OF LOVE ME TENDER ON 20TH CENTURY STUDIOS

Q: I've seen a lot of Elvis Presley movies on television lately. Which were the first and last ones he made?

A: The first was "Love Me Tender" (1956), which actually was renamed from the original "The Reno Brothers" to coordinate with the title song, a giant hit for Presley that he performed in the film. He played one of the Reno siblings during the Civil War, youngest brother Clint, who tended to the homefront while his brothers fought in the battle. Top-billed Richard Egan portrayed the oldest brother, while the role of another Reno was filled by James Drury, later to become "The Virginian" on weekly TV.

Presley's final film as an actor was "Change of Habit" (1969), casting him as an inner-city doctor who became enamored of a colleague — unaware that she was a nun working incognito. The picture's leading lady was Mary Tyler Moore, in the last movie she made under a contract with Universal Pictures. Interestingly, another co-star (as a cop) was Edward Asner, a year before he and Moore began their legendary TV work together on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show"; he also had worked earlier with Presley in "Kid Galahad" (1962). If it's Presley's last movie overall that you're looking for, though, that would be the concert attraction "Elvis on Tour" (1972) — which earned its year's Golden Globe Award for best documentary film. Hampton Roads and Richmond in Virginia were among the stops featured, as were Jacksonville, Fla., and San Antonio, Texas. After that, what turned out to be the superstar's career-concluding performances were in a couple of TV specials, "Elvis: Aloha From Hawaii" (1973) and "Elvis in Concert" (1977).

"OPPENHEIMER"

Since "Barbie" already has been released on home video, its chief rival at last summer's box office can dominate that field for brand-new product on its own this week. Writer-director Christopher Nolan's lengthy, much-acclaimed drama recalls the pivotal role played by physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer (portrayed superbly by Cillian Murphy) in the so-called "Manhattan Project," the code name for the development of atomic weapons during World War II. Convinced that the mission ultimately will have a positive effect, Oppenheimer is distraught by the much different outcome, prompting him to oppose further use of his work ... a change of position that superiors going all the way up to President Harry S. Truman (Gary Oldman) dismiss. The large and superb cast also includes Emily Blunt, Matt Damon, Robert Downey Jr., Florence Pugh, Josh Hartnett, Casey Affleck, Rami Malek, Kenneth Branagh, Jason Clarke, Tom Conti, Tony Goldwyn and Matthew Modine. Among the special features - three hours' worth, as long as the movie itself - is an extensive "making-of" documentary that includes behind-the-scenes footage and interviews with many of the film's principals.  $\star \star \star \star$  (R: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray, 4K Ultra HD, Digital and On Demand)

As it nears the end of its 30th-anniversary year and the conclusion of the 100th-anniversary year of Warner Bros., for which it remains a top hit in the studio's history – one of the best adaptations of a television series to date makes its 4K Ultra HD debut. Harrison Ford is cast ideally as Dr. Richard Kimble, wrongly accused and sentenced for his wife's (Sela Ward) murder, and headed toward prison when a freak accident frees him from custody  $\ldots$  and sends him on a hunt for a one-armed man (Andreas Katsulas) who was at the scene of the crime. Pursuing Kimble in turn is caustic, determined lawman Sam Gerard, played by Tommy Lee Jones in an Oscar-winning performance. Jeroen Krabbe, Joe Pantoliano, Julianne Moore and Jane Lynch also are in the great cast, and director Andrew Davis ("Under Siege") does a top-notch job of using Chicago locations. NBC's Lester Holt, who was working in that city at the time, turns up as a newscaster reporting on the case. ★★★★ (PG-13: AS, P, V)
