Ken Jennings hosts "Jeopardy! Masters" Monday on ABC.

Champs return in new tournament

Mention the word "jeopardy" just about anywhere in North America and chances are the 30-second thinking tune will spring straight to mind. A staple feature across all "Jeopardy!" episodes from the original series to the college championships, teachers tournaments and beyond, the theme song now has another installment to hitch its musical wagon to.

"Jeopardy! Masters" is a new spinoff series premiering in prime time Monday, May 8, on ABC. Hosted by "Jeopardy!" GOAT (greatest of all time) and current regular series host Ken Jennings, this tournament takes place over 10 episodes, pitting six former "Jeopardy!" champions against one another in classic round-robin fashion.

With the "Masters" announcement, ABC released the names of the six big winners who are featured in several seasons of the long-running regular show. Perhaps most popular among them is James Holzhauer, a professional sports gambler and trivia contestant from Naperville, Illinois. After his 32-game, $2.5-million win on "Jeopardy!" during the spring of 2019, Holzhauer went on to appear alongside other "Jeopardy!" GOATs in the American version of the British game show series "The Chase."

Joining Holzhauer behind the podiums are two Ohio-born contestants: writer Amy Schneider and Yale PhD candidate Matt Amodio, both of whom competed in 2021.

Amodio, whose 38-game streak on "Jeopardy!" has become known as "The Amodio Rodeo," won $1.5 million during his 39 appearances, making him the third-highest earner in regular season play to date. His is also the third-longest winning streak after Schneider and Jennings himself.

Current Oakland, California resident Schneider, however, is second only to 74-game champion Jennings when it comes to wins. Reigning over "Jeopardy's" regular season play for a total of 40 games, Schneider took home a cool $1.6 million. Ranking as both the most successful woman and the most successful trans person ever to compete in the series, Schneider's particular strength has been in the Final Jeopardy! Round, in which she answered 30 of 41 clues correctly.

All good things must come to an end, however, and Schneider was ousted in January 2022 by another contestant, Chicago librarian Rhone Talsma (who will not appear in the Masters tournament). Of course, Schneider knew her time on top would eventually end, as it was she who dethroned fellow Master Andrew He at the start of her run.

An MIT grad, software developer and competitive programmer, He is not only a "Jeopardy!" champion but also the 2021 winner of the Facebook Hacker Cup. Well known on the quiz show for his expert wagering tactics and narrow-margin wins (wins by just $1 or $2), He is the second youngest of the "Masters" series competitors.

The title of "youngest champion" goes to Canadian tutor Mattea Roach. Boasting an impressive 93% accuracy with regard to her buzzed-in answers, Roach won the hearts of many with her quirky hand gestures and down-to-earth repartee. The most successful Canadian in "Jeopardy!" history, Roach's 23-game win puts her in sixth place for earnings at just 23 years old. "Jeopardy! Masters" will put Roach back in the game with other Tournament of Champions contestants, including He, to whom she lost during the November 2022 ToC.

The most recent master is a rather familiar (some may say "celebrity") face. Sam Buttrey, a new favourite among "Jeopardy!" fans, has caught attention for his remarkable physical likeness to comedic actor Steve Martin ("Only Murders in the Building"). Buttrey, however, unlike Martin (so far as anyone knows), is somewhat of a trivia master, securing his place in the ToC after winning the first-ever "Jeopardy! Professors Tournament." The Naval Postgraduate School associate professor of operations research even got the chance to play Amodio in the ToC semifinals — a previously stated dream of his — and won.

With respect to the organization of the new "Jeopardy!" series, showrunner Michael Davies told the "Inside Jeopardy!" podcast that "Masters" is "a league-based system."

"It's about winning games," Davies remarked, "and we want to reward winning. There will be some bonus for finishing second, but it's really about winning games."

“Movie: Baby Mama”

Two veterans of “Saturday Night Live” reunite, to very funny effect, in this comedy about surrogate parenthood. Tina Fey plays a business-minded woman who wants to have a child, though she’s biologically unable to. The apparent solution is a decidedly different, rough-around-the-edges lady (Amy Poehler) who moves in, making it anyone’s guess if the duo will be able to endure each other until the baby is born.

“Movie: The Program”

Journalist David Walsh (Chris O’Dowd, “Bridesmaids”) of The Sunday Times investigates famed cyclist Lance Armstrong (Ben Foster, “Hell and High Water”) for doping in Stephen Frear’s 2015 docudrama, which drew a mixed response from critics despite a characteristically committed performance from Foster. How committed? To better understand his character, the actor reportedly took performance-enhancing drugs while making this film. Dustin Hoffman, Lee Pace and Jesse Plemons co-star.

“Class of ‘09”

This FX on Hulu limited thriller series follows a class of FBI agents at three distinct points in time who grapple with immense changes as the U.S. criminal justice system is altered by artificial intelligence. ### “The Great”

The 10-episode third round of this black comedy picks up after the events of the Season 2 finale, with Catherine and Peter (Elle Fanning, Nicholas Hoult) trying to make their marriage work, a visit from the U.S. ambassador that tests her diplomatic skills and taunting visions of his father that try his sanity. ## A culinary pioneer talks shop, shares war stories in 'Out of the Oven'

If the musings of one of the world's most influential chefs is of interest, a new newsletter on Substack may be what you seek.

In "Out of the Oven" (jeremiahtower.substack.com), Jeremiah Tower, who established his reputation as a culinary innovator with his 1970s stint as executive chef at Alice Waters' legendary Berkeley, Calif., bistro Chez Panisse, offers up a weekly selection from his considerable personal archives, among them his writings, photos, videos, menus and other visual materials on eating, cooking and travel. And there are stories, lots of stories.

This, after all, is a man who lived the life of a celebrity chef before there was such a thing. Recognized worldwide for his innovative approach to Northern California cuisine, Tower left Chez Panisse to open his own San Francisco eatery Stars in the 1980s. Along the way, he plated meals for everyone from the rich and famous to local fishermen and by his own admission was an enthusiastic participant in the drug culture that permeated the industry and helped fuel his own creativity.

In all, there is about a terabyte's worth of information to share and there are paid and free subscriptions. So whether you're a foodie or just a lover of entertaining stories, "Out of the Oven" might be worth checking out.

Here are a few other celebrity chef newsletters to be found on Substack.

"Andrew Zimmern's Spilled Milk" (andrewzimmern.substack.com): The "Bizarre Foods" host and four-time James Beard Award-winning chef started this newsletter in December 2021 with the idea of connecting more personally with his community, which he does here through online conversation, recipes, videos and other content. The subscription is free though subscribers do have the option to pay.

"Longer Tables With Jose Andres" (joseandres.substack.com): In today's divided climate, the Spanish-American chef, restaurateur, author and World Central Kitchen founder wants to bring people together. So in this newsletter, he shares stories that show how food connects us and explores our shared food history and food future. He also answers cooking questions, posts interviews with his foodie heroes and shares video postcards from his travels. Subscriptions range from free to $150 annually.

"Ruth Reichl: La Briffe" (ruthreichl.substack.com): For many years, Reichl was a food critic for The New York Times and The Los Angeles Times and she misses her readers. So she created this free newsletter "about cooking, eating and making life more delicious" to reconnect with them and have a two-way conversation about what they're eating, cooking and thinking.

May 7 "Jimmy O. Yang: Guess How Much?"

The "Crazy Rich Asians" and "Silicon Valley" actor and comic gives his take on such topics as love languages, loser friends and making compromises with his Asian parents in his first global stand-up special, which was filmed earlier this year. (ORIGINAL)

"Movie: Whose Streets?"

Through the accounts of those who lived through it, this 2017 documentary from filmmakers Sabaah Foleyan ("Look at Me: XXXTentacion") and Damon Davis ("The Holly") looks at how the police killing of 18-year-old Mike Brown in 2014 inspired the community of Ferguson, Mo., to fight back as well as sparked a global movement.

"Movie: Life Itself"

Roger Ebert was a brand unto himself, not only as one of America's top movie critics, but also as a Pulitzer Prize winner and a popular television personality. This 2014 documentary, directed by Steve James ("Hoop Dreams"), recalls Ebert's love of film — so deeply rooted that when illness took his literal voice, he found new ways to convey his professional thoughts to the public.

May 11 "58th Academy of Country Music Awards"

These annual awards, which honor the biggest names and emerging new talent in country music, return exclusively to streaming on Prime Video in a new venue — Ford Center at The Star in Frisco, Texas, near Dallas. Hardy tops all nominees with seven nods, including Song of the Year and Visual Media of the Year, while Lainey Wilson follows with six. Dolly Parton and Garth Brooks are the hosts. (ORIGINAL)
