HIGH WATER REMAINS

High water remained in many areas Thursday. Schools were once again closed Friday. Gates remained closed at River Bottom Park due to the Duck River's high flood waters covering the greenway, soccer fields, and parking lots. City officials say they will work to improve the flooding conditions that are common at the park.

Uphill battle with Union Ridge water

New bids in March

By ZOË HAGGARD zhaggard@t-g.com

The Union Ridge community outside Wartrace still has no direct access to a clean water supply.

County Commissioner Don Gallagher explained at Tuesday's financial management committee meeting that the town has gone through some hurdles, but he remains optimistic for the new bids which will open March 10.

"This is our last-ditch effort," said Gallagher. "It has been a priority for me for a while to get water up to Union Ridge. And it's just so difficult because in a rural area it's hard to have the density to qualify for grants."

The community has around 40 families. Most of their water is contaminated, while often, during major droughts like in the one in 1987, there's no water at all, Gallagher explained. For decades, families have been buying water from Wartrace and trekking mobile water tanks up to the ridge.

Bedford County Mayor Chad Graham added at Tuesday's meeting, "Their groundwater is not correct. And they have times where they don't even have water; it dries up. It really shouldn't be like that in today's world."

Since each resident has their own well, each water source is contaminated with something different, according to Wartrace Mayor Cindy Drake. She recalls seeing sulfur listed as a "contaminate" on several of the reports.

In 2019, Wartrace and Bedford entered into agreement to get water to Union Ridge. The County applied for a Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) to build a 100,000 gallon storage tank. The grant was approved in September 2020, and Wartrace received $625,000 for the construction of the waterline, while Bedford received $404,000 for water storage, according to Gallagher.

In addition to building the water tank, the town, along with Wartrace engineer Robert Stegal, designed a plan to place a waterline from Red Hill Road to Lazy Branch up to Union Ridge.

The construction was open for bid in November. However, the lowest bid for the waterline was over $850,000, while the lowest bid for the tank was $788,000. The bids were over the grant allocation by over $200,000.

Even though Wartrace had some $200,000 in American Rescue Plan (ARP) funds, they were still short by $67,800, Gallagher said. "Those bids were higher than expected primarily because of the increase in cost of steel."

Also, money from the TDEC's Infrastructure Investment plan could not be used for water system expansion—it could only be used to rehabilitate existing waterlines. Therefore, it's up to the County to explore ways to fund this project using ARP funds—even if that delays construction, Gallagher said.

"It's really frustrating to think the state got something like $3.75 million for water infrastructure projects. A million of that was allocated in a granting project to do waterline projects. And here these people are desperate for water, and they don't have access."

Graham said, "They're so close to getting water, and they've never been able to get it. If we let this opportunity pass, I don't know how there would be a path to achieve this going forward."

Gallagher explained they've redesigned the water tank down to 50,000 gallons and elevated it, which should help decrease the cost. They have no redesign for the waterline extension.

Reception honors seven SPS retirees

By ZOË HAGGARD zhaggard@t-g.com

Shelbyville Power, Water, and Sewer System hosted a retirement reception event Tuesday for seven of their longtime employees.

Combining the number of years the seven retirees worked at Shelbyville Power equaled to a total of 217

-Purchasing agent and safety director Tony Brown – 47 years.

-Wastewater supervisor Bert Troxler – 44 years

-General manager David Crowell – 37 years -Engineer and supervisor of electrical department Pruitt Marshall – 35 years

-Foreman of water and sewer construction Cliff Carlock – 22 years

-Wastewater plant driver Billy Story – 18 years -Serviceman George Parham – 14 years

"The system is for sure losing some valuable experience with this group," said David Crowell, Shelbyville Power general manager. Crowell will also be retiring after 37 years. "But it has good young people ready to step in and to continue leading the system toward the future."

Crowell graduated from Middle Tennessee State University in 1983 with an accounting degree. He worked with the State of Tennessee as a sales tax auditor and for the local accounting firm Winnett Associates.

Crowell started work at Shelbyville Power, Water and Sewerage System as the office manager/account and was promoted to General Manager in 2001.

"The most rewarding part for me has been keeping the system on solid financial footing while maintaining and upgrading the system's assets to keep up with the pace of growth and other challenges in Shelbyville," he said.

Over the years, Crowell has seen the SPS industry change as both technology and rapid growth have pushed Shelbyville into a new phase of development.

Crowell said the City's growth has created some challenges for the system. He said SPS has stayed ahead of the growth with construction of electric substations, of a new wastewater plant, as well as the expansion of the existing water treatment plant.

"There are still challenges ahead for the system on the north part of the sewer system as the city expands in that direction," Crowell said.

The total gross revenue for all three utility systems (power, water, and sewer) has grown from $26.6 million in 2001 to a total gross revenue of over $43,5 million for fiscal year ending June of 2021, according to Crowell.

One of the biggest changes to come to the industry has been technology, which has helped aid in adapting to the held Friday at Doak-Howell Funeral Home, Russ Countess graciously officiating. Interment followed at Willow Mount Cemetery. Visitation will be 5-8 p.m. Thursday. He was born

November 15, 1937 in Jasper, Tennessee, to Jim and Sally Warren.

On September 1, 1956 he married Joann Roberts whom he loved dearly until her death in July 2008. Jim completed a bachelor's degree and a master's in education at Middle Tennessee State University. He took his first job in Shelbyville as a physical education teacher and coach. He very much enjoyed his career in education and for the rest of his life was referred to fondly as "Coach" by his former students. He entered into the construction field with Melson Contractors Inc. in the late 1960's, and in 1973, he started his own company, J.R. Warren Contractor. He was also a real estate broker with Scott Shapard Realty for over 30 years. Jim was a 50+ year member of the Olive Branch Masonic Lodge in Jasper and a member of the Royal Arch Chapter in Shelbyville, where he achieved the rank of 32nd degree Mason. He was a founding member of First Community Bank and Peoples Bank of Bedford County, and he sat on the Shelbyville Power, Water and Sewer board for over 30 years, acting as chairman of the board for many of allows us to more efficiently read the meters and almost instantly be aware of outages or other disruptions of service," Crowell explained.

He also mentioned the expansion of their monitoring capabilities with the operation of their system assets in the field and at their water treatment and wastewater treatment plants.

But what has kept him in the industry, in addition to the fast-paced developments, are the people.

"I have been blessed to work with some of the finest folks in this industry that taught me the value of what a local public utility brings to their community," Crowell said. "The public utility industry is so important to the well-being of the community it serves and has given me great satisfaction and kept me at SPS for all these years."

Now SPS will be preparing for the next set of workers.

'Not everyone will find a career that they love, but I think it is important to find one that will give you personal satisfaction and contribute to a long career," he said.

For now, Crowell said he plans to enjoy retirement by spending more time with family (especially his three granddaughters), playing more golf, and traveling more with his wife Tammy.

Water

Some 300 customers will be served, according to Gallagher. The new bid will be opened March 10. Gallagher said the Town of Wartrace is hoping the bids will become more competitive since there are more companies that can construct smaller, elevated tanks versus large, ground-level ones (and which use much more steel as well.) Once bids are in, they hope to explore options then present those before the finance committee and Board of Commissioners in April.

If plans for the tank do not go through, Gallagher said they may have to resort to a pumping station instead of a tank. Though much more cost-effective at $400,000, it's not the best solution to serve the ridge area, he advised.

"Hopefully when the bids come in, we'll be in good shape," Gallagher said. "I'm really excited for the possibility of getting water up in that area because I know there's been a need for a long time."

BAD AFTERNOON FOR SOME

With the heavy amounts of rain this week, the potential for traffic accidents was greater within the City. Shelbyville Police officers manned this minor accident at North Cannon Boulevard and Lane Parkway on Thursday.

Suspect threatens to 'shoot up' store

By DAVID MELSON

dmelson@t-g.com

Alleged threats to "shoot up" the Shelbyville Walmart resulted in a suspect's arrest for disorderly conduct Thursday by police.

Stephen Henry Lovett, 41, of Southwood Lane entered the store shortly after 10 a.m. yelling at customers and employees, officers were told. He was not armed.

Moments earlier several calls had been received of Lovett walking down the center turn lane of U.S. 231

"He was in a public place alarming customers by his statements. He also put himself and drivers in danger by being in the middle of a busy highway yelling and acting the way he was acting," Officer Brock Horner said in his report.

Lovett was held on $2,000 bond at Bedford County Jail, where he allegedly told corrections officers he could "make their heart explode."

Vehicle thefts

Two men have been accused of stealing cars shortly after leaving Bedford County Jail.

•A man who walked up to a Midland Road home looking for a place to stay after being released from the nearby facility left with the resident's car Friday night of last week, she told a deputy.

The victim said the man showed at her doorstep, said he'd just left the jail and asked to spend the night. She let him stay in a bedroom.

He was gone by 10 p.m., she said. Around 10 a.m. Saturday she left her house to discover her car was gone.

"I always leave my keys in the car because I live in the country," she told the

The man left behind jail release papers bearing the name of a man who has not been arrested.

•A suspect who drove away from his parents' home in their 2018 Buick Enclave without permission was charged with theft of a motor vehicle Wednesday, a Bedford County Sheriff's Office report said.

Jonathan Ray Smith, 41, was released from Bedford County Jail after bonding out on charges of simple possession of schedule II and VI drugs and paraphernalia. He allegedly went to his father's Riverbend Country Club Road home where he was knocking on windows. Smith was told he wasn't welcome and allegedly retrieved a backpack from an outbuilding before leaving in the SUV.

Smith was returned to jail on $5,000 bond.

A report filed Thursday indicated a .38 caliber Smith & Wesson revolver and set of gold silverware were reported stolen from the home. Deputies were told that the gun was last seen in August 2021 and it was unknown when the silverware was taken.

Thefts

•A green 2003 Ford Taurus was taken from the driveway of a Woodbury Street home Thursday or Friday of last week, according to a Shelbyville Police Department report.

Also reported to local authorities:

•Two trail cameras were stolen Monday from a construction site near the intersection of Highway 64 East and Lee Road. •The license plate was stolen from a motorcycle at an apartment complex on Green Lane.

Team arrests

Multiple deputies were needed in two arrests

Tuesday, •Ryan Curtis Morton, 32, allegedly refused orders to exit a shop at his April Lane home so a deputy could serve a warrant for violation of an order of protection.

Deputies entered the shop and arrested Morton, adding an additional charge of evading arrest. A bondsman surrender was also added.

Morton was held on $120,000 bond.

Single-use habits

ear Heloise: This message grows out of a recent one that I saw in your column. A reader reported on her single uses of items that then went into the recycle bin rather than choosing items that could be washed and reused.

Please encourage your readers to remember the three R's: reduce, reuse, recycle. In other words, first ask yourself if you really need to use a new item, especially for a single

If you really do need that item, can you find a way to reuse it a second third or fourth time, instead of pulling out a new one each time? Finally, when you have reduced items and reused them all you can, then recycle or trash, depending on the item.

When you recycle something, it's not "gone." It goes through a complicated (and expensive!) series of collections, sorting and repurposing. It really is astonishing how much you can reduce your waste by simply reducing and reusing, then recycling what has been thoroughly used and is truly recyclable. -- An Earth-Lover From Maryland

BEANS CAUSING

Dear Heloise: I noted the recommendation regarding beans causing gas: Soak dry beans then change the water before boiling. I read another hint in a 19th-century cookbook. After soaking the beans, change the water and make sure you have a large pot, then add baking soda to the water. It will foam up quite a lot. I've even added baking soda twice depending on how much it foams. Change the water again, and then proceed to cook. Just think of the foaming gas as the gas being released, and it really makes sense. Besides, it's fun as long as your pot is large so you don't have to clean up foam from the counter. -- Hope,

Springfield, Illinois Hope, baking soda has a variety of uses. Thanks for adding another one to our arsenal! -- Heloise

EASY REMEMBERING OF

Dear Heloise: I use the month of my birthday to have all yearly medical tests performed. As a result, I can quickly answer any questions from medical teams about "when was your last (eye, dental, mammogram, etc.)?" It doesn't matter what your age is; this works for everyone! And people are surprised that you are informed about your health. -- Debbie G., via email

BIRD FEEDER SAFETY

Dear Heloise: In our paper, The Press-Enterprise in Riverside, California, I read an article Diana C. wrote about a scarlet tanager bird smashing into her window. We had the same problem, as a special quail broke its neck when hitting our window. About a year ago, our daughter bought us an acrylic bird feeder with suction cups, which we attached to the center of the window. Since then, the birds see the food and fly to it. No birds have hit the window since we put the feeder up. Love and read your column every day. Thanks! -- Sharon R., Beaumont, California

FAST FACTS

What to do with old, raw eggs that are no longer safe to eat:

- -- The Audubon Society says you can give birds chicken eggshells during the nesting season for some much-needed calcium.
- -- Crush the shells and then sprinkle them in your garden to add calcium to the soil and to deter slugs and snails.
- -- Planting roses? Crack open one egg per rose bush and mingle egg with the roots; cover up with dirt and water.
- -- Angry with COVID? Go out to the countryside and throw eggs against a tree. The birds eat the eggs, and you release the tension.

Dish up a classic comfort food this St. Patrick's Day

Everyone has "corned beef and cabbage" on the brain come St. Patrick's Day. But another flavorful dish might appeal to a greater number of people with Irish roots.

Shepherd's Pie is a savory dish made of minced lamb that originated in England but also made the jump to Ireland, where it became a popular comfort food. While Shepherd's Pie can be made with freshly cooked ground meat, it also is a fine way to use leftovers from a previous meal. Shepherd's Pie is commonly mistaken for Cottage Pie, which is very similar, yet tends to use beef as the meat of choice.

Many families have their own ancestral recipes for Shepherd's Pie, but for those looking to cook the dish for the first time, try "Shepherd's Pie," courtesy of Alton Brown, which appeared in Season 12 of his hit show "Good Eats."

Shepherd's Pie

Yield: 8 servings 11/2 pounds russet potatoes

2 tablespoons canola oil

1 cup chopped onion 2 carrots, peeled and finely diced

2 cloves garlic, minced 11/2 pounds ground lamb

13/4 teaspoons kosher salt

3/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

1/4 cup half-and-half

2 teaspoons tomato paste 2 teaspoons chopped fresh rose-

1 teaspoon chopped fresh thyme 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Shepherd's Pie

4 tablespoons unsalted butter 1 large egg yolk 1/2 cup corn kernels, fresh or

1/2 cup English peas, fresh or frozen 1. Heat oven to 400 F.

2. Peel the potatoes and cut them into 1/2-inch dice. Put them in a medium saucepan and cover with cold water. Set said pan over high heat, cover and bring to a boil. Uncover, drop the heat to maintain a simmer, and cook until tender, 10 to 15 minutes. 3. Heat the oil in an 11-inch saute pan over medium-high heat until shimmering. Add the onion and carrots and saute just until they begin to take on color, 3 to 4 minutes. Add the garlic and stir to combine. Add the meat, salt and pepper, and cook until browned and cooked through, approximately 3 minutes.

4. Sprinkle the meat with the flour, toss to coat, and continue to cook for another minute. Add the tomato paste, broth, Worcestershire sauce, rosemary, and thyme and stir to combine. Bring to a boil, then decrease the heat to low, cover, and simmer slowly until the sauce is thickened slightly, 10 to 12 minutes.

5. Meanwhile, combine the halfand-half and butter in a microwavesafe container and nuke until warmed through, about 35 seconds.

6. Drain the potatoes and return them to the saucepan. Mash the potatoes (a masher is an excellent tool for this, though a hand mixer will do), then add the hot half-and-half mixture, as well as the salt and pepper. Mash to smoothness, then stir in the

7. Add the corn and peas to the meat mixture and spread evenly in a 7-by-11-inch glass baking dish. Top with the mashed potatoes, starting around the edges to create a seal to prevent the mixture from bubbling over, and smooth the top with a rubber spatula. Place on a half sheet pan lined with parchment paper on the middle rack of the oven and bake for 25 minutes, or just until the potatoes begin to brown. Remove to a cooking rack and let rest for at least 15 minutes before serving.

Andrea and Dennis Lovvorn: 'Called' to Christian ministry

By DAWN HANKINS dhankins@t-g.com

When it comes to "financial planning," Dennis and Andrea Lovvorn have a lot of years of experience to share. Still, they have no immediate plans to retire from ownership of New Covenant Christian Bookstore and perhaps, never will.

While pastors have "their calling," the Lovvorns says their Christian resource center is theirs.

Andrea says there's one important thing she wants her grandchildren to learn in this life: the love of Jesus. Just a walk around the Christian bookstore is enough to secure anyone's faith. There are books, candles, ornaments, baby items, etc., which could easily prepare someone for the difficult or joyous times.

There's even engraving that can be done in the store for gifts such as recipe boards. There's a baby and infant section as well as a children's shop.

It's all there. Some customers, they say, even just come to the store for a breather. There's a gallery of Thomas Kinkade's light art and other masterpieces just for any such occasion.

Andrea wipes away tears, because her Christian faith is very close to her heart, as well as Dennis'. The Shelbyville couple note their business/"calling" is just a part of who they are, both in this community and as a married couple. Their two daughters, who are educators by trade, and their husbands, have expressed a love of keeping the store open in the future, Andrea The Shelbyville couple note that's a large part of what their business has been about all these years, preparing for the financial future of their children. Still, deep down, it's all really about sharing the "love of Jesus" with this community.

And while some people tell them, "They're the best kept secret in Bedford County," that's not their intention. COVID actually increased their mailing lists, they add.

The early days

Their spacious store was once the old Dial's Supermarket were Dennis worked as butcher for several years. He left after they married in 1988.

They opened their first Christian bookstore in 1994; their oldest, now married and Hannah Fanning, was then 3, and their baby, now married, Rebekah Joyce, was then 3 months. Each now has a daughter of their own.

It took Dennis and Andrea about 6 years from the time they started discussing together to actually open the doors to New Covenant Christian Bookstore. Dennis admits that he had always said he'd someday open a grocery store in the Dial's building.

"I think it was a calling, honestly," he explains further. "I remember the day on the little steps . . . that's when it really got stuck in my brain."

They remember they were put together on a triple blind date. They jokingly say they were "late bloomers."

Dennis was reared on Smith Street and lived there until his teens and then the family moved out to Nashville Dirt Road. He's lived within a 5-mile radius to town. Andrea is also a Central High School graduate, having grown up as well here.

They operated their bookstore on the historic public square for 3 years; they moved to Madison for 3 more years and finally to North Main in 2000. They're about to celebrate their 28th anniversary in Christian retail; they credit business people like Tommy Anderton, now CEO of Trader's Bank, for having confidence in them and their business throughout the years.

Marriage and business and family, well, it's not for the faint of heart, they admit. But they've examined their spiritual gifts and talents over the years and put them to good use.

The family that prays together . . .

After church at Fair Haven on Sundays, the family, Andrea notes, all gather at their house for lunch. They also spend the evening together. "We eat together all day on Sundays." It's their family time for loving on one another "Nana" and "Papa" (Andrea and Dennis) note.

Dennis says their customers over the years have become a part of their family as well. Andrea says she's also a "big proponent" of 'shop local.'

"Not just because we're here, but I just feel that everyone should support their own communities."

Dennis says from Broadman offering envelopes to chocolates; they have it all.

He's all for shopping at home, even though businesses like theirs are becoming "dinosaurs," that is, non existent. "I don't think people understand . . . convenience of sitting in their pajamas and ordering [online]; they're paying taxes in other places, instead of supporting our local taxes. And if they don't get sales tax from businesses, then they'll [government] goes up on

Dennis and Andrea Lovvorn, center, spend Sundays at Fair Haven Church and with their family: Hannah Fanning and husband, Heath; left, Rebekah Joyce and husband, Hunter and their two "amazing" granddaughters, Sophie Fanning, 11 months now and Maddie Joyce, 5 months, now. They are proud the family has expressed continuing the bookstore everybody's personal home taxes.'

What's their advice for young persons or couples contemplating opening their own business? That would be not to venture into self-employment thinking you'll get "rich."

She added, "Our biggest concern is that this wouldn't carry on and it would close. We do believe it's needed in this community, whether it's us doing it or our kids and our family, I would hate to see it

The family legacy

Dennis says he enjoyed the grocery business, but believes, given their strong, family faith, they wouldn't have enjoyed doing anything else but a flash, the two put their Bible engraving order—a part of their everyday life from sunup, to sundown. The local couple note it's Andrea says daughter Hannah is a teacher now and husband, Heath, is assistant principal of Liberty. Rebekah is a new mom, so she took some time off from teaching; her husband, Hunter, actually worked for the store in his younger days and is now employed elsewhere.

"Eventually, we feel like, all of our kids will to carry it on," shared Andrea.

First steps to teaching

BC Schools job fair

By ZOË HAGGARD zhaggard@t-g.com

Bedford County Schools will be hosting a teacher job fair at the Harris Middle School gym on March 5 from 9 to 11 a.m. This isn't BCS's first job fair, but human resource director Neil Watson is hoping to add another component to recruiting teachers

To combat the teacher shortage seen in Bedford and other counties, Watson looks to introduce "job embedded programs" as well as iteachTENNESSEE to provide clear and effective routes for getting professionals certified

Through this, Watson said they hope to target those who don't know where to begin with starting to teach.

"What I tell folks, like graduates and anyone who may be interested in teaching...is don't let people take you out of what your heart is driving you to do. If your heart is working with children and compassion for helping the next generation, then don't let people or society drive you from that...So, go for it," said Watson.

Since assuming his role as HR director, after being Harris Middle's principal for five years, Watson said he has concentrated on school board policy changes, which has involved a lot of research and discussion to get "everyone on the same page."

Within his research, he has focused primarily on communication and education for Bedford schools' employees.

"We want to bring them as much information as possible from the HR department," Watson said. For example, last January, Watson said they did virtual sessions that explained retirement plan detail, 401ks and insurance opportunities for school employees.

The other side of Watson's goals is trying to find teachers, Watson said.

In the county's 15 schools, there are over 8,600 students enrolled in Bedford. "I think that is a unique thing about Bedford County. We have that variety of settings. We have rural, and we have more city type settings," Watson said. Out of the 1,200 employees, there are about 600 certiaccording to Watson. But as the county grows, the need for teachers in the classroom increases. There is especially a shortage in math, science, and fied teachers across the system, special education, Watson said. At a university like Middle Tennessee State, Watson said graduating classes have decreased in size over the years. Out of a class of 60, two students may be going into math education, while there's a heavy focus in elementary education.

Neil Watson

many reasons for the national teacher shortage, including COVID protocols, low teacher pay, and student disciplinary issues. "I don't believe there is one reason," he said.

Job-embedded programs

But with the job fair coming up, Watson is hoping to introduce different ways in which retired teachers and professionals looking for a career change can get into a teaching position as a certified teacher.

Watson himself changed careers. From working with businesses and technology, he went back to MTSU then taught at Thomas School when it first became a magnet school.

"This group of folks may be Watson agreed that there are like me 13 years ago, who are saying, 'I love working with children and I enjoy the aspect of teaching, but how do I get there?" Watson

The job embedded program wasn't around then, Watson said. According to the state of Tennessee website, job-embedded programs "allow an individual to serve as a teacher of record in a Tennessee classroom while completing required educator preparation classes."

Most universities now offer job-embedded programs. Those with a bachelor's degree who want to get into education can be hired by a district once they're enrolled at the university. Over the course of around three years, according to Watson, enrollees can earn their certification while teaching base salary and benefits included. For Bedford, at year zero, a brand-new teacher can make $40,500. With a master's, that goes to $43,800, according to Watson.

The iteachTENNESSEE

The iteachTENNESSEE is also a job-embedded program. It takes only about one year to complete, and it's very cost-friendly (around $3,200), according to Watson. However, the main difference is this earns the endorsement and licensure part, not a degree.

This option, according to Watson, works well for long-time professionals who may only want to teach for a few more years, versus someone who may want to earn a master's degree at a university while teaching through the job-embedded program.

"That's the message I feel like we need to get out there. That we can find good folks who'll make great teachers and want a career change. So, here's the path and here are the options," Watson

Retired teachers

Other areas across the state are also looking for ways to get more teachers into classrooms. A bill was introduced by State Senator Ken Yager in which retired members of the Tennessee Consolidated Retirement System (TCRS) could be reemployed as a K-12 teacher, K-12 substitute teacher, or as a K-12 bus driver without the loss or suspension of the retired member's TCRS benefits.

Watson said there are three options for retired teachers now. One is they can work 120 days in a school year. Another is retired teachers can work through a school year but at a limited pay. The third, and relatively new option, allows them to basically "freeze" their retirement and work again without any negative impact. Watson said they have several retired teachers doing these options. "Definitely if a retired teacher wants to talk to us about any of those options, we're more than happy to get them back into a classroom," he said.

Silent heart attacks: What to know n observance of American Heart Month, which comes to an end next week, the T-G provides for the community a column from Vanderbilt Health, written by Dr. Ifeoluwa O. Okusanya, MBBS-a cardiology specialist with Vanderbilt Integrated Cardiology who also practices at Vanderbilt Bedford Hospital. Let us know how you like this column by emailing tgnews@t-g.com. We plan to print more such health topics from Vanderbilt in the future, if we get positive response. We thank FINN Partners for their assistance with this column.

February is American Heart Month—a time for each of us to focus on our cardiovascular health. This is important nationwide as cardiovascular disease is the leading cause of death in the U.S., taking a life every 36 seconds, but it carries extra significance here at home.

Tennessee's rates of cardiovascular disease deaths are higher than the national average, and Bedford County's average is even higher than Tennessee's. So, let's raise awareness in our community of every sign of an unhealthy heart—especially the hidden ones.

Up to 50% of all heart attacks go unnoticed, according to some studies. So-called "silent heart attacks" can have no symptoms whatsoever, extremely mild symptoms, or symptoms that most people do not associate with heart attacks. These heart attacks go unnoticed for days, weeks and months. They are often discovered during routine screenings or when a physician is trying to diagnose the source of symptoms. While a heart attack with no or mild symptoms may seem like it would be less severe than the heart attacks portrayed on TV, they are just as dangerous for your long-term health and it is important they are identified.

Non-traditional symptoms of silent heart attacks can include heartburn, nausea, fatigue, abdominal pain, back pain and shortness of breath. In the days and weeks after silent heart attacks, people report becoming short of breath quickly, being tired or have feelings of agerelated fatigue—often chalking it up to "just getting older."

Women, diabetics and older adults tend to experience silent heart attacks more frequently, but everyone should be on the lookout. Recently, a local patient was found to have an abnormal heartbeat during a colonoscopy. An electrocardiogram (ECG) showed evidence of a heart attack and a weak heart. This came as a surprise to the patient, who was in great physical health and never had any symptoms of a heart attack. The patient went on to have heart bypass surgery and is now doing well.

Were it not for the routine checkup, things could have gone very differently.

These checkups are important because once an individual has experienced a silent heart attack, they are at high risk of another heart attack, heart failure, heart rhythm disorders and sudden cardiac death. These patients need to be treated aggressively and monitored routinely—the same as any heart attack.

Whether you've never had a heart attack or are a survivor, prevention is key. With the help of your healthcare provider: quit smoking, get blood pressure, cholesterol and diabetes under control, exercise, and eat a hearthealthy diet.

This American Heart Month, take control of your health and help spread awareness to your friends and family about heart health and the risk of silent heart attacks. Together, we can make Bedford County a heart-healthy community.

Journey to faith, freedom

oday is the last Saturday in February 2022, and in honor of Black History Month I have been writing about some of the Unsung Black Heroes of the Christian Faith.

Today I want to honor a man of God by the name of David George.

David was an 18th century runaway slave who was raised in the southern British colonies.

He was born somewhere around 1740, a second-generation slave in the colony of Virginia.

About the age of 19, David was forced to watch as his mother was whipped by their slave-owner, and she was left to die. Shortly thereafter he ran away and headed south towards

For the next 10 years David lived on the run, hiding out in the wilderness areas of Georgia.

Eventually he was caught and then sold or traded several times until he finally ended up on a plantation in Silver Bluff, South Carolina.

In what he later recalled as "a miraculous and divinely ordained reunion," David's childhood friend from Virginia, George Liele, a freedman and Christian minister, passed through David's town on a preaching tour. Rev. Liele (whom I wrote about last week) shared Jesus' words with David from Matthew 11:28, " Come unto Me, all vou who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

As he listened to his friend, David admitted that he was "weary and heavy laden," and he prayed with Rev. Liele and received the rest given to him by Jesus Christ.

David later said that during that time he was troubled and tormented by the conviction of sin in his life. "I saw myself as a mass of sin," he said, "but at last, in prayer to God, I began to think that He would deliver me, but I didn't know how."

Then his friend showed up and introduced him to Jesus Christ.

It was somewhere between 1773 and 1775, that David George and his wife, and six other slaves at Silver Bluff were baptized and together they formed the first all-black Baptist church in North America.

David and his wife taught themselves to read, and David became the first official pastor of their church which had grown to 30 baptized members. About that time, the Revolutionary War was Putting on a Southern dinner party

David Hazelwood and David G. Smith will preview their new cookbook, "Cooking Southern: Recipes and their History" on Saturday at the Shelbyville-Bedford County Public Library, beginning at 10 a.m. The cookbooks will be available for purchase for $20.

Normandy author releases new cookbook

By DAWN HANKINS dhankins@t-g.com

Two long-time Tennessee restauranteurs, David Hazelwood of Normandy and David G. Smith of Nashville, have retired from days of serving pounds of fried chicken, salads and cakes in their respective restaurants. But as of this year, one might venture to say maybe they are certainly still involved in food. The two Davids have just published a new cookbook together, "Cooking Southern: Recipes and their History.'

With all the historical research they've included, it turned out to be almost as time consuming as a restaurant. But in the end, both will attest that culminating the thousands of featured recipes was a life experience.

Smith stated in the new book, "David H and I are cooks first and foremost and restauranteurs second, so we totally appreciate the benefit of a good recipe."

The Nashville cook realized early on from his family that "carelessness does not produce a good dish." So, they were careful to research and properly assign all measure ments to their recipes.

It obviously paid off for the Smith family, because their Satsuma restaurant stayed open in Nashville from 1917 until 2004 and was much loved by the lunch community.

How did the name Satsuma come about? It's a type of mandarin orange. But Smith's family originally named the restaurant from their Mississippi heritage.

The co-authors set out to highly flavor the book with recipes from many generations in the South. They're not looking to get rich off each $20 cookbook, which is a really good bargain, based on retail cost for such a large historical volume.

There's something more to it all; they value one another's interest in food, life and family love. After all, Smith introduced Hazelwood to his wife, Claudia.

Now Hazelwood prepares for his book signing at the Shelbyville-Bedford County Public Library on Saturday, Feb. 26, from 10 to 11 a.m. He and Claudia, would go on to operate the historic Cortner Mill Restaurant on the Duck River for Though he's from Kentucky, Hazelwood said Bedford County will always be their home. So local residents will get a first-hand chance to gaze into or purchase, "Cooking

The friendship of Hazelwood and Smith is also intertwined into each written page. "It was and is our

Of course there are a lot of fried chicken recipes in David Hazelwood and David G. Smith's new Southern flavored cookbook essence as a people . . . the Southern personae."

Hazelwood often ate lunch at Smith's establishment, Satsuma Tea Room, which has a long-standing history dating back to 1918 on Union Street in Nashville. Their eventual years of friendship enveloped and surrounded by what else but food.

The Normandy restauranteur said recently that it was therefore just in the soup for them to eventually to co-author such a cookbook. "This is actually my third cookbook," says Hazelwood.

The first was in honor of his beloved Cortner Mill, which he says was a natural. The next was "Miss Lizzie's Heirlooms," which is currently out of print. Hazelwood has also authored a book about animals and people, "Animals Who Own Us".

As for "Miss Lizzie's Heirlooms," Hazelwood has another interesting story about how it came to fruition. He discovered a box of old books which had been passed down to him by his grandparents from Kentucky.

"I let them sit around forever. When I finally got into them, I found heard someone say the other day as we get older our major hobby becomes visits to doctors.

Well, I have a lot of hobbies. I don't need to add a medical one. But it looks like I have, at least so far this year.

Last week I turned 65 in the hospital. Celebrating birthdays have never been an important part of my life. But don't get me wrong. I am more than happy to reach this landmark of age though it happened much too quickly.

Like most people I want to live as long as possible. The word I want to emphasize from that previous sentence is "live." Living is great. But struggling to get through these latter years of life sitting in the house and watching TV while the world passes by, and your mind slowly shuts down are not elements of "living" for me.

There is still so much I want to do and time is not on my side.

I have always loved traveling. I was blessed at a young age to travel extensively both in and out of the country. But I still have places I want to go for the first time and cities and historical sites I want to visit again.

Writing has been a job, a hobby and therapy for me. I want to be able to continue writing with a couple of books in the planning stages. Just existing isn't enough for me. I know there are many who do struggle physically and or mentally every day. I understand there are many who have lived most of their lives with physical challenges. I empathize and have sympathy for God has been incredibly good to me in terms of my health issues through the years. There is one more challenge ahead next month and I pray he will continue to watch over me.

According to the Merriam Webster dictionary, the "Golden Years" refer to living to an advanced age. Notice that word "living." Supposedly the term was first used in the media in 1945, but I don't know how you can prove that without a doubt.

Right now, in the spirit of the just completed Winter Olympics in China, it feels more like the "Bronze Years." But I have faith I will be able to get back to the top of the awards platform.

Last week I heard a duo singing a song with the theme of "life is now." Of course, we have our past, and I know I spend utler's Creek FCE (Family and Community Education Club) met Monday, Feb. 7, at 4:30 p.m. at the Farm Bureau for a work night to prepare and serve the meal for the Farm Bureau monthly meeting.

FCE Club Meeting Report

Vicky Faulkner, president, called the meeting to order with the household hint for February, "American Heart Month."

The call to order "The Knot Prayer" and "Sunshine Report" were read by Brenda Gregory. The devotion was by Amy Susie Henderson was secretary for Cindi Lindsey and did the roll call, which was answered by 11 members. The minutes from the January meeting were read for Cindi and approved. Debbie Crosslin gave the treasurer's report, which included a balance of $63.85.

Extension agent Whitney Danhof presented the educational lesson, "Macrame Hearts." The lesson included instructions, materials and handouts for all to make a Macrame key chain.

New business: There will be a county-wide meeting on March 14 at 4 p.m. at the extension office. There will be a club meeting at 6 p.m. following that meeting-one to plan community service for the year.

Reminders for the upcoming events include: Family Community Leadership applications, which are due March 1. The FCL training will be held in April in Lebanon.

The county-wide meeting is 4 p.m., Monday, March 14, at the extension office.

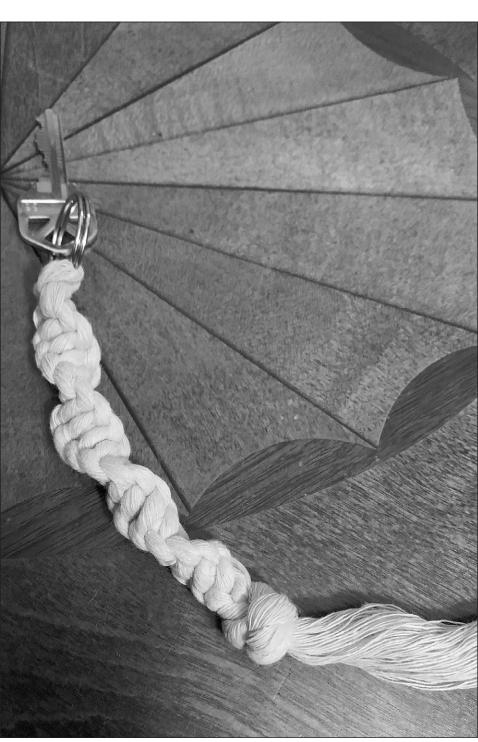

Club demonstrations includ-

Was your grandfather a character?

alentine's Day and other time-sensitive topics delayed my writing about this, but a few weeks ago marked the 50th anniversary of the death of my grandfather, Carl Spencer Tyree.

I'm juggling a lot of plates, but very few days go by that I don't think of 'Paw.'

"Ornery," "opinionated," "contrary" and "irascible" are some of the words people have used to describe him over the years; but I choose to take a more nuanced look at the forces that shaped him.

Both of his grandfathers fought for the Confederacy during the Civil War. His first wife died soon after delivering their first child. He and my grandmother brought up five children during the Great Depression. In his later years, he struggled with arthritis, emphysema, Granny Tyree's ovarian cancer and the social upheaval of the Sixties.

Despite all this, he did display softer moments. He was the only adult with enough patience to teach me to tie my shoestrings. Recently, my older cousin Hal reminisced about Paw entrusting him to take his beloved 1946 Chevy kerous side... Paw eked out a living as both a farmer and a carpenter, and the latter trade is tied to one of my favorite anecdotes about him.

4-door out on the highway. But back to the cantan-

Paw and his carpentry partner were doing an inside project on a house that – by pure coincidence, many years later – would be purchased by my mother's sister and be where my wife and I spent the first 21 months of our married life. Paw and the other fellow reached an impasse on how to fix one specific problem. Paw, true to form, dug in his heels and grew hotter and hotter under the collar. His partner tried to cool things off, imploring, "Calm down, Carl. This isn't worth fighting over.

Before you say something we'll both regret, I'm going to go outside for a few minutes and ask the Lord how to resolve this."

A few minutes later, a refreshed partner reentered the room, ready for some reconciliation, compromise and camaraderie.

Paw had already fixed the problem according to his original plan and moved on to the next phase.

Pausing a moment, he nonchalantly explained to his apoplectic partner, "Oh, while you were out there talking to the Lord, the devil came by and told me

I had it right all along." As a Bible class teacher, I try not to take such a flippant "the devil made me do it" stance; but the perseverance and obstinacy that runs in my DNA has served me well in general.

Without Grandpa Carl's stubborn streak, I could not have endured the first few months of my day job (I've been there 23 years now!), could not have snagged a side gig writing a nationally syndicated column, could not have gotten a second date with my wife and could not have overcome infertility problems so Carl Spencer Tyree's great-grandson could enter the world 32 years after his death. What good and bad do you think you will traits did you inherit from your grandparents? What leave with your grandchildren? Let me know.

In the meantime, I'll plug along with taking notes for my long-promised autobiography, "The Apple Doesn't Fall Far from The Tyree."

Maybe I'll even think of a better subtitle than "Pick Up All the Apples Before The &^%$# Yankees Get Them."

•Danny Tyree welcomes email responses at tyreetyrades@aol.com and visits to his Facebook fan page "Tyree's Tyrades."

Junior's House: The legacy lives on Local open house held

Junior's House Child Advocacy Center recently held an open house at its new facility in Shelbyville. Bedford County Mayor Chad Graham and the Bedford County Commissioners worked very hard to help the CAC find a home at 200 Dover St. in the Bedford Business Complex, organizers said.

The new suite houses/ counseling rooms, forensic interviewing rooms, a kitchenette, and much needed confidentiality for the children they serve. Junior's House continues to need the support of the community through volunteering to help fundraise, donations, and supplies for the local office.

Junior's House Inc. was established in 2003 in honor of a 6-year-old boy named Junior who tragically died as the result of child abuse. The first facility was opened in the Lincoln County community to ensure that child abuse victims receive the services and support they need.

Since that time, Junior's House has continued to expand, and thousands of child abuse victims have been served. Junior's House offers services in Bedford, Lincoln, Marshall, and Moore Counties. Representative Pat Marsh said this about Junior's House, "Junior's House is a great place to find all kind of resources about what we can do to help prevent child abuse. We are so lucky to have such an organization in our area that is doing so much great work!"

If interested in volunteering or you would like to donate snacks, drinks, and new stuffed animals for the children, please call the CAC at 931-492-5124.

Over the next six months, the church attendance grew and multiplied, and even white folks joined David's church in Shelburne, Nova Scotia.

But, when David baptized a white couple, the outdoor baptismal service caused some racial turmoil.

People in that area were not used to baptism by immersion, and on top of that to have a black man baptize white people was considered outrageous.

So, persecution increased against David's congregation, and his home

New Brunswick Sometimes David would travel by boat, but he usually traveled on foot and it was said that at one time David walked 80 miles to baptize less than a dozen new believers.

On one of the times that his crew was traveling by boat on a missionary journey, their boat was blown off course in a winter storm and David's legs were seriously frostbitten up to his knees.

It took David several months to recover and be able to walk again, so some of his men made a wooden sled so he could be pulled to church and continue to preach.

Racial persecution continued to grow against all the free black people in that part of Canada.

Because of the racial trouble, David and his wife and some of their church members partnered with Lt. John Clarkson of the Sierra Leone Company. Clarkson was a part of this British association of abolitionists, philanthropists, and businessmen, who recruited free black people to return to West Africa and resettle.

Vegetarian Stroganoff

- 1 large onion, chopped coarse
 - 4 Tbsp. butter
 - 2 cloves garlic, minced
 - 2 Tbsp. dry vermouth
- 5 C. fresh mushrooms, sliced
- 1 zucchini, parboiled and sliced
 - 12 oz. sour cream

5 Tbsp. flour

2 C. water

1 cube vegetable bouillon

1/2 tsp. black pepper In a large skillet, sauté the onion, butter and garlic until the onion is tender. Add the vermouth, zucchini and mushrooms and cook until zucchini is tender. Remove from skillet. Add remaining ingredients to skillet and cook until thick and bubbly, about 5 minutes. Add vegetable mixture to sauce and simmer 5 minutes. Serve over rice or egg noodles.

- 6 cucumbers, medium
- 1 red onion
- 2 tsp. salt
- 4 Tbsp. sugar 1/2 C. white vinegar

onions. Separate onion slices into rings and toss with the cucumbers. Add remaining ingredients in saucepan and cook over medium heat until sugar dissolves. Pour over cucumbers and onions. Cover and refrigerate 4 hours before serving. Will hold a week in the refrigerator.

Note: Instead of red onion, use yellow onions. Just a different flavor, which is not as strong, could work well in the spring and summer onion growing season. Vidalia onions are amazing in this dish.

With over 600 pages to cherish, the "Cooking Southern: Recipes and their history" cookbook will be in families, no doubt, for many generations to come. It took 5 years for the authors to read through historical recipes--many stained with gravy and flour. But David and Claudia Hazelwood owned Cortner Mill Restaurant for over 20 years. Today, they work on different projects; he of course has authored several books, in addition to the latest cookbook. So, now, he's in demand for his culinary publication, not just his famous Prime Rib.

David Hazelwood and David G. Smith will preview their new cookbook, "Cooking Southern: Recipes and their History" on Saturday at the Shelbyville-Bedford County Public Library, beginning at 10 a.m. The cookbooks will be available for purchase for $20.

Call it fate or just a blessing at their point late in life. But one thing's for certain, Smith and Hazelwood continued to find likeness in their upbringings, though reared hundreds of miles apart.

"He and I talked about . . . we could boil down our old cookbooks, with all the gravies and sauces spilled on pages [and] who knows what that might taste like. It might taste wonderful."

Hazelwood mentions how the latest Southern cookbook came about. It was about the same time he was reading over his granny's recipes that friend Smith found a box of historic recipes from Satsuma restaurant.

They were astounded, Hazelwood said, of all the recipes their families had written on note cards and on the back of envelopes. They believed they'd found a treasure trove of Southern recipes-many which they proudly assembled for publication for the very first That's where the core of the new cookbook started—from a lifetime of love of family, friends and restaurant guests. The rest is history. The endeavor took them

5 years. Hazelwood admits that such a publishing venture is not for the faint of heart. He talks about the history behind okra and other types of soul food, which hits at the core of the story behind the book.

He doesn't try to cover up history, but honor it by printing recipes—tried and true and beloved by many generations. Some recipes had a pinch here and a pinch there. Now that was challenging to put into measurements, but, never altered. For the two Davids who spent their lives in restaurants, "Cooking Southern" is even much more than a collection of historic recipes from previous centuries. The nearly 600 pages probe deeper into the development, they say, of the Southern lifestyle—all of which we're a part.

There are also several local cooks included in this huge book—a few who've passed on. They include: Ethel Leverette, Isabel Woodlee, who was the proprietor of the Saddle Restaurant in Bedford County for many years, Claudia Hazelwood,

Barbara Troxler, Mary Hart, Jim Long, Bettie Bean and Jane Cortner.

For those who've followed the Hazellewoods and dined with them for many years, they have 52 recipes inside the book which can be ordered at www.amazon. com/Cooking-Southern-Recipes-Their-History/ dp/1734830522 or by picking one of up Saturday at the library.

So, here's our Southern party—one filled with a lot of hard work, passion and of course flavor! We appreciate Smith and Hazelwood allowing us to reprint some of the recipes, like Ann Cox's yummy Chocolate Pistachio Cake and the old Southern favorite, Short'nin Bread.

t's hard to believe but February is about over. If you recall, there are just 28 days. Yes, I still do the 30 days has September, April, June and November

Today, I want to shout out to my alma mater Middle Tennessee State University in Murfreesboro for doing an outstanding job, honoring Black History month.

We were fortunate at the T-G to be able to cover the Unity luncheon this year. Zoe Haggard, T-G staff writer, was quite impressed with the turnout. (Hint: She's True Blue too!)

While February is always set aside for honoring black history and those who've paved the way through freedom, democracy and education, we should remember all the folks who've sacrificed so much throughout the year.

I think of one of my favorite persons of history, Soujourner Truth. A former slave, Sojourner Truth became an outspoken advocate for abolition, temperance, and civil and women's rights in the 19th century. Her Civil War work earned her an invitation to meet President Abraham Lincoln in 1864.

Truth was born Isabella Bomfree, a slave in Dutchspeaking Ulster County, New York in 1797. She was bought and sold four times, and subjected to harsh physical labor and violent punishments. In her teens, she was united with another slave with whom she had five children, beginning in 1815. In 1827—a year before New York's law freeing slaves was to take effect—Truth ran away with her infant Sophia to a nearby abolitionist family, the Van Wageners. The family bought her freedom for $20 and helped Truth successfully sue for the return of her five-year-oldson Peter, who was illegally sold into slavery in Alabama.

Truth moved to New York City in 1828, where she worked for a local minister. As an itinerant preacher, Truth met abolitionists like Frederick Douglass.

Another who comes to mind, when we talk about black history, is William Wilberforce. I don't think we learn a lot about what this Englishman did to abolish the slave trade in England. I highly recommend the 2006 movie, "Amazing Grace."

In later years,

Wilberforce supported the campaign for the complete abolition of slavery, and continued his involvement after 1826, when he resigned from Parliament because of his failing health. That campaign led to the Slavery Abolition Act of 1833—one which abolished slavery in most of the British Empire. Wilberforce died just three days after hearing that the passage of the Act through Parliament was assured.

There are many more to honor. It's been a great Black History Month.

Preds retire Rinne's No. 35

By TERESA M. WALKER AP Sports Writer

NASHVILLE — Pekka Rinne can't wait to bring his 1-year-old son Paulus back to Nashville in a few years and share stories from his playing days.

The highlight? Pointing to his No. 35 hanging in the rafters.

"It gives me goosebumps to even think about it," Rinne said Thursday

The goaltender who led the Nashville Predators to their lone Stanley Cup Final in 2017 added another first to his list of accomplishments. He became the first player to have his jersey retired by the organization in a nearly hourlong ceremony before Thursday against night's game

"This memory will stay with me the rest of my life," Rinne said.

The Predators also announced Rinne will be honored with a bronze statue outside Bridgestone Arena that will be unveiled during the 2022-23 season.

Rinne emerged from the oversized Predators' mascot head that the team skates through when it enters the ice as fans chanted, "Pekka! Pekka!" He walked past the Clarence S. Campbell Bowl, the franchise's lone Presidents' Trophy and his Vezina and King Clancy trophies to a stage on one Guests included former teammates Kimmo Timonen and Shea Weber along with current captain Roman Josi, Rinne's family and general manager David Poile. Rinne thanked the only GM he ever had and noted he had only three coaches with the Predators.

Poile said Rinne made everything he touched better, on and off the ice.

"He was someone you could look up to," Poile said. "With No. 35 hanging in the rafters above us, he will continue to do that forever."

Minutes after the ceremony ended, the current Predators came out wearing sweaters with Rinne's name and number on the back for warmups. Not bad for someone whose biggest hockey hopes had been to play for Finland's national team. Rinne was selected by Nashville with pick No. 258 in the 2004 NHL draft and everything changed.

"After that, I started setting goals and dreams and started dreaming about the NHL way more," Rinne said earlier Thursday. "Then good things started happening. Early on, I wasn't the most talented player growing up. After that, it's like a positive cycle start and a lot of good things happen."

Rinne announced his retirement in July after capping his career May 10 in Nashville's regular-season finale, a 5-0 win over Carolina. He started that game, tying Tom Barrasso for No. 19 in NHL history with his 369th victory. It was his 60th career shutout. Center Ryan Johansen pushed Rinne out for a lap around the ice after that final shutout. Johansen said Thursday he's a fan of "I think he might be one of the most respected guys to ever play this game that will have his jersey retired," Johansen said.

MLB days from deadline to cancel games

By RONALD BLUM AP Baseball Writer

JUPITER, Fla. (AP) — Another negotiating session produced only minor movement and no proposals on big-money issues, leaving Major League Baseball four days from management's Monday night deadline for a deal to salvage opening day and a 162-game sea-

Both sides appeared Thursday to be in a you-make-the-nextmove staredown on central economic issues of the lockout, such as luxury tax thresholds and rates, the minimum salary and the proposed bonus pool for pre-arbitration players.

Given those stances, it appeared the earliest movement on the main issues would be in the hours before management says it will carry through on its threat to start canceling games and costing players salary.

The union came away with the impression that management said it was out of ideas until players offer new proposals on key issues. Clubs say the union hasn't altered its luxury tax plan since November, and players say they are waiting because management told the union luxury tax usually is among the last items addressed.

Players also want to reduce revenue sharing and expand salary arbitration eligibility, and teams say they will not agree to either proposal. Both sides agreed to meet again Friday, the fifth straight day of bargaining and the 11th on core economics since the lockout started Dec. 2.

Baseball's ninth work stoppage, its first since 1995, enters its 86th day Friday.

Players have not accepted Monday as a deadline and have suggested any missed games could be made up as part of doubleheaders, a method MLB said it will not agree to.

The union told MLB if games are missed and salaries are lost, clubs should not expect players to agree to management's proposals to expand the postseason and to allow advertisements on uniforms and helmets.

Baseball commissioner Rob Manfred has not publicly commented on the talks since Feb. 10 and union head Tony Clark since Dec. 2.

Players modified part of their formula for additional service time for top young players, covering the top 15 in each league by WAR among starting pitchers, relief pitchers and outfielders, down from 20, and the top five at other positions, down from seven.

The union says such a mechanism is needed to prevent teams from holding players in the minor leagues to delay free agency, such as the union claimed in an unsuccessful grievance against the Chicago Cubs over Kris Bryant that was decided by an arbitrator two years ago. Teams say they won't agree to such a proposal.

The union also tweaked its complex plan for a lottery to decide the top seven amateur draft picks to prevent a team that pays revenue sharing from picking among the top nine if it finished among the lowest eight winning percentages in each of the two previous seasons or the bottom 12 in each of the previous three. That provision would start in 2024.

A club paying revenue sharing that finishes among the bottom 12 in winning percentage in each of the previous four or more seasons would have its pick dropped to 18th along with any team receiving revenue sharing that finishes among the bottom eight in the three previous seasons. The draft lottery would assign a 15% chance of picking first to each of the three teams with the lowest winning percentages, 12.5% for fourth-lowest, decreasing to 10% for fifth-lowest, 8% for sixth-lowest, 6.5% for seventh-lowest and 5% for eighth-lowest. New York Yankees owner Hal Steinbrenner, Houston pitcher Lance McCullers Jr. and Miami infielder Miguel Rojas joined negotiations at Roger Dean Stadium, the idle spring training home of the Marlins and the St. Louis Cardinals.

Players who remained from earlier in the week included the Yankees' Gerrit Cole and Jameson Taillon, the Mets' Max Scherzer and Francisco Lindor, the Cardinals' Paul Goldschmidt, the Chicago Cubs' Ian Happ, the Brewers' Brent Suter and free agent Andrew Miller.

Aikman likely to join 'Monday Night Football' booth

By JOE REEDY AP Sports Writer

NFL free agency doesn't begin for a few more weeks, however business is about to pick up when it comes to shuffling among the network broadcast teams with perhaps the biggest surprise of them all. Troy Aikman is expected to become the lead analyst on ESPN's "Monday Night Football" after 22 years with Fox. The New York Post reported that Aikman will sign a fiveyear deal that would rival the $17.5 million per year Tony Romo is making at CBS.

ESPN and Fox had no comment on Aikman's future. Aikman has been with Joe Buck on Fox's top crew since 2002, but there have been rumblings the past couple of months that the Hall of Fame quarterback had been looking to move Many thought that Aikman would join Al Michaels at Amazon, which takes over "Thursday Night Football" next season. Instead, it is ESPN, which has its star quarterback after falling short with Romo and Peyton Manning in recent seasons. ESPN chairman Jimmy Pitaro had tried to get Manning for years to ioin the "Monday Night Football" booth since he retired after the 2015 season. Pitaro's patience paid off last year when the Manningcast with Peyton and Eli Manning debuted to rave reviews. The 10-game

"Monday Night Football

with Peyton and Eli" package runs through 2024.

Steve Levy, Brian Griese and Louis Riddick have done the main broadcast the past two seasons. Michaels could take another look at ESPN now that it has Aikman. Michaels was in line to be the play-by-play announcer when "Monday Night" package moved from ABC to ESPN in 2006. He was traded to NBC after he expressed interest in remaining with John Madden, producer Night Football."

Fred Gaudelli and director Drew Esocoff after they elected to go to "Sunday The MNF booth has had frequent changes since Mike Tirico left for NBC in 2016. Tirico was the play-by-play voice for 10 seasons (2006-15) and teamed with Jon Gruden

for the last seven. Sean McDonough took over for Tirico for 2016 and '17 and worked with Gruden. After Gruden left to take over as Raiders coach and McDonough sought to move back to college football, ESPN went with the three-man booth of Joe Tessitore, Jason Witten and Booger McFarland in 2018. Witten struggled as an analyst and decided to return to the playing field in 2019. Levy, Griese Riddick could also remain intact as a second "Monday Night" crew. ESPN/ABC will have 23 regular-season games when the league's new broadcast deal begins.

ABC will also have the 2027 Super Bowl, marking its return to televising the NFL's championship game for the first time since

Fox could bump Greg Olsen up to the top team or it could make a run at former New Orleans Saints coach Sean Payton. If Olsen was promoted, it would follow the same path as Aikman — one year on the No. 2 team before moving up. Whoever succeeds Aikman, it will be an important choice for Fox since it has the 2023 and 2025 Super Bowls. Buck's contract expires next year. Tom Brady would be an intriguing prospect for any network, but the recentterback has not expressed interest in moving to the booth. Los Angeles Rams

ly retired and seven-time

coach Sean McVay could also be a wild card for Fox or Amazon if he decided to retire.

Rinne said he's very proud of Nashville for finally hosting its first outdoor game. He sees this week as bringing great exposure to the franchise and city around the NHL. Nashville previously hosted the 2016 NHL All-Star Weekend.

"Going back seven, eight years, I wasn't thinking about playing an outdoor game or having things like this happening in Nashville," Rinne said.

Rinne is a big reason the franchise even remains in Nashville after signing a seven-year extension in 2011. The 2018 Vezina Trophy winner as the league's best goaltender, Rinne was 369-213-75 in his career. The native of Kempele, Finland, also has the most games played, victories and shutouts by a Finnish goalie in NHL

"It's pretty special, especially as a Finn," Predators goalie Juuse Saros said of the goalie he lived with when he first arrived in Nashville. "I kind of always had a feeling this night would come, and I wanted to be here for that. It's awe-

Hearing cancelled on equal pay for women's soccer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals canceled a March 7 hearing in Pasadena on the attempt by American female players to reinstate their equal pay case against the U.S. Soccer Federation following a settlement agreement contingent on a new labor contract.

In announcing the cancellation Thursday, the court revealed for the first time the three judges assigned to the panel hearing the case: Circuit Judges Kim McLane Wardlaw, an appoince of President Bill Cinton; Andrew D. Hurwitz, an appointee of President Barack Obama; and Chief U.S. District Judge Lee H. Rosenthal, who is based in Houston and is sitting by designation. The panel stayed proceedings pending finalization of the settlement. The panel said it is retaining jurisdiction, which means these judges would hear the case should the deal announced Tuesday fall through. Absent the deal, the identity of the judges would have been revealed to the parties next Monday.

Under the agreement, the USSF will pay the players $22 million, about one-third of what they had sought in damages. The USSF also agreed to establish a fund with $2 million to benefit the players in their post-soccer careers and charitable efforts aimed at growing the sport for women.

The USSF committed to providing an equal rate of pay for the women's and men's national teams including World Cup bonuses — subject to collective bargaining agreements with the unions that separately represent the women and

Sports world reacts to invasion

LONDON (AP) — The invasion of Ukraine drew punitive measures across the sporting world on Friday when Russia was stripped of the Champions League final, with UEFA replacing St. Petersburg with Paris as host, and Formula One dropping this season's Russian Grand Prix in Sochi.

International Olympic Committee also urged sports federations to move their events out of Russia or Belarus, which Moscow is using as a staging ground for its troops moving into Ukraine from the

A backlash against the embrace of Russian state-owned companies as sponsors in sports saw Manchester United drop Aeroflot's commercial deal, with the Premier League club citing "events in Ukraine" after the airline was banned in Britain as part of sanctions against President Vladimir Putin's regime. Although UEFA still has Gazprom as a Champions League sponsor, the final will no longer be staged at the St. Petersburg stadium named after the Russian state-owned energy firm. The climax to the European men's football season will still be held on May 28 but now at the 80,000-seat Stade de France in the Saint-Denis suburb of the French capital after the decision by UEFA's executive com-

It followed discussions led by UEFA President Aleksander Ceferin that involved the European Commission and French President Emmanuel Macron in recent days after concerns were raised about the status of Russia retaining such a prestigious event after its aggression toward another European country. UEFA thanked Macron for his "personal support and commitment to have European club football's most prestigious game moved to France at a time of unparalleled crisis." Alexander Dyukov, a Russian member of the UEFA executive committee, complained the decision was taken for "political reasons." Dyukov also opposed UEFA ordering Russian clubs and national teams to play at neutral venues until further notice a ruling also imposed on Ukrainian

The move comes as Russian bombs and troops pounded Ukraine during the invasion's first full day, and world leaders on Friday began to fine-tune a response meant to punish the Russian economy and its leaders, including Putin's inner circle.

The IOC had already condemned Russia for breaching the Olympic Truce, days after the end of the Beijing Winter Games and ahead of the Paralympics. Russia's name, flag and anthem are already barred from the March 4-13 Paralympics in Beijing over previous doping disputes. Its team is due to compete as RPC, short for Russian Paralympic Committee. Now the IOC is asking events not subject to the WADA doping sanctions to no longer display the Russian or Belarussian national flags or play

Motorsport has continued in Russia after not being bound by the WADA ruling, banning Russia hosting international sports events through December.

The F1 race wasn't due until September in the Black Sea resort of Sochi but the motorsport series leadership decided it would be "impossible" to stage the Grand Prix after talks with teams and the FIA governing body. American team Haas also dropped the sponsorship of Russian company Uralkali during preseason testing in Barcelona. Nikita Mazepin of Haas is the only Russian driver on the F1 grid this season.

"We are watching the developments in Ukraine with sadness and shock and hope for a swift and peaceful resolution to the present situation," F1 said in a statement. The French government will work with UEFA to help to rescue footballers and their families who "face dire human suffering, destruction and displacement," European football's governing body said in a statement. There is the unresolved matter of Russia still being due to host Poland in World Cup qualifying playoff semifinals in Moscow. Poland wants the game taken out of Russia, but FIFA has yet to decide.

UEFA was more decisive on the Champions League final hosting, which was welcomed by the British on the world stage to legitimize its unprovoked, premeditated and needless attack against a sovereign democratic state," said British Culture Secretary Nadine Dorries, who has the sports brief. This is the third consecutive year that UEFA has had to change its Champions League final location after two switches due to coronavirus issues. The Stade de France last hosted the Champions League final 16 years ago, when Barcelona beat Arsenal in the 2006 final. UEFA has two weeks before the next set of Champions League games to resolve the issue of Gazprom adverts flashing around stadium pitches. Reinforcing the company's close links to UEFA, Dyukov is a CEO of a Gazprom subsidiary as well as sitting on European football's top decision-making body.

Gazprom's logo has already been removed this week from the jerseys of German club Schalke but it remains a sponsor.

Away from soccer, the International Ski Federation announced that Russia will not host any more of its World Cup events this winter. The decision came after a farcical attempt to hold ski cross races on Friday in the Urals resort Sunny Valley one day after Russia started an invasion of

Only a handful of Russians started and dozens of racers from all other countries did not take part. FIS cited "the safety of all participants and to maintain the integrity of the World Cup" for calling off five scheduled events in the next month. Replacement venues are being sought.

Weekend: SEC semifinal preview

By PETE IACOBELLI AP Sports Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)

 A look at weekend action around the Southeastern Conference:

It could be a preview of the SEC Tournament semifinals when the top four teams in the conference square off in a pair of highprofile matchups Saturday. League leader No. 3 Auburn is at No. 17 Tennessee, and No. 6 Kentucky goes to No. 18 Arkansas. The four teams, each with doubledigit SEC wins, are a near lock for the top four seeds at the SEC tournament in Tampa Bay, Florida, in two weeks. What happens this week will impact the race for a regular-season title.

Auburn bounced back from a loss at Florida last Saturday by beating Ole Miss 77-64 on Wednesday. Jabari Smith had 15 points and Walker Kessler racked up another double-double with 12 points and 10 rebounds. The Vols also rebounded this week after a loss, defeating Missouri on Tuesday. Kentucky has won its past two, while Arkansas is one of the hottest teams in the league with wins in 12 of its past 13 games. The Wildcats may not be at full strength for the matchup, with coach John Calipari saying injured guards Sahvir Wheeler and TyTy Washington, who missed the LSU win earlier this week, could be out against the Razorbacks.

Player to watch

South Carolina guard Jermaine Couisnard has had back-to-back games with 20-plus points for the first time in his career and has been instrumental in the Gamecocks' four consecutive victories. Couisnard, a 6-foot-4 junior from East Chicago, Indiana, went for a career-best 33 points last Saturday in a win over LSU. He followed that up with 22 points in South Carolina's victory over Mississippi State this past Wednesday. Couisnard and the Gamecocks head to face No. 24 Alabama on Saturday night.

Team to watch

Arkansas has won 12 of its past 13 games since mid-January, the lone loss coming to Alabama 68-67 two weeks ago. The Razorbacks have wins over three ranked opponents in that stretch, including an 80-76 victory over then-top-ranked Auburn. JD Notae has led the charge for Arkansas Notae is second in SEC scoring at 18.7 points a game while adding more than four rebounds, three assists and two steals per contest. Jaylin Williams, a 6-foot-10 sophomore, is averaging 10.4 points and 9.6 rebounds a game. The Razorbacks can make an even bigger statement this weekend when they play No. 6 Kentucky at home, where they are 15-1 this season.

Tourney time The SEC Tournament

starts March 9 with the four highest seeds squaring off. The top four seeds — right now, Auburn, Kentucky, Arkansas and Tennessee have double byes into Friday's quarterfinals. The finals are Sunday, March 13, just a few hours before the NCAA Tournament selections are announced.

Inside the numbers

Vanderbilt guard Scotty Pippen Jr., the league's top scorer, was named coplayer of the week as he averaged 26.5 points, 5.5 rebounds, 5.5 assists and 3.5 in two games. ... Entering the week, the SEC had 96 Quad 1 or 2 victories, the most of any league in the nation. ... Kentucky forward Oscar Tshiebwe is leading the SEC in both defensive rebounds (9.9 per game) and offensive boards (5.3 per game). ... South Carolina's Jermaine Couisnard had 33 points in beating LSU, tying Vanderbilt's Scotty Pippen Jr. and Ole Miss' Jarkel Joiner for most in a game this season. ... Auburn's Walker Kessler leads the SEC with a .703 shooting percentage. If that holds, it would rank third all-time in

Women's side

SEC history.

Top-ranked South Carolina wrapped up its second regular-season SEC crown in three years with a 89-48 victory at Texas A&M on Thursday night. Gamecocks' All-American Aliyah Boston also had her 20th straight game with double figure points and rebounds to surpass the previous best of 19 straight set by LSU great Sylvia Fowles in 2006-07. The Gamecocks close the season at Ole Miss on Sunday and will enter the SEC Tournament as the No. 1 seed and the heavy favorite to win their seventh tournament title in the past eight seasons.

Larson promoting Tennessee dirt track race By JENNA FRYER

AP Auto Racing Writer

NASCAR champion Kyle Larson

is partnering with sports streaming service FloSports to promote a dirt race in Tennessee that he believes his rivals can use as a tune-up for Bristol Motor Speedway. The April 14 race at Volunteer Speedway in Bulls Gap is scheduled three days before NASCAR's dirt race at Bristol Motor Speedway.

Larson said Friday his event can be a practice session for the April 17 Cup race at Bristol, which will be covered in dirt for NASCAR for a second consecutive season. "I want to continue to help grow grassroots racing and if I can with my NASCAR platform, I will," Larson told The Associated Press. "I'd like to get as many Cup drivers as we can to race in the event. Bulls Gap is very similar in size to Bristol Motor Speedway, so it would be like extra practice leading into the Bristol dirt He noted that Volunteer Speedway is roughly 45 minutes away from Bristol, so fans can attend both races. Volunteer Speedway is a four-tenth of a mile venue in eastern Tennessee called "The World's Fastest Dirt Track." Known for its high speeds and 32 degree banking, Volunteer Speedway is regarded as one the country's top grassroots racing venues.

'Kyle Larson is widely recognized as one of the best drivers in the world and we are excited to collaborate with him on this race," said Michael

Rigsby, vice president of motorsports

at FloSports, which will stream the

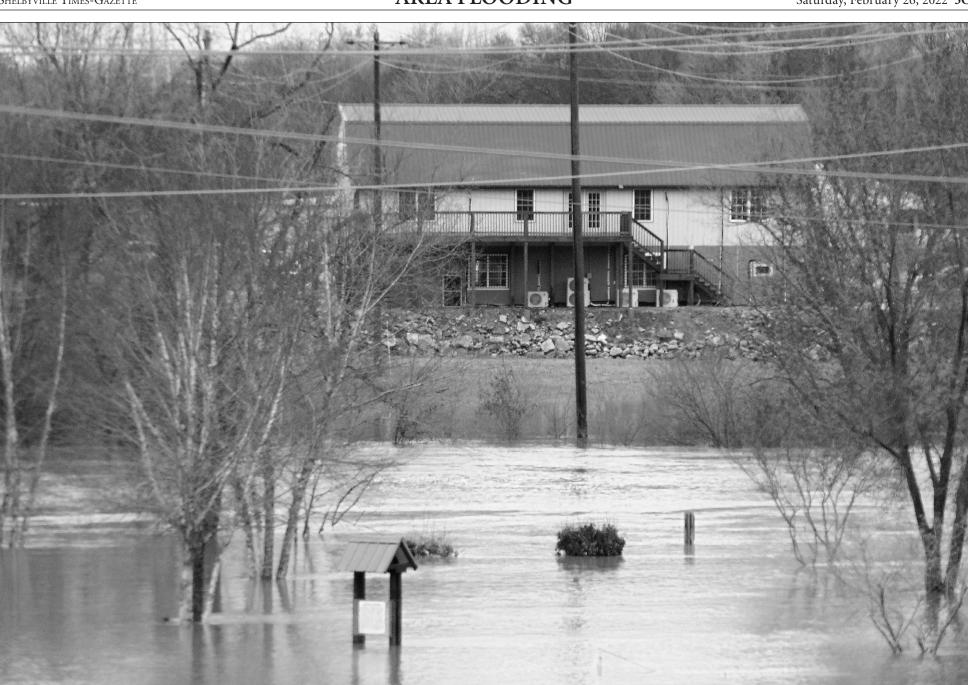

The partnership with Larson is part of FloRacing's commitment to assisting the growth, visibility and popularity of grassroots motorsports. FloSports last year developed the "Castrol FloRacing Night In America" series; the event will be held April 12 at Eldora Speedway, the Ohio track owned by Tony Stewart.

FloSports also recently announced an exclusive broadcast partnership with NASCAR for its grassroots properties.

Larson said he's also hoping to partner with FloRacing to recreate the "Prelude to the Dream" charity race Stewart hosted at Eldora from 2005 to 2012. Larson said he'd like the race to include active and former Cup drivers.

"It's something we've discussed and I'd like to plan for next year," Larson

Gates are closed at River Bottom Park in Shelbyville due to the Duck River's high flood waters that covered the greenway, soccer fields, and parking lots. City officials say they will work to improve the flooding conditions that are common at the park. For now, the popular fishing spot will have to live up to its name of "river bottom."

Ukraine's capital under threat as Russia presses invasion

KYIV, Ukraine (AP) — Russian troops bore down on Ukraine's capital Friday, with gunfire and explosions resonating ever closer to the government quarter, in an invasion of a democratic country that has fueled fears of wider war in Europe and triggered worldwide efforts to make Russia stop. With reports of hundreds of casualties from the warfare including shelling that sliced through a Kviv apartment building and pummeled bridges and schools — there also were growing signs that Vladimir Putin's Russia may be seeking to overthrow Ukraine's government. It would be his boldest effort yet to redraw the world map and revive Moscow's Cold War-era influence. In the fog of war, it was unclear how much of Ukraine remains under Ukrainian control and how much or little Russian forces have seized. The Kremlin accepted Kyiv's offer to hold talks, but it appeared to be an effort to squeeze concessions out of Ukraine's embattled president instead of a gesture toward a diplomatic solution. The U.S. and other global powers slapped ever-tougher sanctions on Russia as the invasion reverberated through the world's economy and energy supplies, threatening to further hit ordinary households. U.N. officials said millions could flee Ukraine. Sports leagues moved to punish Russia on global playing fields. And U.S. President Joe Biden and other NATO leaders held an urgent meeting to discuss how far they can challenge Putin without engaging Russian forces in direct war. Day 2 of Russia's invasion, the largest ground war in Europe since World War II, focused on the Ukrainian capital, where Associated Press reporters heard explosions starting before dawn and gunfire was reported in several areas. Russia's military said it had seized a strategic airport outside Kyiv, allowing it to quickly build up forces to take the capital. It claimed to have already cut the city off from the west the direction taken by many of those escaping the invasion, leading to lines of cars snaking toward the Polish border. Intense gunfire broke out on a bridge across the Dneiper River dividing eastern and at least 137 deaths on their side and claimed hundreds on the Russian one. Russian authorities released no casualty figures, and it was not possible to verify the tolls. U.N. officials reported 25 civilian deaths, mostly from shelling and airstrikes, and said that 100,000 people were believed to have left their homes, estimating up to 4 million could flee if the fighting escalates. When bombs fall on Kyiv, it happens in Europe, not just in Ukraine," Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy said. "When missiles kill our people, they kill all Europeans."

A U.S. defense official said a Russian amphibious assault was underway, and thousands of Russian naval infantry were moving ashore from the Sea of Azov, west of Mariupol. The official said Ukrainian air defenses have been degraded but are still operating, and that about a third of the combat power that Russia had massed around Ukraine is now in the country. All told, the official estimated Russia had fired more than 200 missiles into Ukraine, with some hitting residential Britain's defense ministry said the bulk of Russian forces advancing on Kyiv were still more than 50 kilometers (31 miles) from the city center, with sporadic clashes in the capital's northern suburbs. Zelenskyy pleaded with Western powers to act faster to cut off Russia's economy and provide Ukraine military help. His whereabouts were kept secret, after he told European leaders in a call Thursday night that he was Russia's No. 1 target and that they might not see him again alive. Italian Premier Mario Draghi told lawmakers of Zelenskyy's dramatic remarks to the European Council: "He's hidden somewhere in Kyiv. He said that he doesn't have much time, that Ukraine doesn't have much time." Zelenskyy offered to negotiate on a key Putin demand: that Ukraine declare itself neutral and abandon its ambition of joining NATO. The Kremlin initially said it was ready to send a delegation to Belarus, then later backpedaled, saying it preferred to meet in Warsaw. Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov suggested it was too late, saying Zelenskyy should have agreed to talks earlier on. The assault was anticipated for weeks by the U.S. and Western allies and denied to be in the works just as long by Putin. He argued the West left him with no other choice by refusing to negotiate Russia's Ukrainian officials reported security demands.

Key inflation gauge hit 6.1% in January

Highest rate since 1982

By CHRISTOPHER RUGABER

AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An inflation gauge that is closely monitored by the Federal Reserve jumped 6.1% in January compared with a year ago, the latest evidence that Americans are enduring sharp price increases that will likely worsen after Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

The figure reported Friday by the Commerce Department was the largest year-over-year rise since 1982. Excluding volatile food and energy prices, core inflation increased 5.2% in January from a year earlier.

Robust consumer spending has combined with widespread product and worker shortages to create the highest inflation in four decades — a heavy burden for U.S. households, especially lower-income families faced with elevated costs for food, fuel and

At the same time, consumers as a whole largely shrugged off the higher prices last month and boosted their spending 2.1% from December to January, Friday's report said, an encouraging sign for the economy and the job market. That was a sharp improvement from December, when spending fell. Americans across the income scale have been receiving pay raises and have amassed more savings than they had before the pandemic struck two years ago. That expanded pool of savings provides fuel for future spending.

Inflation, though, is expected to remain high and perhaps accelerate in the coming months, especially with Russia's invasion likely disrupting oil and gas exports. The costs of other commodities that are produced in Ukraine, such as wheat and aluminum, have also increased.

President Joe Biden said Thursday that he would do "everything I can" to keep gas prices in check. Biden did not spell out details, though he mentioned the possibility of releasing more oil from the nation's strategic reserves. He also warned that oil and gas companies "should not exploit this moment" by raising prices at the pump.

On Friday, oil prices were steady after they had reached $100 a barrel in volatile trading on Thursday, before falling back to $92, about where they had started the day. Still, economists at JPMorgan have forecast that oil could reach $110 a barrel as Russia's invasion of Ukraine escalates. Economists at BMO Capital Markets have estimated that each $10-a-barrel increase translates into a 0.4 percentage point rise in inflation.

A separate report Friday showed that orders for longlasting factory goods rose sharply in January, led by a rise in demand for airplanes. The figures indicate that many companies are willing to invest more in industrial equipment and other goods, a sign of confidence in the economy.

"Overall, the real economy appears to be in stronger health than we feared," said Paul Ashworth, chief U.S. economist at Capital Economics, a forecasting Incomes were unchanged last month, largely because the monthly child tax credit payments that were included in Biden's $1.9 trillion financial support package expired. A new study concluded that the end of the payments led to a jump in child poverty.

But wages and salaries rose 0.5% from December to January, Friday's increased because a large cost-of-living adjustment, reflecting last year's jump in inflation, took effect.

Russia's invasion and the likely resulting rise in inflation have increased pressure on the Federal Reserve, which is expected to raise interest rates by a quarterpoint as many as five or six times this year beginning in March. The Fed's delicate task — to raise rates enough to restrain inflation, without going so far as to tip the economy into recession — has now become more difficult.

Higher gas prices typically accelerate inflation, which would heighten the need for rate increases. But costlier gas can also weaken the economy by slowing report showed. And consumer spending, some-Social Security payments thing that would normally lead the Fed to leave rates unchanged.

Fed officials acknowledging that the invasion of Ukraine has complicated the economic outlook, but say that so far they are sticking with their plans for rate hikes. Loretta Mester, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, said Thursday that she supported a series of rate hikes beginning in March. But she said the Fed should remain flexible: Faster rate hikes might be needed, she said, if inflation hasn't begun to fade by mid-year, or more gradual increases if inflation is slowing.

"The implications of the unfolding situation in Ukraine for the mediumrun economic outlook in the U.S. will also be a consideration," she said. Other Fed officials have offered similar remarks this week.

Late Thursday, Fed governor Christopher Waller said he would support a halfpoint rate hike in March if inflation remains high. Most other Fed policymakers, though, have indicated that they're inclined to favor a more typical quarter-point hike.

But most officials have said they would prefer to raise rates by the traditional quarter-percentage-point increment, Nick Timiraos

Fed officials want inflation to fall back to its 2% target, as measured by the Commerce Department's gauge, released Friday. A separate measure, the consumer price index, released two weeks ago, showed that inflation reached 7.5% in January from a year earlier, also a four-decade high.

In December, Fed officials projected that inflation would decline to just 2.7%, according to their preferred measure, by the end of this year, which most economists see as increasingly unlikely. The Fed will release updated projections at its March meeting. January's data show inflation was already picking up before the invasion. From December to January, prices rose 0.6%, up from 0.5% in the previous month. There are early indications that consumer spending has stayed healthy in February, boosted by the rapid fading of the omicron wave of the coronavirus. JPMorgan Chase said that spending on its credit cards for airline tickets, hotel rooms, and restaurant meals rose in the first half of this month. The JPMorgan Chase Institute also recently released data showing that cash balances remain elevated among their customers, including those with lower incomes. Bank account balances for Americans with less than $26,000 in income were 65% higher at the end of last year than they were two years before.

The combination of higher pay and enhanced savings suggests that Americans may be able to keep spending at a solid pace in the coming months, thereby sustaining the economy's inflationary pressures.
