Local volunteer Charlene Curry and other members of Therapaws have found a great way to keep their dogs active while also contributing to community members' health: through hour-long therapy sessions at retirement homes, hospice and some Las Cruces schools.

According to Curry, Therapaws was established in 1992 by a group of people who were all members of a group known at the time as the Dog Obedience Club.

"They became affiliated with Therapy Dogs, Inc. just two years after that organization was formed," said Curry.

Therapy Dogs later became the Alliance of Therapy Dogs, an international registry of therapy dogs based in Wyoming, and through which most of the members of Therapaws are registered.

"We travel to a bunch of different schools and, of course, hospice, to help wherever we may be needed. We have even volunteered at the federal courthouse and Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine," she said. "The main purpose is to help those who need therapy and just brighten their day."

Curry added that although they love to contribute to residents' wellbeing, it can be difficult with so few volunteers.

"We went from having about 40 members to only having about 14 now. Even with those 14, sometimes we only have about eight that can contribute time, as others may have prior obligations."

Volunteers fluctuate because many are college students who tend to move away or have pets that pass away. Curry said many of the older volunteers have the time but just may not have the means of transportation.

Curry is not the only person who wants to see an increase in volunteers as many employees and patients want to be introduced to new furry faces.

Lisa Masterson, billing specialist with Mesilla Valley Hospice, said all people have to do is bring their pooch and they do all the work.

"When I hear the jingle of their tags coming down the hallway, it's just a perfect break," she said. "The dogs are so calm, you know you can pet them, you can hug them, and they won't pull away or snarl. I wish more places

Romero makes case at NMSU as cabinet secretary questions process

ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
Las Cruces Bulletin

On Monday, Arsenio Romero made his case to staff, students and the community for the leadership of New Mexico State University, the first of five candidates to appear in person and by video conference this week to make statements and answer questions about their qualifications and vision for the job.

Romero appeared in a dimly lit auditorium in the Corbett Center Student Union on the Las Cruces campus, where stage lights remained off and low overhead lighting mostly lit the stage behind him, leaving him in silhouette before an audience of faculty, administrators and staff.

Romero's candidacy was itself backlit by controversy and NMSU's selection process. Romero was forced by Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham in August to choose between his post as New Mexico's Public Education Secretary and his pursuit of the NMSU job; choosing the latter, he abruptly resigned.

Romero is among five candidates comprising a second slate of finalists, after regents decided in March not to hire anyone from its first group of candidates and to start over. Romero is the only candidate from New Mexico, a graduate of NMSU and also a former regent who served with some of the present board members from 2020 to 2023.

Over the weekend, Romero's recent colleague in the governor's cabinet, Higher Education Secretary Stephanie Rodriguez, called on the university board of regents to hit reset a second time on its selection of a president to succeed Dan Arvizu, who left amid disarray in 2022.

In an op-ed, Rodriguez argued that "the search as conducted by the Board of Regents has produced two separate slates of finalists without the background or experience befitting the unique character and history of NMSU."

Pointing to controversies and high leadership turnover at the land grant university that followed a period of declining enrollment and revenue, Rodriguez stated, "This job is not a stepping stone, and leading a large public college is not a job you learn on the fly. I have directly asked the regents to once again take up the work of generating candidates who can effectively chart a course for this proud higher education institution."

The other candidates are Valerio Ferme, executive vice president of academic affairs and provost of the University of Cincinnati; Brian Haynes, vice chancellor for student affairs at the University of California, Riverside; and Monica Lounsbury, dean of the College of Health and Human Services at California State University, Long Beach.

Augusta University provost Neil MacKinnon withdrew his candidacy last week after accepting an appointment elsewhere.

Responding to Rodriguez, NMSU's former chancellor and president, Garrey Carruthers, pushed back in an op-ed of his own, defending the selection process and calling Rodriguez's article "an attempt to direct, intimidate, and/or embarrass the regents of NMSU into changing their ongoing process in selecting the next president."

Carruthers wrote, "Having a governor, or a secretary of higher education, try to influence the search process for a university's next leader opens a dangerous door and allows state politics to guide how institutions of higher education are run."

Rodriguez's office did not immediately respond to a request for comment, and a spokesperson for NMSU declined to comment on the exchange.

Romero took the microphone at 10 a.m. in a business suit and shoes that squeaked on the wooden deck, prompting him to stand on the carpeted lip of the stage where he was closer to the audience but not lit. Romero recounted his upbringing in Belen, his arrival at NMSU as an undergrad and the beginnings of his education career in Las Cruces. He repeatedly emphasized his roots in Las Cruces, connections he had made across the state and his confidence in his ability to negotiate the challenges confronting NMSU.

"This is my home," Romero said in pledging to stay for a decade or longer if selected, to stabilize leadership across the university, replace long outdated infrastructure and improve faculty and staff salaries which employees have called noncompetitive.

Yet Romero has hopped to several leadership positions over the past decade, from the Las Cruces Public Schools and Roswell Independent School District; stints as superintendent of Deming Public Schools and Los Lunas Schools; a turnaround leader for the state Public Education Department and NMSU regent; leading to his appointment to head the PED in February 2023, a position he held just over a year and a half.

Romero said he had forged relationships all over the state, including with lawmakers and philanthropies, that would help him bring in money for capital improvements, improved salaries and research funds. He said his prior experience negotiating with unions would help ease negotiations with a new faculty bargaining unit.

NMSU graduate student workers have a separate collective bargaining unit, formed during Romero's time on the board of regents.

"You have a commitment for me that we're going to be a team together," Romero told faculty and staff. "I promise you, I will not be a leader that sits in my chair in the office. I'm going to be the type of leader that you're going to see all over campus."

would allow pets or dogs.”

Masterson added that people feel an “emotional change,” an immediate feeling of dopamine that brings reassurance and warmth to people that may be feeling alone or sad.

Two of the dogs that currently volunteer at the Mesilla Valley Hospice belong to Curry. One of them happens to be Masterson’s favorite volunteer: Trek, a male Ridgeback, the size of a Great Dane, welcomes everyone. Masterson said that Trek is the perfect size to cuddle and wrap your arms around to give you a sense of comfort. She said when Trek comes to visit, it builds anticipation and keeps people going.

“They say pets can help you live longer, and for people out here alone that don’t have family or a lot of visitors, it can be exciting because say ‘oh, Trek is visiting this Thursday,’ and their moods change as if a family member were visiting,” Masterson said.

Although the dogs are the star of the meetings, Masterson added that it takes a lot of work by the handlers to provide this service.

Among the requirements for volunteers is keeping their dogs current on their shots and maintaining the right temperament.

Part of the dogs’ training, prior to becoming therapy certified, is to be sure they can also work well around other pooches.

One friend of Trek, known as Ryder, has had his fair share of temperament training as his excitement may get the best of him.

Handler and longtime Therapaws member Don Toomey said Ryder was a shelter pup when he got him. He first began a bit skittish but, in time, Toomey said Ryder became one of the best therapy dogs in the association, helping in courtroom settings.

“When they asked me to bring my dog to divorce trials in New Mexico, unlike most states, kids testify in public regarding their parents there, and so Ryder came to help the kids,” Toomey said with a sense of accomplishment. “The kids were much calmer, and I was sold on this program from that point on. It’s just great.”

Funnily enough, Masterson added that as Toomey and Curry handle the pooches, people may forget their human companions exist. “I feel bad sometimes because I gush over the dog, but I forget the owner is standing there,” Masterson chuckled. “But just having the dog walk into a room and see the expression on people’s faces change, volunteering to do that, to me would be such a good thing. You just bring the dog, and the dog does the rest.”

Want to volunteer? Don't 'paws,' here's how

Potential volunteers are asked to join one of the visits without their pet in order to determine if this is something for both the owner and dog to enjoy.

The dog must be at least a year old. The handlers can be as young as 16 (if accompanied by a parent or guardian) and there is no maximum age limit.

Each dog is observed alongside their owner for at least three visits to monitor how the dogs interact with people and dogs. Each of the visits are an hour long and there is a minimum of four visits per year for participants to stay up to date with the Alliance of Therapy Dogs.

Therapaws is insured by the Alliance of Therapy Dogs, so handlers do not need to worry about getting their own insurance.

Each dog is required to have a clear canine fecal test and a signed health form from a veterinarian.

Handlers must undergo a background check that can be purchased through the Alliance of Therapy Dogs for $20 with a one-time new member fee of $15. Each additional dog is $10 per year.

“Please note that this certification is not certification for a service dog. Service dogs are defined as animals who assist one person with their specific needs. Therapy dogs do not receive the same acceptance into restaurants, stores, airplanes, etc.,” Curry said. “Their job is simply to bring joy and smiles to people who benefit being with a well-behaved dog.”

People can contact Curry for more details on Therapaws or how to volunteer at 575-642-2259 or at charlenecurry@gmail.com.

Officials break ground on reproductive health care clinic

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

It'll be about 18 months before a massive reproductive health care clinic opens in Las Cruces.

But Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham and other officials hoped to send a message on Sept. 5 about abortion access in New Mexico: Simply put, that New Mexico is a place investing in reproductive health – and the facility in Las Cruces is proof.

“We have to teach the rest of America (reproductive health) is primary care,” Lujan Grisham said. “Let New Mexico be a beacon of light.”

Lujan Grisham was joined by dozens of local officials and officials from northern New Mexico in celebrating the groundbreaking of a long-promised reproductive healthcare center.

U.S. Rep. Gabe Vasquez, D-N.M.; Las Cruces city councilors Becky Corran, Cassie McClure and Johana Bencomo; and Doña Ana County Commissioners Manuel Sanchez and Christopher Schaljo-Hernandez, joined the governor in the groundbreaking.

“Instead of limiting healthcare access, what we're doing here today in this big stretch from the Permian Basin all the way to the Arizona border is expanding reproductive health access for everybody,” Vasquez said.

“This clinic here will save lives,” he added.

“And it will defend reproductive freedom.”

Thursday's groundbreaking follows a changing landscape for reproductive health in New Mexico.

After the U.S. Supreme Court effectively ended federal abortion protections in its 2022 decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization, more clinics have opened in New Mexico as neighboring states with Republican-led legislatures enacted laws that severely limit abortion or ban it outright.

Albuquerque, Las Cruces, and Farmington have seen new clinics installed during that time. However, none have received more press and attention than the governor's promised $10 million facility in Las Cruces.

Shortly after the Dobbs decision, Lujan Grisham announced the project in August 2022 to increase reproductive health care in New Mexico.

Officials have pitched the facility as being primarily for New Mexicans but acknowledged that the Center – as with many reproductive care locations in New Mexico – would be heavily used by residents of Texas, where abortion is illegal in almost all cases.

The project languished behind closed doors until the University of New Mexico purchased land adjacent to MountainView Regional Medical Center in May 2023.

LAS CRUCES BULLETIN PHOTOS BY ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
U.S. Rep. Gabe Vasquez and New Mexico Gov. Michelle Lujan-Grisham attend a ceremony including a groundbreaking for a new reproductive health care clinic in Las Cruces on Sept. 5, 2024.

In a news release, the university described the Center as a “community-advised, full spectrum, reproductive health care center” that will “serve the needs of thousands of individuals living in southern New Mexico who have lacked access to basic reproductive health care for decades.”

“The high costs of health care, long distances to providers, lack of public transportation, insufficient or complete lack of insurance coverage, few trusted specialists in a given area, limited knowledge about where to access care, and shame and stigma surrounding reproductive health care are just some of the barriers to accessing care that New Mexicans have identified,” the release continued.

Lujan Grisham credited UNM Health Science Center interim director Dr. Mike Richards with finding a location for the clinic. Richards outlined some of the services and the timeline for opening the facility.

including IUD implants, emergency contraception, and hormonal and barrier contraception options.

- Pregnancy loss support and management.
- Lactation support.
- Women's preventive care, sexually transmitted infection treatment and cancer screenings.
- Adoption education and resources.
- Limited primary care, including STI screenings, cervical cancer screenings and checkups for sexual health care.
- Doula support.

According to Richards, the clinic will be about 8,000 square feet and serve 1,000 patients each year.

Richards said architectural plans were being completed, that a contractor had been identified and that the facility would be opened in about 12 to 18 months.

“This project is well underway at this point,” Richards said, adding, “When we talk about building clinics something complete in (about) a year, sounds like a long time, but in the world of healthcare, that's actually a pretty accelerated process.”

Lujan Grisham suggested during the event that she wanted the center to open sooner.

“I'm still going to be governor, by God, by the time we open those doors, or else,” Lujan Grisham said.

City nearing deadline in spend-it-or-lose-it federal dollars

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

As the clock ticks down on federal Covid-19 relief money, Las Cruces officials said most of the money given to Las Cruces has been spent or allocated.

The discussion took place at the city council's work session at city hall on Sept. 9.

The federal government allocated $1.9 billion to aid local governments in pandemic relief efforts, primarily through the American Rescue Plan Act. The money comes with a timeline stipulation: It must be allocated by the end of 2024 and spent by the end of 2026, or the federal government will take it back.

City and nonprofit officials who spoke about the funding's impact suggested to the council that all of the money would be spent by the deadline, something the council said was a priority.

Tracking efforts by the Brookings Metro and the National League of Cities show that most municipalities in the U.S. allocated the money to address homelessness, affordable housing, public safety, public health and infrastructure needs.

However, the same tracker shows that the vast majority of municipalities used at least a portion of the money to replenish rainy day funds, provide staff with wage increases, upgrade facilities and technology or conduct other governmental operations.

According to a presentation from the Las Cruces Finance department, Las Cruces received two payouts of $12.4 million for a total of over $24 million.

Liam Beasley, a city accountant, said that as of June 30, Las Cruces had spent about 58 percent ($14.4 million). Another $10.3 million has been obligated, leaving about $4 million unobligated and unspent.

"We're constantly moving on this," Leanne Demouche, the city's finance director, said, reporting that other departments would use the unobligated and unspent money.

Beasley also broke down the spending by category. He said $2 million was allocated to public health and safety projects, much of which went to fire department training efforts and police technology.

Another $1 million was allocated to Visit Las Cruces, the city's tourism department, to bring people back to Las Cruces after Covid-19 shutdowns.

A Visit Las Cruces official cited the recovery of the lodger's tax to pre-pandemic levels as proof that the money had been well invested.

Other investments included:

- $958,000 allocated to city employee pay
- $3.5 million to sewer and water projects such as septic tank elimination
- $6,888,670 allocated to various infrastructure improvements, such as covering funding gaps in general obligation bond projects

Several community organizations also received ARPA funds:

- Boys and Girls Club, which provides programs and services for young people, received $1,388,800.

- Catholic Charities of Southern New Mexico, which provides social, legal, and economic assistance to people in need, received $550,000.

- Community Action Agency, a nonprofit geared to assist low-income families, received $1.7 million.

- Cruces Creatives, a nonprofit "maker space" connecting residents with opportunities to create art, received $1 million.

- Jardin de Los Niños, which assists homeless children, received $350,000.

- LiftFund, which provides loans and micro-loans to small businesses, received $1 million.

Las Cruces Storefront Repair Program, Mesilla Valley Community of Hope, Mesilla Valley Public Housing Authority and the New Mexico Housing and Community Development Cooperation also received money.

Beasley said most of the money sent to the community organizations had been spent or obligated, with the expectation of some workforce development programs.

City prepares enforcement of shopping cart law

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

Businesses supplying customers with shopping carts have until Sept. 16 to submit their anti-theft plans to the city of Las Cruces as enforcement of the controversial shopping cart ordinance nears.

That was the primary takeaway from a town hall meeting on Sept. 10 meant to educate approximately 84 Las Cruces businesses that will be subject to potential penalties once the ordinance fully goes into effect on Oct. 16.

Yet the meeting was sparsely attended. Less than a half dozen residents appeared in person and about a dozen watched online. This marks a change in awareness of a new law that's been one of the more controversial changes in recent memory.

The ordinance, passed by the Las Cruces City Council on a 4-3 vote, compels Las Cruces businesses to supply the city with a plan detailing how they will prevent shopping cart removal. The same ordinance also empowers police officers to cite people using shopping carts outside of a business' property.

Those found with shopping carts could face jail time or fines – but the city has repeatedly said its municipal court will seek to force people into treatment programs instead of jail.

Proponents of the ordinance – including the Las Cruces Police Department and Businesses for a Safer Las Cruces, said it was a crucial step in improving public safety. Opponents – including civil rights organizations – said it was ineffective and unjustly targeted unhoused residents of Las Cruces who use carts to shuttle their belongings.

The day after the ordinance passed on Aug. 5, employees from a Las Cruces Albertsons grocery store took a shopping cart from an unhoused woman, leaving her belongings spread across a Las Cruces parking lot, according to Las Cruces police.

“We’re not requiring the retrieval of shopping carts in the immediate possession of any persons,” said the deputy economic development director, Chris Faivre, during the Sept. 10 meeting. “And that’s key. We’re not asking anyone to retrieve carts that someone is currently using.”

Faivre, who moderated the meeting, outlined the requirements for the shopping cart plans before they were submitted to the city. Faivre also said that the city would spend the time between Sept. 16 and Oct. 16 promoting voluntary

Join us for the annual open house at the Griggs Walnut Superfund site!

The City of Las Cruces Utilities Department will host the Griggs-Walnut 12th anniversary open house 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 19th at the site, 153 N. Cottonwood St. Everyone is welcome.

The City has hosted an open house at the facility every year since it opened except 2020, because of COVID restrictions. Some people have attended every open house, collecting a commemorative cup each year.

The Utilities Department Water Production Program staff enjoy giving tours of the Griggs-Walnut Facility, and are proud to be the ones operating and maintaining that system, said Adrienne L. Widmer, P.E., Director of the Utilities Department.

The Griggs-Walnut facility treats groundwater contaminated with dissolved perchloroethylene (PCE), a chemical used as a degreasing solvent and in dry cleaning, among other uses. The dissolved-PCE plume (the “bubble” that contains the contaminant) was approximately 1.8 miles long by about one-half mile wide when first detected in 1993, between 190 and 650 feet below ground surface. The city-owned Crawford Airport was once located at the site, as was the Doña Ana County Transportation Department’s maintenance facility and a National Guard armory. All three have been identified as sources or potential responsible parties of the PCE contaminant.

The City and County share ownership of the treatment site as a Joint Superfund Project. Its official name is the Pascual Rodriguez Jr. Griggs Walnut Groundwater Plume Superfund Site Treatment Facility, named in honor of a long-time city employee who spent much of his career involved with the superfund site and facility.

At the facility, PCE-contaminated water “is being actively cleaned up according to federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) requirements,” said Steve Perez, the Utilities Department’s Deputy Director of Regulatory Compliance who took over from Widmer as project manager of the treatment facility earlier this year. “We meet all the EPA and Safe Drinking Water Act regulations,” Perez said. “We have good quality water here.”

“Las Cruces is very fortunate when it comes to water quality,” Widmer said. “When you turn on your tap and water comes out, you can feel confident using it. Our water is safe. We have an elite team that keeps on top of that.”

After PCE was first detected, four city water wells were immediately shut down to prevent it from spreading. In 2012, two of the wells – one located within the grounds of the treatment facility and the other nearby – were brought back on line to pump contaminated water into the facility for treatment. One of those wells was shut down in July 2024 and the other continues to pump raw water from the plume into the treatment facility. Two air strippers diffuse air through the contaminated water to “strip contaminate from the water,” Perez said. The treated water from the air strippers is then disinfected and pumped into the City’s Upper Griggs Reservoir. The water that is returned to the city water supply meets all federal and state regulations on water quality.

Originally, the Griggs-Walnut plume contained about 300 pounds of PCE, which has been reduced by about half since the treatment facility opened. Remaining PCE should be completely removed by 2032.

A superfund is an EPA-administered hazardous-substances remediation program that began in 1980. As of June 2024, there were more than 1,300 Superfund sites nationwide, according to the EPA, including more than a dozen sites in New Mexico; Griggs-Walnut is the only one in Doña Ana County.

In 2020, the EPA, the City and County, the U.S. Department of Defense and the National Guard Bureau entered into a consent decree under which the federal government agreed to pay almost $7.25 million for the Griggs-Walnut remediation.

“The City Utilities crews responsible for maintenance and monthly sampling do a fantastic job keeping things organized and maintained,” the EPA said in a 2021 report on Griggs-Walnut.

New county manager contract sees tighter terms, bigger bucks

JUSTIN GARCIA

Elected officials will have the chance to participate in the incoming county manager's evaluation, a provision that caused a rift between the commission and the previous manager earlier this year.

Otherwise, Scott Andrews' new contract reins in the county's top executive with a shorter contract period and stricter provisions while providing him with a slew of benefits and a higher salary than his predecessor.

The Board of County Commissioners hired Andrews in August after a months-long search. The previous manager, Fernando Macias, held the position since 2018 but saw his contract ended early by commissioners last December. He left the county in April and is running for District Attorney.

The rift that caused the split centered around the commission's desire to allow elected officials, such as the county clerk and sheriff, to play a role in Macias' yearly evaluation.

It's unclear how this would have played out.

Scott Andrews presents to the Board of County Commissioners on Aug. 9, 2024. Andrews will take over as Doña Ana County Manager in October.

During his tenure, Macias had several public spats with elected officials, tension that would have likely been noted in his evaluations.

While these departments operate outside the county manager's direct purview, the manager plays an administrative role over the department's employees. Functions like payroll, termination approval, hiring and other responsibilities fall on the manager, not the elected official.

But with a new manager and a new contract come new expectations.

Andrews will receive an evaluation after six months on the job, according to the contract, and elected officials will be allowed to provide input into that process.

Andrews will then receive yearly evaluations, the same as Macias.

Andrews' contract is good for three years, with options to renew every two years. That's another difference from Macias' contract, which was a six-year deal with annual evaluations.

With Macias' termination, the county was required to pay him at least $400,000 for the remaining two years of his deal.

Macias' contract also allowed the former county manager to moonlight as a consultant, something Andrews' contract lacks.

The former and incoming managers had the same amount of vacation. The contracts say that Andrews, like Macias, receives 160 hours (about 20 days) of paid leave a year.

But the commission will pay Andrews more money.

Macias' final contract with the board was valued at about $205,288. Andrews will start with an annual salary of $220,000.

Andrews will also receive a $75 monthly cell phone stipend, a car for conducting county business with civic engagement costs (like membership fees for entry into local organizations) covered by the county.

The contract also stipulates that Andrews must move to Doña Ana County before his start date. The contract awards him a $15,000 stipend to help make this happen. No such stipulation existed for Macias, who's called Doña Ana County home for much of his life.

Andrews is leaving his job as assistant city manager of Bakersfield, Calif., and will start as county manager on Oct. 7.

compliance among businesses affected by this law.

After that, noncompliance could result in fines and jeopardize a business' ability to operate in Las Cruces.

So, what needs to be in the plan?

Faivre said a shopping cart plan requires six elements: shopping cart identification signs, general information, public notices, loss prevention efforts, cart retrieval efforts and implementation.

Shopping cart identification signs must identify the cart's owner. They must also contain the business address and phone number to call for retrieval, associate the cart with a store location and notify the public that removal is against the law.

The general information for the plan must include the store manager's contact information, number of carts and a description of how the business will comply with the new law.

The public notice can be signage in a prominent location, flyers, mailers, warnings on bags or any other means that reach lots of customers.

Faivre said the loss percentage effort is a key component of the plan. For this, the city wants businesses to describe the steps taken to prevent shopping cart removal, including cart retrieval efforts.

Businesses are required to retrieve their lost carts within three days of learning one is abandoned – but not while someone is using it. Faivre said that either an employee of the store or a private firm hired to retrieve them must retrieve the abandoned cart. The plan submitted to the city should reflect how the business will conduct this effort.

Joy Wiitala, an LCPD lieutenant, said that businesses should err on the side of caution when determining whether a cart is abandoned.

However, that determination will be largely left to the business's discretion.

Lastly, the plan must describe how the business will implement all the above requirements.

Judge denies request to reinstate Patrick Howard sentence

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

This article discusses sexual assault against children. Help is available by contacting the La Piñon 24-hour hotline at 575-526-3437.

The two former Las Cruces High School students who accused their agriculture teacher of sexual abuse could not be present for a hearing on his sentence.

Both moved far away from Las Cruces as they moved from adolescence to early adulthood; but the experience of sexual abuse delivered at the hands of that teacher, Patrick Howard, has left both with scars felt daily, according to their testimony on Sept. 5.

“Something I’d like to make clear is the guilt that I have felt and continue to feel about speaking up over a criminal act that was done to me,” said one of the women, who spoke to the court via phone.

Years after the experience, the woman said the nightmares have lessened, but she still feels fear at other triggers.

“I still carry and still am that 15-year-old girl who didn’t understand what was going on. I’m speaking my truth today: to speak up for her, to look after her, to remind her that things get better, that she’s strong and that I am worthy of respect,” she said.

The other woman took the chance to condemn the process that brought everyone back into a courtroom.

She said the sentence – about three years of probation and no requirement to register as a sex offender – was paltry compared to the lasting effects of his abuse.

“I stand before you with a deep sense of frustration and disillusionment regarding this case. It’s glaringly apparent that the legal system, while intended to deliver justice, has failed miserably in this instance,” she said in a statement delivered by her attorney.

COURTESY PHOTO

3rd District Judge Douglas Driggers

Both women and one of their mothers asked a judge to reinstate the remaining two years of probation.

The judge said no.

Howard, 61, was initially charged with three counts of criminal sexual contact with a minor and one count of battery in 2018.

He pleaded guilty in 2021 to one count of criminal sexual contact with a minor and a count of battery.

A civil court also forced Howard to pay punitive damages to the former LCHS students who accused him of sexual assault following a series of settlements.

Judge Douglas Driggers of the 3rd Judicial District Court sentenced Howard to five years probation and said he did not have to register as a sex offender – a sentence that prosecutors agreed to at the time.

In March of 2024, Howard’s attorney, Jeep Darnell, requested Driggers terminate the probation sentences since Howard had complied with his requirements up to that point. Driggers agreed, as did prosecutors and parole officials at the time, ending Howard’s sentence after he served just over half of it.

The former LCHS students who accused Howard, now adults, were not notified of this hearing, which violated the state Victims’ Rights Act.

In May, the New Mexico Attorney General’s office requested the state Supreme Court take the case away from Driggers and force another judge to reconsider suspending the sentence.

The Supreme Court allowed the case to remain with Driggers but instructed him to reconsider the terminated sentence.

The initial hearing in July was rescheduled because prosecutors failed to notify the two women again. However, during the Sept. 5 hearing, prosecutors argued that the law required Driggers to reinstate the sentence and that the law made no availability for a judge to suspend it in the first place.

“The court is without authority to limit the probation or grant an early discharge,” prosecutor Richard Wellborn said at the hearing.

But both Howard’s lawyer and Driggers disagreed, saying that the law did not require that. Darnell could not be reached for comment.

Crime stats town hall to feature fentanyl presentation

BULLETIN REPORT

Two experts on drug use will join the Las Cruces Police Department for a town hall about crime and fentanyl later this month.

LCPD announced the change for its quarterly town hall geared chiefly toward presenting crime statistics and providing community members with an opportunity to engage with police administrators.

The town hall will begin at 6 p.m. on Sept. 12 at Las Cruces City Hall and typically lasts about two hours.

The two experts presented by LCPD are Athena Huckaby, a public health professional in drug policy and harm reduction, and Kevin Renn, a drug intelligence officer with the New Mexico High-Intensity Drug Trafficking Area, according to a news release.

The city said the town hall will be televised live on CLCTV, Comcast Cable channel 20-SD and 928-HD, and live streamed on the city’s YouTube channel and the Las Cruces Police Department’s Facebook page.

Amendments this year only offer tweaks

Every two years New Mexico voters get the chance to make changes to our state Constitution. Some years they're big, fundamental changes, like scrapping the old state Board of Education in favor of a secretary appointed by the governor or ending the cash bail system. Some years they are just tinkering around the edges.

This is one of those years. Voters will have four constitutional amendments on the ballot this year. Two of them will increase state support for disabled veterans and all veterans who have been honorably discharged. I don't know how one could vote against either of those at a time when the state is so awash with money.

The third would tinker with the appointment process for the Judicial Nominating Commission. Only the fourth amendment, which would allow the county commission to set salaries for county officers, is likely to stir much debate.

Before we became a state, the territorial government paid county officials a fee for each service rendered. A sheriff would get so much for each arrest, or a clerk would get paid for each specific duty he completed. The Constitution put those powers in the hands of the Legislature. County officials are now paid based on a complex formula that includes size, population density and real estate values.

One advantage of the current system is that it creates consistency and uniformity throughout the state. But my guiding principle here is that local control is usually best. If we don't like their decisions, we can make sweeping changes in the county commission much easier than we could with the state Legislature.

The Legislative Finance Committee has prepared arguments for and against each amendment that are available on their website under the publication tabs.

The big story again this year is not the constitutional amendments that passed through the Legislature and will now be on the ballot. It's the ones that are desperately needed but fell short once again.

House Joint Resolution 1, which would have scrapped the alternating 30-day and 60-day sessions for regular 45-day sessions with no restrictions, allowing the governor to control the agenda, never got a committee hearing. Other similar joint resolutions were introduced in the House and Senate, but none fared any better.

HJR 7, which would have established a commission to consider paying legislators, made it through two committees but never got a floor vote.

New Mexico is the only state that does not pay its legislature. While that may sound like the taxpayers are getting a good deal, the result is that most average, working-age residents can't afford to serve. Sen. Siah Correa Hemphill, D-Silver City, was forced to surrender her seat because it was hurting her family financially.

We end up with a legislature filled with retirees, self-employed business owners and political activists. There aren't many lawmakers living the life experiences of their struggling constituents.

Our founders made it easy to change the Constitution. All it takes is a majority vote of all members in both chambers to put the issue on the ballot. But current lawmakers are so afraid of change they can't even study the issue.

The View

Diverging from the smoothest path

"Two roads diverged in a yellow wood, And sorry I could not travel both...I took the one less traveled by, and that has made all the difference." – Robert Frost, from "The Road Not Taken"

I have always lived by the adage that the right path is not always easiest and the easiest path is not always right (for one reason or another). My favorite poem, I always imagined, would be illustrated by one path that is bright and grassy, level and smooth, while the other is wild and winding, unknown and wondrous.

Most people, especially those in my generation and later, seem to want not only to travel the easier path, but to have someone lay it in front of them, trim the trees and tend the grass so that it is flat and straight – and boring.

I worry about our society if no one is willing to work hard for what they get, to have to fight your way through some overgrowth to find adventure and build something that is all yours.

Sometimes the difficult path is the necessary path, and it is difficult because few want to traverse it. It is intimidating, lonely and frightening. But I have experienced that once you find the courage to begin that journey, you find others along the way that have also made the same selfless decision you have: to face scrutiny and often crippling impediments because it was the right thing to do. And those have always been the best people I have ever met.

And that has brought me to you. Along a path that, at times, has been uphill and overgrown. It took me many years to find my voice, as I was raised to respect the status quo, trust those in power and stay in my lane. That voice has, at times, gotten me in trouble for non-conformance; to be quiet would have been the easy path but not the right one. I have been asked before to sacrifice my morality for someone else's comfort (their smooth path) or for the status quo. Respectfully, no, thank you. And no more.

Politics has no role in selecting NMSU's next leader

GARREY CARRUTHERS
Guest columnist

During my tenure as governor, it was my practice to consult with the presidents of our universities regarding the talent and expertise needed in a regent to assist their institution in reaching its goals. We would then seek and appoint the most qualified individual to assist them in their mission. With respect to the governance of universities, that was my principal role.

I was taken aback after reading a recent op-ed by New Mexico's Secretary of Higher Education that suggested the NMSU Board of Regents should scrap their current presidential search and begin their process anew. It appeared to me it was an attempt to direct, intimidate, and/or embarrass the regents of NMSU into changing their ongoing process in selecting the next president.

Picking university presidents is not the role of the governor, nor is it the role of the chosen secretary of higher education. The state's constitution clearly spells out that universities in New Mexico are to be governed by boards of regents. Having a governor, or a secretary of higher education, try to influence the search process for a university's next leader opens a dangerous door and allows state politics to guide how institutions of higher education are run.

In our state, numerous safeguards are in place to help shield regents from the influence of Santa Fe and the whims of elected officials. While the governor appoints regents, those individuals must be confirmed by the state senate. Nearly all boards in the state have five members, and no more than three of those members can be of the same political party. The board at the University of New Mexico has seven members, and no more than four members there can be of the same party.

After their confirmation, regents should be allowed to go about their business of helping to guide our state's universities.

In her letter, the secretary indicated the finalists for NMSU's next president aren't representative enough of the university or the student body. I beg to differ. A presidential search committee representing university stakeholders was engaged from the beginning of this process. Each of the finalists has a doctorate degree and have dedicated their lives to serving students through education. Two of the finalists are Hispanic, one is African American, one is female, and each have submitted statements of diversity, equity and inclusion, expressing their commitment to serving communities which have historically been underserved.

To continue the best practices in governing universities, it is critical the regents conduct their constitutional duty of selecting a president without interference or political pressure in the process.

Garrey Carruthers served as governor of New Mexico from 1987 to 1991, as NMSU's chancellor and president from 2013 to 2018 and a member of the New Mexico State Ethics Commission from 2019 to 2023.

BREAKING GROUND IN HEELS

During her time in office, Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham has attended her share of groundbreaking events, taking up the ceremonial shovel and disturbing a pile of dirt to mark the beginning of some public construction or another. While the governor often sports flats or western style boots for many of her appearances, we have noticed she likes to wear high heels for groundbreakings and sometimes teases other participants about it, as she did on Sept. 5 when breaking ground on a reproductive health clinic in Las Cruces. As she approached the mound and grasped a shovel, the governor turned to one of the women representing UNM's administration and said, "Where are your high heels?"

Los Lonely Boys include Las Cruces in new tour

FILM FEST EXPANDS INTO MUSIC

ALGERNON D'AMMASSA

Las Cruces Bulletin

Could Las Cruces one day be home to an omnibus festival of film, live music and related events similar to South by Southwest in Austin, Texas?

Austin is a larger city by far and SXSW is approaching its 38th year, but Las Cruces International Film Festival founder Ross Marks cited that event as a direction he would like to see his project stretch.

“This is our tenth year now,” Marks said in an interview. “Attendance has grown. Industry attention has grown. It’s grown beyond my wildest dreams. It’s the biggest film festival in the country put on by a university.”

LCIFF’s home base is New Mexico State University’s Creative Media Institute, where Marks is a professor and frequently works with colleagues, students and former students as a filmmaker in his own right. This year’s festival was held in April with screenings, workshops and events featuring celebrity guests such as Ron Perlman and Eric Roberts at multiple venues around the city.

At 7 p.m. on Sept. 20, the festival will present its first music concert: Los

Ringo, Henry and Jojo Garza comprise Los Lonely Boys.

Lonely Boys behind one of the most familiar rock singles of the 2000s, will play a full show at the Grapevine Plaza, the outdoor venue associated with the Picacho Peak Brewing Co. at 3900 W. Picacho Avenue.

“Heaven,” the band’s Grammy-winning debut single in 2004, was a Billboard Top 40 hit that topped Billboard’s adult contemporary chart for 16 weeks and also found a country music audience. The trio’s slinky blend of Tejano, conjunto, blues and rock has sustained five studio albums, more Grammy nominations and decades of performances, minus a three-year hiatus from 2019 to 2022. The band consists of brothers Henry, Jojo and Ringo Garza.

Marks made his acquaintance with the band when he sought permission to use “Heaven” in his 2021 movie, “Walking with Herb.” The movie, based on a novel by Las Cruces Joe Bullock, was filmed in and around town with George Lopez, Edward James Olmos, Mary McDonnell and Billy Boyd among its cast.

At that time, Marks said he was already interested in expanding LCIFF into concerts, but needed a mid-sized venue, something between the Pan-American Center’s 13,000 seats and the Rio Grande Theater’s 400. As it happened, Grapevine Plaza – which had served as a film location for two of his movies (“Santa’s Cousin” and a film he is co-producing, “Brewmance”) – fit neatly.

Marks said that after “getting my feet wet” with his first concert, he has tentative plans to stage a larger concert as part of the 10th anniversary LCIFF next April.

The Sept. 20 Los Lonely Boys concert is a benefit for the festival as well as the American Collegiate Talent Showcase scholarship program at New Mexico State University, founded by Barbara Hubbard. 'Dracula' opens season in campy vein

BULLETIN REPORT

New Mexico State University's theatre department will open the 2024-25 season with "a campy new twist" on Bram Stoker's iconic vampire tale.

An ensemble of student performers is rehearsing "Dracula, a Comedy of Terrors," an off-Broadway success written by Steve Rosen and Gordon Greenberg.

Five actors – Carlos Huereca, Eliza Phillips, Okalani Ventura, Vance Cook and Mario Montiel – play "over 15 characters in this fast-paced satirical slapstick full of gender-bending, quick changing, clever word play and pop culture references a la Mel Brooks," the theatre arts department reported in a news release.

The production, directed by NMSU theatre professor Nichole Hamilton, previews Sept. 26 at 5:30 p.m. with a costume contest and post-show discussion, with half off the price of admission.

The regular run opens Sept. 27 at 7:30 p.m. with a post-show reception, with ad-

Crystal Evans selected as OMDP artist-in-residence

BULLETIN REPORT

Las Cruces artist Crystal Evans will explore the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument this month, producing art, a community workshop and a 'zine' showcasing the monument's landscapes as the OMDP's artist-in-residence.

Las Cruces artist Crystal Evans was selected as the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument artist-in-residence for the fall of 2024.

"The BLM Artist-in-Residence program is founded on the belief that artists look closely at the way the world works, notice things that others may have missed, challenge ideas, experiment, and create new opportunities to look at the world and its resources," the BLM website states. "Through the program, artists are encouraged to use their observational skills in portraying the variety of cultural and natural resources on BLM lands such as historic structures, artifacts, cultural landscapes, geologic features, and plant and animal life."

The program is a joint project of the nonprofit Friends of the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks and the federal Bureau of Land Management's Las Cruces office. The position pays the selected artist a stipend for the month of September, through the nonprofit Friends organization; and BLM provides onsite housing for the artist, who agrees to develop a community project, a public event and an art project promoting the monument.

Per a news release, Evans' workshop will engage the community in developing works of art and publish the images in a 'zine' format, while also producing her own work on canvas.

The OMDP marks its 10th anniversary this year since being designated by President Barack Obama in 2014. It includes the Organ, Robledo, Sierra de las Uvas, Doña Ana and Potrillo mountains and is managed by BLM.

Monthly Socrates Cafe at library

BULLETIN REPORT

Las Cruces Public Libraries continues to host monthly Socrates Cafe sessions on the last Saturday of each month. The September meeting will commence at 1 p.m. on Sept. 28 at Branigan Memorial Library, 200 E. Picacho Avenue, which is on Roadrunner Transit Route 1.

Subsequent meetings will be Oct. 26, Nov. 30 and Dec. 28 this year. Attendance of prior sessions is not required. Mesilla celebrates Diez y Seis de Septiembre

DAVID SALCIDO
Las Cruces Bulletin

If you're new to the area, you may well wonder what Diez y Seis de Septiembre is and why we celebrate it. It all began on September 16, 1810, when Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla, a Catholic priest, gave a stirring speech in the city of Dolores, Mexico, urging the people to throw off the shackles of servitude to the Spanish empire. Leading a ragtag group of untrained men, women and children who were quickly defeated, Father Hidalgo was nonetheless responsible for what would eventually become known as the start of the battle for Mexican independence. A dispute that wouldn't be finalized until Sept. 27, 1821.

For those of Mexican descent, Diez y Seis de Septiembre is the equivalent of the Fourth of July in the United States, conjuring up a deep sense of pride and patriotism.

The village of Mesilla was established in 1848, when the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo moved the U.S.-Mexico border south of the village of Doña Ana, making it a part of the United States. Many of the citizens of the village were fiercely proud of their heritage and their country, so they moved with the border back into Mexico and founded their own village. Five years later, in 1853, another border dispute was settled with the signing of the Gadsden Purchase, placing Mesilla one again within the boundaries of the United States.

Though the village would henceforth be recognized as an American colony, it would hold fast to its national pride, continuing to celebrate Mexican holidays and its binational beginnings. Diez y Seis de Septiembre, being one of the most important of those holidays, continues to be celebrated to this day in the village of Mesilla.

"That's what we're celebrating, the independence of Mexico," said Special Events Coordinator for the village of Mesilla Dorothy Sellers. "We're honoring our cultural heritage. We do get a lot of flak about observing a Mexican holiday, but we do need to remember that Mesilla was part of Mexico for some time."

The fiesta features such uniquely Mexican staples as Ballet Folklórico dancers, mariachis, delicious food and drink and more. It all kicks off at 10 a.m., Saturday, Sept. 14, with a parade featuring colorful floats down Avenida de Mesilla, from Calle de Mercado to Union Street.

The fiesta, taking place on the historic Mesilla Plaza, begins an hour earlier this year at 11 a.m., and runs to 10 p.m. On Sunday, Sept. 15, the

Kaitlin Olson in "High Potential"

Kaitlin Olson taps into her 'High Potential' in new ABC series celebrity update

BY JAY BOBBIN

Q: I understand that Dermot Mulroney is joining "Chicago Fire" for its new season. Why have there been so many cast changes on that show lately?

A: That can happen with a series that has run for a long time, and that NBC

Dermot Mulroney

OF CHICAGO FIRE ON NBC

drama will be entering its 13th season when it resumes new episodes on Sept. 25. Dermot Mulroney will be playing the new chief of Firehouse 51, succeeding Eamonn Walker, who has said that he is open to returning for guest appearances as Wallace Boden. There's precedent for that, since founding cast member Jesse Spencer has made multiple returns as Matt Casey since leaving as a series regular.

If one looks at the history of "Chicago Fire," changes in its co-stars are nothing new. Lauren German departed after the first couple of seasons when her paramedic character Leslie Shay died on duty, and Kara Killmer followed as her replacement, Sylvie Brett. Killmer herself left the show last season, and Jocelyn Hudon — a familiar face from Hallmark Channel movies in recent years — is now succeeding her as Lizzie Novak.

Monica Raymund left the role of paramedic Gabby Dawson after six seasons, and she also has made returns as a guest star. Charlie Barnett departed as firefighter Peter Mills after the first few years of the show, and Miranda Rae Mayo joined as firefighter Stella Kidd in Season 4 (and married Lt. Kelly Severide, played by Taylor Kinney, in Season 10). Firefighter Brian "Otis" Zvonecek, portrayed by Yuri Sardarov, died at the start of Season 8 from injuries suffered on the job.

Dora Madison, Steven R. McQueen, Annie Ilonze and Alberto Rosende are among other "Chicago Fire" alums. And though he wasn't a series regular, Treat Williams made sufficient appearances as Severide's firefighter-veteran father Benny over the first seven years to have a presence on the series; the character died in Season 7.

Tech visionary and global health and climate philanthropist Bill Gates invites viewers to join him on a learning journey to explore pressing issues facing our world today. Gates digs deep into the promise and risks of artificial intelligence; the pervasive challenge of misinformation; the scale of the climate crisis and the potential of cutting-edge technologies to solve it; the injustice of income inequality and the opportunities to tackle poverty; and how science and innovation is leading to cures for deadly diseases.

“Monsters: The Lyle and Erik Menendez Story” (Sept. 19)

Ryan Murphy and Ian Brennan's true crime anthology series returns, this time chronicling the case of the real-life brothers Lyle and Erik Menendez, who were convicted in 1996 for the murders of their parents, José and Mary Louise “Kitty” Menendez. While the prosecution argued they were seeking to inherit their family fortune, the brothers claimed — and remain adamant to this day, as they serve life sentences without the possibility of parole — that their actions stemmed out of fear from a lifetime of abuse.

“Fly” (Hulu/Disney — Sept. 25, Documentary Premiere)

Humans have long dreamed of the freedom of flight. This heart-stopping National Geographic documentary immerses viewers in the exhilarating yet perilous world of BASE jumping. At the heart of the film are three couples: Jimmy and Marta, pioneering figures affectionately known as the “Mom and Pop” of BASE jumping; the fearless wingsuit pilot Scotty and his newfound love, Julia; and the resilient duo Amber and Espen, whose bond is tested by triumph and tragedy. The film explores the complex balance between passion and sacrifice.

“Colin From Accounts” - Season 2 (Paramount+ — Sept. 26, Season Premiere)

This Australian rom-com series is about flawed, funny people choosing each other and embracing the all-too-relatable chaos of modern life. After Gordon (Patrick Brammall) and Ashley (Harriet Dyer) are brought together in Season 1 by a ridiculous incident, Season 2 of the hit series opens with Ash and Gordon now living together and trying to get their beloved, special needs dog, Colin, back from his new owners. It's the first in a series of hurdles for the new couple as they find out more about each other, for better and worse.

“Twilight of the Gods” - Season 1 (Sept. 19)

Zack Snyder presents an all-new, daring and spectacular animated vision of Norse mythology. In a mythical world of great battles, great deeds and great despair, Leif (Stuart Martin), a mortal King, is saved on the battlefield by Sigrid (Sylvia Hoeks), an iron-willed warrior with whom he falls in love. On their wedding night, Sigrid and Leif survive a wrath of terror from Thor (Pilou Asbaek), which sets them — and a crew of crusaders — on a merciless and against all odds mission for vengeance.

“His Three Daughters” (Sept. 20)

This tense, touching, and funny portrait of family dynamics follows three estranged sisters as they converge in a New York apartment to care for their ailing father and try to mend their own broken relationship with one another. Carrie Coon, Elizabeth Olsen and Natasha Lyonne star.

"A Very Royal Scandal"

(Sept. 19)

One night. One hour. One interview that sent shockwaves around the globe. Based on the real-life 2019 interview between Emily Maitlis (Ruth Wilson) and Prince Andrew (Michael Sheen) over the scandalous accusations he faced regarding his involvement with Jeffrey Epstein (John Hopkins). The series follows the actions of Maitlis and Prince Andrew in the lead-up to the interview, the ground-breaking event itself and the many questions left in its wake that would change their lives forever.

"The Tragically Hip: No Dress Rehearsal" (Sept. 20)

A love story between a band and the country they call home, this series, with never before seen personal and archival footage, sees the Canadian rock n'roll legends share the story of their unique, complicated and wildly successful musical brotherhood. Forty years of hits and misses, friendship and frustration, triumph and tragedy, the docuseries features unseen performances, unreleased music and unprecedented access to The Hip.

"Porno y Helado" (Sept. 20)

Season 2 of this South American comedy reunites viewers with Pablo (Martin Piroyansky), Ramon (Nachito Saralegui) and Ceci (Sofia Morandi), who face a variety of new challenges — from a fan trying to infiltrate the band, debts with friends and competitions with younger artists, to dealing with ego problems.

"The Grand Tour: One For the Road" (Available Now)

In this series' final installment, Jeremy Clarkson, Richard Hammond and James May ignore the instructions of Mr. Wilman and head to Zimbabwe in three cars they've always wanted to own — a Lancia Montecarlo, a Ford Capri 3-litre and a Triumph Stag — for a stunning road trip through beautiful and sometimes challenging landscapes leading to an emotional ending on a strangely familiar island.

fun begins at noon and runs to 7 p.m.

“This fiesta is unique in that we provide free family entertainment,” Sellers said. “We don’t target just one audience. There’s something for everybody. For the kids we have a greased pole and a piñata, which is so much fun to watch. One thing that’s new this year is the Aztec Dancers from Anthony, New Mexico, who do Native American dancing and give an amazing performance. Local bands close out the fiesta on each day, with Tejas playing from 6 to 10 p.m. on Saturday, and Los Chile Rellenos playing from 4-7 p.m. on Sunday.”

Also new this year is a beer garden, sponsored by El Patio. The bar will extend out into the street, where they will provide liquid refreshment to revellers. “They are following all state guidelines, including fencing,” Sellers said. “We’re testing it out this year, but if it’s successful we hope to expand it in the future.”

The one thing you can be assured of, however, is that the entire event will start with El Grito, Father Hidalgo’s stirring cry to battle, during the welcoming ceremony.

“That’s definitely unique to this fiesta,” Sellers said. “That’s how you know you’re in for something really different, especially if you’ve never attended one of these fiestas before. It’s about as Mexican as you get.”

Las Cruces artists honored by governor

BULLETIN REPORT

Two artists from Las Cruces are among the seven recipients of this year’s Governor’s Awards for Excellence in the Arts.

Las Cruces filmmaker, New Mexico State University professor and film festival director Ross Kagan Marks’ selection was hailed by the university in a news release.

Marks has been on the faculty of the Creative Media Institute at NMSU for 14 years, and is the founder and executive director of the Las Cruces International Film Festival. He has also worked steadily as a director and producer of film productions often filmed in and around Las Cruces with students and former students among the cast and crew. Per NMSU, Marks has received international film festival awards for 16 of his movies. He has also been a proponent for investing in Las Cruces-area film industry incentives and infrastructure.

“I very much celebrate this award with the NMSU community, my colleagues at CMI and our wonderful students,” Marks said in a news release.

Las Cruces visual artist John Garrett, brother to former Doña Ana County Commissioner Billy Garrett, works in textile compositions, sometimes incorporating untraditional materials. According to the awards website, Garrett has twice been awarded National Endowment for the Arts fellowships, and he has taught and seen his work exhibited around the U.S. in a practice spanning five decades.

Founded in the 1974, the annual state honors mark their 50th anniversary with October’s ceremony. Winners are nominated by individuals and art organizations across New Mexico ahead of an exhibition and awards ceremony in Santa Fe.

The awards ceremony takes place Oct. 10 at the New Mexico Museum of Art in Santa Fe, with an exhibition of the honorees’ work displayed in the governor’s gallery at the state Capitol building opening Oct. 11 with a reception.

State recalls cannabis over banned pesticide

PATRICK LOHMANN
Source New Mexico

New Mexico's cannabis regulator has issued a recall notice after a wholesaler shipped contaminated product to retailers across the state.

The contaminated product was cannabis flower, not concentrated products like gummies. It came from WH Agriculture, known as Maggie's Farm, according to the New Mexico Cannabis Control Division.

The product was shipped to more than 30 retailers between March 6 and August 1, according to state regulators.

A Sept. 4 notice to Maggie's Farms notes that the state was notified in November 2023 that the company's product tested positive for a pesticide called pyrethrins. On Aug. 30, the state asked the company to prove it was using a permissible level of the pesticide, which the company was unable to do, according to the letter.

The notice requires the company to remove and destroy all of the product that's made it to dispensaries, and to alert all retailers who may have bought it.

The state released a list of 32 shipments to 11 dispensaries that received the product, 23 of which are in Albuquerque. Other retailers are in Los Lunas, Sunland Park, Alamogordo and elsewhere.

The retailers that are on the list are R. Greenleaf Organics, Everest Apothecary, Loud Cloud and House of Blaze.

The New Mexico Cannabis Control Division is asking people to review the list and pay attention to the package identification number. They're advised to destroy the product or return it to the retailer to be destroyed.

No health-related complaints have been reported, according to a news release. But the state says anyone with concerns can call the state poison control hotline at 800-222-1222.

According to the division's website, this is the second time it has issued a mandatory recall notice. In March, an Albuquerque retailer was ordered to destroy cannabis concentrates that tested positive with the banned pesticide called malathion.

In Doña Ana County

The retailers that received the recalled cannabis flower are located around the state, with only one located in Doña Ana County: R. Greenleaf Organics in Sunland Park.

The package number for the relevant product is 1587027925627680. Per the CCD's guidance, consumers who purchased product matching that number should destroy it or return it to the dispensary under the terms of the recall.

A complete list of the affected dispensaries and product numbers is available online by visiting rld.nm.gov, and clicking the "press office" button under the public information tab.

LC Fire Department marks 23 years since Sept. 11

BULLETIN REPORT

The Las Cruces Fire Department recognized the anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon 23 years after the day this week.

Starting at 7:30 a.m., the firefighters of Station 1 on Picacho Avenue near city hall held silent watch until 8:46 a.m., honoring the moment the first plane struck the World Trade Center.

At that point, the fire department rang a ceremonial bell for each significant moment on the morning of Sept. 11 as a massive garrison flag flew over the ceremony.

• 8:46 a.m., American Airlines Flight 11 crashed into North Tower.

• 9:03 a.m., United Airlines Flight 175 crashed into South Tower.

• 9:37 a.m., American Airlines Flight 77 crashed into the Pentagon.

• 9:59 a.m., the collapse of South Tower.

• 10:03 a.m., United Flight 93 crashes near Shanksville, Pa.

• 10:28 a.m., the collapse of North Tower.

The death toll from Sept. 11 was 2,996 people, including 343 firefighters.

Over the following decades, at least 377 more first responders have died from illness stemming from their proximity to the collapsing towers, according to the New York Police Department.

The Centers for Disease Control estimates that about 400,000 people were exposed to toxins released by the collapsing towers.

GOOD DOG

Spotted Dog brewery celebrates 10th anniversary

BULLETIN REPORT

Ten years – or is that 70 in dog years? In any case, the Spotted Dog Brewery is celebrating a decade of serving beer and food in Mesilla. The microbrewery has scheduled a series of events celebrating its birthday next week it describes as family-friendly, and includes opportunities for beloved doggos to participate, according to a news release.

Owners of the establishment, Jerry and Susan

Grandle have said the brewery's brand was inspired by Ryleigh, their bluetick hound. According to SpottedDogBrewery.com, Ryleigh's successor is Millie, another bluetick.

A "Pups at the Pub" photo contest will accept entries, in person or via social media direct messages, until 8 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 17. Visitors to Spotted Dog will have the opportunity to vote for their favorites from Thursday to Sunday of next week.

On Sept. 19, Spotted Dog promised giveaway surprises and, for the whole week, a special menu alongside popular items such as their enchilada taquitos, patty melt and chicken bagel sandwich.

Festivities also include a live musical performance by Catfish Fry from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 21.

The Grandles mark Sept. 19, 2014 as the official anniversary of Spotted Dog's opening. Initially opening with a selection of three beers, the enterprise has expanded its tap list and built a full menu for a venue featuring indoor and outdoor patio seating at 2920 Avenida de Mesilla. Grandle offers a variety of beers in Belgian, German and American styles, including seasonal brews.

"We are so incredibly thankful to our customers and our community," Susan Grandle stated in a news release. "The support for the past ten years has been truly amazing. In an industry that can be very challenging, a milestone like this is significant."

Additional information about the week's festivities is available at facebook.com/SpottedDogBrewery by clicking on the "events" tab. The business also invites visitors to share photographs on social media using the hashtag #SpottedDogBrewery. Spotted Dog is in operation seven days a week at the corner of Avenida de Mesilla and Calle del Sur.

Fall brings more homes to Las Cruces market

STEVE MONTANEZ
For the Bulletin

Las Cruces inventory increased to 780 homes last month and more sellers are putting homes on the market as the fall season officially begins.

This is a 65 percent increase in year-over-year inventory, giving buyers more options as they begin to search for homes. August also witnessed longer times on market with many sellers dropping their asking price at least once in a listing period before securing a contract.

As you drive through neighborhoods, you may have noticed more “for sale” signs, more open house directionals and more incentives being offered by sellers to make an offer on their homes. Sellers should not feel a need to hit a panic button. The market is adjusting itself and the fall months have historically seen slower activity from now through the holidays.

Within a week, you will see news of the first interest rate cut of the year, giving more optimism to those looking to purchase. This month’s report brings good news to both buyers and sellers in our growing Las Cruces market. It’s still a great time to be a Las Cruces Homeowner. Happy fall, everyone.

La Posta de Mesilla marks 85 years

BULLETIN REPORT

La Posta de Mesilla, the family-owned restaurant operating since 1939, is marking its 85th anniversary on Sept. 16.

Owner Jerean Camuñez Hutchinson, with her husband, Tom, maintains the restaurant that opened as a “little chile joint” on a dirt road by her great aunt, Katy Griggs Camuñez. She passed in 1993, and the Hutchinsons have operated the business since 1996.

The site’s historical significance includes having served as the Corn Exchange Hotel, among whose guests are counted Billy the Kid, Kit Carson, General Douglas MacArthur and Mexican revolutionary Pancho Villa. It is listed on the National Register of Historic Buildings, occupying 20,000 square feet over half a block in Mesilla at 2410 Calle de San Albino. Its

The adobe building accommodates several dining rooms, bar areas, event rooms and small shops. Its foyer includes an aviary with brightly colored birds and a tank with live piranha. Mayor's bike ride takes off this weekend

BULLETIN REPORT

Inflation can be deadly to a politician's career – unless it involves a bike tire.

Las Cruces Mayor Eric Enriquez invited residents to the 2024 Mayor's Bike Ride on Sept. 14 at 9 a.m. at the south trailhead of La Llorona Trail.

A news release stated that riders can take two routes: a short five-mile ride and a long 14-mile ride.

"This will be a great showcase of the multi-use trails available to all Las Cruces citizens, many I'm sure do not even know they exist," said George Pearson, vice president of Velo Cruces, in the news release.

A local organization advocating for pedestrian and bicyclist safety, Velo Las Cruces is listed as a co-sponsor, with the city, of the ride.

"The ride is a free, easy, family-friendly event, and riders have the option of turning around at any point if they choose not to complete the entire ride. Helmets are required for all riders," the release said.

According to the release, parking is available off Calle de Norte and the east levee road.

NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY PHOTO

New Mexico State will hit the road for its opener in Fresno on Saturday, Sept. 14, following a 30-24 loss to Liberty last weekend.

How to catch the the Aggies' Fresno match

BULLETIN REPORT

New Mexico State hits the road this weekend with an away game at Fresno State. On Saturday, the Aggies confront the Bulldogs in California in what the university reports will be their only road trip west.

The game kicks off at 8:30 a.m. Saturday at Valley Children's Stadium in Fresno.

The Aggies are coming off a 30-24 loss to the Liberty Flames last weekend, and this match marks a return bout against an old rival, in Fresno, whom the Aggies once faced regularly in the Western Athletic Conference (and, decades ago, in the Big West). The Aggies now play in Conference USA.

The game also represents a face-off between Sanchez and first-year Bulldogs coach Tim Skipper after Fresno defeated Sacramento State, 46-30, last weekend.

So, where to catch the game?

The 8:30 a.m. (Mountain time) match on Saturday, Sept. 14, will be broadcast on the cable network TruTV (online at TruTV.com), where the university reports six of the Aggies' games will play this season. Coverage of the game will include play-by-play by J.B. Long, analysis by Mike Golic Jr. and sideline reporting by Bridget Howard, per a news release.

This, like all games this season, will also air live on 99.5 KXPZ-FM in Las Cruces and the region, with coverage in Spanish on 96.7 La Equis FM. Radio broadcasts are available through the TuneIn app with play-by-play coverage and analysis from Jack Nixon and Cory Lucas.

Fans should note that this is Nixon's 45th and final season covering New Mexico State as the "voice of the Aggies," after a university count of 500 football games and 1,400 basketball games.

Watch and learn: The sure way to develop a swing

Golf is a challenging game to learn, especially for adults who have never done it before. I'm a proponent of learning by imitation. It's how children learn. Kids can learn to play musical instruments like crazy because they are sponges for training. They can reproduce what they see and hear in practice. Adults aren't so fortunate. We have outlived some of our natural sponginess.

In the 1950s, linguist Noam Chomsky proposed (rightly) that children had a built-in "language acquisition device" that enabled them to learn their own and other languages very fast and very easily. It's much harder to learn a second language as an adult. Sophisticated technology and digital electronics, like smart phones and computers, are similar in that way. The older we get, the harder they are to get the hang of. But take heart. You can still learn golf and play it well. Here are some learning strategies you need to know.

First, watch all the golf you can on television. Pay close attention to the slow motion camera displays and commentary on their golf swings. Make notes. As the analysts talk about "spine angles," "shoulder turn" and a "strong grip," you may be lost at first, but after a while it will start to make sense. You can start to mimic the posture and the moves really good golfers make. Pay attention to how these superior players go through a planned routine before they take the club away, and do it every single time. Their target is precise and they stay focused. Note the way they line up each putt, and how little time it takes once they get set. Being an accomplished golfer takes an exacting mindset, an extraordinary amount of practice and a lot of patience.

In my view, the biggest challenge for beginner golfers who want to build a solid, correct swing and game is acquiring a sense of what a golf swing should feel and look like. One's ability to discern the skeletal-muscular movements of any motor skill varies from person to person. This falls into a realm that experts have called "kinesthetic intelligence." Some humans are more adept than others at interpreting instructions about how to move their bodies to perform physical tasks. Learning the relatively simple movements associated with putting and chipping require minimal large muscles and gross motor coordination.

If you fall into the category of the kinesthetically challenged, take heart. Even klutzes can learn golf and play it well. The secret is observational learning. Pick an expert golfer and imitate his or her swing. Cam Davis (PGA Tour) and Jennifer Kupcho (LPGA tour) are good examples. When you constantly approximate a good golf swing, your swing gradually moves closer to something that will produce really good results. And when you get an expert, like a qualified professional teacher, to provide feedback to you about whether you're doing it correctly, that is an even more powerful tool for cracking the code for satisfactory golf.

Lastly, read all you can from golf magazines like Golf Digest. Become familiar with the terminology, rules, technology and golf culture. YouTube has virtually unlimited videos of any golfer you want to see. GolfPass at golfpass.com, a Golf Channel/NBC affiliate, offers daily 3- to 5-minute video instruction tips from more than a dozen teachers.

It may be time for you to set your phone up on a tripod or have somebody stand beside you and take some videos of your swing in order for you to see what you are doing, which is another form of valuable feedback. Yogi Berra said it best: "You can observe a lot just by watching."

Revolutionizing Comfort and Longevity: Ashley Furniture's New Upholstery Platform

by Jesus Duran, GM

As furniture shoppers in the vibrant Las Cruces area, we've all faced the dilemma of choosing the right sofa set—a staple in our homes that marries comfort and aesthetics. Picture this: You've finally decided to invest in a new sofa, but you're met with a maze of choices. Should you opt for style over substance, or comfort over durability? Fortunately, with the latest innovations by Ashley, we no longer must choose.

Ashley has recently implemented groundbreaking platform bases in their upholstery designs, a shift away from traditional sinuous springs. Historically, sinuous springs were the go-to for sofa support. While they provided a level of comfort, they also carried with them a host of frustrations. Over time, these springs can yield to pressure, leading to dreaded sagging, dips, and unsightly indentations on cushions that quickly degrade their aesthetic appeal. This degradation isn't just an eyesore; it shortens the lifespan of your furniture, leaving you to replace it sooner than you'd like. Eventually, this meant that furniture not only had to be replaced due to discomfort but also because its appearance had degraded significantly.

But what if there was a way to avoid these issues altogether? Enter Ashley Furniture's revolutionary platform foundation system. This innovative approach to upholstery not only enhances the longevity of your sofa but does so by transforming how support is delivered. Extensive testing has shown that this new platform foundation resists sagging three times better than traditional sinuous springs after 20,000 testing cycles, providing superior support while maintaining an elegant, wrinkle-free appearance. Imagine: a sofa that not only looks good when you buy it but continues to look refreshed after years of use.

Now, that's not just a superficial improvement—it's a revolution in how we think about furniture as an investment. When shopping for your new sofa set, consider the longevity of your purchase. Are you ready to invest in a piece that will withstand the test of time, both structurally and aesthetically? With Ashley's new platform bases, you're not just buying a sofa; you're acquiring a lasting centerpiece for your living room.

Furthermore, let's talk about aesthetics. A well-maintained, structured sofa not only feels better to sit on but also looks better in your space. You can finally say goodbye to the embarrassment of having guests plunk down on a lumpy, sagging couch. With Ashley's innovative platform technology, your living area can radiate the kind of welcoming vibe that encourages gatherings—game night with friends, cozy family movie nights, or Sunday brunch with neighbors.

To all furniture shoppers in Las Cruces: next time you embark on the search for a new sofa set, take a moment to explore Ashley's offerings. Revel in the peace of mind that comes with knowing your choice is a wise one—not only in terms of style but also durability. With an Ashley sofa, you will invest in a piece that maintains its integrity over time, all while keeping your living space looking fresh and inviting.

In a world where our homes are our sanctuaries, we shouldn't settle for less than the best. Choose wisely. Choose Ashley. Your back, your guests, and your home will thank you.
