Ramon Rodriguez stars in "Will Trent," premiering Tuesday on ABC.

Literary detective 'Will Trent' comes to TV

Television isn't wasting any time introducing new shows for the new year, and one of the first brings a literary sleuth to life.

Premiering Tuesday, Jan. 3, ABC's "Will Trent" is inspired by Karin Slaughter's best sellers about a nattily dressed Atlanta man who was raised in the foster-care system and now works for the Georgia Bureau of Investigations. Played by Ramon Rodriguez ("The Wire," "The Affair"), Trent has a human touch, but it doesn't keep him from trading on-the-job barbs with his sometimes girlfriend ... police detective Angie Polaski (Erika Christensen, "Parenthood"), with whom he grew up, and who has her own dark past.

The pleasant Rodriguez surmises that for novelist Slaughter, who isn't a constant presence on the "Will Trent" set but has visited, "It's got to be surreal and strange" to see her creation leap from page to screen. "You've had something in your head for years, and now it's coming to life. As with all things, everyone has their own interpretation, but it was wonderful to meet her and just give her thanks for creating such a compelling character."

Rodriguez admits he didn't know the "Will Trent" books before joining the television project, but he then "dove into them. I really fell in love with this character, how he functions with the secrets that he has, and how he perseveres in so many ways despite everything he's been through. There are parts of that that I definitely can relate to. He's just trying to figure out his way in the world, like so many of us are."

The well-groomed look, which others in the show often comment on, is a major component of the Will Trent character. "Our incredible costume designer did an amazing job with these suits, which are a lot more favorable now than in mid-summer," Rodriguez reflects. "How Will puts himself together and presents himself is a large part of who he is. It's a sort of armor he puts on, and every time you wear that kind of suit, it changes you. There's no way it can't." The actor appreciates that the suits also are "a little baggy, a little loose."

Rodriguez also is an executive producer of "Will Trent" along with Slaughter, Liz Heldens ("The Dropout") and others. Cast regulars also include Sonja Sohn – another veteran of "The Wire" – as Trent's boss Amanda Wagner and Iantha Richardson ("This Is Us") as his investigative partner Faith Mitchell.

"We know how many procedural cop shows there are out there," Rodriguez reasons, "so with every aspect of this show, from the visual language to the characters to the stories, I think everyone involved is trying to elevate this into something that is unique."

Remedies to get you out from under the weather

Welcome to the new year, a time for hope, new beginnings, breaking bad habits and making good on resolutions. But first, you've got a hangover to deal with.

Yes, nothing says "Happy new year!" quite like the nausea, fatigue, splitting headache and extreme dehydration that come in the aftermath of being overserved. But how to put it in your past quickly and painlessly, well, there are numerous theories and solutions, some more repellent – and entertaining – than others. A few are detailed here.

Sean Evans tries out a few on "Sean in the Wild" (www.youtube.com/watch?vdMf8UEI067g), in which he's joined by comedian Bert Kreischer to experience such international remedies as pickle juice (from Eastern Europe), tripe with red chili peppers (Mexico), pickled herring (Germany) and something called prairie oysters (U.S.), a concoction of Worcestershire sauce, tomato juice, vinegar, hot sauce, salt, pepper and a raw egg. Evans explains there is solid science behind that last one but it also just might be a case of the cure being worse than the malady.

A remedy from our neighbors to the north gets put to the test in GQ Hangover Lab's "Does Canada Have the Ultimate Hangover Cure?" (www.youtube.com/watch?vN7Rvjw8xaw), in which the French-Canadian comfort food poutine – French fries, cheese curd and gravy – is fed to a man who claimed to have 20 whiskeys the night before. The result? Blood pressure and sugar are normalized, motor skills are improved and the subject is clearly feeling better. A more delicious way of killing a hangover there never was.

Carbohydrates are also part of USA Today Life's "Hangover Remedies: 5 Easy Tips to Recover Faster" (www.youtube.com/watch?vkweq4720g08), which also include hydrating, pain relievers (except acetaminophen), B vitamins and zinc and the time-honored favorite, the hair of the dog, which really just delays the inevitable. Some are more successful than others.

For a more medicinal approach, check out "Bachelorette Weekend on CMT: The Greatest Hangover Cure, IV Therapy" (www.youtube.com/watch?vZijmEo6vvo), in which a baker's dozen sick-as-a-dog bachelorettes are hooked up to hydration bags filled with fluids and minerals to replace what was lost while imbibing. How did it do? Well, let's just say that that and puppy therapy worked wonders.

Then, of course, there is the school of thought that hangover cures are nothing more than smoke and mirrors, as is argued in Doctor ER's "5 Hangover Cures That Are MYTHS!" (www.youtube.com/watch?vPiHYKI7g7UA). Here, Dr. Jordan Wagner posits that such popular hangover prevention measures as drinking liquor before beer, downing pain relievers or sports drinks before bed and just sleeping it off are pure hogwash. His recommendation: hydrate, hydrate, hydrate before, during and after. And a eat banana to help restore potassium levels.
