WIRELESS CHRISTMAS

A modern-day visit from St. Nick

—Algernon D'Amassa

'Twas a wireless Christmas

'Twas the night before Christmas and all through the house
The children wore airpods and so did my spouse.
Their faces, untouched by the twinkling tree,
Were lit up instead by their flickering screens.

My kids were fighting a 'battle royale'
While mama was streaming a Christmas chorale
When all of them yelled, in a furious clamor,
And I set down my book to ask what was the matter.

They gravely intoned, every face in a pout,
That our household's WiFi had suddenly gone out.
With nothing to do, their joys having fled,
The family marched mournfully off to their beds.

I sipped some hot chocolate, admiring the tree,
Recalling past Christmases and childhood glee,
When out in the yard I heard a peculiar sound
And opened the window for a quick look around.

What I saw was surely some holiday trick!
Could that really be reindeer, a sleigh and Saint Nick?
He saw me and grinned, waving a small grey box
With which he turned off our WiFi, like turning a lock.

I let him inside right through the front
As he lugged his red sack with a spirited grunt.
His eyes were twinkly, his cheeks were flushed pink,
His forehead was wrinkly as he threw me a wink.

He opened his bag as I watched with surprise
The most magical thing I could have surmised:
Like prancing reindeer, the toys leapt out
From his sack and began jumping about:

A riot of puzzles, candies, animals from a zoo,
Books, yo-yos, games, musical instruments too,
Puppets, paints and beautiful pens,
Play ovens, marbles, Barbies and Kens –

And not one of these, I happily report,
Took batteries or had a USB port.
The internet, he whispered, would be down for one day,
And he winked again, continuing on his way.

I let him out and he sprang to his team,
A silhouette of reindeer in moonlight's gleam.
And I heard him exclaim while his sleigh made its climb:

"Happy Christmas to all!
May you spend it off-line!"

Doña Ana County officials approve raises for elected officials

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Doña Ana County Board of Commissioners voted on Dec. 10 to increase the salaries of all county-elected officials and their deputies by as much as 30 percent.

The raises go into effect in the next term. So, for some officials, that means a pay increase come January, while others will have to win another election before the raises take effect for them.

About 66 percent of New Mexico voters approved a constitutional amendment in the November election giving the commission authority to raise elected officials' salaries. Previously, only the legislature could raise salaries, a practice that dates back to New Mexico's territorial days.

"What the legislature normally had done is just 15 percent increases every ten years or so," County Treasurer Eric Rodriguez said. "And so elected officials just kind of compressed and compressed over the years."

Legislative records show the last increase occurred in 2019.

Since the voters approved the amendment, several counties have jumped at the opportunity to raise wages, saying increased pay will make the jobs more enticing for well-qualified and talented people seeking work.

spoke in favor of the raises they'll receive.

Commissioner Shannon Reynolds said it would also allow people from less wealthy backgrounds and people who are in the workforce to become elected officials. He also noted that, in some cases, elected officials manage staffers who make more than them.

"I'm never going to benefit from this decision. I have two years left, I will not get a pay raise, and I cannot run for this office again," Reynolds said. "So, I'm an unbiased party in this situation trying to identify the reason for this decision and why we're trying to do this."

Sheriff Kim Stewart and Deputy County Clerk Caroline Zamora also spoke in favor of the raises. Stewart pointed out that her office only legally requires officeholders to come in for eight hours per month.

"Eight hours a month. That's it. I could have another job. You know my predecessors did," Stewart said.

There were no public comments opposing the raises. Commissioner Susana Chaparro said she'd received calls from constituents questioning why the elected officials deserved the raises.

"At least from the ones who called me, it's not sitting well to have a 30 percent increase across the board," Chaparro said.

Stephen Lopez, the former interim county manager who heads the county's Office of Emergency Management, presented the changes. He said the increase for elected officials was calculated by the cost of living bosses' pay.

The new salaries, compared to the old, are:

- Sheriff
$90,338 to $117,439
- Treasurer
$86,626 to $112,613
- Assessor
$86,626 to $112,613
- Clerk
$86,626 to $112,613
- Probate Judge
$38,144 to $49,548
- Commissioner
$39,106 to $49,548

County Clerk Amanda López Askin, treasurer-elect Marisol Richardson, Commissioners Manuel Sanchez and Chaparro, and commissioner-elect Gloria Gameros will earn the new pay rates beginning in January.

The commission also added a provision guaranteeing cost-of-living increases for elected officials equal to those for non-elected officials.

Whoever holds the offices of probate judge, assessor, and sheriff in 2027 will receive increased wages.

"Because of (the American Rescue Plan Act) and COVID, our budget was actually closer to $400 million," Reynolds said before voting to approve the salary increases. "I don't think we want people in this position who don't understand a lot about economics, (and) about health, and welfare benefits to the community of over 200,000 people."

Budget process kicks off early with city council input

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

A new police training facility, greater investment in the library system, road improvements and preparation for a Trump presidency: There was no unifying theme among the seven presentations from the seven councilors, and they did not even sit at the same table.

Each of them laid down an array of priorities during the annual budget retreat on Dec. 17, marking the unofficial start of the yearly marathon to build a budget that funds all city operations and staff.

"I think we can take all the things that every single councilor brought to the surface. I think we could support them with our budget," Councilor Bill Mattiace said.

In Las Cruces' "weak mayor-council system" of government, the budget is generated by city manager's office and approved by the council.

Differing from previous years, new city manager Ikani Taumoepeau chose to hold the budget retreat at the start of the budgeting process. In past administrations, department heads pitched their requests to the council and to the city manager. This year, councilors gave the staff their priorities.

Having the budget retreat in December instead of February also meant the city did not present revenue projections or economic outlook data for the next fiscal year.

Mayor Eric Enriquez opened the presentations with a 17-minute speech

in which he said, "This is very important on how we make decisions to shape the future of our city and how it will impact the lives of our residents, but the services that you provide is a backbone of our city, and properly funding these services is vital to our community."

Enriquez named public safety and quality of life among his top issues, including better health care access. He also wanted a joint fire-police training facility built in Las Cruces.

"I was a firefighter. I was a fire investigator, and when you investigate fires, you go from the unburned to the burn. You go from the exterior to the interior. And so that's what I focused on," he said.

Johana Bencomo presented next. Her priorities centered around using government to support low-income parts of Las Cruces—a consistent theme throughout her six years as a city councilor.

She also defined safety as something that included poverty, health care and housing issues. Specifically, she outlined her priorities as:

- Supporting and expanding the use of metropolitan redevelopment areas
- Increasing affordable housing and homelessness programming
- More focus on pavement management and traffic calming, especially in areas near schools
- Continue identifying and, if needed, demolishing blighted buildings
- Keeping staff wages competitive
- Preparing for a Trump presidency

Bencomo said she had debated including the point about president-elect

Donald Trump, but felt the city should rebuff efforts to roll back the rights of marginalized groups.

"I think the Trump administration will be calling on local municipalities to do some very harmful and hurtful things. And I want to be very clear that we still get a choice," Bencomo said.

Yvonne Flores said she would like to see investment in road improvements in Hacienda Acres. She also thanked staff for their work and said she did not plan to run for her seat in 2025.

Becky Corran spoke after. She started by arguing that the library system should receive more funding and said that the city should continue its affordable housing investments. Corran also said that the city should work to become more resilient.

"I believe that there is an approaching volatility in our world in terms of economic threats," Corran said, adding that investing in employees was the best way to build resilience.

Cassie McClure, the council's newest member, said she wanted the city to develop and fund a program to prevent

"youth from becoming violent recidivists." She added that the city should increase afterschool programs, invest more in the library system and grow the storefront repair program.

McClure also suggested that the city consider building tiny homes and pursue other, less traditional approaches to alleviating Las Cruces's affordable housing problems.

After McClure, Becki Graham said her top priorities also centered around public safety. She, too, said she supported a police-fire training facility and called for more benefits for public safety workers. She also wanted to see Project LIGHT expand and more "third spaces" for Las Cruces families. "Third spaces" is a term referring to spaces other than home or working environments where people may gather and socialize.

Bill Mattiace was the final presenter. He did not present any priorities but thanked staff and said the council was very intelligent and professional. Mattiace also said affordable housing and public safety outcomes have improved in the last two years. He also said he'd like to see the city fund vocational training for children.

LAS CRUCES POLICE DEPARTMENT PHOTO

The 54th LCPD Academy graduation class includes Vincent Montoya, Veridiana Porras, Juan Prieto, Alan Ramirez, Eric Reynolds, and Jannette Soto, with Montoya heading to the NMSU Police Department.

Police department still short of full staffing after graduation

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

Six people will graduate from the 54th Las Cruces Police Department academy this month, adding five to LCPD's roster and one to New Mexico State University's police department.

A news release announced the graduation and said a private ceremony would take place on Dec. 20 in the city council chambers at Las Cruces City Hall. The graduation brings LCPD's total officer roster to 187.

The graduating class includes Vincent Montoya, Veridiana Porras, Juan Prieto, Alan Ramirez, Eric Reynolds and Jannette Soto, with Montoya heading to NMSU's police department, the news release said.

According to a spokesperson, the Academy received 731 applicants for the 54th Academy and began with 18 cadets.

The news release also said that the six graduates received 1,164 accredited hours of law enforcement education and training.

"The bulk of the academy, roughly 60 percent of it, is classroom instruction while the remaining 40 percent consists of field training in and around Las Cruces," the news release said.

The five LCPD graduates will be placed with other police officers, called field-training officers, for the next 14 weeks of their training.

Like many departments across the U.S., LCPD has struggled with recruitment and retention despite offering incentives like high starting pay and signing bonuses to new recruits and officers transferring from other departments.

LCPD offers recruits with no educational background a $11,000 incentive. The money increases for more educated recruits. For example, LCPD offers a $30,000 incentive to recruits with master's degrees in sociology, psychology, criminal justice or criminology.

Officials say the recruitment and retention problem stems from a competitive job market.

Despite this graduation, LCPD is still short of being fully staffed. The department is funded to have 220 police officers since the Las Cruces City Council voted in 2023 to increase the department's funding.

"The Las Cruces Police Department anticipates beginning its 55th Academy in the spring of 2025. Anyone interested in learning more about the Academy can go online at CLCPD.com," the release said.

Man facing federal immigration charges following crash

JUSTIN GARCIA
Las Cruces Bulletin

The man accused of killing a woman at the Imperial Sky Motel on Dec. 6 now faces federal charges after Border Patrol agents said he was caretaking a group of migrants lodged at the motel.

The new charges, filed on Dec. 12, allege that Alan Leyva-Vasquez, 22, was "feeding and taking care of" at least six migrants and crossed into the U.S. illegally himself about a month ago, before he drove an SUV into an apartment at the Motel and killed 55-year-old Kari Scholin.

The federal affidavit did not indicate how Leyva-Vasquez knew the migrants or if the situation involved any organized criminal enterprise.

Border Patrol detained all six migrants, court records show.

Leyva-Vasquez told police that three armed men were pursuing him before fleeing to his car.

LAS CRUCES BULLETIN PHOTOS BY ALGERNON D'AMMASSA

The front office of the Imperial Sky Motel in W. Picacho Avenue in Las Cruces, Dec. 13, 2024.

He also told police that he planned to pursue a second vehicle before unintentionally putting the car in reverse and backing into Scholin's apartment.

Leyva-Vasquez remained at the scene and cooperated with police, although a news release said he initially told police he tried to hit the brakes before crashing into the building.

On Dec. 12, state District Judge Richard Jacquez rejected state prosecutors' argument that Leyva-Vasquez should be held without bond. Jacquez agreed with prosecutors that Leyva-Vasquez was dangerous but said prosecutors presented no evidence that Leyva-Vasquez would not abide by a set of conditions of release.

New Mexico law requires prosecutors to prove to a judge that a defendant is both dangerous and that no conditions of release can protect the community from holding the defendant in jail without bond.

Instead, Jacquez issued a $5,000 secure bond, which means Leyva-Vasquez must pay the full bond before he can leave jail.

However, with his new federal charges, Leyva-Vasquez will likely face a second attempt by prosecutors to hold him in jail via the stricter federal process.

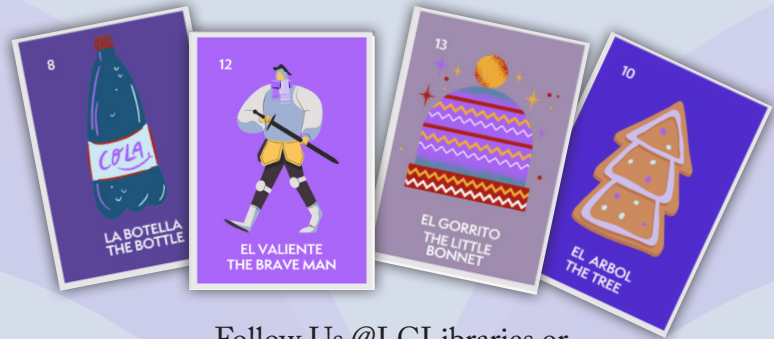

Repairs underway at an apartment at the Imperial Sky Motel in Las Cruces, Dec. 13, 2024.

My 14-year pact with Andres the cat

I was feeling a little bit lonely one night about 14 years ago when I made a pact with Andres, the kitten I had just adopted from the Mesilla Valley animal shelter: Get me to age 65, and I promise to take good care of you.

The plan was to get a dog once I was retired and had more time to care for one, and I made sure to tell everyone that. I shared the snarky attitude toward cats that is so prevalent in modern culture.

My first cat was named Pogonip. When he died, my next two were named Substitute and Replacement. I said it was in honor of Pogonip, but really it was just a mean joke about how disposable I thought cats were.

That attitude was probably driven by gender insecurity. Men are supposed to own dogs – preferably big, mean, snarling dogs. Women own cats. Hence our soon-to-be vice president's lament about "childless cat ladies."

It was just me and Andres for a while. Then Earnie joined the family when her owner moved to California. She was a smallish cat who was routinely getting picked on when my friend took her in. That made her much more cautious than Andres. She still spends much of her day hiding in safe spaces.

Two cats were fine. But when Bonnie showed up I had a problem. She was a tiny little thing, and hungry. She waited outside the door until I went to feed Andres and Earnie, then she dashed in and stole their food. She was less than half their size, but absolutely fearless. I had to keep her.

WALT RUBEL
The View
From Here

The problem was that modern culture has decreed three cats are too many. People start looking at you like you're a hoarder. And so, I would always explain that I had three cats but only wanted two.

During the past few years, I've had two friends join me and the cats – one an old friend who I have known for years, the other a new friend who lost her house in the Ruidoso floods and needed a place to stay. And so, the household is much busier and less solitary than when I made that pact with Andres 14 years ago.

Last Thursday, after I returned home from a short night out, Andres jumped up on the couch and snuggled up next to my right leg, just like always. Then he quietly and peacefully took his final breath and died.

I know that 14 years is a long life for a cat. And I can only hope that when my time comes, I pass as peacefully as he did. None of that changes the fact I'm having to stop and wipe away tears as I write this.

Maybe I'll get a dog. I'll put off that decision until Earnie passes. I'm not sure how old she is, but I've had her for more than 10 years, so she can't have much time left.

If I do, it won't be because I think dogs are better than cats. They're different, for sure. Dogs are much more expressive in their affection. Cats are more independent and less needy, but they get a bad rap from those who claim they are aloof and detached just because they aren't as desperate as dogs.

Andres may not have fully comprehended the pact we made 14 years ago, but he more than lived up to his side. My 66th birthday was in July.

And so, my days of making snarky cat jokes are over. That would be disrespectful to Andres.

On being disillusioned with our 'leaders'

I loathe politics and, by default, politicians. A year ago, I followed national politics with the typical ire of, probably, most folks – annoyance worthy of the occasional five-minute lamentation over a beer and not much else. I vote in the national elections but my busy schedule meant I didn't always make it out for midterms or other elections. I didn't see the direct correlation between my everyday life, or that of my children, with the local or state political mudslinging. To me, politicians, once elected, rest on their laurels and bide their time until the next cycle, avoiding news coverage but collecting soundbites and staged photos to roll out the next time their salary (or political stepping stone) was dependent on citizens like myself – ignorant and easily lured by flash-in-the-pan "leaders."

In the last year, I've become intimately familiar with the local "leaders." Today, my opinion of politicians and how they relate to being a leader is exponentially more nuanced than I would have ever imagined. I consider myself an analytical, perceptive person and yet paying close attention to local and state politicians in the last year has me even more confused than when I started.

I am confused still by the governor's July visit to Las Cruces and a number of additional towns around our state, to discuss and make promises to rectify the public safety predicament New Mexico finds itself in. After an overwhelming show of local bipartisan support for her visit, it withered as quickly as it bloomed, despite a local campaign of repeat offender literature, emails, signs, photographs and other methods of support for her sudden interest in the problems that have plagued small business owners and residents for a number of years. No such drumbeat from the governor's office has yet been published for similar public safety priorities in the upcoming 60-day legislative session that I

Zoning changes will transform neighborhoods

SARAH SMITH
Guest columnist

Zoning codes don't sound exciting, but they impact many aspects of our city and daily lives. People who live in neighborhoods bought their homes with expectations for how things would remain over time; however, big changes are likely coming soon. In early 2025, the Las Cruces City Council will vote on whether to adopt Realize Las Cruces, which includes comprehensive changes to the zoning code that will greatly affect how land is able to be used in most neighborhoods in town.

Currently, most neighborhoods in the city are zoned so that only houses are allowed, unless they're nearby to a busy road where apartments and businesses are allowed. However, with the adoption of Realize Las Cruces, that would change to allow apartment complexes and businesses in neighborhoods. The size of the apartment complex allowed would vary depending on the neighborhood, ranging from 16 dwellings per acre up to 60 dwellings per acre.

For instance, neighborhoods in Sonoma Ranch and High Range would generally allow apartment complexes with 16-30 dwellings per acre. Neighborhoods closer to downtown Las Cruces would allow apartment complexes with 50-60 dwellings per acre. My own neighborhood in north Las Cruces would allow apartment complexes with 24 dwellings per acre. The overall city map is a patchwork of different zones, but you can look up the proposed zone for your neighborhood at RealizeLasCruces.com. Click on "Documents" and scroll down the map where you can search by address.

Besides apartments, Realize Las Cruces would also allow local grocery stores, cafés, mobile homes, libraries and museums in all neighborhoods. Local retail stores and gas stations would be allowed in any neighborhood with a special permit. This is basically the end of single family zoning for the city, as there will no longer be any neighborhoods that allow only homes.

People will no longer have any guarantee that they can live in a quiet neighborhood away from the traffic and noise of apartments and businesses. The increased traffic may be especially problematic for the safety of families with young children and the elderly. If you're in a neighborhood where all the land is already being used, you may not notice much in the way of changes. However, if you have empty lots or undeveloped land nearby, the impact could be considerable. That land could soon turn into a little restaurant, grocery store, gas station or apartment complex where you thought there could only be more houses.

For instance, in my neighborhood, several acres of empty land across the street could soon turn into an apartment complex. That could increase traffic such that it's no longer safe for my kids to ride their rollerblades or bikes down the street, especially since we have no sidewalks. We moved to our little house on this street 10 years ago because it was a relatively quiet street. We wanted to raise our kids away from the hustle and bustle, where they'd be able to enjoy playing outside more. But that doesn't matter to the city planners, who have decided we need higher density housing across the city.

Given how much wide-open space we have all around Las Cruces, I fail to understand the urgency of making our existing neighborhoods more crowded and busy. City Council and staff are also focused on making Las Cruces more "walkable," but given our hot climate I can't imagine that people are going to be walking to businesses much from April through September.

Some neighborhoods are already zoned for a mix of commercial and residential uses. That's great for the people who chose to live there. I don't understand why there can't be a compromise to allow both mixed areas as well as areas where homeowners will be able to get away from it all. As a community, why can't we support both? It feels like the city council is trying to force Las Cruces to adhere to what is needed in big cities where there isn't enough land to go around, even though we don't have that problem here. It's time for the people of Las Cruces to speak up before the vote in early 2025.

What legislative coverage do you want? Let us know

ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
Las Cruces Bulletin

The holiday season is still underway, of course; and at the same time, lawmakers, the governor and other state officials and the reporters who write about them, are all looking ahead to Jan. 21 and the start of a new "sesh" – the 60-day legislative session in Santa Fe.

Legislation may be "pre-filed" as soon as Jan. 2, and from Jan. 21 until noon on March 22, elected representatives will work, often into the night, to pass the state's budget as well legislation on all other state matters. And except for per diem expenses, they do this as volunteers: New Mexico's legislature is unsalaried.

As we prepare the Las Cruces Bulletin's annual legislative guide and consider our plans for covering our local representatives and developments at the Roundhouse, we would like to hear from you, our readers, about what you want to know during the session.

Are there particular issues you are following that you want to see addressed?

Are there particular issues you would like to understand better?

Are there questions you have about the legislative process itself, how laws are introduced, vetted in committees, and make their way into law or oblivion?

Are you interested in reading in-depth coverage of particular bills or policy solutions, and/or do you want information about how to observe and participate in hearings?

Are you interested in images and video of local representatives in the Roundhouse environment?

Please let us know your thoughts by sending a brief email to editor@lascrucesbulletin.com. And thank you for reading!

am aware of, and I've been paying particular attention. Was it all just an ego-maniacal temper tantrum for someone who didn't get their way?

I don't understand a local state representative telling a much smaller group of his constituents that he "can't pass laws to get people off their ass" and do their jobs. Ah, the political finger pointing begins. "It's her fault!" "He did (or didn't) allow that critical piece of legislation to be heard!" "Your city council is the problem!"

What is a leader? The Las Cruces City Council has at its disposal arguably the best police chief in decades. He is engaged, intelligent and not afraid to research innovative policies and procedures that have (or have not) worked in other cities. And yet his specific requests for critical legislative priorities have fallen on nearly deaf ears. The council meeting on December 2 made me sick to my stomach: Citizen after citizen, business owner after business owner, took time out of their busy schedules to implore the council to add Chief Jeremy Story's priorities to the official legislative priorities document. After the last citizen spoke, the council moved immediately to vote on the document as written, without the suggested amendments requested no less than a dozen times by their constituents. It passed unanimously. The segue, or lack thereof, appeared even more callous than usual; but this time, the council didn't just dismiss their citizens, but also their stead-fast police chief.

Next week we will dive further into the question of what makes a leader in comparison to politicians and why this citizen is quickly becoming disillusioned by their intersection.

County hosts mental health ‘first aid’ trainings

BROOK STOCKBERGER
Southern New Mexico
Journalism Collaborative

Amid an ongoing mental health crisis among youth nationwide, plenty of parents, caregivers, teachers and others who work with kids are left wondering how they can support the young people in their lives. And local advocates are equipping adults with tools to help by offering free Youth Mental Health First Aid courses in Las Cruces.

In 2017, Doña Ana County Health and Human Services received a $127,875 Nuestro Emociones grant from The Paso del Norte Community Foundation in El Paso. The funds are used to provide mental health first aid classes to help both kids and adults.

The classes, which last about eight hours, are free of charge to members of the public, thanks to the grant.

The sessions are conducted once a month and class sizes have averaged about eight to 10 people. Residents must be at least 18 years of age to participate.

According to Ariana Luna, a mental health awareness educator with the Doña Ana County Health and Human Services Department, the classes teach the public how to identify, understand and respond to signs and symptoms of mental health and substance use challenges.

The children and youth classes often draw teachers, educators and other professionals who work with kids, but they are open to any adult. In fact, one of the participants in the October class was a man who described himself as a grandfather who wants to better relate to his grandchildren and help be on the lookout in case they ever exhibit signs of needing help with their mental health.

Help needed early on in life

According to the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, half of youth suffering from mental health disorders show signs at or before age 14; but just 7.4 percent of youth have had any mental health intervention by that age. The federal government has classified most of southern New Mexico as a mental health provider shortage area, meaning there aren't enough professionals like counselors and psychiatrists to meet the population's needs. Yet childhood is a crucial time to identify and treat mental health conditions, according to experts.

“Early intervention is always best,” psychiatrist Larry Zamora said.

Zamora, who oversees 22 facilities for Las Cruces

Public Schools, and school counselor Melissa White, conducted the county's mental health first aid training in October.

White pointed out, just as with other types of first aid where you don't need to be a doctor, paramedic or other health pro to help, you don't have to be in the mental health field to provide first aid.

“It's about assessing and leading the person and helping the person,” she said. “You don't have to be the therapist.”

While participation has increased since the classes began in 2021, the county hopes to continue to attract more participants. Through 10 months of 2024, the county reports it has seen about 100 people enroll and participate in the mental health first aid training classes for children and youth.

Zamora and White both said that, even though years have passed since schools reopened following the COVID-19 pandemic, many kids are still negatively affected by the experience.

“We haven't been through a pandemic before,” Zamora said. “More students are being evaluated for special education than before.”

White said elementary schools are seeing high numbers of students starting school with a lack of developmental skills. “More kindergarten kids are showing up not potty trained, for example,” she said.

Zamora said before COVID, schools would have one or two students with impulse control disorders, if any.

“After COVID, every school has a handful,” he said.

Learning to recognize a crisis

If you take a mental health first aid class, you’ll be provided with a manual and a workbook. Sessions will include watching multiple videos on a big screen. Via slideshow presentations, your instructors will walk you through a plethora of data about mental health situations and the crisis among youth.

After several ice breakers and a discussion on the strong need for mental health support for youth in southern New Mexico, the instructors began with the message that all adults need to be on the lookout for signs of mental health distress in children and youth.

They then followed up with lists of signs to look for before going into more detail about each one.

These discussions were interspersed with videos of teens talking about real mental health-related situations they experience.

In addition, slideshow presentations and discussions will be used by the instructors to teach important skills like:

- How to recognize the signs of mental health problems with children and youth
- How to tell the difference between “normal” youth moods and an actual mental health crisis

- What steps to take if you recognize a problem or potential problem
- What help is available

Reviewing real-life situations

Expect your instructors and even fellow participants to discuss real-life situations they have faced, talk about what steps were taken, and whether there was a success.

You can expect a lot of questions and interaction.

Sure, this topic could probably be extended out several days, but the instructors pack a lot of information, guidance and hands-on work into an eight-hour training session. Participants were prompted to relate stories and experiences and to ask many questions. And they were given opportunities to get out of their seats and write ideas on posters to compare thoughts and answers.

Multiple participants said they enjoyed the format because it kept them engaged while learning.

Luna, the mental health awareness educator for the county, said attendees fill out surveys about the course afterward. While responses can vary, “for the most part the training is very well received,” she said.

“Usually, the most response we receive about the course is that people find it very helpful especially with learning how to identify signs and symptoms for mental health and substance use challenges,” she said.

While the participation is growing, the classes are reaching a relatively small percentage of adults in the area. In 2023, Doña Ana County’s population totaled about 225,200 with about 22 percent being youth under the age of 18, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

The sessions taking place on weekdays likely exclude many working parents who might be interested in attending.

Sometimes, the county offers classes in Spanish and will partner with other organizations to host sessions, according to Luna.

Funding stems from grant

The mental health first aid sessions are for adults, including everyday members of the public, who wish to assist children and youth. Trainings are usually offered monthly at the Doña Ana Government Center, 845 N. Motel Boulevard.

Registration and further information are available via 575-525-5870 or MHFA@donaanacounty.org.

The Paso del Norte Health Foundation, which funds the classes, reports that it “leads, leverages and invests in initiatives, programs and policies that promote health and prevent disease in the Paso del Norte (Borderland) region.”

The foundation says it wants “to ensure that the people in our binational, tri-state region have the knowledge, resources, support and environment to live happy, healthy and productive lives.”

The same year the foundation awarded Doña Ana County the money, it also provided 83 other Nuestro Emociones grants, worth a total of about $9.1 million, to public and private organizations in southern New Mexico, the El Paso, Texas region and the Juarez, Mexico area.

Theater majors find community, purpose in craft

MIKE COOK
For the Bulletin

Eva Cullen's work as an actor, director, costumer, scenic designer and technical director for New Mexico State University's theater department and the Las Cruces theatre company they cofounded are helping them take the next big step as a theater major: directing a full-length play on the main stage at NMSU.

"You have to be well rounded," said Cullen, 20, a senior at NMSU who has been acting and singing since age 10.

Cullen will direct "that drive through monterey" next February. They are taking an independent study course at NMSU aligned with the play, and their research into the Chicano and feminist movements will contribute to Cullen's vision for the production, they said. Playwright Matthew Paul Olmos wrote the play about his Mexican-American mother's first love experience in 1971 Los Angeles.

Acting in NMSU's 2023 production of "Carmela Full of Wishes" helped Cullen "connect with my culture," they said. And, working with the art and music departments in that show enhanced their appreciation for the importance of collaboration to create successful theatre.

For sophomore Carlos Huereca, it's all about acting.

"This is what I'm meant to do. I love doing theatre," said Huereca, 20, who has been in the cast of every show the theater department has produced for the last two semesters, including playing Big Brother in "Carmela Full of Wishes," Uncle Fester in "The Addams Family" musical and five characters in "Dracula: A Comedy of Terrors."

Huereca, a native of El Paso, won two best-performance awards at a campus celebration last May. He got his first taste of working backstage after becoming a theater major this semester.

"In this major, you have to do everything," Huereca said, remembering his work in the costume shop making the pants he would later wear on stage. "I do want to know more about the technical side."

"Theatre is my favorite thing ever," said senior Athena McPeake, 21, who has been "obsessed" with singing and acting since she was in the fourth grade, growing up in California. "All I wanted to do was perform."

McPeake played the lead in NMSU's recent production of "Mother Courage and Her crew, plus doing extensive research into playwright Bertolt Brecht and the 30 Years' War that is the play's setting, "gave me the confidence to go on with it," she said, "doing this role justice in a way that serves the purpose Brecht had. I have a passion for politics."

McPeake also sang and acted in NMSU's 2023 production of "Godspell." She also performed Shakespeare for the first time in "As You Like It," where Lury, the director, "helped me find my art, my strength and humor," McPeake said. That, in turn, helped her to "navigate the humor and the truth" in "Mother Courage."

The theater department has "fantastic staff," Huereca said. "They care about us. We can talk to them. They are such talented people. This is an educational space. This is for us to grow. I'm grateful to be here."

Huereca enjoyed his dramatic role in "Mother

Children," a challenging dramatic role in the Tony-nominated antiwar play.

"I was so scared when I got cast," she said. "There was so much depth to it. I'd never played a mother."

ARTE course highlights O'Keefe, women artists

BULLETIN REPORT

A course devoted to the work of Georgia O'Keefe and other women artists of New Mexico will begin in January through a partnership between ARTE Lifelong Learning and the Doña Ana Arts Council.

"The Life and Work of Georgia O'Keefe and other Exceptional Women Artists of New Mexico – Indigenous, Spanish Colonial and Angelo – Past and Present," is the full name of the course, consisting of 10 lectures with discussions led by art historian Kathleen Keys. Keys is an ARTE co-founder.

In addition to O'Keefe, the sessions will address women artists in architecture, ceramics, photography, sculpture, fiber and textile arts, fashion design, jewelry design, installation, video and performance art and painting, per the arts council's newsletter. The class will meet at the arts council, 230 S. Water Street in downtown Las Cruces, 1-2:30 p.m. on Mondays from Jan. 13 to March 17.

Information about course fees and registration are available via ARTE cofounder Kathleen Albers, 575-635-1973 and kathleenalbers@arteadventures.com.

Courage" after starring in two comedies; yet his performance in an untitled play that was part of the High Desert Play Development Workshop last spring was his favorite role to date at NMSU.

"I loved that staged reading," he said. "There were a lot of laughs and some heartbreaking moments."

"Every character I play, I try to learn something," Huereca said. Uncle Fester, for example, "was the ugliest (character in 'The Addams Family') on the outside, but so beautiful on the inside. He loves everybody. I should be more loving like that."

Actors "want to be seen, want to be acknowledged," Huereca said, but they are also selfless, "taking on someone else's life. All the characters I've played tell stories."

Like Huereca, McPeake had not done theatre tech until she came to NMSU. She was one of three crew members who helped actors with dozens of costume changes for "Dracula" and was part of the crew for "Carmela Full of Wishes" and NMSU's 2023 production of "Hookman," where props included a full-sized car and snow.

Being an actor – or a crew member – "requires so much dedication, so much time," said McPeake, who, like Cullen and Huereca, is a full-time student. "Most of my friends are in the theater department," she said, and that's where she often spends 12 or more hours a day.

"There's not a lot of time for anything else," said Huereca, who plans to pursue acting – in live theatre or in films – as a career. "I'm going to give it my all," he said. "I want to be a professional actor. I have to live my life that way. I love it."

Cullen's future plans include pursuing a master's degree in directing. The skills they have learned working in theatre, means always having a job.

"I can advertise myself as a carpenter," said Cullen, a Las Cruces native and graduate of Centennial High School. "With a theatre degree, you can literally do anything."

Cullen wants to do more Chicano and LGBTQ+ theatre and "shed some light" on social justice issues, they said, helping "people understand each other. You need to get everyone invested in the show."

"We are all learning actively, learning together, doing things we've never done before," said McPeake. Actors and crew members are there "for each other," she said. "Theatre is so unique in that way."

As the director of "that drive thru monterey," Cullen will be in overall charge of the production, working to "create a community" among the cast and crew, "make us a family, and ... learn from each other. Theater is such a powerful tool," they said. "We need theatre to bring us together."

Kerry Washington stars in "The Six Triple Eight"

Women go to war in Netflix's 'The Six Triple Eight'

celebrity update

BY JAY BOBBIN

Q: Seeing Sophia Bush on "Grey's Anatomy" made me think of the medical series she had after she left "Chicago P.D." What was it called, and when was it on?

A: Star Sophia Bush had a big creative hand in "Good Sam," which had a relatively brief run on CBS from January to May in 2022. She also was a producer of the drama in which she played a heart surgeon who got a big promotion at her hospital when her predecessor — her father, played by Jason Isaacs — was rendered comatose by a shooting. He then recovered and wanted to resume work, making her his boss, something neither was comfortable with.

Sophia Bush

OF GREY'S ANATOMY ON ABC

Wendy Crewson ("Saving Hope") played Bush's mother and Isaacs' ex-wife, who was also on the hospital's staff, often acting as mediator between her arguing relatives. Another notable cast member was Skye P. Marshall, cast as another doctor who was having an affair with Isaacs' character; she's currently back on CBS as Olympia Lawrence in the update of "Matlock," which is being filmed on the same soundstages at Hollywood's Paramount Studios that were used for "Good Sam." Earlier this year, Marshall married fellow actor Edwin Hodge, who also was a "Good Sam" cast regular.

As she continues her recurring role in ABC's "Grey's Anatomy," Bush may be returning to one of her earlier series characters. She, Hilarie Burton Morgan and Danneel Ackles are among the "One Tree Hill" veterans involved in developing a proposed sequel series to that show. Discussions about doing that project haven't been hurt by the popularity of the "Drama Queens" podcast that Bush hosts with Morgan and fellow "One Tree Hill" alum Bethany Joy Lenz.

As the holidays approach, the residents and midwives of Nonnatus House begin the preparations for their favorite festive traditions. With a bad bout of influenza spreading around town and an escaped prisoner both causing tension in the convent, however, it seems harder than ever to muster up that Christmas cheer. A "Call the Midwife" holiday special airs in two parts, this Wednesday, Dec. 25, on PBS. "Lockerbie: A Search For Truth" (Peacock — Jan. 2, Limited Series Premiere)

On December 21, 1988, 259 passengers and crew were killed when Pan Am Flight 103 exploded over Lockerbie 38 minutes after take-off, with a further 11 residents losing their lives as the plane came down over the quiet, Scottish town. In the wake of the disaster and his daughter's death, Dr. Jim Swire (Colin Firth), is nominated spokesperson for the U.K. victims' families, who have united to demand truth and justice. Traveling across continents and political divides, Jim embarks on a relentless journey that completely overturns his trust in the justice system. Based on the true story.

Directors Nick Park and Merlin Crossingham return with a brand new epic adventure. Gromit's concern that Wallace is becoming too dependent on his inventions proves justified, when Wallace invents a "smart" gnome that seems to develop a mind of its own. When it emerges that a vengeful figure from the past might be masterminding things, it falls to Gromit to battle sinister forces and save his master... or Wallace may never be able to invent again!

Nacimientos on display at nativity open house

BULLETIN REPORT

In the heart of Las Cruces' historic Mesquite Historic District, the annual Día de los Reyes nativity open house event will once again invite the public to enjoy a collection of creches, aka nacimientos, from the international collection of Faith Hutson and John Verploegh.

As stated in a news release, "This event coincides with Epiphany, which celebrates the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles as represented by the Magi or Kings. Special prominence is given to the three kings who are the first recorded gift bringers and the origin of many customs including carols, plays, and enjoyment of the traditional pastry called Rosca de Reyes."

The single-day exhibition will take place at the Hutson/Verploegh historic home from noon to 4 p.m. on Jan. 4, 2025. The location is 706 B S. Mesquite Street, on the original El Camino Real de Tierra Adentro National Historic Trail. There is a suggested donation of $5 to support public art in the historic district. Rosca de Reyes as well as cafe de olla will be served, per the release.

High-speed internet to reach students in seven school districts

LEAH ROMERO
Source New Mexico

Nearly 40,000 households in seven rural New Mexico school districts will receive high-speed home internet in coming months, following state grants from the Office of Broadband Access and Expansion's Student Connect program.

The OBAE's Student Connect program falls under the office's Connect New Mexico Fund, which was established in 2021 by the legislature. It designated $70 million in state funds to expand broadband in unserved and underserved areas. Working to connect rural students and educational institutions was one of the intentions behind the creation of the fund.

Mike Curtis, spokesperson for the OBAE, said about $56 million has been awarded through the Connect New Mexico Fund so far, but this recent award came from the subprogram created specifically to help students.

Through the award of $13.5 million two internet service providers and Ohkay Owingeh Pueblo will expand high-speed internet connection to 38,482 households, according to an OBAE news release. This will ensure students and teachers continue to have access to high speed internet outside of the school setting.

The money will go toward building towers, installing fixed wireless service and providing receivers to homes. Projects are expected to be completed by June 30, 2025. According to the news release, students and school staff benefiting from the home access will also receive three years of free internet access.

Awardees include Resound Networks, based out of Pampa, Texas; Oso Internet Solutions from Ramah, New Mexico; and Ohkay Owingeh Pueblo in Rio Arriba County. Connection will be extended to remote areas of Doña Ana, Catron, Cibola, Rio Arriba and Valencia counties, impacting students and teachers in seven school districts:

- Belen Consolidated Schools
- Gadsden Independent School District
- Grants Cibola County Schools
- Hatch Valley Public Schools

- Los Lunas Public Schools
- Ohkay Owingeh Community School
- Quemado Independent School District

The Student Connect program grants became available in October and still has about $11.4 million in grants available for applicants. Other Connect New Mexico Fund grants awarded outside of the connection to school districts include areas in Doña Ana, Valencia, Colfax, Socorro, Grant, Hidalgo, Lincoln, Chaves, Otero, Eddy, Luna, Sierra and San Miguel counties, as well as Picuris, San Ildefonso, Isleta, Laguna and Tesuque pueblos.

City seeks input on S. Solano/El Paseo redevelopment

BULLETIN REPORT

The city of Las Cruces is seeking input from residents in the S. Solano and El Paseo corridors regarding redevelopment plans for those areas.

The surveys are part of two Metropolitan Redevelopment Areas, special designations that allow the city to use public money to stimulate economic growth. The Las Cruces City Council approved the designations for S. Solano/El Paseo and W. Picacho in March 2023.

"We want to hear from you. What projects and programs would be most transformative for the MRA? Please complete a build infrastructure like sidewalks and lights to make the area more attractive for business.

State urges vaccinations for flu, COVID-19 and RSV

AUSTIN FISHER

New Mexico health officials urged residents of the state Monday to get vaccinated for the flu, COVID-19 and RSV as people gather for winter holiday celebrations that can also spread infections.

“Getting vaccinated against these winter viruses is about protecting yourself and safeguarding those around you,” said Department of Health Chief Medical Officer Dr. Miranda Durham in a news release.

“Very high” amounts of COVID-19 were found in samples from New Mexico sewers, according to data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Members of the public are left to rely on sewer data to understand how much COVID-19 is spreading in their communities because public health officials no longer provide individual testing like they did earlier in the pandemic.

New Mexico started testing sewage for COVID-19 in April 2022, and stopped providing easily available, community-wide, free diagnostic testing for COVID-19 at the end of that year, to the dismay of local advocates.

As of Dec. 9, only 12.4% of New Mexicans had received the COVID-19 vaccine updated to fight against the latest variants, according to state health department data. Vaccination rates were even lower among Black and Hispanic New Mexicans, and among people aged 39 and younger.

State health officials are directing people toward an online database of providers offering vaccines and vaccination events, and to a list of public health offices for people, including children, who do not have insurance to get a free vaccine.

New Mexico in March 2023 privatized COVID vaccines and treatments as part of the end of the Biden administration's official response to the pandemic.

Since last fall, COVID has hospitalized six times more people in New Mexico than RSV, or respiratory syncytial virus, and flu combined. Between September 2023 and Dec. 7, the latest health department data available, COVID has sent 436 New Mexicans to the hospital, while influenza has hospitalized 69 and RSV has hospitalized three.

the city to collect and distribute gross receipt taxes to projects in the MRA. A similar designation was used to revitalize Downtown Las Cruces in 2006.

A 2023 report about the area argued that the S. Solano and El Paseo corridor was ideal for an MRA. The report, prepared by a firm contracted by the city, noted the area had low levels of commercial activity, low levels of redevelopment, vacant or underutilized properties, deteriorating buildings and infrastructure, unsafe or unhealthy conditions, high unemployment and low income, and a lack of adequate housing.

The survey can be found on the city's website, LasCruces.gov, or by going to SurveyMonkey.com/r/EPSS-MRA.

Nusenda awards local grants

BULLETIN REPORT

The Nusenda Foundation awarded $700,000 in grants to 72 organizations “creating positive change and fostering economic opportunities” in New Mexico and the El Paso, Texas area through its 2024 Community Rewards program.

Locally, some of the recipients included the Community Action Agency of Southern New Mexico, Jardin de los Niños, the El Paso Community Foundation, Doña Ana County Senior Olympics, Silver City Gospel Mission and El Pasoans Fighting Hunger.

In a news release, the foundation said the community rewards program is funded through transactions by Nusenda Credit Union members, who are able to direct contributions geographically in the focus areas education, health care, environment and wildlife, arts and community service.

Nusenda said the $700,000 awarded this year exceeds the $634,100 distributed among 108 programs in 2023.

“This year's Community Rewards grants reflect Nusenda's ongoing commitment to strengthening the communities we serve,” Nusenda Credit Union CEO Joe Christian stated in the release. “As our membership now extends into West Texas, we are proud to support this region for the first time.”

Nusenda completed an acquisition of Western Heritage Bank in March 2024, extending its branches in Las Cruces, Deming and El Paso.

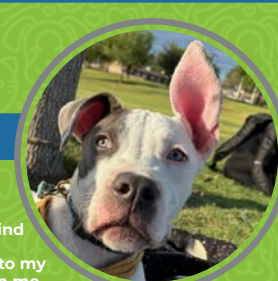

Earlier in December, Christian announced his retirement, to take effect at the end of February. The Albuquerque-based credit union announced that his successor will be Nusenda's executive vice president of operations, Michelle Dearholt, beginning March 1.

Aggies ground Thunderbirds in home game

NMSU ATHLETICS

After coming off a tough road loss against Texas, the Aggies were looking for a positive momentum swing going into a five-game home stand that would start off with a battle against a familiar foe in southern Utah on Dec. 16. Using a balanced scoring attack that featured four Aggies in double-digits, NM State staved off a late SUU run to win 72-69 from the Pan American Center.

NM State opened the game with a purpose as they jumped out to an 11-3 lead thanks to a hot start which included Peter Filipovity, Robert Carpenter and Christian Cook combining to go 4-of-5 from the field across the first 3:40. During the opening stretch, Filipovity hit a pair of jumpers while also coming up with a steal to trigger a fast break which resulted in a dunk for Cook, who logged his first points of the evening.

Through 20 minutes, the two sides were nearly even in every category as both sides hit exactly 13 field goals, and three three-pointers while committing eight turnovers each.

Like the dachshunds that participated in the much-anticipated half-time wiener dog race, NM State sprinted out of the gates in the second half as seven points from Zawdie Jackson and six points from Cook fueled a 15-2 Aggie scoring run across the first four minutes and two seconds of the second half. The run that was capped off by a big and-one for Cook, gave the Aggies a 12-point advantage after trailing by one enter-

Physicality combined with a quicker whistle would slow down the pace across the following four minutes of action as the two sides combined to attempt eight free throws in between the under-16 and under-12 media timeout. The Aggies would still emerge from this stretch with a 54-41 lead.

Unfortunately, this lead would quickly disappear as Southern Utah later generated an 11-0 run to trim the deficit to just one point while forcing an NM

State timeout with 8:27 left to play. Finally, a second-chance layup from Filipovity would end the run as he got his defender in the air to create an uncontested layup opportunity. This put the Aggies ahead by three with just under seven minutes left on the clock. On the following possession, a quick two-handed jam from Jamari Sibley would help the Thunderbirds tie the contest 63-63. With the pressure on, the Aggies turned to consistent scorers, as Cook sank a jumper followed by a tough right-handed finish from none other than Jackson with 18 seconds left. This put the Crimson and White ahead 70-66, a lead they would not relinquish even as the Thunderbirds put in a 3-pointer as the final buzzer sounded.

With the 72-69 win, NM State improves to 5-6 on the season, while taking both contests in the WAC/CUSA Challenge.

The Aggies play Northern New Mexico on Thursday, Dec. 19, at the Pan-Am Center.

Four strategies for lowering your golf score

If you are like most golfers, you want to shoot better scores but you really don't want to radically change your swing, take a lot of lessons or even practice a great deal more. That's OK. Here are four solid, doable strategies you can use immediately so you can get more out of your game.

First, play the hole backwards. Most golfers step to the teeing ground just hoping they hit their drive somewhere in the vicinity of the fairway. I'm saying raise your standards. Decide exactly where you want to play your second shot from and then visualize a tee shot that will land in that area. This is a target-oriented mind-et, rather than "hit-and-hope."

Secondly, play to the fat part of the green. Generally, the center of the green is the easiest target to hit. Considering the size of an average green (about 7000 square feet), a ball played to the center leaves you a putt that may be 30 feet or so, if a hole location is near the perimeter. Many players get mesmerized by looking out toward the green, seeing the flag waving and unthinkingly making that their target. There are hardly any "go-for-it" hole locations for the 20 handicapper. "Play-it-safe" works better.

Thirdly, play your shot with enough club.

CHARLIE BLANCHARD
Golf Doctor

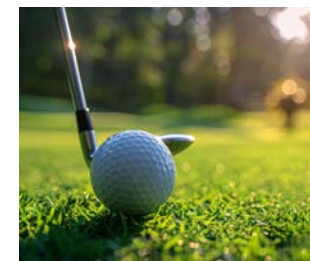

This tip is worth a mother lode of saved strokes. It's rare to see the average recreational golfer miss the green long. Why? He knows a perfectly struck 7 iron will go 155 yards, or so he thinks. The SkyCaddy reads 157. Golfer pulls a 7 iron. He hits it slightly fat and slightly on the toe, to a target that is slightly uphill and slightly into a breeze. Short again; well short. Put your ego on the shelf and take more club. When you start missing long on a regular basis then it might be time to go down a club. Remember, what frequently happens when we take what we think is more-than-enough club, we swing easier and more under control. Here's another little tip: take a few practice sessions to hit shots with every club while actually measuring the average carry distance. That's right: average, and carry, which is the distance you can realistically expect from each of your clubs for an average swing, which is what you need to know. You can boost your results from proper club selection by making sure your rhythm and tempo stay smooth for each club and each swing.

Lastly, play chips and short pitches more like putts. It saddens me when I see a player hit two good shots on a par 4, and see them cancelled by a couple of chunked or bladed chip shot attempts. Unless you're well-practiced in the high Mickelsonesque lob, or the long Tigeresque chip that flies low, skids once and then checks up like a felon hit with a Taser, you are wise to play a simple "bump-and-run" shot every time. Even the putter works out of the short grass or the light rough.

Play the percentages. Don't try a shot you don't have. Here's an example: Let's say you are six yards short of the green, and have 12 yards more to the hole. Take your 7 or 8 iron, take a 1/4 swing, land the ball on the fringe and let it run to the hole. If you're not in thick rough, you can chip it low with a hybrid. The only way you can get confidence with any of those shots is to practice them and find what feels best. You need to avoid the disappointment of turning two or three shots into four or five.
