For the Bulletin

Each person has their own vision of an ideal fall day. For some, it might be drinking apple cider or their favorite pumpkin-spiced drink while getting cozy at home. For many New Mexicans, the ideal fall includes a weekend trip to the Mesilla Valley Maze, 3855 W. Picacho Ave, in Fairacres. The 2024 season begins on Saturday and will run until Oct. 27.

“The Mesilla Valley Maze started in 1999 as just a corn maze run by Anna Lyles and George Newman, the former owner of Guacamoles,” said Joanna Salopek, the office manager of Mesilla Valley Maze Lyles Farms and daughter of Anna Lyles. “Unfortunately, George passed after the first year of the maze, but Anna kept with it. She has turned the place into a fall destination for school groups and the general public.”

Entering its 26th season, Mesilla Valley Maze offers a variety of activities for guests to enjoy including a slide, country store, rubber duck races, corn maze and a hay ride to the pumpkin patch. The maze has several pumpkin patches to avoid crowding. This allows guests to really evaluate the pumpkins for size and weight.

At Pumpkin Junction, you pay for the pumpkins you picked yourself or you can choose from the pumpkins on display. Pumpkin Junction offers a large variety of gourds and squash not only for a spooky jack-o-lantern but also for all your fall baking needs. There are also paint kits for sale.

“Honestly, Las Cruces does not have much to offer in terms of fall events, so the maze is really the place to be in the autumn,” Salopek said. “Plus, with something for every age, kids and adults. It provides families with a place to spend time together – I think that’s one of the biggest draws.”

As the event has grown, so have the activities. A recent addition is a field where visitors can pick fresh flowers. Guests purchase either a small vase to pick cosmos and zinnias for $10, or a large vase for $25 that allows you to pick cosmos, zinnias and sunflowers. The flower field adds specks of color to the farm with vibrant hues of violet, yellow and maroon.

County to review Memorial Medical Center lease

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

Doña Ana County is looking to hire a consultant to review the Memorial Medical Center lease as pressure on the area's largest hospital continues to mount.

Stephen Lopez, the county's interim manager, said during a meeting on Sept. 10 that the county wanted a consultant to review and analyze the lease.

"That should time out pretty well with the actions the City of Las Cruces took recently," Lopez said.

In August, the city of Las Cruces said that Memorial Medical Center may have violated its lease by not providing the city with documentation required by the contract. The decision came after New Mexico Attorney General Raúl Torrez announced an investigation into billing practices and claims the hospital was rejecting indigent cancer patients.

The recent scrutiny stems from an NBC News report that interviewed a dozen patients who had lost out on care because they couldn't pay.

Memorial Medical Center sits on the site of the old county hospital and on land leased by the city and the county. As part of the lease, MMC is required to provide government entities with documents and treat indigent patients.

The hospital is owned and operated by LifePoint, an international for-profit corporation that has been criticized for allegedly skimping on patient care to improve profit margins.

Lopez said that Doña Ana County was requesting permission from the state to hire the consultant without having to put the request out to bid.

"So that will be a good resource to the county, and, of course, we will work with our city partners in order to be able to review what comes in and have a good technical understanding of whatever our responses are and about the lease document going forward," Lopez said.

How Las Cruces schools keep kids engaged

JUAN CORRAL
For the Bulletin

Since the Covid-19 pandemic, Las Cruces schools have seen a drop in attendance throughout the district. To move attendance back up, faculty challenge themselves to create an engaging environment for kids.

Schools within the Las Cruces Public School district and local charter schools are developing new ideas by asking students what interests them. This allows staff to create lesson plans that keep students engaged and willing to learn, attending and prospering at school.

One example among Las Cruces charter schools is Alma d'Arte Charter High School, located at 402 W. Court Avenue, an arts-based school founded in 2004.

"We used to have a compulsory attendance where it was really punitive. If students missed 10 days of school, they got dropped and we would call (the state Children, Youth and Families Department), but I don't know how much that really worked," principal Adam Amador said in an interview. "Now, we have an 'attendance for success' app which is really flexible and liberal, but it only works if the students and parents commit to coming to school."

Amador added that his biggest concern is students missing out on education by simply missing one day of school. For public schools in New Mexico, low attendance also comes at a financial cost, since enrollment is a factor in the formula that determines schools' state funding.

"We must look at student engagement. Maybe parents have educational trauma where they may not have been treated right in school whatever the case may be, they just don't like the school setting. For us, we integrate art, dance, mariachi, culinary and if that's what you like, you're going to want to come to school," Amador said.

He said the best thing to take into consideration is students' and parents' wants and needs. He added that New Mexico only banned corporal punishment in schools in 2011 and some parents may still not trust the system.

"My parents went to school and would get in trouble for speaking Spanish. There is inherent bias and racism in the schools. When you factor all this in, well, what's the perfect environment and how do we create that at the school in order to maintain attendance?" Amador questioned.

Amador said the toughest competition for faculty and parents is technology, as students may question the need to attend school when they have so much knowledge at their fingertips.

“We push a lot of entrepreneurship, people in our community that are self-made millionaires without a formal education. What’s the right thing to do? At the end of the day, we want a productive society and citizenship,” Amador said.

As to the “million-dollar question” of student engagement, to keep them coming to school, he turned to Alma’s arts-based mission: “If you’re attending our school for art, what kind of art do you like and how can we feed that?”

Last year, Amador said Alma accomplished first place in the New Mexico State University’s dance academy competition, the culinary students won the Taste of Las Cruces competition and students saw their art exhibited in local museums.

“When kids experience that success, they want to be a part of it all the time. I think at the end of the day, getting the kids to school, having positive teacher and parent communication and having kids experience success will boost attendance,” Amador praised. “There is no magic wand but there is a lot of innovation in keeping students engaged.”

Alma d’Arte is not the only school combating low attendance. Las Cruces Public Schools, New Mexico’s second-largest school district, had a noticeable drop in attendance among 12th-grade students between March and May of this year. In an attendance report provided by the district, seniors at three out of four of the schools observed were the largest class to have the lowest attendance rating.

At Centennial High School, 16.8 percent of the senior class missed school between March and May as opposed to 12.7 percent of the freshman class. Centennial had an overall absence percentage of 13.8 percent throughout the school.

Organ Mountain High School retained a 13.8 percent rating alongside Centennial during the last three months of the school year.

Irvin Alvarez, attendance liaison at Organ Mountain, spoke about efforts the school faculty make to keep students and parents engaged, viewing each student’s case individually rather than attributing absences to simply not wanting to attend class.

“You have no idea what they are dealing with until you get to know them,” he said, adding that building trust among students and their families is the result of teamwork. “I believe if the parents and faculty can rally behind a student and encourage them, it really makes a big difference.”

Parent-teacher conferences and open houses lead that effort, in Alvarez’s view.

“Whenever students are struggling and teachers can sit down one on one with parents, it makes a difference. ... It helps the parent and student understand where there may be problems and it allows the teacher and parent to help the student get back on track,” he said.

Moreover, it is an opportunity to share important information.

“Many parents may not be aware, they may think their children are here at the school, but they may not be. I always want parents to be vigilant. Yes, your student may be at school, but not in class,” Alvarez said. “Parents have access to (the website portal) ParentVUE, which gives them access to their grades and attendance.”

Organ Mountain principal Luis Lucero agreed.

“It’s not just one person, it takes everyone to understand what is going on in that student’s life,” he said. When bullying leads to absences, for instance, the school turns to its new staff social worker, although the problem of bullying via internet is daunting: Faculty and staff cannot monitor social media daily.

Lucero also introduced a student leadership group consisting of students addressing mental health among their peers, as with the creation of a spirit week focusing on suicide prevention.

“Their goal is to change the narrative,” Lucero said. “In October, they will focus on cyber bullying prevention. I am simply the facilitator, and I could not be more proud of them.”

Valerio Ferme tapped as next NMSU president

ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University's next president, and first permanent leader in a year and a half, will be Valerio Ferme.

Ferme is currently executive vice president of academic affairs and provost at the University of Cincinnati, a position he has held since 2021. He is the former dean of that university's college of arts and sciences, and had previously held leadership positions at Northern Arizona University and the University of Colorado Boulder.

The board of regents governing the university voted unanimously to select Ferme during its Sept.

19 business meeting, closing an extended executive search that followed the departure of Chancellor Dan Arvizu in April 2023. Terms of Ferme's contract have not been finalized.

Regent chair Ammu Devasthali said the university received 757 online feedback forms about the candidates following a series of public forums with four finalists for the position.

In 2018, a previous board made a surprise decision to hire two leaders for the university rather than one, with Dan Arvizu as chancellor and John Floros as president. The dual leadership ended when Floros stepped down as president in 2022. The regents voted not to renew Arvizu's contract, and he left the university in April 2023.

Since then, the university has been led by two consecutive interim presidents: Jay Gogue, followed by Mónica Torres.

The regents appointed Torres in March after they threw out their first slate of finalists for the job and began their search anew. Five new candidates were announced in August, including four from out of state and one from New Mexico: Arsenio Romero, the former New Mexico Public Education Secretary.

The candidates met with regents last week in between public sessions on and off campus where they introduced themselves to faculty and staff, students and the general public with question and answer sessions.

When Romero's candidacy became public, Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham pressed him to withdraw or resign from his cabinet post, as confirmed by the governor's office. Romero chose to pursue the job at NMSU, where he had served as a regent and was an alumnus. In a statement shortly following the announcement, he said he had no regrets about that choice.

"After 28 years of service to the great state of New Mexico, I remain deeply honored by the opportunity to have been considered for the presidency of New Mexico State University," Romero wrote. "Though I was not selected, I have no regrets about taking the risk. I love New Mexico, I love Las Cruces, and I'm an Aggie through and through. I fully support President Ferme in his leadership and look forward to helping NMSU continue to thrive in any way I can."

Shortly afterward, New Mexico Higher Education Secretary Stephanie Rodriguez wrote an opinion piece calling on the regents to restart the search yet again, criticizing the second slate of finalists. Garey Carruthers, a former chancellor and president of NMSU, wrote a rebuttal defending the regents and stating, "It is critical the regents conduct their constitutional duty of selecting a president without interference or political pressure in the process."

Valerio Ferme was raised in Italy and came to the United States to study biology and religious studies at Brown University, graduating in 1984. He went on to complete master's degrees in comparative literature and Italian studies at Indiana University in 1992. He was a Fulbright scholar at the University of Turin in Italy, and completed a Ph.D. in comparative literature from the University of California, Berkeley in 1998.

Ferme began his teaching career in Boulder in 1998, teaching Italian, comparative literature and later film. He eventually served as dean of the college of arts and sciences before moving to Northern Arizona University in Flagstaff as dean of its College of Arts and Letters. In 2019, he moved on to the University of Cincinnati as a professor and dean.

Devasthali said there would be a reception to welcome Ferme at a date to be announced, and that Torres would continue to serve NMSU as interim president during the transition.

DASO shooting investigation moves forward

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

A police task force has completed its investigation into an incident in which a sheriff's deputy killed a man in Chaparral in April, sending the case to the district attorney to determine if the shooting was justified or warrants criminal charges.

Video released to the Las Cruces Bulletin after the investigation concluded showed the deputy, who has not been identified, struggle to detain a man despite hitting him with taser rounds and mace. The video also shows the encounter ended with the deputy firing his weapon at the man five times, including twice on the ground, after the man grabbed the deputy's taser and waved it at the deputy.

The man, 37-year-old Chaparral resident Jose Adrian Guzman, died at the scene.

Doña Ana County Sheriff Kim Stewart declined to answer the Bulletin's questions including the deputy's name, his employment or duty status at the sheriff's office, whether disciplinary action had been taken and about the lack of transparency in the initial release of details about this incident.

"Regarding your questions about the (officer-involved shooting) involving Guzman, the D.A. has yet to rule in this matter. In light of this, I will not comment on any part of this incident," Stewart wrote in an email to the Bulletin.

Stewart declined to take questions at a news conference shortly after this shooting. She said she found a report from another news agency to be unfair and so would not indulge the news media inquiries.

Roxanne Garcia-McElmell, a spokesperson for the Third Judicial District Attorney's Office, confirmed that they'd received the case on or about Sept. 9 and had begun a process of reviewing evidence and consulting with the detectives who investigated the incident before District Attorney Gerald Byers makes a determination – a process Garcia-McElmell said may take "up to three weeks to 1-5 months."

Responding to the Bulletin's queries, Stewart and Byers criticized each other.

"The DA has not ruled on a number of our OIS incidents going back several years. It puts us, especially the involved deputies, in a very bad position as to transparency. ... Maybe after 2025 January, we will have a better system in these matters," Stewart wrote, finishing with a reference to a new DA taking office in January. (Byers was defeated in a Democratic primary last June.)

Byers denied that his office had any outstanding OIS cases left to review and called the sheriff's claim "a gratuitous, responsibility deflecting falsehood."

"The incident happened on 04-29-2024. We got DASO's completed package on 09-09-2024," Byers continued, adding that his office reviewed all OIS records and found that none of them – 17 since March 2021 – have been closed.

"No OIS review is outstanding and unresolved except this one, which it took DASO 153 days to get to us. Stewart's bogus statement attempts to curry favor with whoever wins the District Attorney election by falsely smearing me. ... She should focus on her own operations. A 'blame game' doesn't help anyone."

Chaotic fight ends in gunfire

The body camera video was released to the Bulletin on Sept. 13, confirming civilian footage of the incident obtained by KVIA-TV in May.

Guzman and the deputy came into contact after DASO suspected Guzman was involved in a possible burglary in the area. After a brief discussion, Guzman runs away from the unidentified deputy before the deputy catches up to him near Luna Azul and Prescott Anthony Drive.

A chaotic encounter ensues in which the deputy fires a taser round that brings Guzman down to the asphalt. Guzman can be seen bleeding from his head as the deputy attempts to pin him to the ground. The men struggle for about five minutes before Guzman breaks free from the pin.

From the footage, it's unclear if the deputy attempted to handcuff Guzman at this point.

Both men return to their feet, the deputy using the opportunity to fire mace into Guzman's face. They both stagger backwards. Guzman sweeps up the taser and arms himself with it. The deputy pulls out his pistol

In celebration of Hispanic Heritage Month, we will read the classic coming-of-age novel The House on Mango Street by Sandra Cisneros.

The novel is structured as a series of vignettes that cover a year in the life of Esperanza as she struggles with her identity, her poverty, and her dreams as she observes the people and events on Mango Street in Chicago.

The novel is a celebration of the diversity and resilience of the Latino community. It has been banned from school curriculums and libraries across the country, including Tucson Unified School District for the perception that it "promoted resentment towards a race or class of people."

PHILIP BARTON TREON

Philip Barton Treon, age 76 most beloved husband, father, grandfather and friend, died Aug. 24th from heart failure at his home in Las Cruces, NM. Phil was born in Long Beach, CA, the oldest son of Harold and Marguerite Treon, who, along with Phil's brother Mark, preceded him in death.

After spending his youth in the South Pacific as the son of a naval pilot, Phil and his family settled in Las Cruces where he attended Las Cruces High School as a senior graduating in 1966. He received his BA and MA from New Mexico State University and did post-graduate work in creative writing at the University of Arkansas.

Phil taught for over 30 years in the NMSU English department until he retired in 2015. He enjoyed shaping young peoples minds, and, in addition to teaching most of the writing classes in the curriculum, he brought his love of adventure to the classroom by developing an original and very popular course in Survival Literature. Phil's students recognized his genuine commitment to their success. During his teaching career and after he retired, he encountered many students who were always happy to see him and told him how much they learned from him.

Phil was kind, intelligent, funny, generous and thoughtful. He left an indelible impression on everyone he met, whether a new acquaintance or a friend of many decades.

Phil's life was committed to having adventures with friends and family. Growing up as a military kid, Phil was surrounded by numerous bodies of water and his love for the sea lasted throughout his life. He was an all around adventurer of the water; diving, sailing, kayaking or just swimming were his passions. Phil also loved to camp and hike, especially with his wife Janet in the wild NM mountains. When he wasn't engaging in adventures, those experiences found passionate and almost daily creative expression in his novels and stories. Phil is survived by his wife Janet Treon, his daughter Tasha Westenhofer and his son Travis Treon; five grandchildren; and a brother, Robert Treon.

A "Remembrance / Celebration of Life" will take place at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum on November 2nd, 2024, at 1:30 pm. November 2nd is "Day of the Dead" and there will be an altar to honor Phil. Feel free to bring a memento, food or other favorite item you associate with his memory. and points it at Guzman, repeatedly ordering him to drop the taser as they circle each other, with Guzman hollering and eventually saying, "No." Guzman aims the taser at the deputy, lowers it, then aims it again. According to Stewart, the taser was loaded at this point.

After Guzman refuses

another order to drop the device, the deputy pulls back the slide of the pistol and fires once, yelling, "Drop it." It's unclear whether this round strikes Guzman as he continues walking, seemingly uninjured. As the first shot is fired, Guzman lowers the taser.

The deputy fires again, and it's again unclear if the rounds strike Guzman, who turns his back to the deputy. The deputy then fires a third shot, which seems to strike Guzman in the head, causing the man to fall in the roadway.

The deputy fires two more times at a range of no more than 12 feet, although it's difficult to determine from the body camera footage.

From the time the first shot is fired to the last, less than ten seconds elapse. From the time Guzman picks up the taser to his death, about one minute elapses.

Villainization of immigrants is dishonest

I grew up in Denver and still go back every summer to visit my sister, nephews and grandnieces in Aurora, Colorado. And so my ears perked up recently when I heard Aurora being paired with Springfield, Ohio, as the two most egregious examples of immigration run amok.

I've never been to Springfield, but clearly the two are very different. Springfield is a town of 58,000 people in the Rust Belt of northern Ohio, about 80 miles west of Cincinnati. Aurora is essentially a part of Denver. If not for the city limit signs, it would be difficult to tell when you leave one city and enter the other.

My sister and her husband live on a quiet cul-de-sac where the kids all know each other and play together. I don't want to make it sound too idyllic. It is a big city, at least by my standards, and crime is an issue. But there are parts of Denver far more dangerous than Aurora.

One thing that has always set Aurora apart is a welcoming attitude toward immigrants. There is a Korean grocery store and restaurant a few blocks from my sister's home. The elementary school my nephews attended held special lunches where students from other countries would bring dishes from their homeland to share.

Several years ago, I think during the Obama administration, one of the national news networks went to Aurora for a brief report celebrating that diversity. The national media are back, but they're no longer in a celebratory mood.

During a rally earlier this month, Donald Trump claimed that migrants from Venezuela had taken over the city by force.

"They're taking over buildings. They're going in violently," he warned ominously. "You know, getting them out will be a bloody story."

That's at least closer to the truth than the one about Haitians eating cats and dogs. Venezuelan migrants did move into a condemned building, and that apparently attracted gang members affiliated with Tren de Aragua, considered one of the most dangerous criminal operations in Latin America. A gang member has been arrested in connection to a murder at the building.

That is a new and serious threat, and Aurora police have established a special task force to address it. There are other buildings involved, and police are going through the process of clearing them out. But no, that has not led to the blood-soaked gunfights we were promised.

Immigration has stressed communities like Springfield and Aurora in many ways, including crime, and we should have an honest discussion about that. Portraying immigrants as savages who eat pets or as bloodthirsty killers taking over the community is simply not honest.

I wasn't able to find updated crime statistics for the entire state of Georgia, but as of July there had been 62 homicides in Atlanta this year and another 18 in Savannah, making it safe to assume there have been well over 100 murders throughout the state. My question for supporters of the former president is, can you name one victim other than Laken Riley? If not, were the other lives less precious because they weren't killed by an immigrant?

These old tropes get trotted out every four years as we get closer to the election, but the damage they cause remains long after the election is over.

I won't say that my visit to Aurora last summer was entirely without drama. My grandniece accidentally broke the small seashell of her playmate, leading to hurt feelings all around. I somehow missed the roving hordes of Venezuelan gang members who had taken over the city.

Readers tell us they want solutions

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

We asked you, "What do you want candidates to be talking about as they compete for your vote?"

And among those answers, there were many differences.

"Women's personal freedoms. Our rights are being taken away quickly," said one respondent.

Another said, "Why can't we get education right in New Mexico? We pour a lot of money into it and have bright minds working on it but it never seems to get better."

Others pointed to election integrity, mental health treatment, climate change, or the war in Gaza.

But within the muck of multifariousness, a consensus emerged. Nearly all responses said, in one way or another, that they wanted candidates to talk about solutions – not platitudes and vague promises.

"I want specific ideas for how to move NM out of the bottom of almost every measure of poverty, educational status and health issues. I do NOT want to hear rhetoric. I want specific proposals," said one reader.

Another reader put it more bluntly.

"More transparency and less good-ole-boy-broken-promises agenda by pointing fingers at others. Candidates have wasted taxpayers' money bad-mouthing one another. Get to work!!!"

On stirring a hornet's nest

Part 1

Growing up, we had a hive of bees that elected to take up residence in the eave of our house. They would come and go as they pleased, never causing any harm. A few times, they would swarm and we simply gave them a wide berth until they calmed down. We left them alone and they never bothered us.

For a while now, I have been engaged with various city entities in an attempt to bring light to a growing situation within our community: an explosion of crime fueled by fentanyl. We have all seen it throughout our town and it pulls at my heart-strings. Everywhere you look, people stagger about, openly using drugs, exhibiting wildly chaotic mannerisms and wasting away in the elements and their illnesses.

In my naïveté, I assumed Las Cruces would have concrete means to help these people. An emergency shelter for immediate mental health or substance use stabilization? Very limited. Legal interventions to involuntarily commit someone suffering a crisis so that they couldn't harm themselves further? If they're lucky. Surely, at least, there are laws to keep the ones victimizing others away from society for a period long enough to detox? Quite the opposite, in fact.

The truth is, we, as a society, have cast these people aside. The politicians, in a place to affect real change, wish instead to hide behind party lines and continue to enable these people to kill themselves and our city. Those opposed to this ridiculous stance are branded as political traitors or extremists and cancelled outright. There is no common-sense middle ground. Which leaves the citizens with the impossible choice to have our empathy taken advantage of, or to fight against the death of our city.

I have reported a number of encampments myself and pushed to have them cleaned up, not just to rid myself of an eyesore as I drive by in my air-conditioned vehicle, but rather to try to help the people living in horrid conditions, likely unable, for whatever reason, to ask for help themselves.

One particular area exploded over the summer. At its height, this area became an obvious mecca for prostitution, drug use and stolen property. The nearby grocery store's bread cart, at one point, was commandeered to provide something of a silk screen to hide illegal activity, albeit not very well.

After a number of reports, police responded en masse to roust the squatters from the city property. The city sent out a cadre of resources to assist in the clean-up. Multiple dump trucks, front-end loaders, an army of city employees, chainsaws and brush-clearing equipment were employed for several days before the decision was made to halt the cleanup for safety reasons. So prolific was the human waste and drug paraphernalia that it was no longer safe for the city workers to continue.

It occurred to me then, in a wave of guilt, that my complaints had put innocent lives at risk. The police officers had to engage with erratic and potentially dangerous people in that encampment. A city employee could have accidentally stepped on a used needle. Did the cleanup drive a violent drug addict into the nearby neighborhood?

I still struggle for the right answer. If we complain, perhaps the criminals will move on, out of town and out of our lives. But the analogy of stirring the hornet's nest lives on: should I just leave well enough alone?

The answer, we will discuss next week, is no.

straight answers and tangible solutions are invaluable to us at the Bulletin.

Your answers provided us with a road map as we navigate the 2024 election, with the goal of providing you with valuable insight into the candidates seeking power.

Your values, concerns, and questions become ours, and we, in turn, use our access to candidates to press them on these shared and synthesized points-of-view.

This is not the typical process for newspapers. Most go straight to the candidates and ask, "What should voters know about you?" This can be useful, but it prioritizes the candidate and leaves us in the news to guess at what the most important issues might be.

Without your responses, we'd never get to points like the one this reader made: "Hardly original: the local economy, education, the border, the homeless, crime. Las Cruces needs to double down on its positive attributes to attract businesses, tourists, students, health care professionals, and retirees. The city and its environs have so much to offer - it shouldn't be a secret."

Or points like the one this reader who wrote, "Retirees need more tax cuts to be able to exist on Social Security. Also, access to mailboxes should not be restricted by parked cars. This is a Federally mandated rule that Las Cruces and perhaps New Mexico is not enforcing."

"Handicapped persons should be given more consideration by the people in charge of enforcing the laws and not pushed to the back to be looked at or thought about later. There are a large number of retirees moving to Las Cruces and they need to be considered when regulations are being made and enforced."

Heinrich misrepresents opponent

AMY ORLANDO
Guest columnist

Senator Martin Heinrich is running a commercial that he knows is false about Republican candidate Nella Domenici's position on a very personal and private issue: abortion.

In every speech Nella has given, in every interview, in her own commercial she clearly states she opposes a national abortion ban. She has explained her position in front of pro-life audiences she knows won't approve of her position, but Nella has integrity. Nella is courageous and she is honest. These are characteristics we should seek in our leaders.

Martin Heinrich is dishonest, and he knows it. There is not one shred of evidence to support the claims made in his commercials.

- Nella believes abortion should be safe, legal, and most importantly rare.

- Nella opposes a federal abortion ban.

- Nella trusts and respects women, and she wants every baby to be loved and wanted.

- Nella knows to reduce the number of abortions; we must prevent unintended pregnancies.

- Her focus has been on preventing unintended pregnancies by educating women on the availability and effective use of birth control.

This is just the latest example of Heinrich making outlandish claims about Nella. He ridiculously claimed that a Domenici is not a New Mexican—a Domenici. Maybe he is so unfamiliar with the state that he is uninformed about all the projects, centers, jobs her father, Sen. Pete Domenici, brought to New Mexico.

Nella has New Mexico accomplishments of her own in communities as far north as Taos and far south as Santa Teresa – support for 15 New Mexico charter schools in Albuquerque, Roswell and Gallup, that includes 9000 students; businesses helped to find investors; small business owned and run with her husband; a consulting firm with her dad; a major infrastructure project for a real estate developer on the border; enough New Mexico philanthropic work to qualify as a second career—the Los Alamos National Laboratory Foundation and the Santa Fe International Folk Art Market to name a couple. Martin probably doesn't care that Nella's first job out of college was with the City of Albuquerque working on the homeless situation.

Martin's next move was to disrespect all women. He diminished Nella's achievements, insinuating that a woman could not rise to the top of a worldwide company. Then he claims she is controlled by men in the Senate. Now, he's claiming that he knows Nella's position on women's health better than Nella does. This is worse than lying – it is misogyny at its worst.

Edward Kennedy said, "Integrity is the lifeblood of democracy. Deceit is a poison in its veins." Martin Heinrich's actions exemplify his total lack of integrity. New Mexicans have a choice.

A former staffer for Sen. Martin Heinrich and longtime journalist in southern New Mexico has taken the helm of NM Comunidades en Acción y de Fe (CAFé) as executive director, according to a news release.

Sylvia Ulloa was most recently a field representative with Heinrich's Las Cruces office, covering border and immigration issues, education, health care and economic development in southern New Mexico.

"My family comes from the Mesilla Valley, and my dad in Ciudad Juárez, and because of them, I believe in our people's strength and resilience. The key to making New Mexico a better place to build a life and raise a family lies in harnessing their power. That's why I am thrilled to join NM CAFé, which has a strong legacy of fighting for justice," Ulloa said in the news release.

Before working for Heinrich, Ulloa was a journalist in California, Texas, and New Mexico, including a stint as the Las Cruces Sun-News' managing editor from 2013 to 2017.

NM CAFé is a community organization in southern New Mexico. Their work centers around poverty alleviation and civil rights advocacy as well as confronting systems of injustice.

Oftentimes, guests find themselves greeted by butterflies admiring the flowers just as much as they are.

This season, Salopek noted that they will be debuting their corn barn, a 1,200-square-foot building filled with dried corn for families to play in, much like a sand box. This activity will be included in regular admission.

"We're one of a kind. Simply being the only pumpkin patch and corn maze in the city makes us stand out; not to mention that it is the location for those fall family traditions," Salopek remarked.

Throughout the season, Mesilla Valley Maze will host weekend festivals. All the activities and entertainment are free and located on the main stage.

On Oct. 5-6, the farm will host a fall festival hosted by Ed Montana. Events for this weekend include a hula hoop contest, stick horse races, watermelon eating contest and more. During both days, there will be live music from Ed Montana, Mesilla Valley String Band and The 2 of Us.

The final weekend, Oct. 26-27, will feature the Pumpkin Festival, also hosted by Ed Montana. Activities for the festival include a pumpkin pie eating contest, Tour de Maze adult trike races, pictures with the Pumpkin Princess and more. Live music will be provided by the University of Texas at El Paso Las Flautistas, Mesilla Valley String Band and Ed Montana.

"We are so thankful for our community and their continued support of the Mesilla Valley Maze. We are looking forward to another great season," Salopek said.

Ticketing and more information on Mesilla Valley Maze are available online via MesillaValleyMaze.com.

The Woman in Black

CREATING FEAR ON A LAS CRUCES STAGE

DAVID SALCIDO
Las Cruces Bulletin

A creaky door opens, then slams shut with echoing finality. Heavy footsteps clomp slowly down a cold, stone hallway. Wind rages mournfully through unshuttered windows. Somewhere a child is crying.

These are the trappings of the Gothic horror story. Subconscious twinges from forgotten corners of the collective psyche. Unsettling sounds which, when mixed with moody lighting and long shadows, reveal terrifying doorways into the storm-tossed realms of subconscious fear. In other words, exactly what you can expect from Blank Conversations' psychologically preternatural production of "The Woman in Black," September 27-29 at the Rio Grande Theatre.

At its core, "The Woman in Black" is a genuine ghost story, about a lawyer who hires an actor to tutor him in recounting to family and friends a story that has long troubled him, concerning events that transpired when he attended the funeral of an elderly recluse. The ghost in question is seen by the locals as a precursor of death. These two gentlemen will soon find that recreating the events of that dark and stormy night might not be as therapeutic as they believe it to be.

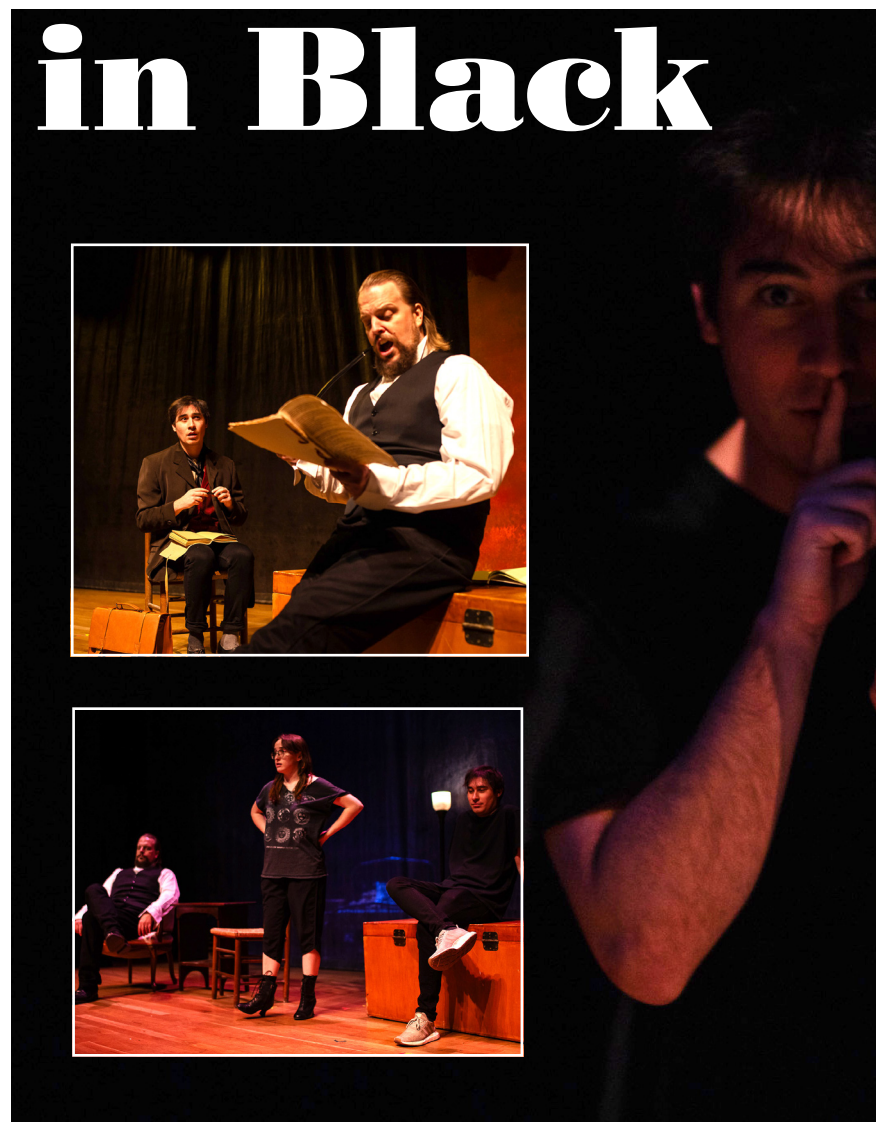

Based on Susan Hill's acclaimed ghost story of the same name, it was originally adapted for the stage in 1987 by Stephen Mallatratt and went on to become one of the longest running plays in London's West End. Critics were effusive about its eerie atmosphere and understated horror, calling it "the most brilliantly effective spine-chiller you will ever encounter" (The Daily Telegraph) and "a truly nerve-shredding experience" (The Daily Mail).

In taking on this storied horror project, first-time director Alyssa Gose approached it with a mind to recreating the psychological thriller at its most fundamental.

"This is the only piece of theater I've seen that really scared me," she said. "As soon as I saw it I said, 'I wanna do this show,' because not only did it legitimately scare me, it stuck with me for weeks afterwards. There's just something about a British ghost story that stirs the imagination."

To help her in her quest to bring old-fashioned horror to the Las Cruces stage, Gose put together a team of young creatives whose passion for the project mirrored her own. Luckily for her, they could be found at the Rio Grande Theatre, where Blank Conversations Theatre Company makes its home.

"Found" returns for a second season on NBC

celebrity update

BY JAY BOBBIN

Q: It's interesting to see Don Johnson coming back to series TV in "Doctor Odyssey." What was the last series he had?

A: Bankable on the home screen ever since his trendsetting 1980s role as Detective James "Sonny" Crockett in NBC's "Miami Vice," Don Johnson has had several shows since ... the most recent one before his new ABC and Hulu program,

Don Johnson

OF DOCTOR ODYSSEY ON ABC/HULU

"Doctor Odyssey," been in the NBC sitcom "Kenan," where he played a recurring role as Rick, the former father-in-law of the show's titular star (Kenan Thompson).

To go back to his earlier shows, Johnson had the lead in a syndicated 1979 mini-series version of the John Jakes historical novel "The Rebels," then he co-starred in NBC's 1980 series adaptation of "From Here to Eternity" based on the James Jones book that also inspired an Oscar-winning 1953 movie. After that, Johnson returned to NBC in "Miami Vice," which changed the course of his career with the enormous success it had over its 1984-89 tenure.

In the immediate aftermath of that trendy police drama, Johnson focused on feature-film work, but he was back on television in the title role of "Nash Bridges" on CBS from 1996 to 2001, where he played the title part of a San Francisco police detective (and he reprised the role in a 2021 movie for USA Network). In The WB's "Just Legal" – the last show that network aired before it morphed into The CW – Johnson portrayed a veteran, struggling lawyer. He returned in 2010 and 2012 in the middle two of the four seasons of HBO's sports comedy "Eastbound & Down."

Johnson had the role of a Texas Ranger in "From Dusk Till Dawn: The Series" on El Rey Network in 2014-15, then he appeared as an oil-rich tycoon in ABC's short-lived "Blood & Oil" in 2015. The latter show also featured Miranda Rae Mayo, who has had a much longer run as Firefighter Stella Kidd on NBC's "Chicago Fire." Later, in 2019, he took on the role of Judd Crawford in the HBO miniseries "Watchmen."

HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

SEPTEMBER 15 - OCTOBER 15

MIKE COOK
For the Bulletin

Brandi Gutierrez has a tattoo of an oil can with a drop of oil coming out of it pointing down to her elbow. It's a reminder that hard work, measured in elbow grease, is essential for success.

Gutierrez owns and operates Nubes Dispensary in Sunland Park and Las Cruces with her husband, Peregrin Ramirez, and a partner who lives in Las Vegas, Nev.

The Sunland Park cannabis dispensary opened in August 2022, followed in October 2023 by the Las Cruces location, which will celebrate its second anniversary during Hispanic Heritage Month.

A piñata in the shape of a cannabis leaf is part of the decor in the showroom of Nubes Dispensary in Las Cruces, on Sept. 19, 2024.

"We're really just here to give back," said Gutierrez, a native of El Paso who lives in Sunland Park with Ramirez and their two children, ages 6 and 11.

Gutierrez has experience in the cannabis industry in five states, including New Mexico. She was at one time director of operations for Hush Canna, which began in Oregon in 2015.

"We grew and went public and became Halo Collective," an international cannabis oil manufacturer, Gutierrez said.

She later became operations manager at Amazon.com before deciding Sunland Park was the place to make a home and start a business.

A 2007 graduate of Horizon High School in El Paso, Gutierrez has a chemistry degree from New Mexico State University (she taught high school chemistry for two years), where she was also an outstanding distance runner. Opening Nubes' Las Cruces dispensary in the Pan Am Plaza building that used to be an off-campus bookstore was part of Gutierrez's plan to "bring something back to New Mexico. We felt like we had this mission, this duty to make that something beautiful," she said.

Gutierrez and her family came home in April 2021, renting a building in Sunland Park and developing a business plan a year before recreational cannabis became legal in the state.

Gutierrez said she and her husband, a military veteran, have both had significant health benefits from cannabis and wanted to share their knowledge and personal experience with others.

Nubes has 10 employees, she said, following in the tradition of yerberas (herbalists) who are extensively trained in the many health benefits of cannabis and traditionally "come from both indigenous people and Spanish roots," according to the Nubes website.

"We hired locally and we trained up," Gutierrez said. "We have some of the best cannabis employees in the business."

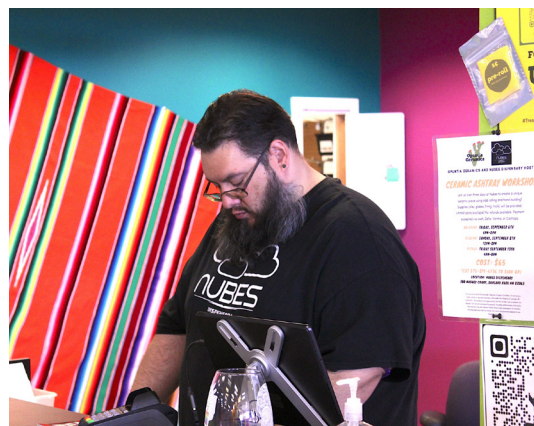

Her staff learns about the chemical background and medicinal benefits of the products they sell, she said, and the art of listening, so they understand the specific needs of each client.

The entire team is part of Nubes' "accessibility to the community," Gutierrez said, and its commitment to give back through local service projects like a toy drive to benefit La Casa's domestic violence program, local schools, food drives that benefit Casa de Peregrinos emergency food program, while

Disorienting space

Muralist confronts border with abstract art

ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
Las Cruces Bulletin

On Monday morning, a boom lift inside the University Art Museum at New Mexico State swayed as two people, standing in its basket carefully applied blue painter's tape to a wall overlooking a second-story balcony.

For several days, artist Carlos Morales-Silva has been preparing a mural spanning two walls of the museum's Mullennix Bridge Gallery titled "Border Destroyer," with an opening reception set for Friday evening. He worked alongside Cassidy Fritts, a fellow muralist and painter from San Antonio, Texas.

An El Paso native from a large family still rooted in the community, Morales-Silva is now based in New York but said he was enjoying an extended stay here, teaching an advanced painting class at NMSU and incorporating a display of several students' paintings into his mural.

The student works emerged from an assignment Morales-Silva presented to students last spring, to compose works responding to their environment.

He spoke of environment – physical and cultural – as a driving force in his own development as an artist, rooted in the history, architecture and topography of the Rio Grande region.

"There's something about this place that has burned and imprinted onto me, just a way of seeing," he said. "Part of it is the landscape – you can see so far in any direction, because everything is so low lying. The sky is so like spectacular most days, like, just like the depth of field that you can see is really kind of disorienting in a way."

Yet within that open view, he described taking in views of White Sands Missile Range, Fort Bliss, El Paso and Ciudad Juárez from the region's mountain ranges, and their cultural context. "That kind of perception is really unique here," he continued. "It's kind of a disorienting space, and that's what a lot of my work is about."

The mural under development presented fortress-like structural shapes in contrast with flowing waves resembling paisley or floral forms, and intense combinations of colors that almost seem to hiss.

"The general idea was to have this kind of abstracted version of a border wall crawling around, and these kind of big sun shapes bursting through it and creating these abstract color fields," Morales-Silva said, "Organic shapes that are growing out of it, kind of bursting through the fence."

On one side, the more organic shapes predominate and serve as a platform for several student works that explore shape, color and texture in a variety of modes, some more abstract,

some less.

"I wanted it to be about the possibilities of education and art education, and to have the actual work of the students that I've been working with," Morales-Silva said.

"A lot of my work is trying to find those combinations in unique form with unique colors," he continued. "Some of that comes from brightly colored buildings that are around the area, but it's also become a really deep study of color theory, a really deep study of formalism ... I think it's all kind of based in the way that I learned how to see here.

"There's a lot of complex things going on at all times, just like in the landscape and just like in the culture and in the politics."

Morales-Silva used similar elements in his first Los Angeles exhibition, "Border Logic," in 2023, with paintings of various sizes and combinations of abstract shapes, colors and surface textures.

His distinctive murals include an installation at the San Antonio Museum of Art and a 2,000-foot mural facing two sides of W. 34th Street in New York City.

"Border Destroyer" will be on display through March 8, 2025. The opening reception on Sept. 27 will run from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., along with the opening of two other exhibits at the UAM: "Carolyn Salas: Night Vision" and "Warhol & Friends." More information is available online at uam.NMSU.edu.

serving posole and menudo at Nubes events that include the whole staff. They also join other locally owned businesses at Sunland Park and Las Cruces mercados.

"We're competing at a very top level," she said. "It's just a matter of getting that local support and supporting that mission."

In New Mexico, it also means dealing with "ever changing rules and regulations" in the cannabis industry, Gutierrez said, where large out-of-state companies and small locally owned companies are not treated the same.

"We need to work together and listen to each other," she said.

For Gutierrez, the work, the community she serves and Hispanic culture are all part of the cycle of life. And so is the cannabis Nubes is helping to restore to its rightful status, she said.

"What once was taboo is now being honored as something that should have been beautiful the whole time," Gutierrez said, as cannabis is now being recognized as part of "holistic wellness."

Her dispensaries are "loud and colorful and very New Mexico inviting," she said, reflecting popular themes like football and Dia de los Muertos. The long-term goal is to expand Nubes into "a multi-state operation," Gutierrez said.

Nubes' locations are 100 Maguey Court in Sunland Park (575-332-4340) and 1713 E. University Ave. in Las Cruces (575-259-3957). The Las Cruces dispensary is open 10 a.m.-10 p.m. Sunday-Thursday, and 10 a.m.-11 p.m. Friday-Saturday. The Sunland Park dispensary is open 7 a.m.-11 p.m. seven days a week. More information is available at NubesDispensary.com or @nubesdispensary on social media.

In the lobby of Nubes Dispensary's Las Cruces location, an ofrenda for Día de los Muertos serves as an altar commemorating the cycle of life and death. Sept. 19, 2024.

Zoot Suit Pachanga takes a year off

Bulletin Report

There is some sad news for local pachucos and pachucas, car fans and the owners who lavish care on them, or people up for a big pachanga (party). One highlight of Hispanic Heritage Month in Las Cruces is reportedly not going to happen this year, though organizers say it will be back in 2025.

Las Cruces' annual Zoot Suit Pachanga and Car Show was set to convene on Oct. 12, bringing the flamboyant suits, colorful lowriders and classic cars, live music and food trucks to Young Park for the second year in a row: The event relocated from Klein Park last year, to accommodate growing attendance, including visitors from Chihuahua and El Paso and neighboring states came for the celebration of Chicano culture and style.

However, organizers posted on the event's Facebook page that the event is skipping 2024 and would be back in October of 2025. "We deeply regret having to cancel 9th Annual Event," an Aug. 4 post stated. No details were given other than, "the support & movement of this event was just not possible at this time."

This pachanga was founded by Victor Gallegos, Manny Renteria and Bob Schunior, who kept the event in Klein Park, in the city's historic Mesquite district, until it had grown too big for that venue.

Patsy Sanchez, Frank Herrera, Aracely Martinez and Hugo Cardena suited up for last year's Zoot Suit Pachanga and Car Show in Las Cruces. In 2024, the event is taking a year off but organizers say it will return next year.

LAW OFFICES OF
ISRAEL CHÁVEZ

646 N. Mesquite St., 88001 Las Cruces, NM

Helping his community, honoring historic roots

Las Cruces attorney Israel Chávez is descended from generations that have lived and worked in the Mesilla Valley as subsistence farmers, bracero laborers and leaders of their community, migrant workers and families with mestizo roots along the Rio Grande's route through southern New Mexico.

Israel himself is the first attorney in the family, enrolling in law school at the University of New Mexico after graduating from Mayfield High in Las Cruces.

"I saw continually how people in my community didn't get the representation they deserved," he said.

"These were people who looked like my family, like my tíos and tías, who did not have people in court to advocate for them.

"No matter how good your interpreter is, it's always a huge empowering moment when your attorney speaks to you in your language," said Chávez, who is bilingual in English and Spanish.

After working at New Mexico State University, serving as an assistant county attorney and as a criminal and labor prosecutor, Chávez established his own practice last year.

"Since I was kid, it's always been about fairness," he said of his inspiration. "That's how I was raised: That things should be fair and if it's not fair, you have an obligation to speak up. Now I have the privilege of being able to do that on behalf of my community."

He represents people who have been injured, has a civil rights practice focusing on New Mexico's civil rights law and other areas where clients need help.

He has also given back to the community where he grew up as founder of the Doña Ava Village Association, providing outdoor youth programs and local agricultural history and education. He also heads the recently-formed Southern New Mexico Bar Association, which he said has offered 400 free legal consultations in the region over an eight-month period.

"This is really making a dent in the legal needs of our community," he said.

What's Available NOW On

"House of Spoils" (Oct. 3)

This horror film follows an ambitious chef (Ariana DeBose) who opens her first restaurant — a farm-to-table affair on a remote estate — where she battles kitchen chaos, a dubious investor, crushing self doubts... and the powerful spirit of the estate's previous owner who threatens to sabotage her at every turn.

"The Legend of Vox Machina" - Season 3 (Oct. 3)

Everything is at stake in this series' long-awaited third season, as the Chroma Conclave's path of destruction spreads like wildfire while the Cinder King hunts down Vox Machina. Our lovable band of misfits must rise above inner (and outer) demons to try and save their loved ones, Tal'Dorei, and all of Exandria.

"El Diario" (Oct. 4)

After her divorce, Olga (Irene Azuela) moves with her daughter Vera (Isabella Arroyo) to a new city. When Olga finds the diary of a killer in the attic of her house, she soon discovers that, far from being finished, the diary continues to be rewritten, endangering her life and everyone around her. Overwhelmed by this inexplicable event, Olga finds no one else to rely on except her daughter's therapist, Carlos (Mauricio Ochmann), as she tries to find out the identity of the murderous writer.

"Killer Heat" (Available Now)

In classic noir style, this thrilling, contemporary mystery follows private eye Nick Bali (Joseph Gordon-Levitt), an American living in Greece, who is hired to investigate the supposed accidental death of young shipping magnate Leo Vardakis (Richard Madden), whose sister-in-law (Shailene Woodley) doesn't believe the official police report. Nick finds darkness at every turn, as the rich and powerful Vardakis family rule like gods, jealousies run deep and anyone could be a suspect.

WOMAN

“Scott (Haley, sound designer) and Brianna (Miranda, lighting designer) are amazing,” she enthused. “They really got the whole concept of atmosphere. I’m sure there have been productions that don’t have quite as detailed sound effects, or as many lighting cues, but if you give your audience just enough to get their brains engaged, you can bet that it will be a lot scarier than anything they actually see.”

“And our costume designer Mattie Ruminer had such an interesting take,” she continued, “where scene by scene, she makes Kipp, played by Brad Martinez, look more and more disheveled. It’s sort of a visual manifestation of the character’s starting to come apart at the seams, both literally and metaphorically. There’s sort of an inverse thing with Knut Brekke’s character, which starts out buttoned up and closed off, but by the end he’s able to shake that off and becomes more vulnerable.”

Trappings aside, Gose is just as enthusiastic about her actors, calling them “two of the most intrinsically talented, instinctual and intuitive actors I’ve ever worked with.”

As this production of “The Woman in Black” nears its weekend debut, the question of how audiences in Las Cruces will receive such a psychologically immersive piece of entertainment arises. She thinks about it, then delivers an answer with the assurance of a seasoned professional.

“This play is a classic ghost story, and I feel like horror theater doesn’t get done very often, so it might be one of the few opportunities to see a true horror play that takes itself dead seriously,” she said. “I also want Las Cruces audiences to get the idea that there is vastly more to theatre than fun songs and lots of dancing. I want people to leave feeling unsettled, and a little bit unsure of what they may have seen. That, to me, is a true theater experience.”

“The Woman in Black” runs one weekend only, 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Sept. 27 & 28; and 2 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 29, at the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St., Las Cruces. Tickets are $15, with $10 student rush tickets at the door. Info: 575-541-2290 or BlankConversations.org/The-Woman-In-Black.

Pets are neighbors, too, say animal orgs

BULLETIN REPORT

The Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley is teaming up with the nonprofit Petco Love in marking National Good Neighbor Day on Saturday by encouraging communities to help lost pets.

The message, as far as the day’s celebration of neighborhood, is that neighbors watch for pets who appear to be lost and post photos to Petco Love’s “Love Lost” database, available at PetcoLove.org. The application uses image-recognition technology to help families locate missing pets, all for free, according to a news release. Families with a missing pet also upload photos to the site and search the database for images resembling their pet posted locally. The app is also designed to tie in with social media posts on platforms such as Ring/Neighbors, Nextdoor and Facebook.

Petco Love claims its database has reunited nearly 60,000 families and pets. The organization’s president, Susanne Kogut, urged families to register their pets on the database “in case the unthinkable happens, and their pet goes missing tomorrow.”

Another resource is the Animal Services Center’s website, ascmv.org, with information about missing pets in its care, tips on finding abandoned animals and information about volunteering or fostering animals. The center is an open-admission municipal shelter, jointly founded by the city of Las Cruces and Doña Ana County in 2008.

Mistletoe infestation leads to tree removal at park

BULLETIN REPORT

Mistletoe, despite the holiday tradition of holiday-season kisses beneath its evergreen sprigs, has serious downsides. Ingested, it can be mildly toxic, according to the National Capital Poison Control Center, which advises it be kept away from children and pets. It is also a hemiparasite, meaning it steals some of its nutrition from another plant – like, say, the cottonwood trees at Salopek Park in Las Cruces. In bad cases, the tree’s health may be compromised and branches can die, creating safety hazards.

A severe mistletoe infestation is prompting the removal of six or seven “declining” cottonwoods at the park located south of Stern Drive near Tortugas. The city stated that two trees have died because of the infestation.

Over a period of two weeks, beginning on the east end of the park and moving southward toward the arroyo, crews

will remove the trees that are not treatable, while four other trees that have been infested will be treated at a later time.

The city said the parks and recreation department will plant up to 30 trees in a “replacement phase,” and that species with higher pest resistance will be introduced. More information is available from the city at 575-541-2550.

Mistletoe is not good news for trees, but should we be worried about having it in the house as decoration? The NCPCC says recent studies indicate the American variety is less toxic than its European cousin: Ingestion “can cause symptoms such as gastrointestinal upset but is not likely to cause serious poisoning if small amounts are unintentionally swallowed.”

CDP hopes to expand rural reach with new food pantries

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

Casa de Peregrinos, the largest food pantry in Doña Ana County, is set to expand its reach to the county's rural areas.

According to a presentation to the Doña Ana County Board of Commissioners on Sept. 10, the pantry will hold a groundbreaking for a new location in Chaparral on Oct. 11 and renovate a building in Hatch this fall. The food pantry is also searching for more funding to complete a facility in Sunland Park.

The expansion comes after Casa de Peregrinos opened a new location in Hatch last April. The Hatch Pantry, combined with other Casa de Peregrinos efforts, has served over 8,100 people since the start of 2024, about 2,100 more than last year, according to the presentation.

Now, Casa de Peregrinos is looking to expand those efforts to the southern parts of the county.

"We know it will impact residents the same way it has in Hatch," said director Lorenzo Alba, Jr., referring to a location in Chaparral. "This is an area that we really need to focus on and that we really need to bring services to."

The building, expected to open in fall 2025, is mainly funded by state legislators' capital outlay, with an additional $500,000 cash-injection from Doña Ana County's facilities department. Alba said legislators forked up $1.3 million for the project.

Alba also said that the capital outlay provided $175,000 for renovations to a Casa de Peregrinos building in Hatch. Congressman Gabe Vasquez appropriated another $300,000, Alba said.

A third project in Sunland Park has secured $1.7 million in capital outlay and $1.5 million from a Community Block Development Grant, but remains approximately $1 million short of complete funding.

"So, you guys talk to your legislators for us, ok?" Alba said during the presentation. "Help us out with that."

State legislators can allocate a limited amount of money to brick-and-mortar projects, typically in their districts, as part of every budget. The system represents a key source of funding for infrastructure across New Mexico.

While the money must be used to build buildings, the services those buildings house could impact thousands.

National nonprofit food bank coordinator Feeding America estimated that about 33,000 residents (15 percent) are considered food insecure. Food insecurity is an official USDA term for people who lack access to food to the point that they eat less frequently than those with secure access.

Lack of stable income, illness, disability and the distance between homes and grocery stores are some of the top causes of food instability, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Alba reported that Sunland Park and Chaparral have some of the highest levels of food insecurity in the county.

"Hopefully, by this time next year, we'll be having a ribbon cutting and opening up (the Chaparral) pantry for that community," Alba said.

Fed rate cut brings relief to homebuyers

STEVE MONTANEZ
For the Bulletin

"I'm waiting for rates to come down."

The highly anticipated rate cut from the Federal Reserve is finally here. At their Sept. 18 meeting, the fed cut their interest rates by a half a point, exceeding expectations from economists and financial analysts.

The fed's decision cuts rates to about 4.9 percent basis points, which is down from a two-decade high – showing signs of a stronger economy and cooling inflation. So, what does this mean for buyers and sellers?

Mortgages, which have already hit a 19-month low, will likely see even larger drops as the fed has signaled the possibility of another half-point cut by the end of 2024.

Job reports, inflation and the upcoming election will all affect rates from now until 2025. A large majority of borrowers already have rates at an average of 5 percent, so you may not see as many refinances until rates fall further below a 4.4 percent benchmark.

Mortgage rates will continue to fall and many borrowers have not seen rates below 6 percent since September 2022. Housing experts believe buyer activity will surge if rates continue to fall further below 6 percent, giving much-needed relief to those carrying a high interest rate while also pushing some first-time borrowers to apply for a mortgage.

Now is the time to talk to a lender, as rates will remain competitive. Look for point buydown incentives that may further lower your monthly payment. Las Cruces has some of the most talented lenders and real estate professionals ready to get started working for you. If you are a seller, expect more activity in your neighborhoods than usual at this time of year thanks to this news in rates. It's a great time to be a Las Cruces homeowner.

Steve Montanez is a real estate broker and realtor, and a regular contributor to the Las Cruces Bulletin commenting on real estate and the housing market.

Las Cruces man pleads guilty to manslaughter

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

A Las Cruces man accused of killing another on Van Patten Avenue in February agreed to plead guilty to lesser charges in exchange for pleading guilty to unrelated drug trafficking charges from years past, according to court records.

Oswaldo Padilla Suarez, 41, pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter and will likely face 10 years in prison, according to the plea agreement.

Police accused Suarez of killing Oscar Ramirez, 26, on Feb. 3. According to the criminal complaint, police say that Ramirez was standing near an idling car along the 300 block of Van Patten Avenue when Suarez walked up with a rifle and shot him.

The affidavit did not specify their relationship.

When police arrived to investigate, they said residents in the area identified the shooter as "Tut." According to the affidavit, police were familiar with the nickname and believed it belonged to Suarez.

After his arrest, a grand jury indicted Suarez on charges of first-degree murder, possession of a firearm as a felon, tampering with evidence and bribery of a witness. But as part of the plea deal, prosecutors agreed to drop those charges in exchange for the lesser crime of voluntary manslaughter.

Per the plea deal, Suarez also agreed to plead guilty to two drug charges of trafficking and forgery as part of the deal. A court had previously convicted Suarez of other drug trafficking crimes in 2009 and 2013.

Suarez was scheduled for a sentencing hearing on Sept. 25, as the Bulletin went to press.

This was the first murder of 2024. According to statistics provided by Las Cruces Police Department, there have been 15 murders in Las Cruces this year, about five more than the average rate.

Rio Grande Rivalry match Saturday

NEW MEXICO STATE ATHLETICS

Following back-to-back road games, the Aggies return home to host University of New Mexico in the 114th playing of the Rio Grande Rivalry. NM State will be seeking its third consecutive win over the Lobos – a streak that would be the longest since 2009-11.

The game kicks off Saturday, Sept. 28 at 6 p.m.

The Aggies are also looking to earn back-to-back home wins over UNM. In total, NM State has stacked three or more consecutive wins just five times in the rivalry's 113-year history.

A win this weekend would also mark the first time since 1963 and 1965 that the Aggies earn back-to-back home wins over the Lobos - a feat that has only happened five times in the history of the rivalry.

With a win, head coach Tony Sanchez would become the seventh head coach in program history to earn a victory over the Lobos in his first attempt. He would also join Jerry Kill and DeWayne Walker as the only Aggie coaches to do so since 1968.

Take your golf game to the next level

A few years ago a professional golf management student at NMSU we will call Brian contacted me for some mental help with his golf game. He was due to take the required Playing Ability Test, a 36-hole pass-or-fail golf course test that all PGA hopefuls have to pass.

Every time I get a request for help I try to pin down what the player thinks his difficulty is and what he is prepared to do to get back on track. Brian said, "I'm just not getting enough out of my game." A little further into the inquiry he shared that he was "making way too many mistakes."

After examining just about every aspect of Brian's golf game, we arrived at six critical developmental areas for improvement. The examination of Brian's game was facilitated by my 100-item golf game analysis tool that I called the "Performance Golf Ability Rating" or PGAR. I had Brian rate himself on 100 skills and abilities, many of which are contained in the space between the ears.

When it came down to the essence of what Brian desired for himself in golf, he put it this way:

"I want to take my golf game to the next level and

CHARLIE BLANCHARD

I need coaching to do it." Most recreational golfers don't think of taking their game to new heights of expertise or the next level. They usually just think "handicap" or vague notions of "improvement," or most commonly wanting "consistency."

After playing a couple of rounds of golf with Brian, and then going over the PGAR checklist, we arrived at several key dimensions of how he plays golf. These may very well be some of the same elements that could take your game to the next level. At the top of the checklist for almost every player is the 24th question: "Do you own a solid golf swing that repeats consistently under pressure?" Likewise, number 40: "Do you stay task-oriented from shot to shot for an entire round?" That means one's focus has to be on the shot you are playing at this moment, not on the foul-up on the last hole, not on the reachable par 5 for the next hole.

Golf is played in a "one job" bubble: You have one job, and that is to put the best swing you have for the best shot on this hole.

Then move on to the next job. The best rounds of golf are played when the golfer doesn't know what score he is shooting; he is just playing, lost in concentration.

Out on the golf course with Brian I asked what his thoughts were just prior to taking the club away. He admitted that he was frequently uncertain about his club choice and it played on his nerves as he was about to hit a shot, particularly a difficult shot with wind and slope and other variables. Brian then admitted that he is somewhat a perfectionist and it gets in his way. We agreed that he needed a pre-shot and pre-thought routine, which included making a commitment with each club selection. "Don't start the swing without internalizing the thought, "trust it."

Brian had two factors in his favor: He was highly coachable and learned quickly; and he has a realistically positive attitude nearly all of the time. As we wrapped up our work together, I concluded that Brian was on his way to establishing his game at a higher level. He answered "yes" to question 70 on the test, "Have you proven a willingness and capacity to change when necessary?" That is a key question all golfers should ask themselves.

Embrace the Future of Comfort: The Power of Motion Sets

by Jesus Duran, GM

In a world where convenience and comfort are paramount, power motion sets revolutionize our lounging experience. As we come together to watch films, entertain friends, or unwind after a long day, nothing transforms our enjoyment quite like a power reclining sofa.

Available in three inviting options—Power 1 (standard reclining), Power 2 (adjustable head and reclining), and Power 3 (full adjustability with lumbar support)—these sofas ensure that each person can customize their comfort level. Imagine sinking into a couch that adjusts to your every need; there's no more kicking at the leg rest to recline and no more struggling with faulty manual mechanisms. It's as straightforward as rolling down your vehicle windows versus the cumbersome task of cranking them open by hand.

Take the Boyington series, for example. Not only does it offer various reclining positions, but it also features massages and seat warmers that elevate your relaxation to new heights. Plus, its innovative drop-down sofa design includes illuminated reading lights and wireless charging ports for your devices—perfect for those late-night movie marathons or gathering with friends.

Power recliners redefine leisure, merging technology with comfort to match the pace of our busy lives. Investing in a power motion set means investing in a lifestyle where convenience reigns supreme, allowing us to fully enjoy our time at home without the fuss. So, as you consider your next sofa purchase, step into the future of comfort—because experiencing relaxation shouldn't require effort.
