Police monitors will hold public meetings after council vote

By JUSTIN GARCIA

Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces City Council has amended a contract with a police monitoring firm to allow the public an opportunity to question the firm's work.

The council unanimously amended the professional services agreement between the City and OIR, a California-based police monitoring firm. The vote did not change the amount of money the city pays OIR. The contract remains valued at $75,000, the same as it's been since the city initially inked the deal with OIR in 2021. The amended contract stipulates that OIR will perform no more than four community outreach events in a fiscal year.

"This is really in response to the community wanting an opportunity to address (OIR)," said City Manager Ifo Pili.

OIR already performs several duties for the city and LCPD.

The contract stipulates that they audit the complaint investigation process, audit police operations to recommend changes following complaints, review lawsuits filed against LCPD, perform follow-up audits when needed, compile and analyze demographic statistics of people making complaints and perform on-site presentations for the city council.

OIR presents the results of their review to the council once every three months or so. The past reviews commonly noted LCPD's willingness to provide information and make changes to policy and procedure when needed, and they said that LCPD generally complied with best practices.

Prominent shooting deaths – including those of Teresa Gomez, who was killed by LCPD's Felipe Hernandez; Presley Eze, who was killed by LCPD's Brad Lundsford; Amelia Baca, who was killed by LCPD's Jared Cosper; and Antonio Valenzuela, who was killed by former LCPD officer Christopher Smelser – have led to greater calls for reform, transparency and accountability.

To that end, a group of citizens, including the Doña Ana Chapter President of the NAACP, called on the council to form a police oversight committee.

The council was lukewarm to the idea when it was pitched during a work session in May 2023.

Pili said the specifics of the OIR meetings, such as where they would take place, had yet to be decided.

"We haven't talked about where in the city," Pili said. "If there's an area in the city where we could get more participation, we'll go there. But at this point, we've contemplated council chambers."

Fire damages home on Bellamah Circle

Las Cruces firefighters extinguished a residential structure fire on Bellamah Circle Sunday morning, Feb. 4, 2024.

BULLETIN REPORT

A home on Bellamah Circle, a cul-de-sac south of Bellamah Drive a few blocks away from Lynn Middle School, was damaged by a fire on Sunday, according to the Las Cruces Fire Department. The LCFD said the fire was under control after 12 minutes and that one of the homeowners sustained "relatively minor injuries" that did not require hospitalization.

According to a news release, the LCFD responded at approximately 11:30 a.m. after a neighbor alerted the homeowners to the fire and found part of the home and a detached shed in flames. A search for occupants determined that everyone present had left.

The fire was still under investigation Monday and no damage estimates had been determined.

Local attorneys call for metro court in Doña Ana County

By JUSTIN GARCIA

Las Cruces Bulletin

When it became clear that Doña Ana County's population would exceed 200,000, the state legislature was spurred into action. Their goal was simple: prevent Doña Ana County from establishing a metropolitan court – something Bernalillo County has had for decades.

Now, a letter from a professional organization of area lawyers and judges expressed support for renewing that fight.

“As the second largest county in New Mexico, home to the second largest city, Las Cruces, and sitting along the Texas and Mexico Border, Doña Ana County has outgrown the limited jurisdiction of a traditional magistrate court,” reads a letter the Southern New Mexico Bar Association sent to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The letter continued, “We believe the greater Las Cruces area is prepared for and deserving of this expanded local judicial system. “

The move would consolidate the Doña Ana County magistrate court with multiple municipal courts.

“This expanded authority would allow the court to adjudicate criminal cases more expeditiously, provide crime victims better access to justice, and resolve complex litigation and contract disputes,” the letter said.

What is a metro court?

According to state law, metro courts handle petty misdemeanors and misdemeanor crimes with jail terms of less than a year. They also handle civil claims of less than $10,000 and are the court of record for domestic violence cases.

Metro courts do everything that magistrate and municipal courts do but combine those functions at a single courthouse. They rely on state funding and coordination for record keeping.

For example, a driver receiving a speeding ticket in Anthony would appear at the Doña Ana County metro court instead of the Anthony Municipal court. The same goes for cases in the county magistrate court, Las Cruces' municipal court, and Mesilla's municipal court, to name a few.

The Bernalillo County Metro Court – currently the state's only metro courthouse – has nineteen judges. A metro court in Doña Ana County would likely require between eight to twelve judges. Otherwise, a Doña Ana Metro Court would have the same role as the court in Bernalillo County.

2010 legislature blocked metro court

State law is the most significant hurdle to installing a metro court in southern New Mexico.

State law mandates a metro court will be established once a county reaches a population of 250,000 per the U.S. Census. Doña Ana County fell well short of that in the 2020 count, with a population of about 219,000.

Before 2010, the law stated that counties with populations of 200,000 received access to metro courts.

A bill sponsored by former House member Andy Nuñez (R-Hatch) and widely supported by the House of Representatives and Senate changed that in 2010. Initially, the bill wanted to set the population requirement to 350,000.

A fiscal impact report published in 2010 explains why the legislature overwhelmingly opposed a metro court in Las Cruces more than a decade ago.

“A metropolitan court is more expensive than a magistrate court,” the report reads. “In this time of critical state revenue shortfalls, this bill postpones the mandatory creation of a metropolitan court in Doña Ana County.”

At the time, New Mexico's budget contracted drastically following the Great Recession. Legislators were grappling with a $454 million shortfall that year. State expenses exceeded revenue by nearly half a billion dollars, leading the legislature to cut nine percent of the state's budget in 2010.

The fiscal impact report argued that creating a metro court in Las Cruces would have cost the state millions when it had nothing to spare.

The report estimates that a metro court would cost the state between $5.4 million and $7 million annually and require another $414,000 to start up. The report also said that creating a metro court in 2010 would have jeopardized funding for magistrate courts in Ruidoso, Aztec, Bernalillo, Deming, Ft. Sumner, Belen, Socorro, Tucumcari, Alamogordo, Clovis and Springer.

If the 2010 census reported that Doña Ana County had grown to a population above 200,000, the law forced the state to install a metro court. The bill preventing this passed the House of Representatives 61-7 and the Senate 33-5.

But 2010 – and all its fiscal woes – was long ago. The current legislature is working out a budget with the largest revenue in New Mexico's history.

BULLETIN REPORT

A single-family home on the 1200 block of Van Patten Avenue in Las Cruces had gone up in flames when the city fire department responded at 5:20 a.m. Monday.

The Las Cruces Fire Department reported that fire was brought under control within 13 minutes, with no one inside the home and no injuries reported.

No estimate of the damage nor a cause of the fire were immediately determined.

Duffin appointed to district bench

BULLETIN REPORT

Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham filled a vacant seat on the Third Judicial District bench Monday with the appointment of Doña Ana County Magistrate Judge Rebecca Duffin, effective Feb. 17.

Duffin was admitted to the New Mexico Bar in 2010, and served for six years as an assistant district attorney, where she received honors as a domestic violence prosecutor, before being elected as magistrate judge in 2018 and reelected in 2022.

And while Doña Ana County does not meet the 250,000-person threshold in 2024, SNMBA argued that its uniqueness should qualify it for consideration.

“While we are a population that is not the size of Albuquerque, we are butting up against a municipality that’s larger than Albuquerque,” said SNMBA president Israel Chavez, noting that Texans who traverse Interstate 10 to buy cannabis products or participate in events like the Hatch Chile Festival or Las Cruces Farmers and Crafts Market, inflate the population.

Still, no one has proposed a bill to amend the law to allow a metro court in Las Cruces in this year’s session. No change could come until the 2025 session at the earliest.

“For the community to have a little bit more certainty in their legal system, I think this is the next natural step,” Chavez said.

Suspect arrested in weekend homicide

By ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces police announced the arrest of Osvaldo Padilla Suarez, 40, in a homicide that took place near downtown on Saturday afternoon.

Police responded to a report of a gunshot victim on the 300 block of Van Patten Avenue at around 3:15 p.m. The mortally wounded victim was identified by police as Oscar Ramirez. Charging documents state that Ramirez, 26, was moved to a local hospital and died of his injuries there.

An account of Suarez’s arrest alleges he attempted to flee by jumping over a wall into an alleyway where he was stopped by police; the documents further state that Suarez, a resident of the apartment complex where the shooting occurred, denied being involved. Police said they recovered a rifle with which they allege Suarez fired a single round at the victim.

Police also detail security video footage from the apartment complex that purportedly shows the shooting, and they allege that Suarez told a tenant to delete the footage.

Suarez has been charged with first-degree murder, a capital felony; and third-degree felony charges of possessing a firearm following prior felony convictions; tampering with evidence (related to a capital offense); and bribery of a witness using threats or bribes.

Suarez is being held in custody without bond at the Doña Ana County Detention Center, and state prosecutors petitioned district court on Monday for an expedited pretrial detention hearing, arguing no conditions of release could protect public safety and saying the state plans to pursue a grand jury indictment.

The defendant could face life imprisonment, with or without the possibility of parole, if convicted of the murder charge. Third-degree felonies generally have basic sentences of up to three years, which may be extended to six if they result in the death of a human being, in addition to fines.

Labor board sides with graduate student union in complaint

By JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

A state labor board on Tuesday upheld a complaint against New Mexico State University alleging that administrators failed to provide information to the graduate workers union as stipulated in the collective bargaining agreement.

The information in question centered around the union's request for a list of graduate workers eligible for partial tuition remission. The union said that the list was essential for ensuring NMSU provided tuition remission to those entitled to it. NMSU said providing that information was not readily available or would violate federal privacy laws protecting student records.

The ruling — which highlights the union members' dual status as both workers and students — sends NMSU and the union back to the negotiation table to work out the issue.

"If I were in your shoes, I probably would have said the same," Jeffrey Jensen, an associate general counsel representing NMSU, told the New Mexico Public Employee Labor Relations Board during the meeting on Feb. 6.

The union said in their complaint they requested "a list of all eligible bargaining unit members for the Union Scholarship" (in reference to the tuition remission) and

"a list of the GA scholarships and balance as of the date this email was received."

An NMSU administrator responded with, "The grad school is not prepared to provide you this information by tomorrow. I'll be in communication with them to see when they might reasonably be able to provide you with either some or all of the information."

As a reprieve, the union requested the board force NMSU to provide the information and notify all workers they violated the agreement.

The board, which oversees disputes between public entities and the workers that staff them, did not rule on the merits of the graduate workers' complaint. Instead, they sided with the workers by default, saying NMSU did not comply with state rules regarding complaints of this type.

Documents the union provided to the Las Cruces Bulletin upon request show the union filed its complaint against the university on Nov. 30, 2023. According to state rules, NMSU had 15 days to file a response. Records show NMSU waited until Feb. 6, 2024 — the day of the board meeting — to do that.

"I did sort of drag my feet on entering of default for a period of time," Thomas Griego, the board's director, said. "And I think that's about as much discretion as I had when we didn't receive (a response) until today."

The Bulletin asked NMSU why the response was delayed, among other questions. The university acknowledged the request but did not answer the Bulletin's questions directly. Instead, the university provided the following statement.

"New Mexico State

University continues to negotiate in good faith with our grad student union. The information the union requested was delivered last month. Unfortunately, because that information is gathered across multiple, non-connected platforms, and because the teams tasked with gathering this information have been operating shorthanded in recent months, that information wasn't delivered as quickly as the university would have liked. We're confident this information will be gathered and shared with the union in a more timely manner going forward."

While NMSU said they'd provided the requested information, a lawyer representing the union said they hadn't entirely.

"I will acknowledge that there were two pieces of information that the union requested and that were named in the (complaint)," said Margot Nikitas, the union's general counsel. "The university did respond to one of those requests and provided information, it did not respond to the other request.”

Rally on campus

Still, the graduate workers union celebrated the ruling during a rally outside Hadley Hall a few hours after the meeting.

“I think it’s a success,” said union organizer Hannah Sun. “It goes along with this pattern of NMSU not fulfilling its duties in the contract and generally the labor law.”

Sun pointed out that the determination was in the union’s favor, even if it was a default determination.

“The fact that NMSU did not respond until today when this was filed way back in November (2023) is pretty disappointing,” Sun said.

About two dozen people attended the rally in front of NMSU’s administrative building. The rally was more laid back than previous graduate worker protests, which featured marches across campus and into the bowels of Hadley Hall. But the frustration and feelings of disrespect that underlie the union’s efforts were very much present Tuesday afternoon.

Brad Hanson, a Geography and Environmental Studies Department graduate student, said he’d taken a step back from campus life and union agitation but recently returned.

“The disrespect hasn’t changed,” Hanson said. “The people who lead us don’t care about this place.”

Another organizer, biology research assistant Alexander Allison, said NMSU negotiators often walk out of meetings with the union members even when the members are mid-sentence.

“They would not thrive as a university if we weren’t here,” Allison said.

With the ruling, NMSU and the graduate workers union were told to return to discussions. However, statements made during the meeting suggested that NMSU and the union were somewhat entrenched in their positions.

If they cannot compromise, the dispute returns to the New Mexico Public Employee Labor Relations Board for adjudication.

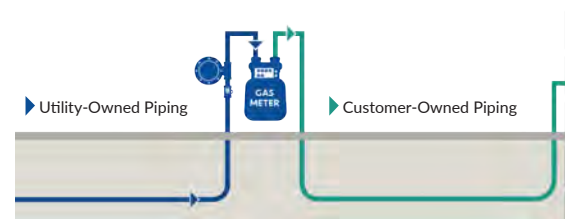

In December 2022, NMSU agreed to a collective bargaining agreement with UE Local 1498-GWU, the union’s official name. According to the agreement, NMSU agreed to cover two credit hours’ worth of tuition, or about $650 per semester, as well as other provisions.

Graduate worker unions have grown significantly in recent years. The University of New Mexico’s graduate workers formed a union around the same time NMSU’s graduate workers did. New Mexico’s largest higher education institutions are part of a more significant national trend.

A 2023 American Association of University Professors analysis found that graduate worker’s unions had grown 44 percent over the last two decades.

Worst Muppet Show episode ever

For those who remember the Muppet Show on television, one of the joys was seeing celebrity guest stars surrounded by muppet characters, usually in a typhoon of comic mayhem. Today, the Muppet Show is gone and C-Span offers a chilling substitute.

On Tuesday, three Republican congressmen may have felt a bit like guests surrounded by muppets as a vote to impeach Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas failed by a razor-thin margin. There was, for instance, Mike Gallagher, R-Wis., surrounded by his colleagues after he voted no, with puppet-like shouts and flippy gestures, trying to get him to change his vote.

It was a blow to a craven and useless project – Mayorkas being guilty only of working for a Democratic president – but it was not the moral rebuke some journalists made it out to be. Speaker

Johnson mistakenly brought the resolution to the floor before he had enough votes and has promised to bring it back when more of his caucus is present.

Johnson also declared a bipartisan border security deal negotiated in the Senate a “nonstarter” admittedly before he had seen it, despite arguing on the other side of his mouth that the border is a “catastrophe” requiring immediate action.

Johnson denies that his opposition is about denying the Biden Administration a policy win and helping Donald Trump – who is likely to earn the Republican nomination for president again and wants to use the border as grist for his campaign. Johnson also denies that staging the first impeachment of a cabinet secretary since Ulysses Grant was in the White House is an election-year Muppet Show skit. Still, the escapade reeks of felt and latex.

Interestingly, the border security package won the support of the National Border Patrol Council this week – the body that represents Border Patrol agents and endorsed Trump for president twice.

They detain migrants, but how will they do amid these dark muppets?

Lawmakers rebuff governor on bail reform

In 2016, New Mexico voters passed a constitutional amendment to end the unfair practice of cash bonds after an arrest.

A bond is different from a fine, which is a form of punishment imposed following a conviction. A bond is meant to ensure compliance with court orders and attendance at all hearings. It is then returned following the trial.

But for those who can't pay the bond, the impact is the same as conviction without a trial. And so, New Mexico is one of several states that have reformed our system of pretrial detention.

The question now is if that reform has gone too far, allowing for dangerous criminals to be returned to the streets immediately after they have been arrested. Gov.

Michelle Lujan Grisham argues that it has.

“I will not stand by as repeat violent offenders walk in and out of our courthouse without consequences,” Lujan Grisham said in a recent press release.

New Mexico lawmakers, at least those in the Senate Health and Public Affairs Committee, disagree. They tabled Senate Bill 122, which is supported by Lujan Grisham and sponsored by Republicans Craig Brandt and Mark Moores. It would have made it more difficult for those charged with felonies involving guns or resulting in great bodily harm or death to be paroled.

The bill seeks to change what the law refers to as “rebuttable presumption.” That means the judge goes into the case presuming that one side is right unless the other side can prove otherwise. The presumption now favors the defendant.

Lujan Grisham made bail reform a part of her larger public safety package and began advocating for it before the start of the session. But this is the third time legislation has failed to make it through the committee process.

The fiscal impact report on the bill clearly reflects the thinking of the Legislature. It talks about how expensive passage would be, and goes so far as to assert, “It is unclear whether any crimes will actually be prevented through incapacitation due to greater detention.”

Really? If putting people who commit violent, dangerous crimes in jail doesn't prevent more violent, dangerous crimes, we need to rethink this whole model.

There are legitimate questions as to whether the proposed changes would be allowed under the provisions of the constitutional amendment. But voters were assured prior to the 2016 election that reforming the system would not mean releasing dangerous offenders back onto the streets.

Lujan Grisham is swimming against the tide on this one. The previous two bills both had Democrats among the sponsors. This year's bill does not. And the governor will soon be entering the lame-duck phase of her final term.

But this is an issue voters should ask questions about later this year, when all seats in the House and Senate are up for re-election.

There is some good news on the governor's public safety package. The House has passed a bill that would require a seven-day waiting period for the purchase of a gun. The original bill called for a 14-day wait.

The bill moved to the Senate Judiciary Committee led by Chairman Joseph Cervantes, D-Las Cruces, who has sponsored similar legislation.

Charter schools put students and families first

By STATE REP. STEFANI LORD

Guest Columnist

For many families living in New Mexico, especially those living in poverty, the opportunity to send their children to a quality private school is not always a reality. In these circumstances, charter schools can provide a free alternative to traditional public schools. Charter schools offer families the potential to dramatically improve their child's education experience and future prospects.

National School Choice Week (observed last week) shines a light on the importance of letting parents determine where their kids are educated, not ZIP codes.

Many parents throughout my district have decided to send their kids to charter schools like Estancia Valley Classical Academy. This academy is committed to offering a high-quality education to its students, particularly those from low-income backgrounds.

With a focus on classical education principles, charter schools provide a rigorous curriculum that emphasizes critical thinking, character development and civic responsibility. Key life skills that will help our kids succeed as adults.

These schools also recognize the importance of personalized attention and support for their students. Teachers at Estancia Valley Classical Academy set high expectations for their students while offering individualized assistance to help them reach their full potential. This dedication to academic excellence has proven successful, with students consistently achieving high levels of learning and achievement.

In addition to providing an individualized learning environment, Estancia Valley Classical Academy also offers smaller class sizes, enabling teachers to give personalized attention to each student. This individualized approach benefits at-risk students who may require extra support in order to succeed academically.

This is how our schools should be: putting the needs of parents and students first.

The Estancia Valley Classical Academy and other charter schools in New Mexico are committed to traditional curricula that prepare our children for a competitive economy. These schools offer a wide range of subjects and educational opportunities beyond the scope of traditional public schools. By fostering a well-rounded education, students are encouraged to explore different areas of interest and develop a diverse set of skills, ultimately preparing them for future success.

I'm proud to represent the families served by Estancia Valley Classical Academy. They offer an invaluable opportunity for low-income and at-risk students to receive a quality education. By providing a resilient learning environment, smaller class sizes and curricula focused on life skills, EVCA empowers families with more options to meet their children's educational needs. As we celebrate National School Choice Week, it is important to recognize and support the invaluable asset that charter schools, like Estancia Valley Classical Academy, provide to New Mexico's low-income families.

Catch up, clean up — cover up?

By STATE REP. ROD MONTOYA

Guest Columnist

Just when you think progress is being made with regards to good government and legislative transparency, something happens that restores the public distrust and skepticism that has plagued public office holders for generations.

Last year, Democrats in the New Mexico Legislature laid the groundwork for what today can only be described as legislative malfeasance by attempting to fund, under the cover of darkness, hundreds of legislative staffers for House and Senate members. It was contentious, to say the least, as Republicans have vocally opposed this concept from the beginning. In short, Republicans believe funding legislative staff would be akin to taxpayer-funded campaign staff. The effort last year failed, but Democrats were successful in appropriating millions of dollars to study the idea.

Fast forward to this legislative session. After the study was finalized last year and presented to a single committee, Democrats in both the House and Senate went quiet. There were no more discussions of legislator staff - not in committee, not during weeks of budget discussions, not in public forums and not in the media - and rightfully so. Probably because Democrats knew that the public is skeptical at best and worried their hard-earned money was going to go to what would effectively be campaign workers for individual legislators.

The silence continued up until this last Friday in the House Appropriations and Finance Committee, during a process called "catch up clean up," when members of the committee were informed by the Chair that $6 million dollars had been added to the budget overnight for legislative staff. The Chair shared no details, no guardrails and no statutory language with committee members about how the new staffers are supposed to operate, and most importantly, no discussion or debate from those pushing this funding proposal. In fact, nobody even knows who made the decision to add the money in the first place. It was as if $6 million dollars magically appeared out of thin air, keeping clean the hands of those members who have been clamoring for campaign staff for years.

This, at best, is legislative misconduct and at worst is a violation of the public's trust. It is also a reflection of how things were done in the old days before webcasts and accountability were something we as elected officials took pride in.

There is a reason Republicans have opposed this concept from the beginning; we simply cannot stomach the thought of hundreds of legislative staffers running around the state with no oversight, likely using taxpayer funds to engage in campaign activity. We know now why Democrats have snuck millions of dollars into the budget at the last minute and with zero discussion from elected members of the legislature; they, too, know the public does not want this either.

NMSU names president finalists, receives squeaky clean audit

By ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University's five regents unanimously approved a list of finalists under consideration as NMSU's next president during a special meeting Friday afternoon held by video conference.

The five finalists, selected by a 24-member search committee and in order of Friday's announcement, are:

Michael Gaylean, a member of the veterinary services faculty at Texas Tech University who has served as provost and a senior vice president of academic affairs, according to his faculty university page. Gaylean earned his bachelor's degree from NMSU in 1973 and taught in NMSU's Department of Animal and Range Sciences from 1977 to 1990 and served as superintendent of NMSU's Clayton Livestock Research Center from 1990 to 1996.

Wayne Jones, Jr., provost and vice-president of academic affairs at the University of New Hampshire since 2018, after serving previously as dean of the university's College of Engineering and Physical Sciences.

Austin Lane, chancellor of Southern Illinois University since 2020. Prior to that, he had been president of Texas Southern University, a historically Black university located in Houston, from 2016 to 2020, when he was placed on leave and released from his contract two years early for alleged violations of his contract, to which he admitted no wrongdoing, as he explained to SIU's student news outlet, the Daily Egyptian.

John Volin, executive vice-president of academic affairs and provost of the University of Maine, appointed to the NCAA Division I Committee on Academics last September.

Richard "Biff" Williams, former president of Utah Tech University since 2014 (when it was still named Dixie State University — Williams championed the 2022 name change). Williams announced his resignation in December, effective in January, stating he was exploring opportunities at other institutions.

From 2018 until 2022, the university was led by two executives instead of one as in the past. President John Floros stepped down in 2022 and was not replaced. NMSU Chancellor Dan Arvizu resigned as the head of the university last April, after the regents voted not to renew his contract, which would have expired June 30, 2023. Former NMSU president (from 2000 to 2003) Jay Gogue was appointed interim president on Arvizu's departure.

NMSU regents' chairperson Ammu Devasthali said the next phase of the selection process would see campus visits by the finalists, with details to be posted on a web page devoted to the executive search: NMSU.edu/president-search.

Clean financial audit

The other major item of business at the special meeting was a presentation, by public accounting firm Moss Adams, of the university's annual financial audit. Partner Lisa Todd informed the regents that NMSU received an unmodified or "clean" opinion — indicative that an institution's financial statements are in order, based on generally accepted accounting principles — in each of three reports prepared for the university.

The three reports focused on NMSU's financial statements, internal controls over financial reporting and compliance and its expenditures of federal grant funds.

It is not uncommon for audits to turn up findings, of varying degrees of seriousness, even in unmodified opinions;

but Todd told the regents there were no essentially no findings this year and no prior year findings to be addressed.

The only exception, she said, was a "minor finding" that deviated from New Mexico audit rule, regarding equipment that been disposed of by the university but not reported to the Office of the State Auditor.

Regent Deborah Romero, the recently retired secretary of the state Department of Finance and Administration, said she was "extremely impressed with the fact that there aren't any audit findings for an organization this big."

The Art of Sensuality

ANNUAL EROTIC ART EXHIBIT OPENS FRIDAY

By DAVID SALCIDO

For the Bulletin

Gustav Klimt once declared, "All art is erotic." People have been pondering the meaning of that brief statement for over a century. The discussion over what defines erotica has been going on for much longer, with varying degrees of acceptability. Is it pornography, or is it something more? The one thing we can all agree on, is that the word erotica is subjective. No matter what your reasoning, you either like it, or you don't.

Merriam-Webster defines erotica as literary or artistic works that deal with subject matter that is stimulating or arousing, but it doesn't just have to be about the libido or the genitals. Like all art, erotica is meant to simulate the brain and to make us see things from a different perspective. It is a depiction of humanity at its most sublime. It is a release of inhibition.

The one thing erotica has always been about is sensuality. Good erotic art will relay some sort of message about the human condition. It will use sometimes shocking imagery to convey such complex human emotions as abandon, subjugation, loneliness, freedom, acceptance and vulnerability. It is, in a sense, a casting-off of the shackles imposed upon us by morality and social shame, to reveal the true self. How you deal with those revelations may have more to do with you than it does with the art in question.

To get a better understanding of the place erotic art occupies in southern New Mexico, it's best to go to a local expert on the subject. Dennis Lujan is that expert. A lifelong artist whose work – both traditional and erotic – can be seen in galleries and private collections across the country, he has also been the curator of the annual Erotica show since 2015. The former owner of the In Effect Gallery in the Mesquite neighborhood of Las Cruces, he now opens up his home in Mesilla Park twice a year for the Erotica Show in February, and a more traditional art show in May.

"The criteria for this show has always been sensual," Lujan says. "I wanted to take For (the) Love of Art month to a new level, because there's a side of Love that is overlooked. I wanted to show what could be done with that concept of Love. I was so surprised to find that many of the prominent artists here had done stuff on the side that they couldn't exhibit in local galleries. I wanted to provide a space where they could show that stuff. Nobody else does that here."

Attracting artists from all across the region, including Truth or Consequences, Socorro, El Paso, Hillsboro and Caballo, Lujan takes a hands-off approach to selection. When asked what he looks for, he says, "I have an open-door policy. Some

Olivia Rodrigo

OF BIZAARDVARK ON DISNEY

Q: I've enjoyed seeing Olivia Rodrigo on TV fairly often lately. Someone told me she was a regular on a series. Is that true?

A: As many young fans can confirm, she was a Disney personality before becoming a music superstar who went into this year's Grammy Awards with six nominations, tying with Taylor Swift (among others). One of Rodrigo's first performing credits was a jeans commercial, then she had the title role in the direct-to-video 2015 movie "An American Girl: Grace Stirs Up Success." In 2016, she was hired to play Paige — a guitarist, thus letting Rodrigo display her musical inclinations — on the Disney Channel series "Bizaardvark," and she was homeschooled during the three seasons she was on that show. She then moved on to the Disney+ program "High School Musical: The Musical: The Series," which again enabled her to show her music talents during the three seasons she was on it. Then in 2022, Rodrigo decided to turn her focus principally to her musical career, which had started to pay off with her Grammy win for best new artist at the 2022 ceremony (one of seven categories in which she was nominated, also encompassing victories for best pop vocal album for "Sour" and best pop solo performance for "Drivers License"). Her Grammy bids this year were linked to her second studio album, "Guts."

"The Space Race" (Feb. 13)

In an exciting journey, this documentary explores the stories of the first black Black astronauts — including Guion Bluford, Ed Dwight and Charles Bolden, among many others — as these pioneering Black pilots, scientists and engineers joined NASA to serve their country in space, even as their country failed to achieve equality for them back on Earth. Spanning decades, the film weaves a tale of world events colliding with the aspirations of these extraordinary individuals.

"Joan Baez: I Am A Noise" (Feb. 15)

Facing the end of a 60 year musical career, legendary singer and activist Joan Baez takes an honest look back and a deep look inward as she tries to make sense of her large, history making life. In this documentary, she reveals, for the first time, personal struggles she's kept private until now.

"Next Goal Wins" (Feb. 15)

Directed by Academy Award Winner Taika Waititi and based on a true story, this film follows the American Samoa soccer team, infamous for their brutal 31-0 FIFA loss in 2001. With the World Cup Qualifiers approaching, the team hires down-on-his-luck, maverick coach Thomas Rongen (Michael Fassbender) hoping he will turn the world's worst soccer team around in this heartfelt underdog comedy.

"Life & Beth" - Season 2 (Feb. 16)

Beth (Amy Schumer), a successful wine distributor living in Manhattan, has a life that seems perfect on paper. But, when an unexpected tragedy pulls her back to her hometown in Season 1, she is forced to confront her past, who she is now and who she wants to become. The first season ended with Beth entering a relationship with John (Michael Cera), a local farmer, quitting her job and taking the first steps to rebuilding her relationship with her sister, Ann (Susannah Flood). Now, her story continues.

GREATER LAS CRUCES
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

In love with the mission

During my career, I have been asked many times how and why I got involved with chambers of commerce. Honestly, the truth is that this wonderful career found me. Years ago in Waxahachie, Texas, I needed a job and was hired as an entry-level employee and simply fell in love with the mission of the Chamber and the difference it made in a community. Fast forward years later, I am blessed to be here in Las Cruces. You see a Chamber is much more than an organization of business owners: It's the heart of our community, fostering a strong workforce and future leaders. It's the very foundation on which to build a strong workforce, develop future leaders, expand the economic base and impact our community. It is our businesses that give so generously to our non-profits, hire our friends, neighbors and children and support our public and higher education institutions.

Chambers of Commerce play a vital role in our community by bringing together local businesses to support economic growth, education and community development. Joining a Chamber of Commerce can provide a business with networking opportunities, access to local resources and information, visibility in the community, advocacy support on local issues and potential cost savings through member benefits and discounts. It can also help to establish credibility and trust with customers, suppliers and other businesses in the community.

It is no wonder that I proudly say, "My career found me." To think, through the years and in several communities, I've played a small role in community impact is an amazing thought.

Over the years, no matter where I have been, the question remains the same from businesses: "Why should I join the Chamber of Commerce?" The remarkable thing is that the answer has remained the same over those years. Simply put, investing in the Chamber of Commerce is investing in the community. The Chamber plays a vital role in the growth, expansion and development of your business and impacts community. We work hard to put in place programs, activities and initiatives so that the mission of your business compliments the mission of the Chamber.

However, it is much more than the dollars invested. It is a commitment of time to attend events, meetings and activities whether they are educational, networking or informational. Being an investor in the Chamber gives you new customers, helps retain customers and builds a lifelong professional network.

For this year, the Greater Las Cruces Chamber is concentrating on delivery of a renewed commitment to our investors and area businesses. Through our new slogan, "Powered by Investors, Driven by Business: Connecting, Convening, Cultivating," we will work diligently to ensure the Chamber's body of work continues to make a difference in our community.

Public Policy Sector: Government Relations, Public Policy & Advocacy
Investor Services Sector: Connecting-Member Relations
Building Community Sector: Cultivating future leaders
Grow Your Business Sector: Cultivating businesses; Workforce Education

These four areas are full of opportunity for businesses to be actively involved in the Chamber through the many committees, taskforces and initiatives. Whether your focus is on supporting our military, growing your business, finding out more about the space industry, or healthcare, or networking, we've got a place for you!

And this is just the beginning. With expansion and growth of our Business After Hours, the networking opportunity continues to increase. Adding in our ribbon cuttings, anniversary celebrations and "red carpet" ceremonies, the exposure one gets from their investment of time, money and commitment is a tremendous return on investment.

FROM THE AMBASSADOR CHAIR

I just got back from a fantastic Las Cruces Day in Santa Fe 2024. This year we held it at La Fonda on the Plaza. We kicked things off with a Saturday evening reception at the hotel which gave everyone a great opportunity to network. On Sunday morning we heard from the City of Las Cruces, Doña Ana County, Las Cruces Public Schools and NMSU on their legislative priorities. These presentations were followed by two workshops which were very informative. I learned a lot about the legislative session and lobbying. Sunday afternoon we headed over to the governor's residence for a beautiful reception. Gov. Lujan Grisham spoke to our group and we also heard from local astronaut Jamila Gilbert on her incredible journey to space. We wrapped up on Monday morning with a mayoral panel and heard from the mayors of Las Cruces, Mesilla and Sunland Park. A group of us headed over to the Roundhouse after breakfast to represent Las Cruces and Doña Ana County. I would like to give a shout-out to Shawn Martin (Chair of Las Cruces Day in Santa Fe) and the entire committee for putting on such a successful event. We appreciate everyone who attended this year and hope you plan to join us in 2025!

Leadership Class 31 challenges their learning

BY EVE HOLGUIN
Las Cruces Bulletin

Leadership Class 31 had its fourth group day learning about the education system and the great people that continue to drive education forward in our community.

We began our day at the Challenger Learning Center, which was a new and fun experience for many in the class. The Challenger Learning Center mission to educate and excite young minds about the STEM world was seen as an absolute success as Class 31 took part in the space simulation and learned more about Associate Director Stephanie Hofacket's great programs for outreach in our school system.

Next, we visited the Las Cruces Public Schools administrative building for a tour with Director of Communications and Leadership Alum Kelly Jameson. The class also got to meet with Superintendent Ignacio Ruiz; Deputy Superintendent of Instruction Wendi Miller Tomlinson; Deputy Superintendent of Finance Alex Liu; and Deputy Superintendent of Operations Gabe Jacquez to talk about LCPS' plans and goals for the future.

Following the panel, the group enjoyed lunch at The Game 1 and spent time talking with Bryan Ashenbaum (Dead of College of Business) and Eddie Reyna (Arrowhead Early College Counselor) to talk about leadership in education as well as the ways they are helping students and the community toward higher education.

Finally, we ended the day with a beautiful tour of the Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine and heard from John Hummer about all the ways Burrell is enriching our community through education in the health care field.

Leadership Class 31 would like to extend a huge thank you to all of the people who made the day possible and showed the class all the amazing ways to continue to be a strong leader in our community!

“Pensati Sexy” (Feb. 12)

Maddalena (Diana Del Bufalo) is 30 years old and has no self-esteem whatsoever. She is the black sheep of her very Catholic family and all of the men she dates seem to be out of her reach. Convinced that she must do everything in her power to become the most attractive version of herself, a very special guardian angel enters her life, in the form of adult film star Valentina Nappi (as herself), who takes Maddalena on a hilarious journey inside herself to discover her potential as a woman and as a writer.

“Five Blind Dates” (Feb. 13)

Lia (Shuang Hu) is stuck. Faced with her failing, inherited traditional Chinese tea shop and the prospect of attending her younger sister's impending wedding single and alone, she is reluctantly gifted with a prophecy — the fate of her shop and her love life are intertwined, and the secret lies in one of her next five dates. Agreeing to be set up with five different suitors and with her best friend Mason (Ilai Swindells) by her side, will Lia find herself and find love? Or will she risk disappointing those she loves the most?

“Shooting My Life” (Feb. 14)

This film, originally titled “Fazendo Meu Filme,” follows Fani (Bela Fernandes), a 16-year-old girl who passionately dreams about cinema and whose best friend Leo (Xande Valois) is always by her side. Fani is constantly thinking of her life as a movie in which each friend and each romance has a prominent role. Taking part in a year-long exchange program in London, Fani must embrace all that life has to offer. Based on the bestseller by Paula Pimenta.

“This is Me ... Now: A Love Story” (Feb. 16)

Unlike anything that's ever been seen from Jennifer Lopez, “This Is Me...Now: A Love Story,” is a narrative-driven, intimate, reflective, sexy, funny, fantastical and highly visual musical reimagining of her publicly scrutinized love life. It debuts alongside her first studio album in a decade, “This Is Me...Now.”

Brie Larson and Teyonah Parris star in "The Marvels"

"THE MARVELS"

Brie Larson is back as Captain Marvel, but she's not the only superheroine on hand in this recent entry in the Marvel Cinematic Universe. Teyonah Parris appears as Captain Monica Rambeau, and Iman Vellani portrays Kamala Khan ... and the three of them unite to battle evil, which is much to their advantage as they find themselves literally trading places with one another whenever they use their powers simultaneously. It's also a big benefit as they try to quash a civil war that has erupted within the Kree dynasty, leaving its home planet devoid of such essentials as air and water. Samuel L. Jackson (as Nick Fury, of course), Tessa Thompson, Hailee Steinfeld and Lashana Lynch are among other performers who also reprise their roles from earlier Marvel movies; Zawe Ashton and Gary Lewis are featured as well. DVD extras: audio commentary by co-writer and director Nia DaCosta and visual effects supervisor Tara DeMarco; two "making-of" documentaries; deleted scenes; out-takes.  (PG-13: P, V) (Also on Blu-ray, 4K Ultra HD, Digital and On Demand)

(played by Tom Blyth), the character who (as portrayed in the earlier movies by Donald Sutherland) would become the tyrant heading the country named Panem – where the titular Hunger Games already exist in this tale. In fact, it's the 10th anniversary of the dangerous competition, and the young Coriolanus has plans for it that don't please its creator, Casca Highbottom (multiple "Game of Thrones" Primetime Emmy winner Peter Dinklage) ... creating another rivalry outside the Games themselves, which hold major peril for the participants. Rachel Zegler ("West Side Story"), Viola Davis, Jason Schwartzman, Hunter Schafer and Fionnula Flanagan also are featured.  (PG-13: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray, 4K Ultra HD, Digital and On Demand)

Connecting through the earth: Rock, gem and mineral show

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH

Las Cruces Bulletin

Frank Parrish grew up in El Paso. A self-identified rockhound by the age of 7, he scoured the Franklin Mountains for rocks and fossils as he grew up, ultimately picking up degrees at the University of Texas-El Paso in geology and zoology.

Now retired, he still loves the minerals and decided to share his enthusiasm with the southern New Mexico community. Feb 17 and 18, the Museum ROCKS! Gem and Mineral Show returns to Las Cruces for its 11th year, with 75 vendors displaying gems, rock and mineral samples and jewelry showcasing outstanding examples of fossils, minerals in the wild, gemstones and jewelry from around the world.

“Growing up, there were rock shows and shops across the southwest, but we didn’t have anything here for a long time,” Parrish said. “I thought it would be a great idea in Las Cruces. There is a rich history of mining in the area.”

Also, as a professional area photographer, the beauty in nature is a big part of his fascination with the world of geology.

“Everything about rocks and minerals has always appealed to me,” he said. “Everything in our material world revolves around metals. One way or another, rocks and minerals is basic to everything from cement to asphalt.”

Steven Loring, an organizer of the event and member of the Friends of the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, said the museum is the perfect place for the gem and mineral show. Retired from a career at New Mexico State University in biology and agriculture, Loring connects the mineral history with today’s world and the future.

“I have been involved in natural resources management, so I’m very interested in how to tell the story of agriculture and its importance,” he said. “When you talk about natural resources, it gets into soil formation, which goes back to the minerals.”

He sees his volunteer work at the museum as the opportunity to share the importance of looking at the past as relating to the future.

“Just looking at a piece of jewelry, looking at it in the context of geology, is a launching pad for people to learn not only why geology is a nice piece of jewelry, but also what’s going on in the earth,” Loring said. “It’s all connected.”

The show allows people to learn about and enjoy the minerals without having to travel all the way to Tucson. Parrish said the Museum Rocks! event is timed to catch the dealers as they leave the big Tucson show. There will be some 75 vendors on hand from across the country.

The regular admission fee covers the show and all museum exhibits. Proceeds help the Friends of the Museum, a non-profit organization, support the museum’s educational and livestock programs.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING HONEST

'The Lifespan of a Fact' explores the concept of truth

By DAVID SALCIDO
For the Bulletin

Facts are something that many might argue are in very short supply in the fabric of today's society. Between politicians spouting "alternative" facts, and the ease with which the internet allows anybody with an opinion to appear knowledgeable – despite knowing nothing about the subject at hand – the question arises: Just how important are facts in getting a point across?

Luckily for us, "The Lifespan of a Fact," now playing at the Las Cruces Community Theatre, does not delve into politics, and the internet is barely mentioned. Instead, we are given a glimpse into the nature of creativity, and how far a writer can go to "create" a story worth telling. It's a fascinating topic, with no easy answer, and this production of the Broadway hit is unflinchingly on point under the able direction of Dustin Wright.

A.J. Tumminaro brings a vibrant energy to the role of magazine intern Jim Fingal, who is assigned the onerous task of fact-checking the work of established essayist John D'Agata, here played with measured exasperation and superb comic timing by veteran actor Norman Lewis. The fact that D'Agata has a tendency to play fast and loose with the facts is the catalyst that brings the two very different viewpoints into stark relief.

What starts out as a simple assignment quickly becomes a battle of wills between a young man trying to make a name for himself and a respected writer with decades of experience and an ego to match. What Lewis and Tumminaro bring to the roles is a delightful interplay that showcases the characters' fiery passion for the truth, despite having very different ideas of just exactly what that might be. It isn't often that we get to see this kind of chemistry on stage, but it is exciting when it happens.

Completing the dynamic trio is accomplished actress Nora Brown, who brings tenacity and grit to the tough-as-nails magazine editor Emily Penrose, the instigator who inadvertently brings the two men together, only to find herself playing referee. Emily's almost perfunctory decision to saddle Jim with a looming deadline and a disdainful egotist quickly devolves into an unexpected trip to Las Vegas for a showdown between three strong-willed people with very different backgrounds, trying to find common ground in a minefield.

With powerhouse performances by all three actors, and an effectively simple set design, the conditions are perfect for an uncommon exploration of truth that is smart, fast-paced, laced with humor and riveting from the first scene. Just don't expect an easy resolution to this difficult question. These characters make very convincing arguments, and there is never really a point when one outweighs the other, which means it's ultimately up to the audience to decide. It's the kind of topic you may find yourself discussing long after you've left the theater, and that, my friends, is what good theatre is all about.

"The Lifespan of a Fact" treads the boards at the Las Cruces Community Theatre Friday, Saturday and Sunday through February 18, 2024. For more information, or to purchase tickets, visit the website at LCCTNM.org.

artists do ceramics, some papier-mâché, oils, acrylics, watercolors, mixed media, jewelry. It's always fresh. It's always new. I cannot be a judge or a juror. I'm always excited to see what comes in, as long as there is no degradation or pornography. If an artist walks through my doors with work, and they're in the show, so long as their work follows the rules."

What, then, does Dennis consider sensual?

"Sensuality is really undefinable," he admits, but it's clear he's had this conversation before.

"Photography can be sensual. Collages can be sensual. Watercolors can be sensual. Good erotica provokes thought and discussion. What is it? It's intimate and it's edgy. What does it mean to you? It's personal and it's primal. How do you react? It could be gritty, it could be sexy, it could be pretty, it could be subtle, the viewer might not even get it, but if it makes them think, and argue, it's doing its job."

It's that love of provocative, sensual art that propels Lujan to create the event of the season.

"There's nothing else like it," he says. "Everybody talks about it long after the show closes. Is it just because of the subject matter? I don't know, but I don't think so. This show only comes around once a year, and we get a lot of people through the door."

Erotica, it seems, will always have an audience. It's something that needs to be experienced to be understood. Discussions are optional, but highly recommended.

The Erotica 2024 opening reception takes place Friday, Feb. 9, 2024, from 6 – 10 p.m., at 3390 Apple Cross Place in Mesilla Park. Additional showings are Saturday and Sunday, February 10, and 11, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and by appointment through the end of the month.

Loving all people – including the unlovable

By DEB RODGERS

Guest Columnist

Tell someone you're a Baha'i and the most likely response is an instant look of puzzlement followed by questions along the lines of, "Ba what?" or "Ba Who?"

Look it up on Wikipedia and you learn: "The Baha'i Faith is a religion founded in the 19th century that teaches the essential worth of all religions and the unity of all people." How do the faith's estimated 8 million believers pursue the unity of all people? The answer is simple yet complex: We do it through love.

That was a hard one for me when I became a Baha'i a little over 20 years ago. Simply put, not everyone is lovable. I was thinking about this while out shopping one day.

I'm disabled and tend to move a bit slowly at times. As I approached the checkout counter, another shopper – clearly annoyed that I was in her way – leapt in front of me, slammed her purchases onto the counter, spun around and called me a blankety blank N-word. (She was white. I'm African-American.)

This was someone I was obligated to love! But how? Brand-new Baha'i that I was, I didn't have the answer. I dropped my head and quickly uttered a silent plea for help via prayer. As I raised my head to look at the woman once more, the answer came to me from above.

It came in two parts: 1) She was behaving as she did because she didn't recognize that I am a beloved child of God. 2) She was behaving as she did because she didn't recognize that she, too, is a beloved child of God. With that, I looked her in the face, smiled and lovingly said, "God bless you."

I don't know how she had expected me to react. She certainly didn't expect a loving response. When she got it, shock and horror spread across her face as she turned and fled the store. All of these years later, I still pray that she learns the true meaning of love.

Sunland Park seeks $4M for food pantry

By DIANA ALBA SOULAR

Southern New Mexico Journalism Collaborative

SUNLAND PARK – Residents and advocates are asking state lawmakers to fully fund a proposed new food pantry that would help alleviate hunger in Sunland Park, which is grappling with high levels of food insecurity.

Advocates say the lack of an emergency food storage and distribution hub in Sunland Park is a significant missing link in the hunger safety net for southern Doña Ana County. Now, a key organization supplying food in Sunland Park relies upon a mobile food pantry, meaning if residents can't attend its designated hours and dates, they'll miss out on assistance. Also, without a building, nonprofits aren't able to store food locally.

Residents turned out by the dozens to a meeting in recent weeks to express their opinions and pose questions about the proposal. The city of Sunland Park last year secured $1.35 million for the proposed pantry, and an architectural firm is already working on plans.

But Sunland Park, in coordination with local advocacy groups, is seeking another $4 million in capital outlay dollars during the New Mexico legislative session that ends Feb. 15.

Elisa Roman, who's lived in Sunland Park for more than four decades, was among 60 people who turned out Jan. 11 to a meeting about the pantry. She described the pantry as "necessary" in the community.

"There is always somebody lacking food," she said after the session, hosted by city and food-pantry officials at San Martin de Porres Catholic Church.

Lorenzo Alba Jr., executive director of the Las Cruces-based Casa de Peregrinos emergency food pantry, is advocating for the new Sunland Park facility. He said $4 million is the ideal amount. If the money is issued this year, "we're going to be able to put this thing to bed by 2025," he said, referring to the completion of construction.

Residents, mostly speaking Spanish, posed questions and weighed in on aspects of the plans, including that they want the facility to have a large enough waiting room to accommodate clients.

A phased project?

City officials have pitched the request to lawmakers, including at a legislative listening session in Las Cruces late last year, prior to the session's start. But advocates said they're concerned because lawmakers suggested phasing the funding for the building – meaning they might not grant the city's full request this session.

Sunland Park Mayor Javier Perea said construction costs tend to increase every year. So, by phasing the project, it could result in increased spending – and delays in building – going forward.

"If we can't get the $4 million, it's going to be a little bit more costly down the road," he said.

A site for the pantry has already been selected on city-owned land next to Doña Ana Community College's Sunland Park campus. It's also near where the city plans to relocate its MVD office, Perea said. He predicts residents from a broader area will visit the pantry once it's operational.

"Hopefully, we'd be able to expand beyond our limits and serve other parts of southern Doña Ana County," he said.

The city will own the new building, while Casa de Peregrinos is expected to operate it, likely with involvement of Southern

New Mexico Project, a key nonprofit food distributor in Sunland Park. Casa de Peregrinos also runs a large food distribution center and warehouse in Las Cruces.

Councilor: 'We're a different city now'

Now, the Southern New Mexico Project is overwhelmed by demand from residents for food assistance. It has a rotation schedule to distribute its limited allotment of baskets to residents, meaning a family might go six months before they are eligible to get their next basket of food.

Sharply rising food prices, a steep curtailment of pandemic benefits to Americans nearly a year ago, and time lags at the state level in processing SNAP benefits – once known as food stamps – are contributing to increased demand for food assistance.

Sunland Park City Councilor Alberto Jaramillo, who attended the public meeting, said he's concerned people have the wrong impression of the city's government due to high-profile corruption scandals that happened more than a decade ago and, at the state level, officials might be hesitant to fund projects here. But new elected officials are on board, he said, and the city has turned over a new leaf in the years since. The community is growing in population

City approves plan for potential Northrise development

By JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces City Council approved a planning document Monday that sets the stage for potential development on Northrise Drive.

The Northrise Blueprint was approved on a 5-to-1 vote on Feb. 5, after receiving unanimous approval from the Planning and Zoning Commission on Dec. 19, 2023.

The plan calls for new roadways for an anticipated suburban development in the currently vacant plots wedged between the Rinconada

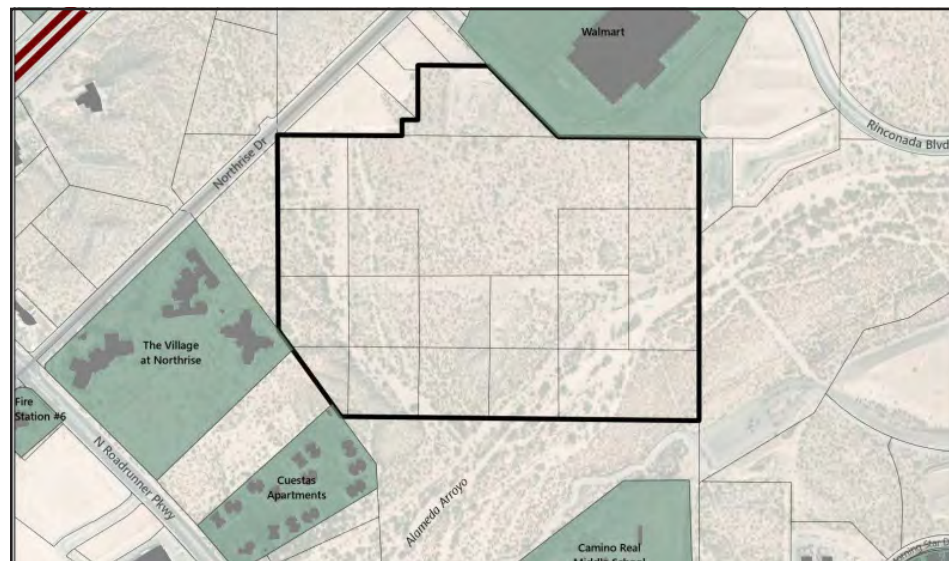

Boulevard Walmart to the northeast, Northrise Drive to the northwest, North Roadrunner Parkway to the southeast and Camino Real Middle School and Alameda Arroyo to the southwest. The area is about 62 acres.

“We started to see a variety of people asking to come in and develop it,” David Weir, deputy director of community planning, told the Planning and Zoning Commission on Dec. 19, according to meeting minutes. “There was limited access to it. And so, we wanted to get ahead of the proposals coming in.”

At the same meeting, Weir said the Blueprint’s primary goal was to ensure the parcels had access to nearby roadways in the landlocked area, which already has utilities.

“The second goal was that any of those transportation networks address all modes of transportation whether that’s pedestrian, biking, transit or, again, vehicle use,” Weir said, adding that preserving or “honoring” the arroyo was the third goal of the plan.

The city defines a community planning blueprint as a document facilitating development in a given area. It outlines goals, challenges and other details to support “planned and orderly development,” as stated in the Northrise Blueprint.

The area is zoned mostly as ranch and farmland, with one portion demarcated for multifamily housing, such as apartments. That’s likely to change as private companies seek to develop the land.

According to documents attached to the proposal, a large swath of the southeast area is also in a flood plain created around the Alameda Arroyo. Weir said that building in a flood plain requires additional permitting and more intensive development, but city officials also suggested the area might be better suited as preserved open space.

Flooding was the topic of one councilor’s concerns.

Yvonne Flores, representing District 6 which includes the area of potential development, expressed concern that future homes in the area could be impacted by a flash flood.

“Everyone seems to think, ‘Oh, these floods only happen once in a blue moon,’” Flores said, “but if that blue moon happens to be me, I’m going to care about it.”

She asked if the city had taken any steps to ensure the safety of future homes built in the area.

Weir said the Northrise Blueprint would help since it would be a reference point for any zoning changes before development.

“Those more detailed flood analyses take place when there’s an actual subdivision or a building permit for that area,” Weir said.

Flores wasn’t convinced.

She reiterated her concern for potential flooding in the future before voting against the plan.

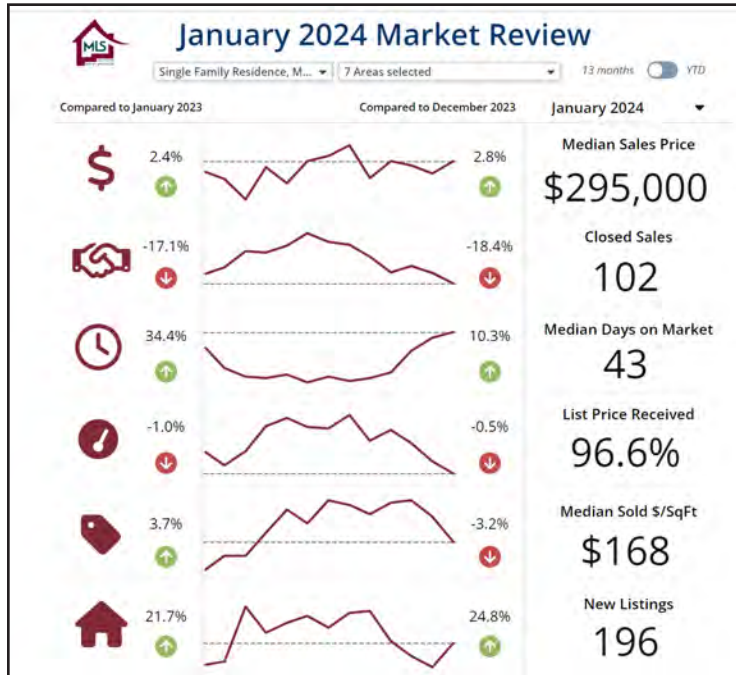

“When the time comes for development, I just hope that the city does keep an eye on that,” Flores said before voting against the plan.

Most of the land in the area is owned through the trust of Gerald Lee Lackey, a Hatch car dealership owner who passed away in 2023. Other notable owners include Lonesome Dove Land, Pioneer Construction and the St. Andrews Protestant Episcopal Church (whose land makes up much of the flood plain).

The Northrise Blueprint also abuts land owned by Walmart, the New Mexico State University Foundation, the New Mexico Land Office and the homeowner’s association of The Pueblos at Alameda Ranch.

Home values off to a great start in 2024

By STEVE MONTAÑEZ
For the Bulletin

Home values are on the rebound as Las Cruces saw a small increase in January that is projected to rise even higher in lieu of the upcoming spring buyer season.

While an anticipated drop in interest rates is a factor for many buyers looking to enter the market, existing inventory is also increasing, causing lower list prices in our market. While seller activity was significantly lower compared to the previous month, closings were still at an encouraging list-to-sale price ratio for the month.

New home sales are also making a strong contribution to our market values with higher inventory and lower prices for a new build. Also, incentives from new home builders give new buyers some great opportunities to get into a new home at a minimal cost, sometimes even a zero closing cost.

January's report is showing the start of what will be a busy spring buyer season, giving great news for both buyers and sellers. It's a great time to be a Las Cruces homeowner in 2024.

and economically, he noted.

"As we speak right now, our city is healthy financially," he said. "We're a different city now."

Rafael Ramos-Lacen, executive director of the Southern New Mexico Project, said he welcomes a new pantry, but he expressed skepticism about lawmakers' willingness to support the city's hunger relief efforts after his own attempts to connect with them have fallen flat.

"I leave messages to them," he said. "I send emails. Nothing, nothing, nothing happens."

A USDA report released in October found that 17 million households across the country were food insecure in 2022, up from 13.5 million households the previous year, a 26 percent increase. Non-Hispanic Black households and Hispanic households experienced higher rates of food insecurity than non-Hispanic White households and other groups.

Woman charged with fleeing police to be held for trial

By ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
Las Cruces Bulletin

Lindsi Zumwalt, charged with aggravated fleeing without causing injury or great bodily harm in Deming on Jan. 22, will remain in custody through her trial, 3rd District Judge Conrad Perea ruled Friday morning.

Zumwalt was arrested following a pursuit by police during which she allegedly drove at high speeds through residential and commercial streets, ran past more than a dozen stop signs and finally entered Interstate 10 driving into oncoming traffic before police stopped her vehicle.

She was allegedly driving a "suspect vehicle" in an investigation of two bombs at Deming's probation and parole office, one of which exploded. No one has been charged in connection with the bombs, but police said Zumwalt was the driver of a black Ford pickup truck with no visible license plate, seen in surveillance camera footage leaving a package at the office.

Luna County prosecutors petitioned for pretrial detention, pointing to prior felony convictions and charged parole violations. Prosecutor Keythan Park argued Zumwalt was a danger to the community and that no conditions of release could guarantee public safety. Her attorney, Thomas Guerra, argued that references to the bombing were inflammatory since Zumwalt has not been charged for that. Judge Perea based his decision on the pursuit itself in announcing that he would grant the pretrial motion.

Although the charges are in Luna County, the state Supreme Court assigned the case to Perea after all of the judges in the 6th Judicial District recused themselves or were unavailable, according to a Jan. 30 order.

Another Deming resident, Chloe Lucero, is being held at the Doña Ana County Detention Center in Las Cruces on a federal charge of making interstate threats for allegedly threatening to bomb government buildings in emails addressed to the FBI days before the explosion in Deming.

Suspended NMSU player apologizes for punch

BULLETIN REPORT

New Mexico State University forward Robert Carpenter apologized last Friday after grounding himself with a suspension for the rest of the season for punching a rival player at the Pan-Am Center.

"I let my emotions get the best of me and I let my team down. I'm sorry," he posted on X, the website formerly known as Twitter.

The Aggies hosted the Liberty University Flames from Lynchburg, Va. on Feb. 1, winning a 79-73 victory in overtime, reaching third place in Conference USA (10-12) before a subsequent win, on Feb. 3, against Jacksonville State (Ala.) brought them to 11-12.

But a good game was marred during the first half when Carpenter punched Liberty player Shiloh Robinson and was ejected from the game.

Robert Carpenter (21) is seen during a Dec. 30 match against California Baptist University at the Pan-Am Center in Las Cruces.

The punch knocked Robinson to the floor in a moment captured clearly on video and shared widely on social media.

NMSU men's head coach Jason Hooten issued a statement adding his own apologies to the Liberty team, saying Carpenter, a junior, apologized to Robinson face-to-face as well as to his fellow Aggies. While pledging to support Carpenter academically and to revisit his suspension later, Hooten wrote that in his 14-year head coaching career, "...something like this has never taken place within my programs nor is this acceptable."

The Aggies went on to defeat Jax State last weekend, 67-65, and move on to play University of Texas at El Paso at the Don Haskins Center Saturday at 7 p.m.

Advice for taking the range to the course

It has often been said that the longest 100 yards in golf is the distance between the practice tee and the first tee. The lament goes something like this: "I hit it great over on the range, and then when I'm on the course I can't hit it out of my shadow." There is no doubt that one of the biggest challenges in golf consists of taking our practice game to the golf course.

Most unskilled or high-handicap golfers go to the range and fire those balls out into space, seemingly without purpose, intention, direction or destination – like there's a prize for the most balls hit in a minute. Shots on the course demand shot placement to an exact target. Instead of taking the range to the golf course we need to take the course to the range. That means hitting a few shots you know you will use later. Visualize shots under the same conditions you'll be facing shortly. Feel the tension and let it go. The hardest holes on the course will seem less scary. Back in 1974 HOF PGA Tour legend Curtis Strange won the 1974 NCAA Championship by hitting a one iron to the final hole for an eagle. Later that year, on a trip to Japan to play an International tournament, Strange shared with Herb Wimberly, coach of the American college team, that he had practiced that shot and that scenario in his mind "a thousand times." Strange had rehearsed the one iron to the green to win the tournament so many times, with the precise thoughts and emotions in place, that when it came time to execute the real thing, when it was all on the line, he felt totally comfortable and confident.

There are other reasons why many of us fail to take the range to the course. You hit the same club repetitively, which does not resemble what happens on the course at all. The tendency is not to aim at a specific target on the range, and that's a mistake. Famed golf teacher Claude Harmon III suggests challenging yourself by taking the driver and hitting between markers 30 yards wide. If successful, take an iron and hit it between markers 20 yards across. If you do that, then take a wedge and to a space of 10 yards. You're changing clubs, like you do on the golf course. Be aware of your distance control as you hit those clubs, because that is crucial during your 18-hole round.

Another issue is you're more relaxed on the range because you always have another ball. If you don't use the same on-course setup on the range, try using your pre-shot routine and taking measured breathing to keep yourself calm on the range, like on the course. Plus, you may not be too concerned if your swing is slightly off warming up, but your swing flaws expose themselves under pressure – when it counts.

Unlike golf pros, you and I are often pressed for time and don't always get to the course when we plan or would like to. Do some stretching and loosening. Take a couple of clubs and take some slow, smooth swings like a batter on deck. Make sure you limber up your lower back, your hips and especially your shoulders; these are the key areas of your body that your back swing, weight shift and downswing depend on. As a super-senior golfer, I have certainly learned the value of strength, flexibility and cardio workouts at the gym. After the gym I can play without hitting range balls, if need be. You will still have enough time to go to the practice green and hit some putts to test the green speed. Hit a couple of 20 footers, and then some 4 to 6 footers, and go.
