Alexander Skarsgard in "Murderbot"

May 16 - 22, 2025

Based on the Hugo and Nebula award-winning series "The Murderbot Diaries" by author Martha Wells, the new sci-fi series "Murderbot," starring Alexander Skarsgard, premieres Friday, May 16, on Apple TV+.

Q: Will the new female agent on "FBI" be staying with the show?

A: That seems to be the plan, particularly after Stuart Scola (played by John Boyd) has had several partners since the start of the CBS and Paramount+ show's current season — which ends on Tuesday, May 20. He was still teamed with Tiffany Wallace (Katherine Renee Kane) when the series' seventh year began last fall, but she left soon afterward.

Emily Alabi

Among potential replacements who came in was Behavioral Analysis Unit officer Sydney Ortiz (Lisette Olivera), but she stayed for only a handful of episodes for being written out by her transfer to another office. (The producers reportedly developed concerns about the part being cast too young, particularly opposite the much more experienced Scola.)

Then, in April, Emily Alabi was introduced as Dani Rhodes, an independent-minded undercover operative who had to learn quickly how to be a team player in order to fit in with Special Agent Maggie Bell (Missy Peregrym) and company. She essentially filled in for Maggie in a later episode, providing even more of an opportunity to show how she might perform with the rest of the crew.

Alabi had a different role as a guest on the now-ending "FBI: International," and she also has appeared in other CBS procedural dramas such as "NCIS," "S.W.A.T." and "Magnum, P.I." ABC's "The Rookie," The CW's "Jane the Virgin" and MTV's "Teen Wolf" have been among other credits for Alabi, who was a dancer-choreographer before turning to acting, even working on The Oscars in that earlier capacity.
