Amanda Peet stars in the series version of "Fatal Attraction" that premieres Sunday on Paramount+.

'Fatal Attraction' strikes anew as Paramount+ series

As a hit 1987 movie, "Fatal Attraction" started a national conversation on the possible price of infidelity.

The story may do that again in a Paramount+ series version that begins streaming Sunday, April 30, both re-creating and expanding upon the original premise. Joshua Jackson ("The Affair," "Dawson's Creek") assumes Michael Douglas' earlier role as Dan Gallagher, a husband, father and legal eagle hoping to become a judge ... but his plans are altered by an encounter with victims'-rights advocate Alex Forrest (Lizzy Caplan, in Glenn Close's previous part).

A fling results while Dan's wife Beth (Amanda Peet) is away, and though he doesn't see it as an ongoing situation, Alex has other ideas that eventually turn distinctly dangerous. The show alternates between extended flashbacks and an update of the central characters' lives, now including Dan and Beth's daughter Ellen (seen in the movie as a child) as a young adult, played by Alyssa Jirrels.

Inheriting Anne Archer's film role, the pleasant Peet says she was "familiar" with the original "Fatal Attraction" and "loved it." However, she considers the series' approach needed "for Alex's character, and seeing things through the prism of what we know now about mental illness. One of the biggest (changes) is the daughter, since she has some searing memories, and we lean into that storyline."

Also a writer-producer who co-created the Netflix series "The Chair," Peet was brought into "Fatal Attraction" by writer and executive producer Alexandra Cunningham, for whom she played convicted killer Betty Broderick in the series "Dirty John." Ironically, Peet originally was asked to suggest other actresses to portray Beth, "and then (Cunningham) was like, 'Why don't you just do it?' And I was like, 'OK. I thought you'd never ask!'"

Depicting parts of the story that span 15 years necessitates different looks for Peet, who notes that aspect has required "a fair amount" of time for her with the show's hair and makeup staff. "It's not horrible, and our amazing team got really good at making it as quick as possible. Mostly, we tried to shoot all the scenes for one time period together (for a given episode), so that we wouldn't have to spend a lot of extra time on the changeover."

The wife of "Game of Thrones" writer-producer David Benioff (and mother to their three children), Peet also has made such movies as "Something's Gotta Give" and "The Whole Nine Yards" and the series "Togetherness" and "Brockmire." She maintains that being an actress for hire again, after overseeing so many of "The Chair's" creative elements, is "a different type of stress. But there's nothing like rolling into the office in your sweatpants, which was what I got to do on 'The Chair.'"

“Algiers, America”

This five-part documentary series follows the Edna Karr High School football team, the pride of the Algiers neighborhood of New Orleans, a community fighting to stem the tide of child deaths from gun violence. It also chronicles the efforts of coach Brice Brown and the Cougars to win their fifth state championship in six years. (ORIGINAL)

“Movie: Clock”

Writer/director Alexis Jacknow made her feature debut with this horror thriller that follows the desperate efforts of one woman, Ella (Dianna Agron, “Glee”), to fix her broken biological clock. Melora Hardin (“The Office”), Jay Ali (“Carnival Row”), Saul Rubinek (“Hunters”) and Jacknow herself are also in the cast. (ORIGINAL)

“Movie: Joyride”

From Ireland comes this 2022 comedy that follows Joy (Olivia Colman, “The Crown”), a train wreck of a woman whose plan to give away her newborn baby is derailed when her cab is hijacked by a street urchin. Charlie Reid, Lochlann O’Mearain and Olwen Fouere also star for director Emer Reynolds (“The Farthest”).

MAY 5

“Taste the Nation With Padma Lakshmi”

Padma Lakshmi (“Top Chef”) continues her exploration of diverse communities across the U.S. that have so heavily shaped what American food is today. Her stops in the sophomore round include Puerto Rico, where ketchup is used to some disagreement on the local dish pasteles; Washington, D.C., to dine on an Afghan feast; and Appalachia, where she discovers inventive recipes, humble ingredients and the joys of playing banjo. Exploring immigrant cultures and cuisines on 'Taste the Nation With Padma Lakshmi'

Padma Lakshmi believes food is a great vehicle to get to know other cultures. And in Season 2 of "Taste the Nation," she explores more immigrant communities and their cuisines and addresses a few serious subjects along the way.

Premiering Friday, May 5, on Hulu, the sophomore round brings the award-winning cookbook author and presenter to more locales across the U.S. to visit the diverse communities that have shaped what American food is today.

So in the 10 episodes, she goes to Washington D.C., where she joins the Afghan community as they welcome new arrivals in the wake of the war in their homeland; Appalachia, where she discovers new recipes and ingredients and tries her hand at playing the banjo; and Lowell, Mass., home to an enterprising Cambodian community that has revitalized a once-decaying town.

In Friday's opener, Lakshmi visits Puerto Rico, where there is disagreement over whether the beloved local dish pasteles should be eaten with or without ketchup. In the process, she learns that mid-20th century industrialization by American companies resulted in the decline of agriculture on the island, thus making it difficult to find locally grown produce.

So much of what is sold in markets in Puerto Rico today comes from places like Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic and the U.S. mainland.

"It's so sad," Lakshmi says. "And the thing is Puerto Ricans should have sovereignty over what happens to them and their land and they don't because they're really a colony of the United States. We don't call it a colony; we call it a territory but it's the same thing.

"It's because of this ancient, 100-year-old shipping law called the Jones Act," she continues. "And that law was made not to help Puerto Ricans or even American farmers; it was made to help American corporations. And we're in the predicament we're in now and we like to think of ourselves as so evolved but this is something that is still an issue. And I don't think a lot of people know it."

Born in India but raised in New York, Lakshmi is an immigrant herself. So she hopes this show can familiarize viewers with cuisines and cultures they might otherwise consider alien.

"At the end of the day, we are all interconnected on this planet," she says. "I don't care how much we want to isolate ourselves, we are interconnected. COVID taught us that. And so maybe if people can't travel themselves, maybe they can travel with their forks, maybe they can travel with this show."

"And this show wasn't really designed for people who think like me," she continues. "It was designed for people who don't think like me and who are maybe afraid of immigrants coming to this country. That's who the show is designed for."

“Movie: Bigger, Stronger, Faster”

In the style of Morgan Spurlock and Michael Moore, filmmaker Christopher Bell explores the world of performance-enhancing drugs, starting with himself and his two brothers — he no longer uses them, but they do. The film doesn't come out strongly for or against steroid use but does make a poignant point on how necessary it seems to have become in a culture obsessed with winning.

“Movie: Syrup”

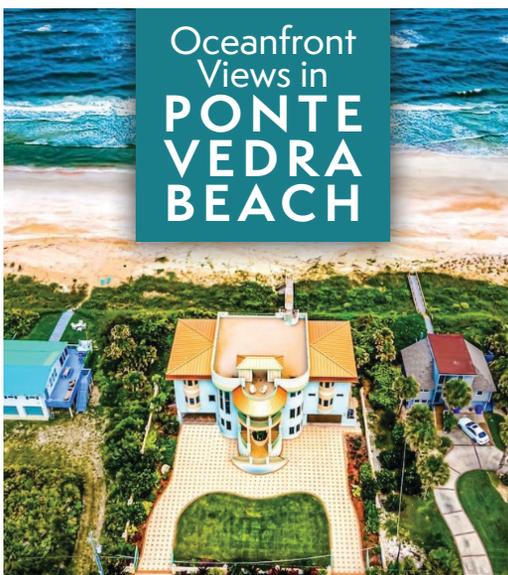

Based on Max Barry's novel, director Aram Rappaport's ("Innocent") 2013 comedy stars Shiloh Fernandez ("Evil Dead") as Scat, a low-level marketing worker who comes up with a surefire idea for an energy drink but needs the help of brainy co-worker Six (Amber Heard, "Aquaman") to keep it a secret from corporate spies. Kellan Lutz and Brittany Snow also star.

“Movie: I Melt With You”

The past becomes the present for several pals from college — played by Thomas Jane ("Hung"), Rob Lowe, Jeremy Piven ("Entourage") and Christian McKay — in this 2011 drama. During their annual get-together, they dredge up an agreement they made in their younger days, and their effort to fulfill it takes surprising and unfortunate turns. Co-stars include Carla Gugino, Arielle Kebbel, Melora Hardin ("The Office") and Sasha Grey.

“Movie: Happy, Happy”

From Norway comes this 2010 comedy that follows Kaja (Agnes Kittelsen, "Kon-Tiki"), an outwardly joyful schoolteacher in a struggling marriage who is overjoyed when a seemingly perfect couple and their adopted Ethiopian child move in next door. Joachim Rafaelsen, Maibritt Saerens and Henrik Rafaelsen are also in director Anne Sewitsky's ("Totally True Love") cast.

“A Small Light” (May 2)

This new series follows 20-something Miep Gies, who hid her boss Otto Frank and his family from the Nazis during World War II. For two years, Miep, her husband and others helped watch over Otto, his family and four others in the secret annex. Miep found Anne's diary and kept it safe so Otto, the only one of the eight who survived, could later share it with the world.

“Ed Sheeran: The Sum of It All” (May 3)

This documentary series takes an intimate look at the global superstar as he opens the doors on his private life and reveals the inspirations for his music. It also follows him as he learns life-changing news and reveals his hardships and triumphs during the most challenging period of his life. (ORIGINAL)

“Star Wars Visions — Volume 2” (May 4)

Building on the success of the first volume, this second batch of nine animated shorts brings forth stories from studios in countries around the globe, including Spain, Ireland, Chile, the United Kingdom, France, South Korea and South Africa. (ORIGINAL)

“Charles: In His Own Words” (May 5)

His Majesty King Charles III prepares for his official coronation in May while adjusting to a vastly different spotlight as sovereign. He is inarguably among the most renowned and media-scrutinized public figures in the world, but at the same time, one of the least understood. This series premiere goes back to the beginning, revealing the formative events that influenced the man.
