coverstory
BY GEORGE DICKIE

Dakota Fanning stars in "The Alienist: Angel of Darkness," premiering Sunday on TNT.

A new case bedevils sleuth Sara Howard in 'The Alienist: Angel of Darkness'

Turn-of-the-century secretary Sara Howard has a new role and a new case as the murder mystery "The Alienist" returns on TNT.

In the eight-episode arc titled "Angel of Darkness," which airs two episodes each Sunday beginning July 19, the character played by series star Dakota Fanning has hung out her own shingle and started a detective agency in downtown New York. She again teams with psychologist Dr. Laszlo Kreizler (Daniel Bruhl) and New York Times reporter John Moore (Luke Evans) on the case of Ana Linares, the infant daughter of the Spanish consular who was kidnapped from their Manhattan brownstone.

The subsequent investigation leads them down a twisted path toward an elusive killer who leaves a gruesome trail of bodies. And in the middle of it is Sara, driven by her empathy for the victims and a need to prove herself in her first big case.

"(The case) is not only important for her as a detective in terms of her professional life," Fanning explains, "but it's important for her personally to show that a woman is capable of being a detective and that a lot of female intuition and female sensibilities are proved to be necessary in this particular case. And you also see ... Sara having to prove herself to the world and to her superiors but also kind of having to prove herself to John Moore and to Dr.

Kreizler and kind of earn her position within the trio.

"And what's really nice about 'Angel of Darkness,'" she continues, "is that the trio, they're peers from the start. You know, like John and Dr. Kreizler really see Sara as their equal from the beginning so that was nice to see and I think that's a change from the first (season)."

And it's obvious she brings attributes the two men don't have. In the opening episode, Sara tries to stop the execution by electric chair of a woman wrongly convicted for the murder of her child. Sara can see the woman is innocent and argues vehemently against it. But it's obvious to her the woman died with the child.

That same empathy comes to the fore when the consular's daughter is kidnapped and Sara develops a bond with the mother.

"It's something that I think John and Dr. Kreizler know that they can't do," Fanning says. "You know, Sara kind of fulfills that role ... So yeah, that's something that I love about Sara, even though she's so driven and determined and I think we see her really push her own boundaries this time but she is ultimately such an empathetic person and doesn't do the work that she does for her own gain ultimately. Like she really does it out of care for the people that she's helping."

"Taskmaster" (The CW — series premiere, Aug. 2)

Greg Davies is the "Taskmaster" in this game show that challenges the wit and wisdom of five comics, who are all putting their reputations on the line. Sidekick Alex Horne assists Davies in setting up unique and ridiculous tasks for the competitors. The competition is further charged up by the fact that the prize pot is made up of each person's personal possessions, which they lose to the overall winner.

"Mapleworth Murders: Season 1" (Quibi — series premiere, Aug. 10)

From the makers of "Saturday Night Live" comes this murder mystery spoof that follows prim-yet-saucy mystery writer Abigail Mapleworth (Paula Pell, "Wine Country") as she and her niece solve crimes in their quaint hometown of New Woodstream. Each episode will feature guest victims and suspects.

Laura Dern and Scarlett Johansson

"MARRIAGE STORY"

One of the very few Netflix movies released on home video to date, this widely praised drama from writer-director Noah Baumbach – being issued as part of The Criterion Collection – earned an Oscar for Laura Dern's supporting performance. Adam Driver and Scarlett Johansson play a married director and actress whose bicoastal union disintegrates, with their lawyers (Dern, Alan Alda, Ray Liotta) trying to negotiate some sort of accord as the couple moves toward a divorce. The fine cast also includes Julie Hagerty, Merritt Wever, Wallace Shawn and Kyle Bornheimer, but it's very easy to see that Dern qualified for the many accolades she received on the most recent film-award circuit. DVD extras: trailers; four "making-of" documentaries; interview with Baumbach and composer Randy Newman. ★★★★★ (R: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray)

"SCOOB!"

One of the movies that shifted from a theatrical run to an On Demand at-home premiere earlier than planned after the coronavirus pandemic hit, this animated tale traces the roots of Scooby-Doo's involvement with such fellow mystery-lovers as Shaggy,

Daphne and Velma. That set-up leads into the story of their latest case, involving a threat that could set a ghost dog loose on the world. Frank Welker voices the canine nicknamed "Scoob." DVD extra: "How to Draw Scooby-Doo" feature. ★★★★★ (PG: AS) (Also on Blu-ray, 4K Ultra HD and On Demand)

In Focus

"Dead Pixels" (The CW — series premiere, Aug. 18)

Three friends — Meg (Alexa Davies), Nicky (Will Merrick) and Usman (Sargon Yelda) — play Kingdom Scrolls, a popular online role-playing fantasy game set in a magical world of wizards, orcs and wyverns. They are committed to the game, but a new member of the gang starts to change things.

"The One and Only Ivan" (Disney+ — movie premiere, Aug. 21)

A silverback gorilla who shares a communal habitat in a suburban shopping mall with an elephant and a dog and has almost no memory of the jungle begins to question his existence when a baby elephant arrives in this animated adventure tale. Sam Rockwell, Angelina Jolie, Danny De Vito, Helen Mirren and Bryan Cranston head the voice cast.

"AMERICAN EXPERIENCE: GEORGE W. BUSH"

Expectedly, since they were committed during the then-president's tenure in the White House, the 9/11 terrorist attacks inform much of this profile recently televised by PBS (as the latest entry in the continuing "American Experience" collection of presidential portraits). Other domestic and international matters faced by the Bush administration are considered as well, such as Hurricane Katrina and one of the worst financial crises in U.S. history, but the program starts with the events of Sept. 11, 2001 – and many of those who were in the chief executive's closest circle at the time, including Chief of Staff Andrew Card and Press Secretary Ari Fleischer, offer their perspectives on how he handled what arose (encompassing the American military response). ★★★★★ (Not rated: P, V)

"AIRPLANE!"

"And don't call me Shirley!" One of the funniest spoof movies ever gets a Blu-ray relaunch for its 40th anniversary, with the Zucker-Abrahams-Zucker creative team basing the humor largely on the "Airport" series ... though some of the elements actually came from another story by novelist Arthur Hailey that fueled the 1957 film "Zero Hour!". Robert Hays plays a pilot whose past experiences make him reluctant to take the controls when the flight crew on a passenger plane is felled, with his stewardess ex-girlfriend (Julie Hagerty) among those dependent on his getting and keeping it together. Leslie Nielsen, Peter Graves, Lloyd Bridges and Robert Stack and even Kareem Abdul-Jabbar earned big laughs by parodying their usual images – and among the other memorably funny performances is Jill Whelan's ("The Love Boat") spin on Linda Blair's "Airport 1975" character. Even "Leave It to Beaver" mom Barbara Billingsley gets a riotous cameo. ★★★★★ (PG: AS, P, V)

"CURB YOUR ENTHUSIASM: THE COMPLETE TENTH SEASON"

Larry David has been known lately for his portrayal of senator and former presidential candidate Bernie Sanders on "Saturday Night Live," but he continued his own showcase with this most recent round of the acclaimed, largely improvised HBO comedy series. Also the show's creator, he plays a fictionalized version of himself as he faces life's various foibles. The season's overarching story finds Larry dealing with the MeToo era when his assistant (Megan Ferguson) accuses him of sexual harassment. Cheryl Hines (who also directed an episode here), Sean Penn, Jonah Hill, Laverne Cox, Vince Vaughn, Clive Owen, Ted Danson and Isla Fisher are among guest stars. ★★★★★ (Not rated: AS, P)

Hamlin goes for win No. 4 at Texas

Sometimes speed is all you need. A crafty pit strategy also helps. That was the story of the afternoon for Denny Hamlin at last year's O'Reilly Auto Parts 500 at Texas Motor Speedway in Fort Worth. Driving his No. 11 Toyota Camry for Joe Gibbs Racing, he put himself at a disadvantage in Stage 1 with a pit-road speeding penalty and again in the final stage with an uncontrolled tire sanction.

But in a shrewd move, Hamlin used a fuel-only (no tires) pit stop during a late caution to grab the lead and drive to his second victory of the season (after his win in the Daytona 500), his third at TMS and the 33rd of his Cup career. Afterward, he said speed was the key to overcoming his mistakes.

"Just a fast car," he said. "They gave me fast car and one that could pass anyone in the field."

Ultimately, he'd go on to score four more wins in 2019 – the second time he'd won at least six races in a season – and advance to the Championship 4 round of the playoffs for the first time since 2014. But his 10th place finish, despite starting from pole, in the finale at Homestead sank any hopes for a Cup title and he wound up ending the season fourth in points.

He'll return to the 1.5-mile oval at Fort Worth to face off against Joey Logano, Kevin Harvick, Clint Bowyer, Kyle Busch and Brad Keselowski, among others, in the 2020 O'Reilly's Auto Parts 500, which airs Sunday, July 19, on NBC Sports Network.

A Norwegian chef schools Gordon Ramsay on Viking cuisine in 'Uncharted' Season 2 finale

The eponymous chef and restaurateur learns to cook and eat like a Viking when "Gordon Ramsay: Uncharted" ends its second season.

In the episode airing Sunday, July 19, on National Geographic, Ramsay takes a December trip to Norway to explore the country, brave its frigid temperatures and gather native ingredients for a Christmas feast. To do this, he dives for shellfish in a fjord, herds reindeer with the indigenous Sami people and ferments fish and eats sheep head before facing off with local chef and restaurateur Christopher Haatuft in a cook-off.

Along the way, Ramsay gets a master class on Viking food, which Haatuft defines as "make-sure-you-don't-die-through-winter cuisine."

"Imagine living in a wooden hut in six feet of snow for four months," he explains. "Like whatever you have in your pantry is what you're going to survive off through winter. And this is not the Garden of Eden in summer. It's far north, the growing season is very short here so our cuisine is not based on vegetables and honey. It's dried and salted fish and meat. And then maybe if you're able to cure some dairy product over winter like some hard cheese or some stuff like that ... That's the Viking food."

And the seafood here, Haatuft argues, ranks with the best in the world. A confluence of warm and cool waters results in an increase in algae, which supplies nutrients that support marine activity and gives the seafood its abundance and flavor.

"That's why you get some of the best fishing banks in the world off this part of the coast," he says. "You have the same, I think, off the west coast of Japan and above the north coast of the U.S. — Alaska and Canada and those areas. So I like to say it's like the best seafood in the world but there's also other areas where you can say the same. You can't say that anyone has better seafood than we have."

As for the reindeer, Haatuft equates it with venison, though he says, "it has like quite a bit of blood in the meat, which gives it an iodine-y, almost like acidic flavor. And it's super, super lean and the flavor is super-clean."

In the cook-off, Haatuft embraced the opportunity to work opposite a world-class chef creating gourmet-quality meals on the fly from unfamiliar ingredients. The experience, he says, stretched him as a professional.

"At the end of the day he is a multiple-Michelin-starred chef and you don't get to that position by coincidence or luck," he says. "You get it because you know what you're doing. So you can definitely tell that he's taken to that experience. And even if he's cooking kind of off the cuff with ingredients he doesn't know, there is so much skill and experience behind everything. So that's fun to see."

Jonathan Aris (“Dracula”) also stars.

“Movie: Radioactive”
