Las Cruces Bulletin

If Alamogordo was Munchkin land, Dorothy and her band of misfits would travel the White Sands and cross the Organ Mountains to get to the Las Cruces Land of Oz. However, instead of encountering bright red poppies...they would come upon a golden spattering of orange and yellow Mexican golden poppies.

The green and brown desert landscape has been dusted once again by the glowing fields of poppies. The Mexican golden poppies, a subspecies of the California poppy, are an annual native species that can be seen in early spring throughout southern New Mexico, west Texas, and southern Arizona. Their presence is determined by precipitation in the spring and winter of the previous year at the right intervals for the seeds to germinate. If conditions aren't ideal, the seeds will remain in the ground until more favorable conditions present themselves for germination. Although they are an annual species, some years are more conducive to higher rates of germination, which is why we see very heavy blooms every few years and much lighter blooms more often. The weather is hard to predict here in the desert. The years of these golden blooms can happen sporadically at the base of the Organs. Some say every ten years, but we have had large blooms as recent as 2020 and a slightly smaller crop rang in with the spring of 2022. This year's bloom is smaller than previous

Contractor fails with timely ambulance service, city and county say

HANNAH GROVER

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

City and county officials are grappling with how to handle ambulance services.

The company American Medical Response leases an ambulance license from Doña Ana County, but officials say the company does not always respond to calls within a timely manner.

"The city is alleging that AMR has consistently failed to meet these response time standards so far throughout the entire life of the agreement," City Attorney Brad Douglas told city councilors and county commissioners during a joint work session last week.

Las Cruces Interim Fire Chief Sean Heck told the Las Cruces Bulletin that the city entered into a contract with AMR in 2024 that included criteria for response time based on the severity of the call. For example, AMR was expected to respond faster to more urgent medical calls.

However, the city and county allege AMR has not been meeting those obligations and this has led to them needing to pick up the slack.

"There are many complexities with response time data, and measuring performance with the data provided by the City has been challenging," an AMR spokesperson said in an email statement in response to inquiries by the Las Cruces Bulletin.

While the city and county allege AMR has not been meeting its contract obligations, AMR's spokesperson said the company has concerns about the accuracy of the response time data. According to AMR, the company has shared those concerns with Las Cruces and is "committed to continuing to work with the City and the County to develop an accurate data set."

Assistant County Manager Stephen Lopez said during the tail end of 2024, the county transported about 225 patients a month due to AMR's alleged inability to meet its response time obligations.

"That is greatly concerning to us, because we lease our license for ambulance service to AMR and we are concerned about the safety and wellbeing of our constituents, and so we are working with the City of Las Cruces to find the best path forward to ensure overall public safety," Lopez said.

AMR disagrees with the assertion that the county has had to transport more than 200 patients each month "simply because of response time delays by AMR," the company spokesperson said in the email.

"It has been our experience that Doña Ana County Fire Rescue transports patients for reasons other than delayed ETA's, such as a direct patient request, without any shared written protocol or guidelines," the spokesperson said. "Doña Ana County has not previously expressed concerns to AMR about either the frequency of ambulance transports or their inability to bill patients for those transports. We have been fully engaged with both the City and County and remain committed to resolving these issues, while continuing to provide high-quality prehospital emergency medical care to the community."

The county cannot bill the health insurance companies for those transports because it leases its license to AMR. This has impacted the county to a tune of $1.4 million. AMR's spokesperson described this as a "solvable issue."

Lopez said that $1.4 million is in addition to the $3 million the county has already paid to cover the contract. He said Doña Ana has not had to cut any services, but it has tapped into its reserves to cover the costs.

Under the contract, Heck said if AMR doesn't meet the response time requirements, the company is required to pay liquidated damages. These are essentially compensation for breach of contract.

During the joint County Commission and City Council meeting last week, Douglas said AMR has incurred $450,000 in liquidated damages in the first quarter, $973,000 in the second quarter and $867,000 in the third quarter.

Heck said the issues Las Cruces is having with AMR's service are "frustrating," but the city has set up measures to address them.

"We have our own ambulances that we've been using for the past five years to address what was initially a very limited use that has just progressed over the years to more and more and more use of our ambulances that are within the fire department," he said.

At the same time, Heck is understanding about the challenges AMR has faced. He said the Ambulance Oversight Committee meets on a quarterly basis.

"We've been talking with them, working with them, just try to see what's going on, if it's going to improve, what steps they're making," he said. "At the end of the day, sometimes, it's personnel issues. Do you have enough people? And it's a struggle across the entire country, having enough workers to do the job."

While Heck understands the challenges organizations face with not having enough staff, he said "we can't allow that to stop performing."

Heck said the city cannot allow AMR to use that as an excuse not to fulfill the duties it committed to when it signed the contract.

"They're working on it, we talk about it, we communicate with it, but we're hitting this point...where it's been a year in and we really haven't seen great improvement," Heck said.

Both the city and county say they have been able to respond to all of the calls for service that have come in.

Heck said in incidents where it is not a pressing medical emergency, the city will wait 21 minutes and, if AMR has not responded, the fire department sends out its ambulance.

Meanwhile, Lopez said Doña Ana County has added additional staff and equipment and is preparing for the possibility that it could need to take over all emergency ambulance service in the future.

Both Heck and Lopez said that people will receive help if they call 9-1-1 and the city and county are committed to responding to those calls in a timely fashion.

"If you have a problem, please, if you have an emergency, please call 911 and someone will be there," Heck said. "We will be there. Las Cruces Fire Department will always have somebody there as soon as we can."

He said Las Cruces has the resources to make sure people who need ambulance service get to the hospital.

Lopez expressed similar commitments to Doña Ana County residents.

"We have been developing plans, we've been developing the resources, and we want to ensure that their safety is priority number one and we are going to work to that end," he said.

City, County: how to spend opioid settlement funds

HANNAH GROVER

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The City of Las Cruces and Doña Ana County are looking at how best to use opioid settlement funding to address drug use in the community.

In the aftermath of the opioid epidemic – when communities nationwide saw increased hospitalizations and deaths due to opioid abuse – states and local governments across the country sued manufacturers, retailers and distributors. This resulted in a multi-billion dollar settlement.

The county and city will receive about $24 million from distributors, manufacturers and retailers of opioid medicines through 2038. Some of that funding will come through one-time payments while other parts of funding will come over the course of a few years to many years.

Already the county has received about $5 million and is expecting a total of approximately $14 million, meanwhile, Las Cruces has received $3.7 million and expects just under $10 million in opioid settlement funds.

The City Council and County Commission heard a presentation about this funding during a joint work session last week. During the meeting, Jamie Michael, director of the county's Health and Human Services Department, provided an overview of the nine areas where the county and city might invest the opioid settlement funds. These nine areas are outlined in the settlement agreement and include overdose reversal drugs such as Naloxone, medication-assisted treatment, pregnancy and postpartum care, neonatal abstinence syndrome, recovery services, treatment of incarcerated people, prevention programs, syringe service programs and data collection or research.

"They can be very broad and we can't fund all nine of them or we wouldn't do a very good job at anything," she said.

Instead of focusing on all nine strategies, an advisory council has four recommended strategies: medication assisted treatment, recovery services, prevention programs and data collection and research.

"We want to use the money to save lives," Michael said. "That's at the core of this investment. We want to use it on things that are evidence-based, so not just a great idea that I had, but really something that has some evidence behind it so the investment is going to have a proven outcome. We want to invest in youth [drug use] prevention so we can kind of stop perpetuating some of the impact that opioids have in our community. We want to focus on racial equity and we also want to be fair and transparent in the process."

During the meeting, Las Cruces Chief Administrative Officer Barbara Bencomo said the advisory council also discussed creating a trust for some of the settlement funds.

"This is essentially what the state has done with their funds where they are setting aside a large portion of the funds and then allocating a portion every year to be expended," she said.

The state received 45 percent of the settlement funds while local governments like Las Cruces and Doña Ana County are splitting the remaining 55 percent.

Bencomo said New Mexico is expected to receive about $310 million and, so far, has received more than $90 million.

By setting some of the funds aside in a trust structure, Bencomo said New Mexico is ensuring there is a "stream of funds that can be spent years into the future once the distributions from the settlements cease."

"One consideration whether to establish a trust is to think about what you want to address now and what is the magnitude of the problem, what is the magnitude of the expenditure that would be necessary to address

Publisher Belinda Mills leaves for new job

SUSAN MORÉE

Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces Bulletin Publisher Belinda Mills is stepping down from her role as leader of the Bulletin to serve news outlets across the state.

Mills, who has been in her current role at the Bulletin since 2023, leaves Friday for her new position as chief executive officer for New Mexico Press Association, New Mexico Press Foundation and the New Mexico Press Service. She will lead efforts to work on behalf of all news outlets across New Mexico.

The New Mexico Press Association said in a statement that the board conducted a rigorous search process, interviewed national and local candidates, and found a great fit with Mills. She will start in her new role at the end of March.

BELINDA MILLS

Mills said she appreciates the opportunity to work with the family-owned Bulletin and she is grateful to the Osteen family for bringing her back to New Mexico and giving her the chance to effect change in the local news landscape in Las Cruces. Prior to the Bulletin, Mills was publisher of a newspaper in Arizona.

Mills changed the mission of the Bulletin during her tenure at the weekly.

"The Bulletin had always been a 'good news' newspaper, which is great, but I identified some news gaps in this community and felt it was an important time for change. Therefore, I changed the mission of the Bulletin, not only to bring all the great things in this community to light but also to be the watchdog that local journalists are supposed to be," Mills said.

Mills said the first thing she intends to do in her new role is to undertake a listening tour around the state to meet with newspapers and obtain a better understanding of individual needs and how the association can best assist years, but nonetheless a lovely and unique sighting in the hard, brown desert.

Although the Mexican golden poppy is considered less toxic than other poppy species, it can be dangerous if ingested. While belonging to the same family as the opium poppy, the Mexican golden poppy does not contain opium and is not used for recreational purposes. However, the plant does contain toxic compounds, especially the seeds, so the entire plant should be handled with care, particularly around children.

As the golden blanket of flora attracts many locals for rare photo opportunities, some worry that the increased foot traffic will kill the flowers and prevent them from returning. With the sheer number of poppies in bloom, that probably won't be an issue, but stepping on live plants can certainly damage the seeds that would normally fall into the ground to await the next prime opportunity for germination.

These flowers will likely fade away in late March and early April. Enjoy this very special golden hour, for as Robert Frost reminds us, "Nothing Gold Can Stay."

To experience this golden dusting of the landscape, the poppies can be found off Baylor Canyon Road between Dripping Springs and Highway 70, or from Aguirre Springs Road.

Car Owners Beware

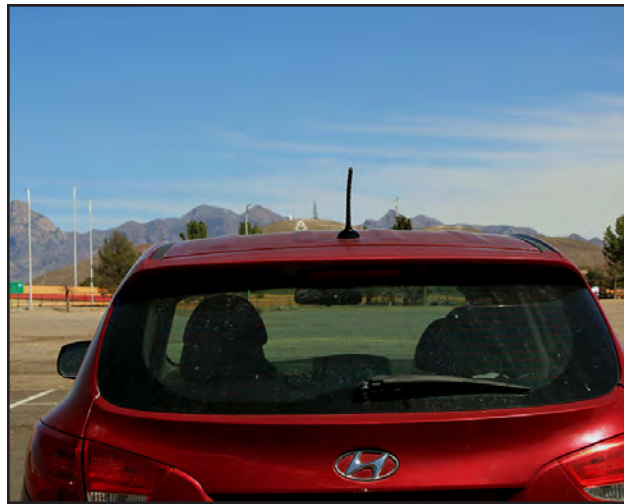

JEWEL DOMINGUEZ

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces Police Department is urging Kia and Hyundai owners to install anti-theft protections because of an uptick in stolen cars.

The police department first noticed the uptick in thefts when 49 of the cars were stolen in 2023 and 108 of the vehicles in 2024. The police recommend owners of those two makes to install the latest software updates for their cars to protect their vehicles against targeting of multiple models made from 2011 to 2022 vulnerable to theft.

The design flaw was discovered in 2021 when other states began reporting high theft rates in the specific models. The Highway Loss Data Institute first alerted the public in December 2021 of increased theft frequency. January through June 2022 specifically saw a 69 percent increase in thefts of Kia and Hyundai models over other brands. Since then, HLDI has monitored a steady increase in thefts over the last four years.

"We've noticed the city has had a similar trend of increase. We mainly see the young generation doing this," said LCPD spokesperson Dan Trujillo.

The update includes an anti-theft engine immobilizer. This security system prevents the engine from starting when it cannot identify the car's key fob. The remote sends a specific code to the immobilizer, which verifies that the correct key is in the car to start it.

Hyundai, Kia's parent company, claims all models from the last decade are federally anti-theft compliant, according to an official email from Hyundai obtained by a News10 Consumer Alert report in New York. When asked about the absence of the security feature before 2023, the company states engine immobilizers are an industry standard, but the federal government does not require them. After the rise in stolen vehicles, Hyundai faced intense backlash, and a class action lawsuit was settled for $200 million after alleging that the models with the design flaw were more susceptible to theft.

"We call these crimes of opportunity. These are crimes that are easy to commit because of easy access to the target, making people more willing to act out. This is why we want people to update their cars and always remind people to lock their cars and take their belongings with them," said Trujillo.

The Highway Loss Data Institute claims after installing the update an estimate of 64 percent of Kia and Hyundai thefts have decreased. However, vandalism due to botched robbery attempts has increased.

The threat of theft is still high for Kia and Hyundai owners. The key fob needs to be used for the engine immobilizer to activate. Using the lock button in or on the door handle does not activate the immobilizer and Hyundai is offering free steering wheel locks to key-to-start models.

LCPD is also offering free steering wheel locks on a first-come, first-serve basis for residents from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekdays at the Las Cruces Police Department, 217 E. Picacho Ave. Trujillo says owners should also consider a sound alarm or a kill switch to protect against theft.

Kill switches are hidden in a car and cause a circuit interruption that does not allow the vehicle to turn off unless the switch is off.

"If you want to ensure your car is safe, get a steering wheel lock or install a kill switch and make sure your car is updated with recent security systems. Unfortunately, the numbers aren't increasing rapidly, but they are steady," said Trujillo.

New Hyundai and Kia models now have a sticker indicating the car has an engine immobilizer.

For more information, check the owner's manual. Affected customers can contact Hyundai at 1-800-633-5151 or Kia at 1-800-333-4542.

Bataan Memorial Death March Honors World War II Heroes

CHERYL FALLSTEAD
For Desert Exposure

The 36th Annual Bataan Memorial Death March returns to White Sands Missile Range on Saturday, March 22, 2025. The base will host about 5,000 marchers, both military and civilian, who will take on one of the most difficult marathons around. Some participate to challenge themselves mentally and physically, while others come as a pilgrimage to remember those — perhaps a family member — who suffered or died on the Philippine peninsula of Bataan during World War II.

Last year, marchers came from all 50 states and 10 foreign countries. About half of those participating are in the military, and some are wounded warriors, pushing through the course on prosthetic legs or with other injuries sustained while serving in the military.

The Bataan Memorial Death March has two routes: the full 26.2-mile marathon and the 14.1-mile honorary course, a bit longer than the standard half-marathon distance. A dreaded part of the course is the sand pit, a long section of loose sand that makes going even harder.

One year, a wounded warrior marching through the sand pit on a prosthetic leg replied to a comment about how hard it must be for him by saying, “This is nothing compared to what they went through on Bataan.”

What the American and Philippine soldiers went through on Bataan is hard to imagine. About 75,000 were ordered to surrender to the Japanese after the months-long Battle of Bataan, during which they had minimal food, medical supplies, and ammunition. The soldiers were undernourished, and many were suffering from tropical illnesses like malaria. From the peninsula’s southern point, they were forced to march from 65 to 80 miles in brutal tropical heat and humidity with rare opportunities to have food or water. Many of these prisoners of war were beaten and bayoneted, and those who fell behind were often executed.

After reaching the POW camp, they were forced to work in farm fields or road construction, and many were sent to Japan or Manchuria in “hell ships” to serve as slave labor in factories and mines. About 10,000 men died on the march, on hell ships, in captivity, or soon thereafter.

Mexico knew someone who didn’t. That helps explain why New Mexicans remember Bataan.

Today, the “battling bastards of Bataan” are honored by those who participate in the Bataan Memorial Death March. The New Mexico State University ROTC launched the march in 1989 with about 100 participants. In 1992, White Sands Missile Range and the New Mexico National Guard became sponsors, and the event, once conducted over Baylor Pass, moved to the missile range.

In years past, survivors of the Bataan Death March attended the event at WSMR. They gave inspirational talks about their experiences during World War II, were honored during the opening and closing ceremonies, and congratulated marchers at the start and finish lines.

Today, their memories are kept alive through the Faces of Bataan project coordinated by Remember Bataan Foundation of Las Cruces. For $45, which just covers the cost, descendants or other loved ones can purchase banners featuring photographs of those who fought at Bataan.

Participants will march past the banners on the full marathon and honorary courses. They’ll be further divided into multiple categories. Under the main civilian and military divisions, participants compete individually or in teams of five, who march in either heavy or light categories. Going heavy is the ultimate challenge. Heavy marchers carry a rucksack weighing 35 pounds, often bags of beans, rice, or dog food that are donated to a food bank after the race.

Some people run the course, seeking to rank among the earliest finishers, while others plan only to complete the challenge and cross the finish line. The last to finish, sometimes in the dark, are often wounded warriors who persevered despite the difficulty of the terrain combined with the altitude. Since the pandemic, people can also march virtually, selecting a route wherever they live.

Registration for the 2025 Bataan Memorial Death March closed on March 3. Those who missed this year’s opportunity can plan to register early for 2026, with the best registration rates offered between October 1 and November 30.

Packet pickup this year takes place at White Sands Missile Range on Thursday, March 20, and Friday, March 21, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Las Cruces teen faces federal charges

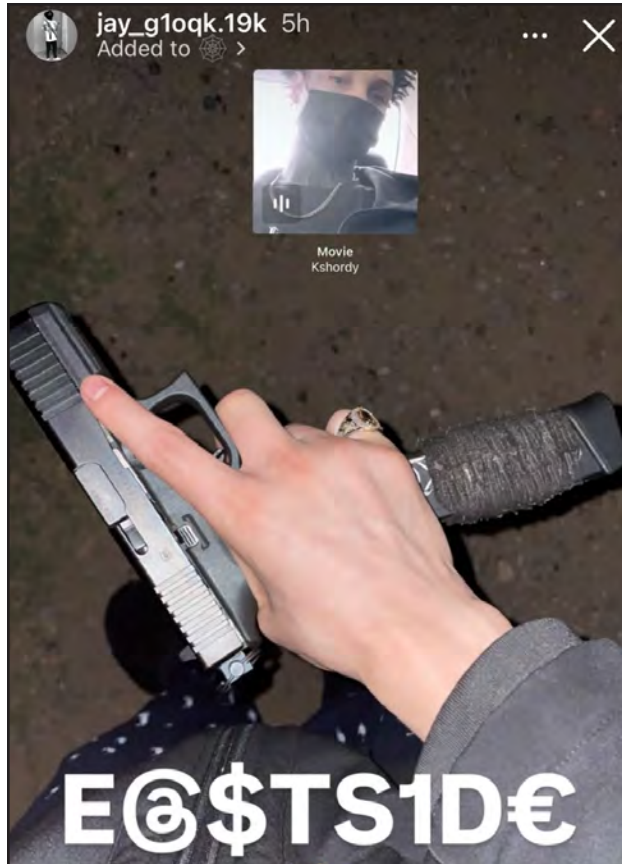

BULLETIN REPORT

A Las Cruces teen faces federal charges for possessing a machine gun and a stolen firearm.

Jonathan Daniel Martinez, 18, is currently in custody pending trial, which has not yet been set.

Las Cruces police and the FBI's Safe Streets Gang Task Force became aware of Martinez posting photos of illegal weapons on a social media platform and depicting himself as a member of the "East Side Locos" gang in August 2024, according to court documents. Martinez allegedly held a black handgun with the serial number visible in the photo. The gun's owner reported the firearm stolen to the Las Cruces Police Department in April 2024.

The handgun also had an aftermarket attachment, known as a machine gun conversion device or "Glock switch," according to court documents. The device enables the gun user to convert the firearm into a fully automatic weapon. A person presumed to be Martinez posted a video that appeared to show the teen shooting a fully automatic handgun out of a window of a moving vehicle, according to court documents. Additional social media posts from the same account showed several firearms, including two Glock handguns with fully automatic switches on the trunk of a car.

Authorities obtained a search warrant and, after conducting a search of Martinez's home, report that they found the stolen weapon and arrested him. The Glock Switch qualifies the firearm as a machine gun under federal law.

the problem in your community," she said.

She provided a couple of scenarios including investing all of the funds into a trust and spending $540,000 of the money from that trust annually for ten years or placing half into trust and using the other half for up-front investments in addressing addiction.

"Over time, trusts tend to grow. That's the purpose of establishing a trust, to have a source of funds into the future," Bencomo said.

Even if the county and city choose not to go with a trust, they will continue receiving funds over a period of 17 years through the settlement.

Michael said the next steps include determining the role of each local government. Additionally, she said another future step is "looking at some specific activities and programs and what associated outcome measures we want for the initial funding."

Michael said another step is to develop a scope of work and determine the process for distributing the money, monitoring the investment and reporting back.

"We want to, throughout this process, make sure we're seeking approval from both the [city] council and the [county] commission," she said.

Doña Ana District Attorney Fernando Macias announced on Thursday that a man charged with two separate shooting incidents in 2024 has been detained.

Alex Cuellar has been charged with allegedly shooting at a dwelling and shooting at or from a motor vehicle. The DA's office says that the first incident took place once on June 9, 2024, the other on October 22, 2024.

Judge Douglas R. Driggers presided over Cuellar's hearing last Thursday. The judge ordered that Cuellar be held with no bond pending trial for both cases. Cuellar is alleged to have indiscriminately fired multiple rounds into a house without regard for the safety of others.

"We presented clear and convincing evidence that no release conditions would reasonably protect the safety of any person of the community," Macias said through a press release.

The arrest warrants for Cuellar were served on March 10, 2025.

"The investigation uncovered that at least one of the shootings – where a residence was struck with over 40 rounds of gunfire – was reportedly carried out as an act of retaliation for the shooting of a fellow gang member," said Chief Deputy District Attorney Melissa Garcia through the release.

According to the DA's office, Judge Douglas Driggers ordered Cuellar to be held with no bond pending trial for both cases.

The cause of the fire is under investigation. Investigators have not yet provided damage estimates.

NM fish farmers finding success

ROZ BROWN
For New Mexico News Connection

New Mexico may never be a leader in aquaculture but some fish farmers are finding success in the arid state.

Rossana Sallenave, professor and extension aquatic ecology specialist at New Mexico State University, said the U.S. is among the top five consumers of fish and shellfish. She believes aquaponics, used to raise large quantities of fish and plants in relatively small volumes of water, is highly suited to promoting sustainable agriculture.

"I think the future here in New Mexico is recirculating systems," Sallenave explained. "Because we are running out of water and that's the area of aquaculture that is really gaining some traction here in New Mexico, particularly aquaponics."

Sallenave pointed out New Mexico's unique environmental and biological resources include 15 billion acre-feet of saline water. She noted it cannot be used for traditional agriculture or for drinking water but could be used for aquaculture. Global demand for seafood is projected to increase by 70% in the next 30 years and experts believe a dramatic increase in aquaculture could help supply food needs.

According to Sallenave, aquaculture, like most farming enterprises, is highly risky because many variables must be controlled over a long period to produce a marketable crop. If control is not maintained, a crop can be lost, resulting in substantial financial losses. But she emphasized it can be a viable enterprise for those willing to educate themselves, keep abreast of new technologies and apply what others have learned. And compared to traditional agriculture, aquaponics requires significantly less fresh water.

"You can grow protein and you can grow plants in a small recirculating system which needs very little water," Sallenave outlined. "Just topping off a little bit weekly to replace evaporative losses."

Sallenave added the site selected for an aquaculture enterprise, which must meet the biological criteria for the species proposed, has a significant effect on an operation's viability. One New Mexico success story is AmeriCulture near Animas, which started producing Nile tilapia commercially more than a decade ago using geothermally heated greenhouses in pure well water from a desert aquifer.

Shaylee Wescott wins contest

JUAN CORRAL
Las Cruces Bulletin

Shaylee Wescott, a freshman from Mayfield High School, took home first place for a short-story contest last week.

Wescott received a $300 cash prize for her winning entry. Bradley Walz won second place and received a $200 cash prize. Walz is also a freshman at Mayfield High School. Kristen Court won third place and a $100 cash prize. Court attends Organ Mountain High School and is currently a junior.

The competition was held by the General Federation of Women's Club of Las Cruces at the WIA building adjacent to Pioneer Women's Park last week. The non-profit club fundraises money for community events and organizations, but the group focused this event on the students.

Wescott wrote a nail-biting fantasy piece focused on siblings and the reincarnation of a phoenix.

"My story was actually for an assignment, but my creative writing teacher read it and thought it was so good she wanted me to enter it in a competition," Wescott said.

"I have been writing on and off for a while so, I wanted to see what I was capable of by entering," Wescott said.

She has always loved to write and that much of her influence comes from her older siblings. Wescott added that she loves to express herself through her writing.

"I think I'd love to be a teacher, I really enjoy literature, and I would hope that I could be an English teacher. But I love to dabble in everything, so I try to do a little of everything. I just must see what comes after this," Wescott said.

Court wrote a heart-pounding piece on a small family dealing with the trauma of a life threatening virus.

"I didn't receive the contest email until much later, so I only had a short time to do it. So, for me it was, go, go, go, I was nervous. The actual story had to be under 2,000 words and written within a certain period," Court said.

She would love to enter another contest. Court loves to write fantasy pieces and said although she is young, she hopes to travel a lot while she sticks to writing.

Walz wrote a compelling short story on two young men exploring the wilderness and accidentally killing a bear that was terrorizing and killing hikers. He was not present at the event.

Joe Wright, a ninth grade English teacher at Mayfield High School said creative writing enables the students to stretch themselves creatively.

"English class lets kids explore their creative side and they get a lot of emotional support out of their writing. To get more students to do that, express themselves on paper, it's priceless," Wright said.

ment last week. Garcia, 20, is also under investigation for drug trafficking allegations, according to the U.S. Attorney's Office.

According to a press release from the U.S. Attorney's Office, Garcia was already under investigation for an alleged involvement in a violent crime and drug trafficking in early 2023. Law enforcement attempted to stop Garcia's vehicle on February 15, 2024, according to the release. Garcia allegedly fled recklessly and after a pursuit, police detained him at his residence.

Investigators report that they found an AR-15 style rifle, ammunition and a 60-round drum magazine, approximately 787 grams of suspected marijuana and $2,244 in cash. According to the release, Garcia allegedly admitted his ownership of the rifle and drugs and stated that he was prepared to fire when he first encountered police.

After his release from prison, Garcia will be subject to three years of supervised release.

Assistant United States Attorney Maria Y. Armijo prosecuted the case.

Get involved in your neighborhood! (Part 1)

I get it, we are all busy. Between work, kids, baseball games, groceries, school, gas and other daily tasks, there is little time for much else. I leave for work in the dark and oftentimes come home in the dark. My kids have been picked up from daycare and lamented how late I was more times than I'd like to admit. Attending block parties to get to know the neighbors is not high on the list of priorities. Most people nowadays don't really know their neighbors. Gone are the days of borrowing a cup of sugar.

But we all need to take a more invested approach in our communities. This article is written in collaboration with two beautiful ladies who have taken up the call to organize their neighborhoods to keep an eye on each other and form micro-communities within the city. These neighborhood watch groups have historically lessened crime, brought neighbors together, and provided a forum where like-minded folks can discuss critical city, county or state legislation that affects our daily lives.

There are no costs associated with starting a neighborhood watch. It just takes a few concerned residents to organize and spear-head the effort. Participants learn how to make their homes more secure, watch out for each other and their neighborhood, and report any suspicious activities to the Las Cruces Police Department. You can form a neighborhood watch group around any geographical unit, such as a few blocks, an apartment complex or a business area. It is important to note that watch groups are not vigilantes. They are the "extra eyes and ears" for reporting crimes and helping neighbors.

Neighborhood watch is one of the most effective and least expensive ways to prevent crime in our community. It forges bonds among neighborhood residents, builds pride, and improves relations between law enforcement and the community. It can also help to address other neighborhood issues such as child safety, youth development, senior citizen welfare and overall quality of life.

So, if you reside within the city limits and are interested in setting up a neighborhood watch program in your community, you can reach out to mvswatch@yahoo.com. The group can help with sample flyers, a list of captain duties, meeting agenda ideas, and other information to get your watch started. This no longer has to be an effort you undertake all alone – there are others who are willing to help get your group started in the best ways and provide support long after your group is successful. Together we can make a difference and make our neighborhoods safer!

Next week we will discuss the critical role LCPD has in collaborating with and supporting neighborhood watch groups.

Family leave act falls short again

Should business owners have a legal obligation to support employees who have just had a baby or are going through other life-changing situations?

It's a question the New Mexico Legislature has not yet been able to give the answer of yes. Legislation requiring employers to provide paid family medical leave passed the House for the first time this year, but stalled in the Senate Finance Committee. By the time it arrived there, the bill had been so watered down in order to get it through the House that even its supporters were no longer enthusiastic about its passage.

The version of the bill defeated in the Senate would have required mandatory contributions of 0.15 percent to 0.2 percent from both employees and employers. That would have meant single workers without children would be forced to subsidize their co-workers, as well as a new burden for employers who are already dealing with higher minimum wages and the impact of a much longer shutdown during the COVID-19 epidemic than businesses in surrounding states.

The bill would not only have benefitted new parents, but paid leave could have also been used for medical care, bereavement, military service or personal safety purposes. For small businesses, it would have meant increased costs and additional uncertainty as to the availability of their workforce.

The bill also would have also included a $9,000 payment to new parents, which would have been funded by the state. I suspect there was a lot more support for that part of the legislation. Because of the windfall from oil and gas revenue, the state budget has increased significantly each year for the past several years, setting a new re-

Trump’s Tariff War Should Be Stopped

President Trump is destroying the United States economy. It is as simple as that.

President Trump has started a needless and costly tariff war with Canada, China, Mexico, and the EU. He has based the tariff war on the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA), the National Emergencies Act (NEA), and Section 604 of the Trade Act of 1974. These acts basically give Trump free rein to destroy the economy of this country.

But, the United States Congress, based on the very same acts, has the power to stop Trump from waging this tariff war. Specifically, under the NEA, Congress may terminate a national emergency through a joint resolution. The resolution would be sent to the appropriate Senate and House committees. The committees have 15 days to act on the resolution and forward the resolution to the Senate or House for a full vote, which must happen within one day by the House and Senate.

Representative Gregory Weeks (D-N.Y.) and Democratic colleagues filed a privileged resolution that would, following the rules laid out in the Acts, terminate the national emergency that Trump has declared. The House Republicans basically put a stop to the Democrat resolution by cleverly slipping language into the stopgap funding bill that prevents any member of Congress from filing a resolution terminating Trump’s declaration of a national emergency over fentanyl and undocumented immigrants entering the United States. Trump is using this emergency declaration as rationale for the tariff war. The spineless Republicans voted to declare that the remainder days of 2025 do not qualify as calendar days exempting Trump’s national emergency from coming up for a vote, which is allowed by law.

United States citizens are paying a very heavy economic price for this senseless tariff war and the Republican’s cowardly inability to stand up to Trump.

FAMILY LEAVE

cord with each new session of the Legislature.

The state may be in a position financially to absorb those new costs, at least for now. But, I’m not sure the same is true for its business owners. The National Federation of Independent Business claims that 89 percent of small business owners in New Mexico oppose the bill.

“It will literally kill our business,” Rita Chaparro, owner of Rope’s Western and Casual Wear in Clayton, N.M., told the Albuquerque Journal. In fact, her store has only two employees and would not be impacted by the bill. But, her response to another government mandate was not illogical.

New Mexico is a tough place to do business. A CNBC study looking at 128 different metrics ranked New Mexico as the 43rd most business-friendly state in the nation. Texas is ranked third and Arizona is 12th. And so, it’s not surprising that the median family income in both of those neighboring states is more than $10,00 higher than it is here.

To be clear, I think our nation has its work-life balance off kilter. We value a nose-to-the-grindstone work ethic far more than we do loving, caring parents. And, that shows in where we invest our money.

The federal government spent $25.3 billion on child-care programs in fiscal year 2024, according to the National Conference on State Legislatures. The defense budget for that fiscal year was $849.8 billion.

And so, I appreciate what the Legislature is trying to accomplish. But, it has yet to find a formula that won’t put New Mexico businesses at an even greater competitive disadvantage.

Private equity threatens elderly

In New Mexico, manufactured home communities are a vital but often overlooked part of our affordable housing landscape. These communities are especially important for seniors and solo agers, offering a roof over our heads and a strong sense of community, security and independence. We buy our homes for affordability and community and often expect them to be our last major purchase and final move.

However, these communities face a growing issue: the increasing number of landowners who live out of state and are based upon private equity/large corporations finding these communities a lucrative investment for their goals. Sadly, these out-of-town owners really are often only interested in collecting the rents! The residents are left without recourse when the land is sold, and rents are raised or when communities are neglected by investment decisions to defer maintenance.

I purchased my home six years ago not fully aware of this land-lease ownership. For now, I feel secure but perhaps the future is less bright down the road. A community in Alamogordo suffered for six months without natural gas before the California land investor made the necessary repairs. They are now told to expect a significant rent increase. An Albuquerque community has been suffering unconscionable rent increases by a Florida investor. Elders are living in fear with the question what will run out first--my life savings or my life!

This is why we need

House Bill 426. This bill would allow homeowners to purchase their community land (or assign the right to a nonprofit) when the landowner decides to sell.

It is a simple, fair solution that would help preserve affordable housing for thousands of New Mexicans, provide security to families who have made their homes in these communities, and ensure that landowners receive the best possible price when selling.

House Bill 426 keeps communities intact and protects the people who have invested in their homes. May I encourage all to support House Bill 426--it is a commonsense solution that will benefit us all.

U.S. security under threat

The recent buyout programs and forced termination of federal employees, contractors, and probationary employees is a threat to the security of this nation. Some of these employees are engaged in the modernization, development and testing of weapons systems critical to the defense of this nation. In New Mexico alone there are many organizations which are involved in these, i., e., Los Alamos National Labs, Kirkland Air Force Base, White Sands Missile Range, Holloman Air Force Base, Fort Bliss and NASA to name a few. If employees who are working on these advanced programs, who have the knowledge, experience, training, and intellect, are gone, those jobs will not be replaced. This equates to the destruction of our ability to defend our security as well as our allies. Examples are the development of robots, drones, nuclear weapons, weapons development and modification and intelligence projects to name a few. Just as Paul Revere sent out the cry that the British are coming, we need to send out a cry that Elon Musk is coming. With all the confusion now confronting these many edicts regarding work forces that keep this nation in turmoil, a tragedy is taking place right before us, and it doesn’t appear that we will have a Don Quixote to save us. Where are our elected officials to challenge these outrageous edicts? Who will stop this destruction to our democracy? What will be the legacy to the citizens of this great nation? Somebody must come forward, to save us. G-ds grace is badly needed. And we must all speak up and become involved if this nation is to survive.

HER story

THE LAS CRUCES Bulletin

Author Jennifer Cervantes draws inspiration from New Mexico

BY MIKE COOK

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

It all started with a story Jennifer Cervantes wrote for her youngest daughter, which evolved into the novel "Tortilla Sun," published in 2010.

Today, Cervantes is a New York Times best-selling author with 13 young adult, middle grade and adult novels to her credit. Her work has also been featured in the anthologies "The Haunted Carnival and other Calamities" and "Reclaim the Stars: 17 Tales Across Realms and Space."

She now has a second book coming out for adults, "Anatomy of Magic," due out in mid-March. There will be book signings, book festivals and book sellers' association conferences to follow.

Cervantes' books are available in the United States and 14 other countries and have appeared on national book lists like Barnes & Noble's Best Young Reader Books, Apple Books of the Month, the American Booksellers Association and Amazon.

Cervantes has won the New Mexico Book Award and the Zia Book Award. In 2023, she received the New Mexico Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts and was recognized as a New Mexico State University College of Arts and Sciences "star of arts and humanities."

Reviewing "Tortilla Sun," Publisher's Weekly said, "Cervantes fills her story with mystical possibilities- talking with spirits, hearing what the wind whispers, gathering powerful herbs by moonlight - but also with the inescapable realities of illness, death, and mourning."

In its review of "The Fire Keeper" (2019), Booklist said, "Cervantes has written an excellent sequel (to "The Storm Runner"). Don't miss it if you like gods and monsters."

Cervantes shares homes in Las Cruces and Santa Fe with her husband, Joseph Cervantes, a Las Cruces attorney and a state senator. She draws inspiration from the desert down south and from the forest in the north.

"I do find different kinds of inspiration," Cervantes said. "When I feel like I have nothing left to give the page, I'll go on a hike. For me, nature is balm for the soul. It's something that connects me to something greater. I get the most incredible ideas. I know they're always going to come."

"There is no ego involved for me because I think this writing comes from this other place," she said. "It feels like a gift. Some of my ideas, they come out of nowhere."

"It's all wonderful," Cervantes said of the accolades she has received for her writing. "The first time it happens, you're just over the moon. Then you get back to being an artist and all you want is to create."

Her advice to others who want to write: "It's a sequential process and it's one tiny crumb at a time. When I sit down to write a book, I don't think of the whole book, it's too overwhelming, One page, one paragraph, one scene and that's all I'm going to focus on. At some point you've got to follow your own instincts. You sit down and create the most beautiful story you can create."

"New Mexico has given me way more than I've given New Mexico," Cervantes said. I don't think I'd have become a writer if I lived somewhere else. It was a place as a creator I could blossom."

Marci Dickerson gives back

BY MIKE COOK

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces business owner Marci Dickerson is a self-described go-getter.

“So many people see a problem and they feel helpless to provide a solution,” Dickerson said. “If I see a problem in the community, I take ownership and try to fix it. That’s what you do: You solve the problems. I see problems and the solutions are really obvious; you just needed somebody to do it.”

Dickerson, who turns 50 in December, is the owner of the Game and Game II bar and grill in Las Cruces, an associate real estate broker, owner of Dickerson Catering and the founder of the nonprofit Revolution 120 and Cancer Warriors Las Cruces, an organization created in 2023 to raise money for and awareness about women’s cancers.

“Realize you can provide solutions and be impactful – just start doing it,” Dickerson said. “Stop planning – just wake up and go do it. You can accomplish almost anything as long as you believe in it and you dedicate yourself to it. You are the only person who can decide when you fail. Change it until it works.”

That’s the message Dickerson got from her parents, long-time community activists Charlie and Jeanette Dickerson, and it is the message she is passing on to her sons, Saxon Marr, 22, and Weston Marr, 16.

Saxon, a student at New Mexico State University majoring in business, said his mother “continues to do selfless acts, not for profit, taking care of people regardless of the persecution she got and continues to get from around town.”

What Dickerson did during COVID-19 is a good example, Saxon said. “I was her son, but there were 125 other children (all of Dickerson’s employees) that she took care of every week. Having a role model such as my mother taught me a lot of things about the value of another human being. That’s the kind of father and friend I want to be in life, to be half as selfless and half as hard-working as her.”

“Having Marci Dickerson as my mom means always having a wise mentor, a strong protector and a heart full of love guiding me through my life,” said Weston, a student at Mesilla Valley Christian Academy who plays baseball, basketball and participates in shooting sports.

Here are some of Dickerson’s accomplishments:

nered with Memorial Medical Center to reduce the time it takes a woman to get a breast-cancer diagnosis from about three and one-half months to 21 days. Cancer Warriors has raised hundreds of thousands of dollars to fight women's cancers.

• Dickerson partnered with contractors and put people to work building outdoor patios for local restaurants so they could stay open during the pandemic. She also oversaw the distribution of 60,000 pounds of food to people in need during that uncertain time. "We could do it because we had the support of business people," Dickerson said. "I've been very blessed by the faith this community has in me when I need to raise money to do a project."

• She created Revolution 120 in 2017 because some of the charities she had worked with lacked the flexibility to "get goods and services in people's hands when they were in crisis," she said. "We're able to react very, very quickly." For example, "We were the first semi there," when massive wildfires struck in southeast New Mexico in 2024," Dickerson said. And, when New Mexico State Police Officer Darian Jarrott was killed during a traffic stop near Deming in 2021, Revolution 120 raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for his family, Dickerson said. What's next for Dickerson?

• She is working with French Brothers and A Mountain Construction, "developing subdivisions to create attainable housing," Dickerson said. Feasibility studies are underway for the construction of 330 houses on 546 acres on the East Mesa, with more to follow. "We want to provide lower-cost housing that people in Las Cruces can afford," she said. The City of Las Cruces and El Paso Electric are also part of the project, Dickerson said.

• Plans are underway for the third annual Cancer Warrior Week in October. This year's theme will be a 1950s sock hop, said Dickerson. The week will include an NMSU football game, Las Cruces Public Schools Pink

Out, Zumba and a 5K run/walk, Bingo for Boobies (new this year), luminarias and the highly anticipated Bras for a Cause party.

"Don't just be content with your own personal success," Dickerson said. "You need to make a difference in the community you live in."

Mary Kay Papen: Changemaker

BY MIKE COOK

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

"I've seen a lifetime of change for women," said former Las Cruces state senator Mary Kay Papen, who turns 93 in March.

When Papen's then husband, George Kuper, died in a 1971 plane crash, the couple owned Kuper Volkswagen, Porsche, Audi in El Paso. After her husband's death, Papen was told by Volkswagen to find a buyer for the dealership within six months or they would find one for her, she said. "We don't have women who are dealers," Papen was told.

Thirty years later, Papen had been elected to her first term in the New Mexico State Senate, where she would spend 19 years, including eight years as president pro-tempore. Papen was the second woman to hold that leadership position in the New Mexico Senate and the first ever pro tempore from Doña Ana County.

"Women until recently were allowed to do all this work and do the heavy lifting but they couldn't run it," Papen said. "In my lifetime I have seen it develop where women can stand on their own. I think it's healthy. I think women bring good qualities and I think they can stand shoulder to shoulder to men."

A champion for mental health and for the colonias in southern Doña Ana County during her 2001-20 tenure in the state Senate (she had the same Senate seat her husband, Frank O. Papen, held 1969-85), Papen has been back in Santa Fe for this year's 60-day legislative session, working for daughter Allison Kuper Smith's bill-tracking business.

"I go all over to collect the calendars (legislative) committees are putting out to send to customers so they know when bills will be on the calendar," Papen said. "I'm a glorified gopher," she said, but "when I walk in, they still call me senator. I love it. I get to see old friends. It's fun to be up here."

And, this year, "there are more women in the legislature than ever before," Papen said.

Following the 2024 election, women now hold 60 of New Mexico's 112 House and Senate seats – their first majority in the state's 113-year history, including nine of the 14 legislators who represent all or part of Doña Ana County.

And it's been a good session for mental health, Papen said, as legislators have introduced a number of bills that would help continue to rebuild mental health services in New Mexico, she said, including Senate Bill 1, which would create the Behavioral Health Trust Fund.

Before she got elected to the state Senate, Papen had regularly traveled to Santa Fe to advocate for mental health and domestic violence prevention legislation.

"I came up here and I was just going to those committee rooms and I would just sit there as bills were voted down," Papen said, realizing, "If I sat on the other side, I could be voting yes. That was one of the things that gave me the impetus to run."

As a senator, Papen also became involved with the autism program at New Mexico State University (where she had earned a degree in agriculture), helping to create the NMSU Papen-Aprendamos Autism Diagnostic Center and reducing the amount of wait time for a child to receive an autism assessment and diagnosis.

"I still need to go back to what my mother said, 'You need to pay for your space,'" Papen said. "As a legislator or running a business, you need to give back."

Shaharazad Booth: Teaching the next generation

BY MIKE COOK

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Shaharazad “Sherry” Booth decided “to hang my own shingle,” opening a law office in Las Cruces in 2019. She already had more than seven years’ experience as an assistant district attorney in Deming and Las Cruces, and she came within 80 votes out of nearly 10,000 cast of winning the Democratic Party nomination for Doña Ana County district attorney in the 2024 primary election – her first time as a candidate.

“I knew I could fix that office,” said Booth, who specializes in criminal defense work.

Her answer was, “We’ll see. There are a lot of options,” when asked if she planned to be a candidate for district attorney again in 2028. “It’s hard to see a problem and know you can fix it and sit back,” she said.

Debates among the four Democrats running for DA last year brought up “how vital to the community and the system” the DA’s office is, Booth said, and “the problems in the community that can be traced to it. The office, she said, has been “a broken spoke of the wheel,” characterized by “a lack of understanding of how the system works (and) what needs to happen for the office to be successful.”

Booth said she is also concerned because “the justice system has created an abuse system for children in divorce cases.” It considers “the comfort of the parents vs. the well-being of the child,” who often is “living out of a backpack” while divorcing parents are fighting over custody, she said.

Booth is on the board of the statewide nonprofit Center for Civic Values Mock Trial program for high school and middle school students. She has taken an active role in getting the program restarted in southern New Mexico after the COVID-19 pandemic, and teaches it at Arrowhead Park Early College High School in Las Cruces.

Teams from Arrowhead Park finished first and fifth in this year’s mock trial regional competition held in Las Cruces in February.

Being part of the mock trial program “is a labor of love,” Booth said.

“I cannot say enough how much I enjoy these kids and how excited they get.”

Under Booth’s guidance, student teams act as both defense and prosecuting attorneys and as witnesses and professional judges and attorneys serve as volunteer judges.

In the competition, students present jury instructions, pre-trial orders and witness statements, enter pleadings, conduct direct examinations and cross examinations of witnesses, make objections and closing arguments and follow the rules of evidence, Booth said.

“It’s amazing,” she said. “They have to learn this entire thing and be

Q: Why was the decision made to move Shantel VanSanten from the main "FBI" series to "FBI: Most Wanted"?

A: When Shantel VanSanten was brought into the parent "FBI" series on CBS and Paramount+ toward the end of Season 4 in 2022, the understanding was that it was temporary at the time, since Missy Peregrym was off the show for a number of episodes, on maternity leave for the birth of her second child.

Shantel VanSanten

OF FBI: MOST WANTED ON CBS/PARAMOUNT+

The "FBI" writer-producers came up with a rich background for VanSanten's character, Special Agent Nina Chase, by giving her a history with fellow FBI operative Stuart Scola (John Boyd). That history developed even more when the two of them renewed their relationship and became expectant parents, as they took different views of the situation.

When Peregrym returned to "FBI" during Season 5, it seemed that would be the end of VanSanten's regular presence in the franchise. However, "FBI: Most Wanted" ended up needing to add someone when co-star Alexa Davalos left that show, with it being explained that her alter ego Kristin Gaines had transferred to the Denver bureau to be closer to her children. Executive producer Dick Wolf and his creative colleagues made that call to VanSanten, and the rest is now TV history.

Nina's connection to Scola has led to fairly regular crossovers between "FBI" and "FBI: Most Wanted," driven largely by the characters' co-parenting. However, it now remains to be seen if VanSanten will be moved back to the original "FBI" on a steadier basis, since CBS has decided to end "FBI: Most Wanted" after the current TV season (as well as "FBI: International"). One would think there will continue to be mention of Nina, at least, on "FBI" in light of the personal situation that she and Scola share.

"Bosch: Legacy" - Season 3 (March 27)

The third and final season of this crime drama, based on the works of author Michael Connelly, stars Titus Welliver as Harry Bosch, Madison Lintz as Maddie Bosch and Mimi Rogers as Honey Chandler. This season — based on the novels "Desert Star" (2022) and "The Black Ice" (1993) — explores the murder investigation of Kurt Dockweiler, which brings dangerous secrets to light.

"Holland" (March 27)

In this wildly unpredictable thriller, Nicole Kidman is the meticulous Nancy Vandergroot, a teacher and homemaker whose picture-perfect life with her community pillar husband (Matthew Macfadyen) and son (Jude Hill) in tulip-filled Holland, Michigan, tumbles into a twisted tale. Nancy and her friendly colleague (Gael Garcia Bernal) become suspicious of a secret, only to discover nothing in their lives is what it seems.

"The Accountant" (Available Now)

Christian Wolff (Ben Affleck) is a mathematical prodigy who works as an accountant for criminal organizations, uncooking their books for them while keeping a low profile. He's hired to look into Living Robotics, a company whose own accountant, Dana (Anna Kendrick), has found discrepancies in the books. Meanwhile, Ray (J.K. Simmons), a Treasury Department agent who's been hunting Christian for a long time, uses blackmail to persuade data analyst Marybeth (Cynthia Addai-Robinson) to help him track down the criminal number-cruncher known only by the alias "The Accountant."

"Starship Troopers" (Available Now)

In the distant future, the Earth is at war with a race of giant alien insects. Little is known about the Bugs except that they are intent on the eradication of all human life. A mobile infantry travels to distant alien planets to take the war to the Bugs. They are a ruthless enemy with only one mission: survival of their species no matter what the cost. Casper Van Dien, Dina Meyer, Denise Richards, Jake Busey, Neil Patrick Harris, Clancy Brown and Michael Ironside star.

real attorneys.”

Participating students “put their intellect on display (and) learn the importance and the working of the judicial system,” Booth said.

Booth said she “is really blessed” by the help she receives from other attorneys to make the program a success in Las Cruces and southern New Mexico.

“They get the mission,” she said. “They just want to see kids excel. It’s just phenomenal.”

Booth is a native of Fayetteville, North Carolina; her father was part of the 82nd Airborne Division stationed at nearby Fort Bragg. She graduated from the University of Arkansas at Little Rock School of Law and first came to Las Cruces in 2007. Booth and her husband have a seven-year-old son.

Julia Brown: Believes in women

BY MIKE COOK

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces Public Schools secretaries and administrative assistants were a little surprised when Julia Brown, a New Mexico Economic Development Department community, business and rural development representative, spoke to them at a conference in February. After all, Brown had been many things: a Doña Ana County manager; a Sunland Park city manager; an assistant state attorney general in Oklahoma; a United States Army judge advocate general; a retired lieutenant colonel and a national board chair of the American Association of University Women. What did she know about being a secretary?

But LCPS Director of Communications Kelly Jameson, whom Brown had worked with in her previous role as Dona Ana County manager, invited Brown to speak before the LCPS staff. Before long the school staff had warmed to her once they realized she “understood what it feels like to be in the jobs they are in,” Brown said.

After all, before Brown rose to top leadership positions, she had been a clerk-typist, a file clerk, a receptionist and a legal secretary who knew all about office machines and filing systems. She still uses the Gregg dictation shorthand she learned, and is grateful for all the other office skills she acquired as an office worker.

Brown said she also “understands and appreciates the number of balls they keep in the air,” including scheduling appointments, making travel arrangements, setting up exhibits, organizing conferences and answering phones.

And sometimes secretaries and administrative assistants do their jobs people, not to be a legend in your own mind,” she said, and not to think what you do “is more important than what anyone else does.”

For women and girls who come from poverty and communities of color, Brown said one of the “biggest hurdles is lack of information” about the resources and opportunities that are available to them.

“We’ve got to support each other,” Brown said, and that includes taking the time to bolster someone else’s self-confidence by complimenting them.

“I also tell them it’s important to access the information you find out about, to form alliances and be collaborative,” she said.

Active in the Democratic Party, Brown said she often reaches across party lines. An example, she said, is working with Marci Dickerson who co-founded a nonprofit to empower ambitious female professionals called The Association Women’s Group.

“They are doing some significant things for women business owners and entrepreneurs,” Brown said.

For the last two and one-half years, Brown has been part of the Community, Business and Rural Development Team in southwest New Mexico for the state Economic Development Department.

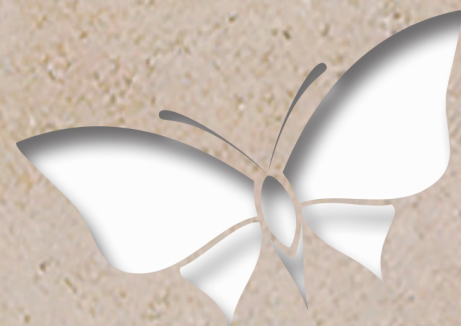

Based in Las Cruces, Brown’s “signature product” is LEDA: Local Economic Development Act grants for economic development projects throughout the seven counties she serves. That includes everything from Gboyz Jerk beef jerky manufactures in Bayard to manufacturing and distilling at Little Toad Creek in Las Cruces to Franklin Mountain Packaging that makes corrugated boxes, exhibit displays, pizza boxes and more in Santa Teresa.

The work is all about collaborating with cities, counties, councils of government, small business development centers and other entities throughout the region, and organizations like El Paso Electric, the Border Industrial Association in Santa Teresa and the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance (MVEDA) in Las Cruces to help pay for land, buildings and infrastructure and guide entrepreneurs and start-ups to create jobs.

without receiving acknowledgement or even a thank you for “working wonders” and helping to make their bosses successful, Brown said.

Having that work experience also taught Brown “not to look down on

Cece Meadows: Helping others feel beautiful

BY MIKE COOK

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

A Google film crew visited Prados Beauty Owner Cece Meadows last December – she is Google’s representative for small business in New Mexico – to shoot video for a seminar the international technology company was doing for its workspace AI business tool. A few weeks later, Google called to tell Meadows the Prados video would appear in Super Bowl LIX as part of New Mexico advertising during the most-watched football game and would also give it exposure in national commercials.

“Our website was insane that day,” Meadows said. “We took orders from all over the country for three weeks.”

“I was so proud, so honored,” she said, not only for herself and her business, but for the entire state and especially for Las Cruces.

“I love Las Cruces. They just let you be you,” said Meadows, who identifies as Indigenous and Chicana.

Meadows started Prados (a Portuguese word that means “meadows” in English) in New York City in 2018 and moved it to Las Cruces in 2020 when her husband, Daniel, a U.S. Army major, was transferred to White Sands Missile Range.

Since then, business has boomed in her storefront at 1825 Copper Loop and online, and her unique line of beauty products sells in 609 JCPenney stores across the United States.

“You profit, you give back to your community,” Meadows said.

That’s why she started The Prados Life Foundation. The nonprofit buys shoes, coats and backpacks for children living in poverty and helps college students buy books, food and gas. Especially dear to her heart, the foundation supports veterans, including the Wounded Warrior Project, and buys shoes and equipment for young athletes who can’t afford them.

Growing up playing soccer in Arizona, “I didn’t have the things I needed,” Meadows said. “We were poor. We didn’t have money for those things.”

Now, she is able to help others have what they need.

“You grace your community,” Meadows said. “This brand was built on community.”

Meadows credits Las Cruces for her company’s sustainability. She said Las Cruces “has really supported us.”

“If it wasn’t for the community and our people, Prados wouldn’t be where it’s at,” she said.

Prados is also about helping women – and men – with the products Meadows makes and sells, she said.

A cancer survivor, Meadows said “helping women feel beautiful during this hard time in their lives is really important to me.”

She has also created a safe space at Prados Beauty for the LGBTQ community – especially teens and young adults who are not out to their families but want to “play with makeup” as they explore their identities and be themselves, she said.

“Self-love is essential,” Meadows said. “My message is always, ‘Whatever you look like, no matter what you’ve been through or have survived or are currently facing, you are valuable.’ You literally can do anything if you dedicate yourself to that.”

“Being positive and optimistic in times of great turmoil really speaks of who people are when they’re called to step up. I’ve had to do that,” she said. “Now, I’m getting to live my best life. I’m truly living out my dream and passing it on. I’m building a ladder and leaving it down for those that come after me.”

Raised by her grandmothers, “I still feel like they watch me,” Meadows said. “I don’t want to disappoint them.”

“Pouring love into the world is what we do in creating cosmetics and makeup that is colorful and vibrant,” she said. “It’s more than just a beauty brand; it’s a movement.”

Meadows has two full-time employees and a CFO, and subcontracts with local entrepreneurs. It’s a small staff “who work really hard,” she said.

“There’s something here you can enjoy and be able to afford,” Meadows said. “It’s a welcoming space to anybody.”

MAMMO TO ANSWERS

EXPEDITED BREAST HEALTH DIAGNOSTIC PROGRAM

THE PROCESS

1 Start with a mammogram

Mammograms are an essential part of preventive healthcare for women. Because breast cancer is very common, and because early detection is so important for successful treatment, most women who are over 40 should schedule a mammogram every year.

3D mammography is a clinically proven screening and diagnostic tool for early breast cancer detection. It uses advanced technology to take images of your breast from different angles and combine them to create a more complete and accurate image of your breast than is possible with regular 2D digital mammography.

For a routine annual (screening) mammogram, women 40 and older do not need a written referral. For patients experiencing unusual breast symptoms, a written referral is required for a diagnostic mammogram.

2 What if everything looks normal?

Most mammograms don't find anything out of the ordinary. If this is the case, schedule your next annual mammogram and keep an eye on your breast health throughout the year by performing self-exams. Visit your primary care provider immediately if any concerns arise.

Screening for dense breasts

Annual mammograms are the best way to catch breast cancer early, but not all breasts are the same. Dense breast tissue can mask the appearance of tumors, making it more difficult for mammography to detect cancer.

If you are one of the 40% of women with dense breast tissue, your provider may recommend an MRI, whole breast ultrasound or automated breast ultrasound (ABUS) for additional screening and added peace of mind. Memorial Medical Center is the only facility in Las Cruces offering this advanced technology.

3 What if something doesn't look right?

If your provider spots something unusual, they may ask to schedule a breast ultrasound. A breast ultrasound uses medical sonography to obtain additional images of the breast that can help to identify benign or suspicious lesions. With the Mammo to Answers program, we will expedite unusual findings to a breast ultrasound.

Most unusual mammogram findings are not cancer.

A breast ultrasound can show whether a breast lump is a fluid-filled breast cyst (usually not cancerous) or a solid mass (which could be cancer and may need further testing through a biopsy).

4 What if something still doesn't look right?

If your breast ultrasound yields unusual findings, your provider may recommend a biopsy. A breast biopsy is a procedure that involves using a biopsy needle or surgery to remove a sample of your breast tissue so that a pathologist can examine it for breast cancer or other conditions.

A breast biopsy is the only diagnostic procedure that can definitively determine if a suspicious area is cancerous. Most often this will be a core needle biopsy (CNB). But in some situations, such as if the results of a needle biopsy aren't clear, you might need a surgical biopsy. A pathologist then determines what type of disease, if any, is present.

5 What if it's breast cancer?

A cancer diagnosis can feel overwhelming. But don't worry! When detected early via a mammogram, breast cancer is often highly treatable. Cancer Warriors offers many resources that can help you. To learn more, visit Cancer Warriors on Facebook or online.

Schedule your mammogram at Memorial's Women's Imaging Center. Call 575.521.5270 (No order is required for a screening mammogram).

Las Cruces high schools unite on stage

DAVID SALCIDO
Las Cruces Bulletin

There's something transformative transpiring on stage at Las Cruces High School. In a rare show of solidarity, five high schools – Las Cruces, Mayfield, Organ Mountain, Centennial, and Mesilla Valley Christian – are coming together to create a theater production like no other. For one weekend only, March 27-29, LCPS United will present the school edition of Les Misérables, performed entirely by a cast of over 25 students.

The world's longest running musical, and a true modern classic, Les Misérables is based on Victor Hugo's literary masterpiece. Having won multiple awards, including three Tony Awards and two Drama Desk Awards, the musical is set in 19th century France and follows the story of Jean Valjean, an ex-convict who tries to live a good life and help others, while escaping his criminal past.

So, why this particular play for LCPS United? The show's director, Knut Brekke – who is also the theater teacher at Mayfield High School – believes it is a show that really speaks to the young performers. Ultimately, it is a tale of love, redemption and the pursuit of justice, all themes familiar to modern audiences.

"This play is really about keeping hope alive when things seem lost," he said. "I think what audiences take from it is that we must do everything we can to keep hope alive and stay positive, even in the face of constant fear of oppression and inequality. We wanted to do something challenging, something really big for the students to really sink their teeth into. It was about uniting the schools, and the play is really about uniting, so that's why we're calling it LCPS United's production of Les Miz. We did that because, right now, in this time of division, we want to send a message of strength in unity."

He admits that it's a fine line to walk, given the current atmosphere, but he also feels that it gives the students something to stand up for.

"Many of them belong to the LGBTQ community," he said. "Or they are just part of the different breed that makes up the theater world. I tell them, this is where you get to take all that emotion you're feeling about what's going on in the world, and put it into your singing. This play is going to be beautiful, it's from the heart, it shows what Las Cruces can do when we have the resources and the right team together. We have some amazing talent here, and it's about time that people see that."

Initially envisioned as an entry to the Enchantment Awards, the annual New Mexico high school musical theater awards takes place in May and celebrates the accomplishments of drama students and teachers from throughout the state, the musical has taken on a life of its own.

"What's really great is we have the backing of the school district and all the schools are one hundred percent on board," Brekke said. "Everybody is really pulling for this. We have community

LCSO explores the final frontier

MEGAN MCQUEEN

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces Symphony Orchestra is preparing a concert of three orchestral works on the theme of “Earth and Space,” and one might say “the Force is strong with this one.”

The program will include a world premiere from composer Christian Kriegeskotte, whose many film and television credits include working on John William’s scoring for “Star Wars: Revenge of the Sith.” In addition to contributing to film projects by renowned composers such as Danny Elfman and preparing music for seasons of such celebrated series as “The Simpsons,” Kriegeskotte’s compositions have been featured by many musical ensembles across the country.

In his third season as the symphony’s music director, Ming Luke, speaks enthusiastically about his programming in a manner that engages musical novices and regular symphony-goers alike.

brate that we will premiere a piece by such an esteemed composer,” Luke notes.

He describes Kriegeskotte’s premiere piece “The Wind is Causing the Stars to Sway” as “energetic, tuneful, and almost cinematic.”

Contrastingly, the second piece of the program has an almost improvisational feel. Pianist, composer, and musicologist Heather Pinkham will travel from Amsterdam to play in her piano concerto “Nowhere and No-when.” It begins with a recording of oscillating sounds captured from space, and develops into atmospheric, distinct melodies explored by the full ensemble. It is elegant, mysterious, and grand.

Luke conducted the piece for its 2019 world premiere in California. It reflects on Fermi’s paradox, which Pinkham describes as “the apparent contradiction between the high probability of intelligent extra-terrestrial life and the lack of evidence supporting it.”

The concert will con-

clude with an award-winning work by the orchestra’s principal trumpet player and New Mexico State University professor, Dr. Jacob Dalager. He performed his driven, modern, brass-heavy “3futures” with the Austin Symphony Orchestra in 2019. It took second prize at the 2022 Music International Grand Prix and received honorable mention in the 2023 American Prize Competition.

Dalager’s three-movement piece depicts three outlooks on the climate crisis. The theme results in music that is in moments contemplative, ominous, tranquil, and heroic, allowing listeners to ruminate on the condition and the destiny of Earth. Grammy-nominated sound engineer David Bowles will be traveling to Las Cruces to record the performance of the trumpet concerto for a CD release.

“We want members of our community to be creating their own projects, developing community,” Ming explains. “Our guest artists ignite the enthusiasm to create in others.”

Each of these acclaimed musicians with decades of experience in various aspects of the music business will interact with students of the university music department and participants in the symphony’s youth programs. Educational outreach has long been central to the organization, and the opportunity to learn from musicians with multi-faceted careers is invaluable.

The recently formed Las Cruces Symphony Junior Orchestra is open to all seventh and eighth graders, while the Las Cruces Symphony Youth Orchestra accepts all high school students. Neither ensemble requires auditions, and both are committed to high-quality education at an annual cost of only $25 due to donor support.

When asked to compare the three featured modern composer’s works, Luke demonstrates the electric, lecture-quality insights that he includes in his concerts. “In past orchestral music - in Mozart’s time, for example - there was a definitive style. It’s harder to distinguish between contemporary composers of that time,” Luke explains. “But when we look at current composers of classical music, they are so diverse. This program brings together three inspiring composers with pieces that reflect their unique backgrounds, expertise, and personalities.”

This concert is Saturday, March 29 at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, March 30 at 3 p.m. Tickets range from $44 to $64. The office can be reached at 575-646-3709. Tickets or further information are available at www.lascrucessymphony.com.

members helping, including Lisa Hermanson from NMSU, who has come on to assist with the musical direction. We have all the theater teachers from all the schools involved. We’ve had relatives of students coming in to help build sets. It’s been really great to see the community supporting the arts like this.”

Ultimately, this is what Brekke and the other theater teachers involved believe is their mission.

“We want people to understand how important theater and the arts are to teaching kids the skills they won’t develop anywhere else,” he said. “Social skills, confidence, how to present yourself, how to convey what’s important to you, and do it in a way that makes people listen. The more we can support these kids in these endeavors, and the more we can show them how important it is, the better we will be as a society.”

Brekke also believes that this production transcends the average school play. It resonates with young and old alike, and because of the efforts of those involved, is every bit as polished and professional as anything being presented locally.

“We have such talented kids here,” he said. “I want them to shine and show the world what they’re capable of. I think people will be thoroughly entertained with what they see, and when they walk out, they’ll forget that it’s a high school show, because of the passion these young actors have. When they hit their notes on the end song, I don’t think there will be a dry eye in the room.”

LCPS United’s production of Les Misérables runs 7 p.m., Thursday-Saturday, March 27-29, with a 2 p.m. matinee performance on Saturday, at Las Cruces High School’s Robert L. Gaines Theater, 1750 El Paseo Rd., Las Cruces. Tickets are $15 at the door and cash only. Doors open half an hour before showtime. For more information, call Knut Brekke at 575-201-3077.

Mickey 17 – 2025, Sci-Fi/Comedy, Rated R

Neither a rating system for Disney's eventual line of adult films, nor my mom's record for drinking Mickey beers while living in our duplex in Anchorage in the eighties, "Mickey 17" is the new film from Academy-Award winning director Bong Joon-Ho ("Parasite"), an adaptation of Edward Ashton's graphic novel of the same name.

Similar in import to Michael Keaton's various doppelgangers in "Duplicity," and predictive of our probable cloning future, everyone's favorite glittering vampire teen idol (and fifth or sixth favorite Batman)

Robert Pattinson plays Mickey, a semi-lobotomized, strangely Brooklyn-accented prole sent on a deep-space mission along with other model-level unfortunates to colonize distant planets by the vaguely Trump-like, evangelical corporate guru Kenneth Marshall (Mark Ruffalo) and his wife (Toni Collette).

As Mickey becomes fatally infected by various space viruses and eaten by giant alien sloths, he is repeatedly "reprinted" to head unto the breach once more. Unfortunately, Pattinson was never famous for his master thespian range, so the eventual "Mickey meets/fights other Mickeys" scenarios essentially become the equivalent of multiplying zeroes, and the film is so haphazardly assembled, the characters so cartoonishly portrayed, one really loses interest in the cloning gimmick and everything about the film.

Meanwhile, films like Kyle Hausmann-Stokes' "My Dead Friend Zoe" about a military veteran (Sonequa Martin-Green) haunted by the death of her friend (Natalie Morales) and dealing with the first stage Alzheimer's of her grandfather (Ed Harris) is probably playing right down the hall at your multiplex, with deep messages about PTSD and family caregiving and far more deserving of a large audience. Give that one a try, and leave "Mickey" in the recycle bin.

Novelist Russ Bradburd to read new work

SUSAN MORÉE
Las Cruces Bulletin

Russ Bradburd is a funny guy.

The fiction writer has a new satirical novel, Big Time, and he will be holding a reading from the new work at 7:30 p.m. on March 21 at Milton Hall on the New Mexico State University campus. The reading is free.

With his new novel, Bradburd, who retired from teaching fiction writing at New Mexico State University last year, is poking fun at the way the university system works with his new book. Bradburd said his inspiration for the novel came during a faculty committee meeting during which the faculty established a new committee to study how to reduce committee work.

"It's illogical," Bradburd said. "If a building was on fire, half the professors would say let's start a fire committee."

Bradburd set the world of his fiction novel at a university that, to solve financial problems, rebrands itself Coors State University. But the beer company stipulates that all of its donations must go to the university's sports teams.

This means academic departments find themselves working in the service of the football and basketball teams. Two elderly historians, working the concession stand, decide to revolt.

Bradburd said the heroine of the novel is a poet who is the one character with common sense. Although Bradburd is married to poet Connie Voisine, he said the character is not based on his wife.

While this is Bradburd's fifth book, it is his first novel. He said it is hard to write funny. He said the trick is to play the characters straight.

"It's an absurd world to the outside viewers. It's funny to us but not to them," he said.

But even if the novel is comic, it is focused on a serious problem in higher education. Bradburd said he was drawn to writing a satirical novel because it's a way to expose a problem in a way that serious writing doesn't in quite the same way.

"It's a fallacy, in my view, that academia is a bunch of liberals and radicals and Marxists," Bradburd said.

He said the president of a university makes hundreds of thousands of dollars while the bulk of classes are taught by under paid adjuncts who have neither job security nor health insurance and make around $3,000 per class.

"It's not a progressive, Marxist system," Bradburd said. "It's performative."

Bradburd started out not as a fiction writer but as an assistant basketball coach, first for the University of Texas-El Paso, then for New Mexico State University. He said he lived in that world for 14 years.

But he said his real interest was always in the stories behind the sports. He said a formative book for him was Out of Their League, a best-selling autobiography by David Meggyesy. Meggyesy is a former St. Louis Cardinals linebacker who quit his NFL career to protest the Vietnam War.

Bradburd, who loves to read, said he found creative ways to sneak books on the airplane when he traveled as an assistant basketball coach. In 2000, he quit basketball and joined the creative writing faculty at NMSU.

But at the end of the day, Bradburd said the person he's making fun of the most is himself.

"I'm an academic," he said.

them.

Mills said she believes the biggest challenge for community newspapers is resources. She is looking forward to finding ways to support and help local newsrooms find both resources and funding.

Mills said working in journalism is “in her blood.” She wrote her first newspaper story in the fifth grade, covering the local 4H club in her home in west Texas.

Professionally, Mills started as a reporter before moving to advertising. She has held roles as varied as bookkeeping to classified manager and has worked for small family-owned companies, for mid-size newspapers and for large corporations, such as Gannet and Hearst. She said all of these experiences combine to give her a unique perspective and skill set, which she will bring to her new role. The

New Mexico Press Association said in its statement that Mills was “a competitive candidate.”

“I have a deep understanding of the workings of a local newspaper. I’ve worked most of the desks in newspapers. I will bring my experience to the table to be of service to the newspapers in our state,” she told the Bulletin.

Mills will travel for her new job but she intends to continue to live in Las Cruces.

“Las Cruces is my home,” she said.

Mills said she looks forward to serving all the news outlets of the state because local journalism is “crucial to our communities.”

“I’ve always believed in the importance of local journalism. I believe we provide an important service to our community, by letting people know what’s going on. But we also serve as the fourth estate and we are here to protect our civil liberties,” she said.

Colon cancer is on the rise among young adults

JEWEL DOMINGUEZ

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

March is National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month. With colon cancer on the rise in young adults, local medical centers are trying to do their part to warn people of the growing risk of the disease once thought only to affect people in their 50s and older.

Since the 1990s, colon cancer rates have been on a steady increase among Gen X and Millennials. According to a report from the American Cancer Society, colorectal cancer cases increased from 11% in 1995 to 20% in 2019. It is unclear to doctors exactly why the increase is occurring. Still, local physicians such as Mountainview Regional Medical Center's gastroenterologist, Dr. Jobin Philipose, believes this change does not have to be scary if people take the necessary precautions sooner rather than later.

"Health is an investment. If you decide at 50 years old or older that you want to start eating healthier, but you have been eating processed food, drinking a lot and smoking for the last 40 years, it is much harder to undo that damage. And some damage cannot be undone."

Philipose was voted Bulletin's Best of the Mesilla Valley in 2024 and has been awarded the presidential award for a research presentation in Gastroenterology. He believes health education and awareness are the key to fighting the increase in cases.

"Where we have seen the increase in cases among people under 50, we also see a decrease in instances of people 60 and older. The reason is that older people are more likely to have a colonoscopy," Philipose said.

He said 45 is the age when people should get an initial screening unless alarming symptoms arise, such as anemia, weight loss and most notably blood in the stool. Philipose says preparation before the colonoscopy is most important.

"The question I get asked the most is, 'Doc, really a colonoscopy?' It is not a scary procedure, and people do not mind it. However, prep can be a problem for people," he said.

In recent years, stool screenings have become more popular, noninvasive ways for people to screen for colon cancer, and certain insurance providers are being approved to do screening through bloodwork. However, Philipose warns that although stool screenings can be 80% to 90% accurate, there is an inaccuracy rate of 30% to 60%. Colonoscopy is considered the gold standard for precise screening.

A healthy diet should also be considered when considering preventing colon cancer. According to a 2024 study by Ohio State University, researchers found that the Western diet, consisting of high intakes of prepackaged foods, refined grains, fried foods, and other products, can agitate bacteria in the of cells. Philipose also warns drinking heavily, smoking, and eating a lot of red meat can result in a bad gut that can develop into disease.

Young adults can do a lot to prevent colon cancer, including scheduling a screening, talking with a doctor about unusual bowel problems, and adopting a Mediterranean diet. Philipose reminds patients that anything can happen and that everyone's body is different, but the best prevention is awareness and information.

"New Mexico is behind in screening rates, and people aren't taught to worry about their health until they are older. Health professionals need to do more to educate people. We need to stand in front and inform people about their bodies. Nowadays, people turn to social media and get the wrong information because it is based on views instead of facts. We need to inform people, starting from elementary and so on, so we can see lower rates of all cancers, not just colon cancer," he said.

Cancer meets yoga

JUAN CORRAL
Las Cruces Bulletin

Cancer meets yoga in a new program that introduces yoga to cancer patients and survivors to help reduce stress, increase longevity of life, and improve body health overall.

The program started in Feb., at Memorial Medical Center (MMC), 2450 South Telshor Boulevard.

The “Monday Mindful Movement and Rest” classes are hosted every Monday at noon in the Piñon Room found at the MMC Annex. The “Balance and Flow” classes are held every Wednesday at 5:30 p.m., also, in the Piñon room.

Monday Mindful Movement and Rest are hosted by Certified Yoga Instructor Margo Sorum. Balance and Flow classes are hosted by Kendra Johnson, a cancer survivor and certified yoga instructor.

MMC partnered with Cancer Warriors of Las Cruces, a nonprofit, and two yoga instructors to offer these free classes to cancer patients and survivors. Cancer patients and survivors within the community are also able to participate.

Each yoga class begins with Yoga Nidra, a conscious relaxation and meditation practice to help the nervous system reset for healing.

Classes with Johnson will focus on rebuilding strength and working on balance.

Johnson was diagnosed with breast cancer in 2017 and at the time she discovered meditation. She said she would use meditation during her treatment along with practicing yoga.

“So, I had fatigue. I stayed active through my treatment but what happened for me personally was that I had radiation and so when that was over, I’d lost pretty much all my mobility on my left shoulder and I couldn’t raise my arm above my head at all,” Johnson said.

She added that she had multiple surgeries that did not allow her to practice yoga the way she had in the past.

“It was very discouraging to go back to something I had been doing and not be able to do it the way I used to be able to,” she said. “Somewhere along the way, I got my yoga teaching certification, and it seemed too overwhelming but then I met Margo.”

ing yoga for over 10 years. In 2015 she directed a yoga program for a cancer center in Anchorage, Alaska. She moved to Las Cruces last year and introduced the same idea here.

Classes just began a little over a month ago but Andrew Cummins, marketing director for MMC, said the program is seeing a lot of support.

“We are seeing 15-20 participants at each class. The integration of yoga into oncology care has shown significant benefits for patients’ physical, emotional, and psychological well-being,” Cummins said.

If interested in Monday’s classes, text yoga instructors Sorum at 907-947-2030 or blissyogawithmargo@gmail.com. For the Wednesday class, contact Johnson at 575-621-6996 or kendra.johnson@icloud.com.

Jacob A Heavenly Adventure
By Mary Agnes Elizabeth Rogan

Once upon a time, ohhh, a very long time ago, there was born into heaven a very special little angel. He had been just a sweet baby boychild, when suddenly, he left Earth and found himself gazing up in wonder at the magnificent St. Peter. St. Peter, who is the gatekeeper to Heaven, beamed down upon Jacob with such a glorious light emanating from his essence, that to our sweet little cherub's eyes, St. Peter shone of pure love itself.

Now, most angels, by the time they arrive at the pearly gates, already have quite a bit of knowledge and understanding under their wings, but not our little angel. Unlike most angels, who had already spent many years on Earth before commencing their spirit life, Jacob had only been a very, very young boy. So, in as far as angels go, he was also a very, very young cherub.

NMSU women's swim coach wins honors

NMSU ATHLETICS

The Western Athletic Conference announced the 2024-2025 Postseason Awards on Tuesday, March 18.

This season, Pratt led the program to an 8-1 record, breaking a school record for winning percentage (.889). New Mexico State came out on top in its final six meets, claiming victory in four of its five Western Athletic Conference dual meets. The Aggies beat Grand Canyon by 46 points on Senior Day where they recognized Elizabeth Cervantes-Vanderluat and Lina Khiyara.

A few weeks later, the Crimson & White wrapped up their regular season in Albuquerque, where they dominated rival New Mexico by a score of 197-102. The Aggies finished first in 11 of 16 events against the Lobos, taking 32 of 48 podium spots.

In the WAC Championships, Pratt guided the team to a second-place finish with 534 points. Northern Arizona took the team championship for the 12th straight season. In the Pre-Championship Coaches' Poll, Grand Canyon was picked to finish second, one spot ahead of New Mexico State. However, New Mexico State utilized five first-place showings to finish five points ahead of GCU (529).

During the season, Pratt coached three Aggies to four weekly awards. Dijana Mazumdar won two WAC Women's Swimmer of the Week honors, with Naomi Slee and Emily Dobbins each claiming the same award once.

The second-place result was the Aggies' seventh since 2010 and concluded this season. This award is more of a reflection of their hard work and success. I am excited to keep moving forward and hope we are all proud and motivated from not only our awards, but by our positive efforts as a team," Pratt said.

Skills to be a mentally tough golfer

The December, 1993 issue of Golf magazine featured a close-up of Jack Nicklaus' eyes on the cover with the headline, "Read My Mind." Jack prided himself on being among the longest, straightest drivers of the golf ball, a fine long- and mid- iron player, and an excellent all-around putter. "Although they were all great assets, none was my strongest competitive weapon," he declared. "That was, and still is, my mind – what and how I think about the game." When I read that, it's a perfect example of how I developed my passion for the mental aspect of golf performance.

Early-on I noticed that very few recreational golfers paid much attention to the mental aspects of the game, even if they were enamored by playing competitive golf rounds. When New Mexico State University Men's Golf Coach Herb Wimberly and I conducted our Performance Golf Schools, I made a point of instruction to emphasize the importance of how strong mental skills enhance the results of the entire golf game. The main theme was mental toughness – the combination of the many habits of the mind and emotions that make or break a golfer's performance.

Specifically, there are fourteen critical aspects to mental toughness, when, if mastered, will result in a level of performance that one has only dreamed of. The absolutely essential mental skills for playing masterful golf are as follows: positive attitude, adaptive ability, concentration, self-discipline, hard work ethic, perseverance, relaxation, visualization, imagination, patience, achievement motivation, clear quick thinking, emotional control, strength of mind and character.

When you are watching the men and women pros on TV, notice the care they take with what they do. We must prioritize the process and not be attached to the outcome. It might help if you occasionally rate yourself on how well you did with your mental toughness skills instead of your golf score. That could be enlightening. Remember, the most mentally tough golfer is usually the hardest one to beat. That's why Jack Nicklaus and Tiger Woods were the best.

To play your best under difficult conditions requires you to be mentally tough. To bounce back from injuries, bad breaks or misplays, demands that you be mentally tough. To play decently when you have suffered an injury, or your body isn't at its best, takes mental toughness. So, if I were to add another big item to our list of fourteen it would be "have fun." I'll call it "14b."

Even the tour pros struggle with that one. Over the years I've seen more than a few golfers grouse about everything from cracks on the cart paths while maintaining a scowl on their face, as if it's a bore and a chore to even be out playing golf. They are the ones who step onto the golf course on a beautiful, sunny day, with pleasant friends, and proceed to play a golf swing instead of actual golf. Sometimes when things aren't going so well, and we think we should start over and re-learn the game, let's stop and smell the roses and appreciate the joy of golf and the fun we are having.
