The first groundbreaking for Duksan Electera of America, Inc. plant was held Wednesday at its future location on Frank Martin Road at the 231 North Industrial Park.

It was a clear, windy, day for dozens of Shelbyville City, Bedford County, and Tennessee State representatives to show their support for the new electrolyte manufacturer. This has been a highly anticipated development for Shelbyville and Bedford County for about a year.

Duksan Electera was formerly coined "Project Cardinal" by the Shelbyville-Bedford Partnership. Duksan Electera was founded in 2021 as a subsidiary of Duksan Technopia Co., Ltd., and is part of the Duksan Group, a Republic of Korea-based advanced material manufacturer.

"We are confident that Duksan Electera will be a company that the state of Tennessee will be proud of," said president Suwan Lee. "You all know the demand for electronic vehicles is skyrocketing due to climate

Longview's PUD battle continues

County planning gives thumbs up

By ZOË HAGGARD zhaggard@t-g.com

Bedford County Planning Commission voted on a favorable recommendation for the site plan of Landmark Homes of Tennessee's proposed planned unit development (PUD) on Longview Road in Unionville. Even though the commission passed a favorable recommendation, many of the members said they had "heavy hearts," agreeing the PUD would be in the wrong area.

Planning Commission Chair Kennon Threet said, "I've got that heavy heart, but I know what has to be done. We've done what has to be done."

Planning commissioner Stephen Feldhaus, who voted yes, said, "I think this is the wrong location for the development... but if I vote based on my opinion, that I don't like the location, I've opened this body up to a lawsuit."

Bedford County Zoning Director Chris White explains, "At this stage, if they [the developers] meet all the criteria in the book, the commission really doesn't have a choice but to recommend it. That's what the rules say...At this level, it's a very objective process."

"One of the things we can't do is tell you, 'you can't develop it . . . ,' he said. We have to create a process, make it fair.

and has waste disposal areas in Unionville, was the only planning commissioner to vote no. "It's not comparable to the rest of the neighborhood... We seem to fail to discuss if it should even be there or not," he said.

Approval for the rezoning of the $50 million PUD first has to go through the County rules and legislative committee, which will meet 5 p.m. Oct. 18 in the community room in Bedford County Courthouse. It will go to the Board of Commissioners for a final vote. Commission will vote and meet on Nov. 8 at 7 p.m. at the Bedford County Courthouse and will host a public hearing before the final vote. Citizens' comments are then accepted.

The proposed R-1 PUD will be spread over 114 acres. After several study sessions with the planning commission, Landmark Homes agreed to decrease their lots per acre density from 127 to 109 lots. They have also increased the amount of open space.

Each home will be 1,800 square feet with a minimum of three bedrooms. They will be made of brick and stone and have side entry garages. Sidewalks will also be constructed.

Floods trap many in Florida as Ian heads to South Carolina

By ADRIANA GOMEZ-LICON
Associated Press

PUNTA GORDA, Fla. — Rescue crews piloted boats and waded through flooded streets Thursday to save thousands of Floridians trapped after Hurricane Ian destroyed homes and businesses and left millions in the dark.

The devastation began to come into focus a day after Ian made landfall in Florida as one of the strongest hurricanes ever to hit the U.S. The storm flooded homes on both the state's coasts, cut off the only bridge to a barrier island, destroyed a historic waterfront pier and knocked out electricity to 2.67 million Florida homes and businesses — nearly a quarter of utility customers. At least one man was confirmed dead.

Aerial photos from the Fort Myers area, a few miles west of where Ian struck land, showed homes ripped from their slabs and deposited among shredded wreckage. Businesses near the beach were completely razed, leaving just twisted debris. Broken docks floated at odd angles beside damaged boats, and fires smoldered on lots where houses once stood.]

"We've never seen storm surge of this magnitude," Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis told a news conference. "The amount of water that's been rising, and will likely continue to rise today even as the storm is passing, is basically a 500-year flooding event."

Though downgraded to a tropical storm by Thursday morning, the National Hurricane Center said storm surge and flooding rains remained a threat as Ian crept across the Florida peninsula and emerged in the Atlantic Ocean north of Cape Canaveral. Forecasters predicted Ian would regain strength while turning northward.

A hurricane warning was issued for the South Carolina coast, where the storm was expected to again make landfall.

Sheriffs in southwest Florida said 911 centers were inundated by thousands of stranded callers, some with life-threatening emergencies. The U.S. Coast Guard began rescue efforts hours before daybreak on barrier islands near where Ian struck, DeSantis said. More than 800 members of federal urban search-and-rescue teams were also in the area.

In the Orlando area, Orange County firefighters used boats to reach people in a flooded neighborhood. A photo the department posted on Twitter showed one firefighter carrying someone in his arms through knee-deep water. At an area nursing home, patients were carried on stretchers across floodwaters to a waiting bus.

Among those rescued was Joseph Agboona. "We were happy to get out," he said after grabbing two bags of possessions when water rose to the windows in his Orlando home. "It was very, very bad."

In Fort Myers, Valerie Bartley's family spent desperate hours holding a dining room table against their patio door, fearing the storm raging outside "was tearing our house apart."

"I was terrified," Bartley said. "What we heard was the shingles and debris from everything in the neighborhood hitting our house."

The storm ripped away patio screens and snapped a palm tree in the yard, Bartley said, but left the roof intact and her family unharmed.

Despite utter devastation in parts of Fort Myers, some people left shelters to return home Thursday afternoon. Long lines formed at gas stations and a Home Depot opened, letting in a few customers at a time.

Frank Pino was near the back of the line, with about 100 people in front of him.

"I hope they leave something," Pino said, "because I need almost everything."

Authorities confirmed at least one Florida death — a 72-year-old man in Deltona who fell into a canal while change and increasing environmental concerns. And its market is expected to grow significantly... Duksan Electera will work diligently to meet this demand."

Gov. Bill Lee commented, "You have created an environment in this community that is attractive to companies like Duksan. And the government is not what creates opportunities in a community. It's the people. And you have done this."

The governor continued, "Tennessee is America at its finest. And this spot right here, what's happening in this community as represented by this announcement, is an example of America at its finest." The company is investing $95 million in the plant and will offer 100 jobs. But according to Tennessee Department of Economic and Community Development (TNECD) Commissioner Stuart McWhorter, this is just the beginning.

"The idea is they'll be recruiting locally, which is why it's so important that we're partnering with TCAT [Tennessee College of Applied Technology] or the community colleges or MTSU to make sure that we continue to work closely with the schools and develop the workforce because there will be more opportunities than just the 100 jobs that were announced. Our hope is that it will grow," McWhorter told the Times-Gazette.

McWhorter said a lot of these companies pick location based on criteria—and workforce is one of those. "That is one of the primary reasons why they are here is because of the workforce readiness," he said.

But one of the key reasons why a South Korean company is coming to a place like Shelbyville is for supply chain reasons. McWhorter explains, "The trend right now is all these manufacturers are trying to shorten the supply chain and what that means to me is they want to grow domestically in the United States, or at least in North America. Duksan is one of those companies."

He added that there are a lot of companies in South Korea that are looking to expand overseas because they're already a supplier to the major auto-manufacturers. "The fact that we have almost four in Tennessee makes it an attractive state," McWhorter said.

For example, there's the Ford Blue Oval plant in Stanton and Nissan in Smyrna. And there will also be an EV charging plant built in Lebanon over the next 5 years. He said he thinks more and more American companies will also be expanding as well.

"But right now, because of where the electric vehicle industry is, so much of it started overseas...but it's starting to migrate to the United States," he said. As for the supply chain for building the multi-million-dollar plant, McWhorter said they won't know how it will all go until the start building.

"There are some areas that tend to be a challenge around material, labor . . . We're hearing it's getting better," he said.

Tennessee is one of the fastest growing states in Southeastern United States. Shelbyville-Bedford Partnership CEO Shane Hooper said, "I think Bedford County is ready. And I think not only is Bedford County ready, but Bedford County is past due. It's time for us to move forward and really participate in job growth in Tennessee...Yes, there will be some challenges moving forward on some things. It's nothing we can't work together and overcome."

The plant is expected to open in a year or year and a half. And it's safe to say, Bedford County is making history with serving as an international company's first American location.

Jason Boyette, a Thomas Magnet School third grade science and social studies teacher and county commissioner, said he hopes to show his students how important this event is. They took a field trip to the groundbreaking event Wednesday.

Boyette said they talked with the students about the economy and how this industry will bring a lot of high-paying jobs here. "We thought it would be kind of cool to have the future of Bedford County here. You guys may be working here in 20 years, you never know," Boyette stated to his students.

start in the mid $300,000s and go into the $500,000s. Many Unionville residents showed up at Tuesday's meeting to voice their concerns. Several residents have started the Facebook page "Save the country life in Unionville."

The site plan also includes construction of a playground for the residents, which has Unionville mother Kayla Brown Walls concerned since her children won't be able to have access to these amenities. Forty-year Unionville resident Dolores Chester said, "I worry about this development looking like a mini, self-contained community that plopped down in the middle of a rural area."

Chester added how she was concerned over roads and how they are in "disrepair." This could impair emergency personnel, especially since the fire station is volunteer based, she said.

She is also concerned about water runoff. "I know they're saying detention ponds but I know it won't handle that amount of water when you start changing the contour of the land....and we already have low water pressure in the Longview area,"

Chester said.

Long-time resident Eddie Stacey added, "This is just the beginning of what's going to happen to Bedford County."

Resident Carl Brown said, "I agree that this PUD system might be more organized than what they will build if y'all don't approve this. But if you allow them to do this, it's going to open up a whole new can of worms."

Jessica Brown, Carl's wife, also expressed concern over possible increased traffic. She explained there's a lot of farm equipment that travels those roads. "I am terrified that someone is going to get killed on this road. So, bringing in this subdivision—at least two cars per house—what is that going to do to our roads?"

County officials weigh in Bedford County Highway Superintendent Mark Clanton attended Tuesday's meeting to address some of these concerns. "We will do everything we can to make it work for everyone," said Clanton. He explained that there will be an additional 10-foot right-of-way added to Longview Road and Davis Lane. As traffic increases in the future, Clanton said the developers have agreed to put in a turning lane or widen the road when necessary. He said the added 200 or so cars won't expedite the deterioration of the roads at a quick pace.

Clanton also explained that the roads within the PUD will be the responsibility of the developers and funded by the HOA fees of the residents.

Bedford County Schools Superintendent Tammy Garrett was also present to address concerns about the influx of students that many houses could bring. Jeff Sweeney, local builder and former county commissioner, asked if there was enough capacity at the existing schools to add something like 200 students.

Garrett said the new wing at Community High School, which the proposed PUD is zoned for, will create a 1,000-student capacity in the fall of 2023. Community currently has 580 students. She said there are four to five "empty rooms" at the middle school, while at the elementary school there is only one portable in use.

The superintendent added that they are in the process of designing the new elementary school, which once rezoning takes place, could alleviate any overcrowding in the schools.

Director White added, "We talk about saving the farmland . . . about stormwater. The PUD is just a modern tool for development that creates a more efficient use of the land. The very thing you all want, the PUD does."

White said the planning commission is aware of water issues on Longview Road. But, PUD developers would be required to engineer how to properly retain stormwater and release it slowly.

Jeff Sweeney, owner of Sweeney Construction, addressed some of the residents' water concerns, saying, "A STEP system is a great system for sewer. I've had them in for 20 years in developments we've done in the past."

He added, "The developer is held to a very high standard. They have to put up a lot of bonds. They have to do things in certain phases or they can't continue the development...This is a long-term commitment in the community from the developer."

Commissioner Linda Yockey, who sits on the planning commission, said, "At least with the zoning document—and it's not perfect—we have established a set of rules and these rules tell this board whether to vote yes or no."

Lizzie Peoples enters City mayoral race

Lizzie M. Peoples has announced her candidacy for Shelbyville mayor. The City election is set for Nov. 8, with early voting to begin Oct. 19.

Peoples is a native of Marshall County and a graduate of Marshall County High School. She attended Motlow State Community College and the Area Vocational School (now Tennessee College of Applied Technology-Shelbyville.) Peoples majored in business administration with a concentration in bookkeeping. She also attended Pensacola Christian College while she taught preschool for Victory Baptist Academy in Shelbyville.

In 2012, she retired from Jostens, where she served on the Jostens Community Awareness Representative (JCAR) committee—one which awards grant money to local schools, colleges and organizations.

Peoples is a past Bedford County Board of Education member and is currently a substitute teacher for Bedford County School System. Other local government involvement includes serving on the City Beer Board and the ADA Board.

Peoples was a member of the Kiwanis Club. She also serves her community with the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR.)

Active members of Victory Baptist, Peoples and husband, Clyde, have been married for 57 years. They have 2 daughters, Brenda and Tracie—both graduates of Shelbyville Central High School and college graduates. Peoples said her greatest accomplishments in her life, in addition to her daughters, are her 3 grandchildren—two twins who are juniors at Middle Tennessee State University and one grandchild who is currently a sophomore at Cascade High School.

Lizzie M. Peoples

When asked why she's running in the Nov. 8 election, she responded, "I want to work to continue the growth of our city that the current administration has begun. Our current city mayor and City Council have worked tirelessly to bring in new industry and I want to pick up that gauntlet and carry it further for our children to grow up in a great city. The relationship between City and County mayors is an important aspect for this growth."

Peoples said she believes that elected officials need to be "good stewards of taxpayer money." Government grants have been written and awarded for millions to the City of Shelbyville, she explained.

She added, "I want to follow that leadership and work to write grants for the City of Shelbyville. Any grant money awarded saves the taxpayer dollars and affords the City Council the ability to wisely allocate funds."

Peoples said it is the responsibility of the Shelbyville mayor and City Council to work efficiently for all citizens. "Due to the current inflation in our country, it is more important than ever for our City leadership to wisely spend taxpayer dollars and I will work hard to ensure our local government runs as fiscally conservative as possible."

Helping the elderly out of cars

Dear Heloise:
I've been helping my 91-year-old mother who has mobility issues. Whenever we went somewhere, she would have a hard time getting in and out of my car, which has plush upholstery, but found it much easier to enter my brother's car, which has leather upholstery. On the leather, she could easily slide in and pivot from a side-facing position to a front-facing position in the passenger seat.

LOUD TV

Dear Heloise: First, I want to say that although I am also a senior citizen, I have very good hearing. I agree with the letter in your column regarding all the very loud "music" that is on TV these days and how it overruns what is actually on the program. I've noticed it on several sports programs, too, but also on programs like Wheel of Fortune. When Pat Sajak first comes on, he always makes a comment, but I cannot understand what he's saying because the "background" music is so overpowering. The program producers should take heed of this. Dear Heloise: As an avid reader of your column, I've seen practical gift suggestions from fire extinguishers to keeping baking soda handy, as well as other "plan B" savers of the day.

One of my favorite housewarming (or for anytime) gifts is to give homeowners or renters a security key box.

The boxes are super easy to mount, and a spare key can be kept there, easily accessible if needed. We often use our garage door opener to get into the house. But, if the electricity is temporarily out, at least you'll have a way to get in the front door.

TENT REVIVAL SUNDAY, OCT. 2 CELEBRATION GROUNDS

Local pastor Jay Pope shares testimony

By DAWN HANKINS
dhankins@t-g.com

A ministry of hope

Editor's note: This is the last in a series of articles about the upcoming tent revival following this weekend's American Mule Show at the Celebration grounds.

Jay Pope played sports as a teen in Shelbyville. He's had his ups and downs in life. Fast forward 20 plus years, he's about to hold a community-wide tent revival at the Celebration grounds.

Perhaps it's not what he had originally envisioned for his life. But, he believes in hindsight, it's what God has called him and his family to do for this community. His family now serves together at Kingdom Cultivation Ministry on Kingree Road.

He's lived a good life, he preaches. He explains he was first saved and baptized, as a believer in Christ Jesus, when his three daughters were young. His son-in-laws later followed him into ministry with no persuasion on his part. (That means something to a Christian father of three daughters.)

The 59-year-old also serves as a pastor and counselor in 2022 to those suffering from addiction. He tells them not to be ashamed of their testimonies, giving his own first.

In 2003, he left a job with a local factory after 20 years of personal investment. It was then that he started his best walk with God, he tells those in his support group.

"It's God who does the healing," the local pastor says. "It's when we begin to open up that we receive."

In 2022, he's finding that many people, sadly, are turning their backs on The Gospel. He prays for them, as they turn away, he says.

"Pastor Jay," as he's best known now, will be preaching God's Word at a tent revival on Sunday at the Celebration grounds. The service is free and open, he says, to all willing to come and listen.

"I think my main thing right now . . . just teaching Biblical truth and how to stand on that."

His entire family is by his side in ministry. He proudly notes that he's got teachers, Christian authors and prayer warriors right in his immediate family.

"The main thing that we're really bringing [is that] we're coming piggy back on the Mule and Bluegrass Show." There's ministry there, he notes.

Pope says he witnessed last year how such community ministry can change lives. And in 2021, it wasn't even as much of an organized worship event, he says.

He speaks of a man named "Cowboy Aaron," who he says was "led back to the Lord" following the 2021 mule show. The cowboy is planned to be in attendance Sunday.

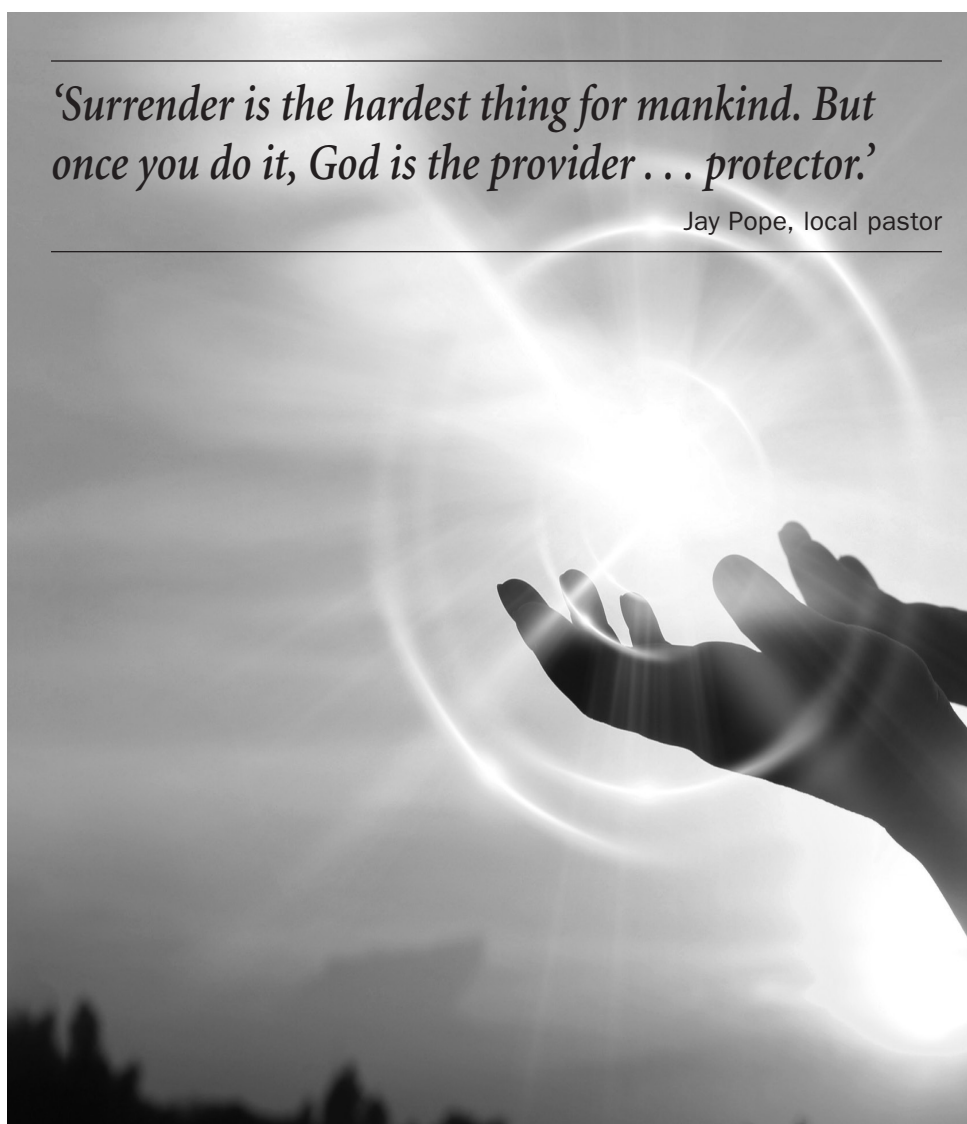

Pope notes that Sunday worship begins under the tent at 11 a.m. The ministry team will take a break from about 1 to 5 p.m. Everyone will come back for more worship and fellowship at 5 p.m. It's all a free event.

He suggests that "revival" is just a good time for people to "slow down and hear God's voice." He is, however, preparing wading pools for baptisms.

"We don't know if this ends on Sunday night," explains Pope. What he means is, there may be a lot of prayer requests and salvation needs that extend beyond his allotted time on the TWHNC grounds. "Our time will be over at the horse show grounds

'Surrender is the hardest thing for mankind. But once you do it, God is the provider . . . protector.'

Jay Pope, local pastor

Sunday but we will move the tent."

The local pastor believes this community is in a tough season—a time of repentance therefore is at hand. "It's time to say, 'Hey God, this is me, what do you want to do with my life?'"

His son-in-law, Josh Young, says the prayer warriors are anticipating "The Real God" showing up, just like He did in Biblical times."

"The scriptures are real and they show up in our lives, because God is real," advises Young.

It's a generational thing

Pope helps his grandson with his local landscaping business. He's also a farmer. So he has a lot of community contact.

Another thing God has orchestrated, he notes. Being out in the community mowing a lot of yards, perhaps he's more observant of how busy people are these days.

He observes of certain Shelbyville neighborhoods, "No one's home. There are no shades up. There's no light coming through the house. It's like everybody works, comes home, keeps the shades down and turns the tube on."

But he says don't take his word for the fact that the community is need of revival. He explains how he invited a pretty well-known evangelist to come here once. Pope says he was shocked when the evangelist remarked, "Pastor Jay, I'm glad it's your town, not mine. You guys have got all these churches, but where is the love?"

Pope says he's not trying to prosthetize, that is, draw out people from their home churches through this event. But his research over the years does show, he says, that about only half of the population actually attends church on a regular basis. He says in-house worship attendance has especially fallen off since the pandemic.

He hopes to have a great attendance at the revival from people from all denominations and walks of life. "It doesn't matter where you go . . . denomination. Come and fellowship with us. Carry the message back to your church. Encourage people. Just enjoy Jesus. I am having a ball with it!"

He adds that churches aren't doing anything wrong, per say, but he feels community outreach could be a little more "deep and wide" as the kids' church song goes.

Family ministry

Pope's son-in-law, Josh Young, said many people struggle these days with what he calls the "I mentality." "I think so many times, we think we can change . . . fix things ourselves."

He adds also that we really can't forgive others without Jesus' love. But Jesus inside of a person allows a person to easily forgive, according to Young.

"He has forgiven us. Now, we're really experiencing that. I love the scripture 'Taste and see that the Lord is good . . . ' because once you've tasted and partook in something, you're going to want to go back."

Young explains how God is so much bigger than the dark clouds which might hang over this city, county and world. So, the ministry team is busy inviting people to come Sunday, "just as they are."

A local educator, Young advises, "This is all about generations. We're talking about turns for generations."

What is a changed life?

Pope certainly realizes that a changed life can sometimes be a slow process. But he is living witness that it's doable for those with the desire. "Surrender is the hardest thing for mankind. But once you do it, He's your provider . . . protector."

When talking with others, "Pastor Jay" often says, "All my life I knew He was real. But when I had my encounters with Him . . . where I felt Him loving me. I knew He loved me. I knew He had me wrapped in his arms. I knew I was going to be OK, in Him. It was like walking on a cloud. I haven't come down yet! I don't want to come down."

A Sweet Treat for Fall

(Culinary.net) Fall is about cooler weather, football, sweaters and warm, delicious food. It's about gathering around the table with loved ones to enjoy a snack or meal and making memories that will last a lifetime. As the weather changes, there are few better places to be than the kitchen, whipping up something amazing for all who are gathered.

This season, when you're craving something sweet, try this Pumpkin Bread with Chocolate Chips. It's rich with lots of semi-sweet chocolate chips but also has a prominent pumpkin flavor that is hard to resist.

This recipe is easy to make and provides an opportunity to get the little ones involved in the kitchen. For example, they can stir and pour those yummy chocolate chips into the batter.

Made start to finish in less than an hour, this dessert gives you more time to rake leaves, carve pumpkins and cuddle up by the fireplace.

It can be a perfect treat for get-togethers from parties and events to just a couple friends enjoying each other's company.

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month

For women 40 and older, and for those with a family history of breast cancer, the importance of having regular screening mammograms cannot be overstated. That's why it's important to have access to advanced imaging technology called digital breast tomosynthesis, or 3D mammography—available right here at Vanderbilt Bedford Hospital.

With 3D mammography, doctors can see clearer radiology images and detect breast cancer early, which can result in less-aggressive treatment options and better outcomes.

Scheduling a screening mammogram does not require a doctor's order, but results must go to your provider.

To make an appointment, please call 931-685-5433.

Musings and Memories

Look to the heavens for evidence God exists

A man goes out into the mountains one morning, and climbs up on one of the tallest peaks, and looks out into the valleys and into the beyond, and he says, "Okay, God, show me that you're real! Show me a sign." And he stands there all day, looking out over the vastness of the creation, at the beauty of nature.

The sun rises in the turquoise sky. Wisps of white swirl across the sky's palette. At noon the sun warms him directly overhead.

The birds sing their songs, the butterflies flit through the meadows, and the bees go from flower to flower collecting pollen.

And the man stands there all day waiting for a sign from God, something to prove that He is real.

As the day wears on, the sun begins to slowly lower itself into the west, and the sky turns into a beautiful cascade of colors that ripple over the horizon.

And the man stands there waiting for God to show him a sign that He is real.

The sun seems to fall beyond the distant mountains, and the sky darkens, and it is soon filled with millions of stars that partner with the moon to illuminate the night sky.

And still the man stands there gazing up at the vastness of the heavens, and waits for a sign from God.

He stands there all night long, and listens to the many sounds of creatures in the forest and hills that surround him.

Early the next morning he is still standing there as light begins to break over the horizon to the east.

He watches as the sky begins to brighten and a rainbow of colors welcomes the light of the sun as it rises.

And he waits for a sign from God.

"God, show me that you are real!" he cries as the sun rises in the east, and another day begins.

He stands, and stands, and finally, he gives up, and he goes down, and slowly makes his way home.

All the time grumbling, "I knew God wasn't real."

In the beautiful poetry of Psalm 19, we read, "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the skies announce what his hands have made."

2 Day after day they tell the story; night after night they tell it again.

3 They have no speech or words; they have no voice to be heard.

Local reader captures Aviation Day Airport sponsors annual event

By DAWN HANKINS
dhankins@t-g.com

Folks from all walks of life and different ages went out Saturday for Shelbyville Municipal Airport's annual Aviation Day. From Blue Raiders to the U.S. Air Force, flying was the central theme.

But let's be real. It was about the planes!

There seemed to be colors, shapes and sizes of planes for everyone. Lots of children, and adults, took a helicopter ride.

Most remarked it was well worth the $25. One person said,

"What an experience!"

So today, we salute aviation in a big way. We've even included an idea inside for an "Aviation Day" party.

The photos on this page are by local photographer Leandra Habel. See more airport photos inside.

My Take

Come alive

"Don't ask what the world needs. Ask what makes you come alive and go do it. Because what the world needs is people who have come alive."

Howard Thurman, a philosopher, educator and theologian uttered those words many years ago. They have always had meaning, but it seems to me to be even more important today to pause and consider his wisdom.

So many people are having trouble discovering what makes them come alive. More and more people seem just simply to exist. They just want enough to get by. Just let them sit and watch the world go by. How sad.

The new concept among workers is "quiet quitting." It is defined in many ways but what it boils down to is someone is still working but is not going to do more than the bare minimum. What happened to the concept of doing your best no matter what you are doing.

Tik Tok, the social media platform that allowed someone to propose the marinating of chicken in Nyquil, provided the idea of "quiet quitting" through a user's video. I have said in this column before that the Internet is really "the antichrist" and every day social media lends credence to my belief.

Those who are "quiet quitting" or simply not wanting to work are people who have not found a job that makes them "come alive" as Thurman advocates.

I understand not every job can be exciting or truly rewarding. I have ample respect for those willing to do the mundane and often thankless tasks that keep the world moving.

What I can't understand is there are people with the talent and intellect to do important things in their lives who are not willing to do what is necessary to "come alive." Their lack of motivation astounds and confuses me.

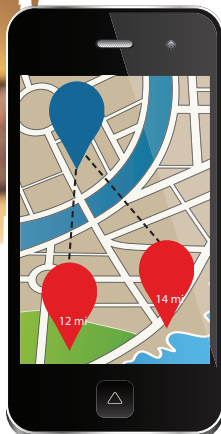

In a New York Times article by Alyson Krueger published August 23, 2022, she quotes Matt Spielman the author of the book "Influencing Points: How to Work and Live With Purpose".

Spielman told Krueger he understands why some people may want to scale back at work if they "are burnt out, at the end of his or her rope or having personal issues."

But he adds in the article that "quiet quitting prevents people from finding jobs they love, which provide them with a sense of meaning and belonging."

No matter what you are doing with your life give it all you have. If you love

Are you cool with surveillance cameras?

At my day job, we recently underwent a major upgrade of our security cameras.

Yes, shoplifting has gotten bad enough and technology has gotten good enough that we have made this major investment.

Retailers have come to the sad realization that they face losses both from the traditional lowlife thieves and the thrill-seeking youngsters who rationalize, "Hey, the store has insurance!"

(Apparently these youngsters have seen enough neighbors with wheelbarrows of free zucchini to assume that insurance agents are roaming the countryside insisting, "Premiums? Shucks, we don't need any premiums. Our assets were just going to waste!")

When I worked in a convenience market during high school, we used the low-tech ancestor of a surveillance camera: a big mirror hanging from the ceiling at a jaunty angle, ostensibly so the cashier could monitor suspicious activity. (In those hippie-phobic days, my boss considered "lingering more than two seconds on the personal hygiene aisle" to be suspicious activity.)

It occurred to me that shoplifters could just as easily use the mirror to determine when the cashier was distracted. I became increasingly distracted when the old country song lyrics "I was looking back to see if you were looking back to see if I was looking back to see if you were looking back at me" lodged in my head.

I experienced an even earlier brush with surveillance (or faux surveillance) when I was in elementary school and desperately needed to use the restroom at my father's office. Some comedian wannabe had placed a "Smile! You're on 'Candid Camera'!" sticker smackdab on the inside of the door. Luckily, I was later able to BUY a giant-size Ex-Lax instead of shoplifting one.

I'm not sure how much the presence of cameras deters thieves, but the cameras can make employees self-conscious and inclined to repress normal habits.

The Jaws of Life are often required to rescue workers who indulge their pent-up urges while driving home. ("You wouldn't believe how much nose-picking and jock itch-scratching one human can do in the split-second after the air-bag activates!")

Surveillance plans vary widely in accessibility, storage capacity and resolution. ("Are you SURE the suspect didn't bear a striking resemblance to your baby's six-week sonogram?")

You've probably seen stories about New York City grocers having to keep cans of SPAM (!) under lock and key. I understand that other items soon to be locked up nationwide are religious tracts, jury duty notices, "honey do" lists and kale fruitcake.

Of course, much of the shoplifting is caused by soft-on-crime DAs and judges. Granted, you can no longer refer to it as "revolving-door justice," because the thieves usually take the revolving door as well!

Cities that decide not to prosecute thefts under $1,000 also exacerbate the problem, although a few dummies still wind up serving jail time. ("Okay, my understanding of math in school made me think two $650 flatscreen TVs would total less than $1,000. But at least I grasped the important part, about the store once allowing a man to hold a door open for a woman!")

Tyrades

I'm up late writing this, so I'm tempted to call in sick tomorrow. But then a little voice asks, "What? And give up SHOWBIZ?"

I'm sure my guardian angel will get me to work safely. Guardian angel? That opens another privacy can of worms! Talk about incriminating images stored in the cloud!

4 But their message goes out through all the world; their words go everywhere on earth. The sky is like a home for the sun.

5 The sun comes out like a bridegroom from his bedroom.

It rejoices like an athlete eager to run a race.

6 The sun rises at one end of the sky and follows its path to the other end. Nothing hides from its heat And to the man in the above story, and to skeptics everywhere, verse 1 of Psalm 19 says, “The heavens declare the glory of God, and the skies announce what his hands have made.”

How a man or woman can look at the beauty of God’s creation, and not believe that there is a God is beyond me.

I have seen the golden wheat fields on the prairies of North Dakota gently rippling in the breezes of the northern plains, and I thanked God for allowing me to see His creation.

From a young age I’ve gazed upon the Northern Lights, the Aurora Borealis, and thanked God for His creativity as the beauty of the heavens were on grand display. I remember lying on the grass in my backyard with the night breeze sweeping over me as the colors danced across the sky. I knew that God was behind that grand display.

I remember the first time I saw the Rocky Mountains, and I stood amazed at their grandeur ... the high snow-tipped peaks and the low river valleys ... the greys and the greens and the browns against the blue of the wide expanse of sky. And I knew that God was behind the formation of it all.

As I drive across the State of Tennessee and see the rolling green hills, with the many rivers cutting through them, I’m reminded that this is all the handiwork of my Creator.

God constantly shows us who He is through nature. All I have to do is look around me to know that God is real.

The Psalmist said, “The heavens declare the glory of God, and the skies announce what his hands have made.”

MTSU & City Airport, together

Flight academy set for Shelbyville

By DAWN HANKINS
dhankins@t-g.com

Middle Tennessee State University in Murfreesboro's aviation school visited Shelbyville Municipal Airport on Saturday for Aviation Day.

Shelbyville officials and residents are anticipating a big move on the academy's part to the local airport in the near future.

In the meantime, here's a bit of information about MTSU aviation programs.

A bachelor of science in aerospace with an emphasis in maintenance management is available. A tremendous number of management personnel are required to keep the nation's airports, airlines and other aviation-related companies running effectively and efficiently.

No doubt people are interested. Large crowds descended on the airport and the MTSU exhibits on Saturday during the annual event.

So to become a professional pilot through MTSU, one must achieve a bachelor of science in aerospace. Simple, huh? Maybe, depending on your serious interest and hard work.

Pro pilots, as they're called by MTSU, must complete flight operations coursework and achieve pilot certification up to and including the commercial multi-engine certificate with an instrument rating.

MTSU is part of the Delta Propel pilot program, offering accepted students an accelerated timeline to become a Delta pilot.

See future articles about MTSU's program in the T-G. Thanks to the MTSU staff for making such a presence in the community Saturday. Keep soaring high!

Host your own 'Aviation Day' party

By DAWN HANKINS
dhankins@t-g.com

It's obvious a lot of folks like to watch airplanes, given the crowds at the airport last Saturday. So why not host your own Aviation brunch or lunch.

The decorating possibilities are endless. If you know someone with model airplanes or remote-control ones, those make great activities for such a party. Have all guests wear their favorite aviator sunglasses.

Know a pilot? Have him or her tell some great stories during the meal.

Have a movie event, showing a special aviation feature. Don't forget the popcorn, which you can serve in military hats or even MTSU cups. (OK, you caught me. I'm a MTSU grad. Can't help it. Go Big Blue!)

Speaking of blue, what a great color for a party. I'm sure that the dollar stores are full of tailgate-type party ware.

For a time filler, have an aviation quiz. The winner gets a prize, perhaps a miniature airplane.

As for airplanes, decorate by hanging model airplanes from the ceiling. Give kids small toy airplanes to play with during your event. (Make sure they're old enough if there are small parts.)

So, to finish out our special event, we're including a special recipe by our own, Dave Rogers, a 14-year military vet, just for your special occasion. He has out a new cookbook, "Cooking With A Veteran," which is available for purchase by emailing cookingwithaveteran@gmail.com

gmail.com
Thanks Dave! We appreciate your service.

Mango Salsa

Great with chicken strips. We suggest as a main course for your aviation party Dave's own New York Philly Cheese Steak Egg Rolls, which can be found in his cookbook.

- 3 ripe mangos, diced
 - 1/2 red bell pepper
 - 1/2 yellow bell pepper
 - 1/2 C. chopped onion
 - 1/4 C. chopped cilantro leaves
 - 1 jalapeño, seeded and minced
 - 1/4 C. lime juice
 - Salt to taste
- In a large bowl, combine the mango, bell peppers, onion cilantro and jalapeño. Drizzle on lime juice and mix.

Fair Haven supports community

By DAWN HANKINS
dhankins@t-g.com

There were a lot of local events held this last week at Fair Haven Baptist Church, 2726 Highway 231 North.

On Saturday, the church provided space for a local health fair.

On Tuesday, a chili supper and fellowship was held at the church. The event was sponsored by the local Caregivers Relief program.

The brick church is brilliant in stature and shines vividly off the highway on sky-blue days like last Saturday. Pastor is Peter Allen.

It is certain members of the community thank the church for assisting with local events.

Sunday worship at Fair Haven Baptist is at 9 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. Services are also streamed on Facebook live and YouTube.

It was a special night and the Golden Eaglettes capped off the evening with a 5-2 win at home over Coffee County in a soccer match on Thursday night. Former longtime Shelbyville Central soccer coach and teacher Neal Gordon was honored before the match with a large number of former players on hand to celebrate his upcoming retirement. BELL BUCKLE — In their final home game of the season, the Cascade Lady Champions attempted to rally back throughout their match with the Forrest Lady Rockets, but ultimately suffered a 1-0 defeat on Senior night.

“This was a hard loss,” Lady Champions head coach Wendy Williams said. “Forrest is a tough opponent. They were first to the ball a lot, and they’re a tough all-around team.”

“We played hard, but we made some mistakes. We have some things to work on, but we’ll come back.”

It was a close-knit contest for the entirety of the matchup as both teams took their fair share of shots at goal, but only the Lady Rockets (7-3-1, 4-1-1) could find the back of the net.

Senior Jaedyn Stalneckner netted the lone goal after she sliced her way down the right side of the field in the 26th minute.

In the first half, the Lady Champions (4-2, 3-2) took 12 shots at goal but couldn’t get one to fall.

The closest of those shots came in the final four minutes of the first half when junior Eve Speirs was a few feet from putting it in before the Lady Rockets goalie was able to grab the ball.

Speirs and fellow junior Emma Ward lead Cascade’s attack with five and four shots respectively.

Forrest carried their 1-0 lead into halftime, and held onto it for the rest of the matchup.

The Lady Champions fought to level the score throughout the second half by winning the ball defensively and immediately pushing the ball upfield, but they couldn’t put the ball in the back of the net.

With the district tournament looming, the Lady Champions will wrap-up the regular season next week against the Community Vikings as both teams aim to claim a district win to close out the season.

“We just have to come out tougher, and head into the district tournament wanting to win,” Williams said.

After slipping to Tullahoma earlier in the week, the Community Viqueens took a tough one on the chin against Central Magnet, before rallying to defeat Fayetteville on Wednesday afternoon on the road.

FAYETTEVILLE — After two, tough home losses to start the week, the Viqueens got back in the win column with a convincing 3-1 win on Wednesday at Fayetteville.

Things got off to an inauspicious start, with the Lady Tigers edging out the 26-24 first set win.

But after that first set fell Fayetteville's way, Community

Community evened the match, winning Set 2, 25-15, before taking the lead with a 25-16 third set win.

The Viqueens put the match away in the fourth set, 25-17.

M.J. Simmons went on a tear for 13 kills, six blocks and a pair of aces, while Jacey Collier recorded eight kills, two digs and an ace.

Viqueens can't hold onto lead vs. Tullahoma

By RICKEY CLARDY

UNIONVILLE — The Community Viqueens won the first set over the Tullahoma Lady Wildcats, but the Viqueens could not add to their lead as the Lady Wildcats rebounded to win the last three sets, including two sets by two points as Tullahoma won the District 9-AA matchup Monday night.

It was even to start the match as the first eight points were won by the non-serving side before Community (12-11, 5-5) scored three straight points to take a 7-4 lead.

With a strong net game and saves in the backcourt from some hard Tullahoma serves, the Viqueens extended their lead to 18-12 before finishing with a 25-20 win.

The Lady Wildcat serving went to the forefront in the second set.

While the Viqueen sets were limited, Tullahoma used an effective net game to take a 21-14 lead before finishing the set with four straight points and a 25-14 win.

Community looked to regain the momentum in the third set as an early 4-0 run paved the way for the Viqueens to take a 12-8 lead.

But the Lady Wildcats used their serving to tie the game and edged out to a 24-20 lead.

The Viqueens closed the margin to 24-23 before Tullahoma won the final point to win the set 25-23.

The fourth set seesawed as the lead changed hands six times.

SEC could boast best-ever quarterback crop

By DAVE SKRETTA
AP Sports Writer

For four quarters, Tennessee quarterback Hendon Hooker and Florida counterpart Anthony Richardson went back and forth before more than 100,000 fans packed inside Neyland Stadium in one of the most entertaining games of the season.

It was a game of one-upmanship: Hooker threw for 349 yards and two touchdowns without an interception while running for 112 yards and another score, and Richardson merely threw for 453 yards and two TDs while running for 62 yards and two more scores before the Vols eventually escaped with a heart-stopping 38-33 win to open SEC play.

It was a breakthrough moment for Hooker, a sudden Heisman Trophy candidate who has dazzled in leading No. 8 Tennessee to a 4-0 start. And a breakthrough moment for Richardson, too, along with a big boost to his NFL draft stock.

"The big thing for him," Florida coach Billy Napier said, "is I saw him kind of flip the switch as a competitor, and really just get consumed with, 'Hey, look, this is my team. I'm going to take my team, we're going to beat your team.' I am going to do everything I can to help my teammates and help our team win, and just compete and not worry about anything else."

There's a lot of quarterbacks in the SEC that are flipping that switch these days.

In fact, this may be the best crop of signal-callers in a single season in the history of the ever-expanding league.

Viqueens pour on goals, crush Cannon County

By RICKEY CLARDY

UNIONVILLE — The Community Viqueens jumped out to a 7-0 halftime lead and added two second half goals to end the game as the Viqueens defeated the Cannon County Lionettes 9-0 in a District 6-A soccer matchup Tuesday night.

Community (6-2-1, 3-1-1) peppered the Lionette goal throughout the first half, but did not find the back of the net until midway through the half as six Viqueen shots caromed off the posts. The Viqueens finally broke the ice as Addison Brothers rebounded a shot into the net with 21:19 remaining to give Community a 1-0 lead.

Once the floodgates were opened, the Viqueens continually added to their lead. Audrina Bearden and Anna Haskins scored goals 26 seconds apart to put Community up 3-0 with 17:23 left.

The Viqueens finished their first half scoring with four more goals as Zoey Dixon and Abby Murrill each scored twice as Community went into the intermission with a 7-0 lead.

“We were all over the goal. We created good opportunities,” Coach Chris Brothers of the Viqueens said.

“Later in the half we finally calmed down on the shots and found the back of the net,” Brothers added.

The second half only lasted eight minutes as Dixon connected on a penalty kick to complete the hat trick while Jennifer Zuniga added the final goal of the night as the match ended with the nine-goal margin.

Six different Viqueens tallied goals in the contest.

“We’ve have that several different games this year where we’ve had four or five girls scoring goals,” Brothers said. “They’re spreading it around really well. They’re passing the ball well and working and getting good looks.”

“The defense is playing outstanding,” Brothers added. “We haven’t had many goals scored on us this year so I’m proud of how they’re playing.”

Titans look to address lack of second-half scoring

By TERESA M. WALKER
AP Pro Football Writer

NASHVILLE — Scoring touchdowns early in games has not been an issue for the Tennessee Titans so far this season.

The third and fourth quarters have been a big problem with the Titans outscored 57-7 combined after halftime over the first three games.

They can’t afford that Sunday when they visit AFC South rival Indianapolis (1-1-1), not with the history between these franchises.

Quarterback Ryan Tannehill said Wednesday that the Titans have to come out and execute better in the second half.

“It wasn’t a drop-off in focus or urgency it didn’t feel like,” Tannehill said. “We just missed some opportunities on making some plays. We just have to clean those little things up to be able to come out and carry that momentum through halftime, into the second half.”

The Titans (1-2) had been struggling to score at all, limited to 27 points in an 0-2 start.

Against the Las Vegas Raiders, they led 24-10 by halftime. Then the defense saved the 24-22 win by holding the Raiders to a pair of field goals, getting an interception and breaking up a pass for a 2-point conversion. The Titans offense had an interception, turned it over on downs and punted twice in the second half.

It was a drastic change from the first half when the Titans opened the game with their best offensive stretch this season. They went at least 75 yards on each of their first three possessions for touchdowns for only the third time since 2000 and first since beating Detroit on Dec. 20, 2020.

Wide receiver Nick Westbrook-Ikhine said the offense was rolling well in the first half last week no matter if the Titans were facing third-and-long or picking up easy first downs. Everyone was clicking.

Then came halftime. “Obviously, second half we need to score more points and just watching the film and recognizing that it was small details and little mistakes, that kind of led that to happen,” Westbrook-Ikhine said.

Derrick Henry, the two-time NFL rushing champ, still is looking for his first 100-yard rushing game this season. He might’ve had that already if not for penalties wiping out some plays. Teams also have made some adjustments.

Tannehill was intercepted three plays into the Titans’ first offensive possession in the third quarter against Las Vegas. Titans coach Mike Vrabel said some of the plays and runs they had in the first half weren’t there at least this past game, though they had opportunities to make plays.

One bad play came on third-and-1 a couple of minutes into the fourth quarter. Henry was swarmed for a 3-yard loss, forcing another punt.

Points will matter Sunday. Last year’s game in Indianapolis went to overtime with Tennessee winning 34-31 on a field goal set up by an interception by two-time All-Pro safety Kevin Byard.

“We’ll have to make sure that whatever we’re doing early on, if it’s going well we’ll have to continue it,” Vrabel said.

“Then if not, we’ll have to make sure that we’re battling to get back in the game like we did last year. If we do get up, it’s going to be a struggle to be able to close anybody out.”

Don Goodman talks "Mama's Bible"

Often, a song can capture a life better than a long story. Local songwriter Don Goodman knows this well.

He helped to write the song "Mama's Bible," about local World War II veteran J.B. Stubblefield who passed on Sept. 8 and is being honored at this year's American Mule and Bluegrass Festival.

The album, "Freedom Sings WWII" in which Stubblefield's song is featured, has 15 songs on it, all written about other World War II veterans. "To sit there and listen to their stories and go back to World War Two with them is amazing," Goodman said. Goodman said he wants them to tell their whole story so he can make the song really personal. "It's not just another war song; it's their song," he said. He loves the details like where they were born, where they served, who they married when they came home.

"I want to pull out what they've never told anybody," he said. It works. Family members come up to Goodman and say, "I never knew my dad did that..." or "I think I know now why my dad cries so much..."

"That's when I know I've nailed it," he said. Some 22 veterans, of all ages and wars, take their lives every day. And out of those 15 veterans on the album, Goodman says only two are still alive today.

The average age is 100.

"So, we're losing our veterans," he said. Goodman said every single one of the veterans' songs was played at the funeral. Even through the heartache, Goodman takes it as a compliment as it goes to show how important the songs are to the family.

"To me, it's like a kid finding a dairy and going wow, this is grandpa," he explained.

Goodman, who's 78, has been writing for Freedom Sings USA for about eight years now. He was 70 years old at the time and felt the music industry was changing too much. "The new music, it wasn't me and I didn't want to write it," he said.

One day, he got invited to the VA where he sat in on one of the writing sessions with the veterans. "It was life changing. I came out of there that day on a mission," he said.

Born in Hohenwald and raised in Detroit, Goodman came to Nashville in 1971. He says you don't "get into songwriting; it gets into you."

"I hitchhiked into town, honestly, with a showbox full of songs. And they were awful. But I just felt in my heart, that's where I was supposed to be," he said.

"Back in the day," Goodman wrote several hits, including "Ol' Red," sung by George Jones, "Angels Among Us" recorded by Alabama, and Conway Twitty's "Feelin's"

"I've written, I don't know, 2-3,000 songs maybe." He jokes he's the world's worst guitar player and an even worse singer. So he always surrounded him with talented musicians and singers.

"After a while, you can hear the melody in your head," he said.

Today, he has written over 300 songs with the veterans, stretching from World War II to Korea to the Gulf Wars.

The story of J.B. Stubblefield is remarkable, and Goodman said they were able to capture it in three and half minutes.

While serving in the Second World War, Stubblefield got separated from his troops while stationed in New Guinea. He went MIA. They didn't find him until two years later. Goodman said he was lying half-in, half-out of a river suffering with amnesia and dying from malaria. But they identified him through a pocket-sized Bible given to him by his mama, where his name was written on the inside cover.

"I tried to squeeze every bit of actual experience into that song I could. I mean, I could've written a book," he said.

Donovan Chapman, a Billboard Top 40 singer, sang the song "Mama's Bible." "I enjoy the fact that I can help capture the story and capitalize on what they did," he said.

The night before Stubblefield passed, he got to hear "Mama's Bible" for the first and last time.

Goodman recalls, "We recorded the song that afternoon. They got the mix to me at about 6:30. At 7 o'clock, I sent it to Perry Stubblefield, J.B.'s son. And at 7:30, they played it for him. And he died the next night," he said. "We got it there, in the 11th hour."

But the songwriting is not just veterans. Goodman recalled one time when he sat down with an 8-year-old girl whose daddy was killed in Iraq.

Goodman quotes, "She wrote: Mama pushed me in the swing so high, up to heaven where the angels fly. I want to go where daddies go and never die.

Mama pushed me in the swing so high."

He says the greatest compliments are when the veterans say they listened to the song a hundred times. "When you get a phone call from a veteran and he says, 'you saved my life,' a gold or platinum record—a whole wall of them—is only a candle to that phone call."

"You know when you get one right—and it doesn't matter if the whole world likes it or not—if you know you got it right and as good as you could possibly do, there is no better feeling," he said.

They are expanding Freedom Sings USA, including female veterans classes and more opportunities with the VA. To access their music, go to www.freedomingsusa.org. Every penny raised goes to the veterans.
