Raymond Lee stars in NBC's new version of "Quantum Leap," premiering Monday.

Raymond Lee is having quite a year: Featured in what quickly has become one of the top-grossing movies ever, he's also starring in a revival of a television series that has kept a big fan base.

Like his predecessor Scott Bakula, the actor – who is featured alongside Tom Cruise in "Top Gun: Maverick" – gets to play many parts in one in NBC's new version of the fantasy-drama "Quantum Leap," premiering Monday, Sept. 19. Decades after Bakula's character Dr. Sam Beckett began assuming other people's lives while bouncing between different time periods, fellow physicist Ben Seong (Lee) follows in his general footsteps, guided by a hologram as Beckett was.

In Ben's case, though, his virtual companion is a representation of a former flame of his. Addison (played by Caitlin Bassett) succeeds Dean Stockwell's AI from the original show, and the relationship she once had with Ben often complicates her efforts to help him. Ernie Hudson ("Ghostbusters"), Mason Alexander Park and Nanrisa Lee play the other members of the team behind the leaping.

Actor Lee has come to the new iteration of "Quantum Leap" knowing the previous one (which Syfy is running in Monday marathons). "When it first aired, I was a little young for it," he allows. "The second time it came around, I had a friend who was really versed in sci-fi, and we'd go over to his house and turn on 'Quantum Leap.' It was the show that opened my mind to the world of sci-fi."

While others also are in direct charge of the new "Quantum Leap," original executive producers (and former spouses) Donald P. Bellisario and Deborah Pratt remain very involved in the update. "The fact that these guys trusted me to participate is just very flattering, on many levels," Lee reflects. "I love their vision of approaching the show, and it's turning out to be a really great journey."

Also seen this year in the movie "The Lost City," Lee currently is on view as well in the second and final season of AMC's "Kevin Can F*** Himself." As pleased as he is for his career fortunes, he maintains that he's even happier that "my family is very excited. They've seen me toil over many years of trying to stay employed, and the past few months have been validating. And it's nice to be able to share it with my friends."

The ultimate "Quantum Leap" might be if Ben encountered Beckett, and Lee is hopeful that will happen: "We'd love to have Scott Bakula on. He's iconic (in this premise), and it would only benefit us and the show. We're kind of just waiting for his phone call."

Pizza chefs vie to be 'Best in Dough' in Hulu competition series

Pizza is one of those dishes that's accessible to all.

It's a simple food with three main ingredients – dough, sauce and cheese – one that anybody can make with brilliant results, provided they have top quality ingredients and the right cooking technique. And that premise is abundantly apparent in "Best in Dough," Hulu's new cooking competition series.

Premiering Monday, Sept. 19, the 10-episode show brings in pizza-loving competitors from all walks of life to show off their pizza-making skills with their creations and hopefully impress a panel of judges consisting of head judge and pizza chef Daniele Uditi, chef Millie Peartree, comedian/food influencer Eunji Kim and baker Bryan Ford. Host Wells Adams ("Bachelor in Paradise") also weighs in.

As one might expect, the fare here is pretty imaginative and extends far beyond the traditional pies to things like calzones, pizza cones and even pizza cupcakes. But no matter how sophisticated the creation, says chef Uditi, it all boils down to the three main ingredients that make pizza the iconic dish that it is.

"It's such a simple food that you cannot hide behind anything," explains Uditi, co-owner of the Los Angeles pizza restaurant

Pizzana. "Whether you make a simple cheese pizza or margherita pizza, there are three things that are the main ingredients. There is the crust, there is the sauce and the cheese and a good part is the olive oil and some fresh herbs on top. So if you make a great dough and you know your crust, you can make an amazingly spectacular texture and that's what makes the pizza. Is the texture enjoyable and fresh ingredients."

In Monday's opener titled "Nonnas," three Italian American grandmothers compete, armed with recipes from the old country. One claims the water in her hometown of Brooklyn, N.Y., is what makes her crust superior but Uditi has his doubts.

"I think it's a myth," he says. "I think people are comfortable with what they know. But then when you grow up in Brooklyn, you always made pizza with Brooklyn water, that's the best water for you to use. But if you know your job and you analyze what's in the water – how hard is the water, the pH – you can adjust the recipe and you can still make great pizza wherever in the world you are."

"At the end of the day, one of the great bakeries is in San Francisco and still they make great bread," he continues. "So I don't understand why it's not possible with pizza. ... So water to me is just a myth."
