Lawmakers prepare for 2025 session in Santa Fe

ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
Las Cruces Bulletin

For lawmakers, the new year means preparing for a stay in Santa Fe to pass a budget and conduct other state business.

The 57th New Mexico Legislature will convene for a 60-day session Jan. 21-March 22, 2025, as the nation's only part-time volunteer state legislative branch convenes at the Roundhouse in Santa Fe, with 70 House representatives and 42 senators.

Democrats continue to hold majorities in both chambers as well as the governor's office, with 26 Democrats and 16 Republicans in the House and 26 to 16 in the Senate. Although New Mexico is a three-party state, with the Libertarian Party holding major party status, no Libertarians have been elected to the legislature. Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham, a Democrat elected governor in 2018, is serving her second and final term.

Lawmakers are tasked with passing a budget for fiscal year 2026 and will consider a $10.9 billion spending proposal by the governor, a more than 5 percent increase over last year.

Among those shaping the budget will be Rep. Nathan Small, a former Las Cruces City Council member and Democrat first elected to the House in 2016. Small chairs the House Appropriations and Finance Committee. As of last year, the Senate Finance Committee members included Las Judiciary Committee chair Joe Cervantes, D-Las Cruces, will be in the middle of it all, heading a committee known for painstaking examination and often reshaping legislation.

Las Cruces and Doña Ana County will be represented by several returning members, with Chamberino Democratic Rep. Raymundo Lara serving as the House Democrats' caucus chair once again. A newcomer to the body will be Las Cruces community organizer and consultant, Sarah Silva, a Democrat elected in November to succeed former Rep. Willie Madrid. Modernizing the New Mexico Legislature

Q&A WITH REP. ANGELICA RUBIO

ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
Las Cruces Bulletin

State Rep. Angelica Rubio, a Las Cruces Democrat, has made modernization of New Mexico's unique part-time, unpaid legislature one of her priorities, advancing bills related to legislative salaries, length of sessions, staffing and other reforms each year since she took office in 2017.

She recently spoke with the Las Cruces Bulletin about that work and prospects for the 2025 session.

Q. Could you review the work you've done on this issue thus far? Is it primarily about paying lawmakers, or what else?

AR. I've been introducing versions of (legislative salaries) every year. The last three years, that's been a more concrete piece we came up with as a cohort in the House, to create an independent commission to establish salaries for the first time.

With that came a conversation around whether or not we should change the length of the sessions, as well as staff. When we did a survey of legislators, salaries came in second and staffing came in first. For the first time, last year we were able to add a line item to the budget to include staffing for every legislator. I feel like it's going to be a game changer, at least for constituents.

The salary piece, we will introduce again as a constitutional amendment. It asks voters two things: Do you support repealing the language in the (New Mexico) Constitution that prohibits us from receiving a salary? And the second is creating an independent commission. Debates in the last few years have been about how much we're going to get paid and who's going to make up the commission. That is not part of this legislation; that will come back later when we do enabling legislation if the voters say, yes, we want this commission. It has to get through the Senate and the House, and then it'll go to voters.

Q. What are its prospects this year?

AR. We have had the biggest challenge getting it out of the Senate, that's where the biggest obstacles have been, and it's primarily two specific senators who chair committees that the legislation would have to go to.

We have the support of folks in the house, including Republicans. They may not vote for it publicly, but they know that having salaries for New Mexico legislators would be a game changer. This would open up so many more opportunities for just regular people to be able to step into becoming a legislator. This doesn't solve all of our problems, but it is at least a step closer to what modernizing our legislature looks like. I feel like we still operate in a 1912 sort of mindset; and we have to get to this 2025 level and actually do some more work.

Q. What are some objections you've heard?

AR. I hear from legislators, and this is valid, that they're afraid that we won't have the kind of relationship with constituents that we have now. Constituents can come up to us now, in the grocery store, wherever, and we can have a conversation. The other thing is that legislators don't want to have to do more work. There are a lot of legislators who have just said to me straight up: I want to go to the legislature, pass a budget, which is what we're supposed to do under the Constitution, and go home; I don't want to have to deal with constituents and deal with any of that stuff.

The third thing, which I think is more problematic and what I think is keeping us from passing it, is there are legislators who don't want to serve with regular people. They see this legislature as an aristocratic type of thing, and so let's keep those people out, and elect more people of status because, for whatever reason, they think they're maybe smarter and understand policies better.

They already see how our legislature is changing: We are electing more women. We're electing more women of color. And for some, they don't want to see that. They like the status quo.

Q. What does your legislative staffer do?

AR. Mine is helping me to keep a schedule with stakeholders, things that I wasn't able to really keep on my own or it was getting overwhelming. Research, like helping me prepare for session. There are so many different gaps that I think exist within our legislative work that we don't always get to do because of time. Last week, I had to go to a conference for work and my legislative staffer was able to go to a Las Cruces Public Schools legislative update reception in my place. I see it like a chief of staff, somebody who's covering as much as they can for me.

Q. What proposals about the sessions might we see?

AR. What's been surprising is how little support there is to change how often we meet. I've always imagined two 45-day sessions, like one in the spring and one in the fall, where we introduce all of our bills, come back home, pitch the bills and meet with constituents, and then finish the year passing bills. There's a lot of pushback in terms of how much people want to actually spend time up in Santa Fe. It's hard to leave home for two months at a time, and so I think that's one of those areas that people aren't rushing to get anything done. It's really the governor's power over 30-day sessions that people are really just done with it.

There will be mechanisms that will be used regardless of how long or short sessions are, to slow things down. I feel like the current debate that we have right now with session lengths, is that people just want to get out as quickly as possible and pass as much legislation as possible. We all agree we have way too much ceremonial stuff – let's minimize that. I think there are things we can do by rule, rather than putting it into statute, changing some of the things that are already slowing the process down.

Preserving agriculture in a drier New Mexico

Q&A WITH AGRICULTURE SECRETARY JEFF WITTE

ALGERNON D'AMMASSA
Las Cruces Bulletin

A unique feature of New Mexico government is that the state department of agriculture is housed at New Mexico State University, a land grant institution home to research and education in agricultural science and business development. Jeff Witte, New Mexico's Agriculture secretary since 2011, is headquartered not in Santa Fe or Albuquerque, like other state officials, but in Las Cruces on NMSU's campus. But as he points out, the work under his supervision touches every resident, not only through the extension offices, programs and staff situated in every county, but right on the dinner plate.

Witte spoke with the Las Cruces Bulletin about preparations for the 2025 legislative session.

Q. How extensive is your prep for this 60-day session opening Jan. 21?

JW. You start preparing for a session the moment the last session ends. You start thinking about initiatives you might want to bring forward. You think about your budget preparations. You think about all the things that might happen that you know are unexpected. It's an ongoing process, and you're working with legislators.

The challenging thing, I think, this year is that in any election year you're doing all the preparation work, and you really don't know who's going to be there through the election process until the final votes are tallied. Now that you've got that, it gives you the opportunity to look at who can champion what pieces of legislation and go on from there.

Q. Could you summarize how much the legislature will affect your department and agriculture in New Mexico?

JW. Agriculture touches every community. It touches every citizen every day. I like to remind (lawmakers) that every decision they make either puts food on the plate, or takes food off the plate. In New Mexico and across the nation, in fact, across the world, you've got a, 20 to 30 percent food insecurity rate. So we really need to be paying attention to the policies that impact food production every day. And that's all agriculture is: In a nutshell, agriculture is food production. And so there's a lot of research that goes into that, a lot of education processes. You know, only 1 1/2 to 2 percent of the folks across the the United States are directly involved in production of food, and so it's really it takes quite a lot of energy and time to make sure that others understand that the decisions they make have that impact on what they like to do at least three times a day – which is eat.

Q. Is the number of people working in agriculture in New Mexico diminishing?

JW. New Mexico has been kind of steady over the last 10 to 15 years. The last ag census that came out in 2022 showed a slight decline in the number of people in production agriculture: We went from 24,000 to 20,000. Percentage wise, it's a big decrease. Also, you've got some land that was taken out of agricultural production primarily because of that drop. And we had some programs so that people were able to rest their land or maybe move their water to other higher value crops. And so you lost some land production. But overall, across the United States, New Mexico has been in a little better shape than most states as far as stability of agriculture.

Q. How much will water supply, distribution and related systems be in focus this session?

JW. Water is always a critical issue. New Mexico is a dry state. Our agricultural producers are some of the best in the world because they can take that limited resource and produce food that we all enjoy. But the pressures continue to mount.

Laws lower taxes, ease access to medications in 2025

AUSTIN FISHER
Source New Mexico

The new year will see the start of state laws in New Mexico that will lower personal income taxes and make it easier to get certain medications. One new law will make it harder for some people to get food benefits.

All of the newly enacted laws detailed below took effect on Jan. 1. Here's what you need to know, as organized by the state agency responsible for carrying them out.

Taxation and Revenue Department

The state tax code amended by House Bill 252 earlier this year will reduce the amount of taxes everyone pays, "but especially for those at the low- and middle-income levels," said Charlie Moore, a spokesperson for the Taxation and Revenue Department.

"It is the first major adjustment of brackets since 2005, meaning many taxpayers have moved into higher brackets as their income increased and due to inflation over the years," Moore said.

A married couple filing jointly with $50,000 in income, for example, could save $303 per year, he said. There will now be six brackets, compared to five under the existing structure, with rates ranging from 1.5 percent to 5.9 percent, he said.

Previously, unmarried people who earned between $16,000 and $210,000 per year were in the same bracket and taxed at the same rate of nearly 5 percent of what they made.

Health Care Authority

Companies that deliver maternal and child health care, primary care and mental health care will be able to get reimbursed more money under part of the state government's annual budget approved earlier this year.

Lawmakers set aside more than $28 million for this purpose, and companies will get reimbursed at 150 percent of the rate they normally get from the Health Care Authority through Medicare.

The Health Care Authority is also responsible for overseeing the food benefits program, which will change for some people in the new year.

after the party's vote.)

"We know that crime is going to be a big agenda item this session," Brantley told the Las Cruces Bulletin in an interview, "and we know that because the governor has announced that's a priority of hers. Interestingly enough, one of the biggest advocates for some of these criminal justice reforms has been the new chief of police there in Las Cruces," she said in reference to Las Cruces Police Chief Jeremy Story.

Brantley, a Republican, said public safety and criminal justice solutions cut across party affiliations and offer opportunities to demonstrate bipartisan governance, though she said political posturing frequently interferes with making good law.

"We do have a big opportunity for the southern New Mexico legislators to lead the fight trying to get some of this reform passed," she added.

State Rep. Angelica Rubio, D-Las Cruces, told the Bulletin she would once again propose an amendment to the state constitution to enable lawmakers to earn salaries.

"It asks voters two things: Do you support repealing the language in the Constitution that prohibits us from receiving a salary? And the second is creation of an independent commission (to study potential salaries for lawmakers)," Rubio said in an interview.

First elected in 2016, Rubio said modernization of the state Legislature was a key issue behind her campaign. Last year's budget included, for the first time, a legislative staffer for each lawmaker. Other issues modernization advocates like Rubio have promoted are reforming how often, and for how long, the legislature meets, as well as salaries for legislators.

New Mexico Agriculture secretary Jeff Witte,

the one cabinet-level state official headquartered in Las Cruces, said preparations for this year's session began with the close of last year's: "The moment the last session ends, you start thinking about initiatives you might want to bring forward. You think about your budget preparations. You think about all the things that might happen that you know are expected."

The state Department of Agriculture has historically been based at New Mexico State University, a land grant institution founded in 1888, per the state Constitution. Witte said this arrangement was unique in the U.S.. New Mexico's founders, he said in an interview, sought to head off conflicts between government agencies and schools of agriculture by putting them "all under one umbrella" at the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts (now NMSU). The institution oversees extension programs throughout New Mexico and a broad range of research disciplines under the College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences.

One major policy focus this year, Witte predicted, would be water conservation and implementation of the governor's 50-year water plan.

"The governor has proposed a $10 million fund to help farmers and ranchers address water conservation opportunities while still remaining in production," Witte said. "Our department, if that appropriation comes through, will be administering that fund and then working with the agricultural community and others to look at ... making sure our producers have the capacity to grow food that we need with a more limited resource."

In odd-numbered years, lawmakers meet for 60 days and consider all legislative matters, compared to 30-day sessions in even-numbered years. Legislation passed in both chambers but not acted upon by Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham by April 11 will be effectively "pocket vetoed" and not enacted. Legislation will take effect June 20 unless it is a general appropriation bill, carries an emergency clause, or otherwise specifies a different date of effect.

mental Nutrition Assistance Program, or SNAP, will have to prove that they are working a full-time job, volunteering, interning or going to school to keep receiving them.

The work requirements are limited to those living in Bernalillo, Santa Fe, Eddy and Los Alamos counties, and the Pueblos of San Ildefonso, Pojoaque, Santa Clara and Laguna.

In total, the work requirements will apply to nearly 12,000 New Mexicans.

Superintendent of Insurance

This year, lawmakers changed the Health Care Purchasing Act to curb the use of step therapy, which is the process by which insurance companies, and the pharmacy benefit management companies that handle prescriptions for them, refuse to cover a specific drug until after the patient has tried cheaper alternatives.

The Office of the Superintendent of Insurance, the state's insurance regulator, already had the power to review and appeal a health insurer's denial of a request for an exception to step protocols.

The new law requires insurers to authorize these kinds of drugs for the entire duration of their therapeutic effect, or five years.

The governor came out with her 50-year water plan. It recognizes some research that shows that potentially, there's going to be 25 percent less water available for all of us, not just agriculture. The governor has proposed a $10 million fund to help farmers and ranchers address water conservation opportunities while still remaining in production. And so our department, if that appropriation comes through, will be administering that fund. The bottom line is making sure our producers have the capacity to grow food that we need with a more limited resource. We're not taking away water rights. We're not taking away any of that.

We're a statewide entity. I've got staff all across the state. We touch every consumer, every individual in the state, every day with the stuff that we do, and we always were very mindful of that in every session, we look to build on that capacity and modernize and keep things current best we can.

For more legislative advance coverage, look for the Las Cruces Bulletin's 2025 Southwest New Mexico Legislative Guide, which will be available in time for the Jan. 21 session start.

OBITUARY

NOLAN RUSSEL GRAY

Our beloved Nolan Russell Gray passed peacefully from this life to the next in his home on Dec. 20, 2024, after a valiant battle with cancer.

He was born in Salt Lake City, Utah on Feb. 27, 1943 to Laura Bartlett Gray and Russell Edward Gray. He was raised in Provo, Utah, the first of six siblings. When Nolan was 12 years old, his parents bought a farm west of Provo "to teach the boys how to work."

During his senior year of high school, Nolan joined the National Guard. In June, following graduation he began basic training and then was activated because of the Berlin Crisis and served 13 months in Fort Lewis, Washington. He then attended heavy equipment mechanics school at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, where he graduated with the highest grade point average in the history of the school.

He was a faithful member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and served a 30 month mission in Austria, learning German. After his mission, the love of this language coupled with a love of teaching progressed to teaching missionaries of the church in the Language Training Mission, and earning a Bachelor of Arts degree in German at Brigham Young University.

He married Marsha Rae Cowley in 1966 and had two children, Christine and Michael.

Nolan was the living definition of a hard worker. He was unstoppable and creatively innovative. While living in Aurora, Colorado, he was employed by several companies as a manager/supervisor, and made amazing differences in these companies.

He continued to serve in the church in several capacities, including local missionary work, in bishoprics, priesthood quorums and several teaching positions. When he wasn't currently called in the church to be a teacher, he organized and taught, voluntarily, regular classes on scripture. He became very knowledgeable about all scripture, including the Holy Bible, and focused his teachings on Jesus Christ. He had a passion for teaching from the Book of Mormon, especially about the mighty change of heart that comes through Christ. He loved his Savior.

In the early 1980s, he moved his family to Alamogordo, New Mexico, and worked in the cabinet business. He was active in Sertoma, a service organization. In the beginning of 1988, he began his quest for a teaching certificate. Nolan graduated with a Master of Arts degree in 1989, and taught and worked for the same university, as a manager of the Learning Resource Center and then Technology Manager for NMSU until retiring in 2014.

He met and married the love of his life, Roberta Jean Hefley, in 1990, becoming step-dad to her two children, Stephanie and Steve.

His hobbies included building beautiful custom cabinets and 3D printing. He was generous and kind, giving much to friends, family and others.

He is survived by his wife, Roberta Gray; his children, Christy Olsen (Ryan), Michael Gray, Stephanie Hefley; his grandchildren Cheyenne Hershey (Justin), Logan Olsen (Abree), Luke Olsen, Ronan Gray, Rylan Gray, Monet Gray and Vivian Gray; one great grandchild, Matthew Hershey.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Laura and Russell Gray, and his stepson, Steve Hefley.

Funeral services and viewing will be held at 2915 E. Idaho Ave., Las Cruces, Jan. 4, 9:00 a.m.; viewing at 10:00 a.m.

City breaks transparency laws again

Last March, New Mexico State University, Doña Ana County and the city of Las Cruces were all searching for new leaders.

NMSU conducted a national search, attracting applications from college administrators throughout the country. The finalists were brought to Las Cruces for a rigorous and transparent interview process. When regents were unhappy with the first batch of finalists, instead of settling for someone they didn't really want, they had the courage to start over.

When Valerio Ferme emerged from that process as the university's next president, there were undoubtedly some who would have preferred another candidate. But the process had been fair and thorough.

Doña Ana County also launched a national search to replace former county manager Fernando Macias, who will move over to district attorney after winning his election in November. They also received applications from county administrators throughout the country, and brought the finalists to Las Cruces for a rigorous and transparent interview process. New county manager Scott Andrews was also probably not the first choice of all involved. But the process had been fair and thorough.

The Las Cruces City Council didn't bother with any of that. Unlike the regents and commissioners, council members liked departing city manager Ifo Pili, and were sorry to see him go. So they let him choose his successor, Ikani Taumoepeau, who was the assistant city manager and had worked with Pili in Utah before following him here.

WALT RUBELThe View
From Here

Which would have been fine if the city council had simply gone through the motions of discussing the hire in a public meeting. There's no law that says they have to conduct a nationwide search or even a citywide search. But they do have to take a vote confirming their decision during a public meeting.

A recent investigation by the state Attorney General's Office found that, while the city council approved Taumoepeau's salary in an open meeting, they never formally appointed him to the position.

City officials engaged in what is known as a rolling quorum. That's where council members debate issues behind closed doors and reach a consensus before arriving at the public meeting.

It's a bit ironic that our city council is caught in a rolling quorum again, given that the original state Supreme Court decision outlawing the practice came from a case filed by former Sun-News reporter Steve Ramirez against the city of Las Cruces some 20 years ago. Current council member Bill Mattiace was also involved in that case.

The city also violated the law by selecting its three finalists in a closed meeting, the report found.

Sadly, New Mexico's open meetings law is a toothless deterrent. All the city council has to do is go through the process of selecting and appointing Taumoepeau in an open meeting.

Process doesn't guarantee results. Maybe Taumoepeau was the right person for the job and will go on to serve the city well for the next decade and beyond. But the city council's criminal lack of transparency is alarming.

This was not the only recent violation of open meetings and open records laws. In June the city was ordered by the court to pay $94,945 in fees and penalties for failing to comply with the Inspection of Public Records Act.

This is the kind of thing the city's new oversight committee should look into. Oh, I forgot, it's been disbanded.

Change needed on city council

In reflecting on 2024 for the city of Las Cruces, I am struck by the number of ignominious events that have plagued my small town this year. The number of murders in Las Cruces skyrocketed this year. The fentanyl crisis exploded into our public spaces. Our most prominent hospital was found to be in default of their contract to provide indigent care for vulnerable cancer patients. Burglaries, car thefts and shoplifting events are daily occurrences. The governor's town hall in July on public safety was publicly rebuffed by elected officials. The state Attorney General has found that the city manager was illegally installed. Juveniles are running amok. A police officer was murdered.

Of course, these events have vastly different causalities. But they also have one thing in common: They have occurred as a direct result of the Las Cruces City Council's actions or inactions. But it's not entirely their fault – the progressive movement as a whole had a strong foothold on the national stage. At first glance, their policies appear to be those of compassion and the welfare of all. But once you scratch the surface, it is clear that these ideas only serve to keep the taxpaying, law-abiding citizens down by making them pay for the benefits of those who are unwilling to work or follow the rules. Giving criminals repeated opportunities to reoffend with impunity is not reformation, it's insanity. Encouraging safe (illegal) drug use is not compassion, it's enabling. Vilifying citizens and business owners advocating for a different

Healthy communities require affordable civil legal services

Three out of four low-income households in New Mexico struggle with legal issues impacting basic needs like housing, financial stability, access to social and medical benefits. New Mexico's civil legal service providers handle thousands of cases every year, but a lack of capacity caused them to turn away more than half of the people seeking help last year.

The New Mexico Commission on Access to Justice works with civil legal service providers to ensure equal access to the justice system for the most vulnerable in our communities. We need your help. As the Legislature convenes for the 2025 session, we write to highlight the help needed to make New Mexico more just.

Unlike in criminal cases, there is no right to an attorney in a civil case. This creates substantial barriers and worse outcomes for New Mexicans who struggle to make ends meet and cannot afford an attorney. Without adequate legal assistance, veterans get kicked out of their homes, seniors can't access their medical benefits and young adults fall victim to unfair lending practices.

However, when people have access to civil legal services, it leads to better outcomes.

Civil legal service providers help low-income New Mexicans with free legal advice and services like maintaining affordable housing, protection from consumer fraud and for domestic violence victims, helping to secure safety.

Solutions need to be funded. Legal services providers do their best to meet the skyrocketing need, but don't have stable resources and funding. People needing civil legal services are already in crisis, so it is heartbreaking when providers must turn them away because of unpredictable funding. Nonprofit legal service providers cannot build capacity and maintain their workforce without consistent, reliable funding. With recurring funding, people have more access to help.

To better support and help fund legal aid services in New Mexico, the Legislature enacted laws creating the Civil Legal Services Fund and the Civil Legal Services Commission. The fund is partially financed by civil filing fees. The CLS Commission plays a key role in funding New Mexico's legal service nonprofits, which provide essential legal services in our community like Pegasus Legal Services for Children, New Mexico Legal Aid, the Senior Citizens Law Office and the New Mexico Center on Law and Poverty.

Stabilizing legislative funding will help. This year, the commission is asking for an $860,000 increase in recurring appropriations, making the total budget for the fund $8.1 million in fiscal year 2026. Recurring and predictable funding ensures the stability providers need to build and sustain capacity to provide civil legal assistance. As members of the judiciary and the Access to Justice Commission, we see the positive impact on families and the direct results achieved by the civil legal service providers in our state. The importance of this funding is crucial to every community, large or small, urban or rural, and cannot be overstated.

Legislators have historically shown strong support for these programs by filling funding gaps with junior budget money and special appropriations. While these one-time funds have been very important for avoiding shortfalls in the past, they are not stable sources of funding and create challenges for planning and delivering services year-to-year. To ensure access to justice, the civil legal services system needs predictable funding to build capacity.

Stabilizing the recurring, general fund portion of the CLS program budget ensures that the people who ask for help will receive it.

Justice Shannon Bacon has served on the New Mexico Supreme Court since 2019. District Judge Erin O'Connell was appointed to the 2nd Judicial District civil bench in 2019, and co-chairs both the Second Judicial District Court Pro Bono Committee, and New Mexico Supreme Court's Access to Justice Commission.

approach is not leadership, it's bullying.

What do all of the events of 2024 highlighted above have in common? Our leaders have been afraid to deviate from the progressive ideal of raising up the criminals and the drug addicts at all costs. They have been afraid of listening to others. They are blind in their egos and steadfast in their resolve to build Las Cruces as a beacon of hope for criminals at the cost of the citizens. They have been derelict in their duties and if not outright criminal in their actions, then blindly ignorant to the law and their charter.

The progressive movement had a foothold. As a nation overall, we rebuffed that to a degree in the last election. But New Mexico did not. I am hopeful that the upcoming legislative session, despite all the familiar faces that have been there for years and aided New Mexico in its own destruction, will take up the undeniable mantle of needed change. Next November, I am hopeful that the city council election will yield new faces that are more realistic in their ideals to ensure Las Cruces does not continue toward expensive and unproductive programs to coddle those who refuse to play by the rules of a civilized society. Let us not repeat the ignominy of 2024. Please, Las Cruces.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Open meeting violations a serious failure

Dear editor,

The Las Cruces City Council's failure to follow New Mexico's Open Meetings Act is a failure to do the job for which the council members were elected. There is absolutely no excuse for not following the NM Open Meetings Act to the letter of the law. None whatsoever. It is not that difficult.

The Act is sacrosanct when it comes to public entities such as the city council. Failure to meet the requirements of the NM Open Meetings Act is, in many times, grounds for recall of elected officials. One wonders if this failure by the council members is grounds for recall.

Several of the members have been on the council for several years. One council member served on the council several years back and was elected as the mayor of Las Cruces for several years. So using the excuse that they did not know or understand the NM Open Meetings Act is not acceptable. Lack of knowledge of the Act is not acceptable under the laws of New Mexico and would not hold up in court. It is the absolute duty of the council members to know, understand and implement the NM Open Meeting Act.

Where was the Las Cruces City Attorney of the time,

Linda Samples, while all this gross disregard for the law was going on? Was it not Ms. Samples' job to keep the council out of legal trouble and to educate the council members on the NM Open Meetings Act and how it should be implemented? She was paid well to perform these duties but it appears that she failed to meet her obligations to the city council and the citizens of Las Cruces.

Will the citizens of Las Cruces have to start questioning every decision made by the Las Cruces City Council? It appears so if the citizens want an open and transparent city council.

Advocacy group plans to fight mega farms in New Mexico

JEANETTE DEDIOS
KUNM News

Over the past 20 years, New Mexico has lost half of its family-scale dairy farms to big factory farms. That's according to Food & Water Watch, an advocacy group that argues this increasing reliance on these big farms is harmful to air, land, and water quality. The organization is seeking a moratorium on these operations.

This story was originally published by KUNM it's republished here with permission.

Factory farms are also known as concentrated animal feeding operations with over 500 head of cattle. Manure and wastewater from these animal feeding facilities can create hazardous outdoor air pollution, according to the National Cancer Institute.

Food & Water Watch says New Mexico mega dairies produce enough manure to overflow nine Olympic swimming pools each day. That's 11 times as much sewage produced by the Albuquerque metropolitan area.

The group says frontline communities, who are often low-income or people of color, face the greatest impacts.

Emily Tucker, New Mexico organizer for Food & Water Watch, recalled a time when she and a colleague did a flyover at a factory farm and the smell was intense.

"We could smell them from 6,500 feet in the air," she said. "And that was just really, really eye opening to just how intense the odor around these facilities is."

The industry has touted digesters at these facilities that extract methane, a potent greenhouse gas that they say could be used as a fuel source. But a number of environmental groups have argued this is not a workable climate solution.

Food & Water Watch also wants to change New Mexico's

Clean Transportation Fuel Standard, which passed in the last legislative session and created a statewide "carbon intensity" rating for transportation fuels.

Tucker said that Democrats in the last session championed this bill as a solution to getting clean energy in New Mexico, but it's not practical.

"We really do oppose programs like these," she said. "They are an industry carbon trading scheme that allows polluters to continue to pollute, and doesn't do a whole lot to really hold them accountable."

The group will push a new bill in the upcoming session that would amend the standard.

Support for this coverage comes from the Thornburg Foundation.

Thank You Las Cruces!!

Free spy movie marathon at Branigan Saturday

BULLETIN REPORT

The Las Cruces Public Libraries is beginning 2025 with a free spy movie marathon at Thomas Branigan Memorial Library downtown.

Due to licensing requirements, city news releases often omit the titles of movies screened at the library's frequent Saturday movie events, and instead hint at the titles through clues — which seems fitting for a day of movies involving espionage, cloak-and-dagger capers and covert intrigues.

The news release states the marathon will feature "first movies in ... long-running spy series" beginning with "a 1962 classic starring Sean Connery and is rated PG." That's enough to identify the film as "Dr. No," the action thriller loosely based on the spy novels of Ian Fleming that spawned a movie franchise spanning six decades. Besides Connery, the film elevated Ursula Andress (in the role of Honey Ryder) as a worldwide celebrated and helped popularize bikinis.

At 1 p.m.,

the release says the second movie is "based on a television show and starring Tom Cruise." Easy-peasey: That's "Mission: Impossible," the 1996 movie that was followed by six sequels and a seventh slated for 2025, all with Cruise playing the role of government agent Ethan Hunt (and famously performing many of his own stunts). The franchise takes inspiration from the 1966-73 television series created by Bruce Geller. The film is rated PG-13.

Finally, a third movie scheduled for 3 p.m. "is based on a long-running book series by Robert Ludlum." That's "The Bourne Identity," also PG-13, the 2002 thriller in which Matt Damon plays a CIA assassin suffering from amnesia. It led to four sequels over the next 14 years and is, indeed, based on a trilogy of novels by Robert Ludlum. After the success of the movies, more novels about Jason Bourne were produced by Eric Van Lustbader and Brian Freeman.

The "First Saturday Movie Marathons" will continue, per the library, with a February marathon of "dancing romances" in celebration of Val-

Q: I enjoy seeing Richard Dreyfuss on Turner Classic Movies, which has shown him in "The Goodbye Girl" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" lately. Was he ever in a weekly series?

A: Oscar winner Richard Dreyfuss did quite a bit of TV work early in his career, with guest roles on "Bewitched," "The Big Valley," "That Girl," "The Mod Squad" and "Gunsmoke" among his credits before his movie career really took off with "American Graffiti" in 1973. However, some people may know him for the single line he delivers in the 1967 classic "The Graduate," in reference to Dustin Hoffman's Benjamin Braddock: "Should I call the cops?"

Richard Dreyfuss

OF THE EDUCATION OF MAX BICKFORD ON CBS

Though he did the occasional TV movie afterward — including ABC's "Victory at Entebbe" (1976), HBO's "Lansky" (1999) and a CBS version of "Fail Safe" (2000) — it wasn't until the 2001-02 television year that Dreyfuss became a full-fledged series star. In the CBS drama "The Education of Max Bickford," Dreyfuss played a professor at an all-women's college in Massachusetts where his daughter (portrayed by Katee Sackhoff) was a student. The cast also included Marcia Gay Harden, Regina Taylor, Helen Shaver and David McCallum.

With Dreyfuss also among the show's producers, "The Education of Max Bickford" lasted just one season. While it underwent some changes along the way, particularly with the membership of its creative team, it has a certain place in television history as one of the first series filmed in high definition ... something that has become common for programs since, especially as TV sets have adapted increasingly to that technology.

Dreyfuss later appeared in the mini-series "Tin Man" (2007) and "Coma" (2012). He also was a cast regular in "Your Family or Mine," a 2015 TBS sitcom in which he played the father of the husband (Kyle Howard) in a couple that traveled regularly between their families located on opposite coasts. Kat Foster played the wife, and JoBeth Williams appeared as Dreyfuss's spouse.

'Echoes to be remembered by'

Contemplating my article for this, the very first Bottom Line of 2025, I remembered an article written many years ago. If memory serves me right, it was January 2009 and I was in Santa Fe during the session. Walking from one hotel to another for an event, surrounded by snow on the ground with snow softly coming down, in the quietness of the moment I listened to the echoes of my footsteps on the cobblestone sidewalk. At that time I spoke to the importance of listening to the echoes of those who have gone before us and building on their foundations in our communities.

Remembering that speech, I realized that year after year, we create echoes of our own in so many ways. Taking this quiet personal, I pondered the question, "What are my echoes that future generations will build upon or history will remember and value?"

Both collectively and individually, we have, and will continue to navigate into our new norm. As often when a new year arrives, reflection of the past year always comes to the forefront of our minds. My echoes...my echoes...I hope my echoes will be ones of servant leadership, of inspiration in the darkest of times and of a listening ear. I trust my echoes will give confidence that no matter how dire, how impossible, the situation seems to be, there is always hope. Echoes of the simple power of working together as a team can move mountains and make our community stronger than ever. Echoes our future generations will look back and say those are echoes, those foundations, are ones we can build upon.

Right around the corner is the sixty-day 2025 Legislative Session. The January 9th In the Know Luncheon will be an official "send-off" to our legislators, followed by Las Cruces Day in SF February 1-3. Remember is very important to stay in touch with our legislators regarding various pieces of legislation. They want to hear from you. Grassroots advocacy is a vital key to the passage or not of legislation. The Chamber will be there to actively support business-friendly legislation and be just as active in not support bills which are not friendly to business.

In conclusion we want to thank Michael Law for his exemplary leadership in 2024. It's been an honor and privilege to work side by side with Jason. Under the leadership of Rico Gonzales we are certain 2025 will bring us much success, along with some new programs, activities and initiatives.

EGGS AND CONVERSATION

Debbi Moore, President/CEO, with the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce had a one on one conversation on Friday, December 13, with Sabrina Martin, CEO Rehabilitation Hospital of Southern NM

We toured the College of ACES' food research lab, learning about innovative food production and sustainability approaches. A visit to the sheep pens introduced us to the creative uses of wool, from scarves and graduation stoles to intricate wall tapestries.

Next, we ventured to Seco Spice, where Ed Ogaz and his staff detailed the meticulous process of transforming chiles into flavorful spices that are iconic to our region. Our day concluded at Baked Chicken Farm. Tony Miller introduced us to the cannabis industry, detailing everything from cultivation to product development and highlighting the company's role in economic diversification.

The experiences throughout the day deepened our understanding of how agriculture, history, and innovation converge to shape the economic landscape of Las Cruces, the state, and other parts of the world. It's a reminder of the dedication and ingenuity that drive our community and country forward.

For some faithful, Christmas lands next Tuesday

BULLETIN REPORT

Have a merry Christmas next Tuesday! Wait, what?

Yes, that's right: For some Eastern Orthodox churches, Christmas falls on Dec. 25 – next Tuesday. Wait, what again?

Yes, that's right: While Christmas falls on Dec. 25, exactly when Dec. 25 falls depends on the calendar you are using.

In 2022, Fr. Gabriel Rochelle, retired pastor of St Anthony of the Desert Orthodox Mission in Las Cruces, explained it to Las Cruces Bulletin readers this way:

"Most of the Orthodox Christian world is on the 'old' calendar, which dates from the time of Julius Caesar. Before you snicker, the 'new' calendar was not exactly born yesterday. It dates from 1582 under the aegis of Pope Gregory XIII and is thus called the Gregorian calendar. The two calendars are 13 days apart in calculation, so Dec. 25th on the old calendar is Jan. 7 on our civil calendar.

Theophany (aka Epiphany) falls on Jan. 6, and on Jan. 7 is the Synaxis of the Baptist, a feast day commemorating John the Forerunner.

St. Anthony of the Desert

Orthodox Mission – which celebrated Christmas on Dec. 25 following Vespers and royal hours on Christmas Eve – is located at 8923 S. Main St. in Mesilla Park, south of Las Cruces and Mesilla. Further information including a schedule of services is available at StAnthonyLC.org.

Hourly minimum wage increases with new year

BULLETIN REPORT

Jan. 1, 2025 ushered in a new increase of Las Cruces' minimum wage: from $12.36 to $12.65 per hour.

For workers earning tips, the hourly minimum will rise from $4.95 to $5.06 per hour, according to a news release from the city.

The city's minimum wage ordinance, enacted in 2014 and taking effect in 2015, includes annual increases since 2020 based on the Consumer Price Index, a calculation of changes in what consumers pay for goods and services.

As stated in the release, the city compares its CPI calculation to the state of New Mexico's minimum wage, and then enforces the higher number.

"For 2025, the State minimum wage will again remain at $12," the city announced. "The City of Las Cruces minimum wage will increase, based on the CPI index and the City ordinance which adopts the higher of the State or Las Cruces amount."

Under city ordinance, employers who break the law by paying workers less than the minimum wage are considered a public nuisance. This allows workers to sue employers and, if successful in court, collect lost wages along with interest. They also force the employer to pay the attorney fees.

Crisis Triage Center opens with new operator

BULLETIN REPORT

The county Crisis Triage Center reopened for service on Jan. 1 under a new operator. Tennessee-based Summit Behavioral Health, owner of PEAK Behavioral Health, has assumed responsibility for "immediate and comprehensive care for adults 18 and over who are experiencing mental health or substance use crises," according to a news release from Doña Ana County.

The center has been shuttered for nearly a year since closing on Jan. 31, 2024, when the county parted ways with the previous provider, RI International.

"The CTC will again be available for us, our family and friends when we are having a bad day and need some help, and instead of emergency rooms for more urgent situations," Jamie Michael, the county's Health and Human Services director, stated in the release.

The center is set for operating hours 24 hours a day, seven days per week, all year long, with care available regardless of insurance, the county said, with services including clinical intervention, assessment, medical administration, referrals to higher levels of care and transportation.

The county said it would cover operating costs for the first six months, at a total of $1.4 million, after which the center would be funded through Medicaid reimbursements, the county's general fund and its health care assistance fund.

In September, the county committed to the $1.4 million for the startup phase as well as $2,868,988 in annual support.

Last Saturday, the Aggie men (7-6) played host to the University of the Southwest Mustangs (7-7) at the Pan-Am. Behind a near double-double from Zawdie Jackson (10 points, nine assists), the Aggies took a decisive 85-52 victory in their

Grayson Murray's inner struggles lead to tragic end

This is the most difficult remembrance column I've ever had to write. Troubled by alcohol addiction and struggles with depression, PGA Tour golfer Grayson Murray, 30, took his own life on May 25, 2024. His story is a long, sad and complex one – too involved for this space, so I'll honor his life, both as a person and a gofer, in abbreviated form.

Murray was born on October 1, 1993 in Raleigh, North Carolina. Golf seemed to come easy for him at an early age. He won three straight golf Junior World Championships, from 2006 to 2008, tying Tiger Woods for that record run in the Juniors. After excelling in high school golf, winning both team and individual North Carolina state titles, he started out at Wake Forest, but ended up playing for Arizona State University in 2014. After college, he made enough money on the Web.com tour to secure his PGA Tour card for 2017. On July 23, 2017, he earned his first PGA Tour victory with the Barbasol Championship. On January 14, 2024, Murray gained his second PGA Tour victory by winning the Sony Open in Hawaii.

Grayson Murray was a kind and loving person.

Friends and family recount how Murray found so many ways to help people out who were in need, and helped children out with their golf. But he could not shake addiction and anxiety. In one day he once lost over $400,000 at the gambling tables. In addition to problems with alcohol and depression, Grayson was diagnosed with social anxiety. And he undoubtedly had low self-esteem, despite his level of talent, accomplishments and fame. In the darker days of his bouts with alcohol, gambling and anxiety, he agreed to be admitted to the Betty Ford Clinic, where he spent a month. That was mostly a temporary help but it didn't last. He paid for treatment out of his own pocket.

In early 2024, Murray set a wedding date with his new fiancée. Then, after the Masters, the wedding was called off. His fiancée has declined all interviews. At times he would slip into a funk and sequester himself for two weeks at a time. His mood swings went to extremes. "It's incredibly sad," Rory McIlroy said back in May, "and everyone has to remember out here that we (golfers) go out and we do things that a lot of people can't, but at the end of the day we're still human beings, and we're vulnerable and we're fragile." Murray said he hated life on the PGA Tour.

Murray's last PGA Tour tournament was the Charles Schwab Challenge at the Colonial Golf Club in Ft. Worth, Texas. His friend, tour veteran Martin Flores noted that Murray "seemed upbeat early in the week" when he got to Ft. Worth. He withdrew at five over par with two holes to go in his second round on Friday; he flew home to Palm Beach and never left his home. A day later he was gone.

Professional golf is a difficult and highly individualistic sport that can lead players into a tunnel of loneliness. Lexi Thompson cited loneliness as a reason for her early retirement at age 29. Despite his understanding, intellectually, about keeping up the battle, Murray just couldn't keep going. Murray's parents, Eric and Terry Murray, stated, "We have so many questions that have no answers."

Golf was good to Grayson Murray. A life full of demons wasn't. His gravestone reads "Be Kind To One Another."

The Transformative Power of Healthy Sleep

by Jesus Duran, GM

Did you know that we spend a third of our lives in slumber? Yet not everyone experiences quality sleep—a necessity for our holistic well-being. Investing in healthy sleep can transform your life, enhancing focus, reducing stress, and boosting your immune system.

The key components for achieving restful sleep begin with a mattress designed for your comfort, a fitted pillow that supports your neck, a proper foundation that elevates your head and feet, and protective covers to prolong your mattress's lifespan. These elements work together to create an optimal sleep environment, allowing your body to navigate through the four stages of sleep.

Stage N1 is where your body cools down, transitioning into N2, where breathing, muscle activity, heartbeat and brain waves slow down. The most restorative phase, N3, is deep, slow-wave sleep that facilitates bodily repair. Finally, there's REM sleep, where brain activity increases, enhancing cognitive function. Unfortunately, many find themselves stuck in stages N1 and N2, missing out on essential restorative benefits.

The effects of a quality mattress extend beyond mere comfort; research shows that a supportive sleep system can lead to significant health benefits. This includes better cognitive function, a lower risk of chronic diseases, enhanced immune response, and the promotion of muscle repair. A well-designed mattress, along with supportive pillows and foundations, maximizes the duration of N3 and REM stages.

As you consider your sleep environment, remember that the quality of your mattress can profoundly affect your health. Investing in a new mattress set isn't just a purchase; it's a commitment to prioritizing your well-being. Quality sleep sets the stage for each day, enhancing mood, productivity, and overall quality of life. Don't underestimate the power of a good night's rest—explore the options available at Ashley Furniture and take the first step toward rejuvenating your sleep experience.
