NMSU graduates over 2,000 students this weekend

SUSAN MORÉE
Las Cruces Bulletin

This Saturday, May 10th, will be a day filled with hopes and dreams for the 1,454 undergraduates who will turn the tassel at the Pan Am Center, 1810 E University Ave., after four years of study at New Mexico State University.

Jillian McBeth will be one of them. She hopes to take the research she did in nuclear energy as an undergraduate at NMSU and, possibly, work in the energy sector for part of her career.

The ambitious undergraduate has lots of ideas about what her future might hold and, after four years at NMSU, she is ready to tackle the world.

McBeth was no ordinary student during her time as an Aggie. The 22-year-old double majored in government and anthropology and minored in public administration and Spanish. She researched community engagement around the federal government's nuclear waste repository outside of Carlsbad, was a Crimson scholar for maintaining a 3.9 GPA and she received an award from NMSU for Outstanding Graduate for the College of Arts and Sciences.

McBeth spent a summer studying abroad last year in Costa Rica to work on her Spanish-language skills. She comes from

DOÑA ANA COUNTY LEADERS CELEBRATE PROGRESS AT STATE OF THE COUNTY ADDRESS

Doña Ana County officials delivered an upbeat and optimistic State of the County Address on Tuesday, highlighting recent achievements and outlining strategic goals that align with the county's long-term planning document. The event featured remarks from County Commissioner Christopher Schaljo-Hernandez, County Manager Scott Andrews and Assistant County Managers Johnathan Macias, Steven Lopez and Deb Weir.

Each speaker offered updates tied to the county's strategic plan, covering infrastructure improvements, emergency preparedness, organizational restructuring and employee support. Schaljo-Hernandez opened the event with a message of unity and praised the county's forward momentum. Andrews emphasized modernization and the addition of leadership roles to meet growing community needs.

The address closed on a high note, reaffirming the county's commitment to innovation, transparency and service excellence. A recording of the event will be available on the county's official YouTube channel.

Doña Ana County highlights the road forward

SUSAN MORÉE
Las Cruces Bulletin

Doña Ana County held a state of the county address for the first time in more than a decade to highlight accomplishments and future projects.

Doña Ana County Commission Chair Christopher Schaljo-Hernandez delivered opening remarks and said the county intends to make this State of the County address an annual event going forward.

He introduced Doña Ana County Manager Scott Andrews, who has been at his job for less than a year after a national search the county undertook in 2024.

Schaljo-Hernandez talked about the county's strategic plan, adopted in 2023, which creates seven areas of concern for county officials and departments. They include issues such as humane housing and basic needs for health and safety.

Andrews called the county staff "resilient." One of the projects under way for the county that Andrews highlighted is an ice-skating rink expected to go in at the county Fairgrounds to be open around Thanksgiving through the holidays until around Valentine's Day, Andrews said.

Andrews told the Bulletin the county is making significant investments in the county's Fairground, which will include, but is not limited to the ice rink.

Some accomplishments

Some of the county's accomplishments the assistant county managers highlighted at the luncheon held at the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd., include a national search for a veterinarian who is now setting up a mobile clinic for the county to offer a spay and neuter program.

Assistant County Manager Deborah Weir said the county helped the Village of Ruidoso last summer after the deadly South Fork and Salt fires with pet evacuations and helped reunite families with their pets.

Assistant County Manager Stephen Lopez said the sheriff's office has obtained a new crime scene vehicle and recently graduated deputies to fill almost 100% of the previous vacancies.

Lopez said the Doña Ana County Detention Center recently received an accreditation from the New

NMSU international students part of Trump visa reversal

Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University international students have regained their visas and are now able to remain legally in the U.S. after the Trump administration reversed its decision to revoke visas held by students studying at colleges across the U.S.

The Trump administration reversed its decision late last week to put legally documented international students studying at U.S. universities into legal limbo. Many of the international students who lost their visas earlier in April are now seeing their legal status restored.

That includes the nine international students studying at NMSU who lost their visas as of April 11. Amanda Bradford, spokesperson for NMSU, told the Bulletin that, as of April 30, the nine in question have seen their visa status restored.

While officials at NMSU said the land-grant college was not aware of any connection between the federal action and any protests or campaigns the nine participated in, some affected students across the U.S. appear to have been targeted because they participated in campus protests or incurred minor driving tickets.

Bradford said that the nine international NMSU students were not disenrolled when they lost their visas a few weeks ago nor did the federal action impact their academic standing. Although the visa revocation came in the middle of the semester, Bradford said NMSU's Office of International Students and Scholar Services reached out to each student. She said the university set up meetings to talk to the affected students and provided additional information and resources, including immigration attorney contacts.

Bradford said NMSU's Student Assistance Services Office also reached out to the nine international students to help them complete the current semester and offered academic and counseling support.

Founder of Alma d'Arte to be honored Friday

SUSAN MORÉE
Las Cruces Bulletin

Alma d'Arte Charter High School is honoring its founder, Irene Oliver-Lewis on Friday, May 9th by renaming its historic 1941 building the Irene Oliver-Lewis Center for the Arts.

The fundraiser event will be held at 402 W. Court Avenue and will include music, food and presentations from a variety of officials. Dr. Adam Amador, the school's principal, said the children who attend Alma d'Arte would not have the opportunities to learn and grow as artists anywhere else.

Oliver-Lewis is a theatre artist who grew up in Las Cruces in the Mesquite Historical District. She left Las Cruces in 1981 to run a bilingual theatre company in Albuquerque and continued that work until the mid-1990s when she decided to return to her hometown.

It was then she began volunteering to turn the abandoned Court Junior High School building into a youth center that would offer physical activity and arts activities for at-risk children. Oliver-Lewis told the Bulletin she worked at raising money, but she also did hands-on labor.

To fully renovate the building cost $13 million in capital outlay dollars and ten years of work, Oliver-Lewis said.

By then, the idea of turning the youth center into a charter school had already taken hold. Oliver-Lewis said the youth center had begun teaching writing and visual arts to about 20 at-risk children three times a week. Oliver-Lewis said one of the students said, "this ought to be our school all the time," and the idea stuck.

"That's how it started," Oliver-Lewis said.

Oliver-Lewis said she began learning how to start a charter school and when it became Alma d'Arte Charter High School in 2004, the school started with 127 children.

Oliver-Lewis said it was always intended to be a small school.

Even as Oliver-Lewis gets ready to be honored on Friday, she emphasized that she didn't do the work alone and that many people in the community embraced Alma d'Arte and many love the school.

"They saw what it did for their children and grandchildren. It really is a part of the community.

It's not an island by itself," she said.

Oliver-Lewis said the school's mission is to "graduate artists and scholars to prepare to succeed." She said that mission has not changed in its more than 20 years of existence.

"We were everywhere. The kids were performing, cooking. They were doing visual art, they had shows. That's how it grew. It was a community," Oliver-Lewis said.

Oliver-Lewis credited her sister, Sylvia Camuñez, and Amador, as the engines to make the event happen.

Amador said the impact Oliver-Lewis has had on Las Cruces youth "makes her one of the leading Latinas in our region."

He talked of some of Alma d'Arte's successes, which includes graduates who have gone on to have creative careers. He said that is the legacy of Oliver-Lewis.

"We provide that environment for kids who do not fit in anywhere else. They fit in at Alma," Amador said.

Henson breakfast celebrates youth and hope

ALAN ENGLISH
Las Cruces Bulletin

More than 400 people gathered the morning of Thursday, May 1 for the 17th annual Lou & Mary Henson Community Breakfast, a record-breaking event for the Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces held at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

Two shining examples of courage took the stage early. Soledad Hibner, the 2025 New Mexico Junior Youth of the Year, and Brayden Gantzler, the 2025 Youth of the Year, shared emotional stories of how the Club became a stabilizing force in their lives during uncertain times. Both described the Club as their anchor, offering guidance, safety, and a place to dream big.

Soledad confidently spoke of her goal to become an astronaut and serve as a role model for others, particularly young girls. Brayden followed with his aspiration to become a marine biologist. He shared how he went from survivor to someone who thrives finding mentorship in helping learn to trust others and develop a desire to “help those who can’t help themselves.”

Their stories set the tone for keynote speaker Tim Brown, NFL Hall of Famer and storied Oakland Raiders wide receiver. Brown, who grew up in Dallas and rose to football greatness at Notre Dame, spoke of grit, mentorship, and life lessons, values he also gained as a Boys & Girls Club member.

Adam Young, TV/Radio sportscaster for New Mexico State University, led a Q&A on stage where Brown recalled the moment Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz told Brown he would win the Heisman Trophy, years before it happened. “I had to turn around,” Brown said, laughing. “I thought someone else had walked in.” He shared how Holtz challenged his thinking: “You can have both.” Explaining he meant academics and football. It was a revelation to him after his mother fixated him on going to Notre Dame to get an education. Brown also revealed how he kept his early football days a secret from his mother until a newspaper article outed him. When she confronted him, he told her, “Talk to the man you married. He said I could do it.” She continued urging him to quit until much later. The story was a powerful reminder of humble beginnings and the importance of having someone believe in you.

Brown also shared how he drew inspiration from another NFL great, Jerry Rice.

“Whenever you said we’ll do five, Jerry would say I’ll do seven,” Brown said.

Brown also told of his great disappointment of not winning the Super Bowl. “When they say will all the Super Bowl champions stand up? It’s tough,” he said.

Brown always wanted the team achievement more than any personal one and referring to his Hall of Fame attire.

“I’d trade this jacket and this ring for that,” he said.

Now devoted to youth outreach, Brown runs football camps and supports kids wherever he can. After his keynote, he stayed until every attendee who wanted a photo or autograph got one – his warmth and generosity matching the spirit of the event.

That generosity was on full display during the live auction, where autographed footballs sold for $1,000 each. Mark Figueroa, owner of Del Valle Physical Therapy & Hand Therapy, drew laughs and applause when he called from the back of the room, “I’ll take four!”

The Lou & Mary Henson Community Breakfast has been a cornerstone of the Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces for 17 years, an event conceived by Lou and Mary Henson at a time when the Club was facing deep financial uncertainty. The legendary NMSU basketball coach and his wife used their

CITY OF LAS CRUCES

Las Cruces Utilities Water Conservation

“Let’s water smart!”

“Let’s water smart!”

That’s what City of Las Cruces Utilities Department (Utilities) Water Conservation Coordinator, Rhonda K. Diaz, advises year-round, and especially during the City’s warm season, April 1st through September 30th.

Las Cruces’ first Water Conservation Ordinance was adopted by the City Council in 1994 and is administered by Utilities’ Water Conservation program. The ordinance sets out these outdoor watering restrictions during the summer months for all customers in the City:

- Residents of street addresses that end in even numbers (0, 2, 4, 6, 8) may water on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.
- Residents of street addresses that end in odd numbers (1, 3, 5, 7, 9) may water on Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays.

- Watering is not allowed on Mondays. These restrictions keep the City’s water system from being overloaded by every-one watering on the same day.

- No outdoor watering is allowed 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. on any day, April 1st through September 30th, due to water evaporating so quickly during hot summer days.

Allowing water to flow from your property onto adjacent property or into the street is a violation of the ordinance, and so is excessive watering of outdoor vegetation so that water ponds on your property. If you see water being wasted, call the Water Waste Hotline 24/7 at 575-528-4444 and leave the location or address and the date and time of the violation.

You can request a variance to the Water Conservation Ordinance, if, for example, you have put in sod or planted grass or other plant material from seed that requires daily watering to become established. Call 575-528-3549 or email ConserveWater@LasCruces.gov to request a variance. You can also call that number to get help in reducing your water usage.

Here’s a great tip from Diaz to prevent overwatering: most Bermuda lawns require about one inch of water each week in summer, and that’s what a five-ounce tuna can holds. Place an empty tuna can in your lawn’s sprinkler zone, see how long it takes to fill up, and that’s the total amount of time you need to water your lawn each week.

Spring Stroll in the Garden!

Join Diaz and other Utilities staff from 9 a.m. to noon, Tuesday, May 13, 2025, for coffee and pastries, and a walk through Utilities’ outdoor demonstration garden at 680 N. Motel Blvd. Learn how to plant and maintain a garden in the desert that includes beautiful, blooming, healthy plants that thrive with efficient irrigation and free local compost. You can also get a free water-wise plant and Utilities compost made at Foothills Landfill and Jacob Hands Wastewater Treatment Facility. Experts will be on hand to answer your questions about trees, plants, weeds, insects and diseases.

Sister Beth Daddio felt called to help homeless children

MIKE COOK

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Sister Beth Daddio talks modestly about her role in helping homeless children in Las Cruces.

"I was called to this lifestyle," she said. "I continue to choose it, to help those in need, especially children. Every day, I wake up with this desire to just do that. It's just become a part of who I am. I've been answering this call for 65 years."

Sister Beth, who will turn 85 later this year, is one of the founders of Jardin de los Niños, a childcare and education center for homeless and near homeless children and families designed to provide a caring environment to help these vulnerable kids develop resiliency skills.

Sister Beth also helped to found Tutti Bambini, a children's store that provides funding through in-house sales and fundraising to local organizations that support at-risk youth. Sister Beth still works there.

Sister Beth and the late Sister Anna Waldschmitt started Jardin de los Niños at Peace Lutheran Church in 1995.

"Sister Anna and I knew it was needed," Sister Beth said.

Sister Beth felt called to enter the Sisters of St. Francis of Perpetual Adoration convent in Colorado Springs after graduating from high school in Albuquerque. She then transferred to her present community, the Sisters for Christian Community, where she has been a member for more than 40 years.

A native of Maryland, Sister

Sister Beth Daddio

Beth came to Las Cruces in 1993 "to live and be involved in ministry in southern New Mexico," she said.

Jardin de los Niños moved to the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope campus in 2001 and has a five-star rating. The school recently announced plans to expand its service area to Hatch.

As Jardin de los Niños began to flourish, Sister Beth said she realized the community needed a store for children.

When a building adjacent to La Tienda de Jardin (Jardin de los Niños' used clothing store for men and women) became vacant in 2013, Sister Beth leased the building, bought second-hand shelves and counters from a sporting goods store that had closed, found a welder to customize the hardware for the new space and became the first manager of Tutti Bambini, a nonprofit that sells gently used children's clothing, stuffed animals and toys, books, furniture and more, at 300 El Molina Blvd.

Tutti Bambini works with 31 nonprofit agencies to help families with young children, regardless of their ability to pay. Everyone who comes into the store is treated with the same kindness and respect, whether they have cash in hand or a voucher from a local agency, said Sister Beth.

In addition to a small paid staff, Tutti Bambini has 24 volunteers "who are very committed," she said. But, the store could always use more volunteers.

She said Tutti Bambini tries to help women who are raising small children and need more support.

"It's very much a part of me," she said. It's the passion, the driving force to leave this a better world than I found it. I do anything I can to help children's lives be better.

ing school hours, to her success at gaining skill in a second language.

After the cap and gown have been stored away, McBeth will start working for the office of U.S. Rep. Gabe Vasquez, D-Las Cruces, this summer. But McBeth has lots of plans and ideas about her future beyond working for the congressman who represents the second congressional district.

McBeth dreams of working one day in the environmental nonprofit sector, as well as for one of the national laboratories in New Mexico as a political or social scientist. In addition to nuclear energy research, McBeth has toyed with the idea of pursuing research ideas in water access for local communities in New Mexico.

Long-term, McBeth wants to pursue a master's degree in public administration and, likely, will go beyond that for a Ph.D.

Also a young activist, McBeth says she is committed to staying in New Mexico.

"I've always been interested in people of different backgrounds, how society views them. My goal in the future is to combine my background in government policy and cultural policy. I want to make some sort of difference, especially around inequities and inequalities especially here in New Mexico," McBeth said.

Cristian Estrada

Another outstanding Aggie graduate, Cristian Estrada, will also be turning the tassel on Saturday when he receives his Bachelor of Science degree in kinesiology. Estrada told the Bulletin he plans to return to New Mexico, to his home community of Cimarron or another small town like it, after he receives his Doctor of Physical Therapy.

Estrada attributes his passion for a career in kinesiology to growing up in a town with the population of 800.

While still in high school, Estrada had the opportunity to get to know a physical therapist who was working with a local girl who had been visually impaired since birth. Because Cimarron is so small of a town, Estrada was able to get involved in helping the physical therapist work with the child.

"I got to meet her when she was in the second grade. When I first started working with her, she was scared to venture into the playground by herself. But by the time we finished helping her, she was hanging upside down off the monkey bars. Now she's in the sixth grade and she runs track and cross country," Estrada said.

Estrada said he knew he'd found his calling in life.

In addition to graduating with a Bachelor of Science in kinesiology, Estrada also found time to minor in early childhood education. Estrada will also graduate with the honor of being chosen as an Outstanding Graduate for the College of Health Education and Social Transformation.

While a student, he stayed busy with extracurriculars, too. Estrada was president of the kinesiology club for both his junior and senior years. He became president of the College of Health Education and Social Transformation student council. He also spent three years as a kinesiology peer advisory leader while working part-time for the Department of Kinesiology and NMSU Foundation.

This semester, Estrada finishes an internship he held at a public school in Deming where he worked with children who have developmental or physical challenges. He said the experience solidified his passion for kinesiology.

The 22-year-old is not taking any time off.

On May 27th, Estrada will be sitting in a classroom again, this time at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, working toward his Doctor of Physical Therapy.

But Estrada plans to return to New Mexico. He aspires to be a practicing Doctor of Physical Therapy and specialize in pediatric physical therapy for a rural area in the state.

"I feel it's my duty to serve those [rural] communities that gave so much to me and raise my future family there," he said.

OMDP faces tougher challenge

WALT RUBEL
Guest Columnist

Here we go again.

In 2017 President Donald Trump sent Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to New Mexico to consider revoking or altering the status of the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument. Monument supporters rolled out the red carpet. Zinke toured the OMDP on horseback and had a rustic photo of himself plastered all over the front page of the newspaper. And it worked. Zinke recommended that other monuments be closed in stead. Supporters of the OMDP felt like they had dodged a bullet, and it was now clear sailing ahead.

Now, the OMDP is reportedly again on the chopping block. And this time flattery may not be enough to save it.

Nothing is official yet, but a Washington Post story reports that the Trump administration is again considering changes to the monument, such as shrinking its boundaries and allowing for gas and oil production.

The Bureau of Land Management, which is responsible for the monument, released its Resource Management Plan earlier this year. The plan represents several years of careful study along with numerous hours of public input. It attempts to strike the right balance between recreation and economic development, while making conservation of the monument its top priority.

As we have seen these last 100 days, this Trump administration has no interest in balance. During the opening days of his first administration, Donald Trump was still feeling his way through. This time it's been nothing but slash and burn.

When the monument was first proposed, there was a vigorous effort led by local law enforcement to oppose it. Former Doña Ana County Sheriff Todd Garrison warned us ominously that the OMDP would create a corridor where drug smugglers and human traffickers could operate freely. That turned out to be a bunch of hogwash.

Once the monument was opened, the local opposition seemed to melt away. The huge list of horrors we were warned about never happened. What did happen is more people were able to enjoy and appreciate these special sites. And that led to more tourism. A 2022 study by the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce found that visitation to the monument has resulted in $13 million in tax revenue since the OMDP opened.

That new revenue represents exactly the kind of economic development the state needs to create as we work to diversify our economy and move away from our complete dependency on oil and gas revenue.

Ironically, it is that same dependency that may doom the monument. Trump has made it clear that increasing domestic gas and oil production is his only priority. If he comes to the conclusion that turning the OMDP over to the oil companies would be good for the bottom line, it won't be long before it's full of rigs.

I recognize that in the grand scheme of things these days, protection of the OMDP seems minor by comparison. But an awful lot of work and study has gone into creating a management plan that would ensure other generations will have the same outdoors opportunities we have. That's about to be lost.

Intersection of drug abuse, children and salvation

ROAD LESS TRAVELED
SHAWNA PFEIFFER
Guest Columnist

Statistics show that 75% of drug addicts can achieve successful recovery long-term.

These are inspiring numbers, indeed, and give hope to the millions suffering from addiction and to their families desperate for hope in the constant dark that is loving someone with an addiction. But I can't help but wonder if these numbers are skewed. For example, in 2022, over 100,000 people in the United States died from drug overdoses. Are they counted in the 100 from which 75 recover? After all, those statistics are a much harder pill to swallow, as a society.

I've always loathed the term "a perfect storm;" it is such an oxymoron. Perfect implies something good, but the phrase refers to anything but. In our community, we are met with a perfect storm, indeed: an intersection between rampant drug use, at-risk youths, and apathy. The depth of that apathy will soon be known, as the county and the city are working on a joint effort to identify mutual uses for funding from the opioid settlement money, a judgment against pharmaceutical companies intended to address, or attempt to address, the giant tragedy that is opioid addiction in our country. Our elected officials have been collaborating for well over a year on uses for the funding within our struggling community.

Could this opioid settlement money actually be a light in the perfect storm? Absolutely, if it targets the right demographic to stem the flow of drugs in our community and lessen the impacts to our most vulnerable population: our children.

While most politicians, especially in our politically

Public lands are a national treasure and must not be sold

TRACY STONE-MANNING
Guest Opinion

Public lands are one of our country's great equalizers. It doesn't matter how much money you have – a billionaire and a bus driver both get the same access to our parks, deserts, rivers and forests. Each one of us owns these lands together. They are literally America's common ground.

Like so many Americans, I've built a life around public lands – exploring them, defending them and working to ensure they remain open to all. From my early days in Montana to leading the Bureau of Land Management and now as president of The Wilderness Society, I've seen what these places mean to people. And I've never seen a threat to them as serious and shocking as the one we face right now.

For weeks, there have been indications that the Republican-controlled Congress was going to sell off chunks of this priceless shared heritage to pay for tax cuts for the ultra-wealthy. Not too long ago, that would have been an unthinkable idea. Surely, Congress or the administration wouldn't sacrifice prime wildlife habitat, access to favorite places, lands along a quiet stream or a wildlife refuge, right? Surely, they wouldn't auction this extraordinary legacy of clean air, clean water and open spaces as a one-time favor to donors and corporations?

But earlier this month, the Senate proved just how serious they were about it. Democrats offered an amendment that would block selling off our public lands in the budget bill. The vote failed along party lines, with just two Republicans voting to oppose a sell-off. Those two Montana senators who supported the amendment completely understood how their constituents feel about public lands.

But it's not only Montanans who care. Public lands are figurative common ground, uniting people across the country. Poll after poll shows that people of all stripes support public lands and want them conserved to protect wildlife habitat and outdoor recreation areas for future generations.

While it is a nice proof point to have, we don't need polling data to tell us what people's photo libraries, social media feeds, old family albums and bucket lists show us. Americans care deeply about public lands, intuitively understanding they are a national treasure.

These lands hold the long arc of the story of humankind, etched in petroglyphs on desert walls and handed down in the creation stories of Indigenous peoples that have stewarded them since time immemorial. Public lands are our shorthand for freedom and exhilaration. In car ads, they promise an escape from the ordinary. In books about finding ourselves, they are a proving ground for the soul. In our anthems, they bind us as one nation: "This land is your land; this land is my land."

My nephew caught his first trout on a fly rod while standing on public land along a clear, cold mountain stream. Over 25 years later, he still remembers everything about that moment. I expect he'll bring his kids there one day. His is a common story.

Last summer, I happened upon a young couple on a large rock outcrop overlooking a wilderness in Oregon. They had driven all the way from the Midwest to take in the view. I offered to snap a photo for them and then found myself documenting a remarkable moment as he dropped to one knee, pulled out a ring, and wove the magnificent scenery into the intimacy of his proposal. People make lifetime memories on our public lands.

From that rim on Steens Mountain to that bank along Rock Creek, to Yellowstone and Yosemite, to the desert Southwest and the wilds of Alaska, to national forests in every state – these lands are our heritage, our common ground, and a key part of our American identity and story.

Public lands must never be for sale – at any price.

It's not too late. Congress still has mountains of details to sort through to finalize the president's budget and tax cut agenda.

It's up to them to stop the selloff of our national heritage, and it's up to all of us to remind them that they must. When public lands are sold off for profit, we lose the places that define our country and unite us as Americans.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Don't expect 'collaboration and calm'

In your April 25 issue, Shawna Pfeiffer said, referring to the Democrats' attitude towards Trump, "They seemed intent on whipping up even more derision and contempt, when what our country really needs is collaboration and calm." This sounds like a great concept, but here's the thing: Trump always goes out of his way to be as viciously outrageous as possible. He always insists on total domination and destruction. The only "collaboration" Trump would ever allow is utter submission on our part. This, of course, is unacceptable to us.

I am gratified that the Democrats are gradually figuring out how to counteract Trump's outrages. His agenda fills us with horror and embarrassment. We are shocked and mortified that our country has fallen so far, so quickly. We will do everything we can to restore democracy to its rightful place, if this is even possible. So don't expect much "collaboration and calm" from us.

nondiverse city, county and state, advocate for wrapping their arms (and billions of dollars) around drug addicts, there are more creative, unconventional methods of using this funding, that are well within the strict guidelines of the settlement. Recall our perfect storm and those caught within – the children. We clearly have a deficit in how we support our children. The education system is based on test scores, not true learning and even when test scores are bad, the child is the afterthought to that equation. But why do children start to fail? If they are worried about their home life, of course school will take a mental back-seat.

I propose a radical idea: identify those children, especially very young children, who have been affected by the fentanyl and methamphetamine crises in our society and wrap your arms (and what is expected to be approximately $28 million dollars, between the city and the county) around them. For they are truly innocent and most deserving of our concern. Reinvigorate the DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) or GREAT (Gang Resistance Education and Training) programs; assign a big brother or sister from a local athletic department; perform community outreach with fire, police, city, county and state government agencies; follow-through with internships at those same entities; and ensure a college education and maybe even a living stipend for those kids that make it through and want to go to college.

This has the potential to establish a foundation and critical milestones on which at-risk children can focus in school and hopefully not follow a well-worn path to self-destruction. And in doing so, you simultaneous provide a path to their salvation, as well as our community's.

Solving the border issue

JAMES RICKMAN
Guest Opinion

New Mexican borderlands recently transferred from the Bureau of Land Management to the U.S. Army hold many treasures.

I became familiar with parts of these spectacularly lonely reaches of Chihuahuan desert nearly 40 years ago while attending New Mexico State University. A much older friend of mine had the privilege of patrolling the expansive stretches of sun-drenched scrub as a BLM volunteer. He extended an open invitation for me to spend days riding along with him in a battered pickup whenever

I desired.

Even in that era of Reagan and Bush, we'd encounter groups of migrants making their way north across the rugged landscape wearing makeshift flip-flops fashioned from strips of discarded tire tread and rags of faded clothing. BLM's official guidance was avoidance, but sometimes we'd unavoidably come across a group huddling in the shade of a long-dry arroyo bank next to the primitive two-track we were navigating in low gear.

In those cases, we'd stop briefly and hand out one or two milk jugs we had rinsed out and refilled with water. On one occasion, I gave my hat to a kid about five years younger than I whose ears, face and neck were peeling off his body from sunburn. He fished about among the few precious items he was carrying in a tiny makeshift satchel in an attempt to return the favor.

"No es necesario," I stammered in invented Spanglish. "Vaya con Dios!"

He flashed a sun-bleached Cheshire smile, and a chorus of muchas gracias floated off behind us in the blast-furnace breeze as we drove away.

In addition to transporting us through these hidden pockets of shared humanity, the truck hauled us through rugged canyons carved deep into the desert. Ancient petroglyphs pecked into rocks at key waypoints whispered highly detailed stories of hunting expeditions as well as mysterious depictions that defied modern understanding. Despite the harsh landscape, astounding species of delicate plants and insects that I had no idea existed thrived in the shadows and nooks. We discovered places so remote that the silence echoed inside your skull like a gunshot.

One day we passed through a BLM gate and plunged south for hours. Using obscure peaks for reference, we triangulated our location as somewhere near the Boot Heel. Barely visible tracks beckoned us farther south until we realized we had traveled uninhibited beyond our own frontier. For an instant we realized our illegal presence could lead to detention or worse if we were discovered by foreign authorities. In that same instant, we shared an infinitesimally tiny sherd of commonality with the undocumented dark-skinned pilgrims we could see heading in the opposite direction.

Later, in the village of Columbus, we drank cups of scalding-hot coffee in the afternoon heat and passed around packages of little powdered donuts among the outlaws who had taken over the community. My tour guide did his best to try to convince them that I was not an undercover fed fresh out of Quantico, but I could see in their eyes that the skepticism never wore off most of them.

The way some people tell it these days, illegal immigration is a product of the Biden administration. Yet illegal immigrants have served a purpose as far back as I can remember – whether it was harvesting produce, serving as nannies, maids or attendants of the elites or being unwittingly used as political pawns.

Our current administration has militarized New Mexico's borderlands, much to the disdain of our governor, who decided to militarize the streets of Albuquerque to deal with a crime crisis that probably stems from our nation's

Honoring our nurses: the heart of healthcare

DR. AJ STEPHENS

Guest Opinion

Each year, from May 6 to May 12, we celebrate National Nurses Week, a time to recognize and celebrate the differentiator in our healthcare system, our nurses. The Bureau of Health Workforce estimates there are 4.3 million actively licensed professional nurses in the United States, making nursing the country's largest healthcare profession.

At MountainView Regional Medical Center, I have the privilege of working alongside a team of exceptionally talented nurses who utilize their expertise, skill and compassion to serve our community every day. A nurse may be the first face a baby sees as they enter the world or the last face a patient sees as they are comforted at the end of their life.

We are proud, at MountainView, to serve as the area's only designated Level III trauma center, where our nurses serve on the front lines of critical, life-saving care. This designation means we are equipped to handle serious emergencies, and our nurses are a vital part of the team in providing that care. Our nurses pivot in a moment's notice to make critical decisions, deliver lifesaving care, celebrate some of life's most precious moments and support families during the most challenging of times.

The theme for National Nurses Week is The Power of Nurses to Transform Health. At MountainView, we are transforming how nursing graduates transition to practice with the launch of our new Nurse Residency Program, which adheres to the program guidelines set forth by the American Nurses Credentialing Center. Nurse residency programs improve quality outcomes, decrease costs, improve retention rates and decrease nursing turnover. Nurse residency programs are the gold standard for transition from academia to professional nursing practice, and we aim to give our nurses access to that gold standard here at home.

Whether it's a nurse in the emergency department comforting a family during the unthinkable, a hospice nurse supporting a patient and family during the end of life, a school nurse managing the chronic conditions of our children or an acute care nurse helping a patient improve and return home, nurses are at the helm of our healthcare system. Join us in celebrating these incredible healthcare professionals during National Nurses Week – and each and every day!

Dr. AJ Stephens is the chief nursing officer of MountainView Regional Medical Center and holds an Associate of Applied Science in Nursing, a Bachelor of Science in Nursing, a Master of Business Administration, specializing in healthcare administration, and a Doctor of Nursing Practice, specializing in executive leadership. Dr. Stephens is a member of the American and Texas Nursing Associations, a board member and president of The Texas Organization for Nursing Leadership and the Wolters Kluwer Publishing's Nursing Management Congress Conference planning panel.

collective refusal to deal with the immigration issue for as long as I can recall.

Ironically, the Trump administration is not the first to militarize our borderlands. Democrat Woodrow Wilson did the same thing back in 1916 in response to Mexican revolutionary Francisco “Pancho” Villa's attack on the village of Columbus, which seems to have preserved much of its outlaw heritage throughout the past century.

Had our nation truly wanted to address its immigration issue, it would have done so by now. But big business and partisan gridlock have prevented resolution, keeping us divided. Until the national electorate agrees to populate Washington, D.C., with moderates and true independents, New Mexico's borderlands, and those elsewhere, will continue to stash many of the dog whistles that keep us polarized and on a rocky path toward oligarchy.

Feds announce 'largest fentanyl bust' in U.S. history

AUSTIN FISHER
For Source NM

The U.S. government on Tuesday announced drug trafficking and conspiracy charges against 17 people – at least six in New Mexico – in what U.S. Attorney General Pamela Bondi is calling the “largest fentanyl bust in our nation’s history.”

At a news conference in Washington D.C., U.S. Attorney for the District of New Mexico Ryan Ellison said prosecutors have filed conspiracy, illicit fentanyl distribution, firearms and immigration charges as a result of the bust.

He also said the alleged drug trafficking organization is “one of the largest and most dangerous fentanyl operations in United States history” – spanning New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and Utah – and distributes drugs “throughout the western United States.”

“We will not tolerate those who profit from poisoning American citizens,” Ellison said.

Bondi said the organization is affiliated with the Sinaloa Cartel operating out of Mexico, and when authorities arrested its alleged leader, Heriberto Salazar Amaya, they found millions of dollars in cash and vehicles. She said he “insulated himself” from the drugs, which agents found in Albuquerque, Phoenix and Utah.

Asked for specifics on how the defendants were captured, Bondi said the investigation is ongoing and she won’t reveal police sources or methods.

In court records, two Drug Enforcement Administration special agents characterized three New Mexico defendants David Anesi, Vincent Montoya and Francisco Garcia as “high-volume drug traffickers” in the Albuquerque area, and Phillip Lovato as a “significant customer” in Santa Fe.

They also named Roberta Herrera as Montoya’s significant other “who has been observed participating in drug transactions” with him, and allege that Misael Lopez-Rubio rented out a storage unit in Albuquerque to use as a stash location.

DEA Acting Administrator Robert Murphy noted that the organization’s drug distribution had “probably caused” someone to die.

Since 2018, New Mexico has experienced a dramatic increase in drug overdose deaths associated with prescription drug use and, more recently, use of illicit fentanyl, according to the state Department of Health. Overall, deaths in the state attributed to drug overdose have fallen in the last two years.

Overall, authorities seized 11.5 kilograms of fentanyl powder; approximately $4.4 million in cash; approximately 79 pounds of methamphetamine; approximately 7.5 kilograms of cocaine; approximately 4.5 kilograms of heroin; approximately 41 firearms; and approximately 4.1 million fentanyl pills, according to court records.

Ellison said in Albuquerque alone, police found 2.7 million fentanyl pills; 11.5 kilograms of “concentrated fentanyl powder;” seven pounds of methamphetamine; “multiple kilograms of heroin and cocaine;” 41 firearms; more than $600,000 in cash and “numerous luxury vehicles.”

“When we catch you – all of these individuals, if convicted, we will put you behind bars,” Bondi said. “There will be no negotiating, and we will lock you up for as long as humanly possible. We will not negotiate with those who are killing our family members including brothers, sisters, daughters, sons, parents, friends.”

DOJ prosecuting, not deporting, defendants who aren’t citizens

Bondi said six of the people charged are living in the U.S. unlawfully. A detention order for Lopez-Rubio indicates that he will be held until trial, in part, because he lacks legal status in the U.S. and is subject to removal or deportation after any prison sentence.

When asked how she’s deciding whether to prosecute or deport any defendants who lack U.S. citizenship, Bondi said it’s based on their potential prison sentences, if they’re convicted.

“I want them to stay in our prisons as long as possible,” Bondi said. “There’s a very big risk – we all know – releasing someone, especially to Mexico. Sending them back to Mexico, who knows, they could attempt to get through our borders. Not under Donald Trump, I doubt. But they’re also part of a major drug trafficking ring in Mexico, so sending them back to Mexico to continue on with their drug business isn’t going to happen under this administration.”

Mexico Counties Adult Professional Detention Accreditation and that it had a graduation of detention center cadets.

The Fire and Rescue Department received three new units that are ambulances with firefighting equipment on board for enhanced emergency response capability, Lopez said.

Weir said the county’s Crisis Triage Center is now a 24-hour site and fully staffed.

Assistant County Manager Jonathan Macias said the county designed a new logo and hired a new public information officer as part of its effort to enhance the county’s transparency with the public.

Lopez said the county has 1,400 miles it is responsible for and that over the past year, the county repaired over 120 miles of road. He said 27 county-maintained roads are in various stages of planning, design or deployment for more repair and maintenance work.

Some projects under way

Lopez said one of the biggest is a $38 million project in partnership with federal, state and local government to improve how cargo moves along Industrial Avenue in Santa Teresa Industrial Park. Lopez called it a “critical area at the Port of Entry.”

Lopez said the Office of Emergency Management will be in a new building that is underway near New Mexico State University’s golf course in a partnership with NMSU. Lopez said it will open in about a year.

The county is working to expand broadband service in a 25-mile stretch between Hatch and Radium Springs. Weir said the project is 95% completed and will bring high-speed internet to more than 1,600 homes and 1,200 businesses. She said it will be completed in the next few months.

Weir said the county is also bringing high-speed internet to the county Fairground and expects to improve wireless connectivity with new microwave towers by the end of June of this year.

Weir said a compensation study is also underway to ensure the county retains talent and can attract new talent and is “competing in the market in a fair and equitable manner.”

Weir said the county’s internship program is in its fifth year and this year the county is revamping it to tie it more closely to educational outcomes. She said that in partnership with the school districts, the county plans to better match student interest with business partners, will have a syllabus for the students and that they will learn life skills such as writing a resume and how to apply for jobs.

Gardens of Earthly delights

DEX REPORT

The 2025 Art in the Garden Tour, a Picacho Hills-based art event, returns on Saturday, May 10.

This year's tour includes five locations and 17 artists and runs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The event is free and open to the public. It draws large crowds on the Saturday before Mother's Day. Patrons can expect to see paintings, ceramics, jewelry, photography, mosaic art, mixed media, and fiber artwork.

Members of the Artists of Picacho Hills have been organizing and hosting this event since 2011. The group invites Picacho Hills residents to select five gardens representing Southern New Mexico landscaping at its best. Each residence will host three to four artists in their garden. These artists will display their work, and some will even provide demos. Master Gardeners will be onsite to answer questions about the plants and landscaping.

"Art in the Garden is a lovely way to welcome the community to Picacho Hills for a perfect blend of art, nature and social interaction," said event chairperson Cate Tomassen. "I look forward to showing my paintings for the first time at this event."

This year the group has invited local guest artists to participate. These include some Agave Art Gallery Artists; among them photographer Emmitt Booher and multimedia artist Nancy Begin. There will be potters and artists working in fiber and assemblage. New member Tess Lane is excited to share her new Spring collection of enamel jewelry inspired by spring blossoms and mandalas during the event.

"I love participating in the Artists of Picacho Hills Art in the Garden each spring," said watercolor artist Becki Thomas. "It is such an excellent way for me to showcase my watercolor paintings and gifts in a beautiful garden setting."

Returning painter Donna Popky likes participating in this event because "it's so much fun to set up art displays in neighbor's gardens and have the public enjoy wandering around the gardens and enjoying all the creativity of our group. I have been creating flowerpots painted with New Mexico scenes and being that this is a Spring event, planters and gardens seem to be in sync."

All 17 artists will be present to talk about their work, and this event provides the opportunity to buy from the artists themselves. A welcome booth stocked with maps to guide patrons to the gardens will be behind the Santa Fe Restaurant on Picacho Hills Drive.

For more information about Art in the Garden, visit the website at www.artistsofpicachohills.com.

Tom Segura stars in "Bad Thoughts"

Comedian Tom Segura shares some of his 'Bad Thoughts' in new Netflix series

celebrityupdate

BY JAY BOBBIN

Q: Now that "The Handmaid's Tale" is wrapping up, what will Elisabeth Moss do next?

A: In one sense, she's not going all that far. The winner of two Primetime Emmy Awards, two Golden Globe Awards and two Screen Actors Guild Awards will be staying in the "Handmaid's Tale" universe for Hulu, though not as an actress. She'll be an executive producer of "The Testaments," a sequel series based on another novel

Elisabeth Moss

OF THE HANDMAID'S TALE ON HULU

by "The Handmaid's Tale" author Margaret Atwood.

Already in production, "The Testaments" will continue the saga of the Gilead regime 15 years later, with the daughter of Moss's character June Osborne expected to be one of the major figures in the follow-up. Moss is no stranger to behind-the-scenes work, as she has proven in multiple ways during the run of "The Handmaid's Tale" by directing a number of episodes (including the series finale, which will begin streaming on May 27) and also serving as an executive producer on that show.

Moss will also be a star and executive producer of "Imperfect Women," an Apple TV+ series based on the novel by Araminta Hall. Kate Mara and Kerry

Washington (who is another executive producer of the project) will also star.

Over the course of "The Handmaid's Tale," Moss has worked on both sides of the camera on other shows as well. In 2022, she was a star, executive producer and director of the Apple TV+ thriller series "Shining Girls." Then in 2024, she was a star and executive producer of the FX on Hulu melodrama "The Veil."

Having also appeared last year in the feature film "Shell," Moss — who cemented her place as a TV regular as the youngest daughter of President Josiah Bartlet (Martin Sheen) on NBC's "The West Wing" (1999-2006), then did iconic work as advertising-agency employee Peggy Olson on AMC's "Mad Men" (2007-15) — surely has much more work ahead of her.

As Loretta falls deeper in love, she comes to learn that she's not the only one in her family with a secret romance.

BULLETIN REPORT

Some say jazz music is beneficial for the brain.

Studies suggest that listening to jazz can activate brain waves associated with relaxation, creativity and improved memory. It can also directly benefit students. The Border Jazz Orchestra will be presenting a Jazz Scholarship Benefit concert at 7 p.m. on Saturday, May 10, at the Atkinson Recital Hall, 1075 Horseshoe St., NMSU campus.

The Border Jazz Orchestra is a professional jazz ensemble that is comprised of the region's finest jazz musicians. Founded in 1991 by Pancho Romero, professor emeritus at New Mexico State University, the BJO has performed with many internationally recognized jazz musicians including Chris Vadala, John Fedchock, Hilary Smith, Bobby Shew, Clay Jenkins, Dana Landry, and Pete McGuinness.

Romero, a professional jazz musician and trumpet player, has performed around the world as a guest clinician and jazz solo artist. He founded the Albuquerque Jazz Orchestra and the Bison Jazz Orchestra and currently performs in the BJO, NMSU Faculty Brass Quintet, Footprints Jazz Combo, Tres Amigos Brass Trio, El Paso Symphony and is musical director of the Mesilla Jazz and Blues Society. He has produced four albums featuring student performers that have received international acclaim.

Members of the ensemble, mostly jazz educators, have toured with jazz greats: The Glen Miller Band, Woody Herman, Airmen of Note, Wayne Newton, and Elvis. They have performed on stage with Richy Cole, Bill Watrous, Tia Fuller, The Supremes, The Temptations, The Four Tops, the Sandy Hackett's "Rat Pack" along with decades of jazz performances at jazz festivals and regional concerts.

The ensemble performs a variety of jazz music including the classic big band arrangements of Duke Ellington, Count Basie, and Stan Kenton, along with more contemporary compositions and arrangements of Fred Sturm, Gordon Goodwin, Patty Darling, Alan Baylock and Pete McGuinness.

The Jazz Scholarship Benefit concert is free, but attendees are encouraged to donate toward the Mesilla Valley Jazz and Blues Society Bob Burns/Helen Sachs Scholarship Fund, which has benefited dozens of aspiring young jazz musicians since its inception. Three of the scholarship recipients will be performing with the professional ensemble.

The concert will feature BJO's own Jessika Brust and her trio "The Ivory Jazz Foxes" in Jessika's own arrangements of WWII's "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy" and Christina Aguilera's "Candyman." The concert will also feature original arrangements by Bob Leatherman, Mike Tamaro and Mike Kamuf. In addition, Romero will be featured on an arrangement of "A Mis Abuelos" in dedication to all those mothers, grandmothers and great-grandmothers past and present on the eve of "Mother's Day."

Doors open at 6:30 p.m. For more information, call 575-644-1136.

Summer camp returns to Museum of Space History!

DEX REPORT

The New Mexico Museum of Space History and the International Space Hall of Fame Foundation (ISHFF) have announced the return of the New Mexico Rocketeer Academy Summer Camp.

That's right, summer camp at the Museum of Space History in Alamogordo is making a comeback this July 7-25 with three one-week camp sessions offering elementary and middle school students a thrilling dive into the science and adventure of space exploration.

Campers will join either the Galactic Explorers (grades 3-5) or Galactic Challengers (grades 6-8), with tailored activities ranging from building planetary rovers and space suits to designing space elevators and communication satellites. Two classes will be offered each week. Each class is limited to 25 cadets.

"Summer camp at the Museum of Space History has been a tradition in our community since the mid-1980s," said ISHFF President Johnny Powell. "Parents brought their kids, who grew up and then brought their own children. Memories were made, friendships were forged, and imaginations were sparked. The Foundation and the Museum have partnered to bring this exciting program back with the goal of making it the biggest summer adventure kids will ever have."

Plus, this year the camps include an out of this world field trip to Spaceport America and the Virgin Galactic Gateway to Space—a rare chance to explore real-world commercial space-flight operations right here in New Mexico. Transportation and lunch are provided. Limited space is available for parents (security clearance required).

"What a perfect crescendo for a space and STEM based camp. The opportunity for cadets to actually see the future of space exploration unfolding in our own state is amazing," said Powell.

Camp dates this year are July 7-11, July 14-18, and July 21-25. Hours will be 9 a.m.-4 p.m., Monday-Thursday, and 9 a.m.-12 p.m., Friday. Lunch will be included. Plans are also underway for an expanded camp in 2026 reaching children in more grade levels.

Several organizations within the community also came together to help provide funding for the camp, including the Sacramento Mountains Foundation, Rotary International, and Christus Health. Zuni Electric also jumped on board by sponsoring a limited number of scholarships.

"The enthusiasm for this summer camp program in the community was astounding," Powell said. "When we asked these organizations what they thought the most important thing we could do for the community was, to a person they said, "Bring back summer camp at the Museum."

Registration is now open at Summer Camp 2025 Registration. Cost is $250 per cadet and includes the week-long space-based camp, field trip to Spaceport America, lunches, and a camp t-shirt. Limited seats for parents to join their children on the field trip are available and can be booked at cadet registration. Spots fill fast, so do it today.

The New Mexico Museum of Space History is located at 3198 State Rte. 2001, in Alamogordo. For more information about the ISHFF, visit spacehalloffame.org. For more information about the New Mexico Museum of Space History, visit nmospace-museum.org.

Thank You for Making a Difference!

A heartfelt thank you to everyone who participated in the Great American Cleanup on Saturday, April 26! Your time, energy, and commitment made a tremendous impact in keeping Las Cruces clean and beautiful.

Whether you chose your own cleanup spot or worked in a location assigned by Keep Las Cruces Beautiful, your efforts helped strengthen our community and promote pride in our city.

We also extend our sincere gratitude to Walmart 806 (on Walton) for generously providing a delicious complimentary breakfast. Your support helped start the day off right!

Together, we made a difference—and we couldn't have done it without each and every one of you.

Thank you for being part of something great!

stature and community ties to help stabilize the Club's future, launching what would become its most vital annual fundraiser. Though Lou passed away in 2020, his legacy lives on, not only through the breakfast, but soon through the Club's basketball court which will have the Henson name on it. This is part of the new expanded home for the club, a renovation of an old theater on El Paseo Road. Mary Henson, a steadfast champion of the Club's mission, addressed the crowd before the keynote to honor her late husband and thank the sponsors and everyone there. Her words were a touching reminder that the spirit of mentorship and perseverance the Hensons embodied is still alive and well.

Ashley Echavarria, chief executive officer of the Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces shared that stories like the ones told by club members Hibner and Gantzler are what keep her going, even on the toughest days.

"I continue to be overwhelmed by the community's outpouring of support each year during this event. There are no words to express our gratitude to the Hensons and every community member who continues to show up for our kids in support of our important mission. The generosity of everyone in the room today goes directly toward helping us continue the essential everyday work of providing a safe, nurturing space where young people can learn, grow and thrive," Echavarria said.

The morning ended much as it began: with standing applause, warm embraces, and a feeling that hope – like breakfast – is best when shared.

A look at historic districts of Las Cruces

May is Historic Preservation Month in New Mexico, and Las Cruces is honored to have three neighborhoods listed as Historic Districts in both the New Mexico Register of Cultural Properties and the National Register of Historic Places. All three deserve a visit.

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Mesquite Historic District

The past is almost palpable as you walk through the Mesquite Historic District, one of the few still intact neighborhoods dating from the mid-nineteenth century in the Southwest.

This birthplace of the City of Las Cruces was formally established in 1849 to ease crowded conditions in the village of Doña Ana. The area was surveyed using a braided rawhide rope to lay out parcels of land. One hundred and twelve settlers camped under a large tree in what is now Klein Park, while lots were drawn assigning ownership.

Descendants of some of these first families still live in the neighborhood.

But Mesquite has a history dating back even further. Members of the Piro, Mansa and Tiwa peoples lived in the area, and their families, too, still live here. And El Camino Real de Tierra Adentro, the Royal Road of the Interior, ran approximately down what is now Mesquite Street. Between 1598 and 1882 trade goods were carried by oxcart along the 870 miles between Mexico City and San Juan Pueblo in northern New Mexico. Although the streets are now paved and lined with sidewalks, by walking down Mesquite Street, and using a little imagination, you can sense the multiple layers of history laid down by Mexican traders, Indigenous community members, and settlers of Spanish, African, and Northern European descent.

Today the original townsite is half the size it once was, having lost the west portion to urban renewal in the 1960s and 1970s. But much of what remains is the real thing: houses, shops, and churches constructed between the 1850s and 1930s. Traditional adobe homes front directly on the streets and, in the rear, placitas, once spaces for work and livestock, are now yards and gardens. Many roofs are flat, often graced with an arched or pointed pediment, vigas protrude just under the rooflines, and canales extend through the parapets, draining rainwater away from the adobe walls. Philips Chapel CME Church was completed in 1912 to serve the neighborhood's strong African-American community, and doubled as a school beginning in 1924, during the time of forced segregation. The serene, white-plastered adobe church was restored by a diverse group of volunteers between 2010 and 2016 and services, open to anyone, are once again held there.

Today, Klein Park invites residents and tourists alike to rest in the shade, use the playground equipment, or listen to a concert given in the small amphitheater. One of the best restaurants in the district is across the street, and a second is only a few blocks away. In recent years art galleries have moved into some historic buildings, and once a month the district sponsors a First Friday Art Ramble. Visitors can amble along Mesquite Street, or ride a free horse-drawn trolley, hopping out when they see something that catches their eye.

Best of all is Christmas on El Camino Real, when the street glows with luminarias and, in Klein Park, Santa will hear a child's wish list.

Alameda-Depot Historic District

Even before the Atcheson, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad reached Las Cruces in 1881 a land development consortium, calling itself the New Mexico Town Company, began buying up and platting residential lots in the fertile farmlands to the west of downtown. New arrivals from the eastern states brought new and trendy ideas of home building, and the railroad gratified their desires by bringing in materials largely unavailable before: milled lumber, hardware, window glass and pre-cut wooden trim. Between the end of the 19th century and into the first decades of the 20th a stylish suburb grew, boasting Queen Anne, Bungalow, Tudor Revival, Mediterranean and Pueblo Revival styles. One large adobe farmhouse, once surrounded by irrigated fields, is the only remnant of the agricultural days.

Jessica: 3 years, Female

I started my journey here as a tiny puppy, and now I'm all grown up and ready for a forever home, just no cats, please! I absolutely love the water, playing fetch, and getting all the scratches and cuddles I can. I get a little excited when I first come out of my kennel, but once I've had a chance to run around, I settle down and just want to be close to you. I would thrive with thoughtful introductions and continued guidance to help me be my best self. I'd love to find a forever companion to share my days with, right by your side.

lot on Court Street, came to Las Cruces with the California Column in 1862 and stayed to become a lawyer and a member of the New Mexico Town Company. He shot New Mexico Supreme Court Justice John P. Slough dead in the billiard room of the La Fonda Hotel in Santa Fe, and who later changed the venue of Billy the Kid's trial from Lincoln to La Mesilla, ensuring the Kid's conviction for the murder of Lincoln County Sheriff William Brady.

On Griggs Street is the adobe Territorial Style home of Sam Bean, Jr., whose brother, Judge Roy Bean, was the infamous Law West of the Pecos. A bungalow on South Miranda housed Albert Bacon Fall, once United States Senator from New Mexico, then Secretary of the Interior, but topped this all off by being convicted of taking bribes in the infamous Teapot Dome Scandal in the 1920s.

At the heart of the district is Pioneer Woman's Park, a tree-shaded square-block with a charming gazebo in the center. The park was created by the Las Cruces Woman's Improvement Association in 1896, purchased from the railroad with funds earned from renting out the town's first hearse. Their 1927 Mission Revival meeting house still stands across from the Park on Raymond Street. The gazebo is a popular venue for concerts, rallies, and especially weddings. But on quiet afternoons the district, with its air of a late 19th century neighborhood, is ideal for a relaxed walk under the mature trees and along the avenues of eclectic period houses.

Mesilla Park Historic District

Mesilla Park began in 1887 as a planned urban development, independent of Las Cruces, with its own post office and train station. Also laid out on formerly irrigated farmland, the irrigation ditches, acequias, still provide water to the mature trees that line the streets. Non-residential portions of the town were designated near the train depot. Main Street ran along the railroad tracks, and the commercial strip ran along the east side of Main Street. For the resident's convenience there was a grocery store, a Wells Fargo Express office, telegraph agent, icehouse, barber shop, and livery stable. Where there are still small shops, some of them are in original buildings. West of the tracks, beyond the train station, were warehouses, many owned by mail order businesses which flourished when the country was still primarily rural. Today, art galleries and entertainment venues, workshops and light industry, continue to use these buildings.

Albert Bacon Fall home, Alameda-Depot Historic District

A little further west is the residential area, where houses built from 1887 to the 1960s stand on large lots. The eclectic styles vary from Queen Anne through bungalows, Craftsman, Territorial and Pueblo Revival, to mid-century Ranch Houses. St. James Episcopal Church is a classic example of Gothic Revival. After creation of New Mexico A & M College in 1890, now NMSU, proximity to the campus attracted faculty and staff. Perhaps this interest in education prompted the community to open a one-room school for its children in 1901. In 1907 a Mission Revival style schoolhouse, designed by noted architect Henry C. Trost, opened. Over the years additions kept up with the needs of the community until, eventually, a new elementary school was built. The original school was renovated and now serves as the Frank O'Brien Papen Recreation Center, a space where the community can come together for learning, sports, and socializing.

Mesilla Park was annexed by Las Cruces in 1964, but still has an elegant and peaceful ambiance, with lovely places to walk, especially along the old acequias when the oleander are in bloom.

This story first appeared in the Las Cruces Bulletin's guide to living in Las Cruces, Life is Good, 2024.

Editor's note: This story appears courtesy of the authors and is a part of a series of stories honoring the historic value of Las Cruces and, during the month of May, Historic Preservation Month.

Three Aggies earn CUSA postseason awards

NMSU ATHLETICS

Conference USA announced its 2025 Softball Postseason Awards on Tuesday, May 6.

The league recognized six superlative honorees in addition to 30 all-conference selections and 11 outstanding freshmen. Desirae Spearman, Kristiana Watson and Tamara Carranza all cracked the list, representing NM State on each of three separate teams.

Spearman picked up First Team honors for the second straight season, while Watson earned a spot on the Second Team. Carranza was recognized for a remarkable first collegiate campaign with an

All-CUSA Freshman Team distinction.

Desirae Spearman, sophomore, pitcher and outfielder.

The El Paso native won 2025 All-CUSA First Team. Last season, Spearman was tabbed as the CUSA Player of the Year and Freshman of the Year.

The two-way standout earned a pair of First-Team selections in addition to a Freshman Team spot after a dominant 2024 campaign. In her second spring of collegiate softball, Spearman posted even more impressive numbers and etched her name into the record books once again with another All-CUSA First Team distinction.

Kristiana Watson, a junior, first base.

The Tucson native got picked for the 2025 All-CUSA Second Team. Over the summer, Head Coach Kathy Rodolph announced the signing of nine transfers, including the former Arizona State and Duke slugger.

After taking 2024 away from softball to complete her bachelor's degree, the 6-foot-0 first baseman came to Las Cruces to headline a lethal offense. As the most consistent member in the lineup, Watson's eye-popping batting statistics warranted a Second-Team distinction from CUSA.

Tamara Carranza, freshman, short-stop.

Carranza, who hails from Imperial, California, is on the 2025 CUSA All-Freshman Team.

After graduating from Brawley Union High School last spring, Carranza strolled into Las Cruces as one of Rodolph's eight freshmen for the 2025 season. NM State's roster was full of student-athletes with Division I experience, but Carranza stood out early on. After getting a chance to play shortstop in the opening game of the season, the freshman never looked back. The first-year Aggie started nearly every game in the infield, earning an All-CUSA Freshman Team selection.

Minimize your mistakes for better golf scores

THE GOLF DOCTOR
CHARLIE BLANCHARD
Guest Columnist

From my point of view, playing golf the way you would like to play means minimizing your mistakes. A “mistake” on the golf course can mean many things to many people. But, fundamentally a mistake represents a result you would like to erase if you were allowed to do it over again. Over the years, when I have watched high-handicappers play, I have noticed several typical mistakes that they make. Note that these tend to be different errors than a scratch golfer or pro would make. The pros tend to make their mistakes in the areas of decision and judgement, rather than skill or technique.

A lot of dedicated, high-handicap golfers (18 to 30 handicap) can move the ball off the tee with some degree of talent. Of course, with the ball on the tee, there is a boost in confidence. A full swing with a long driver demands mostly large muscle coordination and is not a finesse play. The mistakes for our high-handicapper seem to happen the closer he gets to the green. Inside of a hundred yards the problems with the finesse play begin; this is not disrespect, mind you, just observation. Let’s say our 24-handicapper has 80 yards to an elevated, shallow green, with a deep bunker guarding the hole location. Chances are he will aim at the pin, and either hit it “fat,” advancing the ball only a few yards, or “blade” it over the green so he is left with an impossible chip back downhill toward the same bunker. On-course coaching would advise our novice to run the ball along the ground to the left of the gaping bunker onto the green and give himself a chance for a two putt. Finesse shots are difficult for high-handicap golfers because they have not mastered the touch and feel of those delicate shots. “Feel” is mostly a golfer’s estimation of what will happen with a ball hit from a particular shot in a particular situation. “Touch” concerns the actual execution of the shot that is planned. And skill with those shots comes from learning the fundamental technique involved, and many hours of practice.

It’s agreed among all golf instructors everywhere that high-handicappers make most of their glaring mistakes next to and on the greens. Once on the green it seems that putting speed is something that escapes notice. The most glaring omission seems to be failing to appreciate the proper speed inside of ten feet. Folks with decent eyesight are pretty good at seeing the line of the average putt, sensing a right or left break. But there is often a disconnect when it comes to stroking the putt firmly and letting the ball follow the intended line.

Here are some things you can do immediately to reduce the mistakes you tend to make. First, spend five minutes on short putts (inside of six feet) on the practice green before you tee off. This will familiarize you with the speed and help your confidence. Secondly, play away from hazards, whether they be sand or desert or water. With your GPS and laser yardage devices you should be able to see and estimate exactly where and how far to position your ball for an easier next shot. Thirdly, ask your pro or an expert to go out with you on a playing lesson where he can help identify and pinpoint where you, personally, are prone to make mistakes.
