City honors its veterans

T-G STAFF REPORT

The City of Shelbyville held a ceremony Tuesday evening to honor veterans who work for the City. Some 30 veterans, who work in public works, police and fire, were recognized. (See page 2 for photo.)

City council meeting

The regular Shelbyville City Council meeting was held Tuesday evening after the veterans' ceremony.

All items under the consent agenda were considered non-controversial and passed unanimously.

No citizens spoke during the public hearing over: the rezoning of 79 acres on the 437 by-pass from a low-density residential to a planned unit development district; or, the rezoning of 86.5 acres at 210 Frank Martin Road (the location of the 231 North Business Park) from light industrial to heavy industrial.

Both ordinances were passed unanimously by Council.

The only business item that posed some hesitation from council was an authorization to forward a request to annex 11 acres on Coney Island Road to the planning commission for further study.

The land under observation is located on a floodplain. However, the representative from developer Hawkins & Hawkins Real Estate said they can engineer the land to minimize flooding for future developments. The annexation request is being sent to the planning commission for further study.

Other land annexations sent to the planning commission:

- 22.5 acres on U.S. 231 North by Curl Construction & Excavating
- 33 acres on U.S. 231 North by the City of Shelbyville

Announcements

City Hall will be closed Nov. 25-26 in observance of Thanksgiving. Thursday's trash will be picked up with Monday's regular route.

The holistic approach to economic growth

•See more on industrial and business growth in a special section included with today's T-G.

By SHANE HOOPER
Economic Development Director

During the first meetings about the direction of economic and community development for Shelbyville and Bedford, we discussed the need for a holistic approach to growth. A holistic approach encompasses industrial, retail, and community development.

From the meeting, it was apparent the City and County leadership embraced the holistic approach. This was appealing and important because I hold the same professional view.

It is also crucial for all stakeholders to understand the need to partner with each other for a shared vision. It was also evident during the initial meetings with the City and County that both entities were willing to work together for a shared vision. (When leadership has a vision and is willing to work together, all things are possible.)

I saw the potential in Shelbyville and Bedford.

Wells: walking horse industry is cornerstone

By ZOË HAGGARD
zhaggard@t-g.com

For over 80 years, the Tennessee Walking Horse National Celebration has played a major role in Shelbyville industry. Warren Wells, CEO of The Celebration since January, said the Celebration has even proved to be a cornerstone of the community.

"The reason why I say we're a cornerstone is...everywhere you go, there are still walking horse barns everywhere," he said. "You bring that anchor in and everything else follows it."

"We are still the Super Bowl of the industry," he said.

The industry has had some hard hits. Attendance isn't what it used to be, according to Wells.

But, the TWHNC CEO said compliance rates were nearly 98 percent at the last Celebration and 99 percent at the Fall Classic.

"You can't find 16-17,000 people watching a horse just about anywhere else...The (Kentucky) Derby is one thing, but when it comes to a true horse show, it just doesn't happen very often. So, we are still very unique," Wells said.

Capturing that uniqueness will be a key in paving the way for the Celebration in the years to come.

And the biggest need for paving the way, Wells said, is growing the Celebration through the fan experience.

"I really want it to be something that even if you don't care about horses you want to be here because it's fun, exciting," he said.

The vision has brought an increase in locals to the walking horse events. For example, the Fall Classic saw many business leaders in the community sponsoring tables, according to Wells.

Still, hundreds of breeders, trainers, exhibitors, owners come from out of state who in turn support the economy, through buying local products, eating at local restaurants, buying gas and staying at hotels.

As the Celebration has proved before, tourism is and will remain part of the industry's contribution to the economy.

"I think when new companies or when new industries come, they see us as that cornerstone that Shelbyville was built on when it comes to tourism and jobs. I think the Celebration can definitely play a role in helping others come," Wells said.

The Celebration even looks to possibly partner with other local organizations, like the distilleries or Tennessee College of Applied Technology-Shelbyville, to provide both tourism and workforce development opportunities.

"I think we're pretty unique to where we're located," Wells said.

For now, Wells said the Celebration will be focusing on ground maintenance and beautification as they wait until January when other shows,

From Nashville Dirt Road, residents can see where a lot of the growth has taken place in the county within the last 10 years.

For example, I saw citizens with a desire to compete for jobs and a better local economy. I also noted the availability of assets to create an environment conducive to growth.

There was also elected official leadership dedicated to moving forward. I have confidence that when hard work is combined with the potential, our community will reach new heights of success. (A community can only travel as far as their leadership can vision.)

The area, Shelbyville and Bedford, have celebrated many firsts with the support of elected officials and the private sector. We created an organization from the ground up specifically devoted to economic development. The Shelbyville-Bedford Partnership provides our area with economic development for the benefit of our citizens.

The Partnership provides a springboard for recruiting new industries and retaining our existing industries. We have established a robust program for existing business retention and expansion. We work with our hometown businesses daily to provide resources for their success and profitability.

From the Partnership's platform we have built a more competitive industrial park, opened a website strictly dedicated to economic development, hired a full time workforce development director, participated in the Tennessee Department of Economic Development's Property Evaluation Program for the first time in Bedford history, attended formal training with TVA for "Rural Economic Development" and "Valley Workforce Institute," won a site development grant for over $100,000 enhance our industrial park, applied for a $1 million site development grant to further enhance the industrial park, started our first construction foundation in the park, and most importantly partnered with the private sector to start discussions on a spec building project.

When companies are expanding and looking for their new site, the competition between communities to be the location of the new project is fierce. A surface level observation of peer communities behind in what it takes to be competitive to win new projects. The list created from physically traveling to peer communities is the list we are working from to enhance our industrial park.

We have made great strides in competitiveness and with hard work and determination, we will not only catch up but surpass our competition. The availability of a trained workforce is one of the primary drivers for being selected as the site for a new industry.

It is imperative that Bedford continue to move forward in educational attainment levels. Certifications, skills training and graduations impact the arrival of new industries, as well as expansions in our current industries. We must continue to encourage, train and equip the workforce of tomorrow. The Partnership focuses on workforce by continually meeting with existing businesses to find their needs and then relay that information to educators at Bedford County Schools, TCAT, Motlow CC and MTSU.

We can strengthen our current industries by providing a workforce with the soft skills and specific training needed to be a productive employee. For example, we work with existing industries to ensure our educators know the employers needs for the workforce.

We routinely match education curriculums with industry standards and needs. Specifically, in the month of October, we provided an opportunity for over 700 [Bedford County] 8th grade students, to view current industry trends of employment with over 20 existing businesses. In the future those industries will provide students with jobs in Bedford County.

Another recent example is our "Workforce Development Summit." During the summit we brought more than 350 teachers together to hear from industry professionals what skills they want to hire. These communications enhance school curriculums with real world needs.

See today's special industry tab for more local economic stories.

beyond the horse, use the arena like monster trucks, demolition derbies, motorcross. They're a local draw but attract visitors from Lincoln, Moore, Marshall, and even Rutherford counties. The Celebration hopes to track where visitors are coming from in order to better gauge where to establish those partnerships, Wells explained.

"Any time you have something this large, there are factions," Wells said. "One thing the walking horse industry would benefit from is if we could all get on the same page and move forward together."

But what remains the same, Wells said, "The positive thing is the people. They're absolutely amazing," he said. "I've enjoyed getting to know the people...They love the breed but they also love Shelbyville."

"I'm happy to be home and being a part of the community that raised me."

Trump ally Bannon appears in court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Longtime Trump ally Steve Bannon appeared before a judge on Monday to face criminal contempt charges for defying a subpoena from Congress' Jan. 6 committee, then declared combatively outside court that he was "taking on the Biden regime" in fighting the charges.

Bannon did not enter a plea and is due back in court on Thursday for the next phase of what could be the first high-level trial in connection with January's insurrection at the U.S. Capitol.

Combative outside court, he said he was "going on the offense" against the attorney general, the speaker of the House and President Biden. He declared, "This is going to be a misdemeanor from hell for Merrick Garland, Nancy Pelosi and Joe Biden."

The 67-year-old Bannon surrendered earlier in the day to FBI agents. He was indicted on Friday on two federal counts of criminal contempt -- one for refusing to appear for a congressional deposition and the other for refusing to provide documents in response to the committee's subpoena.

Federal Magistrate Judge Robin Meriweather released him without bail but required him to check in weekly with court officials and ordered him to surrender his passport. If convicted, Bannon faces a minimum of 30 days and a maximum of one year behind bars on each count, prosecutors said.

Outside the courthouse, a large inflatable rat made to look like Republican former President Donald Trump was on the sidewalk as a crowd waited for Bannon to leave. Some in the crowd shouted expletives at him and called him a traitor, and one man paraded around with a sign that read: "Clowns are not above the law."

The indictment came as a second expected witness, former White House Chief of Staff Mark Meadows, defied a separate subpoena from the committee on Friday and as Trump has escalated his legal battles to withhold documents and testimony about the insurrection. Bannon and Meadows are key witnesses for the committee because they both were in close touch with Trump around the time of the Jan. 6 Capitol attack.

If the House votes to hold Meadows in contempt, that recommendation would also be sent to the Justice Department for a possible indictment.

Meadows was Trump's top aide at the end of his presidency and was one of several people who pressured state officials to try and overturn the results of the 2020 election won by Democrat Biden. Bannon promoted the Jan. 6 protests on his podcast after predicting the day before that "all hell is going to break loose."

The committee said that Bannon urged Trump to focus on the congressional certification and was present at an event at the Willard Hotel on Jan. 5 in which Trump allies tried to persuade members of Congress to vote against the results

Bannon's lawyer, David Schoen said his client didn't appear before Congress because he was told by another lawyer not to come after Trump claimed executive privilege would apply.

"Mr. Bannon is a lay person. When the privilege has been invoked by the purported holder of privilege, he has no choice but to withhold the documents. You can't put the genie back in the bottle," he said. "Mr. Bannon acted as his lawyer counseled him to do by not appearing and by not turning over documents in this case. He didn't refuse to comply."

Schoen also decried the Justice Department's decision to prosecute Bannon, claiming it runs counter to Attorney General Garland's statement of commitment to equal justice under the law.

Officials in both Democratic and Republican administrations have been held in contempt by Congress, but criminal indictments for contempt are exceedingly rare.

The indictment against Bannon comes after a slew of Trump administration officials -- including Bannon -- defied requests and demands from Congress over the past five years with little consequence, including during an impeachment inquiry. President Barack Obama's administration also declined to charge two of its officials who defied congressional demands.

The indictment says Bannon didn't communicate with the committee in any way from the time he received the subpoena on Sept. 24 until Oct. 7 when his lawyer sent a letter, seven hours after the documents were due.

Bannon, who worked at the White House at the beginning of the Trump administration and currently serves as host of the conspiracy-minded "War Room" podcast, is a private citizen who "refused to appear to give testimony as required by a subpoena," the indictment says.

Cockroaches in your house?

Dear Readers: Most of us have experienced the problem of invasive cockroaches. Take action right away when you discover them. If you don't want to apply chemical pesticides to get rid of them, use this nontoxic, homemade remedy to get rid of these common household pests.

Hints from Heloise

Heloise

WINDOW CLEANING

Dear Readers:

Windows in our homes do get dusty and dirty and need to be cleaned, a task we might dread doing. But here's a way to make them sparkle again. To clean, just mix 1/2 to 1 cup of white household vinegar with 1/2 gallon of water. Put the mixture in a spray bottle and spray the entire window surfaces with a liberal amount of the vinegar mix. Then dry well. The windows should be streak-free. You also can use this solution for the mirrors in your house. -- Heloise

PUTTING PILLOWCASES BACK ON

Dear Heloise:

Struggling with clean pillowcases has always left me frustrated. Trying to get the corners exact is exhausting. Try this: When removing a used pillowcase, just unfold it, making it inside out. Leave it this way when you launder and dry it. When putting it back on the pillow, do the reverse. Take the short seam of the case and align it with short seam on the pillow. Then unfold or fold it over the pillow. Those far angles will be in place without a struggle. -- Janet B. Wood, Rutland, Vermont

PARKING HINT

Dear Heloise: I saw a letter in your recent column where a lady had a problem finding her car in the parking lot. I've had that happen to me as well, but I have figured out a way around that!

When I park my car in an unfamiliar location, I try to remember to take a photo on my cellphone of something nearby, such as a street sign or parking lot indicator/location. It helps tremendously when trying to get back to my car. Maybe this could help someone else in the future. -- Patty, Waco, Texas

Patty, another good way to use your cellphone! -- Heloise

SAVING AND USING UP FOOD

Dear Heloise: I have a couple of ways to save: When bread is near the end date, make French toast or croutons. Use croutons as a snack or in soup or salad. You can make your own garlic bread and add it to a meal or two to stretch your money.

If you have leftover eggs from French toast, go ahead and scramble it. And it will taste sweet from the bread. Sauté leftover onions and scramble an egg or two into the onions, and it will have an oniony taste. Add a piece of toast, and you have a nice breakfast or snack.

In a hurry, make a piece of toast, put a slice of cheese on top and place under your broiler to melt the cheese for an open-faced grilled cheese sandwich.

When you have leftover spaghetti, you can drizzle with olive oil, red pepper flakes and parsley. Need a kick? Squeeze a little lemon in it and mix. You also can add a little grated lemon rind. Leftover chicken is also a good addition. -- Jan Hepner, via email

Jan, these are tasty ideas, and it will help save on your food costs by not wasting leftovers. Repurposing them can make some delicious food creations. -- Heloise

By John Teague
 UT/TSU Extension

NOW IS THE TIME!

I always get calls and questions about killing that yellow weed in pastures and horse lots. This problem weed is wild buttercup, and it produces a bright yellow bloom in the spring. Most animals don't eat it. It competes with other desirable grasses and it has no real value, unless you like yellow pastures and lots.

The rest of the year it is out of sight and out of mind. But it's here now in abundance. This plant is a fall germinated weed, and it's out there in the grass lots and pastures. And it is in the immature stage, and easy to kill with our good product 2,4-D.

Spray it now when you have temperatures above 60 degrees for three days. Just keep from spraying it when it's windy.

I have attached a photo to help you identify it now. If you wait until it blooms, the plant is too mature, the leaves have produced a wax that seals themselves and the weed control products can't penetrate into the plant to be very effective. So, now is the time!

LADYBUGS

In Tennessee, the invasion has started. They start seeking shelter when we have our first freezes, which was a week ago. The Multicolored Asian lady beetles, orange-red with a variable number of spots, often invade homes in the search of a protected overwintering spot.

These beetles may congregate on the sunny sides of buildings by the thousands and, if given the opportunity, will often move inside. They look for vertical structures, which to them resemble cracks and crevices in nature. So, doors and windows are inviting to them.

Multicolored Asian lady beetles were first introduced into the U.S. to control aphids, and so are considered a beneficial insect. Black spots that form an "m" or "w" on the pronotum (area behind the head) and the square-shaped spots ranging in number from none to 19 help distinguish this species from other lady beetles.

Multicolored Asian lady beetles are considered extremely beneficial. These beetles do not sting, do not carry diseases and do not consume or excavate wood. However, they can stain wallpaper and upholstery yellow when crushed. When the multicolored Asian lady beetle is present in large numbers, some individuals with insect allergies have been irritated.

What can be done to prevent this beetle from entering your home?

Exclude them! Don't give them the chance to enter! Exclusion practices should be performed each year by September. But it is never too late during the invasion! The first step to prevent entry into a home is to seal cracks and crevices where insects may enter the structure. (Gaps 1/8 inch or so will allow entry into a home).

This includes caulking around window frames, fitting all outside doors with door sweeps, adding rubber bottom seals to garage doors and using foam weather-stripping under and around sliding glass and other doors. Utility openings into the structure, such as the gaps around outdoor faucets, gas meters, dryer vents, wires, etc. should be sealed.

Holes can be filled with caulking, cement, steel wool or copper mesh. An easy way to seal openings around pipes is to stuff steel wool or copper mesh into the opening and seal with expandable foam. Caulk should be applied around cracks in window framing, siding and other areas. Damaged window screens should be repaired. Insect screening may need to be installed behind attic and crawl space vents.

This information came from our UT publication Lady Beetles Invading Homes SP503-C. Look at it for more information on exclusion.

Patriots overpower Shelbyville in 2nd round

By GARY JOHNSON
gjohnson@t-g.com

MURFREESBORO

Shelbyville Central's Golden Eagles knew they had a tough task on their hands facing top seed and defending 6A state champion Oakland in the second-round of the TSSAA state playoffs on Friday night.

Such was the case as the Eagles were handed a 56-6 loss by the undefeated Patriots to end their season.

Oakland travels to Lebanon on Friday night.

"Oakland is a really good and talented team and we knew that for whatever reason when we moved up there to 6A, we knew someday we were going to come across those guys and we're just not in a position right now where we are able to beat them. It's frustrating but it is what it is, I guess," Shelbyville Central coach Josh Puckett said.

"I was happy with how we moved the ball at times. I told the guys at halftime, no matter who we are playing, if we are not going to make plays the game is not going to go well. We had some balls hit us in the hands and we dropped them and we just really didn't make the plays."

Oakland (12-0) led 28-0 at the half and was in total control of the game.

Shelbyville Central's lone touchdown was a 20-yard pass connection to Gavin Donegan from Kade Cunningham.

The two-point conversion effort failed making the score 28-6.

From that point, the Patriots closed out the game with 28 unanswered points.

Oakland quarterback Kade Hewitt connected on 4-of-4 passes for 135 yards with a pair of touchdowns.

He also ran for a TD.

The Patriot defense was also outstanding, collecting a pair of interceptions returned to the end zone.

Isaiah Horton had a 40 yard pick-six, while Tren Johnson added a 38-yarder.

Cunningham was 11-for-26 for 127 yards. He added 38 rushing yards.

Laquan Young rushed for 74 yards in 21 carries.

This marks the end for a senior class that has shown a lot of grit and determination over the past four years.

"This senior class is a good group of kids that have showed up every day, did what we have asked them to do and it's going to be hard to fill their shoes. I'm really proud of this group of seniors and I'm thankful I have been able to coach them these past two years," Puckett said. "We've got to get to work and find some guys to fill those spots."

The Eagles wrap up the season having played one of the toughest non-region schedules in the state.

Tide jumps to No. 2 in AP poll

By RALPH D. RUSSO
AP College Football Writer

Alabama jumped Cincinnati to No. 2 behind Georgia in The Associated Press college football poll on Sunday and Oklahoma dropped eight spots to No. 12 after losing for the first time this season.

Georgia is a unanimous No. 1 in the AP Top 25 presented by Regions Bank for the sixth consecutive week and the Southeastern Conference has the top two teams in the poll for the sixth time this season.

Alabama and Georgia were flip-flopped at Nos. 1 and 2 for five weeks in September and early October.

The switch from Cincinnati to Alabama at No. 2 was more about the Bearcats than the Crimson Tide, which closed the gap on UC to four points last week.

Alabama took care of business against over-matched New Mexico State on Saturday. No surprise there.

Cincinnati remained unbeaten after winning at South Florida 45-28 on Friday night. It was the fourth straight week the Bearcats played a team with a losing record and found themselves in a competitive game in the second half. That tipped a few more voters to drop Cincinnati.

"It was an evaluation of their overall resumes," said voter Ryan Aber from The Oklahoman. "Alabama's win over New Mexico State didn't do much on the surface, but other factors — Ole Miss' win over Texas A&M as well as Cincinnati's less-than-dominant performances against lesser competition in recent weeks — led me to raise the Crimson Tide ahead of the Bearcats."

Matt Baker of the Tampa Bay Times made the switch to put Alabama ahead of Cincinnati last week and then further separated the Tide and Bearcats after this week's games.

"I've seen Alabama and Cincinnati both with my own eyes," Baker said. "Neither one is on Georgia's level, but I see a gap between 'Bama and Cincinnati."

Behind the Bearcats, No. 4 Oregon, No. 5 Ohio State, No. 6 Notre Dame, No. 7 Michigan State, No. 8 Michigan and No. 9 Oklahoma State all moved up one spot after Oklahoma tumbled.

The Sooners were No. 4 before being handed their first loss of the season at Baylor on Saturday.

The Bears moved up to No. 11 behind No. 10 Mississippi.

Poll points

Alabama has the longest current streak of top-five appearances in the AP Top 25 at 29. Georgia is second after running its streak to 12 this week.

Cincinnati is third at seven straight polls. Oklahoma had been next coming into this weekend at five straight, but with that snapped, the next best top-five streak is Oregon with two straight polls.

Alabama holds the record for top-five appearances with 68 from 2015-19.

Their non-region opponents, including the teams they played in the playoffs, post a combined 74-19 record.

Four are in the state quarterfinals and three of them are currently undefeated with a 12-0 record.

“We had bigger goals than to just finish second in our region and make it to the second round of the playoffs. Lebanon is really good. They won our region and they are still playing. Yes, our schedule was really tough, but we had bigger plans. With that said, I am extremely proud of what this team did accomplish this year. I like the direction this football program is headed and we have some talent coming up over the years to come.”

Panthers hope Newton can provide same jolt as a starter

By STEVE REED
AP Sports Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Cam Newton proved he can provide the Carolina Panthers with a jolt off the bench playing in certain goal-line and short-yard packages.

Now it becomes a matter of can Newton be as productive as an every-down quarterback when the Panthers return home on Sunday to face his former head coach Ron Rivera and the Washington Football Team. Newton is 7-16 in his last 23 starts, including eight straight losses as Carolina's starter.

Panthers coach Matt Rhule hasn't officially named a starting quarterback, but said Monday that Newton will get the majority of reps this week in practice.

“If he's ready to start, great. If he's not quite ready to do everything then P.J. Walker is available,” Rhule said Monday.

But Rhule made it clear after Carolina's lopsided 34-10 win Sunday over the Arizona Cardinals, saying “We brought Cam here to play, there's no doubt about that.”

Rhule said the Panthers' plan with Newton is right on schedule. Newton didn't sign with Carolina until Thursday night, so he had limited time to digest the playbook. He knew about 15 plays going into the game and Newton played 12% (9 of 75) of the offensive plays.

P.J. Walker started against Arizona, but even he knew his time as a starter would be brief.

“I understand what's going on,” said Walker, 2-0 as an NFL starter. “I understand the game. I understand the business of it.”

Newton scored touchdowns the first two times he touched the ball against Arizona, first on a tackle-breaking 2-yard run and then on a 2-yard pass to Robby Anderson. He ran for 14 yards on three carries and was 3 of 4 passing for 8 yards.

“He pulled the trigger on the deep ball today, we threw the sprint out with him. He'll have to get into it this week and learn more and more and more,” Rhule said.

When asked how much of the playbook he knew coming into the game, Newton replied “two touchdowns worth.”

If the season ended today, the Panthers (5-5) would be the NFC's third wild-card team.

Newton is a big part of the team's optimism moving forward.

“We're .500 right now,”

Newton said. “We lost games that, going back and watching film, that we should have won. It's still keeping that microscope to the details and making sure every opportunity that we get, we maximize in a positive way.”

What's working

The impact of a healthy Christian McCaffrey is beginning to be felt, as the versatile running back combined for 161 yards from scrimmage Sunday. McCaffrey's mere presence in the backfield opens up so many things for his teammates as defenses are forced to account for him every play. The Panthers are doing a nice job of keeping running backs Chuba Hubbard and Ameer Abdullah in the mix to take some of the workload off McCaffrey and prevent another injury. McCaffrey played 59% of Carolina's plays vs. Arizona. He appeared to be stretching out his hamstring in the fourth quarter, but Rhule said the 2019 All-Pro was not injured.

What needs help

Discipline. Despite the lopsided win, the Panthers continue to hurt themselves with penalties. Carolina was penalized nine times for 115 yards. The Panthers are now the most penalized team in the NFL with 74 through 10 weeks.

Stock up

Zane Gonzalez. The kicker has made 16 straight field goal attempts, including 4 for 4 on Sunday that included makes of 44, 48, 49 and 27 yards.

Haason Reddick. The outside linebacker continues to have an impressive season with 10 sacks. Reddick has five games this season with at least 1 1/2 sacks, tying a franchise record.

Stock down

Sam Darnold. The Panthers spent three draft picks on the former Jet and gave him every opportunity to become the team's franchise quarterback, but it's clear he wasn't the right guy for the job. He's expected to miss four to six weeks with a shoulder injury and could be done for the season. With Newton in the fold, there's no reason to believe Darnold will ever be the team's starter again.

The bad news for the Panthers is they're stuck with a pretty expensive backup next season after picking up the fifth-year option on Darnold's contract that will pay him $18.85 million in 2022.

Injured

Carolina's No. 2-ranked defense could get a boost this week if safety Juston Burris is able to return. He has been out since Week 3 with a groin injury. Burris had been set to return a few weeks ago, but suffered a setback.

Key number(s)

11 — number of games with at least 10 receptions by McCaffrey in his career, the most of any running back in NFL history.

24 — Panthers' margin of victory against Arizona, their largest since 2017 against the Dolphins.

Next steps

Carolina's defense has been really good for most of the season and the next three weeks the team will face QBs Taylor Heinicke, Tua Tagovailoa and Matt Ryan. This is a chance for the Panthers to make some hay and position themselves for the playoffs before a brutal closing stretch that includes two games against Tampa Bay and one each against Buffalo and New Orleans.

Should churches have a dress code?

Where do you reside on the “holier than thou” versus “holeier than thou” spectrum? I make only passing reference to squabbles over “proper” church attire in my 2020 motivational book “Yes, Your Butt Still Belongs in Church” (still available in paperback and Kindle formats on Amazon), but the subject is indeed divisive.

Between the judgmental churchgoers who second-guess the wardrobe choices of fellow worshippers and the slightly paranoid parishioners who ASSUME they’re under a microscope, unease often permeates the fabric of church life.

Some church leaders do a lot of hemming and hawing about their expectations. (“Harumph, no, we don’t have an official list of specific prohibitions for you. Just like we don’t have an official, specific special corner of hell reserved for you, but...”)

Good taste and self-respect should reign supreme, but some traditionalists do take it to an extreme. Some of these people should spend more time clinging to the Old Rugged Cross instead of clinging to the 1958 Montgomery Ward catalog clothing section.

Yes, it’s easy to get caught up in memories when you constantly practice reciting lists such as the 7 Deadly Sins: “Pride, envy, gluttony, denim, flip-flops, spaghetti straps...”

On the other hand, some daredevils dress in a way that just invites panic attacks. When they’re within proximity of the baptistry, you can’t help but imagine them shouting, “Cannonball!”

Some offenders go the fragramuffin route, but others are more into ostentatious displays of wealth. (“Preacher says you can’t take it with you...so MY bling is getting a workout every Christmas and Easter! More money than God! More money than God! But less patience. Please look!”)

Perhaps church life would be more harmonious if Bible class teachers clarified principles better. (“No, it’s ‘an eye for an eye,’ not ‘a stink eye for a stink eye!’”) Better enunciation

Danny Tyree

might eliminate some unfortunate mix-ups. (“It’s Song of Solomon, not Thong of Solomon!”)

Most true Christians will not object to someone being a tad relaxed or laid-back, but laid-back soon degrades into downright gelatinous! (“Never mind the communion tray. I think I’ve still got some crumbs from last time in my PJ bottoms. Yum.”)

I was a generation too late for the “ubiquitous hat era” and I gradually got away from neckties a decade or so ago; but I do try to shave, pick out a decent shirt and don some non-distressed slacks. I acknowledge that more free-spirited people are focused on “sticking it to the Man.” Of course, if the Man is a kindly old double-amputee veteran, the chip on the shoulder loses some of its appeal. (“Thanks for your service...and the birthday card...and the job referral...but the Cheech & Chong shirt stays, Greatest Generationer!”)

I’m not making excuses for the easily tempted, but some attention-seekers routinely distract from important lessons with their provocative attire. The minister is making a point about Noah and the Flood, while half the menfolk are wondering how to make it Rain Doll ar Bills for 40 days and 40 nights.

Ideally, congregations should welcome even the most inappropriately dressed visitors. And visitors should err on the side of caution.

Let’s put our rancor and insecurities in the garbage heap.

Hey, there’s also a 1958 Montgomery Ward catalog in the garbage heap!

“Yeah, that pelvis looked like it was about to get too much action from a Hula Hoop! Can’t be too careful!”

Where’s the money? Not in stores, banks

Peter Funt

Syndicated Columnist

Slick Willie Sutton, the 1930’s bandit who favored elaborate disguises, was once asked why he robbed banks. He famously replied, “Because that’s where the money is.”

Oh, how times have changed. The other day my daughter, Stephanie, walked into the Chase branch in South San Francisco, seeking 16 quarters to do her laundry. She was informed by the teller: “We don’t handle cash anymore.”

Wait, what? A bank that refuses to give or take...money?

I phoned the branch seeking clarification. “We have all the services other branches offer,” the manager explained, “except we don’t handle coins or bills. No cash.”

The nation was moving away from cash even before the pandemic, but COVID-19 added to the jitters, especially when the CDC issued guidance last year urging merchants to use “touchless payment options.” Seems some businesses actually prefer it that way.

Major retailers — from Starbucks to Whole Foods — have experimented with no-cash retailing. In response, some municipalities and a few states have passed laws making it illegal to refuse cash. Oddly, there is no federal law requiring businesses to accept cash, even though the Coinage Act of 1965 states: “United States coins and currency (including Federal reserve notes and circulating notes of Federal reserve banks and national banks) are legal tender for all debts, public charges, taxes, and dues.”

Try telling that to a flight attendant who will only accept a credit card for a Coors Light.

Aside from the fact that refusing cash discriminates against those who don’t have bank accounts or credit cards, the muddle about whether or not to deal with currency makes it difficult for all of us.

Motorists know this all too well. Modern parking meters won’t accept coins, only credit or debit cards. Many bridges and highways no longer take cash for tolls. At the same time, most gas stations want you to pay with cash and will jack up the price if you prefer to use a credit card.

On a recent business trip I rented a car from Avis that did not have an E-ZPass toll device. On the thruway I encountered a toll plaza that would not accept cash for a $2.22 charge. New York State billed me, adding its own $5.95 “Convenience Fee,” for a total of $8.17. This I paid by credit card.

I still stop and pick up coins on the sidewalk, an act my mother said brings good luck. I toss them into a large jar, which for more than a decade I’ve been planning to take to a bank. I suppose that’s still possible somewhere, although clearly not at the Chase branch in South San Francisco.

Monopoly slowly destroys popular television

You’ve probably noticed that broadcasters have axed a lot of TV shows this year. From short-lived comedies like ABC’s “Call Your Mother” to long-running hits like PBS’s “Arthur,” the landscape of television is rapidly changing.

All told, nearly 60 shows have received cancellation announcements this year, and it’s left many viewers wondering what’s behind this mass exodus of content.

Sure, the pains of the pandemic have something to do with it, and some of these shows naturally ran their course. That said, a lot of the blame may rest on something else: egregious mistakes made by TV raters.

Raters’ viewership numbers determine the value advertisers are willing to spend on ads during your favorite shows. That ad revenue determines what shows networks keep on and what shows they can.

The problem: only one company has had full accreditation from the Media Ratings Council, the government-funded organization that ensures valid, reliable, and effective TV viewership numbers, to measure shows’ popularity. That company is Nielsen, which has had accreditation since the 1960s.

Like most monopolies, Nielsen has gotten a bit too comfortable in the absence of competition. The company still leans heavily on the outdated set-top boxes it installs in select families’ houses and largely ignores streaming and the other modern ways that viewers consume their favorite programs in the 21st century.

The result? Nielsen erroneously projected that TV viewership decreased during the pandemic when we were all clearly bingeing it more than ever. The embarrassing mistake caused the broadcasting industry to lose millions if not billions of dollars, which may have incited the demise of many of our favorite shows both this year and last.

Nielsen has since scrambled to save face with a company revamp. Backed by a new logo, the company has promised to innovate and better track the changing media landscape. However, we’ve seen this movie before, and it’s always ended the same way: with broken promises and more disappointment.

In 2014, Nielsen assured the industry that it would make changes after fudging its numbers for nearly six months. While that mistake wasn’t as monumental as the one in 2020, it still prompted calls for a breakup of the Nielsen monopoly. Nothing substantial appears to have changed from 2014 to today.

Just seven years earlier, Nielsen had to defend its methods against the emergence of DVR. Yet again, the company appeared to fight change until it got backed into a corner.

Why should we expect Nielsen to change anything today when it seems as if the company has failed to keep its word throughout the last decade?

Thankfully, the industry already appears to know the answer to this question — we can’t — and it is finally standing up to Nielsen’s doublespeak and industry damage.

Recently, NBC announced intent to solicit proposals to replace the monopoly. The MRC also suspended Nielsen’s accreditation, which may allow newer companies like Comscore and others to compete even more heavily with the company in the near future.

It’s too early to tell what will happen, but with any luck, our favorite shows might soon be spared from being on the receiving end of more financial threats and pains.

Consumer choice is supposed to determine who succeeds and fails in the marketplace — not the whims of data dictators. Here’s hoping the entertainment industry does what’s needed to ensure that remains true in the television industry. The fate of our favorite shows is hanging in the balance.

Biden hopes infrastructure bill boosts popularity

By JOSH BOAK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Joe Biden prepared to sign his $1 trillion infrastructure deal into law Monday on the White House lawn, with a smattering of Republican lawmakers on hand for what could be one of the last shows of bipartisanship ahead of the 2022 midterm elections.

The president hopes to use the law to build back his popularity, which has taken a hit amid rising inflation and the inability to fully shake the public health and economic risks from COVID-19.

"My message to the American people is: America is moving again," Biden said in prepared remarks released ahead of the ceremony. "And your life is going to change for the better."

With the bipartisan deal, the president had to choose between his promise of fostering national unity and a commitment to transformative change. The final measure whittled down much of his initial vision to invest in roads, bridges, water systems, broadband, ports, electric vehicles and the power grid. Yet the administration hopes to sell the new law as a success that bridged partisan divides and will elevate the country with clean drinking water, high-speed internet and a shift away from fossil fuels.

"Too often in Washington — the reason we don't get things done is because we insist on getting everything we want," Biden said in his prepared remarks. "With this law, we focused on getting things done. I ran for president because the only way to move our country forward is through compromise and consensus."

Biden will get outside Washington to sell the plan more broadly in coming days.

He intends to go to New Hampshire on Tuesday to visit a bridge on the state's "red list" for repair, and he will go to Detroit on Wednesday for a stop at General Motors' electric vehicle assembly plant, while other officials also fan out across the country.

Father, son reflect on Air Force careers

By ZOË HAGGARD
zhaggard@t-g.com

Like father, like son. It can be said for father and son, Daryl and Parker Phillips, who both served in the U.S Air Force.

Daryl served for 31 years, between 1982 and 2013. Parker served for 6 years between 2013 and 2019.

And even though Veterans' Day was this past Thursday, for those who served for decades or who served recently, the acknowledgment lives beyond a single day in November.

"What is beautiful about Veterans Day is people can acknowledge it however they want because in this great nation we have freedoms! Each celebration is as unique as each veteran, it's what matters to an individual," said Parker Phillips. "The common bond is that Veterans leave everything we love behind, for one reason or another, and risk our lives, our relationships, and for some even their livelihood all in sacrifice of freedoms.

"It's with great pride that I had the opportunity to serve this great nation, and it is with fatherly pride that my son Parker followed in my footsteps and also chose to go into the military," said Daryl Phillips.

The father-son relationship can also be seen between Daryl and his father, who served in the armed forces as well.

"... I think about why I joined the Air Force; I know part of it was because of his love and passion for freedom and the leadership he provided to me and the impact this had on my life. He was filled with honor, integrity and selflessness," said Daryl.

He also jokes that his father encouraged him to go into the Air Force specifically after asking, "Well, son, do you want to spend your time in a tent or a hotel?"

"Of course, I said hotel. So he told me to go into the Air Force," Daryl joked. Living in hotel wasn't necessarily the case for Daryl in his three decades of service, but he did have the ability to go around the world even if it meant staying in a tent.

"Having traveled all over the world, working on airplanes throughout the world, setting up tent city in remote locations including Saudi Arabia and Afghanistan, experiencing the massive sandstorms and triple digit temperatures in the Middle East, the one thing I am confident of is that we live in the greatest Country in the world," Daryl said.

Daryl began his military career as a full time technician, working on C130s, and moved on to aircraft mechanics and eventually air crew in his last years of service. Starting off as a young 20-year-old, working on such powerful machinery he admits was intimidating.

But as many veterans will reflect, being in these intimidating situations changes you.

When he began in the Air Force, Parker worked with AWACs. He was eventually deployed three times, where he, like his father, stayed in his own tent cities across the world.

"Veterans carry their reputation like a badge of honor, a reputation of being invincible to dangers, both tactical & strategic, cunning, a leader, and to be a part of a camaraderie of excellence," Parker said. "Veterans are willing to walk into dangerous scenarios with people they hardly know, but all want the same thing, just to make it back home." Today, Parker is now studying at the University of Tennessee Chattanooga.

"He grew up so fast in a good way," Daryl said. "Who knows what the future brings to him...he's gotten so far in a short time."

Daryl himself said he took up real estate after retiring from the Air Force. Today, he enjoys spending time at home with his family. And one thing he hopes to continue is supporting other fellow veterans, representing the next generation while his son will represent the next.

"I have a forever bond with those in which I served and my son and I have a special bond as when we see Old Glory wave, we know, we lived, and we honor the sacrifices made for this great nation!" said Daryl.

Parker adds, "Veteran's Day to me is a time of reflection and to stop for just a moment and be grateful. Make sure you stop for just a moment to thank a Veteran - it's a special day to let veterans know that their sacrifices were noticed, worth it and appreciated."
