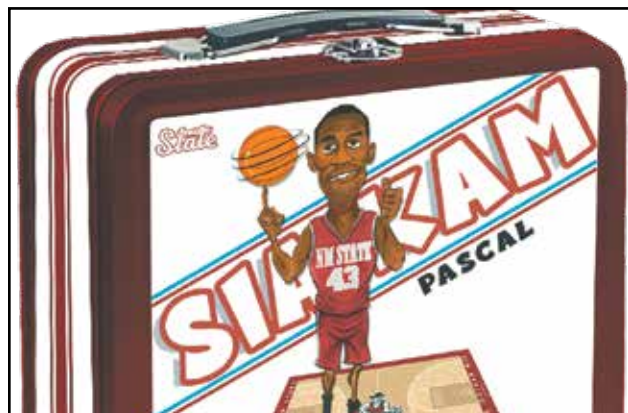

The Las Cruces Running Club has reactivated its summer youth running program with an abbreviated schedule.

The program consists of 1-mile runs for youth 14 years old and younger with prizes and snacks at each race.

The final two runs will be held at 8 a.m. on July 24 at Veterans Park, 2651 N. Roadrunner Parkway, and Aug. 7 at Sagecrest Park, 601 N. Roadrunner Parkway.

After the Aug. 7 run, a free breakfast will be served to runners and their families with drawings for prizes.

Metal spikes, arm-lock putts and green books all should be banned

When you watch PGA Tour golf on television you might hear the distinct sound of clicking on concrete paths as golfers walk between holes or near the clubhouse. When I hear that I'm truly irritated. That sound is from metal spikes on their golf shoes. You and I can't find a private golf club, resort course, daily fee public course or muni that permits metal spikes. Why? The metal spikes damage greens, wood bridges and walkways and clubhouse carpets and floors.

Yet, the PGA Tour allows metal spikes as legal for their purposes. Talk about bifurcation! Some 15 to 20 percent of Tour players use metal spikes. Among the many still using metal are Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson, Bryson DeChambeau, Justin Thomas and most recently John Deer Classic winner Lucas Glover. They fear slipping, no longer worrying about tearing up the greens because golfers behind them are allowed to tap down all spike marks. Even if it's just a concession to everyday hacks like us, the Tour needs to outlaw metal spikes. It's the right thing to do.

CHARLIE BLANCHARD
Golf Doctor

One would think that the best players in the world wouldn't struggle so much with their putting. Yet they do. Over the years a number of famous pros have been challenged to overcome the putting "yips." Then, about 30 years ago a few players began using the "long wand" or "broom" putter close to 50 inches long. From there, tour pros and coaches began experimenting with alternative methods, which eventually evolved into the chest-anchoring and the belly-anchoring techniques. It turns out the USGA determined that the anchoring putting techniques were contrary to the rules about body contact and swing of the golf club, and they banned anchoring five years ago. Still, the USGA rules aren't foolproof. And yippers and other nervous golfers were not content with normal putters or normal putting technique.

Viola! Now we have the "arm-lock" putting method, whereby the golfer braces an over-length putter grip along his lead forearm up to the elbow. PGA Tour players currently using the arm-lock method include: Bryson DeChambeau, Xander Schauffele, Keegan Bradley, Kevin Kisner, Matt Kuchar, Stuart Cink and Will Zalatoris. (Neither Jack nor Tiger were ever insecure enough in their putting to be tempted or lured into trying any bizarre stuff.)

Tour veteran Billy Horschel was the first to voice that arm-lock should be banned. Now, there is growing sentiment among more Tour players and others that the arm-lock method needs to be banned. Xander Schauffele is one of them. "I am for banning the arm-lock putters, but if everyone else is going to use it and I feel like they have a bigger advantage, I may as well do the same," he says.

Here's a take from one of the Tour's all-time best putters (and Rory McIlroy's putting coach), Brad Faxon: "We have to get rid of arm-lock. It's absolutely anchoring. If the USGA doesn't think it is, then they need to look at themselves in the mirror." Which certainly puts the USGA and the PGA Tour in a bind: in the words of author and satirist Douglas Adams, "A common mistake that people make when trying to design something completely foolproof (like putting rules) is to underestimate the ingenuity of complete fools."

Finally, let's turn to the controversial green-reading books. These books show in high detail directions of breaks on putts and the percentage of slope on every part of a green, and have been on Tour since 2008. Leading the way to ban the greens books is none other than Rory McIlroy, who is the president of the PGA Tour Players Advisory Council (PAC). "It's not that it's an advantage really; it's just taking away a skill that takes time and practice to be mastered," said McIlroy. "I think reading greens is a real skill that some people are better at than others, and it just nullifies that advantage that people have. Honestly, I think it's made everyone lazier." Augusta National, host of the Masters, is the only stop on Tour that currently doesn't allow them.

will be a wonderful year."

This past year, the Aggies did have some success stories, despite dealing with arguably the most restrictive Covid-19 guidelines in the country, which severely limited home games and practice time.

This past spring, for instance, the Aggies were able win WAC regular season championships in softball and men's and women's golf.

And that was without the benefit of a full practice and conditioning regimen, Moccia said.

"I think it took a toll at the end of the season and we limped to the end," he said. "We didn't have that extra gear when we needed it because we didn't lay that foundation."

Now with the benefit of regular practices and the return of home games and contests in all sports, Moccia is expecting big things.

"To be able to play at home means a lot," he said. "It is a comfort thing. There were student-athletes scrambling to find out who was going to watch their pets when they had to go out of state to play games. There are so many factors that make it easier to play at home.

"You stay in your own bed," he added "There is familiarity. You are in your own gym, your own pool, your own baseball field. So, I think it will be a tremendous boost to our athletes."

The bottom line: Aggie fans want to come out to games and "have a party and celebrate," Moccia said.
