70% of county was without power

By DUNCAN DENT

As the lights flicker back on following winter storms that left 70% of the county without power last week, Neshoba countians are beginning to feel some return to normalcy.

Meanwhile, about 15% of rural electric customers in Neshoba County were still without power 10 days after the first storm hit on Feb. 14.

Shelly Collins Belk said she had 10 family members staying in her home on Road 234 in the Dixon community.

Monday morning she had been six days without power and had only had her water sputter back on a few days prior. By 3 p.m. Monday she was celebrating.

"Hallelujah! We have lights," Belk said. "One happy camper here. Thanks to God and the linemen."

Brandie Walton, another Dixon resident, said she also had not had power since the evening of Wednesday, Feb. 16.

"They have been working so hard to get it fixed, and I am grateful," Walton said.

Emergency Management Director Darrell Wilson said Central Electric Power Association is continuing to make progress on repairs as county crews have cleared roadways countywide.

"Outage map numbers are steadily going down every time I check it," Wilson said.

As an example, Wilson reported close to 8,700 total outages Friday morning and by Monday morning that number was down to just 4,065 customers without power in the Philadelphia and Sebastopol districts.

By Monday evening, Central Electric's total customer outages was down to 2,936.

In a Tuesday morning release on their website, Central Electric reported 2,235 members without electricity.

They said 1,813 customers without power are in Neshoba County.

Central Electric said they have been working in some 20 areas and communities to restore power around Philadelphia and Sebastopol as the two major winter storms battered the area with ice.

Attempts were unsuccessful to reach a Central Electric customer service representative or a company spokesperson for details on why so much of Neshoba County lost power and when the remainder of customers were expected to have their power restored.

"Central Electric Power Association experienced sustained power outages throughout its seven-county service area," the company said in a news release.

10 DAYS NO LIGHTS

Chickens worry of Sandtown farmer

By STAFF REPORTS

Sheila Blount can't wait for hot water because it's been almost a week. "I am really looking forward to a hot shower when the power is restored," she said Tuesday from work.

The Blounts, who live in the Spring Creek community, were among the 15 percent in rural Neshoba County who were still without power Tuesday after winter storms brutalized the region last week.

Danny Robertson rode out most of the winter storm on their farm at Sandtown three miles from home taking care of their six chicken houses because the roads were impassable.

"The biggest problem was probably not living right next to the farm," Robertson said, adding they had to keep generators running but did not lose any chickens.

"We were fortunate," Robertson said. "We came out of this real lucky that we just lost power."

His wife Karri Robertson was at work on Tuesday and got a text message about noon that they had just received power — 10 days after the first storm hit on Feb. 14.

"I think all the linemen did a wonderful job getting the power restored," Robertson said. "It has been a struggle but we made do the best we could."

When Karri Robertson left for work at The Citizens Bank on Tuesday morning she said she knew crews were working in the area but was not sure when they would get to her.

Robertson said they lost power on Feb. 15, and the power was restored briefly on Wednesday for an hour and half but went out again.

The real worry for them was their chicken farm.

Sheila Blount is the secretary at The First United Methodist Church and described the power situation as "frustrating and inconvenient," but she knows linemen are working hard to restore power.

They lost power last Wednesday evening and as of midday Tuesday still had no power.

Blount said she has a power line down in her yard and her mother-in-law's across the street has a line that runs only to her house down as well.

She said she suspects they will be among the last people to get power in their area as crews work to fix the damage that will restore power to the most people.

She has not been told when to expect to have power back on. "They say they don't know," Blount said.

COMMUNITY RESPONSE

Baptists respond with aid, the Gospel

By SCOTT HAWKINS

steve@neshobademocrat.com

Baptist churches around the county pitched in to make sure people who were without power in last week's winter storms got warm meals.

Members of the Mississippi Baptist Disaster Relief Cooking Team brought in approximately 10 volunteers from south Mississippi who helped prepare and serve 1,800 hot meals over three days to Neshoba County residents impacted by the winter storms.

More than 70 percent of the county lost power as temperatures plunged to near single digits in the winter weather that moved in Sunday, Feb. 14.

David Addy, director of the Neshoba Baptist Association, which organized the relief effort, said the meals were distributed free to people Saturday through Monday regardless of denomination, race or creed at nine Southern Baptist churches strategically located to cover the whole county.

Addy said the different meals, consisting of chili, ravioli, chicken and dumplings with green peas, green beans and a fruit, were mostly distributed to cars that drove through parking lots of the churches.

But a few churches, such as New Bethel Baptist Church near Laurel Hill, still had electricity and allowed people to come inside for a sit-down meal and to use the church as a warming station.

"We didn't run into any problems," Addy said. "It all worked pretty well."

In addition to the 10 volunteers from out of the area, numerous local volunteers helped as well, Addy said.

County operations returning to normal

By STAFF REPORTS

Things are getting back to normal at the Neshoba County Emergency Operations Center after last week's ice storms that at one point left most of Neshoba County without power.

From midnight Monday until Friday night Neshoba 911 received well over 835 emergency calls to 911, said Emergency Management Director Darrell Wilson.

That is double the call volume. "To me, this ice storm reminds me of Katrina as far as the power outage was concerned," he said. "We didn't have the structural damage that we did in the 2019 tornadoes. But there were a lot of trees in the road."

Wilson said the back-to-back winter storms on Monday and Wednesday nights kept emergency workers busy.

"They were just about to see the light at the end of the tunnel Wednesday evening when the second storm hit. That knocked out power for most of the county," Wilson said.

"I will say this. The workers at Central Electric Power Association have been out in the freezing cold, trying to get the power restored. They have busted it," Wilson said.

"They have had a lot of lines down, poles broken and blown transformers. There are still people without power but that number is going down. I ask people to be patient with them."

The county's volunteer fire departments stepped up and helped to keep the roads clear of fallen trees, Wilson said.

"Our volunteers in the county are a big asset," Wilson said. "I appreciate everything that they do. At times, we can get them on scene a lot quicker than we can get a county crew."

They can get a small tree cut up and out of the way before the county crew can get to the building to get the saws."

Among the hardest-hit Tribal communities were Bogue Chitto and Tucker where the power was out for more than eight days in some instances.

Tribal facilities were offered as warming centers. Shelters, some with kitchen access, were available in the Bogue Chitto, Conehatta, Pearl River and Tucker communities.

Precautionary boil water notices were still in effect on Monday in some Tribal communities including Pearl River.

Choctaw Tribal Chief Cyrus Ben on Sunday reported that over 80 additional employees from electric cooperatives in Mississippi, Alabama and Arkansas were assisting Central Electric with restoration efforts.

About 7,142 Central Electric customers were still without power on Sunday and an estimated 600 of those were Tribal member homes, Ben said.

Tribal members were able to claim reimbursements for hotel and other out-of-pocket expenses during the storm, Ben announced on Monday.

Pearl River Resort never lost power and was able to provide shelter for many.

The good news is the Blounts have a generator and recently were able to borrow another one from family members who had their power restored.

Her husband, Joey Blount, has been working to switch the use of the generator between their house and his mother's across the street, primarily to keep their freezers from defrosting.

Sheila Blount said they are surviving all things considered but that the extension cords throughout the house have been the biggest nuisance.

"We have to move the extension cords around the house as we need them," Blount said. "Getting ready in the morning has been a challenge."

Power

"The damage caused from not one, but two winter ice storms was significant. We understand the hardship of being without power for an extended length of time, and we are truly grateful for your continued patience."

Central Electric Power Association said they have more than 160 workers, including crews from electric cooperatives in Mississippi, Alabama and Arkansas, who arrived Saturday working in the field to restore power.

"We are proud of the tireless efforts of our crews as they continue to work until every member once again has power," the company said.

Central Electric Power Association serves more than 36,000 accounts in a seven-county area in central Mississippi, including Attala, Kemper, Leake, Neshoba, Newton, Rankin and Scott counties.

At the height of the storms, Philadelphia Utilities General Manager Kirk Morgan said approximately half of their 4,000 customers, who are mostly in the city limits, lost power last week.

As of Monday, they had all of their customers' power back on, he said, adding they expected some more isolated power outages due to loose limbs falling from trees.

Morgan said customers started losing power on Tuesday after Monday night's storm, and they only had a few reported outages on Tuesday but it was the second storm Wednesday that came in on top of the first that made

A crew from Philadelphia Utilities wades through downed limbs to work on a power pole in town last week.

Morgan said most affected parts of town were Woodland Hills and Forest Park Circle due to the numerous large and old pine trees in those areas.

Morgan said they tried to attack those areas on Wednesday but had to pull out until the weather let up and work around those areas because of breaking limbs and trees.

Morgan said they had to make the decision to isolate the area and work around it while it was dangerous.

"It was too dangerous," Morgan said. "We had to pull out Wednesday and it was still too dangerous on Thursday."

Wednesday was when they reached the 50% mark on outages, and Morgan said that they had power fully restored by Saturday evening with assistance from crews from Starkville and New Albany that came to assist on Friday and Saturday.

"Everyone is back on," Morgan said Monday. "We appreciate the community being patient with us and communicating with us. That engagement really helps us out a lot."

Morgan said they had "all hands on deck" during the worst of the outages, and they encountered some problems with customers losing water pressure as well but that was never at the scale of customers without power.

Bell said her family found ways to adapt during their six days without electricity.

Between a butane fish cooker and a fireplace they were able to generate some heat as temperatures reached near single digits.

Bell said they shut doors and put blankets over entryways to areas they did not want to heat. They also used towels to block any air from escaping underneath doors. Closing the drapes at night also helped, she said.

With 10 people in the house, finding a place for everyone to sleep ensured that

The President of the Board declared the emergency which was attested by the Chancery Clerk. It will be ratified by the Board at their next meeting on March 1.

A special meeting was not necessary for the President of the Board to declare the emergency.

"The local declaration allows us some leeway in responding to the emergency including emergency purchases and being able to provide assistance that we would normally not be able to provide (i.e. assisting Central Electric off the Right-of-Way)," Mayo said.

The Mississippi Lieutenant Governor had previously declared a state of emergency on Sunday for the areas that were expected to be affected, Mayo said.

The request to the governor provides notification that Neshoba County is requesting state and federal assistance in response to the disaster.

Wilson said they have cleared the roadways throughout the county.

"We do not have any reports of any roads that are still blocked by trees or power lines," Wilson said. "We would like to ask that drivers take extra caution on the roads for the power crews that are working on the power lines."

Mayo said county workers have pushed debris to the side of the road to be picked up at a later date and keep the roads cleared for repair trucks and emergency vehicles.

The county had 12 crews working to clear the roadways throughout the county. Mayo said sanitation department staff had been pulled to fill out the crews as well.

Senate bill would recognize MBCI identification cards

By STEVE SWOGETINSKY
steve@neshobademocrat.com

A bill that would allow members of the Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians to use Tribal identification cards like a state-issued ID card is working its way through the Mississippi Legislature.

A similar bill was considered during the 2020 Legislative session. Sen. Jenifer Branning said SB 2020 which she wrote has passed the Senate and has been sent to the House for consideration.

"This is something the Tribe really wanted, and we are going to try and get it passed this year," Branning said.

"Their Tribal ID would be recognized for purposes of travel, for voting, applying for services and all kind of things (one would need an ID for). We will hopefully get this across the finish line this year."

Branning also wrote Senate

Bill 2507 that involves the Tribe. It would allow non-tribal businesses that locate on Tribal lands to be eligible to apply for money from the Mississippi Development Authority.

"This would hopefully bring businesses to our community," Branning said. "We got it off the Senate floor, and it has been sent to the House."

Branning is chairman of the Transportation Committee in the Senate. She wrote Senate Bill 2825 known as the Mississippi Transportation Infrastructure Investment Act of 2021."

Branning said this bill would do several things. It has passed out of the Senate and is now being considered by the House.

"First, it would divert a portion of the lottery money into our counties and municipalities for road repairs for a total of $240 million," Branning said. "It would be $80 million over three years."

Branning added that in the third year, the bill would allow for a weight increase under the Harvest Permit.

"That would allow loggers and people who haul agricultural commodities to carry more weight than your regular truckers," Branning said. "When industry is looking to locate in the South to take advantage of our timber resources which we have an abundance of, they are going to look at the other states. Our lower weight limits count against us."

If the bill becomes law, it will move the Mississippi Department of Transportation enforcement division over to the Department of Public Safety.

"It would improve law enforcement as a whole," Branning said. "It would do away with duplication of services. We are one of only a couple of states in the nation that still runs it this way. We are trying to be better stewards of the taxpayer dollar."

City offering amnesty for past-due fines

By STAFF REPORTS

Anyone with outstanding fees with the Philadelphia Municipal Court has until the end of March to take advantage of the city's amnesty program.

An amnesty program allows those who owe old fines and fees to come to City Hall and pay them without fear of being detained.

Municipal Court Clerk Marilyn Jackson said individuals may pay in full or arrange a payment plan with the Court Clerk's office without fear of being detained.

"This will allow people to clear their names and eliminate fines," Jackson said.

The program started on Jan. 1 and will continue through to March 31 of this year.

The city estimates they have 4,522 outstanding fines.

Contact the Municipal Court Clerk's office at 601-650-3584, or stop by to make arrangements.

The Municipal Court Clerk's office is located in City Hall and is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. They accept cash money, money orders, credit and debit card payments.

The team at the Baptist Center was able to have more than 60 direct ministry contacts and 30 opportunities to pray with those in the drive-through feeding line, officials said.

"Most important of all was that one of our DR Chaplains was able to share with and pray with two individuals who accepted Christ as their Savior! Praise the Lord!" the relief ministry posted on its Facebook page about the Neshoba County relief efforts.

The Rev. Eric Sharp, the youth minister and associate pastor at New Bethel led their feeding team Sunday and said it was "wonderful to see our young people eager to serve those that were in need."

The people who came and picked up take-out plates "were so thankful for a hot meal," he said.

As many as 8,700 of Neshoba's 11,000 electric customers were without power at the height of last week's winter storm.

Addy said three of the participating churches backed out of Monday's meal saying they no longer had a need.

"By tomorrow, most of the power will be restored," Addy said.

Opinion

NEWT GINGRICH

Why I will not give up

This commentary was first published at Gingrich360.com in December 2020.

A smart friend of mine who is a moderate liberal asked why I was not recognizing Joe Biden's victory.

The friend made the case that Biden had gotten more votes, and historically we recognize the person with the most votes. Normally, we accept the outcome of elections just as we accept the outcomes of sporting events.

So, my friend asked why was 2020 different?

Having spent more than four years watching the left #Resist President Donald Trump and focus entirely on undoing and undermining the 2016 election, it took me several days to understand the depth of my own feelings.

As I thought about it, I realized my anger and fear were not narrowly focused on votes.

My unwillingness to relax and accept that the election was over grew out of a level of outrage and alienation unlike anything I had experienced in more than 60 years involvement in public affairs.

The challenge is that I – and other conservatives – are not disagreeing with the left within a commonly understood world. We live in alternative worlds.

The left's world is mostly the established world of the forces who have been dominant for most of my life.

My world is the populist rebellion which believes we are being destroyed, our liberties are being cancelled, and our religions are under assault. (Note the new Human Rights Campaign to decertify any religious school which does not accept secular sexual values – and that many Democrat governors have kept casinos open while closing churches through the COVID-19 pandemic.)

We also believe other Democrat-led COVID-19 policies have enriched the wealthy while crushing middle class small business owners (some 160,000 restaurants may close).

In this context, let's talk first about the recent past and the presidency.

In 2016, I supported an outsider candidate, who was rough around the edges and in the Andrew Jackson school of controversial assaults on the old order. When my candidate won, it was blamed on the Russians. We now know (four years later) Hillary Clinton's own team financed the total lie that fueled this attack.

Members of the FBI twice engaged in criminal acts to help it along – once in avoiding prosecution of someone who had deleted 33,000 emails and had a subordinate use a hammer to physically destroy hard drives, and a second time by lying to FISA judges to destroy Gen. Michael Flynn and spy on then-candidate Donald Trump and his team.

The national liberal media aided and abetted every step of the way. All this was purely an attempt to cripple the new president and lead to the appointment of a special counsel – who ultimately produced nothing.

Now, people in my world are told it is time to stop resisting and cooperate with the new president. But we remember that the Democrats wanted to cooperate with Trump so much that they began talking about his impeachment before he even took office.

The Washington Post ran a story on Democrat impeachment plots the day of the Inauguration. In fact, nearly 70 Democratic lawmakers boycotted his inauguration. A massive leftwing demontion was staged in Washington the day after, where Madonna announced she dreamed of blowing up the White House to widespread applause. These same forces want me to cooperate with their new president. I find myself adopting the Nancy Pelosi model of constant resistance. Nothing I have seen from Biden since the election offers me any hope that he will reach out to the more than 74 million Americans who voted for President Trump.

The truth is tens of millions of Americans are deeply alienated, angry over Trump loss.

So, I am not reacting to the votes so much as to the whole election environment.

When Twitter and Facebook censored the oldest and fourth largest newspaper (founded by Alexander Hamilton) because it accurately reported news that could hurt Biden's chances – where were The New York Times and The Washington Post?

The truth of the Hunter Biden story is now becoming impossible to avoid or conceal. The family of the Democrat nominee for president received at least $5 million from an entity controlled by our greatest adversary.

It was a blatant payoff, and most Americans who voted for Biden never heard of it – or were told before the election it was Russian disinformation. Once they did hear of it, 17 percent said they would have switched their votes, according to a poll by the Media Research Center.

That's the entire election. The censorship worked exactly as intended.

Typically, newspapers and media outlets band together when press freedom is threatened by censorship. Where was the sanctimonious "democracy dies in darkness?"

Tragically, The Washington Post is now part of the darkness.

But this is just a start. When Twitter censors four of five Rush Limbaugh tweets in one day, I fear for the country.

When these monolithic internet giants censor the President of the United States, I fear for the country.

When I see elite billionaires like Mark Zuckerberg are able to spend $400 million to hire city governments to maximize turnout in specifically Democratic districts – without any regard to election spending laws or good governance standards – I fear for the country.

When I read that Apple has a firm rule of never irritating China – and I watch the NBA kowtow to Beijing, I fear for our country.

When I watch story after story about election fraud being spiked – without even the appearance of journalistic due diligence or curiosity – I know something is sick.

The election process itself was the final straw in creating the crisis of confidence which is accelerating and deepening for many millions of Americans.

Aside from a constant stream of allegations of outright fraud, there are some specific outrages – any one of which was likely enough to swing the entire election.

Officials in virtually every swing state broke their states' own laws to send out millions of ballots or ballot applications to every registered voter. It was all clearly documented in the Texas lawsuit, which was declined by the US Supreme Court based on Texas' procedural standing – not the merits of the case. That's the election.

In addition, it's clear that virtually every swing state essentially suspended normal requirements for verifying absentee ballots. Rejection rates were an order of magnitude lower than in a normal year. In Georgia, rejection rates dropped from 6.5 percent in 2016 to 0.2 percent in 2020. In Pennsylvania, it went from 1 percent in 2016 to .003 percent in 2020. Nevada fell from 1.6 percent to .75 percent. There is no plausible explanation other than that they were counting a huge number of ballots – disproportionately for Biden – that normally would not have passed muster. That's the election.

The entire elite liberal media lied about the timeline of the COVID-19 vaccine. They blamed President Trump for the global pandemic even as he did literally everything top scientists instructed.

multiple debates, the moderators outright stated that he was lying about the US having a vaccine before the end of the year (note Vice President Mike Pence received it this week). If Americans had known the pandemic was almost over, that too was likely the difference in the election.

The unanimously never-Trump debate commission spiked the second debate at a critical time in order to hurt President Trump. If there had been one more debate like the final one, it likely would have been pivotal.

This is just the beginning. But any one of those things alone is enough for Trump supporters to think we have been robbed by a ruthless establishment – which is likely to only get more corrupt and aggressive if it gets away with these blatant acts.

For more than four years, the entire establishment mobilized against the elected President of the United States as though they were an immune system trying to kill a virus. Now, they are telling us we are undermining democracy.

You have more than 74 million voters who supported President Trump despite everything – and given the election mess, the number could easily be significantly higher. The truth is tens of millions of Americans are deeply alienated and angry.

If Biden governs from the left – and he will almost certainly be forced to – that number will grow rapidly, and we will win a massive election in 2022.

Given this environment, I have no interest in legitimizing the father of a son who Chinese Communist Party members boast about buying. Nor do I have any interest in pretending that the current result is legitimate or honorable. It is simply the final stroke of a four-year establishment-media power grab. It has been perpetrated by people who have broken the law, cheated the country of information, and smeared those of us who believe in America over China, history over revisionism, and the liberal ideal of free expression over cancel culture.

I write this in genuine sorrow, because I think we are headed toward a serious, bitter struggle in America. This extraordinary, coordinated four-year power grab threatens the fabric of our country and the freedom of every American.

The cavalry arrives

Linemen in bucket trucks and Baptists serving hot meals have been like the cavalry arriving since a debilitating winter storm knocked out power to most of unincorporated Neshoba County last week, even shutting the Walmart in town for a couple of days.

At daybreak on a crisp, clear morning Tuesday and continuing as the sun rose, out-of-town crews in convoys of bucket trucks and utility vehicles were heading south on Holland Avenue out of town to the hardest-hit areas of the county to get the lights on and we are thankful as a community.

Electric cooperatives from Alabama, Arkansas and other parts of Mississippi, among others, have been assisting Central Electric to get the lights back on.

There are multiple heroes in this crisis, too many to name, but we can all be thankful for caring neighbors eager to pitch in and help.

The hardship many families here are facing was illustrated in an announcement by the Neshoba County School District on Monday offering assistance to children.

Elementary students who need a snack pack sent home, a clean set of clothes, hygiene products and so on were their concern on Monday.

"We are here to HELP! We realize many in our area still do not have power, water and may be in need," the statement posted on Facebook said.

Parents or guardians were encouraged to email tpott@neshobacentral.com or call the school at 601-656-2182 and ask for Jessica McCoy.

What many assumed would be a snow day turned into a snow week with schools and businesses shuttered.

Mississippi Baptist Disaster Relief teams provided 1,800 hot meals over three days to Neshoba County residents impacted by the winter storm.

Nine Neshoba County Baptist congregations assisted in providing direct feeding and the Neshoba Baptist Center in town hosted a drive-through feeding line.

The team at the Baptist Center was able to have over 60 direct ministry contacts and 30 opportunities to pray with those in the drive-through feeding line, ministry officials said.

"Most important of all was that one of our DR Chaplains was able to share with and pray with two individuals who accepted Christ as their Savior! Praise the Lord!" the relief ministry posted on its Facebook page about the Neshoba County efforts.

The Lord can use even a fence post to accomplish His will and without our aid, and he used a terrible winter storm and a relief ministry to bring two of His children unto himself at no cost, a free gift.

The Rev. Eric Sharp, the youth minister and associate pastor at New Bethel Baptist Church near Laurel Hill, led their feeding team Sunday and said it was "wonderful to see our young people eager to serve those that were in need."

The people who came and picked up take-out plates "were so thankful for a hot meal," he said.

So, there is some good that has – and will – come out of this storm.

Plenty of residents have questions and Central Electric should address concerns when the crisis is over.

But for now, thanks to all the heroes.

GETTING THE MESSAGE/Rev. Chris Shelton

Acts 4:1-22

We see the apostles Peter and John on trial in this passage. They are arrested after Peter (through the power of Jesus name) heals a crippled man. The arrest is not triggered as much from the healing as it is what Peter is saying. He is teaching a large Jewish crowd that Jesus of Nazareth, whom they crucified, is the promised Christ and has been raised from the dead (verses 1-3).

When the trial begins the next day, the Jewish leaders ask Peter and John by what power or what name did you do this (verse 7)? Then we are told that Peter is filled with the Holy Spirit and he answers directly. And in his answer we see what the chief work of the Holy Spirit is: to exalt Christ.

Peter says let it be known to you and all Israel that this has happened "by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom you crucified, whom God raised from the dead." Peter goes on to quote Psalm 118; that Jesus is the cornerstone of the people of God, and that "there is no other name under heaven given among men by which we must be saved."

In other words if you do not have Christ, you will perish outside of the people of God, you will not have a place. There are three main defects in men since the fall. There is ignorance and blindness to God; there is rebellion in the will and affections toward God; we are in a cursed position subject to God's wrath because of this.

We need a Savior answerable to these needs, and Christ, the Son of God, is the only sufficient Savior. There is no other way to be reconciled to God. Christ died for sinners, and he was raised from the dead that men may be justified before God.

The Holy Spirit opens our eyes to the light of Christ. He convinces us of our sin and misery, the holiness of God, and the need of Christ's sacrifice. You can do nothing apart from God's Spirit. We have no power over the devil and death. We cannot take our own sins or any other person's sins away. Truly, we will not believe the truth of God apart from the Holy Spirit.

The Holy Spirit being poured out at Pentecost is a testament to our spiritual poverty and God's grace. He points poor sinners to a loving Savior who gave himself for them. He brings refreshment to the soul, makes Christ the name above all names in our hearts. The Holy Spirit is the gift of life. Life is more than material. Life that endures is in knowing Christ.

We see the Spirit give the apostles boldness (verse 12). Jesus had told his disciples the night before he was to be crucified that they would be persecuted by men; that the servants were not above the Master. If men hated Christ, they would hate his disciples also. But Jesus had also told them he would never leave them; that the Holy Spirit would be with them in tribulation and on trial before men.

The contrast between the apostles and the Jewish leaders stands out at the end of the trial. The rulers are worried about the opinions of the people (verses 16-17); the apostles are focused on being obedient to God. The rulers threaten the apostles. Peter and John answer: "Whether it is right in the sight of God to listen to you rather than to God, you must judge, for we cannot but speak of what we have seen and heard (verse 19)."

They are very respectful, and are making an appeal for their Jewish brothers to pay careful attention to what has happened. This is the hand of God. Christ has been raised from the dead. It is not the time to fear losing your position, or losing face, or pursuing worldly ambitions. They are in great jeopardy from God; now is the time to repeat, rather than resist.

The gospel of Christ is opportunity. And when it goes forth, there will be souls who believe. We see in verse 4, that 5000 souls believed from Peter's sermon. Even among these obstinate rulers and priests gathered to threaten the apostles, some would come to faith (Chapter 6:7).

Men can threaten and put to death Christ's people in this world. But they are powerless to thwart God's purposes he has for his gospel. Christ will be proclaimed. Some will come to him. Others will perish outside of him. So the Lord appeals to us all, seek Christ (and the life in him), while he may be found. Look into these things, and call on the name of the Lord.

PAID POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

James Young seeks re-election as mayor

To the citizens of Philadelphia, thanks for your support over the past 12 years.

I ask for your vote in the upcoming election on April 6th, 2021.

Let's keep Philadelphia moving forward.

I am married to Sheryl J. Davis Young we have one daughter Shanda Young-Ginetdam. I am pastor of Calvary Apostolic Faith Church in Louisville, MS for 30 years, serving our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

I have been a positive representative for the City of Philadelphia and will lead with integrity, work hard for everyone, no personal agendas, and be fair and equal in representation for all. Philadelphia has been a light for the State and nation of how things can change for the better.

It has been an honor to serve as your mayor for the past 12 years. This is not the time for inexperienced leadership. With me you have proven leadership, sound judgement and honesty.

This is the time to ask those who oppose me, "What have you done in the last 12 years to make this city better?"

We are in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic, dealing with challenges that we never imagined before, business as usual does not exist right now, leaders that's been through emergency situations and knows how to make life saving decisions should be front and center, it's not about me it is about us. The functions of city government much continue.

I have worked to make Neshoba County and the City of Philadelphia better.

History of service: Emergency Medical Tech, Pre-hospital care, University Medical

James A. Young

Marston enjoys cooking Hawaiian, Portuguese

By SARAH KATHRYN
news@neshobademocrat.com

Scott Marston grew up in Hills, Iowa, a small town of only about 500 people seven miles south of Iowa City. But Hills seemed like its own universe.

Marston was raised with two brothers and a sister. His mother was of Portuguese and Hawaiian descent, and his father was Irish. Their cooking introduced him to many kinds of different cuisines.

During the week, his mother would cook Hawaiian or Portuguese, or even sushi.

Marston's father enjoyed cooking fried meats and potatoes, so his dad would spend all day cooking for the family on Sundays.

In 1978, Marston joined the Army and was stationed in Germany. After serving three years, Marston came back from Germany and earned a degree in psychology at about the time his parents moved to Birmingham, Alabama, for a promotion.

Marston visited his parents, and while in the South, auditioned for a stand-up comedy act, got the job and spent the next six years touring the country. He would ultimately meet his wife Melissa, who is a Kosciusko native.

Raising a family in Little Rock, Mississippi, the couple eventually made their way to Philadelphia where he was in new car sales.

They have three grown children and five grandchildren. Marston likes spending time with his grandchildren playing ball and other outdoor activities. He is currently teaching his youngest grandchild to play golf.

Marston is a sales associate at James Gray Sales and is passionate about his job, family, and cooking.

"I learned to cook at a young age," said Marston, "Each one of us growing up had a different job in the kitchen whether it be cleaning the table before and after we eat or helping to cook."

Thanks to the different influences in his family, Marston knows how to cook many different foods ranging from Portuguese sweet bread to Irish meals and Hawaiian foods.

Marston has many of the recipes from his childhood and is passing them down to his children.

Just Among Friends

By MARIANNE ENOCHS

The Philadelphia Tornadoes Archery Team won its first Archery Meet on February 11. The meet was held at Philadelphia High School.

The Tornadoes competed against the Meridian and Kosciusko teams for the win. It was an exciting event for the team members. Congratulations!

The Neshoba Central School District has recognized the Teachers of the Year and the Support Staff Member of the Year, 2020-2021.

Sheila Goss was named Support Staff Member of the Year for the district. Neshoba Central Elementary Teacher of the Year Award went to Connie Clark; Middle School Teacher of the Year was Chad Clark; High School Teacher of the Year was Shannon Broom. These individuals were recognized for their outstanding performance and contributions to the educational process of the Neshoba Central School District. Congratulations!

Wearing a pale lavender Elsa dress with a deep lavender bow in her hair, Darci Chunn welcomed her little friends to her "Frozen" 3rd Birthday Party which was held in her home. The "Frozen" theme transformed the living area into a magical scene.

There were large posters of the characters from the movie on the walls along with special areas with larger than life stand up cutouts in strategic places. A huge Happy Birthday banner was hung along with the number 3 in a gold inflated balloon. Backdrops were hung in some places which looked like sheets of ice and snowflakes. The word, "Believe", was attached to one of them.

An arch of balloons in "Frozen" colors hovered above the refreshment table which was covered in a cloth with a design down the center and cameos of the leading "Frozen" characters mounted on the wall behind it.

A beautiful cake was the centerpiece. It was a three layered cake frosted in the signature Frozen blue with white snowflakes around each layer. The top layer was white with a number 3 candle. Cookies iced in Frozen colors with Darci's name on them in white were served as well as various finger foods. Plates and napkins carried out the theme.

A fun activity for the guests was making the snow character, Olaf, from a fluffy mound of white with stick cookies for arms and candy for his nose and buttons. A figure of Olaf was hanging down from the ceiling among the balloons as part of the decorations. An enthusiastic rendition of "Happy Birthday" was sung and Darci blew out the candle. Everyone enjoyed sampling the food and watching her open her presents. It was a fun party! Darci is the daughter of Eli and Bethany Morgan Chunn who enjoyed giving the party for their sweet child.

The Friendly Fish and the Caterpillar kindergarten classes at Neshoba Central Elementary School presented a Valentine program for parents and grandparents. The program was held on February 12 in the auditorium.

"A Special Valentine" was performed by some special little Valentines who sang and recited and did a wonderful job. They entered wearing masks and stood on the stage with a backdrop decorated with big hearts and the title of the program in shiny red letters across the top of the curtain. The audience enjoyed watching their children so very much. Their teachers, Mrs. Posey and Mrs. Vowell, along with their assistants, worked so hard to make this happen. The students had fun, too!
