City expands Mano y Mano day labor program

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Mano y Mano day labor program provides a crew to travel to “hot spots” around the city, helping to clean sites where homeless people are encamped and to provide outreach services to the people living at those sites.

The program is under the City of Las Cruces, whose council voted unanimously at its July 5 regular meeting to expand the program.

Under the expansion, three crew members, referred by the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope (MVCH) and struggling with homelessness themselves, and supervised by staff from the Parks and Recreation Department and other city programs, will be sent to homeless encampments in front of businesses, in city parks, along canals and elsewhere to clean up trash and other debris at those sites and connect the people living there with services to help get them off the street.

“I think this program does such good work,” Councilor Becki Graham said at the meeting. The expansion of Mano y Mano to address the “the cleanup of some of the nuisance issues” and provide services will “hopefully (help) people move into better situations for themselves,” Graham said.

The expansion is “another item to help combat what we’ve been seeing,”

Councilor Tessa Abeyta said. Abeyta was among elected officials and community leaders who attended a May meeting in Las Cruces during which business owners complained about theft and vandalism they said was being committed by homeless people.

“I think this is a great program to expand,” Abeyta said; “something that our city really needs right now.”

“I’m one of these day laborers. I will give 200 percent to help alleviate this problem,” Richard Barela said during public input on the proposed expansion.

“We wanted to come up with as many solutions as possible to address homelessness,” MVCH Executive Director Nicole Martinez said. There is “a need for more services for our community. We wanted to help,” she said.

People sign up at MVCH each weekday morning to participate in Mano y Mano that day, Martinez said. They are chosen by lottery and assigned to a work crew. Those who are chosen are paid minimum wage and given lunch.

Many have used the money they earn through Mano y Mano to pay security deposits “to get into housing,” Martinez said, and to pay rent, utility and phone bills. The program also “makes people feel good having put in a day’s work,” she said.

Martinez said MVCH has served 500-600 people through Mayo y Mano since 2015.

Mano y Mano is “a public health and safety initiative building a bridge to needed resources and services for vulnerable unhoused residents,” the city said.

It began seven years ago with one crew of 10 people working two days a week assisting Parks and Rec staff with landscape beautification, garbage removal and other tasks, the city said. The program expanded to two crews of 20 people working five days a week with an annual budget of $412,000. The expansion approved July 5 adds $93,000 to the program’s FY2023 budget.

City continues work on GO bond projects

At its June 27 work session, the Las Cruces City Council was presented with an update on the status of current general obligation (GO) bond projects.

In an all-mail election held in July and August 2018, Las Cruces voters approved these four bond questions totaling $35.6 million in 2018: 1) $16.9 million to construct improvements to parks, including sports fields and other related facilities. (It passed with 57 percent approval.); 2) $9.8 million to construct a new animal shelter facility and related improvements. (67 percent approval); 3) $6.2 million to replace Fire Station No. 3, 390 N. Valley Drive. (70 percent approval); and 4) $2.7 million to construct and improve recreational walking, jogging and biking trails. (58 percent approval).

The June 27 update included this information:

- Of the $35.6 million approved, $26.6 million has been spent so far.

- $3.7 million in improvements at the Hadley Recreation Complex are completed.

- $1.8 million in parks and sports courts has been completed.

- $2 million in improvements to Unidad Park are 59 percent complete.

- The $6 million East Mesa Public Recreation Complex is about 21 percent complete. While all bond funding will be spent by this December, the estimated date for completion of the current phase of the complex's construction is Feb. 6, 2023. (The city estimates it needs an additional $36 million to complete work at the complex, including additional sports fields and courts, concession stands, an amphitheater, walking trails, lights and other improvement and amenities.)

- Construction of a new $10.7 million Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley and dog parks at Rinconada and Burn Lake are 67 percent complete.

- Replacement of Fire Station No. 3 is 99 percent complete. The Las Cruces Fire Department is operating at the new fire station.

- $2.4 million in improvements to walking, jogging and biking trails are 97 percent complete.

"A GO bond is a form of debt financing secured by property tax revenues," the city said on its website. "GO bonds can be issued for general purpose projects,

Retiring professor leaves legacy for students, Native American programs

By MINERVA BAUMANN
NMSU News team

After 25 years serving his tribal government in administrative jobs as a member of the Blackfeet Nation, Don Pepion was recruited to head New Mexico State University's American Indian Program (AIP). After 22 years serving NMSU, including shepherding the construction of the American Indian Center and initiating Native American studies at the university, the anthropology professor retired June 30.

"Don developed the curriculum for the undergraduate and graduate minors in Native American studies and made these learning opportunities available to all NMSU students across campus," said Rani Alexander, anthropology professor and department head. "Don is also an international scholar who values experiential learning, and he brings a global perspective to the classroom as well as to field settings."

In addition to spearheading the American Indian Center, Pepion's work as AIP director for more than seven years resulted in a nearly 50 percent increase in the number of Native students attending NMSU at the end of his tenure as director.

"The reason we were able to do that is because I worked collaboratively with a lot of the Indian tribes and especially the different programs within New Mexico State that provided us the resources to go out and do recruitment and work with the Native communities," he said.

Pepion teaches that Indigenous groups from all over the world have basic shared views. Indigenous ways of knowing are connected to the natural world while Eurocentric knowledge or Euro Western knowledge is separated from the natural world.

"I teach philosophy of Indigenous people," Pepion said. "Science is just now catching up to Indigenous knowledge or what was labeled 'primitive' knowledge. Indigenous people would say everything is alive, even the rocks – so-called inanimate things. Scientists would say that's a primitive thought. But it's really not, it's actually right because through quantum theory we have learned that it's true."

"I've always had an educational philosophy of raising the consciousness of all people regarding the Native American situation," Pepion said. "To help improve the quality of living for Native American people, that's really the bottom line, and I think the way to that as I found both as an administrator and as a teacher is that everything starts with awareness and education. You can't change what you don't know until people are able to learn about the situation and they can make better choices."

Pepion demonstrated his equestrian skills in 2012 among hundreds of Indigenous groups who performed at the Queen Elizabeth II Diamond Jubilee Pageant. He also was invited to have tea with the queen.

"It was a privilege and an honor to be selected from our group to meet with the queen," Pepion said. "There were several hundred Indigenous nations represented there. But the important thing to me while we were there was the gigantic cook tent that they put up for us so we, as Indigenous people, could share our dances and our singing with other nations from around the world."

At a recent retirement dinner, Pepion received a gift from the Department of Anthropology faculty of a blanket from Eighth Generation, a Seattle-based brand owned by the Snowqualmie Tribe. John Isiah Pepion designed the blanket.

As a member of the Blackfeet of Montana and Canada, Pepion goes home each summer to practice traditional ways. In retirement, he plans to continue these trips but also continue his research. "So much of our culture and language is lost so, my vision is to help us bring back our language and culture.

"Change starts with the individual. And that's what I teach – that change process," said Pepion. "Who do you want to be?"

Do you want to change anything in this world?

Each of us needs to make a choice."

MVEDA continues looking forward

The Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance (MVEDA) gave an annual report Monday night about its work the past year. Of the statistics and dollar figures discussed, the biggest one was the $246.3 million in capital investments made by companies MVEDA worked with during the year.

While MVEDA essentially met the goals for all seven of its benchmark categories, the figure for capital investments was more than five times the goal.

While it was a strong performance, especially for another pandemic year, the presentation led by MVEDA President & CEO Davin Lopez left me believing MVEDA is poised for even better things in the near future.

For one, they will be better funded, thanks to increased contributions from Doña Ana County, and the additional resource of the El Paso Electric NM Economic Development Fund, which assisted MVEDA to the tune of $300,000 last year.

RICHARD COLTHARP
From the Publisher

Secondly, they can again benefit from the New Mexico Economic Development Department's state closing funds, designed to complement other state and federal resources to help economic developers close deals to bring new business opportunities to New Mexico.

"Whether it's public or private money, our duty is to be very responsible with those investments," Lopez said.

Perhaps most important is MVEDA's forward-looking approach.

You may begin to hear MVEDA less, and NM Borderplex more. The term NM Borderplex better reflects the more regional approach MVEDA is taking and needs to take.

Imagine recruiting a multi-million-dollar company to Las Cruces. One of the first things they'll want to know is the strength of the available workforce to fill their jobs. They'll be encouraged to know of the resources of New Mexico State University and Dona Ana Community College. But also consider the educational resources of University of Texas-El Paso, and El Paso's community college system, as well as the colleges and universities of Ciudad Juarez. Add them all together and it's nearly 160,000 students.

As much as we like to play up our rivalries with El Paso and Texas, they are our neighbors and, often, our colleagues. The Santa Teresa area offers the Union Pacific rail hub, the expanded Jetport and International Port of Entry. These synergies, combined with those of Mexico, make this a region of serious impact and import.

We love our small city of Las Cruces, and the charm of Mesilla, but we have to realize we're part of something bigger.

I believe we can retain what makes Las Cruces great and still maintain a vital role in the bigger picture of our regional economy. I don't believe we can retain what makes Las Cruces great, however, without bring-

Ethics board dispute highlights conflict challenges

State Rep. Rebecca Dow of Truth or Consequences, who finished second in a five-person race for governor in the Republican primary election last month, has agreed to pay a $500 civil penalty to settle a bitter dispute with the State Ethics Commission, according to the Albuquerque Journal.

The dispute stems from a complaint filed by Dow's Democratic opponent in the 2020 election, and highlights the challenges faced by both our unpaid legislators and our relatively new ethics commission to police a system where conflicts of interest are built into the process.

Like most members of the Legislature under the age of 70, Dow has another full-time job to pay the bills. She is the founder of a nonprofit educational center in Sierra County called Apple Tree, which receives funding from the state in both grants and contracts.

The inherent conflicts in that relationship are obvious. But, in New Mexico's "citizen legislature," Dow is just one of several lawmakers with financial ties to the government they oversee. House speaker Brian Egolf provided legal representation to Ultra Health, New Mexico's largest medical cannabis company, in a lawsuit against the state at the same time he helped lead the legislative effort to pass recreational marijuana, according to a 2020 story in the Santa Fe New Mexican. Townsend worked as a consultant for an oil and gas company. Five legislators were married to lobbyists

State law recognizes these conflicts, and attempts to set boundaries. The State Ethics Commission, which was approved by voters in 2018, is charged with enforcing those boundaries.

Dow is accused of violating ethics rules by essentially serving as a lobbyist for Apple Tree and receiving payment for those services. And she improperly included the title "Rep." in correspondence with state education officials.

Voters knew about the allegations in 2020 and re-elected

Dow anyway. She has defended her actions as accepting, "modest payment for an important nonprofit (Apple Tree) in my district." She said she is unable to talk about the settlement until it is finalized.

The settlement is an important confirmation for the ethics commission, which was passed after several years of debate and opposition from skeptical Republican legislators who feared that the board's investigations would be partisan.

With so many potential conflicts of interest in the Legislature, it will be critical that the ethics commission is evenhanded in the cases it brings forward, and that those investi-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Critical of Yazzie Discussion Draft

The comment period pertaining to the Yazzie-Martinez Discussion Draft ended on June 17, 2022. The draft plan was put forth by the New Mexico Public Education Department to address the findings of the Yazzie Court case regarding K-12 education in New Mexico.

Before I begin my remarks on the Yazzie-Martinez Discussion Draft, I need to give background to my remarks. I am part of a parents' group who fought against the NM PED's Culturally and Linguistically Responsive Education at Las Cruces Public Schools in May 2021. At that time, several of us specifically asked the School Board to enumerate any cases of discrimination that Policy JBC intended to rectify; to give parents some evidence. We received no response, and Policy JBC was passed.

A major premise of the draft is to advance the notion that minority teachers are needed for minority students, in order for them to "thrive." This is unacceptable condescension to minorities. Here is an excerpt from page 5 of the Yazzie-Martinez Discussion Draft: "The difference between the teacher and student percentages for each of these categories is the 'teacher-student' diversity gap. It is well-established that students thrive when their teachers reflect the community in which they work, and we therefore must prioritize obtaining a more diverse workforce." Baloney.

They are essentially saying that Hispanics can't learn from whites, but why do Asian students thrive no matter who the teacher? When my mom (a Hispanic) graduated salutatorian of Gadsden in 1957, there were many more white teachers, and who cares? To advance such notions as "students need teachers who look like them" is to tarnish the reputation of every Hispanic student who will have it no other way than merit.

U.S. a Democratic Republic

In the column, "Protecting citizen's right to vote" in the July 15 Las Cruces Bulletin the authors from the League of Women Voters got one thing wrong.

The United States is a Democratic Republic, not a Democracy.

The presidents or prime ministers in a democracy are mostly elected with a majority vote. It is our Electoral College (Article II, Section 1 of the Constitution) which makes us a democratic republic and requires the winner of a presidential election to have a majority of electoral college votes. The candidate with the majority of electoral college is elected president even when losing the popular vote which has happened five times. If not for the Electoral College, we would have had Hillary Clinton and maybe Al Gore as presidents. Hillary's popular vote margin was over 2.8 million votes. It is interesting to note that these popular vote margins came from the state of California. California votes will likely determine the winner in future popular votes. Our Nation is pretty much divided, and although many may not remember, three of the last six presidential elections were challenged and last one is still being debated. We likely see more of this in future elections.

ing new jobs, new growth and new opportunities to the region.

A friend of mine from Houston recently visited Las Cruces, with an eye toward possibly moving here in retirement. We had one conversation about airports.

“How far are you from the airport?” I asked.

“It takes us more than an hour to get to either Bush or Hobby,” he said.

“The El Paso airport is about 45 minutes from my house in Las Cruces,” I said.

We are a region, alright, but less sprawling than many major metro areas.

In addition to growing funding, MVEDA is also fully staffed for the first time. They’ve added a full-time marketing director, and a person dedicated solely to business development to work on retention and expansion of existing businesses.

Companies that established or expanded in Dona Ana County through MVEDA’s efforts in 2021-22 were Artico Cold Management, Tecma, Saputo Cheese USA, Electronic Caregiver, Wind Turbine and Energy Cable Corp, Ma & Sons Chile, Hecate Energy and Yellowbird Solar. That translates to 777 jobs created, with an average wage of $17.94 an hour.

My favorite part of the MVEDA name has always been the A for Alliance, signifying the many different entities that come together to support economic development in the Mesilla Valley and beyond. During his presentation, Lopez mentioned collaborations with the City of Las Cruces, Doña Ana County, the Borderplex Alliance, the Border Industrial Association, the New Mexico Economic Development Department and many others. And they’re only looking to grow those efforts.

“This is our year of partnerships,” Lopez said.

The pandemic has shown us the relative fragility of our economy. MVEDA’s efforts can help diversify our economy, maximize our area’s strengths. Those strengths include these key assets: aerospace, logistics and manufacturing, value-added agriculture, and digital media and game development.

Over the years, I’ve heard people questioning the value of MVEDA. Everything is worth ex-

Or, we could help this team of seasoned professionals, MVEDA, put in relentless, international effort to make our story

EPE making EVs EZ

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

“Electric Vehicles (EVs) are rising in popularity each year and are set to become the future of electrification transportation in the coming years,” said El Paso Electric (EPE) Supervisor of Electrification Angie Rodriguez.

EPE is doing everything it can to help individual consumers, families, businesses and government entities learn about the advantages of EVs over internal combustion engines that burn gasoline and diesel fuel.

“Electrification has topped our list of priorities for several years,” Rodriguez said. “Electrification will play a critical role in reaching our carbon reduction goals to provide 80 percent of our power from carbon-free resources by 2035 and 100 percent carbon free by 2045,” she said.

EPE has a webpage dedicated to EVs: www.epelectric.com/ev, that will answer questions about EVs and “enable customers to discover available EV models, compare vehicles to each other and learn about available incentives,” said Rodriguez, who drives an EV herself.

The webpage includes these topics: the cost of EV ownership (including an online calculator to estimate the cost of electricity vs. gasoline and diesel fuel), environmental impact, performance and convenience; buying an EV, either a fully electric or hybrid model; finding the EV that best suits your needs; EV incentives offered in New Mexico; EPE’s commercial and residential EV charging-station rebates, including online forms to apply; EV charging at home and in public, including the locations of public charging stations in EPE’s service area; EPE’s EV incentives and charging rates; frequently asked questions, including, “How will charging an EV affect my electric bill?”; and a link to EPE’s EV customer outreach program to keep EV owners informed.

Last December,

the New Mexico Public Regulation Commission approved EPE’s Transportation and Electrification Plan (TEP) and authorized EPE to invest more than $1.2 million in EV infrastructure, education and outreach in its southern New Mexico service territory, EPE said in a news release. See the full TEP at www.epelectric.com/renewable-tech/electric-vehicles/transportation-electrification-plan.

Rodriguez said supply-chain issues should be resolved by the end of the year, making it easier for consumers to purchase the EV model they want, either online or at dealerships.

She said EPE has been in touch with governments and school districts throughout its service area about electrification of school buses and fleets. The City of Las Cruces has begun a conversion from internal combustion engine vehicles to EVs. A resolution passed by the city council in 2021 calls for 50 percent of the eligible fleet to be replaced by electric vehicles by 2030.

Branigan Library will host EPE electric vehicle showcase

El Paso Electric (EPE) and Thomas Branigan Memorial Library will join forces to present an electric vehicle (EV) showcase, 10 a.m.-noon, Saturday, July 23, in the Roadrunner Room on the second floor of the library, 200 E. Picacho Ave.

During the event, representatives from EPE and Rio Grande Electric Auto Association will talk about EVs and answer questions. They will discuss what EVs are and how they work, including EV trends, benefits and incentives, myths and charging information.

After the presentation, EVs and electric bikes will be on display in the library parking lot.

The public is invited to attend the showcase to learn more about EVs and the incentives available to drive them. There is no charge to attend.

Las Cruces' Branigan Library will host an electric car showcase Saturday, July 23.

“We are excited to be in the community and help answer any questions customers have and help dispel any myths about EVs,” said EPE Supervisor of Electrification Angie Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez said EPE is planning more educational events in Las Cruces to help customers learn more about EVs.

Electric buses coming to region

BULLETIN REPORT

The South Central Regional Transit District (SCRTD) plans to be 100 percent emission free within the decade. The district's board of directors recently approved SCRTD's first zero emission fleet transition plan, as required by the Federal Transit Administration to apply for federal funds.

The New Mexico Transportation Department provided the district with grant funds for the development of the plan.

SCRTD has submitted a $3.1 million grant application to fund the first of three electric emission buses with charging infrastructure, SCRTD said.

If approved, the first electric buses would begin operating in March 2024 from the Sunland Park bus facility.

"The transition plan provides a guideline and target to reach district goals for making the fleet zero emissions by 2032," SCRTD Executive Director David Armijo said. "To reach this goal, the district will deploy both 25- and 35-foot buses to operate within the range possible with electric power."

The district will partner with El Paso Electric to support technical requirements to install and operate the electric buses from the Sunland Park facility.

"The transit district's plans will complement the city's plans to move toward electric vehicle use and the community will benefit from cleaner running buses on our streets," said Sunland Park Mayor Javier Perea.

Much of the funding in the plan will come from federal grants, Doña Ana County and member agencies' contributions, SCRTD said.

New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson signed the Regional Transit District Act into law in 2003. The legislation authorized the creation of regional transit districts (RTD) in New Mexico.

The South Central Regional Transition District (SCRTD) was certified by the New Mexico Department of Transportation in 2008.

"SCRTD provides public transportation services in areas within its boundaries where public transportation services do not exist," according to the district's Facebook page.

Election season ended early for commissioner candidate

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Christopher Schaljo-Hernandez will not be officially declared Doña Ana County Commissioner-elect until after the Nov. 8 general election. But the Mesilla resident and local business owner is the only candidate for commission District 1 on the ballot, so the outcome is a foregone conclusion.

No Republicans or Libertarians filed to run for the office in the June primary, leaving the write-in process as the only option for potential candidates. None came forward on filing day, June 30.

The only battle for Schaljo-Hernandez was the June 7 Democratic primary. He defeated incumbent Commissioner Lynn Ellins and former county assessor Emma Johnson Ortiz in that race.

Schaljo-Hernandez brings a blend of youth, family, business success and political experience when he becomes commissioner next January.

Along with his husband, Russell Hernandez, Schaljo-Hernandez, 32, is co-owner of Salud! de Mesilla restaurant, which he said has 44 employees, including nine recent additions. The couple have three children, ages 6, 8 and 9 who attend Las Cruces Public Schools.

Schaljo-Hernandez is the former chair of the Doña Ana County Democratic Party, serving 2017-19, including the 2018 general election when Democrats won every county office, including Ellins' commission-seat win.

He also served as chair of the Las Cruces Economic Recovery Ad Hoc Board, which the city formed in 2020 to help guide the reopening and recovery of businesses as pandemic restrictions were eased.

Schaljo-Hernandez said he plans to meet with County Manager Fernando Macias and other county and community leaders in the coming months and looks forward to helping facilitate a closer working relationship among commissioners and the county's other elected officials.

As a commissioner, Schaljo-Hernandez said he wants to focus on economic development, infrastructure and education. His goals will be to boost young entrepreneurship to build business startups in the county and state to help keep New Mexico children living and working in New Mexico after they graduate from high school and college.

Transportation is also a key issue for the county, he said, as some families have no vehicle or are sharing a single vehicle and must rely on public transportation. Making sure county roads are properly maintained is part of that, he said.

As a parent and soon-to-be county commissioner, Schaljo-Hernandez said he wants to make sure education is accessible to all county residents, along with childcare and after-school care.

In a news release, Schaljo-Hernandez said he also will focus on "land and use planning that promotes growth but maintains our unique and treasured qualities."

Schaljo-Hernandez said the county also must ensure residents have access to water and sewer service and are protected from flooding, which has posed serious risks to county residents and property in the past.

Making sure firefighters hired by the county are paid a competitive wage is also important, Schaljo-Hernandez said, and ensuring county residents have adequate fire protection. Having broadband connectivity is also a necessity for all county residents, he said.

The county needs to continue supporting Santa Teresa, including the county jetport and port of entry that connects it with San Jerónimo, Chihuahua on the Mexican side of the international border, he said. Santa Teresa is going to "have the biggest economic impact for Doña Ana County over the next 10-20 years," Schaljo-Hernandez said.

During his primary campaign, Schaljo-Hernandez said he heard from county residents about a variety of issues, including unleashed dogs posing a safety threat, speeding in rural areas and the accessibility of community centers to residents of small communities.

Schaljo-Hernandez had kind words for Ellins.

"I respect Lynn to no end," Schaljo-Hernandez said. "He issued the first gay marriage license in the state." (Ellins granted the first marriage license issued to a gay couple in New Mexico in August 2013 when he was Doña Ana County clerk.)

"I am looking forward to his words of wisdom in the future," Schaljo-Hernandez said of Ellins.

County Commission District 1 includes the South Valley communities between Vado and Mesilla Park, Mesilla, Picacho Hills and downtown Las Cruces.

The City of Las Cruces recently installed "Green Cool Paint" bicycle lanes within some existing bike lanes in east central Las Cruces to lower asphalt temperatures and make the lanes more visible to motorists and bike riders. "This is demonstration project," said city Sustainability Officer Lisa LaRocque told the Bulletin. "We have set criteria such as urban heat temperature over 90 degrees F, located in low- and moderate-income neighborhoods, pavement condition and on the Active Transportation Plan. If they meet all of these, they will be green."

WSMR gets new Naval leader

BULLETIN REPORT

Cmdr. Adrian Laney is the new leader of the Naval Surface Warfare Center's White Sands Detachment at White Sands Missile Range.

Laney has pertinent experience at Naval Surface Warfare Center, Port Hueneme Division (NSWC PHD), and succeeds Cmdr. Colin Monk, who concluded a three-year tour as officer in charge at the White Sands Detachment. Laney took on the leadership position in a change-of-charge ceremony in May.

Many don't realize WSMR has a U.S. Navy presence, including the landlocked USS Desert Ship (LLS 1), a concrete blockhouse that replicates the fire control requirements of a surface ship.

"We provide a controlled environment for innovation to happen," said Abie Parra, White Sands department manager. "We dabble in a lot of areas, but at the end of the day, we're out here to facilitate the successful execution of Navy Test and Evaluation events to ensure that the warfighter is getting a quality, timely product."

As White Sands' new officer in charge, Laney arrives at a time when the detachment is focused on the future needs of the Navy and its partners. Priorities include defining long-range corridors to accommodate faster, longer-range weapons; developing hypersonic test events for initiatives across the Department of Defense; and advancing the nation's suborbital vehicle capability.

Laney brings broad experience in testing and evaluating a variety of missiles and other weapons, in part during a previous tour with NSWC PHD. Most recently, he worked for the Missile Defense Agency (MDA) in Dahlgren, Virginia, which is precisely where Monk is headed.

Ahead of the change of charge, Laney was frocked to commander in a ceremony at WSMR April 28.

Although this is his first tour at the White Sands Detachment, Laney isn't new to NSWC PHD. For his first assignment as an engineering duty officer, he served as a project officer for Combat System Ship Qualification Trials (CSSQTs) in Port Hueneme, California, from 2013 to 2016.

During his previous tour at NSWC PHD, Laney led a successful CSSQT aboard a Republic of Korea destroyer, and he supported multiple Aegis Combat System and Standard Missile test events. He said he was impressed by the caliber of people he worked with, and he's glad to return to the command.

"It's exciting to come back and work for Port Hueneme Division," Laney said. "Many of the people I worked with are still there in similar roles or in positions of greater responsibility, which is great to see."

Before joining White Sands Detachment, Laney served as a product manager for one of the Standard Missile variations at the MDA. In that role, he was responsible for the program's cost, schedule and performance.

In addition to his work with various Standard Missiles and the Aegis Combat System, Laney's naval career includes directed energy, shipyard and operational experience. He said he was interested in "the whole portfolio" of White Sands' work.

"The mission out here is awesome," Laney said. "I'm very excited to come back to Test and Evaluation and help the Navy move forward with these programs."

Also, after serving in acquisition roles for his last two tours, Laney said he was eager to return to a leadership position. On that front, he describes his style of leadership as "people focused." "My philosophy is that we can have all the equipment, technology and facilities we could ever want, but we cannot execute missions without people," Laney said.

"I'm just starting to poll the workforce to see where I might be able to help," Laney said. "For me, it's people first, and I'm confident that will remain my No. 1 priority."

Meanwhile, Laney is settling into the White Sands community with his wife and two children.

During his 15 years of active duty in the Navy, Laney has been awarded the Defense Meritorious Service Medal and the Navy and Marine Corps Commendation Medal.

Air Force veteran to head New Mexico base planning office

Richard Glover is the new Director of the Office of Military Base Planning and Support for New Mexico.

Glover is an El Paso native who retired from the U.S. Air Force after a career focused on research and development and intelligence operations.

After a 16-year career primarily supporting the Office of Special Projects for the Secretary of the U.S. Air Force that included multiple deployments across the globe, Glover left the Air Force to work for several large and small aerospace contractors, serving as Chief Engineer, Director of Operations, Director of Engineering, Division Manager, Vice President, President, and CEO.

"This Office was created to keep New Mexico's military bases open and thriving," said Economic Development Secretary Alicia Keyes, who made the announcement this week. "Richard Glover is from a military family and has the background to support a robust military sector in the state, one that works hand-in-hand with economic development as New Mexico grows its private sector job-rich industries in defense and aerospace."

The appointment was made by Gov. Michelle Lujan

Grisham.

"We offer strategic resources and opportunities not available in other states, and New Mexico is wise to build and sustain these partnerships so all New Mexicans can benefit," Glover said. He is an experienced operations executive with more than 30 years of experience in military operations, technology strategy, venture funding, staff development and corporate turnaround.

Glover received a master of science in engineering from the University of Texas at Austin and a bachelor of science in electrical engineering from the University of Texas-El Paso.

Movie: Rebel Without a Cause

The legend of James Dean began with his prototype role in this 1955 classic: a misunderstood youth whose lack of parental support leads him to act out. Dean's portrayal rang true with legions of teens, but director Nicholas Ray is equally responsible for the film's enduring impact. Natalie Wood and Sal Mineo play Dean's friends. On top of everything else, Dean's iconic wardrobe was adopted by teenage fans everywhere, which is why the film airs tonight as part of TCM's survey of movies that had an impact on fashion.

tonight's picks

Jessica Sutton

5 p.m. on TBS
MLB Baseball

New York fans could get a preview of the 2022 World Series tonight at Citi Field in Queens, where Pete Alonso and the New York Mets hope to send a message to Aaron Judge and the Yankees in the opener of a two-game series. With both teams leading their respective divisions at this writing, talk of a "Subway Series" in October isn't such an absurd notion as it has been in years past.

6 p.m. on HISTORY
MH370: Mystery of the Lost Flight

In the 21st century, commercial airliners don't simply vanish into thin air, yet in 2014, that's exactly what seemed to happen with Malaysian Airlines flight MH370. This new two-hour documentary tells the harrowing story of that plane's disappearance and attempts to unravel the many theories — and conspiracies — that some have proposed to explain this baffling incident. The production draws on new evidence, expert opinions from investigators and candid testimony from those closest to the tragedy: the families of the victims.

6 p.m. on TCM
Movie: In Harm's Way

Director Otto Preminger's 1965 drama about two officers' responses to the Japanese attack at Hawaii's Pearl Harbor stars John Wayne as Rockwell Torrey, a larger-than-life U.S. Navy captain. Patricia Neal portrays Maggie, an attractive Navy nurse who catches Rockwell's eye. The film's all-star cast also includes Kirk Douglas, Tom Tryon, Burgess Meredith and Dana Andrews, Turner Classic Movies' star of the month for July.

7 p.m. on FOOD
Supermarket Stakeout

The new episode "Globetrotting Trouble" opens as four chefs dish up their best version of a satisfying coffee-shop breakfast. Things get fancier after that, as host Alex Guarnaschelli tasks the chefs with creating a globetrotting dish that will transport the taste buds of judges Scott Conant and Antonia Lofaso. In a climactic face-off, the two finalists must create a dish that includes a fabulous filling for one of them to snag a year of free groceries.

7 p.m. on BRAVO
Below Deck Down Under

In a new episode called "The Pirate's Booty," the crew winds up in hot water with Captain Jason, and Magda struggles to stay on top of her duties in the laundry. Meanwhile, a pirate-themed party challenges Culver to earn his stripes as the crew's Entertainment Officer, but when guests ask him to jump in the hot tub, Tumi is shocked by what she sees.

7 p.m. on MTV
Teen Mom: Young and Pregnant

Rachel and Kayla J go to Amour's third birthday party in the new episode "They Were Together." Meanwhile, several questions about Kiaya's complicated history with X'zayveon arise, and Luke is caught in the middle after Kayla's confrontation with his family. Elsewhere, Madisen and Christian struggle through the hassle of moving.

8 p.m. on FOOD
Kitchen Crash

Host Jeff Mauro and three chefs arrive in West Babylon, N.Y., to turn a neighborhood Casino Block Party into a world-class cooking competition in the new episode "Rolling the Dice," with the chefs trying to persuade homeowners to let them raid their home fridges and pantries for their ingredients. Chef Justin Sutherland helps Mauro judge the chefs' efforts as they prepare a hipster brunch that includes an appetizer and main dish.

11 p.m. on FREEFRM
Motherland: Fort Salem

Tally (Jessica Sutton) finds a reason to keep fighting after reuniting with her mother, May (guest star Jillian Fargey), in the new episode "Book Club." Elsewhere, Abigail and Adil (Ashley Nicole Williams, Tony Giroux) find their home has changed when they return to Fort Salem. Meanwhile, Scylla and Edwin (Amalia Holm, Hrothgar Mathews) team up and try to reach Raelle (Taylor Hickson), and Sterling and Anacostia (Luc Roderique, Demetria McKinney) collaborate on an escape strategy.

“Movie: Purple Hearts”

Reality begins to blur for struggling singer-songwriter Cassie (Sofia Carson, “Songbird”) and Luke (Nicholas Galitzine, “Cinderella”), a Marine with a troubled past, when they marry solely for the military benefits and then tragedy strikes in this musical romancer from directors Ben Lewin (“The Catcher Was a Spy”) and Elizabeth Allen Rosenbaum (“Sneakerella”). (ORIGINAL)

“Uncoupled”

Darren Star (“Sex and the City”) and Jeffrey Richman (“Modern Family”) are the creative forces behind this comedy that stars Neil Patrick Harris as Michael, who is blindsided when his husband walks out after 17 years together. Now he has to confront two sobering realities — losing his soulmate and life in New York City as a gay man in his mid-forties. (ORIGINAL)

movie review

BY JAY BOBBIN

Nearing 50 years old, ‘Jaws’ retains its bite

Especially appropriate viewing during the summer, a certain movie still generates immediate fear of going in the water.

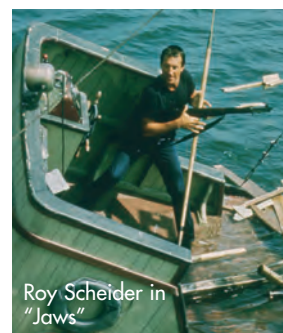

It's not hard to guess the film in question is “Jaws,” whose monstrous success put director Steven Spielberg on the map. AMC shows the 1975 classic Friday, July 29, and Saturday, July 30 (with the first two sequels also running there this month). The picture's legendary production problems, which included a malfunctioning mechanical “shark,” provide a lesson in how the result still can succeed.

In the adaptation of Peter Benchley's bestseller, the gruesome death of a moonlight swimmer causes concern among residents and officials of tourist-supported Amity Island. Eventually, the sheriff, a shark expert and a local shark hunter (played by the ideal trio of Roy Scheider, Richard Dreyfuss and Robert Shaw) join forces to go to sea to find and eliminate the recurring threat.

The pursuit is thrilling and involving, backed by a brilliant John Williams score that incorporates one of the most famous musical themes in screen history. However, what really sells “Jaws” is the creative approach by Spielberg, who has admitted that he thought he'd be fired by producers Richard D. Zanuck and David Brown (or the studio, Universal, which scored one of the biggest hits in screen history by sticking with him) at any of numerous points during the location filming in New England.

One of Spielberg's smartest decisions was to not play his hand too early in showing the shark, letting the audience's imagination do much of the work for him. When the ever-hungry villain finally does appear, it's a surprise of the sort that prompted many moviegoers to scream, all the more loudly because Spielberg knowingly had lulled them into a comfort zone by that moment.

“Movie: Infinitum: Subject Unknown”

Shot entirely on an iPhone during lockdown in the U.K., this 2021 sci-fi actioner follows Jane (Tori Butler Hart), who is trapped in an experiment in a parallel universe and is forced to find a way to alter her reality before she is lost forever. Ian McKellen, Conleth Hill and Wendy Muir Hart (“Two Down,” “The Isle”) also star for director Matthew Butler Hart.

“Movie: Racing With the Moon”

Richard Benjamin (“Mermaids,” “My Favorite Year”) directed this 1984 drama that stars Sean Penn and Nicolas Cage as small-town World II-era teens who attempt to have one last hurrah before joining the Marines but events take them in sharply different directions. Elizabeth McGovern, John Karlen and Rutanya Alda are also in the cast.

“Movie: Gunfight at the O.K. Corral”

Of their numerous screen teamings over the course of their careers, longtime friends Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas had one of their very best with their re-creation of a legendary Old West showdown. In director John Sturges' excellent 1957 Western, Lancaster plays lawman Wyatt Earp, and Douglas is Doc Holliday. Dennis Hopper portrays a member of the Clantons, the gang they oppose.

“Paper Girls”

While out delivering newspapers, four girls find themselves caught in the crossfire between warring factions of time travelers and subsequently catapulted into the future, where they must find their way home. It's a journey that brings them face-to-face with their adult selves in this fantasy drama series that is based on the graphic novels by Brian K. Vaughan. Camryn Jones and Sofia Rosinsky star. ## Catching up with ... Billy Garrett

Former county commissioner leads state museum

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

"The longer I've been here, the more I am humbled by the position," said Billy Garrett, former Doña Ana County commissioner, director of the New Mexico History Museum (NMHM) in Santa Fe.

After eight years on the county commission (2011-18), Garrett was "trying to figure out what I was going to do next," he said, when he got an offer to become NMHM interim director. Garrett was named permanent executive director a couple of weeks before COVID-19 hit, closing the museum and public buildings across the country.

The shutdown "afforded us an opportunity as a staff to become a lot more comfortable doing things remotely," Garrett said. The museum continues to encourage visitors to come to the museum and is also creating "opportunities for people to see some of these things online," he said.

A good example is "Fred Harvey Weekend," which NMHM had been hosting for a decade to celebrate the Harvey House restaurants and hotels that began springing up along the Santa Fe Railroad in 1876, connecting New Mexico and the West to other parts of the country.

BILLY GARRETT

Instead of canceling the event in 2020 because of the pandemic, Garrett and his staff changed the format into a Zoom lecture series and an "online cooking show (with) really great chefs in Santa Fe" sharing their recipes with an audience from a national and international audience that "was cooking along with us," he said.

Last year's event was a hybrid, with an in-person dinner in Santa Fe and additional online content. The 2022 event is Nov. 11-15 in Santa Fe, Lamy and Las Vegas, New Mexico, and the "Setting the Standard:

The Fred Harvey Company and Its Legacy" exhibit continues at NMHM through 2024.

"That's an important indication of the direction we're taking as a museum," Garrett said. "A good part of that is trying to figure out how we can be more relevant and more connected to people within New Mexico and who are interested in New Mexico."

NMHM also has important material for researchers, writers and students, Garrett said, and is "working very hard" to get materials digitized and available online. The museum also has an "aggressive educational program" to connect it with teachers and students statewide.

Garrett is also busy with a major project to preserve the 400-year-old Palace of the Governors. Work began in 2018 and will continue for about two more years, he said.

Current exhibits at NMHM include "Curative Powers: New Mexico's Hot Springs," which closes Sept. 4; "The Palace Seen and Unseen: A Convergence of History and Archaeology," which continues through June 2026; "WORDS on the Edge" poetry exhibition that closes Aug. 31; "The Massacre of Don Pedro Villalazur," "The First World War" and "Telling New Mexico: Stories from Then and Now," that continue through 2030.

Garrett is also excited about an exhibit that opens Aug. 7 and continues for a year at NMHM: "Honoring Tradition and Innovation: 100-Years of Santa Fe's Indian Market 1922-2022." The exhibition will include 250 objects associated with the past century of the market, which annually includes the largest juried Native American art show in the world.

The exhibit demonstrates "changing federal Indian policy," Garrett said, showing the shift from "paternalism to one where Native Americans are much more in control of how their work is presented and who judges they do and directs sales of their items."

As museum director, "I'm constantly finding out new things and seeing new things," Garrett said.

During a TV interview he did in a room in the Palace of the Governors, for example, Garrett said the camera lights "caught a shadow in one corner," showing a faint pictograph scratched into the wall more than a hundred years ago as part of an exhibit of findings and artists' renderings from an archeological dig north of Santa Fe.

Garrett found similar etchings in other corners of the room, but "I can't find any references to any of these in our historic documentation. No one in the museum had seen them before."

Garrett, who retired from the U.S. Forest Service in 2009 before running for county commission, said there is more he wants to accomplish at NMHM "before I retire yet again."

He and his wife, Cynthia, sold their house in Las Cruces to make the move to Santa Fe, but "Las Cruces and Doña Ana County are in my blood," Garrett said. "It's my home. It's always my sort of spiritual anchor point."

History of history museum

Housed in the Palace of the Governors and two other buildings in Santa Fe's historic district, the New Mexico History Museum (NMHM) includes a library of 6,000 volumes, a large map collection, 800,000 to a million images and 16,000 objects.

NMHM is part of the largest state-sponsored museum system in the United States and is managed by the New Mexico Department of Cultural Affairs.

The Palace of the Governors was built in 1610 and first used to exhibit the collections of the Historical Society of New Mexico in 1885. The Territorial Legislature authorized its use by the Museum of New Mexico in 1909. The building became a National Historic Landmark in 1960 and was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1966.

Major Gen. Lew Wallace (1827-1905) wrote the final chapters of "Ben-Hur: A Tale of the Christ" (the best-selling American novel of the 19th century) in the palace while serving as New Mexico territorial governor in the late 1870s. It was featured on a 1+1/4-cent postage stamp in 1960.

The palace became NMHM's home in 2009. The museum also includes the Chávez Library Building, built in 1907, purchased by the state in 1990, and named for Fray Angélico Chávez (1910-96), a priest, author, archivist and artist; and the Pete V. Domenici Building, which opened in 2009 and is named for New Mexico's longest serving U.S. senator.

Cheers from one New Mexico performer to another. Comedian John Padon and Jonathan Banks of "Breaking Bad" fame share a beverage in Las Vegas. Padon, an Albuquerque native, will bring his touring "Atomic Comedy" tour to the Rio Grande Theatre Wednesday, July 27.

Native New Mexican comes to Las Cruces for comedy show

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH

Las Cruces Bulletin

John Padon is bringing Atomic Comedy to Las Cruces Wednesday, July 27, at the Rio Grande Theatre.

From a long comedy career starting in Albuquerque, then to La Vegas, Nevada; Hawaii; and other places across the country, Padon brings his experience as he starts a tour of smaller southwestern cities. Joining him in turn on stage are national headliners Curt Fletcher and Mark Doyle.

Padon said Fletcher is "very funny," and just sold a movie script. He is bringing a diverse group of amazing comedians to Las Cruces for the 80-minute show.

"I think it's going to be great for Las Cruces," Padon said. "I have been a comedian and TV writer for more than 30 years. I have an Emmy Award for comedy television writing and owned my own theater and show in Planet Hollywood and cruise ships around the world."

In 2016, Padon sold his comedy businesses, Sin City Comedy and Sin City Theatre, and moved to Maui. But in Maui, he got bored and created the "Maui Comedy Series."

Now, after moving back to his roots in Albuquerque, Padon is at it again with Atomic Comedy.

"We will be performing our inaugural show July 27 at the Rio Grande Theatre," he said.

His plans for the future of the show include other well-known names and streaming stars.

"I am putting together a tour of New Mexico cities to enable me to bring acts that would normally be too expensive for small venues," he said. "The venues include Taos, Farmington, Santa Fe and Albuquerque for now, and possibly will grow from there."

Born and raised in Albuquerque, Padon was working in the insurance business when he won a comedy contest in town. That's how he ended up going to work for an improv comedy club, traveled around the country and opened for numerous acts in Las Vegas.

Eventually, he was approached by the producers of "The Wonder Years" and contributed to its winning an Emmy as a staff writer on the show. That gave him the inspiration to return to Las Vegas and build his own theater to produce Sin City Comedy and run a burlesque show at his theater.

"I got to say leaving home and traveling for 30 years really makes you appreciate New Mexico," he said.

More about Padon can be found at www.facebook.com/PadonProduction-sLLC and tickets for the Wednesday, July 27, show can be found for $25 at riograndetheatre.org or at the door.

‘Symbols of New Mexico’ opens July 29 at Branigan

BULLETIN REPORT

Branigan Cultural Center (BCC), 501 N. Main St. downtown, will host a new exhibition, “Symbols of New Mexico: A Personal Experience,” which features artwork by artist Victoria Chick.

The exhibit opens Friday, July 29, and continues through Saturday, Sept. 24. Chick will lead a gallery talk at BCC at 5:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 2.

Even after 17 years in New Mexico, Chick considers herself a newcomer, which she believes allows her to see with fresh eyes the landscapes, animals and plants that are symbols of New Mexico, the City of Las Cruces said in a news release. “Chick enjoys these uniquely New Mexican characteristics and incorporates them into her large, colorful paintings,” the news release said. “Her use of a cat motif within her artwork makes note of the role her pet cats have in drawing her attention to small elements in nature that she might have overlooked.”

Ten of Chick’s paintings are featured in the exhibition.

Chick is a painter and printmaker who is an active art collector. She has served as an instructor of life drawing, painting and art history at several colleges. Her artwork is found in galleries and museums across several states. Currently, Chick is actively involved in working for the establishment of the Southwest Regional Museum of Art and Art Center in Silver City, New Mexico. She is a member of the Silver City Art Association.

BCC is open 10 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Tuesday-Friday and 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Saturday. There is no admission charge. BCC is accessible from RoadRUNNER Transit Route 1 Stop 1.

Do you know how to identify a natural gas leak? You might smell sulfur or rotten eggs, you may notice dirt or debris shooting up out of a hole in the ground, dead or dying vegetation in an otherwise green area, and a loud hissing or roaring sound near pipeline markers. These and many more are all tell tale signs of a natural gas or pipeline leak. Use all your senses, even common sense and report any possible leaks to Zia Natural Gas Company. When in doubt call us out!

Local writers participate in Celebrate Authors

BULLETIN REPORT

Celebrate Authors 2022 will be held 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 18, at Thomas Branigan Library, 200 E. Picacho Ave., with nearly 50 local and regional artists participating.

Here are some of this year's participating authors.

• Husband-and-wife Alexis D. Johnson and B.A. Johnson have a fondness for mythical creatures, rich worlds and believable characters riddled with flaws and strengths. They grew up in Las

JOHNSONS

Cruces and now live in El Paso. The Johnsons jointly and independently write epic fantasy novels and recently released their first co-authored book, "Song and Wind," book one of the Siren Wars. An epic fantasy on the darker side, it follows a morally grey, dishonored soldier struggling to find hope and redemption in a savage world. The authors drew inspiration from the birdlike Sirens of Greek mythology. The Johnsons love weaving a compelling story that sweeps readers into new, unforgettable worlds.

• Carlos Melendrez is the great, great, grandson of Pablo Melendres, who founded the City of Las Cruces in 1849. His book is "I Know Where The Bodies Are Buried: There Are Stories to Tell, Questions to Ask. True Exciting Stories of Southern New Mexico's Early History! Unsung Tales of The Founding Family of Las Cruces." Pablo Melendres arrived here in 1843 when this was Mexican territory. He was one of the founders of the Mexican, Doña Ana Bend Colony. He became Doña Ana's first alcalde (mayor) and was appointed land commissioner by the Mexican government. He also oversaw U.S. territory stretching from the west Texas border to the edge of California, more than 1,000 miles long and 300 miles wide as probate judge.

• Elaine Hampton is the author of "Seekers of a Stable Sky: Stories of Altruism and Immigration on the Mexican Border." This authentic insight into the often-misrepresented immigrant narrative highlights the personal sphere of the immigration seeker and exposes the impact of Trump-era immigration policies in the borderlands. Hampton has also published "Copper Stain: ASARCO's Legacy in El Paso," a history of the smelter in the years before it closed in the late 1990s as told by 62 ex-employees. "Anay's Will to Learn" is the account of a teenager from southern Mexico who was wooed to Ciudad Juárez by lies that she would receive housing and education if she agreed to work in the maquiladoras.

• L. C. Hayden is the author of the Harry Bronson and Aimee Brent mystery series. "What Lies Beyond the Fence" was a finalist for the Silver Falchion Award in the best suspense readers' choice categories. Hayden's other works have been finalists for the Agatha and LCC awards and made the Pennsylvania Top 40, Barnes & Noble

HAYDEN

Top 10 and Kindle Best Seller Lists. Her newest Bronson release, "When Doubts Creep In," focuses on Mike, Bronson's best friend and ex-partner, whom Bronson fears has gone rogue.

Hayden is also the author of the nonfiction angel/miracle series. She advises writers to write for the love of it.

• Michael S. Potts published "Highgrove" in 2014, "Red Horse Saloon" in 2020 and his current work, "Robert Stright" will continue with "Allie Stright," the second book in the Strights of Thistlekirk series. The books are historical fictions that take place in 1787 in and around Baltimore and Paris. A youngest son is sent off to learn to be a sailor and merchant. Many adventures await him in Paris and the Azores. Potts is a poet, songwriter and author. His poems have been published in the National Library of Poetry "Tomorrow's Dream." He is publishing a poetry anthology, "Reflections on an Early Morning." Potts was born in Artesia, New Mexico and grew up Las Cruces, where he lives with Kathy, his wife of 50 years.

POTTS

• Sandra Marshall's historical mystery, "Death in the Time of Pancho Villa," was a finalist for a 2021 Willa Award. In the book, Rose Westmoreland comes to 1911 El Paso looking for her missing husband. What she finds in the unfamiliar, porous culture of the borderlands is new friendships and new inspiration feeding her passion for photography. When a reporter recognizes her talents with a camera, Rose becomes involved with the danger and intrigue of the Mexican Revolution, just a stone's throw away across the Rio Grande. After three college degrees and a career as an archaeologist, mostly in the Southwest, Marshall is settled in Las Cruces, writing and doing photography. "I write because I love historical research, finding the details that bring a time and place to life," Marshall said.

• Carol Potenza taught biochemistry at NMSU before transitioning to full-time mystery writer. Her first book was the Tony Hillerman Prize winner, "Hearts of the Missing," followed by "The Third Warrior" and "Spirit Daughters," the second and third books in the Nicky Matthews mystery series. "Spirit Daughters" launches Fire-Sky Police Sgt. Nicky Matthews into her most difficult and personal case yet. Potenza loves the combination of strong women sleuths, paranormal and murder mystery mixed with science; what she calls

• H. Clark McCaffrey's "Observations, Opinions & Sentiments" contains poems, essays and a little love story, compiled from a lifetime of living, learning, observing and developing a unique character of one human, who classifies himself as an animal, primate and Homo Sapiens. This animal wished to put in writing his varied thoughts to positively influence the living and maybe someone in the future. The author's observations and opinions on subjects may conflict with beliefs of many, but he hopes to open eyes on issues that people may have neglected. The writings are not meant to be an "in your face" lecture, but more of a discussion on certain elements of life.

• R. L. Hayden is the author of Rick Prescott paranormal thrillers and the Tyler Dawkins adventure thriller series. The stories deal with ghosts, UFOs, powerful relics and similar themes. Hayden's newest release, "Joan's Relic," stems from the idea that when Joan of Arc was burned at the stake parts of her bones were all that was left of her. These fragments became the powerful, magical relics which people fought to possess. Hayden is a veteran and retired schoolteacher. He spends his time writing his own books but also helping authors format their books for Amazon. Hayden advises authors to follow their dreams. "Don't ever let anyone discourage you." • Samuel O Sanchez wrote his memoir, "Born and Raised in Space," to let people know what his life was like growing up in small towns. Sanchez was born in Santa Rita, New Mexico, in 1946. The family moved to Morenci, Arizona, in 1952, where he went to school. During his senior year, the family moved back to Silver City, New Mexico. After attending Western New Mexico University, Sanchez transferred to NMSU and graduated in 1970 with a degree in electrical engineering. Sanchez worked for Kennecott Copper Corp. in Hurley, New Mexico, and for Lockheed Electronics in Las Cruces and the U.S. Army at White Sands Missile Range before retirement in 2016.

Day in the Life: LCU's Commercial Solid Waste

By Cassie McClure

"It's a matter of trust," said Las Cruces Utilities (LCU) Solid Waste Heavy Equipment Operator Mike Apodaca. "Customers trust that I do my job, and it's a trust I take seriously."

Apodaca is a part of the Solid Waste line of business at LCU, specifically as a Commercial trash truck driver. Even more specialized, he's the driver that picks up in tight spaces for the smaller dumpsters hidden in tight alleyways or smaller parking lots all over town, especially in the older neighborhoods.

Commercial dumpsters come in sizes from 1.5 to 8 cubic yards, depending on the needs of the business. When businesses only have space for a small dumpster, it may be picked up more than once a week for an additional charge. The same rules apply to dumpsters as regular trash: no hot ashes or coals, tires, dead animals, or hazardous materials, including medical waste. Construction or remodeling material should also not be included, and everything should be bagged. Any enclosures should be kept free and clear for the truck to be able to pick up the dumpster. Over the last 15 years, Apodaca has been a steady face in the community, picking up all over town. LCU Solid Waste Supervisor Philip Glasson explained that Apodaca's are one way to enhance customer service.

LCU Solid Waste Heavy Equipment Operator Mike Apodaca is the commercial route driver for dumpsters in tight spaces, which may be harder to reach due to being in back alleys or near power lines.

"This is how we can be more accommodating to our customer needs," Glasson said. "So many of our customers know who he is and wave to him. He's like the old-fashioned trash truck driver and plays a big role in keeping our city sanitary." Apodaca agrees and takes pride in meeting business owners and residents, from the very young to the older customers. "I asked one mom if I could buy her son a truck for Christmas because I would see them so often," he said. "And during the pandemic, another resident made me masks that she sewed herself."

Apodaca said that his route enables a bit of flexibility that allows for humanity as well. "My next stop after this is the cemetery," he said. "If there is a service in progress, I come back later. It's about respect for families and respect for our community. It's not important what we do, but how we do it."

SAFEGAS service provided to more than 43,000 customers.

"Meeting the great customers of my community is the best part of my job."

'Brews with the Bard: A Topsy Twelfth Night' event coming

BULLETIN REPORT

Blank Conversations Theatre Company (BCTC) is rounding out the summer with a special event, "Brews with the Bard: A Topsy Twelfth Night," at 7 p.m. Thursday, July 28, and Saturday, July 30, at Grounded Cafe, 300 N. Main St., at the intersection of Main Street and Las Cruces Avenue, downtown.

Inspired by the wildly popular "Drunk Shakespeare" phenomenon in New York and Chicago, 12 actors will attempt to perform a loosely improvised production of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," said BCTC co-founded Gus David Sanchez.

Along with Sanchez, the cast includes Emily James, Isaac Lucero, Yasmine Jahangiri, Peyton Womble, Nick Mayeux, Alyssa Gose, Jensen Stell, Isaac Goldstein, Darcy Hartman, Mario Nuñez and Caitlin Skibyak. The production is being directed by Riley Merritt and stage managed by Eva Cullen.

"This is meant to be a laid back, relaxed production compared to our previous productions," Merritt said. "We wanted to have a fun and different show that starts to wrap up the summer and get into our bigger productions and doing 'Brews with the Bard' was our way of doing that."

Tickets are $20, which includes the show and an alcoholic beverage.

During the evening, BCTC will raffle off a one-of-a-kind beer pitcher and pint-glass combo, Sanchez said. Raffle tickets are $5 each.

Tickets for the performances will be available at the door an hour before each show.

Big doings at Electronic Caregiver in Las Cruces

COURTESY PHOTO

On hand for the $100,000 check passing are El Paso Electric Regional Director of Government Affairs Eric Montgomery, Electronic Caregiver Executive Director John Muñoz, Savannah Zamora of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico, EPE closing fund community advisor John Hummer, Electronic Caregiver founder and CEO Anthony Dohrmann, Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance President and CEO Davin Lopez and Electronic Caregiver President Joe Baffoe. The money will be used to assist in the creation of 120 Las Cruces jobs as Electronic Caregiver continues to expand.

City, state, El Paso Electric funds support job growth

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces community is “coming together as a team, as a city to help you grow,” Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance President and CEO David Lopez said Wednesday morning, July 13, as MVEDA, El Paso Electric (EPE), the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM), the City of Las Cruces and other partners presented a $100,000 check to Electronic Caregiver (ECG).

The money is from EPE’s New Mexico Economic Development Fund “to assist in the creation of 120 new jobs here in Las Cruces,” Lopez said.

It is “a game-changing investment,” said John Hummer, one of EPE’s community advisors on the $20 million fund. MVEDA helps identify projects for funding and CFSNM manages grant funds.

Hummer said he is impressed with the “passion and energy level” at ECG.

“There’s something going on here,” he said.

“We’re doing well, we’re going gangbusters,” said ECG Executive Director John Muñoz, who thanked the community “for embracing what we want to do and our vision.”

ECG has grown from a handful of employees to nearly 300 today and will continue to expand, said ECG founder and CEO Anthony Dohrmann.

ECG buys tower

“We bought it. This is our home,” Electronic Caregiver (ECG) President Joe Baffoe said. “It’s an investment in Las Cruces.”

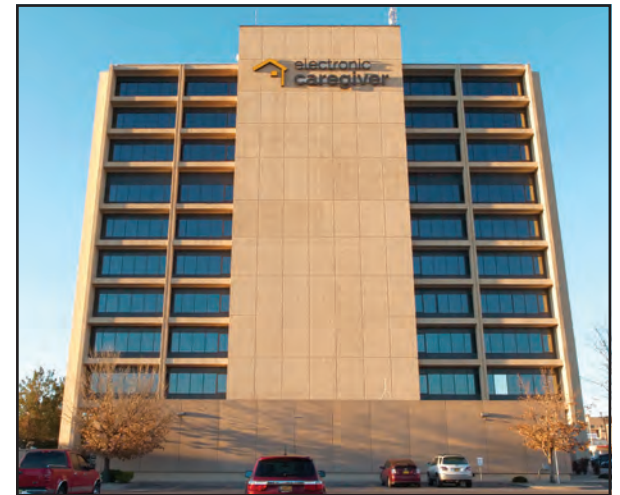

Baffoe was talking about the Electronic Caregiver Tower, 506 S. Main St.

ECG moved into the tower, 506 S. Main St., in 2017 with 25 employees and has continued to expand its footprint there. Its name has been on the tower for the past three years.

Baffoe said the purchase was completed July 11 for $8.9 million.

The tower, built in 1962, is 120 feet tall (easily the tallest building in Las Cruces) and has 11 stories and 105,000 square feet, Baffoe said.

He said $4.5 million in upgrades

Originally built in 1967, Las Cruces’ tallest building now belongs to Electronic Caregiver.

have been made to the building in the past five years, and ECG plans more, including an updated lobby, a health and wellness center in the basement and upgraded restrooms.

Baffoe credited Pioneer Bank for its assistance in the purchase. Pioneer President Kiel Hoffman is “the best banker in town,” Baffoe said. “We love them.”

ECG’s footprint also includes the Addison Care building next door to the tower.

Dohrmann said 99 percent of ECG employees are New Mexico State University graduates.

“We couldn’t have put this team together anywhere else in the country,” he said.

“It really does take a village,” said ECG President Joe Baffoe, who came from Chicago at Dohrmann’s request to join the company.

ECG has brought $100 million in investment to Las Cruces and will raise an additional $250 million in the next one-two years, Baffoe said. ECG’s goal is to become the first Fortune 500 company in New Mexico and “the pre-eminent healthcare company” in the United States and the world.

MVEDA’s role is to identify projects, conduct ROI analysis and due diligence, and then provides a recommendation to the Community Advisors who have final approval. The Community Foundation of Southern NM manages the overall grant dollars for all applicants receiving funding.

ECG’s workforce expansion is also supported by funding from the State of New Mexico Job Incentive Training Program (JTIP) and the City of Las Cruces WagePlus program.

ECG is a digital health technology company founded in 2009.

A look at real estate trends

By STEVE MONTANEZ

For the Bulletin

Interest rates were the No. 1 talking point during the month of June.

Despite a federal rate hike of 0.75 basis points, home sales still performed well in Las Cruces, with increases in stats for June 2021.

As predicted, inventory increased by 10 percent from the prior month, however, the number of homes sold in June saw a small decrease.

Homes are staying on the market a little longer this homebuyer season, but homes within the median price are still being absorbed by the spring buyer season and still closing at more than 100 percent of asking price.

Buyers are finding solutions, sellers are offering incentives and homes are still closing despite talks of recession in the coming months.

It's still a great time to be a homeowner in Las Cruces.

Home Builders to present $50,000 to nonprofits

BULLETIN REPORT

The Las Cruces Home Builders Association (LCHBA) will award $50,400 to 13 local nonprofits during its Casa for a Cause Awards Banquet beginning at 6 p.m. Thursday, July 28, at New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

The money comes from the sale of the fifth LCHBA Casa for a Cause home, built by JMS Construction earlier this year. Each year, LCHBA invites nonprofits to submit donation requests. This year, the LCHBA board of directors selected 13 nonprofit projects to fund from the 32 requests submitted, said LCHBA Executive Officer Nicole Black.

With the July 28 donations, LCHBA will have given back $395,000 to the community through Casa for a Cause, Black said.

The first Casa for a Cause, the 2014 LCHBA Anniversary House, was built by Hakes Brothers and gave back $64,000 to the community. The 2015 LCHBA Anniversary House was built by Veloz Homes and gave back $82,000. The 2017 LCHBA Anniversary House was built by Arista Development and gave back $74,000. The 2019 LCHBA Anniversary House was built by Desert View Homes Home and gave back a record-breaking $125,000.

LCHBA also was able to complete the LCHBA Aggie Builder Endowed Scholarship in the New Mexico State University College of Business, which is awarded to a student annually pursuing a trade at NMSU, Black said.

LCHBA has invited the executive officers from the nonprofits receiving this year's donations to the July 28 event, along with LCHBA members, local business and community leaders and community members.

The Las Cruces Bulletin is a co-sponsor of the banquet. Music will be provided by Rudy Saenz.

Life-long learning: Everyone has something to teach us

One of the characteristics consistently discussed in the development of a 21st Century workforce is understanding the need to embrace "life-long learning."

It's no surprise that the world of work is in a constant state of change, so it's critical to stay on top of learning new technology, new trends, and even new modes of communication.

But I think life-long learning goes deeper than that. It's about being "teachable" – willing to learn from others – and having an openness to mentors that will be part of the journey of your life.

Teachers are critical mentors on that journey. I was blessed to have really top-notch teachers, especially in high school. Without ever expressly stating it, they taught me that, "Those who forget history are doomed to repeat it." Watching the miniseries, The Holocaust, in history class as a 9th grader opened my eyes to a reality I could never have imagined – man's inhumanity to man. Reading Alexander Solzhenitsyn in 10th grade English class warned of the depravity of governments that showed no regard for their people. My world history teacher in 11th grade assigned us research papers comparing characteristics of the Roman Empire before its collapse to things we could see present-day in the U.S. They were prescient in understanding that civilizations separated by time and space were really not so different.

TRACEY BRYAN
The Bridge of Southern New Mexico

My career journey started just a year later at Blue Bell Creameries as an intern. Men who are now recognized in the Texas Business Hall of Fame were my mentors. The first day of my public relations career, I learned, "Everybody needs an editor," which helped me see that someone else's input can always make you better. I also learned, "Never make a promise you can't keep," which is a principle for building and maintaining credibility that I cling to to this day.

My world really opened up when I moved into the foundation world in San Diego. My mentors there were the men and women of 20 different cultural groups, backgrounds, educational and income levels who overcame decades of division to revitalize their under-invested community. Working alongside a family foundation, I saw the power of art, culture, passion and commitment to transform blight into economic opportunity and an improved quality of life.

I learned the power of asking the right questions and then listening well to find areas of agreement and shared ownership of solutions. One of those amazing people taught me, "No one rises to low expectations."

Another who saw real issues in her the community said, "I used to think, 'Someone ought to do something about that.' What I didn't know is I was the person I was waiting for."

All that I had learned before ultimately became the foundation upon which The Bridge of Southern New Mexico's board of directors and all of our community partners would later build. I saw the power of shared actions when community leaders came together as partners and peers to leverage their collective resources to make change. I learned how to look at things through multiple lenses to find "win-win" solutions. And, out of necessity, I mastered the art of "learn while doing."

The young people I interviewed from that first class of Trailblazers at Arrowhead Park Early College High School taught me that just one college class could change the identity and the aspirations of a 9th grader – "I thought college would be too hard for me. But now I realize I am a college student." And I learned to seek "outcomes" for our work together, not just "outputs."

What I've come to realize is that everyone has something to teach us ... if we're open and teachable. The second we think we have all the answers is the second we stop growing.

Cruces teams perform well at Lordsburg charity tournament

LORDSBURG – Working hard to bring awareness to Mental Health and Suicide, the community of Lordsburg hosted hundreds of visitors from far and near as the 13th Annual Jessie Darnell Memorial 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament and the Maverick Movement 5K Fun Run & Walk for Mental Health Awareness July 15-17.

There were 110 teams for the 3-on-3 fundraising basketball tournament from throughout New Mexico and Arizona. The age divisions go from 10-and-under to the open men's which is 17-and-up.

This was the first year there was an "old division" for those 35-and-up.

The top two teams from the open division were both from Las Cruces. The Chili Peppers took first place, and runners-up were a team featuring Joe Garza, former New Mexico State University Aggie basketballer.

"It is always encouraging and refreshing to be able to host this memorial-fund-raising event to help give out scholarships to Lordsburg High School graduating student-athletes," said tournament organizer and Lordsburg High School head coach for boys' basketball and track and field D.J. Saucedo. "To date we have been able to award $30,000 in scholarships and as long as we have the help and support of our community, we plan to keep giving."

The Hidalgo County Health Council was out at LHS Gymnasium handing out bags filled with resources and information on a local and statewide level. Along

Proper golf etiquette courteous, leads to faster rounds

It's time to revisit some do's and don'ts about golfing etiquette. Unlike sports such as hockey and mud wrestling, golf has long been thought to be a genteel game, rich in tradition and replete with myriad practices falling under the umbrella of sporting manners.

Arnold Palmer had this to say about manners: "From the time I first stepped on a golf course, my father made sure that I observed golf etiquette. What that meant to me then, and what it means now, is being considerate of other golfers, taking care of the course, playing quickly, and controlling my temper."

Arnold, Gary, and Jack have long been the poster icons for golf manners.

For some who are new to the game, and some who simply have not had anyone explain golfing things to them, golfers are expected to adhere to a rather universal set of customs and behaviors – in other words, they practice good golf etiquette.

Golf is a game that relies on the integrity of each player to show respect for other players to not only abide by the rules of the game but to play fair and be considerate to fellow golfers. According to official USGA dictum: "All players should conduct themselves in a disciplined manner, demonstrating courtesy and sportsmanship at all times, irrespective of how competitive they may be. This is the spirit of the game."

So let's take a look at some of the specific USGA guidelines.

- First, be on time and ready to play so you don't inconvenience others.

- Next, dress neatly and appropriately in normal golf attire and accordance with local dress codes. (Note, this has changed some in recent years, and is far more relaxed than in years past.)

CHARLIE BLANCHARD
Golf Doctor

- Choose the correct teeing ground that best matches your ability; that means "tee it forward."
- Play "ready golf" wherever possible, meaning that the player who is ready to hit should step up and play without delay.

- Stay silent while other players are hitting their shots or putting. Wherever you stand, strive to be as unobtrusive as possible when others are hitting.

- Wait until the group up ahead is out of range of your best shot. Hitting into the group ahead is the most common source of antagonism (and fights) on the golf course.

- Walk or ride briskly between shots, and be ready to play when it's your turn.

- Respect the golf course by replacing or sanding divots and raking bunkers. It's a courtesy to leave the course in better condition than you found it. Carry a small ball mark repair tool with you and be sure to repair your ball's pitch mark on the putting green.

- Avoid stepping on the line that other players are putting on. Replace the flagstick into the hole with great care so as not to disturb the cup edge. If there is a chance of an out-of-bounds shot or a lost ball, hit a provisional ball.

- Throwing and slamming of clubs, temper tantrums and rude, obnoxious behavior are never acceptable.

- Keep your motorized golf cart well out of the way and behind players, while safely away from greens, thereby minimizing damage to the turf.

- Treat others with respect; behavior should always be as a gentleman or a lady.

Regarding pace of play, the main thing I notice on busy days at local golf courses is that slow groups seem oblivious to others trying to keep a reasonable pace. Some folks don't realize if you take slightly over 100 strokes a round (most common), and take an extra 30 seconds for each one, you will add nearly an hour to finish your game.

Rockets, man!

Spaceport America Cup winners announced for 2022

BULLETIN REPORT

Spaceport America and the Experimental Sounding Rocket Association (ESRA) have announced the winners of the 2022 Spaceport America Cup sponsored by Sierra Space. The University of Sydney took home the overall winners' trophy after impressing the judges with their 30,000-foot rocket launch.

More than 1,300 participants attended the 2022 Spaceport America Cup in southern New Mexico in June, representing 95 higher education institutes from 16 countries across the globe. Student teams participated in presentations and displays at the Las Cruces Convention Center on June 21, followed by two and a half days of launching at Spaceport America's vertical launch area.

"The Cup fulfills Spaceport America's mission to promote educational involvement in spaceport activities and training of the workforce to develop the skills needed to enter aerospace careers" said Scott McLaughlin, Executive Director of the New Mexico Spaceport Authority. "We have seen many rocketeers return to Spaceport America once they have graduated and joined the aerospace workforce. We are particularly excited to see so many of our local institutions getting involved in the competition this year and competing for the Chile Cup."

The Chile Cup award was created by Spaceport America to help encourage friendly competition between New Mexico and borderland universities. The first award was won by the University of New Mexico (UNM) in 2019 with New Mexico State University (NMSU) as the only other competitor. This year, four local teams participated including UNM, NMSU, New Mexico Tech, and the University of Texas-El Paso with NMSU taking home to Chile Cup for the first time.

"I'm extremely proud of all of the teams who joined us at the 2022 Spaceport America" said Cliff Olmsted, President and Chairperson, Experimental Sounding Rocket Association. "Each team faces their own unique challenges and hurdles to overcome throughout the competition. The caliber of the students after gaining this experience is invaluable. Watching the positive impact that Spaceport America Cup has on the world is inspiring."

The Spaceport America Cup is the world's largest intercollegiate rocketry engineering and has been held in New Mexico since 2017. The event is a partnership between the Experimental Sounding Rocket Association and Spaceport America.

The year-long engineering competition begins at the start of the academic year and requires teams to manage complex projects designing amateur high-power rockets carrying avionics and payloads to 10,000 and 30,000 feet in altitude.

Drawn by the opportunity to collaborate and compete at a world-class spaceport facility, student teams are also exposed to this premiere recruitment opportunity for sponsors which included Sierra Space, Blue Origin, Kansas City National Security Campus managed by Honeywell, Virgin Galactic, Mountain View Regional Medical Center, and Fiore Industries Inc. in 2022.
