Liza Lapira and Neal Bledsoe star in Sunday's new CBS movie "Must Love Christmas."

'The Equalizer's' Liza Lapira 'Must Love Christmas' in new CBS movie

Many people know lots of holiday stories, but few likely feel they're living inside one.

That's the case for the romance novelist at the heart of "Must Love Christmas," a new CBS movie airing Sunday, Dec. 11. Liza Lapira – usually seen Sundays on the network anyway, as bar owner Melody on "The Equalizer" – has the central role of Natalie, a New York-based writer of Christmas-oriented stories who sets out on an upstate trek to Buffalo while experiencing a creative block, but ends up stranded by a surplus of snow in enchanting Cranberry Falls. There, her childhood acquaintance Caleb (Nathan Witte, "Superman & Lois") and ambitious reporter Nick (Neal Bledsoe, "The Man in the High Castle") vie for her affections.

"It's really special for me to be the protagonist in this kind of movie," Lapira says, "because I've been a fan (of them) for so long. And on a separate note, it's special for me to be a protagonist in something. When I was growing up, I didn't see many protagonists that looked like me, so this has just been a doubly wonderful thing for me to be a part of."

Lapira also enjoyed having dual love interests in "Must Love Christmas." She reflects. "I always enjoy a 'meet-cute.' I got both kinds: I got the meet-cute with the high school crush, the guy in my dreams that I haven't seen in forever, the unrequited-love re-meeting ... and then I got the antagonistic-banter, witty meet-cute, so I'm thoroughly spoiled by this movie."

"Must Love Christmas" screenwriter Mark Amato is a specialist in such tales, having written CBS' "A Christmas Proposal" last year and several other pictures in the genre earlier ("A Kiss Before Christmas," "Christmas Encore," "Looks Like Christmas," etc.). However, he maintains that the main catalyst for "Must Love Christmas" was another sort of movie.

"Certainly, the inspiration for me was 'Romancing the Stone,' Amato explains. "My version was like, if you had somebody who was so completely introverted, who's just lived in her novels – and the occupational hazard that that would create. And then essentially put (her) into a world where you're living out the fantasies that you create; that's what happens with Liza's character."

That character, described by Lapira as "an introvert, and it's for a reason and it's crafted in the script," has the actress "really excited." She notes that the role is different from how the audience has known her lately, "just 180 in terms of a personality shift. Mel, the character I play on 'The Equalizer,' is much more self-assured – to put it mildly – and much more aggressive than Natalie is in this movie. I get a kick out of that."

Pass the comedy, please – memorable Christmas dinner scenes in movies

Ah, the Christmas feast.

It's something we plan for weeks and consume over the course of hours. Then we spend months at the gym getting the excess off our hips and midsections.

It's also something that has catalyzed memorable Yuletide film scenes over the past century as the turkey, pumpkin pie and other comestibles become backdrop to holiday shenanigans.

So without further ado, we present for your consideration some of the ones that we think stand out above the rest. Now bring us some figgy pudding.

“National Lampoon’s Christmas Vacation” (Airs on AMC; streams on HBO Max and Spectrum): Clark (Chevy Chase) wants to have the perfect Christmas but as with the all things Griswold, nothing is. Including the turkey, which is so dry there is only air inside when Clark carves. And then there is Aunt Bethany, who when asked to say grace instead gives the Pledge of Allegiance. To which everyone responds “Amen.”

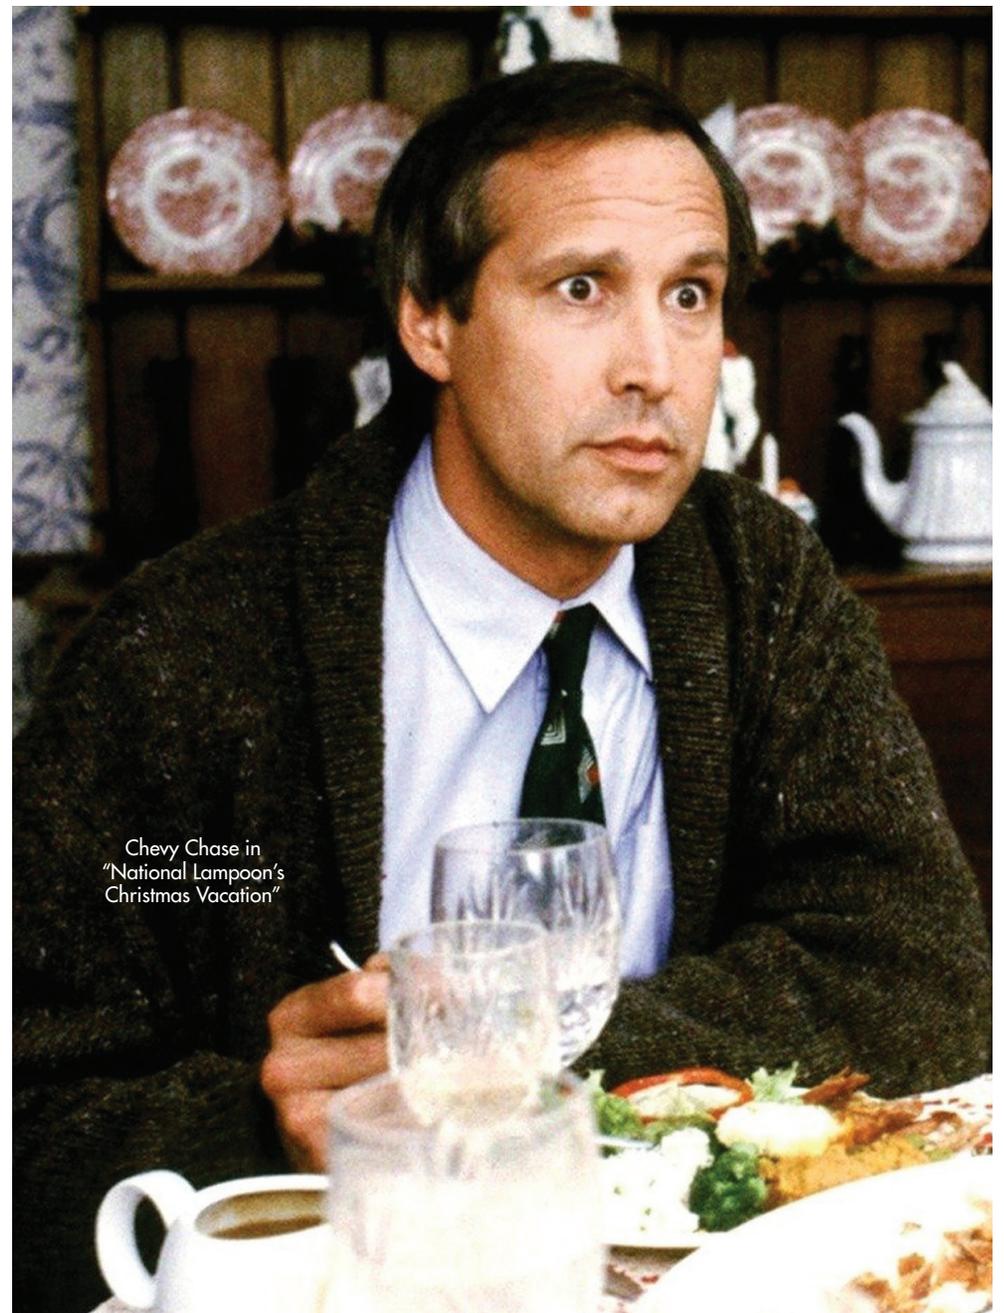

“Elf” (Airs on AMC; streams on HBO Max and Spectrum): It’s a sweet and savory Christmas for North Pole elf Buddy (Will Ferrell) in this 2003 holiday comedy, when he reconnects with his birth father (James Caan) and consumes his first meal with his new family – spaghetti and maple syrup. Which is followed by a long, foghornlike belch.

“The Santa Clause” (Airs on Freeform; streams on Disney+): It’s on to Plan B for Christmas Eve dinner for divorced dad Scott (Tim Allen) early in this 1994 classic when he burns the holiday turkey and is forced to take his son (Eric Lloyd) to Denny’s – which it turns out is out of just about everything.

“Almost Christmas” (Airs on FX and Freeform; streams on Spectrum): All Walter (Danny Glover) wants is a nice Christmas dinner with his grown children in this 2016 family comedy but it’s clear from the little jabs crisscrossing the table that all is not well. That breaks out into all-out hostility when one storms away and and all reveal that they are not happy with their aging Dad for selling the home where they all grew up.

“Bad Teacher” (Streams on HBO Max): No, this 2011 comedy isn’t a Christmas movie but a hilarious scene ensues when singleton teacher Elizabeth (Cameron Diaz) is taken in by a student’s family for the holiday and the less-than-virtuous educator tries to administer a little tough love to her charge when his crush on a classmate becomes painfully obvious.
