Planning commission denies Longview PUD

Residents vent frustrations

'Unionville doesn't get anything from the County. There haven't been [road] improvements out there in years.'

Bedford County planning commission recently nixed the rezoning for a potential planned unit development (PUD) subdivision on Longview Road in Unionville. Citizens turned out for the meeting to express concerns over this type of potential development at their back door.

According to Bedford County's zoning director, Chris White, PUDs are different from regular subdivisions in that every aspect of the development is planned, from the sidewalks to the facades. They also have more amenities like playgrounds. "Bedford County has no PUDs," said White.

Representatives from Landmark Homes of Tennessee presented their potential plans to the commission. This particular PUD would have potentially developed around 127 houses over 115 acres, according to Landmark representative Randy Sexton.

The houses in this plan would have been available in the $350,000 to $500,000 range, while the total project would have cost around $50 million to complete, Sexton advised the planning commission. The PUD could generate an additional $2 million in property tax revenue for the County, he said.

Bedford County Commissioner Jeff Sweeney, who's been in construction since 1986, said, "These developers, I feel, are investing in our community—y'all's

Residents on Longview and Davis (pictured here) roads in Unionville attended a recent county planning commission meeting and expressed concerns about the potential impact a planned unit development (PUD) could have on their roads.

Bedford County Commissioners Jeff Sweeney (far left), Linda Yockey and planning commission members Kennon Threet and Wayne Simons listen as representatives of Landmark Homes in Tennessee discuss how if Longview property were to be rezoned for a PUD, around 127 homes would be developed over about 115.

Family and friends of Jimmy Patterson gathered on Unionville-Deason Road Sunday for a bridge dedication in his memory. Attending were his wife, Jean, and daughter, Tina P. Davenport, and family. Patterson served 13 years as a Bedford County Commissioner, representing the Unionville area.

Unionville bridge dedicated to Jimmy Patterson

A bridge on Unionville-Deason Road was dedicated Sunday to the memory of Jimmy Stanton Patterson, who served 13 years on Bedford County Board of Commissioners.

"He had a servant heart," said County Mayor Chad Graham, who spoke of Patterson's drive and initiative in matters of importance to his constituents in District 3.

Jason Sanders, who was appointed to Patterson's seat after his death, said he had some big shoes to fill. Patterson died on Sept. 19, 2020, at age 82, while still serving on the commission.

During his commission service, he had been a member of the Rules and Legislative Committee and the Financial Management Committee. He also served on the Emergency Communications District board, the Bedford County Medical Center board and the Tennessee College of Applied Technology-Shelbyville advisory board.

Rules committee chairman P.T. "Biff" Farrar said Patterson was usually the first to arrive for committee meetings.

He was a member of Blankenship United Methodist Church and was a 32nd Degree Mason/Scottish Rites.

Patterson served for 8 years in the U.S. Marine Corps. He was retired from Cooper Steel, where he worked for 20 years and served as a foreman.

Graham noted that earlier, he had worked for Nashville Bridge Company and had a lifelong interest in covered bridges, so it was appropriate that a bridge be named in his honor.

Youth Art Show

A youth art show was held Thursday at the Fly Cultural Arts building. Acrylics to mixed media illustrated some of the techniques Bedford County students are learning this year. Visitors were asked to "cast compliments" for their favorite pieces of art. See more photos in Saturday's Life & Leisure.

Tennessee pauses executions, will review lethal injections

NASHVILLE (AP) — Gov. Bill Lee paused executions in Tennessee for the rest of the year on Monday after revealing that the state had failed to ensure its lethal injection drugs were properly tested. The oversight forced Lee to abruptly halt the execution of Oscar Smith an hour before he was to die last month.

Lee didn't initially disclose the reason for stopping Smith's execution other than to say there was an "oversight" in the preparation of the lethal injection drugs. Tennessee's execution protocols require any compounded drugs to be independently tested for potency, sterility and endotoxins. In his Monday statement, Lee said the drugs for Smith's execution were tested for potency and sterility, but not endotoxins.

Smith's attorneys had called for a moratorium on executions and independent review of the problems last week. In a Monday statement, Federal Public Defender Kelley Henry said the Republican governor's decision shows "great leadership."

"The use of compounded drugs in the context of lethal injection is fraught with risk," Henry said. "The failure to test for endotoxins is a violation of the protocol. Governor Lee did the right thing by stopping executions because of this breach."

Lee appointed former U.S. Attorney Ed Stanton to review circumstances that led to the failure. He'll also review the clarity of the state's lethal injection manual and look at Tennessee Department of Correction staffing, Lee said in a statement.

"I review each death penalty case and believe it is an appropriate punishment for heinous crimes," Lee said. "However, the death penalty is an extremely serious matter, and I expect the Tennessee Department of Correction to leave no question that procedures are correctly followed."

The pause will remain in effect through the end of the year to allow time for the review and corrective action, Lee said.

Many states turned to compounded drugs after commercial drug manufacturers began refusing to sell their medications for executions, making the drugs difficult for prison systems to obtain.

Trump election probe special grand jury selected in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — A special grand jury was selected Monday for the investigation into whether former President Donald Trump and others illegally tried to influence the 2020 election in Georgia.

The investigation has been underway since early last year, and Fulton County District Attorney Fani Willis took this unusual step of requesting the special grand jury to help it along. She noted in a letter to the chief judge that the special grand jury would be able to issue subpoenas to people who have refused to cooperate otherwise.

The chief judge ordered the special grand jury to be seated for a period of up to a year, beginning Monday. Of the pool of about 200 people called from the county master jury list, 26 were chosen to serve — 23 grand jurors and three alternates. Special grand juries focus on investigating a single topic and making recommendations to the district attorney, who then decides whether to seek an indictment from a regular grand jury.

Because of the intense public interest in this case, the court made arrangements for parts of Monday's selection process to be broadcast live. Now that the special grand jury has been selected, however, everything it does will happen in secret.

Fulton County Superior Court Judge Robert McBurney, who's been tasked with overseeing the special grand jury, told the people summoned to the jury pool that they would not be hearing a trial, but would instead be serving on an investigative special grand jury looking into actions surrounding the 2020 general election.

"Now it's time for 26 members of our community to participate in that investigation," McBurney said.

Willis has confirmed that her team is looking into a January 2021 phone call in which Trump pushed Georgia Secretary of State Brad Raffensperger to "find" the votes needed for him to win the state. She has also said they are looking at a November 2020 phone call between U.S. Sen. Lindsey Graham and Raffensperger, the abrupt resignation of the U.S.

attorney in Atlanta on Jan. 4, 2021, and comments made during December 2020 Georgia legislative committee hearings on the election.

McBurney said the grand jurors won't begin meeting until June and won't meet every week. They will be notified in advance of when they need to be there, and there's some wiggle room if they can't make it to every session as only 16 are needed for a quorum, he said.

McBurney then led the 200 potential grand jurors in swearing an oath to give truthful answers about their qualifications.

He explained that grand jurors must be at least 18, must be U.S. citizens and must have lived in Fulton County for the past six months. Anyone who's an elected official or has been for the last two years, anyone convicted of a felony or anyone who's served on a Fulton County jury or grand jury in the last year is not qualified to serve, McBurney said.

The investigation involves actions surrounding the 2020 general election, and it is important that grand jurors "bring an open mind to the process," the judge said. Anyone who is already convinced that a crime did or did not happen should say they have a conflict when asked, McBurney said.

After identifying other potential conflicts — for example, plans to be out of the country for an extended time, having to care for someone after a major surgery — McBurney went through the first 100 potential jurors and asked them individually — addressing them only by number — to say whether they have a conflict. A quarter of the grand jurors said they had a conflict and the judge and prosecutors began questioning them privately to determine whether they could be excused. Then he closed the courtroom so he and prosecutors could speak privately with those selected.

While the district attorney's office will generally be steering the investigation, grand jurors will be able to question witnesses who appear before them. If they believe there are other witnesses they would like to hear from or documents they would like to see, they have the power to issue subpoenas.

Arrest warrant issued in Alabama for missing jail official

FLORENCE, Ala. (AP) — Authorities issued an arrest warrant Monday for a jail official who they say helped an inmate awaiting trial on a murder charge to escape from an Alabama jail. A search was on for the pair.

Inmate Casey Cole White, 38, was shackled and handcuffed when he and Vicky White, the facility's assistant director of corrections, left the Lauderdale County Detention Center in Florence, Alabama, on Friday morning. They have not been seen since, although the patrol vehicle that the pair used when leaving the detention center was found at a nearby shopping center parking lot after their absence was discovered.

Authorities have no idea where they are, although the inmate should be recognizable by his size. He stands 6 feet, 9 inches (2.06 meters) tall and weighs about 260 pounds. Authorities warned that anyone seeing the pair should not approach them.

"We consider both of them dangerous and in all probability, both individuals are armed," U.S. Marshal Marty Keely said at a press conference Monday. He noted that Casey White "will stand out" because of his size even if he has changed his appearance.

Lauderdale County Sheriff Rick Singleton said Monday that they had issued an arrest warrant for Vicky White on charges of permitting or allowing an escape. She is not related to White.

She violated a policy that required more than one official to be involved in transporting him, according to Singleton. The policy was put in place when White was jailed two years ago and authorities believed he was planning to escape.

"We know she participated, whether she did that willingly or if she was coerced, threatened somehow to participate in the case, not really sure. We know for sure she did participate," Singleton said.

Vicky White told co-workers she was taking him to the courthouse for a mental health evaluation. But Singleton later said no such evaluation was scheduled. He said video showed the pair left the jail and went straight to that parking lot.

"Casey White, as you've heard me say over and over and over is an extremely dangerous person and we need to get him located and get him off the street," Singleton said.

White was already serving a prison sentence for attempted murder and burglary when he disappeared. He was set to go to trial next month for stabbing a 58-year-old woman to death. If convicted, he could face the death penalty.

The U.S. Marshals Service is offering up to $10,000 for information.

The sheriff said they were shocked by the events that transpired.

"This is not the Vicky White we know, by any stretch of the imagination," the sheriff said.

Singleton said Vicky White had been an exemplary employee and jail employees are "just devastated."

Vicky White had planned to retire and that Friday was to be her last day. He said she had sold her home about a month ago and "talked about going to the beach."

The sheriff said they had no leads at this point on where the two are located.

"If we knew where they were at, we would be there and not here," Singleton said.

Marshals Service said anyone with information about Casey White's location or Vicky White's disappearance can call the service at 1-800-336-0102. Anonymous tips may also be submitted through the U.S. Marshals Tip App.

A National Day of Prayer observance will be held 1 p.m. Thursday on the courthouse lawn.

community . . . . Yes, it will raise the value of your property. Yes, it will raise the cost of your property taxes."

Some questions were raised about the impact of a PUD on schools. Sweeney said the impact will be there regardless of this PUD and that it costs around $11,000 per student in the public school system. "So, we try to make values bring revenue to the table, so we don't have to raise property taxes . . . . I look at this as a long-term investment in our community," he said.

Commissioner Linda Yockey said, "One of the reasons we wanted PUDs is so they can blend in with the more rural nature of what's around it . . . . I think I speak for a lot of us on the planning commission that we make this as unobtrusive as we can to the country people that are going to be around it."

The meeting became heated as many residents on Longview, Coopertown, and Davis roads spoke against the possible development. "This is going to impact our community for the rest of our lives, and you're making money off of a piece of property that the people are having to put up with all the problems," said resident Eddie Stacy.

Resident Jennifer Beck said most people who buy these kinds of homes are from out-of-state. "I think when we see this coming into a rural area, it's going to be a culture shock for some people . . . . It makes me concerned about how those people will react to smelling chicken farms and sludge and the sounds."

She also said these phases of development change the rural area. "It only takes 10 years, and what you loved about that area, it's unrecognizable," she said.

Another citizen added, "What job in Bedford County pays for people to afford $300-, $400-, $500,000 houses?"

Carl Brown said, "You all have a beautiful subdivision; I think it's out-of-place." His wife, Jessica, added, "I know we keep talking about raising the taxes and how that's good because our property values are going to go up. The only thing about that is . . . these people don't want to sell. They've invested their entire life on this."

Many residents were also concerned over traffic and whether the roads could handle the increase in traffic flow.

"Unionville doesn't get anything from the County. There haven't been improvements out there in years," said resident Jennifer Potts. "Our roads suck; they're breaking off on the sides of the roads. There's no shoulders, no ditches. And the roads are broken right now where all the dump trucks are running up and down them over on Longview . . . . It's about time the County step up with the tax money we're giving."

Sexton said in regard to road upkeep Landmark would have to construct and repair and improve the ditches for the PUD.

The commission voted 5-4 against the rezoning from A-1 (agriculture) to R-1 (low density residential.) Planning commission members who were for the rezoning were Linda Yockey, Jay Graham, Reid Farmer and Jeff Sweeney. Those against were Wayne Simons, Alan Gill, Larry Hasty, Brent Stacy and Kennon Threet, who broke the tie, adding that he thought the PUD was out-of-place for the area.

Suspect sneaks marijuana into jail

By DAVID MELSON

Drug charges were added after marijuana was found Friday morning in the clothing of a DUI suspect at Bedford County Jail.

Christian Isaha Wooten, 19, of Wheel Road allegedly told an officer earlier he had no marijuana on him other than a small amount found scattered when he was initially stopped.

Detective Chris Brown of the Bedford County Sheriff's Office stopped Wooten for alleged reckless driving on U.S. 231 North.

Deputies noticed marijuana on Wooten's shirt and in this car's floorboard. Wooten said he had no more than that amount, the report said.

Wooten allegedly couldn't be administered field sobriety tests due to "aggressive behavior and repeated attempts to walk away," according to the report.

Approximately 5.2 grams of marijuana was recovered from Wooten's clothing.

Wooten was charged with DUI, simple possession and introducing contraband into a penal facility and released on $10,000 bond.

Thefts

Two rifles, a shotgun and prescription medication were taken from a locked home on Old Flat Creek Road in Flat Creek between 12:30-12:45 p.m. Sunday, according to a Bedford County Sheriff's Office report.

A door frame was damaged while entry was regained.

A cell phone was stolen Saturday night from a counter at Economy Liquors, Madison Street, a Shelbyville Police Department report said.

The phone was later pinged to the Deery Street-East Lane Street area.

Harassment

An employee at Hardee's, Madison Street, told police a drive-through customer made sexually-related remarks and grabbed her hand and wrist while receiving an order late Saturday afternoon.

The man later returned and handed another employee a sheet of paper containing his name and phone number. He has not been arrested as of Monday.

A man who kept calling 911 from in front of Shelbyville Police Department headquarters and refusing to give his name or say why he was calling when officers arrived was charged with misuse of 911 and public intoxication.

Khaled Mahmoud Ali's actions were likely fueled by alcohol, Officer Chris Vest's report said. Ali was held on $6,000 bond.

Your finances: Check everything carefully

Dear Heloise: I read with interest your column on bank fraud this morning. I had received an email purporting to be from my bank. They wanted me to verify certain banking information. This raised a red flag for me. I printed out the request out and took it to my bank. The teller was fooled and told me to send the information! I told her the address looked phony. It was some strange personal address. I asked to talk to a manager, and he verified that my suspicions were correct. If the origin address is questionable, don't send the info! -- Lynn Riley, via email

Lynn, thanks for this important info. When it comes to your financial matters, be vigilant and check everything carefully. -- Heloise

PRODUCT REGISTRATION

Dear Heloise: In many cases, a newly purchased product -- such as an appliance of any size or a TV or other electronics item -- will come with a product registration card. It is recommended that the product registration be completed either using the card, which would be returned through the post office, or online.

By registering the product, the buyer is put in the best position to be notified if there are defects or recalls on the product or other situations that might warrant a full return or replacement. In addition, registering the product helps ensure that the warranty status can be verified by the manufacturer or retailer. -- Tim Davis, via email

MIXER SAFETY

Dear Heloise: When inserting or extracting the beaters from a tabletop or hand mixer, it is important not to have the appliance plugged in. Serious accidents have occurred if the speed switch happens to be moved to the "on" position while performing the task.

I read your column in the Lima News. -- Jack Bevilockway, Lima, Ohio

Send a money-saving or timesaving hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001, or you can fax it to 1-210-HELOISE or email it to Heloise@Heloise.com. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

SKUNK SPRAY

Dear Heloise: I just read your article about removing skunk odor from a pet. My dog apparently wasn't directly sprayed, but he did smell "skunky." I sprayed vinegar water on his fur, and it got rid of the smell. It was a mix of 1 cup warm water to 1 cup white vinegar. It really removes odors!

The vinegar water is all I use for cleaning. Also, that and baking soda removed rust from carpet for me. I've used this for years, long before I ever saw that you have a vinegar booklet. Cheers! -- Fonda Carlow, via email

TONG HELP

Dear Heloise: My wife has to use a rider cart when she goes grocery shopping. This puts her at a disadvantage when she needs something from a high shelf that's beyond her reach. She thought of taking a pair of tongs with her (kept in the reusable bags) to reach higher items. It works great! -- R.M., Red

FARM SAFETY

We are now seeing the first of the crops being planted. The soils are just now getting warm enough, but farming activity is picking up. Wheat is getting closer to harvest, too. And it won't be long until we'll be in the hay fields, too. Fertilizers are being applied, and weed controls are being applied. So, many of you will be moving farm equipment on the roads from place to place. In a hurry, I'm sure, to get it done before a rain or to get to another field. Moving equipment is a dangerous thing.

Farm equipment is some of the most dangerous equipment in the world. I had a great-uncle who lost an arm in a corn shredder when I was little. Never forgot it. Power-take-off shafts, moving cutter parts, disks, hydraulics, big tires, bigger equipment, blind spots...planters, combines, sprayers, hay equipment, bushhogs, and on and on. I could keep on listing danger.

When you look at history, the first good roads were built to help get food from the farms to towns. It still is the most important reason for them to be built as far as I'm concerned. Not for the fast cars and the big trucks, but for farmers to get the food planted and harvested, livestock to market, etc. Many farm states still refer to their roads as farm to market routes and such.

Practice farm safety when you move your equipment, the public may not be paying enough attention. Make sure your SMV signs are on, and your flashers and signals and lights are working. If not, fix 'em.

Make sure you have good communications and you have all of the safety and emergency phone numbers. Make sure your fire extinguishers are in working order. Watch out for dangling clothing. Use gloves and protective clothing when you are applying chemicals. Keep in touch with family members on your plans and whereabouts.

Practicing safety is cheaper and much easier than dealing with an injury, or worse yet, a death. I can refer you to friends who have experienced both injury or death of loved ones for their take on safety.

There used to be a program on TV years ago that always started with the police officers in the squad room getting their daily briefing, and it always ended with the duty officer saying "Be careful out there!" In that same thought, be careful out there. Farmers, do your duty to be safe. Consumer public, do yours and help watch out for farmers and give them safe space when you are near them.

PET PEEVES

I can get agitated. I know that comes as a complete shock to many of you. I'm not proud of it, but I'm not perfect, just almost! But there are some really aggravating things that cause me to cringe, so here goes.

When someone veers left to turn right when they have enough space already, that gets to me. I really don't like someone following me too close, and I've blinked my taillights to let them know it. And if they hit me, it'll be their fault! If I can't see the grill on the vehicle, that's too close!

It's pretty common to see vehicles with no lights on at dusk, and I blink my lights to get them to realize it, but I just don't understand it when they just go on. And it's worse when they are in dark cars already.

I've quit trying to get the vehicle warranty folks to leave me alone. I really hate it when they use phone numbers that I seem to recognize to trick me. So, I now talk to Jim or Jane, and when they find out that I have a 2005 Chevrolet Silverado truck with 318,000 miles on it, they are less interested in talking to me. But I've burned up some of their time.

And the senior health folks must have taken notes, because they have called me less lately. When I did the same thing to them and decided I'd talk to Bob or Mary about my health benefits and to use up their time, I repeatedly gave them my age as 103 and they abruptly hung up without sharing the details of their offer! It does absolutely no good to punch 2 on the call to be removed from the call list. I can't beat 'em, so I'll get 'em back. What is it they say about older people getting even? Just doing my part!

I've quit teaching clerks how to make change. All I can say is "Bless their hearts!" There's just too much plastic in the world, and I'm having to learn how to use it. I really prefer cash in my hand. When businesses don't take cash or can't count it, I generally don't do business there or in that checkout line.

And no, I'm not one to order online. If I can't hold it, look at it, try it, measure it, etc., I'm reluctant. And trying to write a check is another sore spot with me.

WISDOM

Here are some things to contemplate. These have to do with being positive. They'll bring a smile if you think about 'em.

Living on Earth is expensive, but it does include a free trip around the sun. How long a minute is depends on what side of the bathroom door you're on. Birthdays are good for you, the more you have the more you live. You may be only one person in the world, but you may be the world to one person.

Some mistakes are too much fun to make only once. A truly happy person is the one who can enjoy the scenery on a detour. Don't cry because it's over, but smile because it happened.

Senior career fair

The Shelbyville-Bedford Partnership hosted a career fair at Calsonic Arena for around 300 high school seniors last Thursday. The fair feaured dozens of local industries, many of whom were ready to hire on the spot as well as make connections with potential future employees.

Bedford County human resource director Shanna Boyette, right, talks with two seniors about working for the local government.

These students were interested in going into law enforcement.

Cooper Steel has around 300 local job opportunities in Bedford County.

Elite Management Solutions provides staffing solutions for larger companies and serves as a great connection for those just entering the workforce.

Community High School seniors Alexander Gaida, left, and Luke Underwood attended the career fair. Underwood is dual enrolled at the Tennessee College of Applied Technology, while Gaida said he would like to join the Navy then potentially come back and serve in local law enforcement.

CHS student Jocelyn Garcia, right, said she enjoyed talking with representatives from First Community Bank as she would like to become an accounting assistant after graduation. Angela Gonzales said she hopes to practice law.

Supreme Court rules in favor of Christian flag

By MARK SHERMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A unanimous Supreme Court ruled Monday that Boston violated the free speech rights of a conservative activist when it refused his request to fly a Christian flag on a flagpole outside City Hall.

Justice Stephen Breyer wrote for the court that the city discriminated against the activist, Harold Shurtleff, because of his “religious viewpoint,” even though it had routinely approved applications for the use of one of the three flagpoles outside City Hall that fly the U.S., Massachusetts and Boston flags.

Occasionally, the city takes down its own pennant and temporarily hoists another flag.

Shurtleff and his Camp Constitution wanted to fly a white banner with a red cross on a blue background in the upper left corner, called the Christian flag, to mark Constitution Day, Sept. 17, in 2017.

The city had approved 284 consecutive applications to fly flags, usually those of other nations, before it rejected Shurtleff’s because it was a Christian flag. The city said he could fly a different banner, but Shurtleff refused, and lower courts upheld the city’s decision.

But the high court said the lower courts and the city were wrong. The case hinged on whether the flag-flying is an act of the government, in which case Boston can do whatever it wants, or private parties like Shurtleff, Breyer wrote.

“Finally, we look at the extent to which Boston actively controlled these flag raisings and shaped the messages the flags sent.

The answer, it seems, is not at all. And that is the most salient feature of this case,” Breyer wrote in an opinion that also riffed on the brutalist architectural style of Boston’s City Hall and the Siena, Italy-inspired 7-acre plaza on which it sits.

Breyer wrote that “the city’s lack of meaningful involvement in the selection of flags or the crafting of their messages leads us to classify the flag raisings as private, not government, speech—though nothing prevents Boston from changing its policies going forward.”

The city has said that in the event of a loss at the Supreme Court it probably will change its policy to take more control of what flags can fly.

Shurtleff is a former organizer with the John Birch Society and has used his Camp Constitution website to question the

Jan. 6 insurrection at the U.S. Capitol, the outcome of the 2020 election that put President Joe Biden in office, the efficacy of COVID-19 vaccines and even who was behind the Sept. 11 attacks.

None of that was at issue at the high court.

The case is Shurtleff v. Boston, 20-1800.

Wildcats spoil Golden Eagles' Senior Day

T-G STAFF REPORT

Tullahoma drove in a pair of runs in the top of the first inning and held off a seventh-inning rally as the Wildcats spoiled Shelbyville's Senior Day on Saturday with a 4-2 win over the Eagles.

The Wildcats surrendered a run back to the Eagles in the bottom of the second inning, only to plate a third score of the afternoon in the third inning.

Tullahoma played add on with a fourth run in the top of the sixth inning.

Still well within striking distance of the lead, the Eagles went to work in the bottom of the seventh, but only was able to rally for a single run.

Shelbyville nearly doubled up the Wildcats at the plate, out-hitting Tullahoma 9-5.

Carston Williams and Gabe Adams were the only two Eagles to record multiple hits against the Wildcats, while Nick Hopper connected for the team's only double of the afternoon.

Jarius Brown got the start and pitched four innings for the Eagles, allowing three runs on two hits, before Gabe Adams took over and pitched the final three innings.

He gave up one run on three hits, while striking out one and walking one.

The Eagles wrapped up the regular season on Monday at Spring Hill.

Caitlyn Burdick and Alyssa Fanning each fell by

Greyhound races ending

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — By the end of the year there will only be two greyhound racing tracks left in the country.

Dubuque's track closure and the end of racing in West Memphis, Arkansas, this December will leave racing only in West Virginia, where tracks in Wheeling and near Charleston operate with subsidies from casino revenue.

The sport reached its peak in the 1980s when there were more than 50 tracks across 19 states. Since then, increased concerns about how the dogs are treated along with an explosion of gambling options have nearly killed a sport that gained widespread appeal about a century ago.

Defense steps up for Vikings

By RICKEY CLARDY
Sports Writer

UNIONVILLE — The Community Vikings were defending on their end of the field for a large portion of the game against the Fayetteville Tigers Friday, but the Vikings withstood all Tiger scoring chances and made the most of a free kick opportunity to score the lone goal of the game in the second half as Community defeated the Tigers 1-0 in a non-district soccer matchup.

Community (4-4-1) could not get untracked as Fayetteville was first to the ball for most of the first half.

The Viking defense and goalie Villamar Anica kept the Tigers off the scoreboard as the game remained scoreless at the intermission.

The Vikings started to get their offense untracked in the second half as the teams battled to take the lead.

Fayetteville looked to take the lead with 24 minutes left as the ball bounced precariously in the front of the Community goal, but the Vikings were able to knock the ball away and escape the Tiger scoring opportunity.

After almost 66 minutes of scoreless action, the Vikings made the most of a free kick to light up the scoreboard.

Shane DeLeon battles against the Tigers for possession.

From about 30 yards away, Randy Anica kicked the ball to a mix of players in front of the Tiger goal.

Ramon Hernandez was able to make the first touch and deflected the ball into the net to give Community a 1-0 lead.

"I wanted to see how far they would let us go up and we crowded the keeper pretty well," Coach Jesse Cooper of the Vikings said. "He couldn't really see the ball when it came in and we got a nice little deflection for the goal."

The momentum swung as the Vikings came close on two other scoring chances minutes later but could not increase their advantage.

Meanwhile, a late Tiger scoring attempt was thwarted by Villamar Anica as Community took the win.

"It was back-and-forth. Both of us had decent opportunities, but we couldn't connect," Cooper said. "Offensively, we changed a couple of formations just to try things out."

Community finishes its regular season Tuesday with a district home game on Senior Night against Cannon County.

The Vikings are scheduled to begin tournament play later in the week.

Titans use 6 draft picks on offense to help Tannehill

By TERESA M. WALKER
AP Pro Football Writer

NASHVILLE — The Tennessee Titans say they need to be excellent around Ryan Tannehill to help their quarterback take them on the deep post-season run they've missed since the 2019 season.

How big a step they've taken this offseason remains to be seen. They certainly did their best, using six of nine selections in this NFL draft on offense to give Tannehill more protection and passing targets for a team that went 12-5 last season and earned the AFC's No. 1 seed.

"We'll see how it goes ...," general manager Jon Robinson said Saturday after wrapping up his seventh draft. "I feel really good about where we're at with the football team. We'll continue to look and add."

The three-day draft started in stunning fashion with the Titans trading away a Pro Bowl wide receiver after A.J. Brown asked to be moved after cutting off communications with team officials and promising to stay off the field until he got a new contract.

They sent Brown to Philadelphia where he got his high-priced extension, and Tennessee used the 18th pick to draft Brown's replacement in Treyton Burks of Arkansas. The 6-foot-3, 225-pound Burks has watched a bunch of receivers, taking bit and pieces to help him be a versatile threat.

"I really mimic myself after myself just because I feel like without being myself, I wouldn't be in this position," Burks said.

That was the first of three trades for Tennessee in this draft, including moving out of the 26th overall selection and moving up in the third round to select a quarterback at its highest draft spot since Marcus Mariota at No. 2 overall in 2015.

SPORTS CALENDAR

Cascade basketball camp

Cascade High School will be hosting a youth basketball camp open for boys and girls currently in grades K-8. The camp will include games, instruction, drills and focus on fundamentals.

The camp will be held from May 23-26, with K-4 being held from 8:30-11:30 a.m., and grades 5-8 from 1-4 p.m. Cost is $100 per camper and $50 for any additional siblings.

Titans

March, the Titans appear better on offense after grabbing Brown's replacement in Burks. He should slide into the starting lineup immediately opposite Robert Woods, the veteran Tennessee sent a 2023 sixth-round pick to the Rams for in March.

They also are deeper at tight end having signed Austin Hooper, a two-time Pro Bowler in his final two seasons in Atlanta. They drafted Chigoziem Okonkwo out of Maryland at No. 143 with their second pick in the fourth round whose 4.52-second time in the 40-yard dash was the fastest at his position at the NFL combine.

With his speed up the seam, Okonkwo has been compared to Jonnu Smith, the tight end that left the Titans in March 2020 for a big payday in New England. Tennessee tried replacing Smith by bringing back Anthony Firkser, but he never came close to replacing Smith's production.

Hassan Haskins, a fourth-round choice at No. 131 out of Michigan, provides depth behind Derrick Henry and the ability to play on all special teams. The Titans also added a 5-11 receiver Kyle Phillips out of UCLA in the fifth round.

Crowded QB room

The Titans insisted trading up four spots to select Malik Willis from Liberty and making him the third quarterback off the board in this draft was simply taking the best player available at No. 86 in the third round.

Tennessee is committed to Ryan Tannehill this season with the veteran, who turns 34 in July, having the NFL's highest salary cap number this season. He was intercepted 14 times, the most since his second year in the NFL. That doesn't count his three interceptions in the divisional loss.

The pressure this offseason will be on Logan Woodside, who has backed up Tannehill the past two seasons with little competition for the spot.

Secondary help

The Titans used another high draft pick on a cornerback for a third straight draft. Auburn cornerback Roger McCreary was the 35th pick overall, joining 2021 first-rounder Caleb Farley, 2021 third-rounder Elijah Molden and 2020 second-rounder Kristian Fulton.

They also used the first of their two sixth-round selections on safety Theo Jackson, a Nashville native who grew up attending Titans' games in his uncle's luxury suite before playing at the University of Tennessee.

Woman makes start in pro baseball game

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Kelsie Whitmore played left field and batted ninth for the Staten Island FerryHawks on Sunday, becoming the first woman to start a game in the Atlantic League and one of the first to do so in a league connected to Major League Baseball.

The 23-year-old Whitmore cracked manager Edgardo Alfonzo's lineup for the FerryHawks' game at the Gastonia Honey Hunters.

Whitmore, a right-handed hitter, went 0 for 2. She struck out in her first at-bat, was hit by a pitch in the second — she hustled toward first base after being struck in the arm by a breaking pitch — and flied out to right in her third time up. She was then pulled for a pinch-hitter in a 10-5 loss.

Flawless in the field, Whitmore caught a couple of flyballs hit in her direction.

Whitmore had previously come off the bench for Staten Island, making her debut on April 21 at Charleston as a pinch-runner with two outs in the ninth inning.

Whitmore is a two-way player and has been working with pitching coach and former big leaguer Nelson Figueroa, but she's yet to pitch in a game for Staten Island.

A former college softball player at Cal State Fullerton, Whitmore signed with Staten Island this month, one of several notable moments for women in baseball this season.

Last month, San Francisco Giants coach Alyssa Nakken filled in as first base coach, becoming the first woman to coach on the field for a big league game. A few days before that, Rachel Balkovec won her debut managing the Low-A Tampa Tarpons in the New York Yankees' system, becoming the first woman to skipper a team affiliated with a major league club.

Whitmore pitched and played in the outfield for the U.S. women's baseball team from 2014-19 and spent parts of two seasons with the Sonoma Stompers of the independent Pacific Association.

Bauer fights suspension

LOS ANGELES — Trevor Bauer is fighting to protect his pitching career, reputation and earning power in the face of his unprecedented two-season suspension without pay by Major League Baseball for violating MLB's domestic violence and sexual assault policy.

Now, it's an arbitrator's turn to decide whether he ever plays for the Los Angeles Dodgers — or any other MLB team — again.

His punishment was meted out Friday for sexual abuse allegations he denies.

If the arbitrator sides with MLB, the 31-year-old pitcher's full suspension of 324 games without pay would be upheld and Bauer would lose just over $60 million from a $102 million, three-year contract he signed last year. By that time, his contract with the team will have expired.

If Bauer wins, he faces the prospect of rebuilding his reputation, as well as potential public backlash and mending fences with MLB and his team.

Bauer became the Dodgers' highest-paid player after they outduelled the New York Mets to bring the right-hander home in 2021. He was born in North Hollywood, attended high school in Santa Clarita and played at UCLA.

Public reaction at the time was mixed, not because of Bauer's performance on the field, but his behavior off it. He had been involved in multiple controversies on social media, where he has a huge following, and some of the higher-profile incidents involved women.

Avs, Flames are NHL West's top seeds

By JOHN WAWROW
AP Hockey Writer

In assessing the status of his Pacific Division champion Calgary Flames, coach Darryl Sutter may have at the same time aptly captured the unpredictable state of the entire Western Conference once the playoffs open on Monday.

"We're good. We've been consistent all year," Sutter said. "The key is being healthy and know what we're up against. There's a big storm coming here this week."

Sutter's point was for the Flames to not take for granted their first-round opponent, the Dallas Stars, who made the jump from ninth to seventh during a frantic final week in becoming the NHL's final team to clinch a playoff berth.

As storm warnings go, the playoffs have traditionally stirred up havoc for the top seeds in the West, in which only one division champ — Vegas in its first season of existence, 2018 — reached the Stanley Cup Final since the top-seeded Chicago Blackhawks won the title in 2013. The Blues finished fifth in the West when they won the Cup in 2019, the 2014 Cup-winning Los Angeles Kings were sixth, while Nashville was eighth when losing the championship to Pittsburgh in 2017.

This year's field doesn't include Vegas for the first time in franchise history, while Calgary and Colorado are the top two seeds, but with a recent history of early round playoff collapses. The Kings return to the playoff for the first time in four years.

And brace yourselves for Central Division rivals Minnesota and St. Louis meeting in a first-round matchup which has the makings of being a bruiser.

In Denver, the Central-Division champion Avalanche are seeking to put past frustrations behind a year after the Presidents' Trophy-winning team was knocked out in the second round by Vegas. Colorado, which hasn't advanced past the second round since losing the Western Conference final to Detroit in 2002, will open against eighth-seeded Nashville.

"It's not something that I'm thinking about anymore. It's a new group this year. We have new opportunities and a new challenge," defenseman Cale Makar said. "Obviously we know what's happened these past few years and we're driven to overcome the challenges that have hindered us in the past."

The Flames' playoff history is just as checkered. They've won just two of 10 playoff series since losing the Cup Final to Tampa Bay in 2004.

And it's no different for Edmonton, where the second-seeded Oilers advanced to the playoffs for just the fourth time since Connor McDavid's arrival in 2015, and coming off a four-game first-round dud against Winnipeg a year ago. Edmonton opens against the Kings.

"I think we've grown as a team and learned from that and found ways to get around that a little bit better this year," center Ryan Nugent-Hopkins said of how high-scoring Oilers managed just eight goals against Winnipeg. "Obviously, this is going to be a tough series, a tight-checking series, but we've got to find a way to get that extra one or just push a little harder."

Central Division

1 Colorado vs. 4 Nashville

The Avalanche finished 22 points ahead of the Predators in the standings, and could have an even more distinct edge if Nashville starter Juuse Sarros is unable to return after missing the final two regular season games with an undisclosed injury.

The Avalanche stumbled down the stretch in going 1-5-1, following a 9-0 win streak. Nashville dropped from seventh to eighth in the standings by blowing a 4-0 lead in a 5-4 loss to Arizona in its season finale.

"I'm proud of this team of how we fought, of how we battled down the stretch," Predators defenseman said Roman Josi said, following the loss. "This loss is disappointing, but we've got to turn the page, get some rest and get excited for the playoffs."

The matchup pits two of the NHL's top-scoring defensemen in Josi, who led all blueliners with 96 points, and Makar, who finished second with 86.

2 Minnesota vs. 3 St. Louis

Home-ice advantage could prove the difference in a series that was essentially set a month ago.

The Wild set a franchise record with 53 wins and 113 points, while finishing third in the NHL with a 31-8-2 home record. The Blues, who closed their season on a 14-2-2 run, won 23 road games ranked tied for ninth in the NHL.

St. Louis has had the edge over Minnesota by going 12-1-1 in its last 14 meetings, including a 6-4 win at Target Field in this year's Winter Classic. Seven of those wins, however, were decided by one goal, including five in overtime.

"You get overtime, it can kind of go either way," Wild defenseman Matt Dumba said. "Yeah we got some things to go over, and we'll be more than ready."

The Blues' feature a lineup that includes an NHL-leading nine 20-goal-scorers. The Wild addressed their goaltending at the trade deadline by acquiring playoff veteran Marc-Andre Fleury to accompany Max Talbot. Fleury has a 9-2 record since joining Minnesota, while Talbot is 13-0-3 in his past 17 appearances.

Pacific Division

1 Calgary vs. 4 Dallas

The teams meet in the playoff for second time in three years.

The Stars opened their run to the Stanley Cup Final in 2020 — which they lost to Tampa Bay — by defeating the Flames in six games of a first-round series played in the Edmonton COVID-19 bubble. This time, the Flames will have the support of their fans and home-ice advantage.

"I only played a game and a half that series, so personally, I try and forget about it," said Matthew Tkachuk, who finished second on the Flames with a career-best 104 points this season.

While Dallas reached the postseason for a fifth-straight year, Calgary is making just its fifth appearance since 2010.

"Going into this series, they've done it, we haven't, so that puts them at a big advantage," Tkachuk said of the Stars being playoff tested. "We've got to prove it."

The Stars are a veteran-laden team led by Joe Pavelski, who became just the 16th player 37 years or older to top 80 points. He finished with 81 points, including 27 goals.

2 Edmonton vs. 3 Los Angeles

Kings coach Todd McLellan faces his former team in the playoffs for the first time since being fired by Edmonton during the 2018-19 season. And the Oilers are now coached by McLellan's former assistant, Jay Woodcroft, who took over after Dave Tippett was fired in February.

The Oilers have surged by going 26-9-3 under Woodcroft to finish with 49 wins, their most since winning 50 in 1986-87.

Oilers forward Derek Ryan credits Woodcroft for his ability to enact problem-solving solutions.

"I think we were searching for that earlier in the year where things weren't going our way and it just felt like we were being told to work harder and be better," Ryan said. "We were just searching for more answers and I think Woody has done a good job of bringing those answers in."

The Kings' lineup features three healthy remaining members from their 2012 and 2014 Stanley Cup championship teams, including forward Dustin Brown, who announced he will retire after this season.

Forest Service research shows trees can save lives

By Connie Ho

USDA Natural Resources and Environment

Over the years, natural outdoor environments in cities have disappeared with ongoing urbanization. The City of Philadelphia's Greenworks Program is a plan to increase tree canopy, or green space. A team of Forest Service researchers set out to discover where increasing tree cover across Philadelphia would help more of the city's residents to live longer.

Michelle Kondo is a USDA Forest Service Northern Research Station scientist who studies the many benefits trees provide and the ways cities are investing in programs to expand tree cover.

"I have always been interested in how the design of cities and infrastructure can support both ecological and human health," she said.

Kondo's research addresses how different types of environments affect human health. She also explores the impact of municipal place and nature-based initiatives on preventing and reducing violence, injuries and disease.

She has found that people who have access, parks, gardens, trees and forests often enjoy an improved quality of life. A study of the association between self-reported health and the proximity of trees, grass and total vegetation near homes found significantly higher reporting of very good health for participants with high tree cover. There's even evidence suggesting that trees in particular, compared with other forms of urban vegetation, have a profound impact upon human health and wellbeing.

Kondo's work also examines issues related to environmental health and environmental justice, including the impact of innovative programs on public health and safety.

"Urban green space can be regarded as a preventive public health measure," she said. "They provide opportunities for improving mental health, increased social interaction and physical activity, and reduced stress, crime and violence."

In Philadelphia, her team found that 403 premature adult deaths – 3% of the city's total mortality – might be prevented each year if the city increased tree canopy cover to 30% by 2025. This analysis is one of the first to estimate the number of preventable deaths based on exposure to green spaces and its associated benefits, such as increased physical activity or reduced air pollution, noise, heat and crime. Before this study, no health impact assessment studies were available to provide policymakers with a comprehensive look at the health benefits of increasing the number of trees in urban areas.

The researchers determined that, to meet the city's 30 percent tree canopy cover target, tree planting programs will not only need to target managed spaces like streets and parks, but also residential yards and other privately-owned commercial, industrial and institutional spaces. The data indicated that the biggest benefits would occur within areas of lower socio-economic status, where residents currently live with lower tree canopy.

Increasing tree cover in these neighborhoods would not only promote public health, but also decrease health inequalities and increase environmental justice.

Based on these findings, the researchers note that policymakers are warranted in viewing urban tree canopy preservation and expansion as a tool for promoting health and reducing health-care-related costs.

This approach can be applied to other cities with greening initiatives as well.

"My colleagues and I have applied this method to cities across Europe," said Kondo. "I would also like to scale this study up to more cities across the U.S."

Large or small, young or old, trees remain a vital factor toward human health, according to the forestry service.

Rural Bedford County is graced with trees of green.

The life of a tree or its purpose is certainly undetermined by humans.

Roads carved out with trees are those best traveled.

Trees and streams are natural landscapes for rural homeowners in Bedford County.

Farms depend on tree life for many reasons.

Delicious and simple for a happy Mother's Day

Mother's Day

O.K. some folks just can't top Mom when it comes to cooking. Let's just agree on that.

If you ask most moms, they just want to spend time with their family on Mother's Day. It really is the thought that counts.

So, we're making it really simple for you. We have provided an easy to whip up Sangria recipe and one for an easy sandwich.

Everyone should have a go-to sangria recipe in his or her cocktail repertoire. Sangria, when done right, can be a highly refreshing punch that is at home any time of the year.

Sangria can be enjoyed on its own and sipped on a lazy, sunny afternoon, or paired with a delicious meal. Sangria recipes also can be changed according to the mixologist's desired flavor profile.

The goal is to avoid making sangria too sweet, which is why recipes often feature a variety of tart fruits and fresh herbs.

This recipe for "Aprium® Sangria" from "Edible Seattle: The Cookbook" (Sterling Epicure) by Jill Lightner features sour cherries and Apriums®, which are an apricot-plum hybrid. (Metro.)

Apriums come in various colors and flavors. This sangria offers floral notes and sweetness, but also a touch of tartness from the cherries. When selecting a Sauvignon Blanc to mix in, opt for one that is not too sweet or acidic.

Aprium® Sangria

Metro
Serves 6

- 3/4 C. pitted sour cherries
- 3/4 C. sugar
- 2 C. vodka
- 8 apriums or plumcots peeled, pitted and diced
- 1 (750 ml) bottle Sauvignon Blanc
- 3 (12 oz.) bottles dry cucumber soda

1. In a small saucepan over medium heat, combine the cherries and sugar, stirring and pressing the fruit to extract the juice and dissolve the sugar. Remove from the heat as soon as all the sugar is dissolved and let cool. Combine the cherries and vodka in a small pitcher and refrigerate overnight.

2. The next day, strain out the cherries, pressing the fruit firmly to extract plenty of juice. In a large pitcher, gently blend the cherry-flavored vodka with the apriums, then slowly pour in the bottle of Sauvignon Blanc, stirring gently. Chill for at least 3 hours.

3. To serve, add a few ice cubes to a highball glass and fill the glass two-thirds of the way with sangria, using a spoon if necessary to make sure each glass has a generous serving of fruit. Top up with dry cucumber soda and gently stir to combine.

Grilled Cheese Harvest Sandwich

(Dairy Alliance)

Placing cheese on both slices of bread works as a "glue" to keep the ham and apple slices tucked neatly inside. Try using a hearty, multigrain bread with flax seeds to give this sandwich a nutty flavor.

Servings: 1

- 2 slices multigrain bread
- 2 slices white Cheddar cheese
- 2 slices yellow Cheddar cheese
- 2 slices Black Forest ham, thinly sliced
- 10-12 apple slices, very thinly sliced (about 1/4 of a medium apple)
- 1 tsp. Dijon mustard, divided
- 1 Tbsp. butter, softened

Heat a nonstick or cast-iron skillet over medium heat. Spread Dijon mustard evenly on each slice of bread, then place 2 slices of white Cheddar on one slice. Place ham on top of cheese, distributing evenly. Add apple slices on top of ham layer, then finish with yellow Cheddar and remaining slice of bread. Spread top of bread with softened butter and place that side down in heated pan. Cook for approximately 4 minutes (if necessary, turn the heat down so the bread doesn't burn). While sandwich is cooking, spread remaining softened butter on top of bread. Flip sandwich over and cook another 3-4 minutes or until lightly browned.

Being the same property conveyed to Philip Barlie, an unmarried person, and Lori Deuel, an unmarried person, by Warranty Deed from Richard E. Harris, Sr. and wife, Sharon M. Harris, dated December 20, 2007, of record at Deed Book 287, page 554, Register's Office of Bedford County, Tennessee. This conveyance is subject to any and all existing easements and restrictions of record.

The proceeds derived from the sale of the property will be applied as provided for in said Deed of Trust. Said Deed of Trust is made a part hereof as if copied verbatim herein.

First civilians leave Mariupol steel plant; hundreds remain

By CARA ANNA and INNA VARENYTSIA Associated Press

ZAPORIZHZHIA, Ukraine — The first civilians evacuated from the bombed-out steel plant that has become the last stronghold of Ukrainian fighters in Mariupol slowly made their way toward safety Monday, as others who managed to escape the city described terrifying weeks of bombardment and deprivation.

More than 100 civilians — including elderly women and mothers with small children — left the sprawling, rubble-strewn Azovstal steel mill on Sunday and set out in buses and ambulances for the Ukrainian-controlled city of Zaporizhzhia, about 140 miles (230 kilometers) to the northwest, according to authorities and video released by the two sides.

Mariupol Deputy Mayor Sergei Orlov told the BBC that the evacuees were making slow progress and would probably not arrive on Monday as hoped for.

At least some of them were apparently taken to a village controlled by Russia-backed separatists. The Russian military said that some chose to stay in separatist areas, while dozens left for Ukrainian-held territory.

In the past, Ukraine has accused Moscow's troops of taking civilians against their will to Russia. Russia has denied it.

Orlov said high-level negotiations were underway among Ukraine, Russia and international organizations on more evacuations.

The steel-plant evacuation, if successful, would represent rare progress in easing the human cost of the almost 10-week war, which has caused particular suffering in Mariupol. Previous attempts to open safe corridors out of the southern port city and other places have broken down, with Ukrainian officials accusing Russian forces of shooting and shelling along agreed-on evacuation routes.

Before the weekend evacuation, overseen by the United Nations and the Red Cross during a brief cease-fire around the steelworks, about 1,000 civilians were believed to be in the plant, along with an estimated 2,000 Ukrainian defenders. Russia has demanded that the fighters surrender; they have refused.

As many as 100,000 people overall may still be in Mariupol, which had a prewar population of more than 400,000. Russian forces have pounded much of the city to rubble, trapping civilians with little food, water, heat or medicine.

Some Mariupol residents got out of the city on their own, by way of often damaged private cars.

As sunset approached, Mariupol resident Yaroslav Dmytryshyn rattled up to a reception center in Zaporizhzhia in a car with a back seat full of youngsters and two signs taped to the back window: "Children" and "Little ones."

"I can't believe we survived," he said, looking worn but in good spirits over their safe arrival after two days on the road.

"There is no Mariupol whatsoever," he said. "Someone needs to rebuild it, and it will take millions of tons of gold." He said they lived just across the railroad tracks from the steel plant. "Ruined," he said. "The factory is gone completely."

Anastasiia Dembytska, who took advantage of the cease-fire to leave with her daughter, nephew and dog, said her family survived by cooking on a makeshift stove and drinking well water. She said she could see the steelworks from her window, when she dared to look out.

"We could see the rockets flying" and clouds of smoke over the plant, she said.

In other developments, European Union energy ministers met Monday to discuss new sanctions against the Kremlin, which could include restrictions on Russian oil. But some Russia-dependent members of the 27-nation bloc, including Hungary and Slovakia, are wary of taking tough action.

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy said he hoped more people would be able to leave Mariupol in an organized evacuation on Monday. The city council told residents wanting to leave to gather at a shopping mall to wait for buses.
