The Doña Ana County Board of Commissioners (BOCC) is asking residents to give input on three final proposed district maps that will define the county districts for the next ten years.

Redistricting is the process of redrawing political boundaries with equal population represented by a single commissioner on the board. The 2020 Census results showed population increase in the county by 4.9 percent. For redistricting purposes, the ideal population for each district is 43,912 residents within a 5 percent deviation range.

Public input about redistricting of the Doña Ana County Board of Commissioners districts can be submitted to input@donaanacounty.org, through the County's Facebook page, or by attending the Nov. 23 Board of County Commissioners meeting at 845 N. Motel Blvd. in Las Cruces.

Aggie football, other sports will join Conference USA starting in 2023-24

By DAVE BURGE
Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University's athletics program will soon enter a new era.

Friday, Nov. 5, the university announced that it had accepted an invitation to join Conference USA (C-USA) in all sports, starting in the 2023-24 school year.

"To be invited and accepted into Conference USA is nothing short of phenomenal," said NMSU Athletics Director Mario Moccia during a news conference to announce the move.

"As a founding member of the college football playoff, it is unbelievable for us (to join C-USA) and sets us up on a great trajectory for the future, not just competition-wise but financially as well," he added.

The move was largely football driven, Moccia said.

The Aggies have played as an independent in football since their last game as a football-only member of the Sun Belt Conference — the 2017 Arizona Bowl, a 26-20 overtime victory over Utah State and the school's first bowl berth and victory in 57 years.

Since then, the football team has struggled. This year, the Aggies are 1-8. (See this week's Bulletin sports page for more on NMSU's current season).

ber of the Western Athletic Conference (WAC) since 2005 in all its other sports. And those sports, including men's basketball, will also join C-USA in 2023.

Three other schools were announced as new members of C-USA on Nov. 5 — Jacksonville State, Liberty University and Sam Houston State University.

The move will cost NMSU a $1.5 million entry fee to join C-USA, Chancellor Dan Arvizu said. The school will make an initial payment of $250,000 next year and then will make equal payments of $250,000 spread out of five years and that money will be taken out of future revenues generated by the conference, Arvizu said.

"A lot of things have gone into this event of the day," Arvizu said. "We could not be more pleased. Obviously, the greatest part of this has to do with stability in our conference and giving us the opportunity to play all of our sports, FBS (Football Bowl Subdivision) football, in a conference we are very comfortable in."

NMSU will also have to pay the WAC an $85,000 exit fee, Moccia said.

Project aims to bring back Mendoza House ‘exactly the way it was’

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Prasanna Pai of Las Cruces bought one of the city's oldest houses a few years ago, but discovered that the structure, which dates to the 1840s, could not be saved.

The Mendoza House, located at the corner of Campo Street and Court Avenue in Downtown Las Cruces, was torn down as a result. Pai is constructing a new building on the site that will bring the small house back to life “exactly the way it was,” Pai said, “from the ground up.”

The plan will “reuse character-defining elements” of the original home, City of Las Cruces Historic Preservation Specialist Troy Ainsworth, Ph.D., said.

The original Mendoza House, which dated back to the 1840s. A project aims to bring it back from the “ground up.”

Ainsworth said he recommended to Pai and Jason Clark of Studio D Architects in Las Cruces, who is working with Pai on the project, “the approach used in Venice, Italy, that is, to rebuild

The interior of the Mendoza House; notice the exposed roof, including vigas and latillas that were saved.

‘com’era, dov’era’ (‘as it was, where it was’).

“They were immediately agreeable,” Ainsworth said. “Hence, a reconstruction of the Mendoza House has become part of the overall site development,” which includes the Mendoza House and office suites.

“The replica construction of the older block will retain and replicate the original footprint, width of the walls, door and window openings, parapet lines, height and even the partial foundation bump-out on the Court Avenue side,” Ainsworth said. “The seven vigas and the latillas (limbs or sticks used as ceiling material) were carefully removed, laid aside and returned as a non-structural ceiling treatment that, along with a clean, new application of exterior stucco, will maintain the visual character of that street corner as it has been for many decades,” he said.

Mariachi conference features workshops, clinics and concerts

BULLETIN REPORT

Live and in-person workshops and clinics, performances, jam sessions and so much more are part of the 28th annual Las Cruces International Mariachi Conference, which runs from Wednesday through Saturday, Nov. 10-13 on the New Mexico State University campus and other locations in Las Cruces.

Conference highlights will include:

- The Student Showcase Concert, 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 13, at Amador Live, 302 S. Main St. Downtown.

COURTESY PHOTO

Mariachi Cobre will give a concert as part of the International Mariachi Conference on Friday, Nov. 12 at the Pan Am.

The concert will feature student performances.

- Spectacular Concert,

7:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 12, at the Pan American Center.

STEEVEN SANDOVAL

Participants will include Steeven Sandoval, Mariachi Cobre (celebrating its 50th anniversary) and Mariachi Femenil Flores Mexicanas. Tickets start at $10 and are available at www.ticketmaster.com.

The conference “focuses on education and entertainment,” said Director Robert Palacios. “Over 14,000 students of all ages have attended the annual four-day conference, with three days of educational workshops in mariachi music, voice and folkloric dance.”

“The workshops offer a quality educational experience through a unique cultural arts program. All proceeds from the annual event support various programs under the New Mexico Advocates for the Arts that improve the quality of life and promote cultural arts education across southern New Mexico,” Palacios continued.

“Preserving and enhancing the traditional art forms of mariachi music and folkloric dance has always been the primary goal of the conference,” he said.

was worth it financially, Moccia said the Aggies will generate as much as five times the revenue being a member of C-USA as they did as an independent in football.

“Just from a business standpoint, the entrance fee and exit fee pale in comparison to what is down the road financially,” Moccia said.

Moccia also said that being a member of a conference will make it easier for the football program to recruit players and schedule games and NMSU will benefit from C-USA’s ties to multiple bowl games.

The Aggies also will be a member of the same conference with UTEP for the first time in more than 60 years.

“I am really interested in seeing how our fans react to that,” Moccia said. “We have been playing UTEP every year in basketball twice, in football and more or less in every other sport annually. It is not like a team that is close that we haven’t played before.

“Now if there is a conference championship on the line (between NMSU and UTEP), that will really ratchet up the experience for the fans,” Moccia added.

Moccia said the Aggies’ new conference will also benefit from having the school’s other sports programs, including men’s basketball, join it.

“We are excited and I think they are excited to have us,” Moccia said. “We have pretty solid programs across the board. I know football is a big focus, but men’s basketball, volleyball, baseball, softball (are quality programs). We have lots of sports that have been championship quality, like golf. I think that will just help them across the board and we will be associated with Conference USA, with its tremendous teams across the board.”

Arvizu also said the move to C-USA was a good fit and the conference and NMSU share the same commitment to academics, the wellbeing of their student athletes and strategic vision.

“I was persuaded that this is very much in line with the direction we want to head as a university,” Arvizu said.

Conference realignment is a relatively fluid situation, but here is how C-USA will look in 2023 as of right now: NMSU, Jacksonville State, Sam Houston, Liberty, UTEP, Western Kentucky, Middle Tennessee, Florida International and Louisiana Tech.

NMSU icon Fabián García inducted into national ag hall of fame

By ADRIANA M. CHÁVEZ

Senior Communications Specialist-
NMSU News Center News Team

After a two-year delay, Fabián García, a Mexican immigrant whose research at New Mexico State University helped influence agriculture nationwide, was inducted into the National Agricultural Center's Hall of Fame in Kansas Oct. 23, becoming the first Hispanic and first New Mexican inductee.

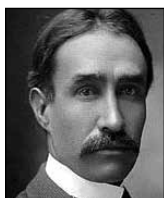

García (1871-1948), who was originally slated to be inducted into the hall of fame in fall 2019, joins the ranks of Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and Eli Whitney, among other notable contributors to agriculture. The first ceremony was postponed due to unforeseen circumstances, and the second ceremony was rescheduled due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

New Mexico Secretary of Agriculture Jeff Witte nominated García for the distinction and attended the Oct. 23 ceremony, along with NMSU President John Floros and Rolando Flores Galarza, dean of the NMSU College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences.

"It is a great honor to be present and witness the induction ceremony recognizing a true agriculture icon in Dr. Fabián García," Witte said during the ceremony. "His influence on agriculture and our cuisine continues today, over 100 years since his legacy began. Not only is he known for his agriculture legacy but for the impact he made as a humanitarian as well, a legacy made evident in the New Mexico State University dormitory that bears his name, which he funded to provide a home for those attending college. Today is a great day for all of New Mexico as we celebrate an icon that makes us proud."

García left behind a legacy that is still felt today. He was born in Chihuahua, Mexico and became an orphan early in his life. His grandmother moved with him to the Mimbres Valley when García was only 2 years old. Once there, García's grandmother became a domestic worker, and she later found work with the Casad family in what is now known as Old Mesilla. The family provided García with a private tutor and later sent him to what was then known as Las Cruces College.

In 1894, García became a member of the first graduating class of New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts, now known as NMSU. He studied for another year at Cornell University but returned to Las Cruces to receive his additional degrees.

In 1907, García married Julieta Amador, a member of a prominent Mesilla Valley family. The couple had no surviving children, and Amador died in 1920. García never remarried, preferring the environment of his beloved university.

In 1914, García was named the first director of the state Agricultural Experiment Station as well as horticulturalist. His accomplishments include producing the first reliable chile pod, which was the beginnings of what is now the Sandia pepper popular among chile lovers. He also introduced the Grano onion breed and was instrumental in planting some of the first pecan trees in the Mesilla Valley. Some of the 35 pecan tree varieties he helped plant still stand today.

García is also credited with developing modern irrigated agriculture in the state, and his horticulture publications included tests on pear, peach, grape and plum varieties, as well as trials of onion, spinach, melon and cauliflower varieties.

"It was an honor to see Fabián García get the recognition he deserves, at long last," Floros said. "He was a leader in helping to create a sustainable and reliable food supply not just for New Mexicans, but all over the world. He also changed the lives of his students for the better. He left a great legacy here at NMSU, and it's wonderful that he is finally receiving national acknowledgment from his peers."

García, who sometimes faced prejudice because of his Mexican heritage, was known for helping poor Mexican-American students, often providing them rooms while they attended school. After his death, García left behind more than $85,000 to fund a campus dormitory and scholarships for poor youths with Spanish names, because, "I want to help poor boys, for I know their hardships."

"This is a long overdue acknowledgment of the outstanding contributions to the food production by one Mexican immigrant that dedicated his life to New Mexico and U.S. agriculture," Flores said. "Without his valuable contributions, New Mexico, the U.S. and the world would have not had the advancement in plant production, and the many lives that he touched with his kindness and dedication would have not received that benefit. Fabián García is a true hero of the College of ACES, NMSU and New Mexico."

NMSU has named a 45-acre research station after García, as well as NMSU's faculty-senate hall, its largest dormitory and a building that sits atop a hill between Corbett Center Student Union and Breland Hall.

Pai, who has invested personal savings in the project, said he has worked closely with Clark, Ainsworth, the city Historic Preservation Commission and other city staff on the project, which includes a zoning change.

"They really did an amazing job," Pai said.

"They all did the right things."

The new property will be "a window to history" for Las Cruces, he said, and "a gateway to Downtown."

Pai said construction could be done by the end of 2022. He said he hopes the project "sparks attention and respect to historical standards" for other local property owners.

Pai bought the property as an investment and because of "a great interest in history," he said, especially the history of architecture. He and his family have visited sites in the United States, Peru, Guatemala and Mexico City.

Pai said he is particularly impressed by the work of architect Henry Trost (1860-1933), who designed many buildings in El Paso and Las Cruces.

Pai said he has also visited buildings Trost designed in Marfa, Texas.

A native of India, Pai worked for the state government in Santa Fe before moving to the East Coast to work as an engineer. He and his family moved to Las Cruces in October 2002.

His wife, Sangeeth Shanbhag Pai, is a Las Cruces doctor specializing in internal medicine.

Recognize the service, remember the debts

How do you compare a Marine who stormed the beaches of Normandy on D-Day in 1944 to an airman who controlled air traffic at White Sands Missile Range yesterday?

There are probably dozens of answers to that question.

To my mind, though, those answers boil down to two:

1. You can't compare them at all. They're different eras, different missions, different situations in our world.

2. There is little distinction. Both people have answered the call of their nation and responded by doing their mission to the best of their ability.

I tend to lean toward No. 2.

In many senses, when someone takes on a military assignment, their fate finds them.

If a military member draws a job that seems less "important" than another one, that's a perception issue.

As do most endeavors, a military mission has many aspects.

What may seem inconsequential on its face can have important consequences when placed in context.

We recognize Veterans Day each Nov. 11, commemorating the original Armistice Day, which ended World War I (then known as the Great War), on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month of 1918, more than 100 years ago.

Military service changed in America in 1973, when Congress did not extend the draft, creating a volunteer force. Before that, luck had a bigger role in members' assignments. Today, volunteers have a voice in determining their branch of service, and what fields they want to pursue.

For generations, because of the draft, nearly all American men served for at least a couple of years in the military.

Don't take this as a call to bring back the draft, but I think our nation has lost something with the loss of the shared experience of military service. The training taught skills, and provided a common ground of discipline, helping generate a sense of being part of something bigger.

That said, the all-volunteer military has worked far better than most people could have imagined nearly 50 years ago. The way the military has adopted technology, and the training required to use that technology, have given generations of men and women skills they can use in the civilian world long after their service has ended.

Our society puts a high value on big, bold acts of bravery. In the field of battle, those acts can turn the tide of war, which can change the fate of history.

The smaller, quieter acts of military service can also turn the tide and change history.

We recognize the work of the Navajo code talkers in World War II, efforts that required focus and solitude over loud sudden movements. More overlooked is the work of the U.S. Coast Guard, the frequently forgotten fifth branch of military service.

Regardless of the nature of service, we Americans do a better job of appreciating our men and women in uniform than we once did.

One of the darkest periods in American history was the vile reception so many soldiers and sailors got when they came home from fighting in Vietnam. We've heard the tales of Marines being spat upon during parades, of airmen being booed and hissed.

Those responses are particularly galling when you recall the draft was in full swing dur-

Rodeo finals a match made in near-heaven for cowboys

"Twas a matchup made in Elko for the cowboys in the know

Called the Rough and Ready Knock Down Finals All Ranch Rodeo.

When they bet their reps against the Jordan Valley Buckaroos.

You could tell from where they hailed if you put 'em up for bids,

All the buckaroos wore fancy

While the Texans wore their jackets for the brush down in the draws

And them 20 dollar roller-own, cheap Guatemalan straws.

It was Blucher vs.

It was rye vs. tequila, it was leppies versus dinks,

It was sagebrush vs. cactus, it was ear tick vs. fly,

It was Poco Bueno vs. sloggers

The Texans took an early lead, at ropin' showed their stuff,

But the buckin' horse fandango showed the buckaroos were tough.

They branded in a dead heat, but in deference to the crowd

Each side was harshly penalized for cussin' so dang loud.

So the teams were standin' even when the final contest came,

UNTAMED UNGULATE EXTRACTION, wild cow milkin', by name.

They loosed the beasts together, left their calves to bawl and mill

And the two teams fell upon 'em like hyenas on a kill.

The buckaroo a'horseback threw his 40-footer right.

He dallied just about the time the Texan's rope came tight;

Their trajectories collided in a bawlin', buckin' wreck,

The ropes and cows got tangled and they wound up neck to neck.

On the Edge of Common Sense

State government needs better plan on how to spend federal funds

Worried that federal spending was getting out of control, Sen. Everett Dirksen warned in 1973 that, “a billion here, and a billion there, and pretty soon you’re talking about real money.”

Dirksen’s quote seems quaint these days, in light of new spending passed or proposed by Congress to combat and counteract the impacts of the pandemic.

The American Rescue Plan Act of 2021, passed under former President Donald Trump, had $1.9 trillion in new federal spending. That was followed by the Coronavirus Aid, Relief and Economic Security, or CARES Act, passed under President

WALT RUBEL

The View From Here

Joe Biden, which has added another $2.2 trillion.

And, last week Congress passed a traditional infrastructure bill costing another $1.2 trillion, while they continue work on a human infrastructure bill that has been whittled down from its original $3.2 trillion.

I’ll leave it to economists to argue about impacts on inflation and the federal debt. But, there is no question that the new legislation has the potential to lift millions of Americans out of poverty. A study by the Center on Poverty and Social Policy at Columbia University estimated that the first bill alone would cut childhood poverty by more than half, from the current rate of 13.5 percent, all the way down to 5.7 percent.

New Mexico, which relies on federal support more than almost any other state, stands to benefit enormously from this new spending. And, it comes just as the state is trying to transition from an economy that is dependent on oil and gas revenue.

It is absolutely critical that our state has a solid plan in place to ensure this new funding is allocated in accordance with federal guidelines and reaches those who are most in need. A report issued recently by the state’s Legislative Finance Committee argues that there is no such plan in place, and the state is failing to comply with federal guidelines as a result.

In its first annual report to the federal government on Covid relief spending, the state failed to provide information in seven of the 11 required categories, according to the LFC. Those left blank included information on how the state would promote equitable outcomes, ensure fair labor practices or provide required performance data.

“While there are no apparent consequences for failed compliance, the public and the Legislature lack a clear plan from the executive for the use of these funds and how the executive proposes to ensure accountability and transparency,” the LFC report said.

There haven’t been many tough decisions yet on how to spend the federal money. Almost all of the $682.4 million in federal relief funds that the state has spent up to this point has gone to replenish the Unemployment Trust Fund and repay the federal government for loans made to the state to cover unemployment payments.

At the peak of the pandemic, nearly 200,000 workers in the state were receiving benefits. The trust fund has been depleted by nearly $4 billion and needs to be made whole.

Spending decisions moving forward will become much more complicated.

Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham has argued that she has sole authority to spend all federal money without going through the legislative process. That is ing Vietnam, and most of those military members had no choice but to be there. On top of that, draftees were disproportionately poor, and people of color, without the means to gain a deferment for college, or the ability to sway political protection.

During the first two world wars, the refrain was, "When Johnny comes marching home again, Hoo-rah!" The veterans of Vietnam were not hoo-rahed when they marched home. Korean vets were not as blatantly reviled, but were in many cases quietly ignored. The military actions in Southeast Asia were hard for the general public to understand. Things were not as clear-cut as they were in World War II, when everyone knew about Pearl Harbor, and the atrocities of Hitler's Nazis.

Today we've come full circle with our championing of our veterans, but they need our attention and support in different ways now.

In the last 20 years, more servicemen and women have died by suicide than in military actions. The suicides outnumber the battle casualties by more than 4 to 1.

It is right and just to praise and honor the service of our military members, especially around Veterans Day. We need to follow up that praise with understanding and actions to help and support them after their service.

In New Mexico, our veteran suicide rates are even higher than the national average. If you know a veteran who could use assistance, keep these numbers handy for the state's Veteran Crisis Line. Call 800-273-8255 or text 838255.

For those who didn't serve, Veterans Day is one day a year. For those who did, it's 365 days a year.

In the meantime two big muggers plus two others brave and bold

Attacked the knot of thrashing hide and tried to get ahold

Of somethin', hoof or horn or foot or spur or can of snooze.

Then, by accident some dummy turned the bawlin' calves a'loose!

There was hair and teeth and eyeballs in the picture now and then,

There was moustache lips and swingin' bags, some thought they saw a hen

Flashin briefly through the dust cloud. Wild images remain;

A painting done in cow manure, a mating sandhill crane.

To describe the cataclysm would create an overload,

But a photograph was taken and this is what it showed;

At the summit pointed skyward were the Texas mugger's toes,

One arm around a buckaroo, his fingers up his nose,

Who, in turn was mounted sideways splayed across a bally black

Who was layin' on a milker who was smashed flat on his back.

The braymer cow was balanced on her head amidst the jag,

While the Texan fought her baby for possession of the bag.

From the cyclone flew two milkers, bottles high for all to see

Like two winos at a party where the wine and cheese was free.

The buckaroos hind leg was draggin' like he'd lost the farm.

But he kept his place by clingin' to the Texan's broken arm.

When they fell across the finish line and tumbled in the dirt

The judge declared the buckaroo the winner by a squirt.

Since the race looked pert near even, the judge said with a shrug,

"The winner is the cowboy with the most milk in his jug!"

"I object!" cried out the Texan, "Our ol' cow just had three tits!"

"That's a handicap," the judge said, "I admit it's sure the pits,

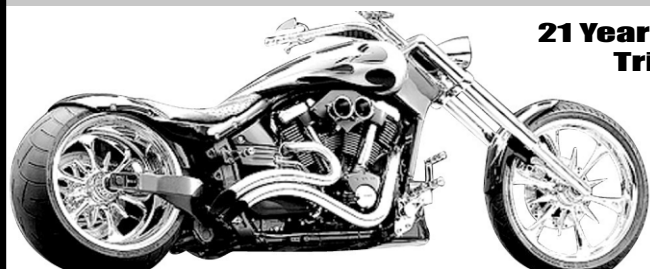

"But in fairness to the buckaroo who dallys for his kicks

Chihuahuan Desert park receives $20K grant to improve access

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

The nonprofit Asombro Institute for Science Education (AISE) of Las Cruces was among 25 organizations around the state to receive a trail development grant from the Outdoor Recreation Division (ORD) of the New Mexico Economic Development Department.

The $20,000 grant, announced Nov. 1, is for the institute's "Gateway to the Desert" project, which "will increase and improve the public's access to outdoor recreation and education opportunities at the Chihuahuan Desert Nature Park (CDNP)," ORD said in a news release. "The project will include an entry kiosk, new parking area, new trail, interpretive signs along the trail, a restoration project, interactive photo monitoring sites, benches and fencing."

"We're honored to receive the Outdoor Recreation Division's Trails+

grant and to bring support for improved outdoor access to Doña Ana County," said AISE Executive Director Stephanie Bestelmeyer, Ph.D. "Everyone should have the opportunity to experience and learn about the wonders of the Chihuahuan Desert. This project's new kiosk, map, signs and trail that links to our existing trail network at the CDNP will be especially helpful for people with less experience exploring the desert. We're also excited to use it with more than 1,000 local students hosted by AISE on field trips to the site each year."

The 935-acre CDNP is located at 56501 N. Jornada Road, about 15 miles west of Las Cruces.

ORD awarded $506,736 in funds through its Trails+ grant program, the news release said. The grant funds conservation-based, shovel-ready projects that are open to the public and demonstrate a clear benefit to the community and visitors, ORD said. Eligible projects include trail systems, trailheads, signs, outdoor classrooms and river access. The grant requires a one-to-one match (in-kind accepted) from other funding sources.

ORD said 64 percent of this year's awarded projects are located in rural counties.

In 2021, 60 organizations applied for Trails+ funding, with funding requests totaling $1.2 million.

In 2020, six organizations received just over $77,000 in grant funds.

County bar association restart benefits attorneys, the community

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

The Doña Ana County Bar Association (DACBA) is making a comeback.

After several years of inactivity, DACBA has begun regular monthly meetings for legal professionals throughout the county, said Robert Lara, an attorney associate with the Third Judicial District Court in Las Cruces who is also a member of the State Bar of New Mexico Board of Commissioners.

DACBA had 35 people at its August meeting in Las Cruces, Lara said. It was the first organized meeting of the local bar in several years, he said, as members elected officers and began discussing the services the association wants to provide to its members and to the community, he said.

The association includes attorneys practicing in both state and federal court and with agencies like the FBI and the IRS, as well as the district attorney's (DA) and public defender's (PD) offices.

DACBA helps to "develop collegiality within the local bar," Lara said, which makes for better relationships among attorneys as they work to resolve civil and criminal issues in court, and it makes job changes easier if, for example, an attorney in private practice wants to join the DA's office or the PD's office or wants to move from one office to another.

Having an active local bar association also makes the area more attractive to attorneys from elsewhere who are considering moving their law practices to Las Cruces, he said.

"We have such a need for attorneys here," Lara said.

The bar association also provides an organization that can advocate for attorneys and provide information to legislators, other elected officials and city, county and state officials.

And, DACBA will serve as a clearinghouse for continuing legal education for attorneys in southern New Mexico, Lara said. Monthly bar association meetings are already including continuing legal education (CLE) opportunities, he said, like a judge's presentation on motions and other procedures in district court.

The meetings also will give DACBA members the opportunity to learn about and become more involved with community service to benefit local nonprofits, Lara said.

And, perhaps most importantly, a revitalized DACBA can educate the public about the services attorneys offer, Lara said, addressing questions like what resources are available to resolve your legal problem and when do you need to hire an attorney?

For example, an attorney might be able to help a client resolve issues with a landlord by connecting the client with community programs that are "better suited to solve your issue than a lawsuit," Lara said.

That might include helping the client obtain Covid-19 relief funds or veterans benefits, or helping him or her find alternative housing.

Lawyers can also assist with an individual's financial and end-of-life planning or help a small-business owner apply for a loan or set up a health insurance plan, he said. And they offer many other services as well, Lara said, including some that members of the public might not even be aware of.

"Lawyers are here to help solve problems," Lara said. "When you need help, there are options for you."

Lara estimated there are 350 to 400 attorneys working in Doña Ana County. Lara moved to the Las Cruces area in 2013. He lives with his wife in Santa Teresa.

Police to hire crossing-guard supervisor, more crossing guards

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces Police Department (LCPD) is expected to hire a crossing-guard supervisor and additional crossing guards in the next few months.

Crossing guards employed by LCPD help to ensure the safety of children crossing streets on their way to and from Las Cruces Public Schools elementary schools.

The supervisor position, which has been vacant since April, closed Oct. 19. The City of Las Cruces Human Resources Department (HRD) was expected to begin interviews for the position in November, the city said.

A new supervisor could be in place by the beginning of the new year, said HRD Deputy Director Meg Haines.

LCPD Deputy Chief Kiri Daines said the police department likely will post openings for additional crossing guards in the near future.

Anyone interested in serving as a crossing guard can check the city website at www.lascruces.org/143/Apply-For or go to the city website (www.lascruces.org) and select Human Resources to follow the employment link. Click on "Employment Opportunities" and search for "crossing guard" to see if any positions are open.

The application process includes background investigations before individuals are hired, Daines said.

LCPD currently employs 25 crossing guards and could hire up to 40, depending on the number of school-district crosswalks there are, she said.

Daines said the current shortage of crossing guards "is caused by numerous issues.

"Many of the folks who work as crossing guards are older and some have chosen not work due to exposure issues to Covid or underlying medical conditions," she said.

Daines said the job's unusual hours — early mornings, afternoons and sometimes evenings — can also make it difficult for some people.

Daines said there also are advantages to working as a crossing guard, including having weekends and holidays off.

But holiday and summer breaks can be a drawback, she said, if people need a regular, weekly income.

Las Cruces police say they will be hiring more crossing guards to deal with a post-lockdown shortage.

Nuestra Gente: Get to Know the People of Las Cruces Utilities

By Cassie McClure

Nuestra Gente is a series of articles, once a month, to profile various employees at Las Cruces Utilities (LCU).

LCU Director
Delilah A. Walsh

Why did you decide to join the LCU?

In one word... Opportunity. I had worked in my hometown as a County Manager before joining LCU. After 10 years of balancing politics and citizen needs, I was ready for new challenges - and my family wanted the chance to spread their wings too. We had a few criteria: not too far from my aging parents and in a University town with lots of educational and recreational opportunities. Las Cruces was, and has been, perfect.

What is something about you that we wouldn't really know?

I love to craft and sew quilts (though I've not made a single quilt since moving). I also like (not love) gardening and I'm a bit of a prepper. My kids call me Auntie Entity (from Mad Max: Beyond Thunderdome) to reel me back in when I get a little too crazy.

Do you have a favorite memory?

I have lots but two stand out most. First, walking a well-drilling site - the nerd in me was excited for days over that. The second was our walk-through banquet; I was so excited to finally meet so many of our associates face-to-face and say thank you for everything. This team has been amazing through the pandemic - despite all the challenges we've faced, our customers never experienced loss of service due to COVID.

LCU Assistant Director
Adrienne L. Widmer, P.E.

Why did you decide to join the LCU team?

I had wanted to come to work for the City of Las Cruces for a long time, but job openings were rare and far between. I had over 11 years of private consulting experience in design and project management of water/wastewater and a tiny bit of gas, but I felt I had become fully sufficient in that function and was ready for a new challenge and continued professional growth.

When the Utilities Project and Water Rights Manager position with Utilities opened, I thought to myself, "Why not, I could do that job and get a foot in with the City for new and exciting challenges?" I'm so grateful that I was hired and given the opportunity to contribute to the community, continue to grow professionally, and have exciting new challenges. I've been with LCU for over 15 years.

Do you have a favorite memory?

When projects were under construction, on a couple of Fridays a month, the then Director Jorge Garcia, Water Resources Administrator Gilbert Morales, and I would go out to the field to see the status of the project. They always made me drive.

Once we got a flat tire, both Jorge and Gilbert worked to get the tire off and the spare on, then turned to me and told me to put my fair share of the work in to tighten the lug nuts. Later, I found a printed photo on my office door of me doing that work. They told everyone they made me do all the work. It was quite funny. We had good times in the field.

RURAL EXTENSION FUNDS NOW AVAILABLE FROM CENTURYLINK

Rural New Mexico residential and small business customers located in developments of less than four units now have funds available to them through the Rural Extension Fund (REF) for Telephone Line Extensions. A Telephone Line Extension is necessary when CenturyLink (formerly Qwest) must construct new distribution cable in excess of 1,000 feet in order to supply primary telephone service at a street address where service was not previously available, and which would usually be charged to the customer.

When placing an order that includes Line Extension charges, eligible customers may receive a credit toward the construction of a line extension of up to $25,000 per order. Charges in excess of the $25,000 credit will be the responsibility of the customer placing the order.

Eligibility requirements are as follows:

- Credits from the Rural Extension Fund are available to new and existing customers residing in developments of less than four (4) units. (The developer will be responsible for facilities in developments with four or more units.)
- A line extension is necessary to provide primary telephone service at a street address where service was not previously available.
- No minimum Line Extension Charge.

Where fools rush in: Some hard-earned advice on rearing children

I'm sharing an article written when my children were in elementary school. Many years ago, when I was just out of college, I felt I knew a great deal about many things. I was quite free with advice on the subject of rearing children.

To me, the formula for disciplining a child was quite simple — you tell the child what he should do or not do, and if he doesn't obey, you administer punishment. Telling him once should be sufficient or there are consequences. The child would learn quickly, and the parent would not have to discipline again on that issue. Of course, I had no children then to daunt me or test my ideas.

As years have passed and four children have been added to our family, more than one of my many ideas have had to be thrown out.

The farther I go in this business, the less and less I know about it. So, before I don't know anything at all, I thought that I had better give you what remaining thoughts I have on the subject.

Seriously, the years have helped me see more clearly some important guiding principles in rearing healthy and happy children. I can also see what is desirable in a parent, though I fall so very short of the ideal that there are many days I feel like handing in my resignation (if I only knew to whom to give it).

Because we see so many fine people these days rearing problem children, I feel compelled to share my remaining wisdom on the subject even though I realize that to do so will put me in quite a vulnerable position. If I were really smart, I would wait until my family is grown and we move to another town before sharing these "pearls of wisdom." It would be less easy for people to point at me and show where I haven't succeeded. It's said, "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." So here goes.

Be consistent with what you say. If you tell him to do something, see that he does it. Many parents ignore their children's offenses because they're too lazy to correct or punish. When the parent gets very annoyed by the child's behavior, the parent may get angry and punish too severely. I believe this is when much child abuse occurs.

Another valuable principle is to give your child responsibility. All of us learn best by doing. Completing a job and doing it well is a great character-builder. When my children were in high school and I was teaching school, when Saturday rolled around, each child had jobs to do. Each one was responsible for cleaning his or her room and taking turns cleaning the general areas — bathroom, living room, family room and Mom did the kitchen. (Dad was in his office finishing the church bulletin and sermon preparation.)

We who are trying to teach our children how to carry out jobs find it hard with all the modern conveniences to find something for them to do. With electricity, modern heating, cooling and numerous appliances available, there are not as many necessary tasks around the house.

Often, we parents would rather do the jobs ourselves than be bothered with helping children learn how to do them.

In fact, it takes twice as much effort on my part to get jobs done than to do them myself, after having to listen to the complaints and excuses from the particular child and checking several times to see if the job is being done. But I know that he is not doing me a favor to help me with the work. Instead, I am doing him a favor by teaching him how to work. When a mess is left by a child who is old enough, have him help clean it up for he needs to take responsibility for his actions.

City government, AARP cut ribbon on brand-new outdoor fitness park

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

AARP and City of Las Cruces officials cut the ribbon Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 27, on a brand-new outdoor fitness park at Benavidez Community Center, 1045 McClure Road.

The fitness park is sponsored by AARP in partnership with the city.

Those attending included Mayor Ken Miyagishima, City Councilors Johana Bencomo (the fitness park is in council District 4, which she represents) and Yvonne Flores, City Manager Ifo Pili, Assistant City Man-

ation Director Sonya Delgado, state AARP

President Dave Lynch of Las Cruces, AARP

Las Cruces Chapter Vice President Louise Tracey-Hosa and state AARP New Mexico Associate State Director for Community Outreach Gary Williams.

The outdoor fitness park consists of a sun-sail for shade and versatile FitLot exercise equipment designed to use one's own body weight as resistance.

That makes each piece of equipment adaptable to the user's ability, the city said in a news release.

The city Parks and Recreation Department will offer AARP-sponsored outdoor fitness classes beginning in January 2022, the city said.

Classes will be taught by fitness professionals at no cost at the fitness park. Class schedules and registration information will be announced soon.

Benavidez Community Center also includes a new basketball court, paid for with general obligation bonds approved by Las Cruces voters in 2018 as part of parks and sports field improvements and additions throughout the city.

For more information, call the city Parks and Recreation Department at 575-541-2550.

Regarded by many critics as “spaghetti” Western director Sergio Leone’s masterpiece, this 1969 saga is notable for its casting of typical screen good guy Henry Fonda as a savage gunman. His presence means nothing good for a woman (Claudia Cardinale) whose inherited land stands in the way of the railroad he works for. Jason Robards, Charles Bronson, Gabriele Ferzetti, Jack Elam and Keenan Wynn co-star.

Tatyana Ali and Henderson Wade

6 p.m. on LIFE
Movie: A Picture Perfect Holiday

Tatyana Ali stars in this new 2021 yuletide romance as ambitious fashion photographer Gaby Jones, who is thrilled when she lands a coveted magazine job. At the urging of a supportive editor, Gaby signs up for the annual Christmas Photography Retreat in scenic Pine Falls to brush up on her skills, although she's not really into the whole holiday scene. Her skepticism mounts when a booking error forces her to share her rental with a wildlife photographer, but nature soon takes its course. Dina Meyer and Henderson Wade also star.

6 p.m. on TCM
Movie: The French Connection

Five Oscars, including best picture, best director (William Friedkin) and best actor (Gene Hackman), went to this high-octane (and largely fact-based) 1971 police drama in which narcotics officer "Popeye" Doyle (Hackman) and his partner (Roy Scheider) take on a drug ring shipping heroin into the United States. The film, which airs on TCM tonight to mark the 50th anniversary of its release, includes one of the most memorable pursuit sequences in screen history.

7 p.m. on APL
The Zoo

In a new episode called "The Elephant Next Door," the zoo staff works to build a relationship between a pair of Asian elephants, but the two animals have very different personalities that could make them incompatible. Meanwhile, vets treat an ocellated turkey chick's foot condition, and Isabella the North American beaver undergoes a tooth trim.

8:30 p.m. on FREEFRM
Movie: The Secret Life of Pets 2

Chris Renaud's 2019 computer-animated follow-up to the 2016 blockbuster "The Secret Life of Pets" finds pooches Max and Duke (voices of Patton Oswalt, Eric Stonestreet) forced to make some big adjustments when their owner, Katie (voice of Ellie Kemper), gets married to a guy named Chuck (voice of Pete Holmes) and subsequently welcomes a baby into the household.

9 p.m. on HBO
Movie: Boogie

Eddie Huang, whose personal memoirs inspired the ABC sitcom "Fresh Off the Boat," wrote and made his directorial debut with this 2021 drama starring Taylor Takahashi in the title role of Alfred "Boogie" Chin, a young basketball phenom living in Queens, N.Y. He has the potential for a successful, even brilliant, future, if he can bust open the doors closed to him by racism. He also faces challenges in the form of his mother (Pamelyn Chee), a dragon-lady disciplinarian, and his father (Perry Yung), who just got out of jail.

8 p.m. on FOOD
Battle for the Bird

In this new Thanksgiving special, Anne Burrell and Carson Kressley serve as mentors to two teams — one a noisy family gathering, the other a pull-out-the-stops Friendsgiving bash — who are facing off to prove which of them knows how to throw the best Turkey Day party. At the end of the proceedings, Burrell and Kressley also will act as judges to declare which bash is the best, and who deserves to claim a prize worth $10,000.

8:03 p.m. on HISTORY
When Big Things Go Wrong

The Season 1 finale, "House of Cards," opens with a look back at a shocking tragedy in New Orleans, when a high-rise hotel under construction abruptly comes crashing down without warning. Even as the dust literally is still settling from this disaster, the question racing around the city is: Why? As possible answers begin to emerge, so do surprising connections to an airshow crash in Reno, Nev., a tower block fire in Iran and a shopping mall collapse in Mexico City.

8:30 p.m. on KFOX
Family Guy

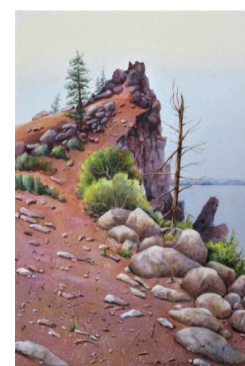

Lois (voice of Alex Borstein) returns to her family home to attend the funeral of her beloved childhood nanny with her father in the new episode "Peterschmidt Manor." While they're attending that somber gathering, Peter (voice of Seth MacFarlane) and the rest of the family turn the Pewterschmidt mansion into a hotel. Guest star Sam Elliott reprises his recurring guest voice role as Mayor Wild West.

9 p.m. on KVIA
The Rookie

In the aftermath of a house explosion and related fatality, Officer Nolan and Bailey (Nathan Fillion, guest star Jenna Dewan) discover there's more to the victim's death than initially meets the eye in the new episode "Fire Fight." Elsewhere, Officers Chen and Bradford (Melissa O'Neil, Eric Winter) pursue a ring of wealthy female criminals, while also asking Sgt. Grey (Richard T. Jones) to set the terms for their treasure hunt rematch.

11 p.m. on SHOW
Yellowjackets

Ashley Lyle and Bart Nickerson ("Narcos") created this new series, a genre mash-up that's equal parts survival adventure, horror flick and coming of age drama. The show, which has been described as "Big Little Lies" meets "Lord of the Flies," opens as a girls high school soccer team survives a plane crash deep in the Ontario wilderness. The narrative tracks the team's deterioration into warring clans, while also jumping forward to examine the characters 25 years later. Melanie Lynskey, Christina Ricci and Juliette Lewis head the cast.

An improbable friendship soon forms between them, however. Julia Goldani Telles and Paris Jackson co-star.

Challenges are designed to test cooking skills in appetizers, side dishes and desserts.

The premiere, "Fish Out of Water," finds Maniscalco getting a taste of the fisherman's life and testing the theory that seafood tastes better when you catch it yourself.

9 p.m. on KRWG
VOCES on PBS

The new documentary "American Exile" looks at the maddening plight of U.S. veterans who are forced to live under the threat of deportation. While thousands of veterans currently find themselves in that harrowing situation, the issue is examined primarily through the deeply personal story of Valente Valenzuela and his brother Manuel, who volunteered for a tour of duty in Vietnam and came home decorated, but also bearing physical and psychological scars. Half a century later, they were shocked to receive deportation notices.

10 p.m. on SHOW
Movie: Zola

Director and co-screenwriter Janicza Bravo received warm reviews for this darkly comic 2021 crime saga based on a Rolling Stone article. Role of HR and Managers in managing employees during COVID

These were some added roles of human resources and managers in the wake of the pandemic. However, it should be kept in mind that everything might not work for your organization. Managers and HR should see what will work best for their company and then try to implement them accordingly. These initiatives, if executed properly, can reinforce the workforce which will help to improve the quality of work at your organization.

The world is facing numerous changes amidst the pandemic. Radical changes are happening everywhere - from the workplace to home. People have changed the way they work- from meeting in conference halls to Zoom meetings, from working in offices to working from home. Although these changes have perks of their own, they have also brought several challenges along with them for both employees as well as employers. Now organizations have to work on building a system so that communication and trust remain unaffected even when everyone is working from home.

Since the pandemic, there has been a significant change in the roles of HR and managers. They are facing new challenges to maintain the workflow and productivity of their employees during these critical times. In this article, we have penned some added roles of HR and managers during the pandemic.

• Recognize the efforts of employees

Owing to Covid 19, people have been struggling with a lot of issues like physical and mental health problems, financial issues to name only a few. In these challenging times, it is important to recognize and appreciate the efforts of your team. This will not only motivate them to work better but also motivate other employees to be more diligent and hard working. HR should consider rewarding their employees by giving development opportunities, public appreciation or even some affordable perks.

• Support your employees

Employees don't like when they are treated like machines. Each employee adds a unique value to your company. Managers and HR should recognize the uniqueness of each employee and provide them with the assistance they need. A good communication flow between employees and managers is very important. Besides, managers should guide on sensitive issues, assure them of their job security and effect of staffing and so on.

• Educating the employees

Managers and HR should educate the employees about the ongoing pandemic. They should inform them about the safety measures, health information, how norms of social distancing are to be followed and so on. HR and managers should lay down special guidelines on how to work in the pandemic.

• Upskilling the employees

As mentioned earlier, it is important to appreciate your employees to enhance their productivity and performance. A good way to do so is through development incentives such as learning and upskilling. Doing so will not only motivate the employees but also enhance their knowledge which will benefit your organization. HR should focus on the growth of the employees which encourages the employees to stay in the organization for a longer period.

• New policies

Another additional role of the HR and managers is to draft new policies given the current situation. Even in the case of remote working there has to be coordination, motivation and sincerity amongst the employees. Although it is challenging to manage the employees virtually however with appropriate policies it is possible. Apart from making new policies managers should also make sure that they are implemented properly because there is no use in forming a policy that isn't implemented at the ground level.

• Collaboration and

counseling

To maintain the flow of engagement, HR and managers must have a two-way conversation with their employees. During these tough times, people are facing mental issues. HR and managers should go one step further and arrange counseling sessions for their employees. These sessions should focus on topics such as

- How to stay positive in the pandemic

- How to take care of mental health during the pandemic

- How to vent away fear, stress and anxiety

Such concealing sessions will help your employees to stay away from all sorts of negative thoughts and distractions so that they can focus on their work. Once the employees vent away their post-pandemic anxiety and stress their only focus will be on providing quality work to your organization.

Tardeada Encantada

The Las Cruces Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has changed the name of their monthly business networking get-togethers to Tardeada Encantada. Formerly known as their monthly "Mix n Mingle," the concept remains the same only the name has changed. Tardeada Encantada translates to Enchanted Afternoon. Good food, good times, and great networking equals to an Enchanted Afternoon among friends.

The monthly networking Mix n Mingles came to a halt due to COVID 19 and crowd gathering mandates. For over 20 months we were unable to have our business members host a network Mix n Mingle at their facilities. As vaccine rates improve, and we are able to maintain a safe environment, the goal is to bring back the monthly networking Tardeada Encantada.

If your company is interested or needs information on hosting a Las Cruces Hispanic Chamber of Commerce monthly Tardeada Encantada, please email the chamber at cr@lascruceshispanicchamber.com.

Thank you, Casa de Peregrinos and Executive Director, Lorenzo Alba, Jr. for hosting the first Tardeada Encantada for 2021.

Helping students complete their degree

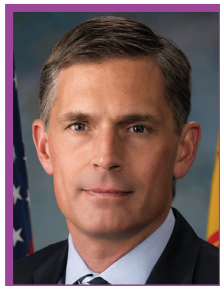

BY U.S. SENATOR
MARTIN HEINRICH

The financial rewards of finishing college are well documented. Students who never graduate take on massive student loan debts that they can't repay while seeing nothing in return for all their effort. Students who complete a bachelor's degree earn a million more dollars over the course of their lifetimes than those who halt their education after high school. Those rewards benefit not just the students themselves, but their children, their families, and employers and businesses in their communities.

We have a college completion crisis in this country. While 86 percent of students graduated from high school in 2019, a proportion that has steadily risen for the last two decades, only a quarter of students entering public two-year colleges graduate within three years. New Mexico has improved our percentage of high school graduates who enter college, but only around 40 percent of first-time freshmen who have enrolled in two or four-year colleges have completed their degree. Among Hispanic, Black, and other students of color, as well as those from low-income families, graduation rates are even lower.

We need to do so much better than this. That's why I was proud to secure the establishment of a first-of-its-kind College Retention and Completion Grants program in the latest version of President Biden's Build Back Better Act that is advancing in Congress.

HEINRICH

For some students, getting into college and being able to afford it is enough. But we need to recognize that for many others—particularly first-generation students, those from low-income families, and students of color—there are more obstacles to overcome between orientation day and graduation day.

We are closer than ever to helping students more easily afford a college education through tuition assistance and a major increase to the Pell Grant, one of the most important tools that helps many low and middle-income students pay for school expenses. But if we want to deliver on the full promise of higher education, we need to do more to help students complete their degrees.

The College Retention and Completion Grants would support a wide-range of evidence-based programs like the Student Experience Project, which is working with partner institutions like the University of New Mexico to create a more inclusive and equitable classroom environment in entry level courses and improve the support services provided to first and second-year students from underrepresented backgrounds. Another great example is New Mexico State University's on-campus food bank called the Aggie Cupboard, which has helped address growing food insecurity among its student community.

The College Retention and Completion Grants would also allow colleges and universities to scale up these types of direct student supports that students need such mental health services, child care, food, transportation, housing assistance, career coaching, and work-based learning opportunities. It would also help schools collect real-time data on student progress, create incentives to keep students on track, and improve their dual education, developmental education, and transfer pathways.

Colleges would also be able to implement two-generation solutions that help parenting college students. We have not adapted well enough to the reality that more than one-in-five college students are also parents. If parents are able to find time to attend school, they have to fit their class schedule around their jobs and their child's school and child care hours. All of this limits parents' access to a full and rigorous class schedule. If colleges can provide better support to parenting students and their children, then families will overcome barriers and achieve success together.

No student should have to drop out of college because their car breaks down and they can't afford to spend $500 fixing it. No parent should have to choose between finding child care for their kids and continuing their own studies. And no student should devote two years to taking courses at a community college only to find out the public four-year school of their choice won't accept their credits.

If we can establish the College Retention and Completion Grants as part of the broader Build Back Better agenda, we can make sure students not only make sure students aren't just getting into college. We will make sure they are also getting through college.

What is local SEO & 3 ways to improve your local SEO

BY JAIDEN NAVARRETE

If you've been Googling ways to grow your business by getting more traffic to your site, then you've probably come across the term Search Engine Optimization, also known as SEO.

What exactly is SEO, you ask?

SEO is the process of taking steps to help your website rank higher on Google.

If you are ready to learn more about the benefits of Local Search Engine Optimization and how it can help your business, keep reading for some useful tips!

What is Local SEO?

Before we go any further, we first need to understand the difference between SEO and local SEO.

When you have a website, SEO allows you to target the entire (online) world. On the contrary, local SEO focuses on ranking your website higher in your local area rather than around the entire world.

Whether you have a brick-and-mortar business or an online business, you want to make sure your web pages rank for specific search queries performed by a local audience.

This is where the optimization comes in.

Optimizing your business's website is about making sure people can find you when they search on platforms like Google or Bing. Optimizing your site for local search is very important, especially when trying to gain new clients in specific towns, cities, regions, and even states.

Why is Local Search Engine Optimization important?

When you use local SEO, it allows people to find information about your business quickly and easily, increasing their likelihood of using your service.

How Exactly Does Local SEO Work?

Customers are searching for the best products and services near them – and they don't want to have to wait for answers.

Think about the last time you Googled a service. Did you scroll through and look at all of the options, or did you look at the top suggestions from Google?

If you answered the latter, do you know if your business shows up at the exact time when local customers are looking? Will they pick you out of all the local competition? If your answer is anything less than a yes, then you need to take a look at your business's local SEO.

Local SEO is all about letting search platforms like Google know where your business is located.

Jaiden Navarrete of SpyderWeb Dev.

This helps search engines know where your business is located and allows people in that area to find your business.

Search terms are essential to understand and play a big part in customers finding you.

For example, if you have a business in Las Cruces, New Mexico, you would want to incorporate local SEO search terms to help customers in the Las Cruces area find you. You would want to choose local keywords that focus on that geographic location. Keywords like "web designer in Las Cruces" or "Las Cruces website designer" can help reach people who want to find a local professional or business. These keywords are then integrated into your website, which allows your business to rank in local search results.

Help Your Business Get More Customers

Now that we have talked about what local SEO is, it's time to discuss if a local SEO strategy is a good option for your business. Since local searches convert to sales, your business will definitely benefit from using local SEO.

The main reason you will benefit is that local searches have a high conversion sales rate! When users conduct local searches, they're typically ready to find a business that fits their needs and immediately convert. But if you don't have a local SEO plan in place, you'll miss out on so many valuable leads for your business and will also lose the customers to your competitor.

Local SEO is geo-targeted and timely. Get found by local customers in real-time as they are searching for a solution that you offer.

Local SEO is untapped potential. Instead of only focusing on ranking for general search terms, you can stretch your marketing budget by hiring a local SEO specialist to help you get found by potential customers.

3 Ways to Improve Your Local SEO

There are many things you can do to improve your local SEO. Here are three ways you can improve your local SEO and get found by customers in your areas.

1. Utilize Google My Business

Part of your local SEO strategy should focus on updating your Google My Business (GMB) listing. Your GMB listing will list the information that's relevant to your business, which includes:

- Business name
- Address/directions
- Website
- Business hours
- Customer reviews
- Phone number

A key component to local SEO is keeping your GMB listing up to date. People can find your GMB listing anytime they do a Google search for your product or service. Creating and updating your GMB listing will improve your local SEO, and customers will find your business with ease. We offer Local Search Engine Optimization and GMB management services to take this off your plate.

2. Review Generation

Review generation means getting regular reviews from happy customers. There are many benefits to getting your customers to write reviews for you, not just the fact that it optimizes your online presence; it also encourages more local customers to buy from you.

Here are a few tips to help you encourage customers to leave reviews:

Ask for a review in person after completing a sale/service.

Set up post-purchase email automation to request reviews from customers.

Make sure you include the link to your review page to make it easy for the customer to leave a review.

Remember to respond to existing reviews professionally, thanking reviewers and addressing complaints in not-so-favorable reviews.

3. Local SEO Focused Web Design

Your website and the keywords you use play a huge role in local SEO. As a web designer, I can't stress enough how important it is to improve your website if you want great local SEO results.

AeroVironment expands footprint in New Mexico

With all the attention on Virgin Galactic's human spaceflight missions over the last few months, it is easy to miss the other exciting developments in aerospace happening in New Mexico. Spaceport America is now home to four on-site tenants: Virgin Galactic, UP Aerospace, SpinLaunch and HAPSMobile/ AeroVironment, and has many other customers utilizing the facilities for the purpose of testing, research, and development of innovative new technologies.

AeroVironment, Inc. has recently expanded its footprint at Spaceport America bringing two new unmanned aircraft systems (UAS) projects to New Mexico for testing and training. Operations for JUMP 20 medium unmanned aircraft systems (MUAS) and tactical unmanned aircraft systems (TUAS) began out of the Spaceport's Vertical Launch Area in September. AeroVironment first became a tenant of the spaceport with the HAPSMobile Sun glider project, which flew twice in 2020.

"We developed a great relationship with AeroVironment last year, which has now expanded with these two new UAS projects," said Scott McLaughlin, Executive Director of the New Mexico Spaceport Authority. "We appreciate their confidence in us and what we offer with our employees, our facilities, restricted airspace, remote location, and great weather for flight. Spaceport America's business continues to grow and bring value to New Mexico."

With this new contract, AeroVironment is able to conduct engineering flight test operations for research and development, and validation and verification purposes. The AeroVironment team is also able to conduct customer training and customer demonstrations at Spaceport America bringing international visitors to the region.

"Spaceport America is an ideal location for testing and training of the JUMP 20 and TUAS vehicles due to the abundant special use airspace and cooperative business arrangements that exist between Spaceport America and AeroVironment," said Gorik Hossepian, AeroVironment vice president and product line general manager for MUAS.

AeroVironment is currently leasing temporary facilities from Spaceport America for short-term use but is looking to add permanent infrastructure at the Vertical Launch Area to support training and testing operations in 2022.

AeroVironment, Inc. is HAPSMobile's minority owner and aircraft development partner for the Sun glider, a solar-powered unmanned aircraft designed for stratospheric telecommunications platform systems. HAPSMobile Inc., has been developing and testing the 'Sun glider' at Spaceport America since June 2020. AeroVironment and partner Soft Bank invested over $8 million in developing a hangar and an airstrip at Spaceport America in spring.

website plays a huge factor in local SEO. You need to make sure you list important information on your website, like your address and the Google Maps attachment of your location.

Your website also needs to hone in on local keywords. Your keywords should be relevant to local customers. It only makes sense, doesn't it? Create a list of locally relevant keywords to target and add to your website's meta content, copy, and URLs.

Another way your website contributes to local SEO is through mobile optimization. Mobile website visits are quickly becoming the number one way to search online. You have to optimize your website for mobile to be a player in local SEO (and, really, for any SEO).

It's Time to Utilize Local SEO

By now, you should have a better understanding of how your business will benefit from local SEO along with the benefits that local search offers. Now it's time to take advantage of local search engine marketing! If you are looking for better search results or help to improve your local listings in Google Maps, Google my business or Bing, then you can trust that our local SEO expert will help you dominate your local search results.

The Sopranos: Everything you need to know about managing people

BY PHIL SAN FILIPPO

Watching reruns of The Sopranos is far more educational than many courses on supervisory management. The beauty of the The Sopranos is its full character development and story telling which made it one of the top-rated series of all time. If you are not familiar with The Sopranos, you're probably under 25 years of age or have been sleeping under a rock since 1998. The Sopranos originally graced our living rooms on HBO from January 10, 1999, until January 10, 2007. It is usually on the top of most critics' best shows of all-time.

For the first time, the viewing audience observes firsthand much more than just a bunch of bad guys. There is Tony Soprano. As the show begins, he's trying to deal with a teenage daughter, a 13 year-old under-achieving son, a marriage on the rocks and a mother with the personality of a hungry barracuda. Meanwhile, he inherits the head management job of the Di Meo Mob Family and all its quirky staff. Through the angst of Tony Soprano, we observe firsthand the challenges of managing various personality types common in almost all organizations. As I describe some of the key characters, see if you recognize any of these personalities in your organization.

Tony's Management Style

When all else failed, Tony was able to handle errant staff by having them "whacked" i.e. killed off.) No such harsh resolution is recommended here. However, problems left without being properly managed will not go away. As we go through some of the members of Tony's team, it's easy to understand why Tony is having panic attacks, seeing a "shrink," and taking Prozac. In many ways, Tony Soprano is every manager dealing with staffing issues and characters seen in many organizations. Let's see how many you recognize in your own organization.

Uncle Junior - (The Junior Dilemma)

Uncle Junior has been with the organization for a very long time. Tony readily admits that in many ways Junior was like a father to him, but time has passed Uncle Junior by. He expects to be respected because he has been around so long. Unfortunately, he hasn't changed with the times. Many of the recent things he has done have created major problems for the DiMeo Family. He is critical of Tony behind his back. He speaks out against Tony and has even tried to have Tony whacked. He is negative, stirs up controversy, and is a source of constant strife. He is always contrary and a major source of conflict. Yet, because of his longstanding membership in the organization, he expects to be respected.

Uncle Junior likes to gossip and makes fun of Tony and the decisions he makes. He is more concerned with having the honor of the big job than doing the actual work. He is resentful. Yet, because he has been around the organization so long and is the figurehead, people continue to ask him for advice. Depending on his mood, he will give appropriate advice, harmful advice or steer people in the wrong direction. Does anyone have or know an Uncle Junior hiding in their organization? If you do, he or she can be exceptionally dangerous and make it difficult to keep your team together. In almost every job I had or organization I observed, an Uncle Junior is there to create strife within the organization. Of course, the Uncle Juniors of the world believe they are too important to the organization to ever be disciplined. If you try to warn them, they are likely to step up their criticism. The issue needs to be tackled head-on with consequences clearly laid out.

Christopher Moltisanti - (Christopher Syndrome)

Christopher, oh Christopher! Tony had so much hope for you!! Christopher Molisanti is a young, good looking, semi-charismatic, low-ranking member of the Di Meo Family. He's usually charming, and he is an expert at kissing up to Tony when he is around. Behind his back, it's another story. Christopher is so impatient and volatile, one never knows what he is going to say or do. He thinks he knows all the answers and belongs higher up in the organizational structure. Oftentimes, Tony has told Christopher that he is going places and tries to mentor him. Currently at a very low level, Christopher is confident he can move up the ladder without doing much work. Behind Tony's back, Christopher is lazy and impulsive. He is a hard-core drug addict. He can be aggressive and impulsive to prove that he's a big shot. If Tony only knew half the stuff that Christopher has done....

Rather than concentrating on the DiMeo Family business, Christopher is usually trying to do side deals to make some extra income behind Tony's back and position himself as more capable than his supervisors. Of course, Tony gives him so many chances because Christopher is truly a likable guy and Tony really wants him to succeed. Tony catches Christopher screwing off and screwing up time and time again; but Tony tends to go easier on Christopher than he would on others with similar infractions. Christopher realizes he usually gets off easy and takes full advantage of the situation Christopher is a whiner and every time he is caught, he whines and begs for forgiveness. Usually, Tony relents. Bottom line, Christopher feels empowered. He doesn't need to perform because Tony will always have his back. As the series evolves, Tony eventually realizes he's being used and the Christopher problem has to go away.

We've all supervised employees who are smart and likable and, at first, we see a potential shining star. We then begin to realize there are problems. Project deadlines aren't met, there is repeated tardiness, things go over budget. We reprimand them. yet we cut the employee more slack than we should as we still think they have potential to move on to bigger and better things. Ultimately, we need to come down hard on them and, because they are not used to it, they become resentful and even vindictive.

Christopher's Syndrome reigns throughout many organizations. These people may have high aspirations, but they are too lazy or do not have the drive to move up the ladder the right way. They usually stick around the organization at the lower level even though with a little effort they could be a star employee.

Paulie Gaultieri - (Paulie Walnuts)

Paulie Walnuts is almost a Christopher in reverse. Paulie is deeply loyal. He will do whatever is asked of him. He is a dedicated worker and will work hard (not smart) to get the job done. If Paulie seems like the real thing that's because he is. (As an aside, the actor playing Paulie is the only one of the entire cast, who actually served time in the big house. He originally tried out for the Uncle Junior role, but when that role went to Dominic Chianese, he agreed to the Paulie Walnuts role with the understanding that Paulie would never snitch to the Feds.)

United Way of Southwest New Mexico announces the 2021 Technology Fund

Raising funds is an essential component to running a successful nonprofit organization. It takes monetary support for a nonprofit to succeed with sharing its message and daily operations. This is why donors can play such an important role in an organization's fundraising goals. However, depending on an agency's mission, the financial support of donors may not be enough to help achieve the organization's goals.

Fortunately, grant funding opens the door to new opportunities for nonprofit organizations which is why United Way of Southwest New Mexico is announcing our 2021 Technology Fund. Our goal is to accelerate digital equity to address challenges in underserved communities in Southwest New Mexico focused on basic needs, education, and financial stability.

Technology grants are useful for developing or enhancing an organization's technological infrastructure. In today's technology-driven environment, nonprofits rely on data to drive everything from fundraising campaigns to policy decisions. That's why technology plays such an important role in an organization's mission. With technology-focused grants, a nonprofit can build or improve upon an existing technological infrastructure.

Requirements for this new funding opportunity include: organizations must be recognized by the IRS as tax-exempt under Internal Revenue Code Section 501(c)(3) and must be located in and directly serving the communities of Dona Ana, Grant, Hidalgo, Luna, Otero, and Sierra Counties.

All grant applications must be completed using the online application form on the United Way of Southwest New Mexico website. Highest priority will be given to proposals that clearly articulate the planned impact of their efforts, as well as the metrics by which the impact is measured. United Way will not consider incomplete proposals, emailed proposals or paper-based applications.

Eligible expenses may include computer equipment, internet access expenses, printer supplies, software subscriptions, etc. needed to successfully provide services to your organization's clientele. Documentation for the estimate of technology expenses must be uploaded in the application to be considered.

"As technology continues to impact every aspect of our lives, there's a real danger of more people getting left behind. We cannot allow that to happen," stated Amanda Morales, Chief Executive Officer. "By providing this funding opportunity, United Way of Southwest New Mexico is assisting to break down the digital divide that can prevent so many from accessing the basic needs, education and financial stability they need to live a quality life." Morales continued.

One example of how United Way of Southwest New Mexico has helped to bridge the education divide and provide response to the COVID-19 pandemic occurred in October 2020. United Way of SWNM donated 108 document cameras to the Cobre Consolidated School District to support remote teaching and learning. The document cameras allowed teachers to project their textbook page or worksheet right on to the computer screen for students who were at home for remote learning. This made teaching much easier as educators didn't have to put their worksheet up to the web camera which provided challenges as it was difficult for students to read the documents.

The 2021 Technology fund will contribute to the United Way of Southwest New Mexico's goal of helping bridge needs with resources and solutions—specifically related to, basic needs, education, and financial stability.

For more information regarding the Technology Fund, contact Amanda Morales at impact@uwswnm.org or call the United Way office at 575-524-7561.

True to character, Paulie remained completely loyal to Tony. Paulie is a little short on brains. (He got his nickname "Paulie Walnuts" because he once set out to hijack a truckload of TV sets. Instead, he hijacked a truck full of walnuts. Thus, "Paulie Walnuts" was born.) Paulie has many of the good qualities you want in an employee. He is exceptionally loyal, sensitive, and has a good sense of humor, but he does not have the mental capacity to move up the ladder. Tony would send Paulie out to handle many sensitive jobs only finding himself to go out and clean up the mess. Have you run across a Paul Walnuts or two?

Silvio Dante

Silvio Dante worked his way up through the ranks to sit at the right hand of Tony Soprano as his consigliere. He is Tony's most loyal, smart and dedicated soldier who is always there through thick and thin to support Tony. He has the courage to tell Tony when he thinks he is wrong. He will argue with him behind closed doors but always supports him completely in public. He always watches Tony's back and has Tony's best interest at all times. More importantly, he always has the best interest of the entire organization.

Silvio is his own person.

He speaks up. He is a team leader and example to the rest of the employees. Every team would always be better with at least a few Silvio's on their roster. He is a leader, supporter, cheerleader, doer, coach, mentor, and inspiration to the rest of the team. He is usually level-headed and he informally keeps everyone else in line. Every organization has a Silvio and they are probably the most important personalities you will find in any organization. These people are worth their weight in gold.

Summary

Whether you're managing a bank, accounting firm, or running the Di Meo family mob, these personality types are commonplace in many organizations. It's impossible to avoid them. A good manager will be aware of these flaws and intervene before they get out of hand.

I use The Sopranos because it is filled with so many colorful personality types. These rich characters are extreme examples in so many ways. However, in real life, the personality types come in all genders, nationalities, and educational levels, and they are generally seen in some form in every organization. Enjoy picking out the Uncle Juniors, Christophers and the rest of the gang in your workplace.

movie review

BY JAY BOBBIN

‘Close Encounters of the Third Kind’ still exist in Steven Spielberg’s sci-fi classic

Even if it didn't contain five of the most famous music notes in movie history, “Close Encounters of the Third Kind” would be one of the most memorable science-fiction movies yet made.

Showtime presents the “Director's Cut” of the 1977 blockbuster Thursday, Nov. 18, and Friday, Nov. 19 — and if ever a filmmaker earned such a revisiting of his work, it's Steven Spielberg, whose name was as much a selling point for the picture as anything after his monstrous success with “Jaws.” Audiences were eager to see what he would come up with next, and in a hallmark of his work, he imbued the story he wrote about alien-spacecraft sightings on Earth with a humanity that has been a trademark of his career.

Spielberg reunited with two of his “Jaws” collaborators — star Richard Dreyfuss and composer John Williams — to tell the story of several people whose lives are changed, understandably, by unusual experiences eventually traced to the presence of extraterrestrials in our orbit. Melinda Dillon plays a mother distraught when her young son (Cary Guffey) vanishes in the wake of an at-home light show stunning enough to beat anything ever put forth on a stage, but much of the plot centers on the utility-company worker portrayed by Dreyfuss.

After the truck that he's in shakes, rattles and almost rolls during a bizarre outage of all power sources in his area, he becomes obsessed with visions of an enormous mountain, making models of it ... even one out of mashed potatoes at the family dinner table. He starts to wonder if he's going crazy, but a team of scientists (including one played by iconic French moviemaker Francois Truffaut) also is getting signals about possible UFOs.

Movie: Under the Volcano
A film festival favorite, writer-director Gracie Otto's feature-length 2021 documentary looks back at a decade of music by AIR Montserrat, a recording studio built by Beatles producer George Martin in 1979 on the island of Montserrat. This custom-built state-of-the-art studio quickly became known for some of the best in 1980s pop recordings, including the Elton John single "I'm Still Standing" and the Dire Straits album "Money for Nothing." Some of the film was shot in the ruins of the studio, which was destroyed by Hurricane Hugo in 1989.

A web-based, virtual tour of the exhibits will be made available the following week for those unable to attend the opening the following week.

The exhibitions will continue through Saturday, Dec. 18.

Maggie Day, Alex Nipper and Donovan Noelle Swann will share their work in the MFA exhibit, while works of Brontë Procell, Brigitte Kearns and Analinda Gonzalez will be featured in the BFA show.

"Leftovers" examines how each artist exposes facades to question their own narrative through the use of materials, process and objects as they relate to specific times and places, NMSU said in a news release.

"Each artist exercises a keen awareness of the expectations and materialization of social constructs, the performances that exist within various communities and the related impacts on the development of personal and collective identity," NMSU assistant art professor Bree Lamb said.

"Dis | Connected" exhibits the relationships among immigration, psychology vs. physiology and transcendental environment, NMSU said.

Both exhibitions include free artist talks.

The BFA artists talk is 6 to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 30. Register at <https://nmsu.zoom.us/j/6425567890>.

The MFA artists talk, which will be in person, will be 6 to 7 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 2 at UAM.

Debut novel about 'meta-normal' escape from bullying

BULLETIN REPORT

In her debut novel, "Andersen Light: A Meta-Normal Novel," Las Cruces author Tanya D. Dawson presents a "becoming who-you-are, coming-of-age young adult fantasy adventure, (as) a bullying incident catapults a young girl into a fantastical new world."

Georgie Ray Jones, 14, "rockets beyond the tattooed remnants of her self-confidence to save her siblings from an innuendo-charged family life and the stepdad she's dubbed Jackass," Dawson said about the book.

"Now living in Mystic Creek, Oregon with her father, Georgie discovers her life as she once knew it will change forever," Dawson said. "After her friend Shawn is pummeled by a dodgeball thrown by a bully, Georgie intervenes, only to send the bully flying across the schoolyard."

As she searches for answers, it is family friend Luther Andersen — light-house keeper, mystic and professor — who explains to Georgie that she is meta-normal.

Dawson has spent her career in defense and intelligence, she said.

The novel was released Nov. 3 by Empower Press, an imprint of GracePoint Publishing.

Find the ebook and print versions at Amazon, Barnes & Noble, Apple Books, Kobo, Target.com and Walmart.com; and Dawson at TanyaDDawson.com.

'Syd, the Solstice Kid' play promises fun look at solstice

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

"Syd, the Solstice Kid" is "an hour-long musical journey exploring the customs and legends surrounding the winter solstice from diverse cultures," the NMSU Theatre Department said in a news release about its upcoming production.

Performances are at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Nov. 19-20 and 26-27 and 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 28 in the Mark and Stephanie Medoff Theatre at the ASNMSU Center for the Arts, 1000 E. University Ave.

Tickets are available online at www.onthe-stage.tickets/show/new-mexico-state-university/syd-the-solstice-kid-85401 or visit <https://theatre.nmsu.edu/>, click on the purple "Syd, the Solstice Kid" poster and then click on "BUY TICKETS." You can also buy tickets at Center for the Arts before each performance. Or, to purchase tickets by phone, call 575-646-4515.

The cast includes four talented NMSU theater students — three seniors and one freshman — Dominique Gomez, Kamryn Neill, Riley Merritt and JJ Hanley.

The show is directed by NMSU Theatre Department Head Wil Kilroy, with musical direction by Theatre Department assistant professor Lisa Hermanson. The musical was adapted by Lani Bookman, with music and lyrics by Susan Bardsley.

"While 'Syd, the Solstice Kid' was chosen so that families could bring their young children to a theatrical experience, this rollicking musical is sure to charm viewers of all ages," Kilroy said.

"The four cast members will inspire you with their endless energy and their whirlwind of characters, from the wise old doctor to grandfather praying mantis. The music will have your toes tapping, and at times the performers will encourage you to sing along if you'd like! While the legends and customs presented from around the world (Scandinavia, Canada, Africa and China) will educate the young, I'm betting all ages will learn something new from Syd, while being thoroughly entertained during this non-stop hour of theater, song and dance," Kilroy said.

The NMSU Theatre Department's latest production "Syd, the Solstice Kid," will open on Nov. 19.

When the pandemic hit, the city "felt it was important to stay engaged and connected to our local musicians during this difficult situation. Area musicians were hit hard, as were many in our community," the city said in a news release. The city began the Music in the Park series in 1994. The 2022 Music in the Park series is set to begin with live music Memorial Day Weekend.

Local author publishes new book in 'David Elliott' mystery series

BULLETIN REPORT

"Pack of Scoundrels" is Las Cruces author Bailey Herrington's latest in his David Elliott mystery series. It was published in late October.

The book is set in 1954, as Elliott travels to Las Cruces for a job assignment and to stay close to the love of his life. While in Las Cruces, he stays with the Lopez family; father and husband, Tony Lopez, works on V-2 rockets at White Sands Proving Ground.

Lopez is mysteriously killed in a one-car accident with a classified government document found nearby.

Those responsible for Lopez's death pose a threat to his family and to national security.

Elliott discovers that Lopez was among 100 airmen who were held at a Nazi death camp during World War II.

Two of Tony's friends are murdered, with one passing on an important message to Elliott before he dies.

Then, Elliott's girlfriend is kidnapped. Thanks to his investigation, state and national law enforcement begin a wide-ranging search for former Nazis and other powerful and dangerous criminals.

Herrington is a native of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

He completed studies at Lutheran Theological Seminary in Gettysburg and served congregations in Pennsylvania and West Virginia for 24 years.

"Pack of Scoundrels" is the third David Elliott mystery, following "What the Barber Knew" and "Dead to Rights." A fourth book in the series, "The Girl in the Orange Mailbox," will be published in February 2022.

Las Cruces journalist documents travels across USA with book

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

"It's been quite a journey," writer-photographer Manfred Schreyer of Las Cruces said about his nearly 10 months of travels across the United States as part of his Experience America project that has produced a coffee-table book and will produce a movie.

Schreyer's travels began in January and ended in October, with Schreyer traveling 19,000 miles through 48 states to talk to people and visit towns and cities across America.

Schreyer conducted hundreds of interviews during his travels and shot hundreds of hours of video for the movie he has been planning since he came up with the idea for the project.

What has also emerged is a book, "The American Experience," with 64 pages of photos divided into people, places and circumstances.

"It's a time capsule of 2021," Schreyer said.

"This is who we are."

The book's cover photo shows homeless people in Denver with a hand-lettered sign that reads, "Need weed, cash, food and beer." An inside photo shows a Mexican girl peering through the wall built along the U.S.-Mexico border in west Texas near El Paso.

Another photo is titled "I Can't Breathe." "An Era" includes photos with Trump signs taken in Texas and South Dakota. "Small But Mighty" is about Piccinini Brothers butcher shop, which has survived in Hell's Kitchen in Manhattan for more than a century.

Another photo, "We Are a Generation," shows people over age 65 in Dallas. "Plug Me In" highlights electric vehicles in Chicago. "Rest in Peace" is from a Hugo, Oklahoma cemetery for circus performers. "Separate But Equal" is from an abandoned African-American hospital in Kansas City. There are photos of abandoned towns like Africatown in Alabama and Thurmond, West Virginia. "In the Money" shows college athletes in Dallas.

Other photos are titled "Faith vs. Truth" (photo taken in Topeka, Kansas), "Together" (Chicago), "Hope" (Taos), "It Will Get Better" (Las Cruces), "Just Me" and "The Wealth of Our Nation"

(New York City), "When We Were Young" (California coast) and "There Is a Pill for That" (New Orleans).

Schreyer has included historical facts and current statistics with the photos, touching on subjects that include the isolation caused by the pandemic, property foreclosures, human and civil rights, religion, poverty and homelessness, disabilities, pets, small business, aging, garbage and drug use.

There are no political opinions expressed in the book and Schreyer doesn't interpret what each photo shows; that is left up to the viewer.

"It was a healthy experience," Schreyer said. "It was really good to see we are alive in our diversity."

Schreyer is now busy editing his film, which he hopes will be completed in early 2022.

Schreyer's book can be pre-ordered at www.mirageartphotography.com. He will sign the first 250 copies sold. The cost of the book is $27, Schreyer said, but anyone who pre-orders before Dec. 10 will receive a 25 percent discount, he said, making the price $20.25.

Schreyer will have a book signing 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, Dec. 11, at COAS Books, 317 N. Main St. Downtown.

Schreyer retrofitted a 15-passenger van for his travels, complete with bed, computer workspace, electricity, refrigerator-freezer and even a portable flush toilet.

A native of Germany, Schreyer was a high-school exchange student to the U.S. in 1975-76 and immigrated here in 1984. He moved to Las Cruces from Ohio more than four years ago.

A freelance photojournalist and web designer — he's the owner of Mirage Art Photography — Schreyer has visited 46 countries around the world and has worked in many of its major cities.

Concert association to have final concert after 7 decades

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

After its March 2022 concert, the Las Cruces Civic Concert Association (LCCCA) will close its doors forever.

After 77 years of providing concerts featuring “world-class musicians at a really affordable price,” LCCCA President Lucretia Jones said the nonprofit will cease operation next year. The competition from other entertainment sources and the constant need for fundraising caused the LCCCA board to decide it was time to call it quits, she said.

Jones said the board had decided to close down this year, but was able to schedule two more concerts, one this September and one next March, because of a generous donation from the estate of Eugenia L. Staszewski (1916-2020).

It was “a huge honor to be included in her estate bequest,” Jones said.

Jeff Dayton, Glen Campbell's longtime musical director, will lead a salute to the country music legend on March 22.

Jones has been a member of the LCCCA board for 10 years. She said the board's senior member is Fredreca Olhausen-Finkner, who is 97. She began selling LCCCA tickets in 1958, Olhausen-Finkner said, and has been a board member for many years.

The Sept. 21 concert featured pianist Ilya Yakushev and cellist Thomas Mesa. LCCCA's final concert will be a salute to Glen Campbell with Jeff Dayton. It will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 22, 2022, at Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St. Downtown. Tickets are $25.

Dayton led the Jeff Dayton Band 1984-2000 and was Campbell's longtime musical director.

Throughout its history, beginning in 1944, LCCCA produced an average of three to four concerts a year, Jones said.

Agave Gallery to feature works of noted artist Roy van der Aa

BULLETIN REPORT

Agave Artists Gallery, 2250 Calle de San Albino in Mesilla, is featuring the work of well-known Las Cruces artist Roy van der Aa in November.

Born in Amsterdam, Holland in 1956, van der Aa grew up in Montreal, Canada. He studied fine art at John Abbott College and printmaking and archaeology at Concordia University and moved to the United States in 1989.

Van der Aa is a founding member of ArtForms, which sponsors Las Cruces' Love of Art celebration each February. His art has been featured in more than 115 solo, two-person and group shows, and van der Aa has exhibited throughout the southwestern U.S. and Quebec, Canada. His work can be seen at RioBravo-FineArt, Inc. Gallery in Truth or Consequences and Unsettled Gallery in Las Cruces. He has also shown at Gallery 408 in Carrizozo, Collectibles 4U in Tularosa and Art Obscura and Glenn Cutter galleries in Las Cruces. His hand-pulled prints were featured at Iris and Shriek in Amsterdam in 2018, along with works by Miró, Chagall and Picasso. He also participated in the premiere exhibit of the Hiatus collective in London in September 2019.

Van der Aa said his painted collages "are a way of re-imagining landscape painting."

"Traditional landscape is a static snapshot which freezes a scene," he said. "Even as a kid drawing in the back seat, I noticed that clouds moved, light moved and ebbed and flowed. When I began to sketch and paint outdoors, wind blew my canvas board and bugs flew into the paint. Not only that, I moved and my mood changed as well. Images flowed into each other, and I wanted to find a way to express that.

"The variations are almost musical in nature," van der Aa said. "I state a theme and then expand on it thoughtfully and immediately. These works are quirky, moody and self-contradictory. I enjoy them greatly."

Agave Gallery is open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday through Sunday.

What do cargo ships, supply chains have to do with reading?

I'm learning how supply chains affect more than just buying toilet paper. This week, Tracy tried to make an appointment for an eye exam.

The next available appointment is in April. Many of us are scheduling long postponed doctor visits. That's true. But April? Why such a long backlog?

The answer impacts the wellbeing of our children. Before Covid shut down schools, school nurses did vision screenings every year. Many kinds of vision problems were caught early and referrals to optometrists and ophthalmologists happened at a predictable pace.

When regular in-school attendance stalled, so did early interventions. With school back in session,

RORIE

Reading Solution

two years' worth of referrals are in the works; these children have lost critical learning time.

For Children's Reading Alliance, the desperate need for our services is clear but, like so many cargo ships, there are supply chain issues.

Volunteer Reading Buddies are ready to return to mentoring struggling readers. The First Teacher/Primer Maestro Family Literacy Program has an ever-growing list of desperate parents waiting for meeting spaces to open. Books are getting more expensive, and deliveries take longer.

We received this message from a second-grade teacher: "I can see Jayden struggling. I'm anxious to get a Reading Buddy for her."

We need to get to children like Jayden. Parents, teachers and CRA volunteers are frustrated and anxious to get back to work but we face more obstacles with fewer financial resources.

Our goal is to raise $50,000 to get literacy programs to every DAC community by the summer of 2022.

From a mother of three, translated from Spanish, "Before Katrina reached out to me, I felt hopeless. I want so much more for my children, but I never knew how to help them. I am so grateful. I have learned to be my children's Primer Maestro. I wish every mother could take this class."

Mariana said, "Nicolas didn't know about books. Now he asks for one every night."

Children learn so much from listening to stories and being read to every day yet many of your neighbors don't know how to give their children positive reading experiences.

Elisa, a home-based childcare provider who took First Teacher/Primer Maestro Literacy Training: "I didn't realize how important it is to read to children when they are very young. Now, I turn off the cartoon. I read books and set up learning stations. It never occurred to me that I could create a learning environment in my home. Please continue to offer more workshops."

Sofia said, "We are coming together as a family. Nobody is bored anymore. Even my ex-husband is more involved in what he calls 'quality time' with his kids."

Lucy attended Talking Stories/Cuentos que hablan programs with her children, saying, "We are learning Spanish as a family because the books are bilingual."

Abuelo Gabe cares for his grandkids. "I feel like I have been shaken awake. I'm seeing my role change. I'm listening and talking more. It's amazing what you find out about your kids. They are smarter than you think!"

Many Las Cruces keep this work alive with donations and volunteer hours.

We need your help too. CRA has been offered a $1,000 matching grant that expires Dec. 31. Your donation will secure that grant.

Six-year-old Tomas, when offered his first-ever book, said, "You mean I can keep it?"

Araceli, age 7, after a volunteer helped her choose a book, said, "I am going to put this in the bottom of my backpack so no one can steal it."

Your contribution helps children like Tomas, Araceli and Jayden.

Visit our website: childrensreadingalliance.org to make your gift online or mail a check to CRA, 3880 Foothills Road, Las Cruces, NM 88011.

And, remember to buy your toilet paper!

Open enrollment for state health insurance exchange lasts till January

BULLETIN REPORT

BeWellnm began the open enrollment period for 2022 on Nov. 1, the New Mexico health insurance exchange said in a news release.

Open enrollment continues through Jan. 15, 2022. For those who enroll by Dec. 23, coverage will begin Jan. 1, 2022. Those who enroll by Jan. 15, 2022 will have coverage beginning Feb. 1.

With enrollment, thousands of New Mexicans are eligible to receive health insurance at little or no cost, the news release said. The open enrollment period also marks the transition from a federal marketplace (healthcare.gov) to a state-based exchange.

"BeWellnm now provides New Mexicans with a local solution to help them find a health plan that best fits their needs," said beWellnm CEO Jeffery Bustamante. "We will be able to set our own enrollment dates, provide the most comprehensive and affordable plans available and create a more intuitive enrollment experience."

BeWellnm is offering dozens of plan options across multiple carriers, including dental insurance.

Free local enrollment assistance and financial assistance continue to be available so New Mexicans can select a plan to fit their health and budget for 2022.

All plans will continue to cover the 10 essential benefits such as doctor visits, hospital stays, maternity care, emergency room care, prescriptions and more, beWellnm said. Federal law and regulations provide protections against preexisting condition exclusions in health insurance coverage.

Health plans must permit New Mexicans to enroll regardless of health status, age, gender or other factors that may predict the use of health services.

"Health insurance purchased through beWellnm during the open enrollment period will allow for steep discounts and may completely eliminate premiums for low-income individuals and families," said beWellnm Director of Communication and Outreach Maureen Manring.

The New Mexico health insurance companies participating in the beWellnm state-based marketplace include Ambetter from Western Sky Community Care, Blue Cross Blue Shield of New Mexico, Friday Health Plans, Molina Healthcare, Presbyterian Health Plan and True Health New Mexico.

BeWellnm was created by state law in 2013 and is governed by a 13-member board.

Call 833-862-3935 to discuss insurance options. Visit beWellnm.com.

Cannabis legalization allows you to grow your own and DIY

Let's take a little walk back in time to 2007 when the NM Medical Cannabis Program was established. At that time, there were few licensed growers or dispensaries. The few dispensaries that existed mostly had flower for smoking. The program was not prepared for the needs of non-smoking patients. It took years of constant pressure to get the dispensaries to carry medicinal edibles and when they did, it was mostly hard candy and cookies. Years later, the patients were able to get tinctures, capsules and gummies. There has always been a lack of healthy, quality medical edibles. The dispensaries are now carrying more edibles but the health ingredient quality is still lacking.

Case in point: Diabetic and cancer patients cannot and do not want to eat sugar especially high fructose corn syrup. It is found in most gummies, hard candy, syrup and cookies. I think we can all agree that sugar is not medicine. It is the culprit in many health issues.

The Good Herb

Here are some examples of cannabis-related health products you can make for yourself.

When I was in college back in 1974-1978, I volunteered to teach friends and family how to make their own edibles and tinctures. We started with canna butter; this could be added to any and all breads, cookies, etc. There was no hospice back then, but plenty of cancer patients suffering from the side effects of the chemotherapy who wanted relief from the side effects. My goal was then and has always been to ease the suffering and increase the quality of life. Truth be known, recreational users are mostly interested in getting high; medical patients prefer to reduce pain without being high.

So that was 40-plus years ago, and here we are now, New Mexico is about to launch legalization and recreational use come April 1, 2022. Growers and dispensaries are rushing to be part of the Green Rush. As of September 2021, according to the CCD, the Cannabis Control Division, there are already over 1,500 applicants for grow licenses. Grow licenses are the only licenses available at this time; manufacturing and dispensary licenses will be available later in the year. Time is of the essence to insure there will be enough medicine available come April 1.

You may have heard, that as of July 1, 2021, any 18-year-old New Mexican resident can now grow up to 12 plants for personal use (six flowering and six in vegetative state). It is no longer necessary to have a NM medical card to grow your own.

It has been my experience that growing for personal use is not only rewarding and therapeutic but less expensive. Since 2007, I have taught hundreds of medical patients how to grow and how to make their own medicines. If you can cook, with a bit of guidance and a Magical Butter Machine, you can DIY.

There is more interest in the DIY approach now than ever. If you want to learn how to grow your own and create do-it-yourself remedies, email me for an appointment. For years, I taught classes but since Covid, I am only doing private consults and private lessons.

NOTE: Starting Nov. 15 to Dec. 20, we will have Magical Butter Machines on sale.

By the way, you do not have to grow your own to make your own remedies.

At this time, if you are a NM medical cannabis patient, you can purchase flower at the dispensaries and make your own medicines.

In April, recreational dispensaries will be open and you will be able to purchase flower to DIY. You can do it.

After weeks of anticipation, New Mexico State University and Sodexo debuted their first Yo-Kai ramen vending machine — which is also the first such machine in New Mexico — on Nov. 1 at Garcia Hall.

The machines are popular at other locations in California, Texas, Arizona and Florida.

Several weeks ago, NMSU Dining teased the machine's arrival at Garcia Hall with a social media post that earned a huge response from students and their families.

“The Yo-Kai ramen vending machine is a great solution for dining at any time, day or night,” said Candice Nanco, director of marketing for NMSU Dining. “It offers authentic recipes and noodles are ready in 60 seconds or less.”

Prices range from $10.99 to $12.99 pre-tax. Accepted forms of payment include credit and debit cards, Aggie Cash and Dining Dollars.

The machine's menu includes dessert options, soups and rice bowls, including Taiwan beef noodle soup, black garlic Tonkotsu ramen, Tonkotsu ramen, teriyaki chicken rice bowl, vegan udon, Korean seafood jjamppong ramen, tantanmen, Vietnamese beef pho, Vietnamese chicken pho, shrimp tempura udon, mushroom vegetarian miso ramen, tiramisu and black sesame roll cake.

Nanco said more machines will be added around campus if the machine at Garcia Hall proves successful.

Despite tough schedule, Aggie football wants to finish strong

New Mexico State University doesn't look like a one-win football team.

The Aggies have been in most of their games and seem to be only a play or two away from having a few more wins.

DAVE BURGE

Beyond the pressbox

Saturday, Nov. 6, was a familiar story as NMSU led visiting Utah State 10-0 after the first quarter and 13-7 at halftime before ultimately losing 35-13.

That dropped the Aggies to 1-8 with road games against Alabama and Kentucky and their home finale on Nov. 27 against the University of Massachusetts remaining.

"We are right there," said starting quarterback

Redshirt freshman running back Juwaun Price makes a cut-back against Hawaii earlier this season.

Jonah Johnson during an interview after practice the Thursday before the Utah State game.

"Sometimes, one play makes a difference in the game, and pretty much all our games, it hasn't gone our way," Johnson continued from Madera, California, said. "We just have to learn how to finish and play four quarters as a team."

"We are a good team," the junior quarterback

Despite the disappointing season, NMSU continues to practice and play hard and maintain a positive attitude. After watching them at practice, they seem like they don't want to give up on the season or on each other.

Redshirt senior offensive lineman Sage Doxtater says they are excited about playing Alabama, consistently one of the best teams in college football during the past 15 years or so. Kickoff is scheduled for 10 a.m.

Mountain time on Nov. 13 and the game can be seen on the SEC Network.

"I'm excited for the opportunity," said Doxtater, also the Thursday before the Utah State game.

Doxtater, from London, Ontario, Canada, says they want to finish a disappointing season on a strong note by putting out the best effort they can.

"Obviously, it hasn't gone the way we wanted," Doxtater said. "A bowl game was our expectation. Clearly, that hasn't happened. On a positive note, we are getting better every game. We don't look like a one-win team."

Sophomore defensive back Syrus Dumas also said after that Thursday practice that no matter who they have on the schedule, they will continue to play hard and try to finish the season on a positive note.

"We just have to finish games," said Dumas, who is from Columbus, Mississippi. "We are working so hard. I love these guys. I love this team. I love the coaching staff. We are just going to keep pushing. San Jose State, we were close. The (second) Hawaii game, we were close. Most games, we were three or four plays away from winning. That's all right. We will keep working."

Dumas said he is also excited to play Alabama.

He said he knows some players on the Alabama team, has some friends who go to school there and will have family there at Bryant-Denny Stadium to watch him play.

"It doesn't matter who it is," Dumas said. "I'm going to war with my guys every Saturday. It doesn't matter the record."

Redshirt freshman running back Juwaun Price agrees that the team wants to finish the season strong and "put an L on someone's record."

"We know we can't get what we want (going to a bowl), but we want to break down someone else's season," said Price, who is from Peoria, Arizona.

Price and others who are coming back next year hope that a solid finish can carry over to next year.

"Be ready," he said.

Information overload can challenge golfers during pressure moments

There are times when we all get on mental "overload," even in our weekly little games at our private little clubs with our regular little friends. We aren't playing in the U.S. Open but we still can't seem to keep track of everything we need to do. It all has to do with "information processing," specifically how we do it and how well we do it.

Think of your brain as a

CHARLIE BLANCHARD

Golf Doctor

computer capable of processing and packaging huge amounts of data, sensory inputs and experiences — information — for potential use by you in numerable activities. For early hominids, processing information correctly meant survival. For the world's top golfers, it may mean victory in a major, and possibly life-changing. But as for you and I becoming better at processing information, it may simply make us harder for our rivals to beat.

Next time you're out on the golf course, try noticing the myriad inputs to your brain. You have people talking, wind blowing, clubs rattling, dogs barking, muscles tensing, feet hurting, bugs biting, distance numbers in your laser, money to change hands, putts to line up, grass grain to figure, thoughts to control, emotions going up and down, even cell phones going off. Fortunately, our relatively large brains are "hard wired" to filter, organize, prioritize and utilize the internal and external signals so that information processing for everyday chores will be routine, even mindless.

It's when the demands of newness and situations involving pressure arise that we become especially challenged. Tour pros are lost in their method and just focus on target.

University of Michigan

psychology professor Richard Nesbitt has made a lifetime study of cultural differences in how people process information. His research has shown, for instance, that Asians tend to notice the entirety of a visual scene, whereas Caucasians mostly focus on a single object. Variations exist, such as holistic vs. analytic; emphasis on collectivistic vs. individualistic.

It's not that one style is better, Nesbitt says, but that there is such a variance in such fundamental human characteristic as sensory interpretation is amazing. We suspect there is also a huge range of tendencies and idiosyncratic styles of brainwork among individuals within the same cultural milieu. On the golf course, you and I will attend to different stimuli and certainly interpret the same things differently. There is really not one absolute best or right way.

Organ Mountain runners finish strong at state

By DAVE BURGE

Las Cruces Bulletin

The Organ Mountain High cross country program finished up a stellar season with a strong showing at the state 5A championships Saturday, Nov. 6 at Albuquerque Academy.

The Knight boys took fourth place in the team completion and Brett Bybee took third place with a time of 16 minutes, 20.20 seconds over the 3.1-mile course.

In all, Organ Mountain had four boy runners finish in the top 22.

"Every cross country race this season was an opportunity to experience a life lesson, including the importance of teamwork, hard work, patience, goal setting, learning from our failures and dealing with and overcoming adversity," said Organ Mountain coach David Nuñez. "This sport does not just develop runners, but people."

Other top finishers for Organ Mountain were: Corbin Coombs, 15th, 17:18.81; Jeron Wisner, 16th, 17:18.82; and Jonathan Torres, 22nd, 17:37.59.

Matthew Krizek of Las Cruces High was 18th with a time of 17:30.98, and Dax Rios of Centennial High was 24th at 17:41.04. Centennial finished ninth in the team competition.

In the girls 5A championships, Organ Mountain finished 10th as a team. Josslynn Ochoa of Organ Mountain was the top Las Cruces area finisher in 38th place at 22:09.80. Mayfield's Layla Lazarin had the second best local

Still, when it comes to finding ways to enhance your peak performance, there are some strategies you can use. Our first strategy concerns reducing the internal information you have to process by putting a check on your inner dialogue, so you don't confuse yourself and talk yourself out of playing well. The idea is encapsulated in the classic book "They Played With A Quiet Mind" by Dr. Charles Kemp. "The most effective attitude for winning golf," Kemp explains, "is a 'quiet mind' ... (and) a freedom from tension and pressure, and a sense of calm and serenity."

Kemp adds, "It is what golfers say to themselves that determines how they feel and how they play."

Of course, complicating the whole matter is the business of having to process more than one or two inputs — sensory, cognitive, visual or otherwise — at the same time. Most of the available stimuli are either ignored by our brains, or dealt with on auto-pilot, meaning we don't have to think too much about them.

That's good news for us and bad news for advertisers, who want to get our attention at every moment. As golfers, we're wise to limit those stimuli to the fewest possible ones that are significant to our performance.

For instance, you might have seen Tiger Woods cupping his hands around his hat brim as he reads a putt; he is simply blocking out extraneous visuals that may be an interference. More than one swing thought is interference. Too much conversation can be interference and difficult to process, especially when you're trying to focus.

Even Lee Trevino stopped jawing when it came time to swing.
