June is Pride Month.

But because of June temperatures in Las Cruces, the annual Pride parade won't happen until October.

That doesn't mean the LGBTQIA+ community won't be celebrating, Ryan Steinmetz, PFLAG Las Cruces mountain west regional director, told the Bulletin. The community will still be able to participate in various celebrations throughout the month.

Steinmetz said the main decision to move Las Cruces Pride parade to October was because the fall month is cool enough weather-wise to allow those celebrating to be outside and have fun.

"It was also consistently conflicting with the June-teenth celebration. That was also a factor," Steinmetz said.

Nathan Saavedra, director of policy, power and people for Equality New Mexico, told the Bulletin that Las Cruces isn't the only city in New Mexico to hold its Pride parade in a different month. Silver City holds it in September while Taos holds it in August.

Saavedra said Pride Month originated as a protest.

He said that only a few days after the death of LGBTQIA+ icon Judy Gar-

WIND, DUST, CLIMATE CHANGE AND TRAFFIC BREW A PERFECT STORM NEAR THE ARIZONA BORDER

Why I-10 near Lordsburg keeps killing drivers

Frequent dust storms have turned a remote stretch of I-10 into a hazard zone. As deadly crashes rise, scientists and transportation officials are exploring what can be done.

DAMIEN WILLIS
For the Southern New Mexico Journalism Collaborative

On Feb. 27, Joseph Malley was driving to work when an intense dust storm engulfed Interstate 10 near the Arizona state line. In moments, visibility dropped to nearly zero, triggering an 11-vehicle pileup. Malley, just 45, lost his life in the chaos, leaving behind his wife Janie and three school-aged children. Family members described Malley, a Rodeo, N.M. resident, on a GoFundMe page set up for his funeral as a compassionate, hard-working man who made others feel safe and valued. His death serves as a tragic reminder of how quickly these dust storms can turn deadly. Just west of Lordsburg, the wind doesn't have to be howling to be lethal. On the long, flat stretch of Interstate 10 between Las Cruces and the Arizona border, all it takes is a gust, a fine layer of disturbed soil, and a few seconds of reduced visibility. This remote but well-traveled corridor has become one of southern New Mexico's most dangerous highways. Recent deadly crashes tied to blowing dust have prompted highway closures, public warnings and renewed scrutiny from state and federal agencies. The windblown dust and hazardous conditions it creates have claimed dozens of lives over the decades, often in multi-car pileups.

Indeed, researchers believe it's one of the deadliest stretches in the Southwest for dust-storm crashes. At least 41 people have died over the past six decades, numbers that don't include crashes of the last few years. And experts warn that the risks are likely to increase, as climate change sparks drier soil conditions and more frequent dust storms across the Southwest. Absent serious and likely costly interventions, this stretch of roadway spanning a dry, crusty lakebed known as the Lordsburg Playa could become even more deadly.

Dust on playa easily becomes airborne

Dr. April Ulery, a professor of soil and environmental science at New Mexico State University, has studied the region's highly erodible soils. She said the alkali flats near the freeway are topped with smectite clay – a fine, sodium-rich material prone to erosion, especially when disturbed. “It's really, really fine,” Ulery said. “By fine, I don't mean good. I mean tiny. These particles are so small, they can be carried thousands of miles. But when they get picked up by wind and cross the freeway, people can die.” Ulery explained the soil's structure makes it nearly impossible for vegetation to thrive. The clay seals over when wet, forming shallow lakebeds that quickly dry, leaving behind a fragile crust that cracks easily. “It's impervious to water,” she said. “There's almost no infiltration. And that makes it hard to establish any kind of vegetation.” Dr. Brandon Edwards, an assistant professor in NMSU's Plant and Environmental Sciences Department, has researched wind erosion throughout the region. He highlighted the role of biological soil crusts – microscopic communities of bacteria, fungi and mosses – in reducing wind erosion.

“These crusts act like a natural glue,” Edwards said. “They stabilize the soil surface, help retain moisture, and prevent particles from becoming airborne. But they’re incredibly fragile. Even just a single vehicle passing through can destroy them.”

Winds are shifting, and so is the risk

Southern New Mexico has been blasted by abundant wind in 2025. While gusty weather is typical each year, the number of high wind warnings has been concerning. On the Lordsburg Playa, about half of the first 120 days of the year saw peak gusts topping 30 mph, according to data from a New Mexico State University weather station. And a handful of dates, including as early as Feb. 27, saw gusts exceeding 50 mph.

Experts believe climate change contributes to regional drought and shifting wind patterns. Ulery noted that areas previously protected by mitigation efforts have become vulnerable again as winds increasingly blow from the southwest, pushing dust across the highway from unexpected directions.

Natural hazards meet human risk

Dr. Dave DuBois, New Mexico’s state climatologist, said the Lordsburg Playa is a known dust source with a perfect storm of natural conditions endangering drivers.

“You’ve got a dry playa, drought conditions, high spring winds and one of the busiest corridors in the state. That’s a recipe for disaster,” he said.

DuBois said the New Mexico Department of Transportation has partnered with state police, the Bureau of Land Management and researchers to address the threat. Passive warning signs along I-10 alert drivers to the risk, while active warnings come from officers monitoring the corridor.

“Education and enforcement are critical,” DuBois said. “The more people understand the risk and follow guidelines, the fewer tragedies we’ll see.”

Dust storms have seasons – and staying power

Springtime dust storms, DuBois explained, typically result from large upper-level troughs and can be forecast up to a week ahead. But summer storms, triggered by collapsing thunderstorms, are harder to predict and shorter-lived but equally dangerous.

“We’ve been hammered this year,” DuBois said. “Above-average wind events, almost no rain. The drought means drier soils, and drier soils mean more dust.”

Climate change makes the situation worse

Climate change, DuBois emphasized, makes things worse.

“Even a slight increase in average temperature leads to more evaporation and less soil moisture. Over time, that accelerates drought and erosion.”

Efforts to seed slow-growing ground cover like alkali sacaton have begun, but recovery is slow.

Edwards, a wind erosion expert at NMSU, suggested establishing or artificially replicating soil crusts as potential solutions, but acknowledged the challenges of restoring vegetation in the Lordsburg Playa.

“It’s not just the dryness or salinity – it’s the unpredictability of the rain and the physical properties of the soil,” he said. “Any large-scale restoration effort has to be extremely targeted and supported by long-term monitoring.”

Ulery emphasized that simple strategies like applying gravel or organic mulches could also help stabilize soil surfaces temporarily, providing immediate relief while longer-term solutions are developed.

DOT attempting solutions, but challenges persist

Since a 2014 crash that killed seven people near mile marker 6, the New Mexico Department of Transportation has worked to stabilize the Lordsburg Playa through targeted land restoration. Bill Hutchinson, a landscape architect and section chief for NMDOT’s Roadside and Community Design Group, said the agency has fenced off thousands of acres and removed cattle from dust-prone areas in coordination with the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

“We’ve essentially eliminated some of the most active dust sources,” Hutchinson said. “But the playa is massive – almost 20 square miles – and conditions shift. What was once stabilized can become a new source of dust when the wind changes.”

After the fatal crash in February, Hutchinson said the department identified the source – a 40-acre patch of BLM land west of Lordsburg – and began emergency mitigation work. The playa covers a patchwork of private, state and federally owned lands.

“We’re in reactive mode,” he said. “We can’t control land we don’t own, but we’re doing what we can to work with federal partners.”

Hutchinson said the long-term goal is to have the Lordsburg Playa designated as an Area of Critical Environmental Concern by BLM – a special land classification that would trigger a federal management plan prioritizing public safety. “That designation would be a game-changer,” he said. “Right now, we’re limited by what we can do without long-term commitments from other agencies.”

Researchers said illegal use of off-road vehicles on the playa is another factor in the hazard. The vehicles cut through the desert crust, freeing dust to be picked up by wind.

Locals also blame commercial vehicles on I-10 and the fact they are incredibly deadly when involved in collisions with much smaller passenger vehicles as yet another part of the problem. Reckless drivers who fail to slow down when conditions worsen add to the challenges.

How to survive a dust storm

The state’s message to drivers is clear: Pull off the road, turn off your lights, take your foot off the brake and wait.

“People tend to follow brake lights,” DuBois said. “If you’re pulled over and your brake lights are on, someone might think you’re still on the road and crash into you.”

State sues water utility authority, alleging improper water treatment

NOAH RAESS
Las Cruces Bulletin

The New Mexico Environment Department has filed a lawsuit against the Camino Real Regional Utility Authority alleging that CRRUA has failed to properly treat drinking water and properly notify customers about high arsenic levels.

In a statement, Environment Department Secretary James Kenny said that NMED “has invested significant technical resources to assist CRRUA,” and that “its failures continue to threaten public health.”

The lawsuit alleges multiple cases of water from CRRUA having elevated arsenic levels dating back to 2009 including one instance in late 2023 where the state says CRRUA intentionally took an arsenic treatment plant offline and did not notify residents. The most recent violation listed in the lawsuit came on May 6, 2025, when CRRUA allegedly did not notify the public when a test showed the water had elevated levels of arsenic.

CRRUA Executive Director Juan Carlos Crosby did not respond when asked for a comment.

NMED hopes to see the court order CRRUA to conduct monthly meetings, have real-time arsenic testing, give free arsenic tests to customers, provide a different water source if arsenic levels are high and pay civil penalties.

NMED says that it hopes this sends a message to other water providers – naming the City of Las Vegas and Cassandra Water System in Moriar-ity directly – and said that, “the State will not hesitate to have them replaced” if they cannot provide safe drinking water.

During a May 13 Doña Ana County Commission meeting, the county voted to terminate the agreement that formed CRRUA. The county is now working on bringing in an engineering firm to assess the CRRUA infrastructure and communicating with Sunland Park on next steps.

At a May 28 press conference held by The City of Sunland Park, Mayor Javier Perea said that he welcomes the termination and sees it as an opportunity to reevaluate the system. Perea also said that during the next city council meeting, there will be a resolution that will request support from the council to form, “our own water and wastewater department” in case the county decides to separate the CRRUA assets.

The next Sunland Park City Council meeting will be held on June 4.

Doña Ana County has set up a dedicated phone line and online form to hear questions and complaints regarding CRRUA.

The county said that this is a partnership with the City of Sunland Park and assistance is available in both English and Spanish. The number for the phone line is 575-525-5589.

That became an annual event that later turned into the annual Pride parade in late June.

Las Cruces Police Department identified the 14-year-old boy who was shot and killed at the intersection of Solano Drive and Spruce Avenue Monday night as Alejandro Roman.

Roman was killed in an apparent road rage incident on at 9 p.m. on June 2, the Las Cruces Police Department reported.

The Las Cruces Police Department said in a press release that the “exact circumstances remain under investigation.”

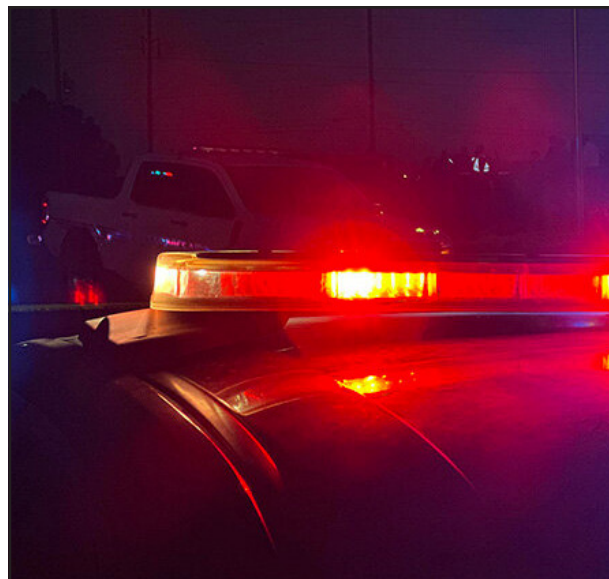

The police were dispatched due to reports of shots fired near the intersection of Spruce and Solano. Roman was shot at least once while sitting in the backseat of a vehicle, according to a police news release. When officers arrived, they found the boy suffering from his gunshot wound. Life-saving measures were attempted but Roman was pronounced dead at the scene.

The City said it could not provide any additional information at this time. No arrests have been made.

A deadly drive: Wife of I-10 dust-storm crash victim speaks out

He left home in a purple pickup. She warned him about the wind. What happened next is part of a growing crisis on this lonely stretch of highway in southwest New Mexico.

DIANA ALBA SOULAR

For the Southern New Mexico Journalism Collaborative

The last time Janie Malley saw her husband Joseph, 45, alive was the morning of Feb. 27 at their home in Rodeo, a tiny community in the desert of New Mexico's Bootheel.

It was a typical work and school day with one exception: High winds were already picking up as their family prepared to set out from home. She helped her kids – ages 10, 13 and 17 – get ready for school, and they headed to the bus stop in her vehicle.

En route home, she passed her husband, who was starting his daily commute. Behind the wheel of his flashy purple-and-yellow F-150 pickup, he was bound for Lordsburg, about a 50-minute drive, to help install some new speakers at the high school football stadium for his job.

"I waved at him and I blew him kisses, and he blew kisses back at me," she said. "I called him and I told him: 'You need to be really careful because it's windy. Have a good day and call me when you get to Lordsburg.'"

Joseph did call her about 30 minutes or so later from a truck stop in Road Forks, where Hwy. 80 connects to Interstate 10, just east of the New Mexico-Arizona state line. The gas station is one of the few places to fuel up in the remote area. Joseph reminded his wife to feed their animals, and she told him she was "already on it."

"And I was laughing and joking around with him, and I said 'I love you. Please be careful,'" Janie recounted.

"I love you, too, and I will," he replied.

"And that was the last time I spoke to him," Janie said.

One of the most deadly stretches

Malley then entered a roughly 20-mile section of I-10 described by researchers as one of the deadliest stretches in the American Southwest for dust-storm crashes. The path crosses the Lordsburg Playa, an expanse of dry, dust-en-shrouded lakebed whose origins stretch back to the Ice Age. Dozens of travelers have been killed over the decades in such storms, which experts warn are becoming more frequent because of climate change.

This I-10 corridor experiences frequent closures because of dust causing reduced visibility – and increased driving hazards. Authorities in both Arizona and New Mexico are accustomed to blockading the highway and rerouting traffic onto smaller, two-lane routes, such as north from Lordsburg toward Safford and back to I-10. Travelers must detour dozens of miles from their original route. And the traffic causes congestion on small rural roads that weren't designed for interstate traffic volume, posing its own risks.

Vehicles traveling I-10 across Southern New Mexico in 2017 totaled about 15,600 daily, about one-third of which were commercial trucks, according to state data.

While known to be dangerous during high winds, the corridor was not yet blocked when Joseph started driving it that day in late February, entering the eastbound lanes toward Lordsburg.

The Malleys had moved from Lordsburg to Rodeo in the fall of 2024 after Joseph's boss had offered an opportunity for the family to move to a house on an acreage there and become caretakers. So the dust storm of Feb. 27 – earlier in the season than a typical spring wind event – may have been among his first encounters, if not his first, commuting across the playa during such turbulent weather.

An unmistakable 'Purple People Eater' truck

Joseph had spent part of high school in Lordsburg. But it was in West Virginia where he met Janie in 2007 when she was attending college. They married a year later. The family had experienced a number of ups and downs, and their move cross-country by bus to Lordsburg in 2019 offered a chance for a fresh start. Joseph remembered

Public input: a vital part of reducing city's carbon footprint

We want YOU to help shape the future of energy in Las Cruces!

The City of Las Cruces Utilities Department (Utilities) wants input from local residents about the City of Las Cruces' Natural Gas Transition Plan (NGTP) to meet goals set by the City of Las Cruces Climate Action Plan.

"We want to hear from you," said Hector Terrazas, City Utilities Department Deputy Director for Natural Gas and Energy, who is heading up the NGTP project and outreach.

The NGTP project will help Utilities meet the goals established by the City's Climate Action Plan (CAP), which was adopted by the Las Cruces City Council in 2020. The CAP includes a 2018 inventory showing most greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions in Las Cruces come from automobiles, and also from commercial and industrial buildings in the City, local residences and solid waste.

Goals in the CAP call for GHG reductions of 19 percent or greater by 2030 and 73 percent or greater by 2050 (using 2018 as a baseline), said Terrazas, a Professional Engineer who grew up in Anthony, New Mexico and is a New Mexico State University graduate. He has been with the City since 2011 and became a Deputy Director last December.

Public input is a vital part of reducing the City's carbon footprint, Terrazas said. Utilities wants to hear from a wide variety of stakeholders throughout the NGTP project, including City residents who use natural gas for heating, cooking and hot water, and business owners who use it for commercial and industrial purposes. The goal is to build an energy plan that allows the City to meet its climate targets in a way that is sustainable and affordable for its customers, he said.

The impact on monthly gas utility bills for our customers is of particular concern, Terrazas said.

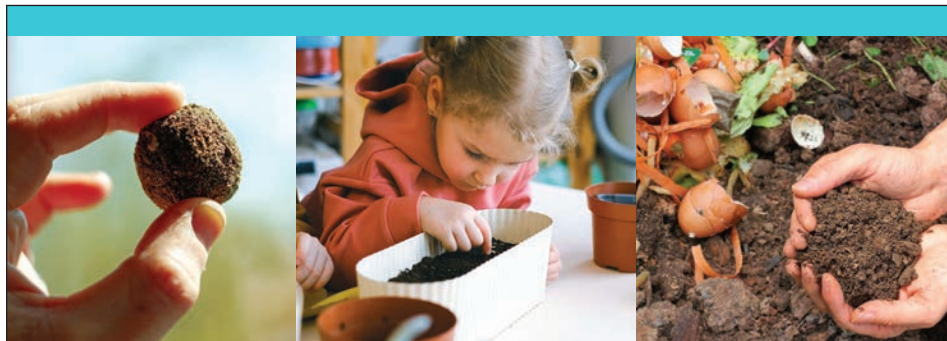

As part of the NGTP, Utilities hosted a public workshop May 20 at City Hall to help residents learn more about NGTP and how they can participate in its development. Utilities also hosted community events at Big Daddy's Flea Market on May 4, Munson Senior Center on May 5, Save Mart on May 12, and the Farmers and Crafts Market of Las Cruces on May 17.

The events help customers explore new types of energy that could work best for Las Cruces, the impact of those energy sources on utility bills and ways to lower carbon emissions from natural gas in your home and citywide.

"We want to make sure we get everyone's input," Terrazas said, so the City's energy plan is one that "people working and living here and paying gas bills are happy with."

how he'd enjoyed living in New Mexico about two decades prior.

Janie said her husband had always had a strong work ethic. He soon launched his own handyman business and picked a mascot from one of his favorite childhood films – the “Purple People Eater.” He needed a truck that fit the theme, so he spray-painted his F-150 purple and applied yellow lettering. It was easily recognizable on the streets of Lordsburg, a city of 2,100 people. While Joseph had a serious side, his pickup embodied the silly and fun aspects of his personality, his wife said.

On Feb. 27, it was the bright purple-and-yellow truck that first responders immediately recognized when they reached the scene of an 11-vehicle pileup, instigated by the intense dust storm. Semi-trucks and passenger vehicles lay mangled together.

Janie and her 17-year-old daughter had both tried calling Joseph that morning but with no success. Janie wasn't immediately worried, assuming her husband was working on the stadium speaker system and wasn't available.

Meanwhile, authorities were able to reach Joseph's boss, who got a message through to Janie to reach out to authorities. Police then relayed the terrible news.

'He died in service of others'

While the color of Joseph's vehicle was recognizable at the scene, the shape was not. A tractor-trailer had slammed into it, leaving it “like an accordion,” Janie said.

She said her husband somehow survived the immediate impact, and he exited his truck, possibly to try to assist other crash victims. Joseph had served in the National Guard and the National Guard Reserves, and she said it was his nature to want to help people whenever possible.

“He died in service of others,” Janie said. “That's what I see it as.”

When Joseph left his truck, he was struck by multiple other vehicles – one of the most disturbing details of the incident. His body was found in pieces, his wife said.

Two other people from Florida were also killed in the pileup.

An optimistic future cut short

After his handyman work, Joseph had taken a job working in IT for a small company in Lordsburg. His boss, Kim Kvamme, who's also a bishop in a local church, had become somewhat of a mentor to Joseph. He said Joseph had a difficult childhood and faced other life challenges, but, after a lot of hard work, felt that key pieces were falling into place.

Kvamme said the Malley's move to Rodeo was “something he'd always dreamed about, having a place with land and getting his kids to live out in the country.

“He was so optimistic about the future for his family and his marriage,” he said. “He felt that finally life was paying off for him.”

Kvamme said he was stunned when he received word Joseph had died in a crash.

“I knew that would have a huge impact on his family,” he said. “I just thought about how much I was going to miss his association. He had a humor and dry wit about him. I kind of inherited a dark humor from my dad. So, Joe kind of got me.”

Kvamme experienced a close call firsthand years ago driving the same stretch of I-10 where Joseph died. He recalled that, in a matter of 20 seconds, winds picked up and dust enveloped the roadway.

“I felt the impression – I need to get out of here,” he said.

He got out of harm's way by exiting the roadway and driving on the adjacent land back toward an exit to Animas that he'd just passed. He later learned a multi-vehicle pileup happened minutes after he got off the road.

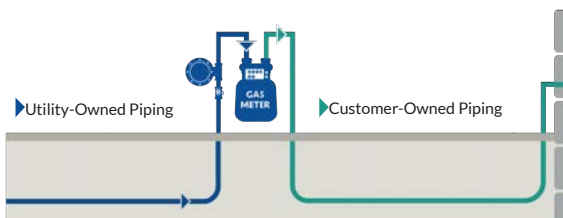

In June 2017, six people were killed in a 25-vehicle pileup between the New Mexico-Arizona line and Lordsburg. At least 41 people died on this stretch of highway between 1965 and 2020, according to a group of researchers led by R. Scott Van Pelt, an erosion expert with the USDA's Agricultural Research Service. About half of those fatalities have occurred since 2012.

Those numbers don't include the dust storm-related crashes of the past

NATURAL GAS CUSTOMERS

MAINTENANCE OF CUSTOMER-OWNED GAS PIPING

Notice: In accordance with Congressional Mandate (Docket PS-135, Amendment 192-3), the City of Las Cruces Gas Section hereby notifies you that the portion of gas piping (yard line) between the gas meter and the house/building is not maintained by the Gas Utility Company.

PLEASE KEEP IN MIND THAT:

1. Unmaintained buried steel gas piping may be subject to the potential hazards of corrosion and subsequent gas leakage.
2. Buried gas piping should be:
 - a. Periodically inspected for leaks.
 - b. Periodically inspected for corrosion if the piping is metallic.
 - c. Repaired if unsafe conditions are found.
3. Before excavating near buried gas piping, the piping should be located, marked, and excavated by hand.
4. Licensed gas fitters/plumbers and contractors can assist in performing the required inspections described in 2 above, making leak repairs, and locating the buried gas piping prior to the start of any planned excavation.

If you have gas piping as described, it is your responsibility to safely maintain it.

five years, including the one that claimed Joseph's life.

A family mourns their husband, father

An outpouring of support from Hidalgo County residents in the wake of Joseph's death has helped buoy his family. Financial support from a GoFundMe campaign helped get his remains back to West Virginia. It was his wish to be buried next to the couple's daughter who died in infancy. Joseph's ex-wife, with whom he also shared a child, attended the memorial service and told Janie she was "the best thing that ever happened to him." Janie said she "broke down" upon hearing that reminder of just how strong their bond was.

Several dozens of people attended another memorial service in New Mexico, with another 100 or so tuned in online.

"His childhood wasn't the best, and he fought for everything he had," she said. "And he never thought he was good enough. He'd say, if something were to happen to him, nobody would even care."

But seeing the turnout, she looked upward with a quick message to her late husband: "Ha, you were wrong."

Janie's three children have been remarkably resilient in the wake of her husband's tragic death, although she's seeking counseling to help them cope with grief. She said she's grateful for assistance from her church and donations to the crowdfunding campaign. Police officers and Lordsburg officials often stop her when she's in town to ask her how she's faring.

"I do know that Joe's death really impacted this community really badly," she said. "It's a small community; when one person's hurting we all hurt."

His absence is taking a toll on the family financially. Janie had been attending Cochise College in Douglas, Arizona, working toward a degree. And Joseph was the main income earner. She's expecting an insurance payment, but has been scrambling to make ends meet. Her church has helped her a lot, but she doesn't like asking for assistance.

"I hated to, but I had to sell some of his tools to be able to pay the electric bill and other bills and stuff this month,” she said earlier this month. “Now, my electric bill for May is due. They’re threatening to cancel my insurance on my car.”

‘It’s sad nothing is being done’

Janie said Joseph was a jack-of-all-trades. His diverse interests ranged from hunting to crocheting. He’d taken up drawing and tattoo artistry, too. He was midway through building his own workshop when he died. His handyman tools, still stashed at the family’s home, and some incomplete home improvement projects serve as constant reminders of his passing. Janie has reluctantly had to sell some of the tools to help pay bills.

His absence weighs heavily on the Malleys.

“He was the rock of this family,” she said. “He was the strongest of this family. And now I’m trying to be as strong as he was, but I don’t think anybody can be as strong as he was.”

Janie said Joseph was her soul mate, and she has difficulty imagining herself remarrying.

Her oldest child, Serenity, who’s a junior in high school, is hoping to work with her shop class teacher to create a welded memorial that can be placed on the roadside near where Joseph was killed.

Meanwhile, questions remain about her husband’s death. Why wasn’t

I-10 closed that day? And mostly, how many people must die before officials solve the problem? Janie said she hasn’t heard from anyone in an official capacity, aside from someone who let her know about a crash report being filed.

No one has reached out to express concern or to pledge to address a crisis that will continue to kill other people’s wives, husbands, fathers and mothers.

“How many families have to lose their loved ones before somebody does something about that stretch of road?” she said. “I see all the memorial markers of people who passed away on that highway to Lordsburg. There’s little crosses everywhere. It’s sad nothing is being done.”

Bregman’s run for governor

NOAH RAESS

Las Cruces Bulletin

Bernalillo County District Attorney and gubernatorial hopeful Sam Bregman said he plans on addressing crime throughout the state, especially when it comes to juvenile crime.

Bregman announced his bid for governor back in April and has a long history holding public office, including being on the Albuquerque City Council, New Mexico Racing Commission, and being the Deputy State Auditor. Bregman touts his experience as district attorney and cites that he has “indicted 46 kids for murder” as evidence that he can tackle juvenile crime.

“You’re seeing a spike through the whole state in juvenile crime,” Bregman said. “I’ve been a big proponent of changing the children’s code up in Santa Fe.”

Along similar lines, the New Mexico Children

Youth and Families Department, or CYFD, has faced years of criticism over how effective the department is at helping children.

“CYFD has a lot of good people working over there,” Bregman said. “But they are getting burnt out because they have a constant 30% vacancy rate.”

Bregman continued by pointing to how understaffed the Bernalillo DA’s office was and how he hired “80 lawyers” to cut their workload in half.

“We’ve convicted 300 people of murder in the last two years, convicted 3,000 people for DWI,” Bregman explained. “We can do the same thing at CYFD.”

On more economic issues, Bregman said that he sees the border with Mexico as, “one of the single biggest economic opportunities the state has ever seen.” He continues by saying it can be improved by building a “workforce for the next generation.”

For the Democratic Primary in 2026, Bregman faces former U.S. Secretary of the Interior Deb Haaland and recently announced former Las Cruces

Mayor Ken Miyagishima. In his announcement, Miyagishima homed in on New Mexico’s medical malpractice laws that he said were pushing doctors out of the state. Miyagishima called on his opponents to not take money from trial lawyers.

When asked about this challenge, Bregman said that he “is not taking him up on his offer” and that trial lawyers are not the enemy.

“Trial lawyers every single day stand up for people that have been hurt,” Bregman said.

He also opposed any cap on how much money can be won from a malpractice lawsuit citing how it could be unfair for the victim and calling the idea “ludicrous.” According to archived pages from The Bregman Law Firm’s website, the firm has won millions of dollars for people because of malpractice lawsuits.

The primary will take place on June 2, 2026.

A short trip from pariah to profits

WALT RUBEL
Guest Columnist

In the 1990s, sportscaster Al Michaels used to slyly sneak references to the point spread into his NFL broadcasts.

"That extra point will be significant to some of our viewers," Michaels would say after a late PAT that was meaningless in terms of which team won the game.

Ever since the Black Sox scandal of 1919, when eight members of the Chicago White Sox were accused but not convicted of intentionally losing the World Series to the Cincinnati Reds, professional sports has treated gambling like a new, vaccine-proof strain of the smallpox virus.

Baseball responded by naming former federal judge Kennesaw Mountain Landis as its first commissioner. Seventy years later, when Pete Rose was accused but not convicted of betting on baseball games, he was banned for life, including selection to the Hall of Fame.

In 1963, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle suspended star running back Paul Hornung, better known as "The Golden Boy," and defensive lineman Alex Karras for the season following allegations they had bet on games. There was no evidence of point-shaving or game fixing, Rozelle stressed.

Even as recently as 2003, the NFL rejected Super Bowl ads by the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Authority because league officials didn't want their big game tarnished by the mention of Sin City during the commercial breaks.

Now, the Las Vegas Raiders are the trendiest new location for visiting fans, even if their team still stinks. Go Broncos.

And, sly references to the point spread have been replaced by a never-ending stream of "proposition bets." Prop bets started with the Super Bowl for things like who would win the coin toss or what color Gatorade would they pour over the winning coach. They have evolved into an industry where new odds and bets are created after every play.

Gamblers who lose in the first inning can keep chasing their losses for eight innings more. For compulsive bettors, that has had predictable results.

Beyond that, prop bets have also led to violent attacks against college athletes who did not meet the artificial standard set by the oddsmakers. And, they have made it incredibly easy for athletes to cheat. Former Toronto Raptors Center Jontay Porter used others to place bets against him, then would intentionally have himself removed from games.

Sports gambling was a fairly rare thing during the days when leagues were the most concerned about it. To bet on a game, you either had to travel out of state or know a guy. Now, all you need is a phone.

In 2024, sports betting in the United States raked in $13.71 billion in revenue. The global sports betting market is expected to reach $187.39 billion in the next five years. And, everybody involved in the sport is getting a little taste of that sweet new revenue.

Finally, the hypocrisy got to be a bit much for the grand poobahs of baseball. Eight months after his death, they decided that maybe Pete Rose can get into the Hall of Fame after all. And you too, Shoeless Joe.

To be clear, I'm not calling for a return to the 1960s. But I wish that just one time the pendulum in this country would stop somewhere near the middle. And, I'd like to watch a game without endless references to the latest parlay, if that's not asking too much.

media, I do consume a number of local pages to obtain information on our city. This is especially necessary because of the lack of other media sources in our immediate area, but that is a topic for another day.

A couple of those pages include regular posts of mugshots and associated charges. They don't ever have trouble finding content.

But I've noticed something recently. Before the new year, only the most egregious charges were listed regularly: DUI, murder, aggravated battery. Sometimes you would see shoplifting and the value of the merchandise stolen.

However, I have noticed a distinct difference since the new year – now, you regularly see charges like failure to appear, failure to pay fines, warrant/fugitive from justice, violating domestic violence orders, etc. Basically, a lot of people are suddenly being arrested for failing to adjudicate previous charges.

So what does that mean? This means that previous offenders are being re-arrested for failing to either go to court, pay fines levied by the judge or are otherwise re-offending. But again, this is only a recent trend – what has happened since the new year?

I sat down with District Attorney Fernando Macias a few weeks ago and he confirmed my assumption – his office is actively pursuing repeat offenders to the fullest extent possible within the existing laws. They are reviewing

At odds with oath of office

SARAH SMITH
Guest Opinion

The right to petition is enshrined in the U.S. Constitution, N.M. State Constitution, and Las Cruces City Charter. As part of the Bill of Rights, petitioning is one of the most basic rights that the government is sworn to uphold and protect, thereby providing an avenue by which people can request that the government address concerns and grievances. Our City Councilors and Mayor vowed to uphold the constitution and City charter when they took their oaths of office, yet their recent vote against the Realize Las Cruces petition is at odds with these vows.

Realize Las Cruces, an ordinance approved by City Council in February, is a sweeping policy change that overhauls the longstanding zoning code, removing single family residential zoning across much of the City and instead allowing high-density apartments and some businesses into existing neighborhoods. Per the City Charter, people are allowed to petition to have ordinances placed on the ballot for a vote by the public. To that end, I organized a petition drive to put Realize Las Cruces on the ballot so that the people would have a chance to vote on whether to allow such comprehensive changes to their neighborhoods. Per the City Charter, we were required to collect 3,240 signatures.

From the beginning, the City made the petition process as difficult as possible. They would not allow us to collect signatures electronically. They would not allow petition volunteers to use electronic copies of the 400-page ordinance, so instead all volunteers were required to carry bulky printed copies of the ordinance. That was over 30,000 pages to be printed at a cost of over $1,000.

Of our initial 30-day deadline, the City burned up a week of our time with delays in providing the petition form and providing false information about who was allowed to collect signatures. The City Attorneys finally acknowledged their error, yet they refused to give us back that week of time even though the City was at complete fault for delaying the petition and giving false information. Later, the City refused to provide timely answers to questions about signature collection dates during the allowed petition amendment process, and then they threw out over 1,200 signatures without even checking them on the voter rolls just because of the dates on which they were collected.

Hundreds of other signatures were unjustly thrown out by the City, as well. For instance, some people had a hard time writing due to being elderly or having shaky hands. In those instances, they signed the petition and then the volunteers filled in the address and printed name. These signatures were all thrown out by the City.

Some others signed the petition with their nickname (such as Bill instead of William, Gilbert instead of Gilberto, Fran instead of Francis, or Tim instead of Timothy). In each case, the voter could still clearly be identified in the voter roll by the remaining information provided, but the Clerk still invalidated those signatures. All of these people would be allowed to vote at the polls, yet their signatures were not counted as valid on the petition.

Overall, more than 1,500 people have been disenfranchised by having their signatures unjustly invalidated. We tried to follow the City's processes, but they provided us with unclear instructions, false information, and a continually moving target. We collected 4,671 signatures, yet the City threw out over 1/3 of our signatures without due process and then ruled that our petition was insufficient. Those oaths to uphold the Constitution by Mayor Enriquez and Councilors Bencomo, Corran, Flores, Graham, and McClure look to be devoid of meaning now.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Miyagishima for governor

I want to express my support for Ken Miyagishima becoming the next governor of New Mexico. And this is not because he is from Las Cruces, but I think him to be the best candidate. And I do view it a plus for southern New Mexico to once again have the governorship because Albuquerque/Santa Fe are most often the powerhouse of the state.

Ken Miyagishima was a good mayor of Las Cruces for 16 years. During his tenure he learned not only the ins and outs of city government but also he worked considerably with state government. Also, he has been a successful businessman here for many years.

He has outlined his three main priorities of his candidacy. The are: public safety and the high crime rate, a need for medical malpractice reform, and the lack of affordable housing. I agree with these priorities and feel New Mexicans, in general, support these needed reforms. I don't think they are Democratic or Republican issues. For these reasons I back Ken Miyagishima's candidacy for governor of New Mexico. Won't you join me?

a massive backlog of cases and seeking to close them, which often means recognizing that conditions of release have been violated and the offender must be found and brought before the judge once again to prompt (potential) rehabilitation for the criminal and justice for their victim. Clearly, the District Attorney's office is working with law enforcement to hold criminals accountable for their actions and not to simply let the system fail everyone involved.

Additionally, the District Attorney's office now has nearly 20 prosecutors as compared to the handful that were there when Mr. Macias took office in January. This means the backlog is still a massive elephant to eat, but lots of hungry people have come to the table with forks. And now our police officers aren't having to act as prosecutor and peace officer, like they were before.

I can't imagine the frustration of a police officer arresting a criminal, having to try the case before the judge (after multiple, last minute continuances and schedule changes) and then watching as the system simply forgot about his subsequent offenses and refusal to face the music for his crimes.

This is a huge step in the right direction for our community. It shows a distinct and apparently renewed concern for our citizens, victims and even the criminals, because few of them can rehabilitate while in the throes of recidivism, especially recidivism driven by a failed system.

I told Mr. Macias that I didn't vote for him. But so far, I have high hopes for the direction he has already taken the office. This new role just might be his swan song, his enduring legacy, and his most profound service to our community after a lifetime in the judicial spotlight. I look forward to seeing the positive changes in our criminal justice system and to diminish the frustration, as much as possible, with repeat offenders in our community.

And so, I hope I have the chance to vote for District Attorney Macias in the future, as long as he keeps up the good work!

Las Cruces voters last year rejected the incumbent prosecutor for, at best, stagnation within the office. I can only hope that voters are paying equal attention to other elected offices throughout the community, and make similar, common-sense change this November and beyond.

The Rio Grande awakens: water release in Las Cruces

SANDRA MOULTON
Las Cruces Bulletin

It's that time!

Every year, something magical happens in Las Cruces when the Rio Grande, often a dry expanse of sandy riverbed, is revived with the release of water. It brings life to the land while offering an abundance of activities for the local community and visitors alike. This annual event isn't just about irrigation – it's a time to celebrate the river's importance to the region and everyone who depends on it.

The Rio Grande is one of North America's great rivers, running over 1,800 miles and serving as a natural border between the United States and Mexico. In Las Cruces, its seasonal revival is a vital and highly anticipated moment, breathing life into parched landscapes and reuniting people with a cherished natural resource.

For farmers, the arrival of water signals the start of a productive season. The Rio Grande's flow irrigates fields of crops like chilies, pecans, and alfalfa, supporting both the local economy and the agricultural traditions of the region. It's not just an agricultural lifeline but also a unifying force for farming communities, fostering cooperation and sustainable practices that ensure everyone benefits.

Rio Grande river after water release.

But the river isn't just for work—it's also for play. Once the water begins to flow, families gather to enjoy everything the river has to offer. From leisurely floats on inner tubes to kayaking and canoeing along its gentle currents, the Rio Grande becomes a playground for adventurers and relaxation-seekers alike. For anglers, the fresh flow opens up opportunities to cast a line and reel in catfish, bass, and trout.

This year the Elephant Butte Irrigation District released water on May 30 and will continue to flow for 90 days. This careful management ensures the river can continue to nurture the land and the community for generations to come.

As the river awakens, you might notice patches of white foam drifting along the surface. Don't worry – this is a natural occurrence. The foam forms as the rushing water stirs up organic material and air, creating a harmless, frothy layer that marks the river's reawakening.

For those eager to jump in, it's essential to know where to safely access the river. Popular spots include Mesilla Valley Bosque State Park and Leasburg Dam State Park, both offering areas for water activities, scenic views, and plenty of space to enjoy nature.

The annual release of water into the Rio Grande is more than a practical necessity – it's a celebration of the river's enduring importance. Whether you're paddling downstream, fishing on the banks, or simply marveling at the sparkling foam, this event is a reminder of how vital the Rio Grande is to Las Cruces' way of life.

So grab your sunscreen, gather your family, and go experience the joy and beauty of the Rio Grande as it springs to life once again.

Summer Reading Program

BULLETIN REPORT

Add color and excitement to your world by participating in the Summer Reading Program that runs through July 13 at Las Cruces Public Libraries.

The "Color Our World" Summer Reading Program kicked off June 1 and will celebrate the new season with a party from 1-2:30 p.m. Saturday, June 7, 2025, at Thomas Branigan Memorial Library, 200 E. Pícaro Ave. Adults and children can join the fun and get pictures taken with Bluey the Dog from E-Mazing Characters and Rentals. The kick-off party is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Branigan Memorial Library. Therapy dogs and a whirlwind of family activities are part of the kick-off party. Various community partners will also participate in the event.

This year's Summer Reading Program theme is "Color Our World" with activities and programs that will highlight art and colors. The free program allows participants to earn prizes for reading or listening to books. Prizes can be redeemed starting June 8 and can be collected through July 31.

To register for Summer Reading visit Las Cruces

Quinta Brunson

OF ABBOTT ELEMENTARY ON ABC

Q: When Quinta Brunson hosted "Saturday Night Live" recently and seemed surprised that Sabrina Carpenter popped in during the monologue, was that actually pre-planned?

A: You can bet on it, especially since a song was involved for the two of them during Brunson's second guest-host stint on the NBC and Peacock show. Not only that, but there also was choreography that came to encompass basketball legend Dwyane Wade and "SNL" cast regular Marcello Hernandez, and that surely had to require some rehearsal.

A big part of the surprise of two-time Grammy Award winner Carpenter's cameo was that she has no direct connection to Brunson — the Primetime Emmy-winning star and principal driving force of ABC's and Hulu's "Abbott Elementary" — other than their shared height (or lack thereof), which the musical number was about.

Anything that might seem spontaneous on "SNL" generally takes advance planning, even extending to it being done earlier at a full dress rehearsal a few hours before the live telecast. Given that there's a prior run-through of any given episode, it's interesting and commendable that most of the show's surprises don't leak before at-home viewers can enjoy it.

That reaction is just what "SNL" aims for, since having that word spread far and wide on social media afterward helps keep the series a must-see ... or so NBC and Peacock hope, anyway. The idea is to convince the audience that it has to be there at the given moment to get the full effect, and the in-studio screams and applause that greeted Carpenter's entrance on that recent episode confirmed that such secretive planning still works.

Brian Malarkey hosts "Cutthroat Kitchen: Knives Out"

Cutthroat Kitchen:
Knives Out
FOOD 7 p.m.

Brian Malarkey hosts another protein powerhouse as he asks the chefs to create a delectable meal from a unique source of protein. This week, it's cow tongue! Can the contestants make a meal that will inspire the judges or have them holding their tongues?

Destination X
KTSM 9 p.m.

Love is in the air in this new episode, as the journey takes the competitors to new, trickier locales. With romance brewing and red herrings in play, one player's journey ends — but two newcomers arrive, shaking up the game. Jeffrey Dean Morgan hosts.

"Revival" - Season 1 (Peacock — June 19, Series Premiere)

On one miraculous day in rural Wisconsin, the recently deceased suddenly rise from their graves. But this is no zombie story, as the "revived" appear and act just like they once were. When local officer and single mother Dana Cypress (Melanie Scrofano) is unexpectedly thrown into the center of a brutal murder mystery of her own, she's left to make sense of the chaos amidst a town gripped by fear and confusion where everyone, alive or undead, is a suspect. Romy Weltman, David James Elliott and Andy McQueen also star.

A book about wildlife is also a book about love

SUSAN MORÉE

Las Cruces Bulletin

One day Dennis Miller got a call about a hurt eagle.

He said the caller had inadvertently hit the raptor but could not stay as he was late for work. But though the caller put a towel on the fence so Miller could find the bird of prey, when he arrived the bird appeared lost.

"I saw a migrating group of ravens. I said, 'You guys can see better than I can.' I said a little prayer. The lead bird dropped down, the whole group followed him. One dropped almost to the ground and back up real quick. I made a mark and sure enough, there he was between some bushes," Miller recalled.

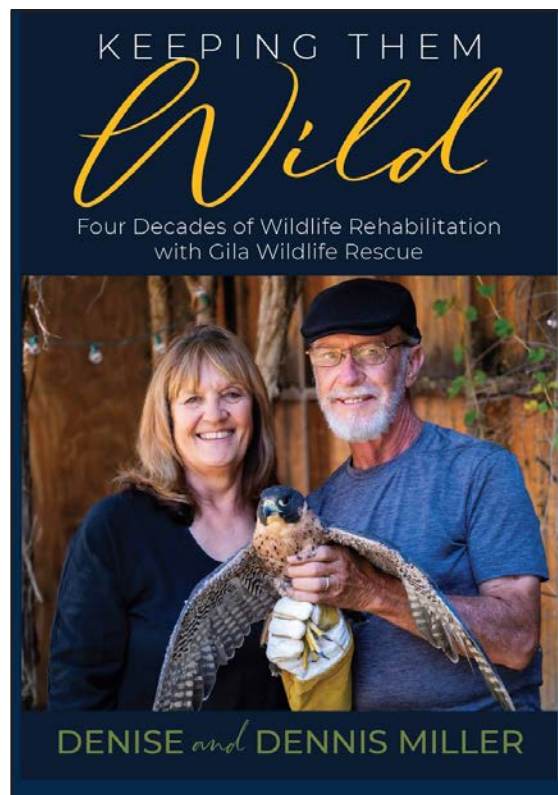

That's only one story among many Miller can tell about his 46 years of rehabilitating wild animals in southwest New Mexico. Miller got his start when, as a young biology teacher at Silver City High School, he volunteered to help feed baby deer. Now he and his wife, Denise, run a nonprofit called Gila Wildlife Rescue and drive across southwestern New Mexico rehabilitating mostly birds of prey but also bear, mountain lion and bobcats, among other wild animals.

The Millers have written a book about their experiences. The book, "Keeping Them Wild: Four Decades of Wildlife Rehabilitation with Gila Wildlife Rescue," is filled with photos, QR codes for access to online videos and stories of the many adventures Dennis and Denise experienced.

The book is also a love story.

Miller credits his wife of 24 years, by saying he "couldn't have done this without her."

But their work is more than a labor of love. It's also helping the natural ecology of the area.

Miller said that the loss of just one redbellied hawk can mean 1.46 million mice in the ecosystem. Lt. Governor Howie Morales praised the book and thanked the Millers for their wildlife work. He called it an "exemplary model for collaborative wildlife management," in a letter Miller shared with the Bulletin.

Miller said he and his wife work hard to keep the animals they rehabilitate wild. That means they do not rely on volunteers nor are they open to the public. Respecting the animals' wildness helps ensure the animals' survival.

But do the deer, mountain lions or birds of prey show appreciation for being rehabilitated by humans? Miller said most birds of prey, when released, simply fly off but there are some that circle back and fly over Dennis and Denise before flying away.

"I don't know if they're checking us out or saying thank you," Miller said.

He said other animals have stopped and looked back at them before running away.

The book may be another kind of love story.

Miller said that when he found that injured eagle that day with the help of the migrating ravens, the eagle's chest had been torn open due to its collision with a truck. As Miller carried the hurt bird, another eagle screamed at him from above.

Dennis and Denise placed the injured bird of prey into a box and rushed it to the local airport, expecting to ship it to Española for surgery. But the ticket agent told them the plane was full and there was no room in freight.

"A businessman overhead us converse. He said, 'If we can strap that box to a seat, I'll give up my seat.' Everyone in the whole room started clapping. It flew to Albuquerque strapped in a seat next to a passenger," Miller said.

The bird made it to surgery and recovered.

And a month later, when the Millers returned to the spot where they'd recovered the bird, they released him. Another eagle, perhaps the one who had screamed at Miller when he rescued the hurt raptor, was still there waiting.

"They grasped talons and flew off," Miller said.

Two festivals celebrate diversity this weekend

SERENA JOHNSON
Las Cruces Bulletin

The University Art Museum will host the 10th annual Feminist Border Arts Film Festival along with the 2nd annual Zine Festival Friday, June 6 and Saturday, June 7.

Co-founded by M. Catherine Jonet and Laura Anh Williams, associate professors of gender and sexual studies at New Mexico State University, the festival corresponds with June being Pride Month with variously formatted stories exploring feminism, LGBTQ+ and Borderlands perspectives. Admission is free and open to the public.

"The festival hits the markers of everything the University Art Museum is here for," said museum education and outreach coordinator, Eva Gabriella Flynn. "To promote the work of marginalized artists and connect the Las Cruces community to diverse stories."

The FBAFF will be held both Friday and Saturday from 11 am – 8 pm with the Zine Fest being held only on Saturday.

FBAFF will screen 66 short and feature-length films as well as host presentations and panels from artists, filmmakers, and scholars. Speakers this year include film maker and scholar Celine Parreñas Shimizu, cartoonist and graphic memoirist Nicole J. Georges, along with artists and filmmakers Stef Choi and Tony Candelaria, who have worked on animated films such as "Coraline." The festival will also include a special screening of the film "Half-Life" in honor of collaborating with the University Art Museum.

The Zine Festival, led by Williams, returns for a second year offering a chance for event goers to socially engage through print instead of screen.

According to Williams, Zines are an important feminist endeavor as it allows women to not just be consumers of art and culture, but makers of it as well. This year, these self-made publications were received from 35 countries and are available for purchase with most exhibitors accepting cash, Venmo or PayPal. For those looking for a more hands-on Zine experience, a comic workshop will be offered at 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Centennial HS coach retires with winning record

NOAH RAESS
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Centennial High School Softball Head Coach Fernie Valles finishes off his coaching career with a dominant season after going 30-0 and winning the state championship.

Valles retires this summer.

The team secured a resounding win over La Cueva High School in the final game with a 10-1 victory making them just the 8th team in New Mexico history to go undefeated in a season and ranked as the 22nd best team nationally by MaxPreps, a source for high school sports.

This continues the success of the previous seasons where they went 90-5 over the last three years.

Valles said he had some concerns before the season started.

"I had a lot of youngsters coming in because I lost seven players from the previous year," Valles said. "We played some summer games that we didn't think we were going to make it."

After some practice and a couple of close games with Mayfield and Organ Mountain High Schools, Valles said that "We started playing good after the first tournament. We went to Albuquerque and that's when I said, 'Wow, we really have a chance here.'"

This season wraps up

Valles' softball coaching career as he is retiring with plans of coaching his grandsons.

"I just enjoyed coaching these girls for a lot of years," Valles said. "It is rewarding to see them head to college and graduate from school."

This state championship marks the third in Valles' more than 40 year-long coaching career.

Nusenda logo to appear at Aggie stadium

NOAH RAESS
Las Cruces Bulletin

The football field in Aggie Memorial Stadium will look a little different come football season thanks to a new partnership between Nusenda Credit Union and New Mexico State University.

The five-year partnership will allow Nusenda to have its logo on the field during games. This decision comes after the NCAA lifted its long-held ban on corporate sponsors on fields in June of 2024.

The new rules from the NCAA allow for teams to put a single sponsor on the 50-yardline as well as two small sponsors elsewhere on the field.

In a statement, NMSU Acting Director of Athletics Amber Burdge said the department is grateful for the partnership and that "this five-year agreement comes at a pivotal time as we continue to build momentum around student-athlete support, facility enhancement, and community engagement."

Both Nusenda and NMSU declined to disclose what NMSU received in return for allowing Nusenda's logo on the football field.

The Aggies' first home game will be on August 30 against Rhode Island-based Bryant University.

Summer reading: “Playing from the Rough”

THE GOLF DOCTOR
CHARLIE BLANCHARD
Guest Columnist

As American as apple pie summer reading has been a staple pastime for ages, where folks relish the fair-weather hours in a hammock or at the beach with a good book in hand. I have been recommending summer books ever since I started this column 20 years ago in 2006. This year my no. 1 book is Playing from the “Rough: A Personal Journey through America’s 100 Greatest

Golf Courses” by Jimmy James.

Jimmy James grew up Black and poor in a shack with no plumbing or electricity in the piney hills of deep East Texas. His 1959 birth certificate is stamped “colored” and “illegitimate,” which doesn’t portend a man that rose as a top executive at ExxonMobil (he retired as head of America fuel operations), and a golfer who would play many of the most exclusive and revered golf courses in the USA. James managed to earn a degree in Civil Engineering at Prairie View A&M University, and retired from ExxonMobil after 33 years in 2019. He came to golf late, at 45 years old, thanks to his wife who gifted him a set of golf clubs along with lessons.

Having spent his whole life defying the odds, James took up golf and fell in love with it. But he wanted to do more than just play golf. He knew that golf in America has long been an exclusionary sport that often shut out Black individuals. When he started to dream of playing at the highest ranked golf courses in the country, he wanted to see how far he could go relying on the generosity of strangers he met along the way. He found out. As he traveled across the country he met people from all walks of life, on a journey that required 73,287 air miles, 17,492 driving miles, 82 nights of lodging, 8,797 golf strokes and 365 days. He also found signs of progress and hope for a more welcoming future for our country and its people.

Lest you think that James is a “duffer,” as he refers to himself, he is a truly skillful and honest golfer – no sandbagger here. Along the way in his mega-odyssey, he shot a 76 at Monterey CC. As an example of the many hurdles James was fortunate to overcome along the way, a family member of his sponsor at Shinnecock Hills on Long Island passed away just before their golf date. That’s when Shinnecock member Jimmy Dunne (see Bulletin issue June 23, 2023 “Who is Jimmy Dunne”) came to the rescue: he flew back to New York from his college reunion at Notre Dame and hosted James on June 3, the final day guest play was allowed before the U.S. Open there.

In between descriptions of the memorable golf courses and golf holes he played, with vignettes of good shots and other shots, James freely shared the trials and tribulations of his childhood and youth in Jim Crow Texas.

“What we ate was mostly grown or killed. Heat on cold winter days was generated from burning wood chopped by our own hands,” he said in his book.

As an adult realist, here is a snippet of his personal philosophy:

“What we do at the intersection of aspirations and adversity is the determinant of our life’s achievements or failures, not the circumstances. I believe that the circumstances define what we must deal with to achieve our goals. I do not believe they determine whether we can achieve them or not,” he said.
