Las Cruces Bulletin

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) has been raising money to help others for more than 30 years. It is now asking for the community's continued support as the foundation nears its $1.6 million goal to purchase, renovate and maintain a new home.

"This community has been amazing," said Terra V. Winter, president and chief executive officer of the foundation. Winter noted CFSNM has received contributions of $5 to $100,000 during the capital campaign and welcomes additional donations of any amount.

CFSNM was within $135,000 of its $1.6 million goal as of Jan. 18, Winter said. The campaign continues through the end of February.

CFSNM has purchased the Cutter Gallery — the Hadley-Ludwick House — at the corner of El Paseo Road and University Avenue, which is just south of the foundation's current location and more than three times its square footage.

The building, which housed the jewelry store and gallery of Glenn and Sally Cutter for many years, is currently being renovated by Noble Builders, Inc. of Las Cruces, owned by Johnny Talley. All of the project's subcontractors are also local, Winter said.

"We're so excited to be in here," she said, noting that the move is not only a step up for CFSNM, it also is helping preserve an important piece of Las Cruces history, the Hadley House, which is 114 years old.

Winter said CFSNM will preserve many of the property's existing indoor and outdoor features, including the chandeliers

Auditor says LCPD responding appropriately to complaints

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

“Overall, the department is responding with appropriate practices and outcomes,” one of the principals of the company hired to provide an independent audit of the Las Cruces Police Department told the Las Cruces City Council at its Jan. 10 work session.

“The investigations generally were complete, objective and thorough in the best practices we have seen in our work,” OIR Group principal Theresa Magula said at the work session. “The actions taken were very appropriate and show a real commitment to accountability.”

OIR, based in Los Angeles, was hired by the City of Las Cruces March 1 to review complaints of police misconduct filed by the public against LCPD officers, or, in some cases, initiated within the department.

OIR began receiving investigative reports May 1, including “any underlying materials that accompany those reports, so it’s full, unfettered access to confidential information,” OIR principal Michael Gennaco said at the work session.

OIR reviewed 12 complaints filed Jan. 1-Nov. 30, 2021, Magula said. The complaints included a total of 32 allegations of misconduct. Nineteen of the allegations were sustained by the department against 11 LCPD officers, she said, and resulting discipline ranged from verbal reprimands to a 10-day suspension to termination.

Of the 12 complaints, Magula said, five were filed by citizens, two were investigations initiated within the department, two were investigated by a supervisor rather than LCPD’s Internal Affairs (IA) office, two were vehicle-pursuit cases and one was a complaint submitted through the city’s ethics hotline. Most of the cases involved calls for service.

Magula said six separate cases involving litigation against the department, some dating back to 2017, were closed between May and November.

OIR’s 100-page report to the city shows “the department is doing its important work on accountability,” Gennaco said.

“Our assessment is that, at least for this cycle, the department does take accountability seriously and is on the right path to ensuring that your community gets the service and public safety it’s entitled to,” Gennaco said.

But, he added, “we wouldn’t be doing our job if we didn’t find some room for improvement.”

OIR recommendations to LCPD were that the department 1) update its complaint form to make it consistent with current LCPD policy, 2) conduct a formal investigation of every allegation of police misconduct no matter how it is initiated, 3) ensure investigations are completed in a timely fashion and 4) limit investigations conducted by department supervisors.

OIR’s audit “is really more about evaluating how the command staff and leadership of the police department is doing,” Gennaco said. “We’re not so much focused on the actual misconduct of the officers or the employees. That’s important, but what we’re really trying to do is, when there is an allegation of misconduct, how well is your police department investigating those allegations? How fairly are they investigating the allegations? And how completely are they investigating the allegations?”

Timeliness is “another metric we look at,” Gennaco said. “Then ... is the outcome based on the

From Temp to Full Time: LCU Internship Grows Employees

By Cassie McClure

It's come full circle for Las Cruces Utilities (LCU) Wastewater Collection Worker Ashton Gregory. Gregory is the first woman to graduate from the LCU Internship Program, and she ended up hired as a full-time employee working in wastewater where she started as a temporary employee.

"When it was slow working in the office, my boss would ask if I wanted to go with him in the field," Gregory said. "We'd do things like TV lines, using the camera to check for issues in the sewers lines. I started to get interested because I realized that every single day is different, and I enjoyed the hands-on work."

She explained that the former deputy director of Wastewater pulled her aside to have her consider the internship program, but she missed the first deadline.

"It's a commitment, two years of school and then eight years to work," she said. "I had to take time to think; it's like getting a tattoo. If you're going to commit, you should go all in. I went all in."

The LCU Internship Program is a competitive program that awards internships to new incoming or current full-time students pursuing an Associate Degree in Water Technology at the New Mexico State University Doña Ana Community College (DACC).

Gregory did and said the time in school went by fast. "From reading what's in the book and then seeing it in the field," she said. "Putting two and two together was so much easier."

The LCU Internship pays for tuition and other reasonable education-related expenses, including a monthly stipend and paid on-the-job training to assist with educational and living expenses. That's in exchange for up to 20 hours of work per week during semesters and 40 hours per week maximum during academic breaks.

In return, interns commit to working four to eight years with LCU after graduation. The intern graduates will work in one of the following lines of business: Water Operations and Maintenance, Wastewater Operations and Maintenance, or Regulatory and Compliance.

"I've appreciated meeting different people as I've gone through this process; they want you to succeed," Gregory said. "During the application process, when I met with the deputy directors, I told them that I wanted to grow to the point where I could take their job. LCU Utilities Assistant Director Adrienne Widmer told me I should aim for hers." Applications are accepted for entry into the Internship program each spring, starting in January. All applications must be received no later than April 30 to be considered for the upcoming Fall/Spring semesters. Following up on a suggestion made by Casa de Peregrinos emergency food bank Executive Director Lorenzo Alba, Winter said there are plans to partner with the NMSU Art Department to create ceiling art as part of the renovation. The south-facing patio will include an agriculture-themed mural being created by Las Cruces Public Schools art teacher Frances Gomez.

CFSNM will share the space with Mesilla Valley CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocates), with CASA and its six employees in the front (the original house) and CFSNM with its three full-time employees, interns and Winter said the plan is to make the property “a community space,” with two meeting spaces available inside and the patio and another large outdoor space available.

When complete, it will include a catering kitchen, and CFSNM will use the significant wall space to highlight the work of local artists.

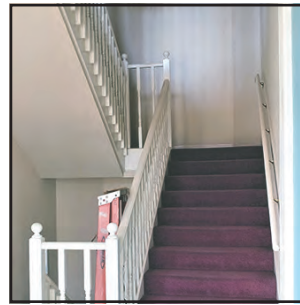

Winter said the renovation will include a donor wall recognizing those who helped fund it.

“Every donor will be recognized,” she said, and indoor and outdoor features will be named in honor of donors and others.

Winter said CFSNM and Mesilla Valley CASA should both be moved into their new home by early February, and a grand opening is being planned for April.

A bit of history

The Hadley-Ludwick House was built in 1907 for Hiram Hadley, who founded Las Cruces College (now New Mexico State University) in 1888 and served as its first president. The house, with its Colonial Revival architectural style, was listed on the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP) in 1991. “Constructed of yellow brick with a side-gable roof (the house) has a finished attic and basement,” according to its NRHP registration form.

The house “has further historic significance for its connection with Russell Ludwick (he bought it in 1936), who was a leader in New Mexico agriculture and for many years closely associated with the agricultural orientation of NMSU,” according to the registration form. Ludwick sold the house in 1974 to Donald Dwyer, who owned the nearby Greenhouse nursery. The house was later used as an NMSU fraternity, first by Sigma Nu and then Lambda Chi Alpha, according to the NPHF form. The Cutters bought the property in the 1990s.

No fences at Roundhouse, but a different feel

More often than not, when the Bulletin produces its annual Southwest New Mexico Legislative Guide, I'm in Santa Fe on the Monday before the legislative session starts on Tuesday.

For as long as I can remember, that Monday has fallen on Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

The holiday means traffic in the Roundhouse (the nickname for the State Capitol) is lighter than you might expect on the eve of the session's opening day.

Of course, the added effect of a pandemic also has a big impact on the number of people in the building.

Last year, in 2021, the entire Roundhouse grounds were encircled in temporary fencing, and guarded by State Police and National Guardsmen and dogs.

The fences went up well before the session and stayed throughout. No one was granted easy access to the center of the New Mexico people's business. The precautions were in place because of the pandemic, but accelerated after Jan. 6, when state capitols all over the country received threats.

RICHARD COLTHARP

From the Publisher

The 2021 New Mexico session opened Jan. 19, a day ahead of President Joe Biden's inauguration, another event that generated threats to state capitol buildings. That created even more heightened security at the Roundhouse.

This year, I was greatly relieved to see no fencing around the State Capitol.

No fences, but still very far from normal.

There was increased security upon entry, in the form of an ID and vaccination card checkpoint, as well as a metal detector, but at least you could enter the building.

Your entry also means you put on a face mask, required throughout the building.

However, if you're packing anything more powerful than a Swiss Army knife, you'd better leave it at home. After years of allowing open-carry weapons in the state capitol building, that is nixed this year.

The Roundhouse Rotunda, the spacious circular lobby around which the Capitol pivots, is normally packed on Opening Day, and on most days of the sessions information tables from different groups throughout New Mexico flood the area.

This year, however, the Rotunda was empty, save for a Covid-19 testing station, another first.

You could also get tested on your walk to the Roundhouse, at a purple Mercedes Sprinter van on Old Santa Fe Trail, just off the Plaza.

Painted on the side of the van in big letters, was "Covid-19 testing," and above that, "Howdy y'all."

On crowded days at the Roundhouse, expect long lines during the lobby checkpoint. When I went through Monday there was not much activity, but it still took longer than I thought it would.

Visitors Monday, according to a sign-in sheet, included people from Australia and Minnesota, but it was still not very crowded.

Tuesday, Opening Day, I was early enough to beat the bigger crowds, but you could tell the big buzz was coming.

Legislators were gradually coming in and entering their offices, some getting to know new staff.

Activity continues increasing until the governor's state-of-the-state address.

Normally, the legislators save their sparring until after the speech, but in Tuesday morning's Santa Fe New Mexican, an article previewing the session included quotes from Democratic Speaker of the House sues. As members of the public, we can take responsibility for making sure that accurate information is readily available to us. We can do this by directly accessing public meetings and communicating with our elected representatives to hold them accountable for being transparent. Media (newspapers, TV, radio, social) can shine light on the proceedings of government, but for issues that are particularly important, there may be no substitute for first-hand observations.

We are fortunate that Doña Ana County, the City of Las Cruces, and Las Cruces Public Schools offer TV and/or online access to their meetings and post recordings on their websites for those unable to view them live. It's not the same as being in the room during the meeting, but the recordings are particularly helpful with complex issues since segments of meetings can be viewed multiple times as needed.

Similarly, the NM Legislature has made its sessions available online. Some legislators have complained about the lack of constituent access to the Roundhouse during the pandemic, but far more of their constituents

During debate over voting reform, tune out claims of rampant fraud

Republican lawmakers in New Mexico have alleged for years that our elections are plagued by massive voter fraud. They finally had their chance to prove it in 2011, with Susana Martinez as governor and Dianna Duran as secretary of state.

WALT RUBEL

Duran was the first Republican secretary of state since E.A. Perrault in 1929. And, she came into office bound and determined to prove that claims of rampant voter fraud were real.

Enlisting the help of the State Police, they combed through seven years of voter registration records, from 2003 to 2010, and matched them against records for driver's licenses. During a legislative committee meeting in 2011, Duran announced they had found 117 people who had used foreign credentials to obtain a driver's license and were also registered to vote.

Further investigation showed the vast majority of those on the list never actually voted. For the 19 who allegedly did, there was not enough information to conclusively prove voter fraud. Even if they did vote illegally, it's 19 votes over seven years. Duran must have hoped for better than that when she set out on her laborious task.

We should keep that history in mind in the coming weeks as the Legislature considers a slew of election reforms proposed by Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham and Secretary of State Maggie Tolouise Oliver. GOP lawmakers will undoubtedly oppose the plan by citing voter fraud claims they have never been able to prove.

But that doesn't mean everything in the proposal is a good idea.

The plan would restore the option for a straight-party ballot, where voters can choose all Republicans or all Democrats by filling in one bubble. We should make it easier to vote, but not so easy that it's mindless.

This has nothing to do with voter suppression and everything to do with gaining a partisan advantage — not just Democrats over Republicans, but also both major parties over any third-party candidate, who would never get considered.

The plan to let 16-year-olds vote would also appear to be more for partisan advantage than addressing any problem. It would put us out of step with federal election laws and bring a slew of new voters into the system with limited life experiences.

But, there are also some terrific proposals in the plan. Making election day a state holiday and extending early voting would allow more voters who work odd hours to participate. Expanding access and deadlines for mail-in ballots and making it easier for eligible voters to register would increase turnout without jeopardizing election security.

The plan would also restore the voting rights of convicted felons who are no longer incarcerated. Those who have completed their sentence should be allowed to fully rejoin and participate in our society.

It would be great if each proposal was voted on individually, but that's not how it usually works. I suspect this will all get lumped into one big bill.

My hope is that there will be vigorous debate in the committee process, and the more obviously partisan proposals are stripped out of the bill. Re-have had access online, not just to listen but to provide testimony. While access to online materials remains limited in New Mexico, improvements are being made.

A good example of transparent work is the Citizens Redistricting Committee, which met with the public (in person and online) around the state in the August-October 2021 period. Through these meetings members of the public were able to voice their concerns about a hugely important issue in representative government and the committee members clearly heard those voices.

Still, there are considerable ways to improve. Viewers of the legislative sessions may not be able to see the materials under discussion. The online audience does not have the access it should have to all of the documents in the meeting room. If slides cannot be shared in real-time, they should be made available after the meeting. More staffing may be needed to assist with the process, including technology.

There are also challenges in viewing live legislative meetings that may not start at the advertised time. Some of this may be unavoidable, but schedules need to be more accurate.

The League of Women Voters of Southern New Mexico agrees with the New Mexico Foundation for Open Government (FOG) in recommending improved and standardized use of technologies to augment in-person meetings of the legislature. FOG has valuable resources for learning individual rights to transparency on their website (nmfog.org).

For those interested in monitoring legislative developments, a starting place is www.nmlegis.gov where calendars, agendas and links to meetings can be accessed. The League's tips for using the legisla-

Irrigation district manager to retire after 4 decades; successor sought

FROM AN ELEPHANT BUTTE IRRIGATION DISTRICT NEWS RELEASE

The Elephant Butte Irrigation District is now seeking applications for replacement of its long-time general treasurer-manager Gary Esslinger, who is preparing to retire after more than 40 years with the district.

During his 33 years as district manager, Esslinger has not only focused on the organization's mission to deliver surface water to its 6,700 farmer members, he has also helped them to adapt and thrive in their quest for efficient water stewardship. He has led the district in forward thinking and planning, improving monitoring and metering methods, collaborating in conservation efforts, educating the public and developing programs like stormwater capture to help offset ongoing drought. Esslinger and the EBID team are dedicated to sustaining agricultural production with data driven tools, technology and a passion to help take the region's agriculture into the future in a sustainable manner.

EBID is currently recruiting qualified applicants to fill the position of treasurer-manager, the district's chief executive officer. This position is appointed by and reports to a nine-member board of directors comprised of district members elected from each region of the district. EBID's board is searching for a leader who can continue Esslinger's strengths of collaborative leadership, board, staff and member engagement, fiscal management and administrative skills, and someone who will further enhance EBID's ability to deliver water efficiently to all members.

Located in New Mexico's Lower Rio Grande Valley, EBID is a federal reclamation project and a political subdivision of the state of New Mexico with responsibility for delivering water to 90,640 acres of farmland in Doña Ana and Sierra counties. District farmers raise a variety of crops, including alfalfa, chile, corn, cotton, lettuce, melons, onions, pecans and wheat.

EBID operates under New Mexico statutes for irrigation districts cooperating with the United States under reclamation laws and other statutes that apply to local government entities. The district repaid its debt to the federal Bureau of Reclamation and now owns and operates the New Mexico portion of the Rio Grande Project.

The treasurer-manager is responsible for continuing to lead efforts to develop a solid foundation for current and future operation of the district. By implementing the policies of the board, the manager will accomplish district goals and objectives and represent EBID to not only its members and employees, but to governmental entities and the public.

The district is searching for a manager who will continue to address the concerns and issues of a diverse group of stakeholders in fulfilling EBID's mission.

Beyond the oversight of personnel, budgets, water rights and infrastructure, this position also requires a forward-thinking approach to develop, evaluate and implement actions and procedures that will abide by state and federal law and best practices for operating an irrigation district while serving district members well into the future.

Esslinger's long history of tactful, proactive leadership has set a precedent of exceptional communication, which will continue to be a requirement for any individual seeking to fill this position. Individuals with a strong fiscal background, including planning, budgeting and strategic investments, with a direct working knowledge of local governmental organizations are encouraged to apply.

A general understanding of water rights and the complexities of managing a water delivery system will be sought after skills for the new treasurer-manager.

A complete job description and application is at www.governmentjobs.com/careers/ebidnm.

The closing deadline to apply is 5 p.m. Feb. 25.

"We are optimistic about the performance of your police department," Gennaco said. The department showed "an extreme willingness to cooperate with us," he said, including IA Lt. Rob Gutierrez and LCPD Chief Miguel Dominguez, City Manager Ifo Pili, city attorney Jennifer Vega and city auditor Viola Perea.

"They were very receptive to our recommendations," Gennaco said, noting that OIR staff did not feel any defensiveness or hostility from LCPD.

OIR is comprised of "independent police practices experts with over 17 years of experience as independent police auditors," Gennaco said.

It is the independent police auditor for eight agencies, mostly based in California, he said. Las Cruces is OIR's only client in New Mexico.

There is "a growing trend ... to have an independent set of eyes and ears to evaluate, assess and comment on police practices, particularly since the George Floyd murder," Gennaco said.

Las Cruces storyteller, activist celebrates her 100th birthday

BULLETIN REPORT

Happy 100th birthday! Celebrating her 100th birthday, Florence Hamilton of Las Cruces received a glass sculpture from the Storytellers of Las Cruces (SLC), of which she is a long-time member and several times past president.

A retired teacher, Hamilton is also a former secretary of the Doña Ana County NAACP.

The birthday celebration was arranged by Hamilton's son, Joel, and his wife, Diana, said SLC member Douglas Jackson.

Storyteller Sarah "Juba" Addison presented the sculpture to Hamilton with a reading of Maya Angelou's poem "Still I Rise," Jackson said.

"Thanks, Miss Florence, for rising and paving the way for me," Addison told Hamilton at the conclusion of her reading.

"Many of us in this room stand on your shoulders. I am where I am today because of you," Addison added about Hamilton's impact.

Even small projects such as planting a tree or installing fence posts can be very dangerous if you do not know what utilities are buried around your dig site. Whether you are a professional excavator or homeowner, you can be fined AND held financially responsible for repair costs to damaged utilities when 811 is not called. How it works:

1. Use white spray paint and/or white marker flags to mark the ground where you plan to dig.
2. Call 811 two business days before beginning your project and they will alert all of the local utilities to respond to your dig site and mark where the utility lines are buried. Utility companies will have two days, once notified, to respond to your dig site.
3. Once utilities are marked, you must adhere to the "18 inch" rule, which is no mechanical digging (tractor, auger, etc.) within 18 inches of the utility markings. If you must dig within 18 inches of a utility marking, it has to be hand dug or vacuum excavated.
4. Once all of the utilities have been marked, you will have 15 days to complete your digging project. If your project is not complete in that time frame, you must call 811 again.

USAF Thunderbirds doing winter training at Spaceport America

FROM RELEASE FROM U.S. AIR FORCE

The U.S. Air Force Air Demonstration Squadron “Thunderbirds” kicked off their first-ever winter training trip at Spaceport America Jan. 10.

“Spaceport America is a unique multipurpose facility for commercial and federal aerospace customers.” said New Mexico Spaceport Authority Executive Director Scott McLaughlin. “Our partnership with U.S. Army White Sands Missile Range allows us to attract a wide range of users for training, test and development, and the great weather in Southern New Mexico is perfect for year-round missions.”

The Thunderbirds’ training season, ranging from November through March, is a time to integrate and synchronize as a team and practice the demonstration. This year, the month-long winter training trip will take place in two locations: Spaceport America, New Mexico, and Fort Huachuca, Arizona.

In previous years, the Thunderbirds hosted training at their home base, Nellis Air Force Base, Nevada. The move was made to increase aerospace opportunity and flexibility for the team’s training needs, while also allowing them to practice in conditions of increasing difficulty.

The team’s first training site is Spaceport America. The location boasts 6,000 square miles of restricted airspace, low population density, a 12,000-foot runway and 340 days of sunshine and low humidity. These favorable conditions, along with entirely dedicated airspace, allow the team to hone the demonstration before moving on to more challenging flying conditions and time constraints like they might see during the show season.

Note that the event is not open to the public. The exercise is for training.

publican lawmakers will be part of that process, and their legitimate concerns over things like the security of mail-in ballots must be addressed.

But when they start talking about all the rampant voter fraud that has taken place in New Mexico elections, we can tune that out, knowing that when they had the chance to prove their case, they couldn’t.

LC legislators provide support to help homeless, abused horses

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

State Rep. Nathan Small and state Sen. Carrie Hamblen, both Las Cruces Democrats, are among those providing financial support for homeless, abused horses.

The groups Animal Protection New Mexico (APNM) and Animal Protection Voters (APV) announced the dispersal of $153,000 in “critical state financial support for homeless and abused horses, donkeys and mules, through the Horse Shelter Rescue Fund (HSRF)” in a Jan. 13 news release.

Ten state-licensed equine shelters serve the entire state by housing hundreds of equines, animals who were surrendered when their families fell on hard times, along with stray, abandoned and abused equines transferred from the New Mexico Livestock Board, the two groups said.

CARRIE

“These shelters’ work saves animals’ lives, keeps communities safer and provides a service for local and state governments, all without any regular government funding, almost solely supported by donors and volunteers,” the news release said.

The pandemic, the ongoing drought and the dramatic rise in hay prices have had a devastating impact on New Mexico’s state-licensed horse shelters, the groups said.

Most of this supporting funds came from a line item included in Senate Bill 377 (the “junior budget”) during the 2021 State legislative session, thanks to support from Small, Hamblen and state Rep. Kristina Ortez, D-Taos. Each legislator committed $50,000 toward HSRF, resulting in a $150,000 total appropriation for equines. The remaining amount distributed from the HSRF came from voluntary tax return check-off donations.

“I am humbled by the work the nine horse shelters that received funding provide,” Hamblen said. “They not only help these dignified creatures live a healthy and nurturing life, but also the healing they naturally provide in therapeutic environments. It’s the least we could do for them given all they give in return.”

In 2013, APV spearheaded the creation of HSRF, a mechanism for horse shelters to receive state funding for their crucial work.

APNM’s mission is to advocate the rights of animals by affecting systemic change, resulting in the humane treatment of all animals.

For more than 40 years, APNM has planned, implemented and succeeded with dynamic programs, projects, services and collaborations that span a broad spectrum of animal protection issues.

Founded in 2002, APV is the leading legislative and political advocacy organization for animal protection in New Mexico.

Powered by grassroots supporters, its mission is to actively promote and support animal-friendly legislation at the state, federal and local levels; build an effective political voice for animal advocacy in New Mexico; and hold New Mexico’s elected officials accountable on animal issues.

For more information: visit www.apnm.org and follow APNM on Facebook @animalprotectionnm, Instagram @animalprotectionnewmexico, Twitter @apnm and YouTube @apnm; and www.apvnm.org, and on Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter.

Governor announces crime legislation for 2022 session

BULLETIN REPORT

Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham was joined Jan. 13 by Attorney General Hector Balderas and others as she announced a comprehensive public safety package ahead of the legislative session.

The governor’s priorities include:

- Imposing a “rebuttable presumption,” which seeks to ensure that those accused of murder, gun crimes, rape or other sex crimes do not pose a danger to the community before being released pending trial, keeping more violent offenders off New Mexico streets.

- Increasing penalties for second-degree murder from 15 years to 18 years and removing the statute of limitations.

- Increasing penalties for gun crimes, including increasing the penalty for unlawful possession of a handgun from misdemeanor to fourth-degree felony; creating a crime of “criminal threat” as a fourth-degree felony; adding penalty of third-degree felony for fleeing law enforcement that results in injury and second-degree felony for fleeing that results in great bodily harm; enhancing penalties for brandishing a firearm in the commission of a drug transaction.

In December, state Sen. Joseph Cervantes of Las Cruces, who is chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said the governor’s anti-crime legislation is in response to an increase in violent crime in Albuquerque that is also “now present in Las Cruces,” he said, and calls for “aggressive action.”

An increase in violent crime in the state, he said, has contributed to a slower population growth in New Mexico than in surrounding states.

The governor is also supporting public safety in New Mexico through a recommendation for nearly 20 percent raises for State Police officers and the creation of a $100 million fund to be used to recruit, train and hire law enforcement at departments around the state.

Community college expands nursing program to Sunland Park

BULLETIN REPORT

Doña Ana Community College (DACC) will expand its nursing program to residents and students in southern Doña Ana County at the Sunland Park Center, 3365 McNutt Road in Sunland Park, DACC said in a news release.

The center recently received approval from the New Mexico Board of Nursing to expand the program, DACC said. Students enrolled in the nursing program at Sunland Park will be able to receive hybrid instruction, including online distance learning and in-person clinicals.

Beginning in the fall of 2022, DACC will offer instruction for students as part of the DACC Nursing Career Ladder Program, which offers licensed practical nurse (LPN) certificates and registered nurse (RN) degrees.

“There is a great need for a nursing program in our south county area,” said DACC Nursing Program Director Cynthia Olivas. “Our Espina campus is nearly 40 miles away from those in the Sunland Park area and this allows us to meet the needs for so many more students.”

DACC also recently received approval from the Texas Board of Nursing to allow students to complete clinical training in El Paso.

Visit dacc.nmsu.edu/nurs/.

DACC to receive $200,000 in scholarships

DACC also announced that it will receive $100,000 in scholarships for the Woody and Gayle Hunt Family Foundation. With a match from the Jon Wynne scholarship endowment at the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico, DACC will receive a total of $200,000 to be disbursed to community college students in increments in four years.

Eligible students for the scholarships must be from Doña Ana County, particularly high-school graduates from the Gadsden Independent School District, DACC said in a news release. Students must also have a declared major in business, information systems, health and public services or technical studies.

“This grant has shown to have a great impact on our students who receive the scholarship,” DACC President Mónica Torres said.

“Between the years of 2013 and 2021, 80 percent of our Hunt Family Foundation scholarship students have had successful outcomes at DACC by either earning certificates or associate degrees or by continuing their education,” Torres added.

The Hunt Family Foundation is a nonprofit in the El Paso region that supports efforts that create economic prosperity and strengthen the competitiveness of the Borderplex region, while providing a better quality of life for its residents, DACC said.

Special education ombud sought for Las Cruces, Gadsden, Hatch school districts

BULLETIN REPORT

New Mexico’s new ombudsman for special education is seeking volunteers in all 89 New Mexico school districts — including Las Cruces Public Schools, the Gadsden Independent School District and Hatch Valley Public Schools in Doña Ana County — to make sure every student needing special education services has an ally to help navigate the system, the New Mexico Public Education Department (NMPED) said in a news release.

“One person cannot do this for the entire state,” said Michelle Tregembo, who was hired in June to run the one-person Office for Special Education Ombud as a division of the New Mexico Developmental Disorders Council (NMDDC). “We would love to have a volunteer ombud in every New Mexico school district so we could serve as the coordinating and training hub.”

The office, which officially opened last month, and the council were established by legislation passed by the New Mexico Legislature in 2021.

Previously, special education students and families relied on a network of advocacy organizations to help them request services, negotiate individual educational plans (IEP) and raise concerns on behalf of a special needs child, the NMPED release said.

“This is a huge step forward to better serving our students with special needs,” NMPED Secretary Kurt Steinhaus said. “While the ombud’s office is not housed within NMPED, we consider her work part of our mission and will do everything we can to promote and support it. For starters, we are encouraging districts and special education directors to get involved and help recruit volunteers for this program.”

The council plans to recruit regional directors, hire more staff and train volunteers with a goal of having an advocate in each district, said NMDDC Director Alice Liu McCoy.

“We’re developing a very rigorous training certification program,” McCoy said.

The only requirement to volunteer as a school district ombudsman is a desire to help special needs students and their families and a flexible schedule to attend IEP meetings, the release said.

“It could be anyone. It could be a parent. It could be a retired teacher. It might also be younger people who are interested in getting into education,” said Tregembo, a former vice principal of Volcano Vista High School in Albuquerque with 25 years’ experience in special education.

In 2020, students with disabilities made up 15 percent of state graduates and they had the lowest graduation rate of any group at 66.4 percent, NMPED said.

The special education ombud serves as an independent advocate and watchdog for public school students and provides comprehensive support for families navigating the special education system.

Duties include ensuring that students and parents receive complete and accurate information about the student’s rights, adequate services to meet the student’s needs and timely responses when they raise questions or express concerns.

Students with disabilities were one of five student groups identified in a 2018 ruling in the Martinez-Yazzie consolidated lawsuit on education equity.

Nearly 300 special education teaching positions statewide remained vacant at the start of the 2021-22 school year, along with 280 vacancies for special education assistants, according to an analysis by New Mexico State University in September.

That represents 28 percent of all teacher vacancies this fall.

"The Golden Palace"

In honor of Betty White, who recently passed away just shy of her 100th birthday, Hulu offers the only season of this 1992-93 CBS comedy that catches up with former Golden Girls Rose, Blanche and Sophia (White, Rue McClanahan, Estelle Getty), now transplanted in South Beach following the remarriage of ex-housemate Dorothy (former cast member Bea Arthur), where they run an art deco hotel called the Golden Palace.

"Movie: I'm Your Man"

From Germany and director Maria Schrader ("Love Life") comes this 2021 romantic comedy about Alma (Maren Eggert, "Giraffe"), a woman who agrees to take part in a study in which she is required to live with Tom (Dan Stevens, "The Guest"), a humanoid robot designed to be the perfect life partner for her. Sandra Huller also stars.

"Movie: Falling for Figaro"

From director Ben Lewin ("The Catcher Was A Spy") comes this 2020 romantic comedy that follows Millie (Danielle Macdonald, "Patti Cake$"), a brilliant young fund manager who quits her job and her relationship with her longtime boyfriend to fulfill her dream of becoming an opera singer — in the Scottish Highlands. Joanna Lumley and Hugh Skinner are also in the cast.

"Movie: Stop and Go"

Mallory Everton ("Studio C," "Freelancers") co-directed, co-wrote and co-stars in this 2021 comedy that casts her and co-writer Whitney Call ("Studio C") as two rudderless sisters who brave a cross-country road trip to rescue their grandmother from a COVID outbreak at her nursing home. Stephen Meek ("Studio C"), Call's husband and co-director of the film, also stars.

Movie: Don't Forget I Love You

On her birthday, Taylor opens a time capsule left by her late mother to be unsealed on this milestone occasion. While she hadn't known what to expect, Taylor is unprepared by what's inside: a list of challenges that are sure to force her out of her comfort zone. Sensing that her late parent knew this would enhance the anxiety-prone Taylor's chances of finding meaningful love, she screws up her courage and begins this adventure. Emilie Ullerup, Clayton James and Daphne Hoskins star in this new romance.

6 p.m. on LIFE
Movie: Vanished: Searching for My Sister

While temporarily watching over her niece while her recently divorced twin sister gets their new home in order, mild-mannered Jada (Tatyana Ali, in a dual role) grows concerned when she doesn't hear anything from sister Kayla for a few days. She reports her twin missing, but Jada doesn't sense the police are taking the situation seriously, so she assumes the identity of her wild-child twin in an attempt to discover Kayla's whereabouts. Her ruse takes her into a shocking netherworld.

6 p.m. on SCIENCE
What on Earth?
Satellite images capture a bizarre series of man-made lines in the remote Arctic wilderness of Svalbard in a new episode called "Nazi Arctic Station." When experts investigate, they are surprised to uncover patterns reminiscent of WWII German weather stations, along with a possible link to the Nazis' infamous "wolfpacks."

8 p.m. on TRAV
Kindred Spirits

With its rich history dating back to the Colonial Era, the state of Vermont isn't lacking for spooky locales, but the new episode "Carriage House Creeper" finds Amy Bruni, Adam Berry and Chip Coffey investigating the second oldest structure in the state. The property has an extended reputation as being haunted, but it has new owners now, and they're frankly freaked out by the paranormal activity they claim to experience on a regular basis.

9 p.m. on HBO
Movie: Nobody

After he and his family are the victims of an unnerving home invasion, bored family man Hutch Mansell (Bob Odenkirk) feels compelled to return to his previous secret life as a CIA assassin in filmmaker Ilya Naishuller's 2021 thriller. Unfortunately, that decision thrusts Hutch into the crosshairs of a vengeful drug lord. Despite a theatrical run that was drastically curtailed by the COVID-19 pandemic, the film received a mostly warm reception from critics, who also praised Odenkirk's transformation into an improbable action hero.

Dirty Jobs

In a new episode called "Rock Sucker; Mountain Carver," host Mike Rowe uses a massive vacuum device to suck the rocks off an industrial roof. Later, he travels to the Black Hills of the Dakotas to help carve the largest monument in the world, an effigy of Crazy Horse. Both stories involve several generations working together to pass on their life's ambitions.

6 p.m. on LIFE
Movie: Deadly House Call

A busy working mother finds herself so overwhelmed at her job that she is forced to hire a live-in nurse to care for her wealthy father, who is suffering from early-onset dementia. While the daughter is distracted by professional demands at the office, though, the seductive caregiver launches a campaign to seize the family fortune back on the home front. Joanne Jansen, Neville Edwards and Sierra Woodriddle star in this 2021 melodrama.

7 p.m. on KVIA
Celebrity Wheel of Fortune

For tonight's new episode, hosts Pat Sajak and Vanna White welcome a new trio of celebrity contestants who spin this show's iconic Wheel in a bid to win money for their favored charities. Tonight's players include celebrity chef Curtis Stone, playing for Chrysalis, a non-profit organization that helps homeless and low-income people find employment; actor Haley Joel Osment, representing Los Angeles Regional Food Bank, and actress Tatyana Ali, playing for Commonsense Childbirth, a midwifery school.

7 p.m. on AMC
The Walking Dead: Origins

This new limited series, which originally was shown on the streaming service AMC Plus, explores the journey of some of the most celebrated characters on "The Walking Dead," with each episode charting the story of the zombie apocalypse from the perspective of a single character. Interviews with the actors are interwoven with clips from pivotal moments in the series. The premiere, "Daryl's Story," chronicles the epic saga of Daryl Dixon, as told by Norman Reedus, the actor who became an instant fan favorite through his performance in the role.

7 p.m. on TNT
Claws

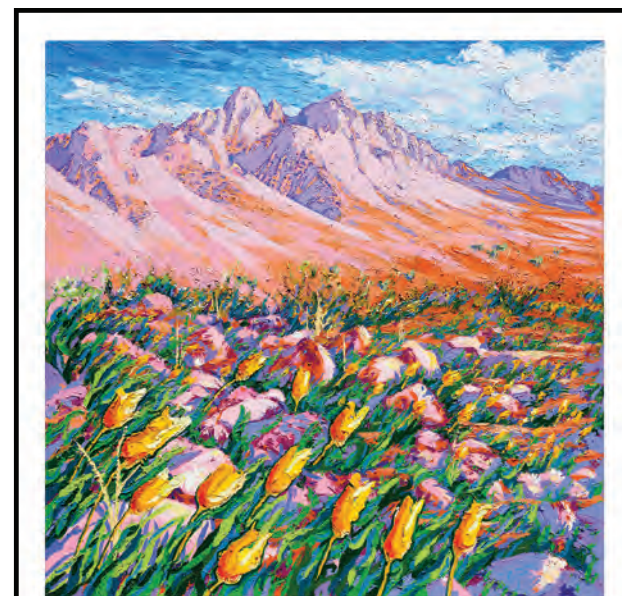

Having realized that Tony (guest star Anthony K. Hyatt) is really an undercover DEA agent, Desna (Niecy Nash-Betts) realizes she is going to have to rally her crew if she wants to avoid being taken down by the Feds in a new episode called "Chapter Eight: Reckoning." Elsewhere, when Jenn (Jenn Lyon) overdoses, the crew begins to uncover buried truths that threaten to unravel their usually tight-knit bond. Judy Reyes, Carrie Preston and Karrueche Tran also star.

10 p.m. on SHOW
Billions

As this hit financial drama opens Season 6, longtime antagonist Bobby "Axe" Axelrod has left the building. The character's off-camera alter-ego, actor Damian Lewis, opted not to renew his contract, citing a desire to spend more time with his family in the U.K. following the death of his wife, Helen McCrory, last April. Filling that nefarious void is new series regular Corey Stoll, who joined "Billions" last season in the recurring role of self-made billionaire Mike Prince. Paul Giamatti, Maggie Siff, David Costabile and Asia Kate Dillon also return.

11:02 p.m. on HBO
The Righteous Gemstones

Their heads still spinning from Eli's (John Goodman) revelation, Jesse and Kelvin (Danny McBride, Adam Devine) hatch a scheme to put their father in his place in the new episode "As to How They Might Destroy Him." Elsewhere, Judy (Edi Patterson) clashes with her in-laws as BJ's (Tim Baltz) baptism approaches, and Baby Billy (Walton Goggins) struggles to keep control of his own growing family.

John Ortiz

7 p.m. on KVIA2 March

This new one-hour docuseries explores the marching band culture that thrives on many HBCU (Historically Black Colleges and Universities) campuses. That world is viewed primarily through the marching band of Houston's Prairie View A&M University, where the members devote themselves to both their musical passions and academic life. Among the featured personalities are Tre, a junior bass drummer and new father; Martayvia, the senior piccolo section leader who must make some amends after a recent falling-out with her peers; and Kaylan, senior captain of the Black Foxes dance team.

9:01 p.m. on KVIA Promised Land

ABC has released relatively few details about this new drama and its characters, but then again, perhaps painting in broad strokes is the proper way to describe what the network says is "an epic, generation-spanning drama" about two Latinx families who become bitter rivals for power and control in the Sonoma Valley of California. The cast includes John Ortiz, Cecilia Suárez, Augusto Aguilera, Christina Ochoa, Mariel Molino and Bellamy Young ("Scandal").

11 p.m. on VICE
In My Own World

This offbeat new docuseries takes viewers inside the unlikely communities of like-minded but very quirky individuals living on the fringes of mainstream society. 17 strategic business pivots to make in the time of Covid-19

BY SUSAN FRIESEN

The coronavirus epidemic has created many challenges for businesses. This means your business needs a plan so you can prepare for future growth and success. Here is a Covid-19 checklist of 17 strategic business pivots you can follow and implement right now to help your business.

Your Coronavirus Essentials Checklist

Just like that we woke up in a different world, the coronavirus epidemic has completely changed our lives and transformed the way we do business.

For many, this can be an incredibly frightening time to be a business owner.

You worry about the health of your employees and the business, the bills that keep coming, your income and family obligations.

But rather than let worries overwhelm them, smart small business owners can use this opportunity to plan and prepare for future growth and success.

That's why we've created a Covid-19 checklist to help you make the most of this uncertain time:

1) Announce changes in business hours.

Are you an essential business that is staying open? You may have shorter business hours to allow more time for cleaning, or senior hours where high-risk and elderly customers can come and safely shop with fewer customers.

Post any new business hours on the front of your physical location and share them on the home page of your website.

Don't forget to update your hours on your social media profiles too as well as your Google Business listing so everyone can stay up to date.

2) Pivot to meet the current needs of your customers.

Find creative ways to do business with customers who are at home on quarantine. Are you offering pickup or delivery? Let customers know what you are doing to accommodate them during this new, and hopefully temporary, normal.

For example, amid shutdowns and shelter-in-place orders, most car dealerships will deliver your new car to you. Similarly, service-based businesses can pivot their offerings to meet the demands of customers who are staying home.

One example is the landing page we designed for Barbara Katnich, an interior designer with Fresh Approach Designs.

She acknowledges that with all this time on your hands you are probably ready for a design change.

Then she walks you through the process of how she can work with you virtually while you are at home.

The advantage of a landing page is that it's quick, easy, and allows you to speak to the specific needs of customers at this time without having to redesign your whole website.

3) Provide ways customers can still support you.

If you operate a service-based business like a restaurant or a salon and have been forced to close your doors, you may want to consider offering online sales of gift certificates.

Encourage your customers to buy a certificate now so they can treat themselves and redeem it when the virus outbreak has slowed, and their self-quarantine period is over.

This can help maintain sales for you, while giving your customers something fun and exciting to look forward to.

4) Communicate with your customers.

People want to know if and how your business has changed in light of the pandemic. Assure them their health and safety are your #1 concern and tell them what you're doing to ensure a safe shopping experience.

Explain any extra precautions you're taking to disinfect and clean and let them know how you're promoting social distancing as a small business owner.

5) Announce any new services you're offering.

Whether you sell food or fashion, are you offering pickup or delivery? The more ways you can accommodate your customers during this new normal, the better for them and fewer financial losses you'll experience.

Share the news on your website and on your social media accounts like what Lorie Brown did. She saw a huge need to support nurses and healthcare practitioners during this crisis and created the Covid-19 Survival Guide.

She asked us to help her create a multi-guest interview series that delivers daily videos to subscribers, all for free.

6) Ditch out-of-date information and broken links.

It's the perfect time to step back and take a long hard look at your website.

Are there any typos? Did a team member featured on the About Us page quit? Are certain articles no longer relevant?

Maybe your site is too far outdated and needs a complete overhaul. Don't try to go it alone, it's best to hire a professional web development firm who can assist in ensuring your site is professionally done to give your business the best exposure once this crisis is over.

7) Lighten the (remote) workload.

Give your staff easy ways to track their hours like the free time-tracking tool Toggl that we use. Encourage team communication with tools like Zoom, Slack or Discord. Look into team collaboration tools like Monday and Asana to manage project workflows.

You can see more team tools in our article: Tips on Managing Your Workforce Remotely.

8) Get lean and mean.

You're going to have to accept that things may be tight for a while. Are there some non-essentials you could cut from your small business budget?

Reevaluate the services you use to make sure you have the best value for your money, but don't tighten your belt so much that you miss out on marketing or business opportunities.

9) Plan your editorial calendar.

You want to provide your customers with informative, valuable content that inspires them and builds your expertise and credibility in their eyes.

If you have some downtime now, invest it in your future content. Look at what products and services you'll want to promote down the road and plan some engaging content and marketing materials to support your efforts.

10) Learn a new skill.

Do you want to learn to use Instagram more effectively? Maybe you want to master your video marketing skills or learn a new language to better communicate with your customers.

If you can slow down a bit, grab the chance to read, learn and grow! This might be a good time to check out our AMPLiFY! Business Academy where members get instant access to a large library of training videos from social media marketing to lead generation and content marketing.

11) Make your employees feel safe.

Always communicate your Covid-19 plans to workers around sick days and compensation. If your employees have to come into work, assure them how you're keeping their area clean and safe.

They are looking to you to feel taken care of during this scary time. That said, don't lie or withhold negative information; if you can't give bonuses or have to lay off staff, let them know as soon as possible and support them as best you can.

12) Attract more traffic to your site.

It's always a great idea to add fresh, useful content to your website. Your visitors will appreciate solution-focused content that honestly speaks to why they need your product or service.

Focus on writing some keyword-rich articles to boost your search engine rankings.

13) Grow your social media following.

You may be self-isolating, but you can connect online. Message people who liked or commented on your social media posts to start a conversation.

Be active in the Facebook

Groups where your ideal clients hang out. Be visible and helpful (not salesy and annoying) while you are making new connections and offering people a human connection.

14) Segment your email list.

Over time, email lists can get messy. Small business owners may lack the resources to write targeted messages for each group of potential clients (e.g., hot prospects, warm leads, new prospects, business colleagues).

Focus on segmenting your email list to make people feel like you're speaking directly to them and offering them unique content.

15) Develop a new product or service.

Maybe you have a business idea that's been on the back burner these past few years. Or, maybe you've identified a product or service that would really help people during or after the Covid-19 pandemic.

Check out what Heather Wilson has done to meet today's demand of using Facebook Groups to a businesses advantage. She quickly created an online course called Create, Fill, and Engage Your Facebook Group.

16) Perform competitive research.

Staying on top of what your competitors are doing gives you an incredible advantage, whether you run an established small business or are developing a new product or service.

Invest some time now in better understanding your competitors. How is their messaging different from yours? What are their strengths and weaknesses? How do they engage with their social media followers?

17) Share the love.

Don't miss the chance to strengthen your most important relationships. Think about the people who are important to you (family, friends, customers, vendors, mentors, partners) and tell them what you most appreciate about them.

Stay Engaged with Customers and Keep Sales Alive During Covid-19.

While the Covid-19 pandemic is unprecedented and uncertain, let's try to see these slow times for small businesses as an opportunity to think, review and plan for future growth and success.

If you need assistance, we can help you design a landing page to help you transition through and support your customers effectively at this time. Together we'll find ways to boost dwindling sales due to this unforeseen economic crisis.

We wish everyone health and safety during this unusual time.

*To your success,
Susan*

FROM OUR U.S. SENATOR

Investing in Southern New Mexico

BY U.S. SENATOR MARTIN HEINRICH

As we begin a new year, we still have plenty of work ahead of us to help New Mexico communities recover and to rebuild our economy. But I'm confident that the historic, new investments that we passed last year and the transformative policies we're still advancing will help us meet the moment with real solutions to the challenges we face. I have done everything in my power to steer resources to our state so we can rebuild our economy and come back stronger than ever before.

The American Rescue Plan that we passed in March delivered over $1 billion to help New Mexico's schools reopen for in-person instruction. It included $1,400 in direct payments to eligible New Mexicans, millions of dollars in critical economic relief for local restaurants and small business owners across our state, and a historic working class tax cut. Nearly every child in New Mexico has benefited from the expanded Child Tax Credit and its new monthly payments that helped families keep food on the table and cover the costs of raising children.

New Mexico has long been held back by a systemic lack of investment in our infrastructure. That's why I worked to pass the historic Bipartisan Infrastructure Law that will deliver more than $3.7 billion in funding to New Mexico over the next five years to build new roads and bridges, improve our clean water infrastructure, install a new electric vehicle charging network, and connect many more

HEINRICH

New Mexicans to affordable, high-speed internet. These infrastructure investments are on a scale not seen in our state since the construction of I-10, I-25, and I-40, and they will set a strong foundation for long-term economic competitiveness and success.

Before the onset of the pandemic, outdoor recreation activities—from hunting and fishing to wildlife photography—were fueling some of New Mexico's fastest economic growth. I am focused on advancing key protections, opening up more public access, and steering new investments to our public lands so we can build our outdoor recreation industry back better than ever before.

Last year alone, the newly established National Parks and Public Land Legacy Restoration Fund that I fought to establish as part of the bipartisan Great American Outdoors Act delivered $60 million to New Mexico's national parks, monuments, forests, and wildlife refuges. That includes more than $15 million for the Bosque del Apache to make repairs to its roads and trails and finally take on long-needed major renovations to its main office and visitor center. New Mexico's national forests—including the Gila and the Lincoln—received $12 million to replace roads and bridges, restore trail networks, and rebuild campgrounds.

Last year, I also welcomed a new expanded hiking access route into Achenbach Canyon in the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument. I reintroduced the M.H. Dutch Salmon Greater Gila Wild and Scenic Rivers Act to provide southwestern New Mexico's greater Gila River watershed with our nation's highest form of protection and stewardship. And I also partnered with Republican colleagues in the Senate to introduce bipartisan bills to invest in wildlife conservation and species recovery and to make it easier to navigate the permitting process to access our public lands.

Finally, I was proud to support New Mexico's military installations and national security missions by securing critical investments in the annual National Defense Authorization Act. That includes $2 million in funding to speed the construction of a new radar detection technology testing facility at Holloman Air Force Base, $5 million to conduct additional hypersonic test and evaluation at White Sands Missile Range, and $29 million to accelerate construction of the Missile Assembly Support Facility at WSMR. These provisions, among many others, will benefit New Mexico's economy and advance our state's position as a leader in national security for years to come.

My office also continues to help constituents on a one-on-one basis with federal agencies, including keeping our promise to our veterans and service members so they can access their VA benefits, helping small business owners navigate economic relief programs, and assisting seniors with their Social Security benefits. This past year, my staff processed over 3,000 individual cases that resulted in over $870,000 recovered for New Mexicans. If you or your family needs help, contact my Las Cruces office at 575-535-6561 or visit my website at Heinrich.Senate.Gov.

The pros and cons of a flexible work schedule post-Covid

BY BRIAN MEERT

Now, as more people get vaccinated and the world reopens, many businesses are trying to learn from all of the changes they had to make during 2020. The future of work post-pandemic is unique, with many businesses remaining 100% remote or adopting a more hybrid approach than they had at the beginning of last year

The Covid-19 pandemic impacted work in ways that nobody saw coming. Millions of people lost their jobs either temporarily or permanently as companies closed for good, shut down for the time being or trimmed back their workforce. Other employees were forced to create at-home work setups without advance warning, figuring out how to work full-time while the rest of the family, kids and pets included, were also stuck in the house. And many had to continue going into work, performing on the front lines as grocery store clerks and medical professionals, constantly exposing themselves to the threat of the virus.

As with anything, there are pros and cons to these changes. Let's explore them.

Pro: Employees Have More Options to Take Care of Themselves

Post-COVID, employers are setting up support to better protect employees, especially as the health crisis continues to impact us all. This support strives to help and improve all areas of an employee's health, including mental, physical and financial well-being. Examples of enhanced support offered by employers include:

- Child care help
- Community relief funds
- Financial aid
- Flexible hours of operation
- Improved sick leave
- No-cost community services

A big part of this involves creating schedules and systems that allow employees to be flexible so they can care for themselves and their families while still taking care of their job responsibilities and being productive.

Con: You (Probably) Can't Hire Employees From Just Anywhere

If you've decided that your company is still going to have in-person meetings or other types of work gatherings, you can't have employees who are dispersed around the country or world...or even the state, probably. If employees are required to attend live meetings, breakout groups or other types of business gatherings, they have to live within a reasonable distance to travel there.

However, if you're set on hiring remote workers from farther away – which is a great way to dip into a larger pool of talent – you can consider letting them virtually attend meetings. You can also set up satellite groups if there are a number of remote workers in the same geographic area.

Pro: Gig Work is More Popular Than Ever

During the pandemic, all sorts of workers lost their jobs, and contractors were no different. Furthermore, some of those who lost traditional jobs opted to go the gig industry work, becoming contractors and freelancers who offered the skills they honed during their time as traditional workers.

While a number of organizations reduced their between three and five days a week without a loss of productivity. While this is around five times more remote work than pre-pandemic and about the same as remote work during the pandemic, it's possibly much less than people assume. For job seekers who feel that any and every industry, company and brand is now adopting full-time remote work, they'll be sorely disappointed as they begin hunting for their next opportunity.

Furthermore, some types of jobs that can technically be handled remotely are still more effective when done in person. For example, brainstorming with the rest of the team, making critical decisions for the company and providing difficult-to-deliver feedback in a sensitive way are all best when done in person.

Pro: Flexible Work is More Enjoyable for Employees

It's pretty obvious why flexible work is more enjoyable for most employees. They can do things like set their own schedule, attend to personal and family matters and run out for errands when they want to (assuming that type of flexibility is okay with the employer). When employees are given deliverables to work for instead of strict schedules to adhere to, many of them will be able to turn in excellent work without risking burnout or getting complacent at their job.

For some companies, the idea of having employees work simply to work, regardless of their actual workload or level of efficiency, is an antiquated idea. And when employees can run their life while remaining dedicated to their job, they're happier overall, which means higher-quality work is turned in.

Cons: The Boundaries Can Get Fuzzy

Of course, there's an equal and opposite issue to the benefit described above: All of that flexibility can leave the lines between professionalism and flexibility blurry. If you require employees to clock in, clock out and be present during specific work hours, you'll have to find a way to ensure they're doing just that – otherwise, some may take advantage of their supposed freedom. And setting deliverables instead of work hours means that employees actually have to deliver quality work on time, checking in as the project progresses to report the work they've done. This can require a lot of work on the part of the business to create, set up and explain the flexible rules, what they don't mean and how everything will be tracked.

Covid anxiety and 6 ways to heal

Covid has hit us hard. It has taken a drastic toll on the well-being of people leading to surge in Covid anxiety cases.

How is Covid-19 taking a toll on the mental health of people?

Everything seems to be normal from the surface. People are managing their businesses as and when the curfews open, corporate employees are working from home, from the comfort of their houses, and students are attending online lectures and classes.

Everyone is feeling anxious and stuck because of not being able to meet their friends, excessive workloads, or uncertain careers.

People are also finding it difficult to practice mindfulness or pursue their hobbies in their free time. Financial and economic instability and widespread consumption of negative news are prominent factors adding to anxiety.

The uncertainty is causing various fears among populations and it is completely okay if they are unable to handle it. Everyone is worried about what is going to happen in the next hour.

Is feeling anxious okay?

Considering that we are in the middle of a worldwide pandemic, it's okay to not feel great every morning.

Feeling anxious is an expected reaction to the pandemic. But feeling anxious and stressed daily can take a harmful toll on one's mental well-being.

The first step is to acknowledge that you are feeling stressed and fearful. This is something that helps a great deal. Even during these tough times, we have to be true to ourselves.

How to deal with Covid Anxiety?

We can practice a few healthy ways to cope with all the panic and stress due to the uncertainty. Here's a list of 6 effective ways to cope up with Covid anxiety.

1. De Clutter

Our minds can feel full and messed at times. Decluttering our surroundings can help one to feel fresh and new. This may sometimes help to think positively about situations.

2. Social Media Breaks

News and other information are the only way to keep ourselves informed of the situation going on but it is okay to take periodic breaks. Social media detox is very important. Our mind needs a break from processing the bulk of information.

3. Self Management

This can be done in numerous ways such as meditating, exercising, taking deep breaths, eating healthy food, avoiding alcohol, and adequate amounts of sleep.

4. Unwind

Invest your time listening to your favorite playlists, making your favorite dish, practising your old hobbies. Give yourself a break from your daily schedules.

5. Connect with Friends

Some people find it easier to vent out to any of their close ones in these anxiety-provoking times. Don't bottle up your emotions and worries. But before talking to a friend or close one, asking about their situation is also very important.

6. Connect with Organizations

Due to increasing awareness about Covid anxiety since this pandemic, people have started recognizing organizations and reaching out to them for help. Asking for help when you are not able to figure out emotions is completely okay. Acknowledge and reach out.

The USHCC Educational Fund joins forces with Grubhub to support Hispanic-owned restaurants impacted by Covid

The United States Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Education Fund, a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization affiliated with the United States Hispanic Chamber of Commerce (USHCC), and Grubhub, a leading U.S. food-ordering and delivery marketplace, have opened applications for the USHCC & Grubhub Restaurant Small Business Grant Program. The program is supported by proceeds from Grubhub's Donate the Change Program, and grants will range from $5,000 to $10,000.

Nearly 300 grants will be given to eligible Hispanic-owned restaurants across the country, including in Philadelphia, Boston, New York, Los Angeles, Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Chicago, El Paso, Phoenix, San Diego and San Jose.

"As our restaurant industries work to re-open their doors and look towards recovering, they'll need access to the resources and tools offered by the USHCC national network, now more than ever before," said Ramiro A. Cavazos, President & CEO, USHCC. "Many of the Hispanic-owned restaurants who managed to stay open and not completely shut down, are looking for guidance and support as we work to jumpstart the economy and get people back to work. We are excited to partner with Grubhub on this important initiative and applaud these efforts to support minority-owned restaurants who are struggling so much during the pandemic."

"Small businesses have faced a disproportionately difficult 18 months, and it's crucial that we support them to ensure they remain part of the fabric in our communities," said Kevin Kearns, senior vice president of restaurants at Grubhub.

United Way of Southwest New Mexico provides technological support to local nonprofits

Grant funding opens the door to new opportunities for nonprofit organizations which is why United Way of Southwest New Mexico recently provided a new grant opportunity with the 2021 Technology Fund. The goal for this funding opportunity was to assist with digital equity to address challenges in underserved communities in Southwest New Mexico focused on basic needs, education, and financial stability.

Technology grants are useful for developing or enhancing an organization's technological infrastructure. In today's technology-driven environment, nonprofits rely on data to drive everything from fundraising campaigns to policy decisions. That's why technology plays such an important role in an organization's mission. With technology-focused grants, a nonprofit can build or improve upon an existing technological infrastructure.

"As technology continues to impact every aspect of our lives, there's a real danger of more people getting left behind. We cannot allow that to happen," stated Amanda Morales, Chief Executive Officer. "By providing this funding opportunity, United Way of Southwest New Mexico is assisting to break down the digital divide that can prevent so many from accessing the basic needs, education and financial stability services they need to live a quality life." Morales continued.

Requirements for this funding opportunity included: organizations must be recognized by the IRS as tax-exempt under Internal Revenue Code Section 501(c)(3) and must be located in and directly serving the communities of Dona Ana, Grant, Hidalgo, Luna, Otero, and Sierra Counties. All applications were submitted using the online application form on the United Way of Southwest New Mexico website. Highest priority was given to proposals that clearly articulated the planned impact of their efforts, as well as the metrics by which the impact is measured.

Eligible expenses included computer equipment, internet access expenses, printers/supplies, cameras, software subscriptions, etc. needed to successfully provide services to organization's clientele.

This funding opportunity was received very warmly with an unexpected return of over 25 applications from nonprofit organizations, churches, and coalitions. Just one example of an application that was submitted included a request for an organization to start a new program focused on at-risk youth in their community. The youth would have access to a studio where they could express their creativity by creating videos. By creating together, the youth will be empowered, learn to work together and be provided the space access to technology that would not be found at home. The technology will also be utilized to assist with accessing homework, information on scholarships, workforce positions, and college applications.

The 2021 Technology fund will contribute to the United Way of Southwest New Mexico's goal of helping bridge needs with resources and solutions—specifically related to, basic needs, education, and financial stability for under-served communities in Southwest New Mexico.

For more information regarding the Technology Fund, please contact Amanda Morales at impact@uwswnm.org or call the United Way office at 575-524-7561.

"We are proud to work with the USHCC and provide this much-needed support to Hispanic-owned restaurants in their recovery efforts."

Throughout Hispanic Heritage Month, the USHCC was named the official partner of Grubhub's Donate the Change program, which has raised tens of millions of dollars for organizations in need since launching in late 2018. The partnership welcomed Grubhub and Seamless diners to opt-in, round up their order total and donate the difference, with the company matching eligible donations from Grubhub+ members.

Through January 26, the USHCC & Grubhub Restaurant Small Business Grant Program will accept applications from eligible Hispanic-owned restaurants. To qualify for a grant, Hispanic-owned restaurants must satisfy the following requirements: The restaurant must be majority Hispanic-owned and have an active EIN number, have less than 20 full-time employees and have been in operation for at least nine months from the date that they complete the application form. All U.S. markets are eligible to apply including Puerto Rico. Questions about the application and program should be sent to press@ushcc.com.

Applications are now open. Apply before Jan. 26, 2022, to see if your restaurant qualifies. Use this link online to apply 2022 USHCC & Grubhub Restaurant Small Business Grant Application - Formstack.

Let's keep it local, New Mexico

Good ideas often start in your own backyard. Almost two decades before our legislature passed a statewide clean indoor air law, the City of Albuquerque implemented smoke-free air policies to protect residents from secondhand smoke in all workplaces. The importance of local leadership is still clear: many cities moved more quickly than states to prevent the spread of Covid-19 by implementing stay-at-home orders, closing non-essential businesses and public parks.

"Local governments are uniquely positioned to meet the needs of the people in their communities. They should be able to pass laws proven to promote good health, well-being and equity, and New Mexicans agree," says Dr. Robert Taylor, President of the American Heart Association board of directors in Albuquerque. The American Heart Association (AHA) believes the ongoing epidemic of e-cigarette use by teenagers can be effectively addressed by cities and counties. This is a serious public health crisis that has spread to every high and middle school in New Mexico. "Big Vape" and "Big Tobacco" have addicted a new generation of youth to nicotine and continue to do so unabated as the country is focused on the Covid-19 pandemic.

The tobacco industry spends almost $37 million annually on advertising in New Mexico, resulting in $844 million in annual spending from smoking-related illnesses ($222.8 million through Medicaid). Corporate lobbyists have spent millions more to convince state legislators to stop communities from passing policies that protect the health of their residents.

A 2020 American Heart Association-commissioned public opinion poll found 63 percent of New Mexico voters support communities being able to regulate tobacco locally. This poll was conducted by Brian Sanderoff of Research and Polling Inc. The American Heart Association wants everyone to benefit from smart and effective policies. But when corporate lobbyists convince state legislators to block local governments from passing laws, it can hurt communities most where the need is greatest.

Nearly 25 percent of New Mexico high school students use e-cigarettes and 700 youth become new daily smokers each year. Each year, 2,600 New Mexican adults die from smoking and 40,000 kids now under 18 in New Mexico will ultimately die prematurely from smoking. A new research conducted by AHA shows using E-cigarettes damage arteries and blood vessels among young adults. To learn more about the study, go online and use this link:

<https://newsroom.heart.org/news/e-cigarette-users-experience-vascular-damage-similar-to-that-of-smokers-of-combustible-cigarettes?preview=9f28>

This epidemic could be reversed if cities and counties are given the opportunity to make decisions that best serve the health of their communities.

movie review

BY JAY BOBBIN

'Taxi Driver' remains a powerful ride

Certain movie-character names stand as immediate identifiers of what the person and film are all about, and Travis Bickle is one of them.

Any remotely familiar with motion pictures will recognize that as Robert De Niro's role director Martin Scorsese's searing 1976 drama "Taxi Driver," which currently is streaming on Netflix. The Paul Schrader-written story of a disenfranchised loner who finds acceptance through unusual means has retained its power, painting a haunting portrait of the New York era while telling the tale of one man's very specific journey.

Bickle finds work as the late-shift cabbie of the title, and he has definite thoughts about the social decay he sees around him, underscored visually (and brilliantly, by cinematographer Michael Chapman) by the steam that rises from the street grates, create a sort of curtain over the city. His hopes for something better are personified by an attractive political-campaign worker (Cybill Shepherd) who is somewhat bemused, and ultimately turned off, by his efforts to court her.

Soon, though, Bickle finds another purpose in Iris (Jodie Foster), a young prostitute he envisions rescuing from that occupation. Turning himself into her avenging angel of sorts, he changes his physical appearance, fashioning his hair into a mohawk ... and moving toward turning his increasingly violent fantasies into reality. Bickle's resistance to being questioned is crystallized by his iconic line, "You talkin' to me?"

In a decade of upheaval that was filled with movies that questioned authority, "Taxi Driver" was one of the most disturbing examples, particularly coming from a major studio (Columbia Pictures). It undoubtedly went a long way toward establishing Scorsese's career and it surely centered De Niro as a versatile performer, coming as it did on the heels of his Oscar win as the young Don Corleone in "The Godfather, Part II."

“The Accidental Wolf”

“Succession” actor Arian Moayed is the creative force behind this thriller series about Katie (Kelli O’Hara, “13 Reasons Why”), a Manhattan housewife and mother who takes action when she receives a mysterious call from a panicked man who evidently is fighting for survival and pleading for the life of his pregnant, wounded wife. Raul Castillo, Mike Doyle, Judith Ivey and Denis O’Hare also star. (ORIGINAL)

“Fastest Cars in the Dirty South”

As the title suggests, speed and a lot of track dust are at the center of this unscripted series from MotorTrend that’s set in Muscle Shoals, Ala., where Eric Malone, Brant Arnold and Team 256 rescue cars from the junkyard and turn them into low-cost, high-performing rust buckets, which they grudge-race across the Southeast. (ORIGINAL)

“Movie: Needle in a Timestack”

Set in the near future, this love story from director John Ridley (“Jimi: All Is by My Side”) tells the story of Nick (Leslie Odom Jr., “Hamilton”) and Janine (Cynthia Erivo, “Harriet”), who live in marital bliss until Janine’s ex-husband (Orlando Bloom, the “Lord of the Rings” movies) warps time to try to tear them apart using Nick’s college girlfriend (Freida Pinto, “Slumdog Millionaire”). (ORIGINAL)

“The Legend of Vox Machina”

This animated fantasy-adventure series for adults follows Vox Machina, a band of misfits with a fondness for boozing and brawling, who embark on a quest to save the realm of Exandria from dark magical forces in an effort to pay off their mounting bar tab. Laura Bailey (“Injustice”), Taliesin Jaffe, Ashley Johnson and Liam O’Brien head the voice cast. (ORIGINAL)

‘Optimist of the Decade’ Jack Barclay still going strong at 85

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

“‘Somebody has to do it,’ that’s my motto,” said long-time Las Cruces Optimist Club member and community volunteer Jack Barclay. “If there’s nobody else to do it, then I will.”

Barclay, 85, went to his first Optimist Club meeting with the late Terry Edwards and joined the club more than 30 years ago. He’s been club president and district lieutenant governor, and he is the district-governor elect, taking that position next Oct. 1, with responsibility for club building and organizing district conferences throughout New Mexico and El Paso County. As governor, he also wants to sponsor an international Optimist Club in a foreign country to be selected next year.

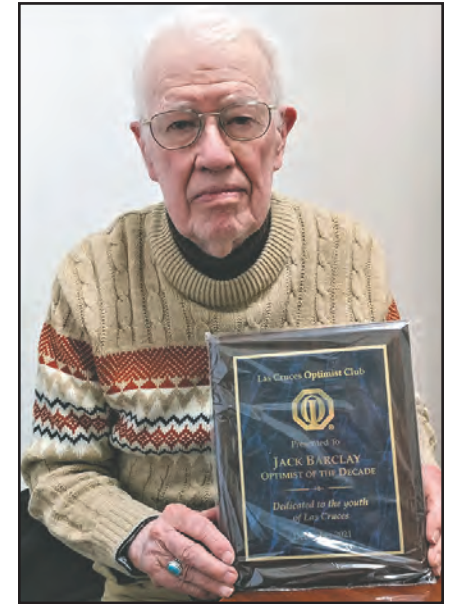

The Las Cruces Optimist Club is one of the best and largest in the state, Barclay said, and he’s been a big part of the club’s success. In 2021, for example, Barclay sold and delivered about 250 poinsettias – about one-quarter of the club’s total sales during its annual holiday fundraiser. That’s just one reason the club voted Barclay Optimist of the Decade in December.

He also has volunteered for KRWG-TV for many years and was active in Toastmasters for two decades. Barclay also has a long history as a local Boy Scout leader. He also helps to raise and lower the flag at Veterans Memorial Park in Las Cruces on federal holidays.

Barclay’s grandfather, John Archibald Barclay I, was born in Scotland and stowed away on a tramp steamer at a very young age. He landed in New York and became a newspaper editor and business owner, Jack Barclay said. Jack’s father, John A. Barclay II, graduated from the U.S. Military Academy and became commanding officer at Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Alabama, where Wernher von Braun led the U.S. Army’s rocketry development program.

Now, Barclay is “more or less retired,” he said. “I don’t think I’ll ever retire completely,” he said.

A stroke three years ago left Barclay with a slight limp but hasn’t slowed him down. He and his service dog, Honey, a rescue, can be seen doing good works all over Las Cruces. “I’ll never quit,” Barclay said.

Jack Barclay was named the Optimist of the Decade by the club.

Jack Barclay served in the 163rd Infantry Battalion, and marched in President Dwight Eisenhower’s first inaugural parade in 1953.

Born in Boston, Massachusetts, Jack Barclay lived in Panama and in China growing up. He earned a bachelor of science degree from The Citadel in 1961 and came to Las Cruces that same year to begin work as a chemist at White Sands Missile Range. Barclay earned a second BS, this time in Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Management from New Mexico State University, where he also earned a BA in economics. Barclay has been a financial planner, a computer programmer and analyst at NMSU, president of Barclay Beatty Brewing, Inc. and general manager of Old Mesilla Pastry Café during a long career.

NMSU Art Museum re-opening with focus on Blacks, minorities

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

Artist Nikesha Breeze's exhibition "Four Sites of Return: Ritual, Remembrance, Reparation & Reclamation," and artist Jackie Mitchell Edwards' "Remembered Landscapes: The Sacred Space of Home," will be featured during the grand re-opening of the University Art Museum at New Mexico State University, UAM Director Marisa Sage said.

The exhibitions open at 5:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 21, 2022, at UAM, Devasthali Hall, 1308 University Ave. (where University intersects with Solano Drive) "with a slew of events both on opening night, during opening weekend and over the course of the nearly two months the show is on view," Sage said.

"Both installations showcase Black, indigenous and people of color

(BIPOC) New Mexico-based artists who partake in real and imagined searches for ancestral lands and Black futures through the creation of projects that include acts of research, resilience, resistance collecting and ritual," Sage said.

"Especially exciting to me is the project 'Stages of Tectonic Blackness: Blackdom,' a collaborative piece by Nikesha Breeze, Miles Tokunow and Lazarus Letcher," Sage said.

It will be performed on opening night "in and around their mixed-media installation and two-channel film which presents a scored durational dance and elongated mourning rituals for Black bodies that was originally performed on the ruins of Blackdom, New Mexico," Sage said.

"Founded in 1902 (in Chaves County, about 18 miles south of Roswell) and abandoned by the mid-1920s, Blackdom was created as a 'Black-utopia' focused on Black freedom, land stewardship and education," Sage said. "As part of this work, Breeze, a direct descendent of Blackdom, worked with UAM staff to research, find and interview other descendants of Blackdom who are scattered throughout the United States. The recorded oral histories will be integrated into the final interactive installation to be presented during Breeze's UAM exhibition opening.

"Remembered Landscapes: The Sacred Space

of Home, a multimedia installation" by Las Cruces artist Mitchell Edwards, "reveals an elongated poetic search for home and healing through material and spiritual relationships with nature and landscape," Sage said. This exhibition will take place in UAM's Mullennix Bridge Gallery and will remain on view until March 5.

"This new body of work by Mitchell Edwards was inspired by artist Breeze's 2020 call for BIPOC artists to create metaphorical tools," Sage said. "Hand Tools of Resilience," an international juried exhibition, "invited artists to examine the conscious and unconscious tools that BIPOC have created to survive, thrive and build within oppressive and abusive systems. Breeze's call sparked a deeper, more focused research on the power of ritual objects within Mitchell Edwards's greater practice and the results are witnessed in this powerful installation. Mitchell Edwards's own journey as a Black woman in the African Diaspora (a term that refers to the descendants of Africans shipped to the Americas via the Atlantic slave trade) focuses on the primacy of the study of nature and other spiritual traditions."

Like Breeze, Mitchell Edwards "uses ritual and remembrance when creating talismanic healing objects that protect and guide one's way back to their ancestral home," Sage said. "This immersive installation includes abstract paintings, altars, collage, assemblage, talismans and amulets. Crystals and minerals, bones, shells, seeds and roots from desert trees form an archive and landscape of materials used in rituals and presented to viewers by Mitchell Edwards as sacred objects that create and hold her ancestral home. Mitchell Edwards's ritual objects connect her to an ancient story defined by strength, beauty, resilience and spiritual transcendence passed down through generations across the African Diaspora," Sage said.

'An important story': 'Radium Girls' opens at Black Box Theatre

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Live theater returns to Black Box Theatre (BBT) Friday, Jan. 28 for a three-weekend run of "Radium Girls," by D.W. Gregory, and directed by Autumn Gieb.

The play will be performed at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Jan. 28-29 and Feb. 4-5 and 11-12; at 2:30 p.m. Sundays, Feb. 6 and 13; and at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 10.

Tickets are $15 regular admission, $12 for students and seniors over age 65 and $10 for all seats for the Thursday, Feb. 10, performance.

The cast includes Debbie Jo Felix, David Arias, Autry Sutcliff, Penny Bever, Nancy Clein Tafoya, Lisa Taylor, Doug

At a rehearsal of Black Box Theatre's "Radium Girls" are Autry Sutcliff, Joseluis Solorzano, Doug Abbott, Debbie Jo Felix and Genno Tafoya.

Abbott, Joseluis Solorzano and Genno Tafoya.

The show's set design is by Joshua Taulbee; light design by Bekah Taulbee; makeup by Naomi Gomez; Gabe Brillante is the stage manager; and Peter Herman is the technical director.

"Radium Girls," from which the play takes its name, were female factory workers in New Jersey, Illinois and Connecticut, beginning in 1917, who contracted radiation poisoning from painting watch dials with luminous paint.

"In 1926, radium was a miracle cure, Madame Curie an international celebrity, and luminous watches the latest rage — until the girls who painted them began to fall ill with a mysterious disease," according to a synopsis of the play at www.dramaticpublishing.com.

"Inspired by a true story, 'Radium Girls' traces the efforts of Grace Fryer, a dial painter, as she fights for her day in court. Her chief adversary is her former employer, Arthur Roeder, an idealistic man who cannot bring himself to believe that the same element that shrinks tumors could have anything to do with the terrifying rash of illnesses among his employees. As the case goes on, however, Grace finds herself battling not just with the U.S. Radium Corporation, but with her own family and friends, who fear that her campaign for justice will backfire."

"I was drawn to this play because it's a part of history that is not talked about much," Gieb said. "Though there was a lot of press coverage at the time, you will hardly read about it in history books. This is an important story that needs to be told. These women suffered, not only physically, but they also had to fight to even have their illness recognized and to make a significant change in how employers protect their employees from dangerous conditions. These women, some as young as 15, were taken advantage of by a big corporation. This is a true David and Goliath-type story."

Artists whose work will be featured in the BBT lobby gallery during "Radium Girls" are Diana Ayres, Margaret Bernstein, Rick Bernstein, Luci Bromberg, Rebecca Courtney, Penny Duncklee, Linda Elkins, Kris Karstead, Meredith Loring, Jan Minow, Gabrielle Teich, Lara Teich and Carol Witham.

BBT is located at 430 N. Main St. Downtown.

BULLETIN REPORT

An exhibit about the incarceration of Japanese Americans following the Dec. 7, 1941, attack on Pearl Harbor will open Saturday, Jan. 22, at Branigan Cultural Center (BCC), 401 N. Main St., the City of Las Cruces said in a news release. The exhibit will continue through April 2.

A coordinating exhibit, “Bound in New Mexico,” examines the four incarceration camps located in Lordsburg, Santa Fe, Fort Stanton and Old Raton Ranch in New Mexico, the city news release said.

“Embracing themes that are as relevant today as they were 75 years ago, ‘Righting a Wrong’ looks at immigration, prejudice, civil rights, heroism and what it means to be stallations were located west of the Mississippi River. Young and old delivered crowded together in the hastily built camps, endured poor living conditions, and were under the constant watch of military guards. While at the same time, brave Japanese American men risked their lives fighting for the United States.

"Some 40 years later, members of the Japanese American community led the nation to confront the wrong it had done. Congress formally recognized that the rights of the Japanese American community had been violated and President Ronald Reagan

Make your cannabis use more effective: Learn about terpenes

You may recall that I have mentioned Dr. Raphael Mechoulam before. He is the father of cannabinoids. Dr. M is 92 years young, very much alive in Israel and still very involved in cannabis research.

HILDA LUZ CHAVEZ
The Good Herb

binoids. It was Dr. M who coined the phrase “the entourage effect” — meaning the full spectrum use of all cannabinoids and terpenes is more effective when used together.

So, what are terpenes?

Terpenes are the compounds in cannabis that give the plant the aroma and flavor that also impacts how cannabis affects the user. Recommendation: Do your own research on the different cannabis strains and terpenes. Look for the ones that can serve your specific needs.

There are at least 16 terpenes in the plants and each one has a specific aroma and effect: A-Pinene, B-Caryophyllene, Bisbolol, Borneol, Camphene, Caryophyllene Oxide, Delta 3 Carene, Eucalyptol, Geraniol, Limonene, Linalool, Myrcene, Phytol, Pinene, Terpinolene, Trans-Nerolidol and Valencene.

Example: Pinene, one of my favorites, has a piney aroma and taste. It is known for its anti-inflammatory and antimicrobial properties. Linalool is known for its analgesic effects.

Keep in mind that the cannabis available today at dispensaries is not the cannabis of our youth. THC levels were lower then (3 percent to 8 percent), compared to today’s THC levels (20 percent to 80 percent).

Some research suggests that higher levels of THC are not necessarily therapeutic. Too high and there can be adverse effects such as paranoia, increased blood pressure, headaches and more serious psychotic reactions. Always use cannabis with caution ... know what you are consuming to avoid an unpleasant experience.

Micro-dosing is the recommended approach. It is safer and less expensive. Learn how many milligrams you need. The trick is to use minimal amounts daily on a consistent basis. I also recommend that you keep track of your use and your results. When smoking cannabis, you may get immediate effects but it is difficult to gauge the milligrams you are consuming. Best to consume edibles which are labeled, by law, with exact milligrams. Begin with 3 to 5 mg and add more as needed. At this time, there is no standard dose; each person will respond differently. There are other factors to consider, such as interactions with prescription medications. Always do your research.

In addition to micro-dosing, research suggests that consuming fat, black pepper and/or mango to name a few, can enhance the effects of cannabis. Next time you medicate, eat a mango or some fat: chocolate, yogurt, cheese, avocado or add black pepper to your dose. Keep track of the effects, you will be pleasantly surprised. Beginners be cautious!

Cannabis use does not have to be expensive. Smoking cannabis flower or vaping THC concentrates is most expensive. Edibles, in raw form or cooked, if used consistently in micro-doses can be more effective and less expensive, especially if you make your own. You will need more flower if you intend to DIY. Come April 1, cannabis will be legal in New Mexico; prices will be less, as there will be more flower since there will be more cannabis growers.

In conclusion, using cannabis medicinally comes with a learning curve. It is up to you to explore and track what strains and terpenes best serve your needs and what methods are most effective and less expensive.

Cold storage company plans $30M facility at LC industrial park

BULLETIN REPORT

A company that is planning to make New Mexico one of its first locations for a chain of specialized refrigerated warehouses has been awarded economic assistance from the New Mexico Local Economic Development Act (LEDA) job-creation fund, the New Mexico Economic Development Department (NMEDD) announced Jan. 12.

Artico Cold Management was formed in 2021 and is planning several projects across the United States, with plans to expand into Mexico and Latin America, NMEDD said.

It specializes in the management of temperature-controlled warehouses to help agricultural producers, food manufacturers, distributors and retailers fortify the supply chain.

Artist rendering of the proposed Artico facility in Las Cruces which will be built at the Las Cruces Innovation and Industrial Park.

Artico Cold New Mexico LLC has been awarded $600,000 in LEDA funds to help with its $30 million, 120,000-square-foot, cold storage facility at the Las Cruces Innovation and Industrial Park (LCIIP), the news release said. The project will take 12 to 18 months to complete with an expected opening in September 2023. The company has pledged to hire up to 60 employees.

The City of Las Cruces is also pledging $281,400 in economic assistance to the company.

The company chose southern New Mexico and Las Cruces because of its robust agricultural economy, proximity to Mexico and the international border, and the state's business climate, including the workforce and incentives, NMEDD said.

“Cold storage is in short supply across the United States, and we see the need in New Mexico for more capacity,” Artico CEO Richard Taveras said. “There are significant opportunities to help producers of chiles, dairy, pecans, meats, vegetables. This is an attractive opportunity, and the LEDA investment is critical — the state and city support gets this moving and helps us get over the finish line.”

“We are very fortunate to have Artico locating at LCIIP, and this will be the first new business with construction activity out there since 2017,” Las Cruces City Manager Ifo Pili said.

“A lot of time and effort has been put in by the city’s Economic Development Department and our partners to get here, and we’ll soon see that this is the start of something big for the industrial park. We could not ask for a better business to take that first step with us because of the amount of investment and amazing job opportunities they will be creating for Las Cruces,” Pili said.

In addition to state and city support, $100,000 from the El Paso Electric New Mexico Economic Development fund has been pledged to support the project. The fund, which is administered by the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance (MVEDA) and the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico, was established by El Paso Electric in connection with the corporate sale of the utility to Infrastructure Investments Fund.

MVEDA and the City of Las Cruces worked to recruit the company to Las Cruces, NMEDD said.

“Artico is not only making a significant capital investment in new facilities in LCIIP, but the operation itself will also serve as supporting infrastructure to our rich agricultural region and will also assist in attracting future value-added agricultural interests,” MVEDA President and CEO Davin Lopez said.

The Bridge will see some big changes in leadership in the new year

“The only constant is change,” said Greek philosopher Heraclitus. And indeed, that is true for The Bridge of Southern New Mexico in 2022.

Three of our outstanding board members retired from their work, and with it, their positions on the board: Mariette Mealor (White Sands Missile

TRACEY BRYAN

The Bridge of Southern New Mexico

Range), Chuck McMahon (Doña Ana County), and Clay Doyle (El Paso Electric). As leaders in our community, as well as our board, it’s important to acknowledge their sizable contributions to so many great things in our community.

Mariette, for many years, oversaw the U.S.

Army’s GEMS (Gains in the Education of Math and Science) program at WSMR that provided a week of exciting hands-on learning experiences for middle- and high-school students to spark their creativity and future career aspirations in STEM-related fields. She is a passionate advocate for the potential of our students and sought more ways to attract local talent to the amazing careers at WSMR.

Chuck’s role with county government enabled him to focus on the broad and diverse needs of our students and families in both rural and urban areas, especially the colonias. He wanted to do whatever we could to bring more opportunities to students, regardless of where they lived, and helped recruit employers and opportunities for more than 500 students in internships throughout the county last summer.

Clay has always cared enormously about education and outcomes. He served as a board member for not just The Bridge, but also the Children’s Reading Alliance. He, too, believes in the potential of our students and worked with Doña Ana Community College to start the Electrical Lineworker Program, a direct career pathway to well-paid line-worker jobs with El Paso Electric.

It’s a great privilege to partner with these and other leaders on our board who put the students of our community in the center of every conversation on how to work together for their benefit, to provide whatever they need to succeed in education and future employment. I hope those of you

State ag value totals nearly $3B in 2020

BULLETIN REPORT

The New Mexico Field Office of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS), in cooperation with the New Mexico Department of Agriculture, has published the 2020 New Mexico Agricultural Statistics bulletin.

According to the bulletin, New Mexico's total agricultural value was slightly lower than $3 billion in 2020, 5 percent below 2019.

New Mexico chile and pecan production ranked in the top two in the nation in 2020, onions ranked fifth and milk ranked ninth.

who know them or meet them in this new season of life join me in thanking them for their creativity, their passion and their commitment to our community.

The other change that's still to come in 2022 will be a new leader for The Bridge.

After five-and-a-half years of leading this incredible organization (for the second time) and working with an incredible set of partners all over our community and state, my husband and I will be moving out of state. The Bridge's board has begun a search for a new leader to continue driving forward this work that has led the state in so many ways and is critical to the long-term wellbeing of our children, our families and our county.

In the short term, my role is unchanged. One good thing to come out of the pandemic is the reality that we can work from anywhere in remote environments. All of the work underway will continue unabated.

In fact, we just launched a rebrand of our education-to-employment one-stop website that can help connect our students and our families to the best possible careers in our community. Bridge2Careers.org contains the same great information as New Mexico True Talent but is now more closely aligned to The Bridge's brand.

The website, available in both English and Spanish, includes a host of free resources about career exploration, preparation and education, along with the very specific skills and credentials needed for some of the best jobs in our region. If you've not yet explored this incredible website, it's well worth your time! Please check it out and share it with others.

There are amazing things ahead for our students and our community in 2022. New faces and new initiatives will continue to ensure we open new doors and seize new opportunities that benefit all of Doña Ana County.

Aggies have been on a roll, but know they need to keep improving

The New Mexico State University men's basketball has been on a quite a roll, but players and coaches both know they can still improve and get even better.

They also know they will have to as the schedule gets tougher.

Heading into play the week of Jan. 17, the Aggies had won 10 straight games and had compiled a 15-2 overall record and were 5-0 in conference.

Most recently, the Aggies won a pair of games at the Pan Am — 73-57 over Tarleton Jan. 13 and 77-63 over Abilene Christian Jan. 15. NM

New Mexico State University sophomore Mike Peake takes a shot against Tarleton during the Aggies' 73-57 win Jan. 13.

State's Teddy Allen scored 41 points in the Abilene Christian game, which was the highest point total by an Aggie player since Eric Channing netted 41 against North Texas in January 2002.

Sophomore Mike Peake, who had a season-high 12 points against Tarleton, said the team has been enjoying the winning streak but has tried to maintain a business-like approach.

They celebrate "for about three minutes" and then get ready for the next opponent, he said.

"Our confidence is through the roof," said Peake, who is from Chicago and played for Austin Peay last year. "No one can stop us; that's how we feel. Nobody can stop us; we've got to stop ourselves."

Head coach Chris Jans said the team has done a good job of being adaptable with the Aggies having had one game postponed and another declared a forfeit win (over Lamar) because of Covid. During a three-week stretch, the Aggies played just two games because of the Christmas holiday and the Covid-related interruptions.

"You have to roll with the punches and be adaptable and deal with the situation you are given," Jans said Jan. 10.

Starting this week, the Aggies' schedule gets tougher. They were scheduled to play a pair of road games against Sam Houston State on Thursday, Jan. 20 and then Saturday, Jan. 22 against Stephen F. Austin.

Sam Houston was 10-9 overall heading into the week and 5-1 in WAC play, while SFA was 11-6 and 3-2 in the WAC. The Sam Houston State game was past our deadline, so we don't have any results from that one.

And of course, the showdown and big rivalry game with Grand Canyon University looms at 7 p.m. Jan. 29 at the Pan American.

Jans says this year's team has more scoring depth than some of his teams in the past.

"This year, depending on who is on the court, we have three, four, even five guys who can hurt you in different ways," Jans said. "I think that puts pressure on the other team's defense and spreads them out and makes it easier to score."

On the minus side of the ledger, Jans says the team could improve its defensive intensity, which isn't always there for a full 40 minutes.

"We have not been as ferocious as we have been in the past," Jans said. "I

Looking back on the big golf stories in 2021, and then ahead into new year

There were lots of big golf stories in the past year of 2021, and here are some of the biggest in snippet form. By far the one that stunned the golfing world was the single-car crash on a winding road at 80 mph in Los Angeles that nearly cost Tiger Woods his life. He returned to his home in Florida after three weeks in the hospital.

Next is Jon Rahm. Just two weeks after being forced to withdraw from the Memorial Tournament at Muirfield Village (Dublin, Ohio) due to a positive Covid-19 test, having surged to a 6-shot lead after day two, Rahm won the U.S. Open at Torrey Pines in stunning fashion with a birdie-birdie finish. He's No. 1 in the world — the best golfer on the planet!

CHARLIE BLANCHARD

Golf Doctor

The biggest shocker of the year was the improbable victory by 50-year-old Phil ("The Thrill") Mickelson, winning the PGA Championship at Kiawah Island. That was Phil's sixth major, and basically his version of Nicklaus at the 1986 Masters and Woods' 2019 Masters masterpiece.

And what about Captain Steve Stricker's American team's Ryder Cup win in September, trouncing the Europeans 19-9!

As one sportswriter noted, "Not only did the U.S. win by 10 points, it battered the Euros with its youngest and most inexperienced team ever."

The Ryder Cup may stay on homeland soil for some time to come.

Now, back to Tiger Woods, an athlete and an icon who continues to amaze and astound. Just 10 months after he almost lost his right leg in that horrendous car crash in L.A., he and his 12 year-old son Charlie played together in the PNC Championship in Orlando. Tiger cannot yet walk a full 18 holes but his golf game showed promise. Tiger and Charlie shot 57 for their final "hit-and-giggle" scramble round, with talented Charlie displaying a "chip-off-the-ole-block" form. They finished second to John Daly and John II. I'm predicting that Tiger will indeed play a few tournaments this year, certainly including the Open Championship at St. Andrews.

To my mind the most incredible golf score of 2021 was the 57 (14 under par) turned in by Macy Pate, a high-school sophomore in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, to win the individual title in the Central Piedmont 4-A Conference Championships. Think about it — 57!

As we go forward in 2022, the first PGA tournament of the new year, the Sentry Tournament of Champions at Kapalua in Maui, was won by Cameron Smith with a record 72-hole score of 34-under par. Jon Rahm finished second at 33 under. Smith picked up a cool $1,476,000; Rahm a mere $810,000. No wonder talented players fight hard to get on tour; and no wonder rival tour challengers are sprouting up around the world. Actually, the 2021-2022 "wraparound" know these kids are at a point where they probably are tired of hearing about it. But I and my coaches need to figure out a way to get them to believe and change it. We will continue to harp on it and find a way to get better and we have gotten better.”

Senior Donnie Tillman, from Detroit, agrees the Aggies need to pick up the defensive intensity when they play the league's tougher teams.

“We have to have that in our back pocket or they'll serve us an L,” Tillman said.

PGA Tour season began last September with the Fortinet Championship in Napa, California, won by Max Homa, who won $1,260,000.

The current PGA Tour season ends with the FedEx Cup Tour Championship at East Lake in Atlanta on August 22-28, in time for football season.

While we're talking professional golf and big bucks, it was just recently announced by the USGA that the total purse for the U.S. Women's Open presented by ProMedica will increase by almost 100 percent to $10 million, with the winner earning $1.8 million.

John Bodenhamer, the USGA's chief championships officer, said that the increase to $10 million was the culmination of a four-year journey to “empower” the U.S. Women's Open.

He probably meant that it would raise the entire status of women's golf. This move is a prime example of the vision and strength that Mike Whan brought to the USGA when he was named commissioner in mid-2021 (see my Bulletin column 3/26/21).
